On a wall newspaper I read:

"The roaring of the ~~wind~~ <sup>wind</sup> last night
gave birth to a new anti-Japanese war.

Do not grow sad -

Tomorrow the morning sun will kiss your forehead.

The roaring of the ~~wind~~ <sup>wind</sup> last night

brings enormous bitter struggle

Do not let your hearts know fear.

Tomorrow ~~of~~ we will all be freemen.

A messenger soldier tried his hand:

To fight Japan, to fight Japan

If we do not we shall be slaves.

They kill our people, rape our women -

How cruel are the devils -

To them we Chinese are not human beings

If we do not arise and fight

When, then, will revenge us?

We are pledged to death

To a struggle for life or death.

We Fight and Study

We'll newspapers of a guerrilla Army training School

When we fear not even death
How then can we fear the storm
How fear the cold
Or hunger or poverty?

How can we fight in the enemy rear?
About us are masses of men —
Who love our country.
When the enemy advances from all directions
Against this our base of resistance
We can defeat them.

Rifles ~~grasped~~ in the hands of revolutionaries
For national freedom
For the defence of Central China!
With guns in hands we study
With guns in hands we fight
For us the final victory.
