Regents Raise ASU Fees To $91

NEW LIFE-SCIENCES CENTER . . . will receive its first occupants during summer sessions. Complete occupation of the $972,800 structure is expected to take place in September.

FOR SIX STUDY AREAS

AS Honors Program Developed

An honors program to maximize educational opportunities for outstanding students has been submitted by Arizona State University to the Board of Regents for approval.

Hoped to be initiated next Sept. at ASU, the program will affect six major areas of study in the College of Liberal Arts.

The honors program is designed specifically for students of exceptional ability who are interested in scholarly attainment rather than minimum academic requirements for a degree, and it will replace specified regular classes, perhaps as much as the equivalent of one or two semester's work, with faculty-supervised individual research and study.

Students who have earned a 3.2 grade average may, at their option, apply for admission to the honors program, said Dr. Arnold Tilden, dean of the College of Liberal Arts. Specialized tests will be administered and conferences will be held by the Honors Council, comprised of faculty, before an applicant is accepted to the program.

The study program will first be open to students majoring in English, psychology, philosophy, history, political science or sociology.

Dean Tilden emphasized that, "not all qualified students will enroll in the honors program; first, because of the limited number of fields offered; secondly, because many subjects, such as mathematics and the sciences, do not lend themselves well to this type of program, and finally, because many highly qualified people simply will not have the time, due to other campus or employment activities.

The honors program is not a short-cut or speed-up process. An honors student can complete his degree in the regular four years, but he will ment rather than minimum academic requirements for a degree have devoted much more time to his study than the student following the normal course sequence.

Honors students will by-pass many courses for beginning students, with the approval and recommendation of their advisors and be able to enroll in advanced courses early in their academic careers. A senior honors student will be eligible to enroll in graduate

Election Petitions Ready To Circulate Wednesday

Students running for student government offices may pick up their petitions in room 202 of the Memorial Union building beginning Wednesday. The petitions must be turned in by 4 p.m., March 11.

Petitions for ASASU offices will require approximately 160 names, while those running for AWS, AMS or senators will need about 100 names.

Students and faculty are invited to attend a free coffee hour Tuesday from 9 to 10:30 a.m. in the MU faculty dining room.

Required Index For Graduation Boosted To 2.0

Increased enrollment fees and strengthened academic standards for Arizona State University were approved this week by the Board of Regents.

Beginning in Sept. enrollment fees will be $91, an increase of $26.25 over the present ASU fee of $74.75.

Candidates for graduation from ASU will be required to have a cumulative scholarship index of 2.00 ("C"). The present index requirement for graduation is 1.80.

Another measure, approved by the regents, to tighten academic standards is a requirement that 40 per cent of the semester hours for graduation be in upper division courses.

New graduation requirements will apply to all students entering ASU in Sept.

Beginning next fall, students will be disqualified when their cumulative grade index falls below 1.25 at the end of their freshman year; below 1.50 their sophomore year; and below 1.75 their junior year.

Disqualified students may, however, petition for reinstatement.

Deferred until the next regents meeting, March 9, at ASU were proposed catalog changes submitted early this month by ASU.

Regents also instructed Dr. Richard A. Harvill, president of the UofA, to have proposed catalog changes for his institution in the hands of the regents 10 days prior to the next meeting. Regents indicated action on the balance of ASU proposals and those of the UofA would be taken at that meeting.

A plan for a medical school study which had been submitted to the board by Dr. Richard S. Poor, of the University of Florida Health Center at Gainesville, was also approved by the board. Cost of the study is estimated at $135,000 to $175,000.

At the close of their meeting Wednesday, the Board of Regents met with the joint appropriations committee of the house and senate at the state capitol to request a total of $21,920,829 from the legisla-

Blood Donations Total 152 Pints For VA Hospital

A total of 152 pints of blood was donated to the Phoenix Veterans Administration Hospital during the three-day drive on campus by Associated Women Students this week.

More than 170 students went to the Infirmary to donate blood but many were rejected for one of several reasons, said Howard N. Cooke, director of the Blood Program at the VA Hospital.

Banquet Closes Radio-TV Meet

A banquet tomorrow night in the Memorial Union will conclude the 12th annual Western Radio-Television Conference, which began Thursday.

In tomorrow's afternoon session at KOOL-TV, Dr. Foster Davidoff, dean of administration at Compton Junior College, Calif., will discuss his institution's controversial television teaching concept.

Robert B. Hudson, vice president for programming for the Educational Television and Radio Center, Ann Arbor, Mich., will be main speaker at the banquet. James Creasman, executive secretary of the ASU Alumni Association, will be master of ceremonies.

Featured will be the St. John's Indian School Dancers.

Cultural Affairs Committee Arranges Many Social Events

The Cultural Affairs committee is one of the most active organizations on campus.

Headed by Sammi Bunt, the committee has attracted renowned entertainers, artists and lecturers to the ASU campus, and it has worked with cultural groups around the valley.

"Culture is one of the most valuable things obtained from college life," Sammi Bunt says. "Culture is not a superficial thing; it lasts many years beyond college."

"Anyone graduating from a university should have an appreciation and knowledge of cultural events," she continues, "and this is what we try to give the students — the opportunity to be exposed to culture."

Social events planned by the committee the past semester have included Art rentals, International Fashion Show, a tour of Frank Lloyd Wright's Taliesin West, Art Sale, Christmas Vesper Hour, special concerts and lectures, and the Theatre Party at Sombrero Playhouse.

The advisors stated that "this year has been one of the most varied and successfully sponsored in the history of the committee."

Tentative plans for next year include a performance by Victor Borge, the Knickerbocker Orchestra of New York, the Cleveland Symphony, and a Bach Aria Group which includes four guest soloists and the first chair players of the New York Philharmonic.

ASU Senate Acts On Bills

The Joint Council of Engineers was officially recognized Wednesday and permitted, according to the ASU Constitution, to choose two student Senate representatives. The senators will be introduced at the next Student Senate meeting.

Two new bills, 121 and 122, were introduced in Wednesday's session. Senate Bill 121 will establish inauguration ceremonies for ASASU officers. Senate Bill 122 concerns renaming the Executive Council as the President's Cabinet of ASAS. The bills were referred to Senate committees for study.

Paul Carlson was approved by the Senate for membership on the Supreme Court. Sammi Bunt was approved as chairman of the Cultural Affairs committee.

New Senators include: Chris Penson, Sophomore Class; Tom Potter, Applied Arts and Sciences, and Frank Morini, Veterans.

Senatorial positions still open are Off Campus Women and senior class.

Enrollment For TV Course In Atomic Physics Still Open

Enrollment for the second semester of "Continental Classroom," offering three semester hours credit, will be open through March 3.

The course in atomic and nuclear physics, which began this week, consists of 80 telecasts and 15 study assignments. It is aired Monday through Friday from 6:30 to 7 a.m. over KVAR-TV.

It is designed for science teachers, college students planning to teach science, engineers and anyone desiring a better understanding of recent developments in the scientific world.

Cost of registration, including registration fee, textbook, syllabus and mailing charge, is $39.75.

Total legislative operating budget request is $13,741,829, an increase of $2,700,293 over the appropriation granted for the 1958-59 school year. Operating budget for the three schools is $19,595,050, an increase of $3,981,521 over 1958-59.

Difference between the two budgets is made up in fees and other sources of revenue of the institutions.

A budget of $7,056,242, an increase of $1,941,961 over the 1958-59 budget, was requested for ASU. Legislative request for funds is $5,036,272, an increase of $1,455,486 over that granted by the legislature in 1958-59.

ASU funds were requested on the basis of an anticipated total enrollment next year of 11,300 students compared to a first-semester enrollment of 9,711.

Salaries of ASU faculty next year will be $4,450 for the lowest paid instructor to $11,600 for the highest paid full professor. Present salaries range from $4,450 to $10,700.

Partial reason for devising the honors program, according to Dr. Tilden, is "It has become the practice in American education for the instructor to do all the work. First we give the student a textbook, then we prepare a syllabus, an outline of the course, and, from that, devise classwork, lectures and discussion.

"Under the honors program, the responsibility will be put squarely upon the student, who will do all the work under faculty supervision. He should learn more, develop greater initiative and confidence and have the lifelong ability to think and do things for himself."

Honors students must retain at least a 3.2 grade index to remain in the program and must pass two essay examinations, present to the Honors Council an acceptable thesis or equivalent creative project, and defend that thesis in an oral examination.

ASU will confer "magna cum laude" degrees on honors graduates whose grade indexes are 3.2 to 3.49 and "Summa cum laude" degrees on those who maintain an average over 3.5.

Dr. Tilden pointed out that by conferreing Latin-titled degrees to honors students, ASU will distinguish between those students not in the honors program who graduate either "with distinction" or "with high distinction."

EDITORIALLY SPEAKING —

Academic Research

Some students are as adept at changing majors in college as they are at changing shirts. Indeed, some do the former as often as the latter. Joking about curriculum adjustment petitions is common on campus.

These students usually don't stick with one adviser long enough to learn his name. This results in little understanding by the adviser and a lost-sheep attitude on the part of the student. No wonder some of these students must spend five years, including summer sessions, earning one Bachelor's degree.

This is only one problem of education.

Most students run into their own academic brick walls some time during college. Some cope adequately with their problems. Others are unsuccessful.

How can some of these problems be eliminated?

One step, already established, consists of offering psychological and interest tests in the Lyceum.

Another important step has been effected recently. The Student Senate has established a Student Education board. Used properly, its potential is great. The board stands ready to search into any problem of academic education. Then they'll do something about them, through conferences with educators and administrators.

The idea is fine. It can be implemented by sincere interest and cooperation from every student.

Let the Student Education board hear your ideas.

It's up to you.

Still Time

Okay, you armchair politicians. Now's your chance. If you don't take it, let's not hear complaints when it's too late.

If you sit back, glibly criticize election procedures, and scorn the few campaigners for office, without doing anything about it yourself, you are as guilty of corrupt politics as those seeking office with insincere motives.

Usually, two or three (with some exceptions) students vie for each position when student government elections are held.

Most campus organizations try to enter candidates for as many offices as possible. In some cases, these candidates are worthy of and interested in the offices they seek. But other cases show the opposite attitude.

When these latter are elected and their true worth discovered, you armchair politicians howl conscientiously. Well, spend your effort before it's too late again.

Petitions are available Wednesday, February 25, for all ASASU offices, student senate, and class offices. A contest with four or five candidates for every position would be healthy.

"No, Miss, I'm not depositing . . . I'm withdrawing."

To the editor:

I believe that in past elections, campus-wide, the State Press has published news, qualifications and the ideas of candidates running for offices, just prior to election day.

ASASU government is designed and patterned after our federal government. The actual election of officers is also patterned after our national setup. Our student body government is rated as one of the most organized and best functioning in the nation. All of these factors added together give cause for a certain demand to elect the best qualified and most capable candidates.

I am not a journalism major but I do realize that the State Press has an editorial policy and certain restrictions. I would certainly appreciate your comment on the following statements and ideas.

A. It is felt that there is a tendency to elect officers because they represent a large organization.

B. It is felt that there are tendencies to elect officers because of their campus popularity.

C. It is felt that a vast number of ASU students do not know enough about the students running for office.

If our student government is going to expand and improve at the same rate as our University then we the students must be afforded the opportunity of selecting our ASASU officers intelligently. The State Press is the only common means of communications between all ASU students, so I am proposing the following:

1. That the State Press list the names of students and the offices that they are petitioning, beginning Feb. 25th when petitions are available. ASU students must sign the petitions to make a candidate eligible.

2. When each petition for an ASASU office is completed and turned in, that the candidate's qualifications be printed. An intelligent voter will compare all candidates in advance BEFORE election day.

3. As in the past, which I believe the State Press has done excellently, the picture, the candidate's ideas or platform and again his qualifications should be printed just prior to the elections.

4. If possible, State Press reporters should contact the candidates and ask them their opinions on certain questions pertaining to the needs and ideas in student government.

If these things can be made possible to the students, then I believe that other students as well as myself can become more intelligent voters and that the ASASU government will mean just a little more to all of us. Thank You.

Respectfully,
 Charles Bickhart
 An interested student.

This is a reply to the letter which appeared in the State Press Wednesday. Our first reaction is one of gratitude for sincere interest and constructive criticism.

We believe that the 1959 Sahuaro will go a long way toward realizing Mr. Kudron's hopes.

We have included freshman football, basketball, and baseball, with individual players pictured and identified.

Even so, it is never an easy task to determine space allotments in the Sahuaro. Each page in the yearbook costs nearly $65 to print. The '59 edition has more than 350 pages. As editor, it is my job, with the help of my staff, to determine student interests and literally to "spend" the pages wisely. Contrary to some beliefs, no pressure is placed on the yearbook staff to give special emphasis to any single aspect of University life.

We welcome suggestions and hope the student body will be pleased with our efforts to produce the first University yearbook with color reflecting campus life.

Sincerely,
 RON ELLENSON,
 Sahuaro Editor.

Like parades? Then you're in for a treat this morning about 10:30, if you should be near College and Orange intersection.

A miniature band of first-graders and student council members from the Payne Laboratory School will entertain while campaigning for funds for the council's charity project.

Bedecked in home-made newspaper hats, the tots will wave flags and carry tin cups while their band plays.

When you spot the colorful group, remember, a few cents will aid their project. You can miss just one cup of coffee, can't you?

Congratulations! Steps taken by the ASU Panhellenic Council recently are right in line with ASU's attempts to raise academic standards. Sorority activities play an important part in college life, but so do studies. Realizing this, Panhellenic has trimmed down many sorority events to more practical proportions.

Limiting these activities (see on page one) should provide more study time for busy sorority girls. Even using the extra hours for sleep (let's be realistic) would be advantageous.

Anyone feel likewise?

On the other hand, maybe you haven't found college life much of a strain. If studies are your only activity, you probably don't really feel like part of the fun of college life.

Quick remedy: whether you go for stage plays, western dances, pep rallies, improving academic education or just plan organizing, there may be a place for you on one of the eight student boards.

Of course, this is only a small idea of what the boards do. For further information, check with LeRoy Whitson, activities vice president, in MU 202.

Really want a job? Check out a petition for a class or student body office after next Wednesday in MU 201.

If you haven't seen the Foreign Language Week displays in the MU showcases yet, today is your last chance. Winding up FLW will be an international dinner Sunday, 5 through 7 p.m., in the MU cafeteria. Cantonese cuisine will be complimented by a foreign floor show. Tickets, $1.25, are available in front of Danforth Chapel.

Sounds like fun and an interesting atmosphere . . .

Speaking of atmosphere, that's just what the live combo provides at dinner hour in Palo Verde cafeteria now. Replacing the radio, the musicians add a relaxing touch . . . and not a single commercial!

In case you forgot, or didn't know, there aren't any classes Monday at ASU. Also in case you forgot, the reason is George Washington's birthday, which, although really falls on Sunday, is legally recognized Monday. Like I've said before . . . birthdays are a wonderful invention.

Imps Idle; Play Bears Wednesday

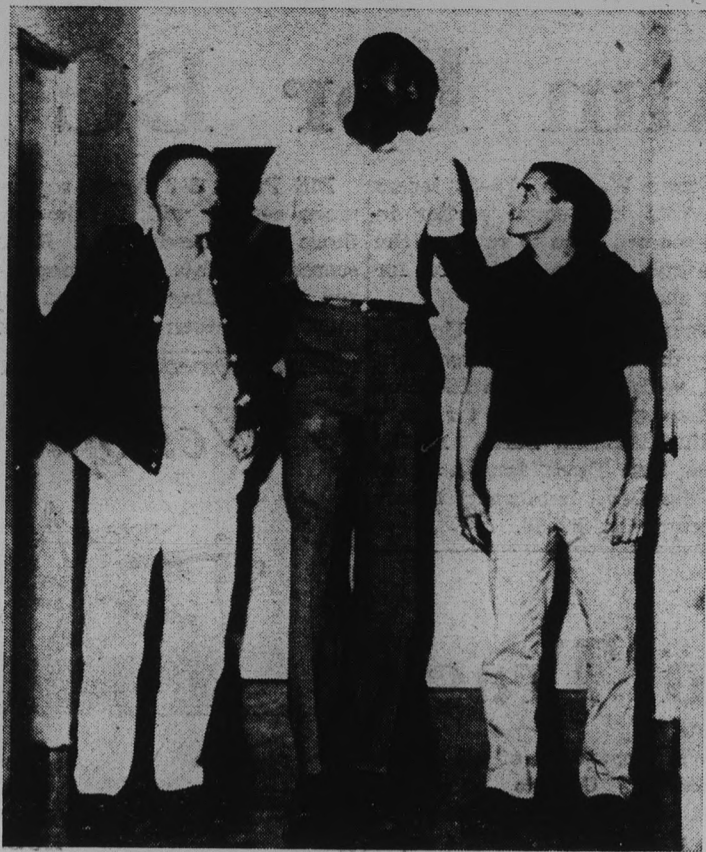

Arizona State's Sun Imps got an unexpected rest this weekend, since their scheduled game with Worth's Sporting Goods was called off.

Instead Fanny Markham's freshman five will swing into action next Wednesday in their home finale against Phoenix College in the preliminary to the varsity's last home game against Pepperdine.

The Worth's tilt was postponed because the team is composed mostly of high school cage coaches, and it was possible that some of the members might be tied up with prep tournaments tomorrow night.

Against Phoenix College Wednesday, the ASU Frosh will face some high class competition. PC has already clinched the Arizona JC championship and will participate in the regional playoffs for the National JC cage championships.

The team is rated among the nation's top ten jaycees, and their brilliant 5-10 guard, Larry Armstrong, is high on the national individual scoring list.

WELL, BOYS, IT'S THIS WAY . . . If you want to lead the nation in basketball scoring, you eat plenty of spinach and grow to be about 7 feet tall. Don't know if that's what he said, but 7-2 Wilt Chamberlain seems to be parting with some sort of sage cage advice to Sun Devils Ed Olson (left) and Paul Howard. The ASU cagers, both 5-10, dropped into the Globetrotter dressing room when that team toured through here last week.

Same Bit In BC: ASU, Price Lead

It was the same old story on the Border Conference statistics scene this week: Arizona State leading in standings and team scoring, and New Mexico State's Bill Price on top in individual scoring.

A-State's Sun Devils, currently 7-1 in the BC, lead the league in both conference and season scoring. The Devils are scoring at an 83.7 clip in the conference, better than six points per game ahead of runner-up West Texas State, which has 77.1.

Overall, the ASU quint is averaging 80.5 points per game, and on the national scene, are twelfth in the country. Miami of Florida is tops nationally with an 85.5 figure.

The Devil offense is far ahead of other BC teams in season scoring, with West Texas again the nearest competitor at 68.4.

Defensively, New Mexico State heads the conference at 59.8, and Texas Western leads in all games with a 59.1 mark.

New Mexico State's Price is tops in both season and conference scoring and heads the BC list in field goal accuracy.

The 6-8 Aggie sophomore is hitting 19.2 for the season, 22.8 in the conference, and his field goal marksmanship is a phenomenal 63.4 percent in conference games.

Arizona State's high-scoring trio of Al Nealey, Paul Howard and Paul Denham are prominent in the individual departments.

Nealey and Denham are 2-3 in season scoring at 18.3 and 16.8 respectively.

Howard and Denham are second and fourth in field goal accuracy, 49.2 and 44.5 percent, respectively.

The same twosome hold identical ranking in loop scoring, Howard at 20.7 points per game, and Denham at 19.0.

FIG'S FILE

By VIC FIGARELLI

At present, an analyst of the Border Conference basketball race can be sure of three things: (1) Arizona's Wildcats are out of contention; (2) Hardin-Simmons' Cowboys are out of contention; and (3) the team that wins the BC crown will play St. Mary's of Calif. in the NCAA regional playoffs.

On the other hand, there is a possibility that only one team can take the whole bit; there is a possibility that two teams can tie for the championship; and there is a possibility that four teams can get snarled in a championship tie.

Oddly enough, a three-team jump for the title is mathematically possible, and very improbable.

For a four-way tie to develop, West-Texas State (4-3) must win all of its remaining games (H-SU, TWC, NMSU) and ASU will have to lose its two loop struggles this weekend. Then, if TW and NMS go unscathed the four contenders will all have 7-3 records and BC officials will have a large headache as to playoff sites and dates.

Either the Aggies or TW's Miners (both 4-2) or both can get a slice of the title by winning all four of their loop games, since they will have eliminated West Texas and A-State.

AS can simplify matters by clouting both TW and NMS this weekend, which would be most pleasant, since that would give New Wulk's team a 9-1 loop record and a clear, undisputed title.

With upset victories, both H-SU and Arizona can cause a three-way tie, but breaking that down into a paragraph or two would lead to utter confusion, so take it for granted.

ASU Cagers Aim For BC Crown

Coach Ned Wulk will take his conference-leading Sun Devils on a weekend excursion tomorrow, with intentions of returning home proud possessor of the Border Conference basketball crown.

Arizona State is currently in first place in conference play with a 7-1 record. A victory over either Texas Western (4-2) tomorrow night or New Mexico State (4-2) Monday night will assure the Demons of at least a tie for their second consecutive BC championship.

The Devils collide with the Texas Western Miners at El Paso in an 8 p.m. fray tomorrow night in the first half of their weekend activity. Charlie Brown & Co. will be on hand, trying to protect the Miners' unblemished home-court record.

Texas Western, 75-62 losers to ASU in Tempe earlier in the season, hope to revenge the loss and stay in contention for the championship.

New Mexico State University, the Demons' Monday night foe, will be risking a 22-game homecourt victory string against Arizona State. NMSU gave Sun Devil fans a scare on the Devil homecourt before succumbing, 80-86.

Bill Price, 6-8 Aggie sophomore center, will be the big thorn in the Devils' side. Price scored 28 points and monopolized rebounding in the last meeting between the two teams and is currently one of the statistics leaders in both scoring and rebounding in the Border Conference. Price also leads in field goal accuracy.

Dozen Returnees In Track

Carol Lindroos, Scandinavian discus champion, and Jesse Bradford, national high school low hurdles record holder, join 12 returning lettermen for Coach Baldy Castillo's '59 track squad.

Lindroos, a transfer from Finland, has recorded tosses of up to 181 feet.

Bradford, a freshman from Shafter, Calif., broke the national prep hurdles record in 1957 with an 18.3 timing. He is expected to report after spring football drills.

Alex Henderson, brilliant distance man from Australia, heads the list of returnees from the 1958 Border Conference championship team.

Others include Jamaican twins Mel and Mal Spence, George Hershey, Jim McGowan and Willis Palmer.

Also, Tom Whetstone, Jerry Robertson, Joe Rose, Don Jeisy, Dick Fischl and Herb Montoya.

Castillo said the team will be pointing toward a high finish in the NCAA championships to be held in Lincoln, Neb., in June.

"We have a potential of scoring more points than any ASU team to go before, with such stars as Henderson, Lindroos and Rose, along with the Spences and McGowan," said

Castillo.

While speaking of his team's potential, Castillo explained that ASU has many outstanding performers but lacks depth to make a really strong team. He is still looking for talent in all events.

Don't settle for one without the other!

©1959 Liggett & Myers Tobacco Company

"L&M is kindest to your taste because L&M combines the two essentials of modern smoking," says TV's Jack Lescoulie.

LOW TAR: L&M's patented filtering process adds extra filter fibers electrostatically, crosswise to the stream of smoke... makes L&M truly low in tar.

MORE TASTE: L&M's rich mixture of slow-burning tobaccos brings you more exciting flavor than any other cigarette.
