Mar-y Belle and Jack-ie Hor-ner, 'tis their wed-ding day.
You can hear the guests all say-ing lots of nas - ty things;

See the bride walk down the aisle,— how her cheeks do flush, If Sym-pa - thiz - ing with the groom, you can hear them say: "He you knew her like I do, you'd say she ought to blush;

could have done much bet - ter, the bride looks sweet, but say:"

Preach-er reads the ser-vice while the or-gan plays,
Best man's all ex-cit-ed, and I won-der why,

He gets kind of ner-vous, he knew her in his young-er days; And May-be he feels slight-ed, he was best man in days gone by; And sev-en dad-dies, so they say, have come to give the bride a-way, No peo-ple say she knows her stuff, she should, she's practised long e-nough, No won-der she's a blush-ing bride. bride.
