Dearest Florence:

I did not write to you because you left Paris and I had no idea of where to write. You know, I possess no psychic powers, and you said "Italy".

I see you are doing things up grandly. I suppose you will be here sometime in June. I cannot meet you in Munich, for I have my private students and my class in the university, and upon the money from such I live. Without them I die! I doubt if I would leave anyway, for I have been such a useless piece of lumber so long that I want to dig a hole and work somewhere. My book isn't finished, I write articles, I am under analysis each day, and I am making a study of social welfare work here also. So you see, I am all too busy. But of course I don't do all these things all in one day. But I am leaving Berlin on July 14th or 15th for Austria (Salzburg) for two months as the guest of Tilla Durieux, the noted actress. There I shall live in peace and work again on my book or on the facts I am collecting on welfare work here.

Love to you, dear heart, until you arrive.

Agnes
