Warner on campus

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Carolyn Warner, in a speech Wednesday to students at Cady Mall Fountain, said university tuition increases have "systematically eliminated the opportunity for a lot of young people to go to our three (Arizona) universities." See story, page 9.

Bakery employees quit; claim unfair practices

By BENNY McCONNELL
State Press

Four bakery employees in the MU have quit their jobs to protest what they call "unfair labor practices."

The employees of the Marriott Corp., which recently purchased the MU's food supplier, Saga Foods Corp., said they walked off to protest management practices, lack of pay raises, lunch breaks and unfair work loads.

Marriott officials denied the charges.

The first employee to walk out was Elaine Brabec, who had been a baker's assistant for nearly a year. She quit the first day of school.

"The pressure, the demands and the work are absolutely unreal," she said. "(Management personnel) have absolutely no compassion. They don't care about the people."

John Clark, a Saga/Marriott employee for 13 years, said he walked off Tuesday night to protest unfair labor practices.

He said Marriott intentionally "cut off hours" on time cards.

"They could do no wrong, the way they treated people," Clark said. "We were nothing. They wouldn't listen to us for suggestions we had about baking procedures, and they wouldn't give raises to anyone that deserved one."

Bob Agee, retail food service director, denied Clark's charges.

He said all employees who worked overtime were paid and those who deserved pay raises received them.

Clark said he was told Marriott had to keep pay raises down to 2.5 percent.

"When you're only making minimum wage, that's only about a 10-cent raise," he said.

But Agee said the pay raise policy did not exist.

Bill Nord, who was hired in February as head baker, also quit Tuesday night.

He said problems in the MU bakery were apparent from the beginning.

"The problems had been building from day one, and they would not furnish us with any experienced help," Nord said. "There's only so much an inexperienced person can do, especially when it comes to baking."

Nord said one of his reasons for quitting was "a load of three days' work we were supposed to do in one day."

He cited examples of poor working conditions: freight stacked ceiling high in elevators, making them inoperable; the only handcart available was consistently chained to a wall by a daytime employee; and no lighting in a hallway that leads to two flights of stairs.

The four bakers worked the overnight shift.

Agee said he is disappointed by the walkout and believes a lack of communication was at the root of the problems.

"If they had come to us and presented their complaints directly to us, I think we could have worked things out," he said.

But Nord said he and his immediate supervisor, Jimmy Stewart, and Agee met two weeks ago to work things out.

Nord said they agreed to his demands of hiring more help, reducing the work load and easing management pressure.

But he said the only demand that was fulfilled was more help.

Agee said no one has been hired to replace the four who quit, but the positions should be filled within 48 hours.

Another employee quitting Tuesday night was Gail LeBeau, a two and one-half year employee in the bakery. She was unavailable for comment.

Officials at Marriott's corporate office in California also could not be reached for comment.

The MU bakery supplies all the baked goods for the retail food stores in the MU and residence halls.

Bicycle registration proposal has students upset

By LAUREN MILLETTE
State Press

A proposed mandatory bicycle registration has many students clenching their hand brakes and spinning their wheels.

Richard Landreth, assistant director of parking, said the proposal would require students to pay $1 each year to register their bikes with Parking and Transit Services.

A decal would be placed on the frame of each bike to verify registration.

If Vice President of Business Affairs Victor Zafra and the Arizona Board of Regents approve the proposal, it probably would go into effect Jan. 1, Landreth said.

He said said Associated Students and legal counsel met during the summer to review stricter bicycle regulations prepared by the University Bicycle Safety Committee.

The committee studied bicycle hazards on campus for nine months and concluded that a mandatory bicycle decal would be a solution to a handful of bicycle-related problems, Landreth said.

But many students do not think the decals are the answer.

Rob Lietman, a junior business major, said: "I ride my bicycle to school instead of driving my car in order to avoid the cost of parking decals.

"I don't see any reason for mandatory decals. And in fact, I think parking services is getting a bit carried away in trying to find ways to make money off students."

Landreth said the extra security the decals will offer bicyclists are well worth $1.

Before receiving a decal, the student's bicycle will be inspected for safety requirements.

"Everything from the brakes to the reflector lights will be looked at to make sure the bike is safe for the rider and others," he said.

Safety requirements for the bicycles will be included in the proposal, which Landreth said will be flexible for modifications.

Lt. Craig Emanuel said the bicycles will be registered on a national stolen vehicle computer that will enable University police to trace the owners of stolen vehicles more efficiently.

"Just by looking at the decal and calling it in, we will be able to know who owns the bike, where they live, and if the bike was reported stolen or not," he said.

When owners report their bicycles stolen they often do not know the registration number, Emanuel said.

"The decals should help students with this problem because they will no longer have to memorize their registration number," he said.

"The computer will memorize that information for them and if their bicycle is located by police in another city or state it will be returned to the owner."

In addition to making bicycles on campus more identifiable, the proposal is designed to aid police in enforcing bicycle regulations, Landreth said.

"Hopefully, the decals should make it easier on University police in ticketing bicyclists that do not park where they are supposed to and do not ride on the designated paths," he said.

This would alleviate the problem of bicyclists running into students, he said.

Reckless bicyclists have been noted for making it difficult for handicapped students to commute to classes, Landreth said.

"Thoughtless bicyclists cause problems all over campus, but Cady Mall seems to attract most of them," he said. "Hopefully, the bike riders' haven on Cady Mall will become safer once the decals are required."

Freshman Andy Marquardt said he does not drive his car to school because he thinks it is ridiculous to have to pay for a parking decal.

"If I don't drive my car because I don't believe in paying for a parking spot, what makes the administration think I'm going to pay for a bicycle decal?" he said. "I think it's just another bureaucratic mess."

Edna Carey, a sophomore psychology major, said she strongly disagrees with the proposal.

"We pay enough money for parking decals that we shouldn't have to give University parking more money under another excuse," she said.

Eric Guefen, a senior real estate major, said not only is it a waste of money, but the decals would not prevent bike thefts.

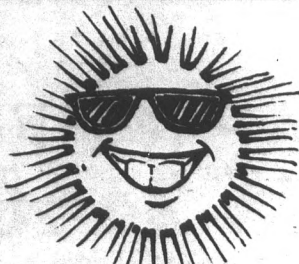

"Just because a bike has a decal on it doesn't mean it's not going to be stolen," he said. "What's to stop a thief from peeling the decal off?"

"I think (the proposal) is just another way for the parking department to impose rules on us and squeeze money from us."

U.S. journalist may be charged with smuggling

MOSCOW (AP) — Soviet officials have threatened to charge jailed American reporter Nicholas Daniloff with smuggling after finding some family jewelry among his property that was not listed in a customs declaration, Daniloff's wife said Wednesday.

Ruth Daniloff said customs authorities telephoned her husband's office in Moscow and told a translator that a smuggling case was being started. It was not clear if Daniloff would be charged alone, or if his wife also might be charged.

The threat came on the fifth day of Daniloff's detention in Lefortovo Prison. The KGB secret police have accused him of espionage, but no formal charges have been filed.

"It's all just so stupid," Mrs. Daniloff said of the smuggling charges. "It may just be part of the harassment against us."

Daniloff has reported from Moscow for the weekly newsmagazine U.S. News & World Report for 5½ years. He was planning to leave soon for a new assignment in Washington when he was arrested Saturday.

In late August, the couple sent their household goods to the Butovo customs house for clearance by Soviet authorities. Mrs. Daniloff said customs agents spent two days going through their shipment.

"In the bottom of my jewelry box, I had some rubbishy old jewelry," she said. "There also was a pocket watch that Nick got from his father on his 21st birthday, a locket that belonged to my mother and grandmother, a brooch and a Mexican bracelet."

Safety groups wants recall of 6 million cars

WASHINGTON (AP) — Citing 1,500 driver complaints, an auto safety group wants two federal agencies to order General Motors Corp. to recall 6 million of its cars and repair their alleged power steering problems for free.

The private Center for Auto Safety said that while the defect first appears as a loss of power-assist to steering when the engine is cold, it later can lead to loss of control during turns.

The center filed a petition with the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration seeking an investigation of safety problems caused by the alleged sudden loss of power steering in 1980-84 front-wheel-drive A-, J- and X-body cars.

The request for a NHTSA investigation and subsequent recall of the cars was based on 1,500 complaints involving at least 20 accidents and seven injuries, the consumer group said.

The center also filed a petition with the Federal Trade Commission alleging that GM has established a "secret warranty" on the alleged defect, offering to pay part or all of the repair costs for owners who complain the loudest.

The petition to the FTC seeks an investigation of the alleged problem and an order requiring GM to let drivers know about its free-repair policy and to reimburse owners for past repairs to the power steering system.

The center estimated that repair costs to motorists eventually will total $500 million.

NHTSA last year closed a low-level inquiry into the alleged problem, concluding it was not safety-related.

GM spokesman Bill Noack said the government hadn't found a safety defect in the cars, and he said the company doesn't offer secret warranties.

Tucson citizen contends Udall not state resident

TUCSON (AP) — A Tucson man has sued U.S. Rep. Morris K. Udall, contending that the Democratic lawmaker does not live in Arizona and is holding office in violation of the U.S. Constitution.

Ed Finkelstein, in a lawsuit filed Tuesday in Pima County Superior Court, requested an order declaring Udall a non-resident who is ineligible to vote or hold office in Arizona.

The lawsuit argued that Udall is violating a constitutional provision requiring that a U.S. representative live in the state "in which he shall be chosen."

Udall, first elected in a 1961 special election, represents Arizona's 2nd District.

The lawmaker has a home in McLean, Va., a suburb of Washington, but has said he maintains legal residence at the Tucson home of a brother, attorney Burr Udall.

On Monday, Udall told the Democrats of Greater Tucson that Congress has become a full-time job, requiring him to be in Washington about 300 days a year. Udall said he has in the past owned three houses in Tucson, continues to own real estate here, and pays sales taxes and income taxes in Arizona.

In his suit, Finkelstein said Udall is a McLean resident "who votes and holds office in Arizona illegally."

Pool leak may cause scheduling problems

TUCSON — Water, or the lack of it, has become a problem for the UA Gittings Pool.

Recently, water started disappearing from the pool at a rate of about one inch an hour for no apparent reason, said aquatics specialist Ronald A. Sutherland.

"We have no idea whatsoever where the water is going," he said.

Sutherland said 15 classes have been affected by the water loss.

He said scheduling problems may arise if the cause of the leak is not found soon, because the swim team is going to begin twice-a-day practices at McKale Pool.

Free cheese offered to students on budget

PULLMAN, Wash. — The Associated Students of Washington State University Hunger Awareness program is starting the year off right for off-campus students whose money is running a bit low.

Once again, cheese will be given away to eligible students.

Any student living in an apartment, through the university or not, is eligible for the give-a-way. Residence hall and greek residents are not eligible.

Cheese hopefuls had to bring proof of off-campus status.

Dana Casey, chair of Hunger Awareness, said the committee is never sure about the amount or type of food available, but sometimes rice, milk or butter is also delivered with the cheese.

police report

University police reported the following incidents during the 24-hour period ending 7:30 a.m. Wednesday:

•A dark blue 1981 Toyota car sustained $1000 in damages from a hit-and-run accident.

Police said the owner left the car overnight in the northwest section of Lot 63 and found the entire rear of the car demolished when he returned the next morning.

Police said the owner searched the area for chipped paint or dents on cars, but no evidence was obtained.

There are no suspects or witnesses. •Two female residents of Manzanita Residence Hall woke to their room door being kicked in.

Police said the vandal fled as soon as the door was knocked down. It will cost $200 to replace the door.

•Police said a white male transient with a thin build and shaggy gray hair and beard was asked to leave campus by University police.

He was found roaming around the Administration Building.

When asked what he was doing on campus, the transient said he was talking to students and administration staff about going back to school, police said.

•Student Jefferey Hildebrand was arrested and charged with threatening and intimidating a University police officer in Lot 57.

Police said he yelled obscenities at the officer and threatened to strike her. He was released on his own recognizance.

•A red tackle box, valued at $75, was reported stolen from the women's restroom at the north end of the MU.

Police said the owner left the box, filled with art supplies, on top of the sanitary napkin dispenser. When she returned, it was gone.

•The gate arm to Lot 26 on Orange Street was torn down.

Police said the lot attendant did not notice anyone in the area during the time the gate was destroyed, and the vehicles that were inspected in the area showed no signs of damage.

Campus 'newspeak' alive

It's been a long time since anyone has mentioned George Orwell's "1984." However, in these days newspeak is popping up everywhere you look. The English language is getting more and more complicated with every passing phase. In some cases, it's hard to keep up with.

A few days ago, some State Press staff members wrote a headline for a story about the amount of alcohol in Sun Devil Village. Speaking in journalistic terms, it was very hard to make "Sun Devil Village" fit into the headline. This place used to be affectionately referred to as "Sin City." In fact, it used to have an array of different names.

As we tried to think up a way to use the location in question in the headline, a brilliant new name was born. We at the State Press propose that Sun Devil Village be referred to as "Sparky Park."

It's new, it's refreshing, it's perky, and best of all, you can fit it into a State Press headline.

Another name that gets tossed around on campus is "dorm." The Residence Hall Association has always griped about the use of this word. They say the correct word in reference to these places where students park their weary bodies is "Residence Halls," such as Manzanita Residence Hall.

Being enterprising reporters, we went straight to our handy Webster's 1986 New World Dictionary and looked up residence hall. Under the definition, we uncovered the shocking truth.

According to Webster, residence hall means dormitory, which means dorm. It's all there in black and white. Look it up.

Now, let's look at our pals on Alpha Drive. What is wrong with calling fraternities "frats"? This is yet another label wandering about ASU. The Interfraternity Council seems to have a problem with this word. Actually, it is the same word, it's just been chopped off to make it more convenient. Fraternities is a long word. Maybe they are just upset because the State Press doesn't call sororities sores.

Enough said about newspeak and how it is applied today. New connotations of various words make life more interesting. George Orwell was a great man.

Legislating morality necessary to protect society

It always strikes me as somewhat funny when someone says that you can't legislate morality. If the statement were true, the only true laws would be those which dictate national holidays and the one that allows people in some states to squeeze an extra hour of sunshine out of their day in the summer. Labor Day — now there's a piece of legislation.

Outside of a few cases, all laws are moral in nature. In short, laws prescribe right and wrong behavior. In a democratic society such as ours, laws are a rough consensus of societal values. Because each of us values the right to walk into a McDonald's without being gunned down indiscriminately, it is illegal to enter McDonaldland and fire at will. While all of us would agree such a law is a good thing, we must remember that the law against murder is a legislation of morality — an expression of values that we as a society subscribe to.

But what about laws concerning drug use, prostitution, pornography, abortion and sexual behavior? There is certainly a wide variety of opinions on each of these subjects. The plot thickens when one enters the realm of "victimless crimes." The real question is whether there is really such a thing as a victimless crime. It is fairly easy to find victims when looking at crimes that are supposedly victimless. In some cases, the only apparent victim is the person who commits the crime. Because people don't like being protected from themselves, these laws come under the greatest attack. Perhaps there is a victim few of us have considered. One victim often overlooked is society.

Ben Hoglund

How can society be a victim? To find the answer, it would be a good idea to go back to the nature of laws. Laws do more than prescribe behavior. Because our laws are based on a consensus of societal values, they communicate the values on which they are based. The question is not whether values will be transmitted, the question is what values will be transmitted.

While laws do not include little footnotes explaining why a particular behavior is prohibited, people infer the reasons behind the law and the absence of law. A society that allows pornography to be distributed says not only that you can walk into the grocery store to buy a "Penthouse," but also that women should be regarded as objects of exploitation.

A society that allows abortion on demand says not only that a particular woman can end her pregnancy at will, but also that human life is only valuable to the extent that it is wanted. A society that chooses to legalize drugs communicates not only that it's a fine time to be high, but also that pleasure should be sought regardless of the destructiveness of the means to which it is sought.

To say that the only victim of a victimless crime is the individual is to fail to see the victimization of all of us as a society. If we, as a society, choose laws which communicate that life should be measured only in terms of quality or usefulness; that pleasure should be achieved at all cost and women should be seen at toys, should we then be surprised at the result? Laws are not only based on values, but they also communicate them. While government is just one of the means values are transmitted, it is a powerful one.

If people find it necessary to produce a victim before they are willing to classify a behavior as a crime, let them ask what the behavior does to all of us. When people of different value systems come together, the question of whose values and what values is presented as if the answer were terribly complex. The answer ought to be those values which cause people to be their best.

Government has no choice in whether to legislate morality. We, as citizens, have not only the right, but the responsibility to seek legislation that builds character in individuals and ennobles are society as a whole. Those who seek to create valueless legislation are only fooling themselves.

In seeking amorality, they arrive at immorality and there is a big difference between the two.

Support fired custodians

Editor:

I would like to applaud the previous State Press article, editorial and letters to the editor in support of John Whitehurst, Billy McKinney and individual freedom. I would also like to encourage you all at ASU whether you be student, staff or faculty that oppose this attempt to confine even a portion of this ASU community to wear labels of involuntary uniformity, to continue their letter writing campaign in opposition to the Physical Plant's uniform policy, expanding its aim to President J. Russell Nelson, the Arizona Board of Regents and state legislators.

Communicate your abhorrence not only to this attempt by a former North Texas State administrator to saddle our Arizonans' individualism with his own Lone Star state Orwellian dream, but also the blatant misappropriation of University funds for a frivolous luxury rather than an occupational necessity.

Monies that could be better spent to buy needed equipment and materials to allow Physical Plant employees to perform their jobs to the best of their ability is instead being wasted by an administrator who has let his desire to dress up Physical Plant employees in his own image and likeness override the University's needs for quality work at the lowest cost. This is all the more distasteful at a time when the state and University are looking for ways to trim their budgets by 6 percent to avoid an unnecessary shortfall in the state treasury.

As consumers, ASU students should be appalled at how their monies have been wasted. Taxpayers, students, faculty, staff and all Arizonans should be up in arms at this disregard for their hard earned dollars. And we all should be angered by this attempt to drag a portion of this nation's of freedom-loving individuals, even if on this small scale, into a nightmare our forefathers never fought and died for.

So please keep those cards and letters rolling in and going out to all points until ASU administrators have righted an injustice by reinstating Whitehurst and McKinney with apologies. And by using some of the $32,000 they will save by ending Del Overstreet's Uniform Policy to pay for his one-way ticket back to North Texas State where he and his Orwellian dream belong.

Unionize ASU employees

Editor:

The outrageous firing of custodians Jonathan Whitehurst and Bill McKinney for refusing to submit to wearing uniforms on the job underscores the need for effective union representation for staff and faculty.

It is not necessary that Whitehurst and McKinney should have to stand alone against the power of the administration. Let's get organized so that we can support them!

Crunch

Financial aid resources drying up for Joe Student

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
State Press

The clock strikes high noon. Expecting many students to be at lunch, Joe Student wanders into the financial aid office in Matthews Center, hoping to have a short wait in line.

Too bad. The line weaves among ropes tied to pillars and almost out the door.

After waiting in line for what seems an eternity, Student reaches a financial aid counselor only to find out he needs up to 20 documents to receive financial aid.

And even if he qualifies, there is no guarantee money will be available for him to use.

Each year, thousands of students go through the ritual of applying for financial aid, but with recent cutbacks at the federal, state and local levels, many students will have to seek out part-time jobs to pay college bills.

"I think part of (the reduction of money) has to do with the mood in Congress," said Patricia L. Clark, associate director of student financial assistance. "Post-secondary education received more during the (President Lyndon) Johnson era."

Clark is concerned about the prevailing view in Washington over the recent cutbacks in Pell Grants and other educational monies.

"With the current administration . . . we have a greater emphasis on student and families supporting themselves with just some government assistance," she said.

Education Secretary William Bennett has made it clear students and families will have to accept the fact that monies to cover all costs of education will no longer be available except to the most needy of cases.

Bennett has made statements that many college students spend their financial aid checks on "stereos, cars and trips" instead of on education.

That comes from the "red Porsche" story, Clark said. She said the story of a student telling a senator that he bought the fancy sports car with his aid check launched a conservative attack on the amount of money being spent on students who have no need for the funds.

"When the administration is looking for a rationale to support their view, they will find it," Clark said, making reference to Bennett's comments. "The problem is that there are 100 students who need the money and only one who doesn't."

But it is not only the current administration's fault American students are not getting the big bucks seen in the past.

The Gramm-Rudman-Hollings deficit reduction plan — although in limbo at this point — will have a drastic effect on how many students will be able to attend college.

"There is a general feeling that we will cut our own budgets or Gramm-Rudman will cut it for us," Clark said.

And if it is not Gramm-Rudman, Congress may take chunks out of the financial aid budget.

Clark said the 1965 Higher Education Act is up for review this year in Congress, which will take a long look at all financial aid programs, but no one is clear what steps Congress will take, if any, to cut education spending program.

Some have concluded that the individual states will put up the money taken by the federal government.

But don't expect that to happen in Arizona.

"What the federal government hopes will happen is that the states will take up the slack," Clark said. "Unfortunately, Arizona has been so very conservative in how it helps students.

"The state thought it could help students by keeping tuition costs low. It worked for a while, but the problem is that the price has increased."

So now, students are caught between a rock and a hard place. They want to go to college, but the money may not be there. They have to take part- or full-time work to pay the bills, which may force them to take lighter course loads and extend their college careers, or their grades may suffer.

"I don't think it is wise to ask a student to work 30 hours a week and carry a full-time load," Clark said.

But in years past, financial aid officers have screamed that their particular university needs additional money because if they don't, more and more students will be left out of college. However, most universities are experiencing an increase in population — a fact that led ASU to begin construction of ASU West.

Clark said the belief that the denial of financial aid may cause the demise of many students "may not have been 100 percent true, but now it seems to be so."

Without those funds, minorities, women and students from low-income families will be hurt most, Clark said.

Junior Business major James Wilmott, 21, seems dismayed while applying for student aid at the Financial Aid Office in the lobby of Matthews Center.

"If someone truly wants an education, they can get it," she said. "But is not as easy as it was in years past."

If Clark had her way, there would be no education cuts — there might even be a major increase.

"Education is a program from which there is a return," she said. "I think that sometimes gets forgotten."

Unfortunately, Clark is right. With a $150 million trade deficit and a $150 billion national deficit, money that was once earmarked for post-secondary education is now going for defense or other social program.

"I think we have seen the zenith of financial aid under the Johnson era," Clark said.

Quadruple whammy to effect 790,000 students

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

About a month ago, a peer adviser in the student financial aid office told me that I might not get a student loan I had been counting on.

The physiological effect of this news was immediate: my breathing and pulse suddenly became more rapid, my face either flushed or went white (I couldn't tell which); my stomach began to knot with anxiety — and the very floor I stood on seemed to fall away.

To be unexpectedly faced with a major disruption of one's life creates a sense of disorientation which is curiously similar to the sensation of falling — like those dreams we all seem to have that consist only of the terrifying sense of hurtling downward.

I was fortunate; my problem worked itself out. But between 1,200 to 1,500 ASU students will not be so fortunate. These figures represent the gap between the number of students who need and qualify for financial assistance and the number of students who will actually get what they hope for. Most of the cuts will come from the Pell Grant program, though National Direct Student Loans and Guaranteed Student Loans will be affected as well.

The cold hard facts are these (as reported by the Department of Education):

Nationally, about 290,000 qualified students will be denied Pell Grants, and another 500,000 will receive reduced awards during the current academic year. The department estimates that students will qualify for $369 million more than Congress has appropriated for the program. Consequently, the department will cut grants as necessary to keep within its budget.

Nationally, about 290,000 qualified students will be denied Pell Grants and another 500,000 will receive reduced rewards (this year) . . .

Patricia Clark, associate director of student financial assistance, sees a four-way crunch facing ASU students:

- In Washington, "there is a great feeling that the student and family is primarily responsible for education," Clark said. And because this is a reauthorization year for the Higher Education Act of 1965, under which all federal higher education assistance programs are funded, Congress is both able and inclined to cut funds for student programs.

- Arizona is unlikely to compensate for federal cuts, she said. "What the federal government hopes will happen across the states is that they will take up the slack, but Arizona has been very conservative in its direct student aid" and does not have a grant program, Clark said.

- Moreover, we can expect that tuition will continue to rise.
- Clark said that otherwise qualified students may be discouraged from obtaining financial aid by the increased paperwork and red tape involved in the process, and these students likely will be those least experienced in dealing with bureaucracy — in many cases, poor and minority students.

She said that within the Department of Education "there is an inclination not to simplify the system" — which requires, in some cases, as many as 20 pieces of documentation to apply for financial aid.

I personally find it hard to see this practice as anything other than a surreptitious means of denying students financial aid in the guise of following correct bureaucratic procedure.

- And, lurking in the wings, is Gramm-Rudman. "Gramm-Rudman is essentially not operative and has rolled back into Congress," pending some revisions mandated by the Supreme Court, she said.

But before long one must expect Gramm-Rudman to come rolling back out of Congress, which means the financial aid crunch will be even worse in the future.

Financial aid involves a delicate and complicated interrelationship between students, the private sector, the University and various levels of government. And now, like the proverbial bull in a china shop, Gramm-Rudman comes lumbering into this delicate balance:

BASH! SLAM! CRASH! CRUNCH! SHATTER!
And the result is pain.

Airline expands service

TEMPE (AP) — America West Airlines said Wednesday the acquisition of three 37-seat De Havilland Canada Dash 8 turboprop aircraft will allow it to begin service in March and April to Yuma and Flagstaff.

Company President Michael J. Conway said the new regional service will complement existing jet service from the airline's hub at Sky Harbor International Airport.

"Both Yuma and Flagstaff have strong potential for business travel as well as the leisure market, and we believe this type of air service will have a positive impact on the economic development and growth of the two communities," Conway said.

Conway said America West will accept delivery of the new aircraft during the first four months of 1987.

Warner: higher tuition restricts educational opportunities

By MICHAEL ROWELL
State Press

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Carolyn Warner said Wednesday she will continue to oppose University tuition increases "that put bricks and mortar ahead of affordable education for our young people."

Before her speech to about 200 people in front of ASU's Danforth Chapel, Warner said she believes tuition increases should be avoided because state law mandates that tuition at ASU, NAU and UA "should be as nearly free as possible."

"(The tuition increases) systematically eliminated the opportunity for a lot of young people to go to our three state universities," she said.

Last October, the Arizona Board of Regents increased resident tuition at the universities by $146, the largest increase in the history of the universities.

Warner, who has been Arizona Superintendent of Public Instruction for 12 years and a member of the Board of Regents, voted against the increase.

This is the final week of Warner's seven-month campaign for the Democratic nomination for governor against Phoenix lawyer-developer Tony Mason. Warner's third opponent, businessman Dave Moss, dropped out of the race Tuesday.

The primary election is Sept. 9.

Although polls show Warner significantly ahead of Mason, she said, "It isn't over until the last vote is counted."

'I believe it's appropriate for a student regent to have a vote.'

— Carolyn Warner

Warner said if she did not continue to work for the nomination, "We could wake up on Sept. 10 and find out that we have two people nominated for governor, one of whom is a Republican, and the other who might as well be."

Warner said she also will support efforts to give the student member of the Board of Regents a vote on University issues. The student regent is the only non-voting member of the board.

"I've worked with them since the first one was appointed, so I have high regard for the wisdom and the contribution that the student regent makes," she said.

"I believe it's appropriate for a student regent to have a vote."

Warner is basing much of her campaign on issues dealing with growth in Arizona, and said problems created by the growth "now threaten what is important to us."

Warner, the 56-year-old mother of six children and grandmother of 10, moved to Arizona in 1953.

She said air and water quality, toxic waste, water availability, transportation and welfare will be a few of the issues she will address if elected governor.

"The future is not a matter of chance. The future is a matter of choice and that choice is the choice that each of us individually must make," Warner said.

Warner said the withdrawal of Moss from the nomination race will not affect her campaign despite a decision by Moss to endorse Mason.

"I've always been running against two people, I'm still running against two people, so it's of little consequence. I'm not going to change my method of operation in the slightest," she said.

Warner also said she does not believe gender will be a factor in the campaign, although she would be Arizona's first female governor if elected.

"I think they want someone with experience. I think they want someone they can trust. I think they want someone they know can deal with all of the problems of the office."

Group members to petition elimination of Women's Services

By KERRY FEHR
State Press

An Associated Students Senate committee unanimously approved a bill to eliminate Women's Services from the campus affairs office Tuesday.

But Women's Studies Student Association spokeswoman Denise Heap said she and women's club members will circulate petitions opposing the bill.

The entire senate will vote on Senate Bill 4

Sept. 9 in the MU Mohave Room at 5:30 p.m.

She said the women will present their petitions to ASASU President Chris Cumiskey before the next senate session.

"(The committee's vote) proves that ASASU does not represent the student body and does not respond to the needs of students," Heap said.

She said she also is consulting a lawyer because the bill is "passively discriminatory."

Leeanne Seall, campus affairs vice president, said Women's Services is being phased out because it is not supported by the students.

She said it duplicates services already provided by other women's clubs and did not use the $6,426 allocated to it last year.

"(Women clubs) simply want (ASASU) funds to advertise individual programs," Seall said.

Seall, who introduced the senate bill with Activities Vice President Christine Roth, said although she cannot find the department's attendance records, students have not been active in its programs.

In addition, Heap and other members of women's clubs plan to contact the American Civil Liberties Union.

"Women have been discriminated against historically," Heap said.

Nelson anticipates $9 million budget cut for 1986-87

By TINA DAUNT
State Press

The Arizona Board of Regents will decide this weekend how much money ASU will cut from its 1986-87 budget to satisfy Gov. Bruce Babbitt's call for a 6 percent state agency cutback.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson has asked the departments and colleges to cut spending in anticipation of the regents' decision.

"Until the Board of Regents meets to come up with an official plan, we're anticipating that around $9 million of our budget will have to be returned to the state," Nelson said. "No department in the University will escape unscathed from this cut."

Nelson said areas that will be most affected by the cut will be travel, office supplies and personal expenditures.

He also said many part-time faculty positions will go unfilled, but no layoffs will occur.

Babbitt ordered a cut in spending for most state agencies on July 18, because he said the latest revenue estimates indicate a budget deficit of $60 to $150 million.

Although ASU is not one of the state agencies ordered to cut spending, Babbitt has requested ASU to comply, Nelson said.

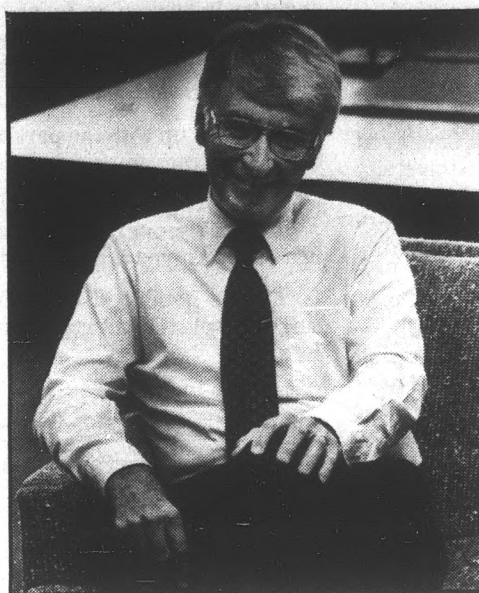

"The colleges and departments are allowed to cut their budget wherever they please; from what I understand many have already done so," he said.

Robert Trennert, history college chairman, said two part-time faculty positions and a large portion of travel funds have been cut from the history budget.

"We've done everything we can to avoid spending money, but we're still not sure how dramatic the cutbacks will be until the Board of Regents meet," Trennert said.

"Any cut will definitely be a major drawback in the quality of education. Students, staff and faculty will all feel the effects."

He said several senior professors are now

J. Russell Nelson

teaching lower division classes to make up for the loss of part-time faculty.

"Research will also suffer a major setback," Trennert said. "Instead of working on special projects, professors are now teaching more generalized classes."

"What's worse is we no longer have the travel budget to send faculty members to symposiums where they could present their research projects. Therefore ASU won't get recognition it deserves."

Chris Cummiskey, Associated Students president, said ASASU is anticipating a $22,000 to $40,000 budget cut.

"We've been preparing ourselves for this cut, but we're waiting until we receive word from the Board of Regents before we take any action," he said. "The cut won't be a major setback, but it will hurt."

Cummiskey said ASASU may cut the public relations department, Women's Services and several lectures from the Lecture Series.

Bisbee children await lead-screening clinic

BISBEE, Ariz. (AP) — Children in the Bisbee area will be screened to determine whether they've been exposed to abnormally high levels of lead found in local surface soil, the director of the county health department said Wednesday.

"It has never been my plan not to do the program," said Carol Mordhorst. "We have always intended to do it."

The Bisbee Daily Review quoted Mordhorst in a copyrighted story Sunday saying the county does not have the necessary equipment to conduct a screening program.

She said the county does not plan to inform the public of the importance of screening children until the state supplies the equipment.

Mordhorst said no date has been set for the screening program yet, but she plans to conduct the screening in conjunction with the county's regular "well baby clinics."

"What's been holding up the program is the availability of a particular machine that we need," Mordhorst said.

"When we hold the screening depends on when the state will loan us the machine, what type of tests are used and the training of my staff."

Tests conducted in April by the State Department of Health Services found lead content in soil and paint samples taken from several locations in Old Bisbee were well above levels considered safe.

State and county health officials have attributed the high levels of lead to the use of lead-based paint on old houses in the city and to decades of copper smelting in the area.

Mordhorst said the DHS is conducting similar tests in other areas and it is possible "that the problem exists in multiple locations around the state."

Cents-ible senior pays fine with pennies

By DARRIN HOSTETLER
State Press

Jeff Hari didn't short change the American Towing Company Tuesday when he paid his towing fine, but he did prove he had common cents.

He paid his $90.75 fine in pennies. The senior economics major had gone to church Sunday at the All Saint's Catholic Newman Center, 230 E. University Drive, only to find the parking lot flooded from earlier rains.

He parked his 1978 Fiat at Sub Stop, 222 E. University Drive, and went to the service, which lasted less than an hour.

When Hari came out, his car was gone. Confusion and rage reigned — the car had been towed. Hari contacted the culprits, the American Towing Company, 2132 E. First St., and discovered he would have to fork out $90.75 to get his car back.

Since Hari delivers pizzas for a living, retrieving his car was essential to his financial health.

He borrowed the money and set out to pay. But he also set out to get even.

Hari expressed his disgust of "the system," and the towing industry in particular, by paying his car's ransom in pennies — 9,075 of them — in several large sacks.

"It was just outrageous that they towed me. It made no sense," Hari said.

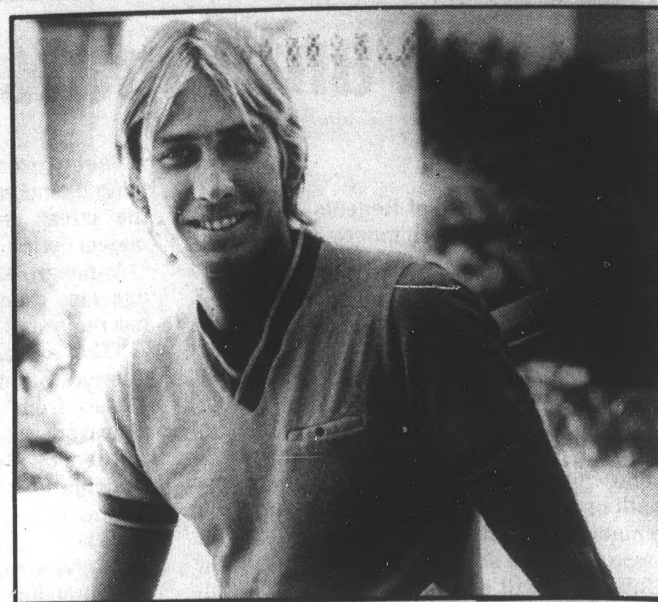

"I was fed up with the parking situation around ASU, and I had been inconvenienced. So I felt the need to inconvenience someone else."

Ray Dooley, one of the owners of American Towing, said he has seen this type of payment "a thousand times."

"This is nothing. I've been shot, stabbed and beaten by angry people. I don't give damn if he pays in pennies or not," he said.

Hari said he knew that paying his fine in pennies was a small, futile, perhaps even immature gesture.

But he did not hurt anyone, and he feels much better. "I got rubbed the wrong way," Hari said. "And now the towing company got rubbed too."

ASU alumna develops system to organize study time

By DAVE HODGES
State Press

A new time management system introduced by an ASU alumna may revolutionize study habits for ASU students. Diana Scharf Hunt, author of the best-selling book "Studying Smart," has developed an all-inclusive educational training package called "Studymate" to aid college students.

The package, consisting of the book, a three-ring binder, and a training cassette, includes items to help students coordinate academic, social, economic and personal commitments.

Studymate contains five organizational forms: The Course Requirement Planner, The Project Assignment Planner, The Weekly Planner, The Daily Planner and The Notes Record. The package also includes a calendar, writing utensils, highlighters and an address and telephone directory.

"Time management is crucial in order to get good grades, as well as being able to have personal freedoms," Hunt said.

Hunt, who received her doctorate in educational administration at ASU, said she was inspired to create

'Time management is crucial in order to get good grades ...'

— Diane Hunt

Studymate as a result of her observations of college freshmen "floundering in their responsibilities."

"Approximately one college student out of three drops out of school in his or her first year," she said. "Studies reveal that one of the main factors is poor organization."

"I had my own time management problems as a freshman. I knew I had a good idea and at the time there was nothing like that on the market. I knew that if I didn't do it (create a time management system) someone else would."

Student-life lecturer Nancy Matte teaches a class called "University Survival". The time management course is quite popular, according to Matte.

"Time management is essential," she said. "It's the basis for everything. Many students take it because they want to improve their (time management) skills and get higher grades."

"The ideas in (Hunt's) book are good. I recommend the book because it is the only one targeted for students."

But Matte does not necessarily recommend the Studymate. "I think the price ($49) is too high," she said.

According to Hunt, the system appears to be very popular. She said the company, Time Systems Inc., of Phoenix, has received more than 600 letters from students who have read the book. She said some of them have also purchased the Studymate.

A small supply of Studymates is available at the ASU Bookstore.

Even today, there are still a few students who don't have an HP calculator.

Burning the midnight oil may be necessary. Burning the 2:00 or 3:00 or 4:00 AM oil is absurd. Especially when an HP calculator can get the answers you want — in time to get a good night's sleep.

For instance, our HP-15C Professional Scientific Calculator has more built-in advanced math and statistical power than any other calculator. Our HP-41 Advanced Scientific Calculators have even more potential.

That's because there are better than 2500 software packages available for them — more than for any other calculator. There's even a special plug-in software package (we call it the Advantage Module) that's designed to handle the specific problems an engineering student has to solve in his, or her, course work. No wonder professionals in engineering and the physical sciences widely regard HP calculators as the best you can get. So check one out. Then, when your mother calls to ask if you're getting enough sleep, you won't have to lie. By the way, if you want more information, just give us a call at 800-FOR-HPPC. Ask for Dept. 658C.

Cooper displeased with scrimmage

By CAROL BOOS
State Press

"Awful." That was the word Coach John Cooper used to describe Wednesday's scrimmage.

The scrimmage was the Sun Devils' last planned before the opener Saturday against Michigan State.

Cooper said he is concerned with the whole situation of the team.

"I expected better execution than what I saw today," he said.

Specifically, Cooper voiced concern over the resignation of running back Ken Rock.

"He said he didn't want to play anymore football," Cooper said. "He said his heart wasn't in it."

Rock's quitting causes the backfield to be thin.

"We've got to do something back there," he said.

Even the defense failed to impress Cooper.

"No one got hurt because no one got hit," he said.

There were several bright spots, however.

Transplanted tailback Paul Day rushed five times for 23 yards and caught two passes for 29 yards, including a 15-yard shovel pass from senior quarterback Jeff Van Raaphorst for a touchdown. He also had one breakaway for a 60-yard touchdown, but Cooper called it back because he saw a hold.

Michael Scully/State Press

Tailback Paul Day, 22, eludes two would-be tacklers, corner back Ray Whittenburg, 15, and free safety Bernard Jones, 34, for a 60 yard touchdown run during the Sun Devils last pre-season scrimmage.

60-70 Nebraska gridders suspended.
Story page 18.

"Paul Day ran good, but we really didn't test our running game," Cooper said.

What they did test was the passing game. The coaches put the ball on the Devils' own 30 with 1:20 remaining and told them they needed a touchdown. The Sun Devil offense was impressive during the drill.

The 70-yard drive produced a Van Raaphorst touchdown pass to Stein Koss.

Van Raaphorst was effective throughout the scrimmage, completing 13 of 27 passes for 153 yards and two touchdowns. He had at least three passes dropped.

Backup quarterback Michael Johnson, a redshirt freshman, was seven of 19 for 99 yards and a touchdown. He was intercepted once.

"We need to iron out a lot of little things and go from there," Van Raaphorst said.

Wherever "there" is, the Sun Devils have one week in which to get there.

It is a good thing, too.

The Sun Devils are currently without a No. 2 quarterback. Last week, the position seemed to have been filled by Johnson. But even though Johnson played quarterback in the scrimmage, Cooper said the position is still open.

"We didn't have one (No. 2 quarterback) on the field today," Cooper said.

Cooper gave one insight that John Walker might fill the spot.

Place-kicker Kent Bostrom was 2 for 4 from the 40-yard line into the wind.

"Bostrom is a hit-miss type deal," Cooper said. "He lacks fundamentals, like keeping your head down."

"We are going into the first game with a lot of questions." In comparison to last year at this time, Cooper said he feels "a little more dejected."

However, Cooper looked at the bright side. "I don't think there are too many coaches who are happy one week before the season," Cooper said.

Making waves

Laid back surfers get violent over clothed case

DON'T BE SUCH A DRAG, DUUUUDE

Dateline: Huntington Beach, California. The story? The Ocean Pacific Surfing Championships. Surfers. Waves. Brews. Tunes. Riots.

Wait a minute. Riots? At a surfing tournament? Aren't surfers and their fans supposed to be "laid-back dudes"? The kind of beautiful people who are all just way too tolerant to get violent over anything?

Apparently not. There are still some things capable of inspiring even these peace-loving dudes to beat the snot out of each other. They have not achieved perfect control over the Savage Nature of Man.

In their defense, it is true the stakes of this struggle were high indeed. Alongside of what they were fighting for, the ideals of honor, dignity, courage and patriotism pale to insignificance. These dudes were fighting to protect their rights, man.

It seems that some women on the beach got caught up in the spirit of the day, and decided to start peeling off some clothing. Considering how little clothing these girls were wearing in the first place, it didn't take long at all before many of them were guilty of a misdemeanor.

That's when the trouble started. The police were trying to prevent these young ladies (sic) from indecently exposing themselves. And the surfer dudes just weren't having any of that.

Several really solid moralists stopped hanging 10 long enough to defend these girls' perceived right to disrobe in public. Talk about altruism. Nothing like the law or a few cops were going to interrupt this sacred ritual.

Now we have all become accustomed to riots at European soccer games and even to a few fights in the stands of American football games. But these are sports patronized by macho guys with too much testosterone in the first place, right? It's really disheartening that such a spectacle could unfold among the beautiful people.

I guess there's no telling what a bunch of dudes are going to do when such a high principle is at stake.

IT REALLY TEES ME OFF

The Sun Angels revealed plans Tuesday to build the long-awaited ASU golf course. The plan is to begin construction early next year on University Drive between Scottsdale and Hayden roads. It will take about 12 months to construct.

Bob Heiler
Sports Editor

All of this is really great news for some of us. ASU can really use its own golf course, and I know that as a student, I would enjoy having a course to play at for, I assume, not much money. Of course, considering the administration's attitude toward "revenue enhancement," this may be a rash assumption.

But anyway, I won't have the pleasure of worrying about that for long. The course will be completed, allowing for the usual "unforeseen delays," right about the time I graduate.

But I guess progress always leaves those unable to profit from it feeling left out.

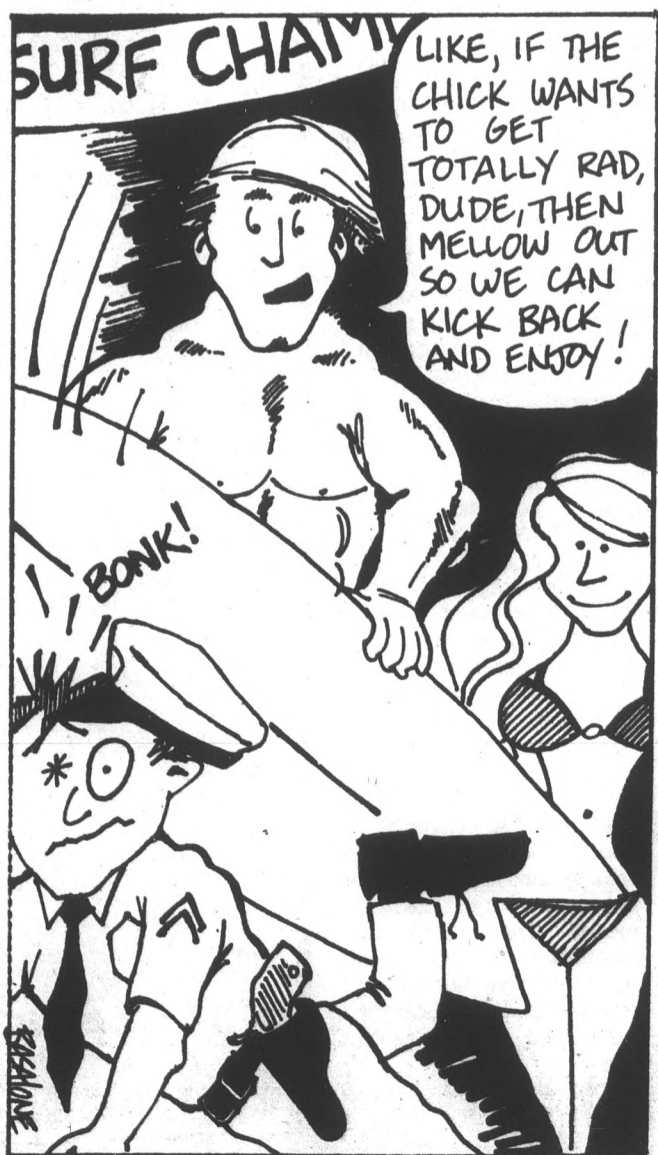

The course is to be a Scottish-type course, not much like the usual desert landscaped course seen in this area, according to designer Pete Dye.

That description fits another course in the Valley, known as Mummy Mountain. If ASU's course is to be anything like that one, it will be a true test of golf talent. The projected length is 7,000 yards, which is nothing to sneeze at. And the undulated fairways that mark the Scottish-type course tend to rob a lot of distance off the tee.

Come to think of it, maybe it's a good thing I'll be gone. Playing on a course like that wouldn't do a thing for my handicap.

In any event, the Sun Angels are to be commended for finally getting concrete plans under way for this project to begin. The addition of a golf course has long been cussed and discussed, and it's about time somebody did something about it.

If we get that and the rec center, we'll be better-equipped than most of the resorts and country clubs to which weak magazines like Playboy are always trying to compare us.

Volleyball seniors prepared to begin 'dream team'

By STEVE BRENNAN
State Press

To ASU's senior volleyball players, three years is long enough to make a dream team a reality.

As the 1986 season begins, Rhonda Fletcher, Valentina Vega and Tammy Webb see three years of hard work and friendship paying off.

"This team has taken us years to build," Vega said. "This is the team that we have been dreaming about since the start. We have so much potential."

"This is the best team we've ever had," Fletcher said. "I think this is going to be the best season ever."

Both Fletcher and Webb began their ASU careers in 1983, the same year that Debbie Brown was hired as head coach, making them the first players she has coached for all four years.

"Rhonda had just committed to play for us and Tammy came here on her first recruiting visit the day I was hired," Brown said.

"It's been a really neat experience to see each of them grow as players and as people. We have a special relationship," she said.

All three players have become close friends over the years, both on and off the court.

"Rhonda and I grew up together," Webb said. "We played for the same club before we went to ASU, but we were really close when we lived together our freshman year."

"Tammy and I used to come home after practice and make faces at each other when we were freshmen," Fletcher said. "Living with her was a good experience. She always accepted me for what I was."

Suit filed over Chandler park gas explosion

PHOENIX (AP) — A lawsuit filed by a Milwaukee Brewers coach contends that an explosion at a Chandler baseball park in February, which injured the coach and nine others, was the result of a plumber's negligence.

The lawsuit was filed last week in Maricopa County Superior Court by Herman Starrette and was made public on Tuesday.

Jeff Sutton, a plumber, and his employer, Comfort Plumbing Inc., are named as defendants in the suit, along with Compadre Baseball Stadium and Anmar Construction Co.

The suit seeks unspecified general and special damages.

The natural gas explosion occurred while the Brewers were holding spring training at the Chandler stadium.

Starrette received first- and second-degree burns on his face, hands and arms.

An investigation conducted by the Arizona Industrial Commission found that Sutton had purged several natural gas lines as he prepared to work on some heaters, but did not open any windows or doors to vent the fumes from the coaches' locker room. The accumulated gas was ignited by a heater in the locker room, the investigation found.

The commission fined Comfort Plumbing $640 in connection with the accident.

Starrette claims in his lawsuit that he was not warned of dangerous conditions that existed at the stadium, which was in the final stages of construction when spring training opened. The lawsuit also contends that Starrette was placed at risk because the defendants did not exercise reasonable care to protect him.

Then get in on the ground floor in our Platoon Leaders Class program for college freshmen, sophomores and juniors. You could start planning on a career like the men in this ad have. And also have some great advantages like:

- Earning $100 a month during the school year
- As a freshman or sophomore, you could complete your basic training during two six-week summer sessions and earn more than $1200 during each session
- Juniors earn more than $2100 during one ten-week summer session

- Seniors and graduates can be commissioned through the Officer Candidate Class Program
- You can take free civilian flying lessons
- You're commissioned upon graduation

If you're looking to move up quickly, look into the Marine Corps' commissioning programs. You could start off making more than $18,000 a year.

We're looking for a few good men.

"I have a great relationship with both Tammy and Rhonda," Vega said. "I knew Rhonda before she came here, but I think they are both special people."

"We sort of came in as teen-agers," she said. "We've noticed a lot of maturing and seen a lot of changes."

Vega began her career in 1982 but was forced to redshirt in 1984 in order to have a child.

Both Webb and Fletcher expressed tremendous admiration at Vega's comeback after her redshirt season.

"Val is a miracle," Fletcher said. "To be able to come back and play after having a child would have been mind-boggling to others, but she persevered and came through it."

"Val has gone through a really tough comeback," Webb added.

Brown said that all three players have been a guiding force for the team in the last three years.

"All of them have been a good example for the other players," Brown said. "Rhonda is the heart of the team. She works hard in the gym and she is always really positive. I don't think she realizes how much she does for the team."

"Val is really competitive and tries to make each girl equally competitive. She really goes after the ball in games, which sets a good example for the others," she said.

"Tammy is a real inspiration to the team. She is a tremendously gifted athlete and a great example on the court. I can't say enough about her."

"She treats everyone as an individual. She pulls the team together," Vega said. All three players expressed equal respect for their coach. "I wouldn't want anyone else as a coach," Webb added.

Although they see similarities between their class and this year's recruits, all three girls feel this year's freshmen have an advantage.

"They have less pressure on them this year," Webb said.

"The freshmen definitely have an advantage this year," Vega said. "They have a close, set team already. It wasn't like that when we started."

60-70 Huskers suspended for ticket scalping

LINCOLN, Neb. (AP) — The NCAA has suspended 60 to 70 University of Nebraska football players for one game and seven others for two games, Cornhuskers Coach Tom Osborne said Wednesday.

Osborne told reporters after practice that the suspensions were ordered for what the NCAA said were improprieties in Nebraska's use of complimentary football tickets.

•All the players could sit out Saturday's game against 11th-ranked Florida State, which Osborne said would leave him with mainly freshmen and redshirt players to put on the field.

•Have 10 players sit out each of the next six or seven games.
