ASU Government Based On Freedom

"An atmosphere of freedom where mistakes are allowed — not encouraged but allowed — ... (and) officers willing to accept responsibility for mistakes which reflect on them ... " should be the basis of student government.

This was the opinion expressed by Stephen Covey, of the Brigham Young University faculty, at the annual PSPA convention at the University of Nevada in Reno last week.

Purpose of the Pacific Student-Body Presidents' convention is to bring together the incoming and outgoing student-body officers from colleges and universities in the Pacific region to discuss student government problems.

"The most valuable outgrowth of the convention is the clarification and realization of a student-body officer's duties, his responsibilities to the students and the school, and the proper bases for decisions," according to Tom Meredith, ASASU activities vice president-elect.

"I think all of us now realize that ASU has an outstanding student-body government setup, where we can represent the students fairly and openly, and yet work in close cooperation with — rather than in opposition to — the administration and faculty," Tom Hulén, ASASU president-elect, said.

Next year's convention will meet at the UofA in Tucson.

Les Brown's band has been voted America's number-one band by all major polls since 1953. It has received four awards in the past year from Down Beat, Metronome, Billboard and Playboy magazines. The band is the first in history to use jet transportation between professional engagements.

Hulen To Strive For Understanding

By FRAN BRESLIN

Student interest centers on Tom Hulen, ASASU president-elect, who will be responsible for one of ASU's most important jobs next year.

"Student government offers students a tremendous educational opportunity by enabling them to learn cooperation and to establish important personality relationships with others," stated Hulen.

An advocate of student leadership in close unity with administration, Hulen intends to try to establish good understanding between the two.

Experience is an important factor in any leader's life, and Hulen has had plenty of that. While attending Phoenix Union High School, he was an outstanding student and football player. At Phoenix College he was student body president and was selected as the Rosenzweig outstanding student and athlete.

He decided to devote his non-academic time to student government and to drop football entirely because, he said, "I figured I would suffer less bodily harm in student government than in football . . . Now," he added, "I find it just as dangerous."

On Hulen's tentative agenda for next year's projects are a move to eliminate homecoming floats, a bookstore improvement investigation, expansion of the student-faculty relations board to include faculty-student-alumni problem, and an attempt at closer cooperation between student government and the State Press.

A greater percentage of student participation in student government will be worked for. "If leaders show an avid interest in ASU affairs, other students will be encouraged to do their bit also. There are numerous senate and board positions available, and we will strive to fill these vacancies with capable and responsible people," said Hulen.

Besides heading ASASU, Hulen will devote the rest of his time to his wife, ten month old daughter, and his major, electrical engineering.

Dannenfeldt, head of the division of Behavioral and Social Sciences; Dr. Jacob Fuchs, associate professor of chemistry; Dr. Louis Myers, head of the division of Language and Literature; Dr. Ross Rice, associate professor of Political Science; and Dr. Raymond Wochner, professor of Education.

Irish Hall Gives Money

The Irish Hall Council has donated $400 to Matthews Library to start a collection of books on Southwest Americana.

Individual books will be chosen with the help of faculty members.

The men of Irish Hall traditionally contribute part of their hall's funds to ASU development. Irish Hall was the only dormitory to contribute to the Memorial Union's construction, and its council yearly awards a scholarship to a resident of the dormitory.

EDITORIALLY SPEAKING —

Half-Safe?

As the weather becomes warmer and the water more inviting, our thoughts become tangled with a desire to go for a swim.

Thinking only of immediate comfort, we would like to take off for our favorite swimming hole, pool or lake, but how many of us are ready for polio if we are exposed to it?

The United States Public Health Service reports, "The warning signals of last summer should jolt even the most complacent. Before the Salk vaccine came into use in 1955, the number of cases of polio averaged 39,000 a year. By 1957 there were fewer than 6,000 cases.

"We expect more cases this year due to people who began the series of Salk shots, but who never finished them."

The Infirmary will vaccinate students at a charge of 75 cents a shot, a doctor will charge $3 for the same shot.

The first two shots are given from two to seven weeks apart, the third shot comes seven to ten months later.

For those who have begun the series, the third shot is due. If you have not begun the series, there is still time to get the first two shots before school is out.

According to Dr. Norvin C. Kiefer, president of the National Health Council, "We seem to be setting an astonishing record for national carelessness in our apathetic use of the Salk vaccine.

"Out of America's 175,000,000 people, only 77,000 have had one or more shots of the vaccine; 98,000,000 have not had it at all.

"This means that four out of every seven Americans are still susceptible to polio.

"Of this 98,000,000 who are unprotected by vaccine, 41,000,000 are in the vulnerable age group under 40."

Although people under 40 account for 88 per cent of all the polio cases, the U. S. Public Health Service urges that "... all Americans become inoculated."

Since the announcement in the State Press May 6 of the ASU group health and accident plan we have had numerous requests for information about how to get the plan, when it starts, etc.

To answer these questions, we contacted Messrs. Charles H. Lock and Wayne O. Sproule, LL.B., Phoenix insurance men who will administer the plan, and Ed Hurley, American Casualty's specialist on group policies.

A feature of the plan, not known at the time of the original story, is that a brochure about the plan and an application form will be mailed this summer to students planning to register at ASU next fall.

Students may either fill-out and sign the application or sign a waiver on it. Those who sign and return the application and necessary funds before the opening of school will be covered from the time they leave home to travel to school.

On-campus enrollment in the plan will take place during the entire month of September. After Sept. 30, no applications will be accepted for the balance of the semester.

Each student that enrolls in the plan will receive an identification card listing the benefits to which he is entitled. This card is his admission to any hospital anywhere in the world without making the frequently-demanded down-payment.

Every week numerous news releases come across an editor's desk. They plug everything from ice cream socials to bicycle derbys.

One that caught our attention recently concerns the fourth annual banquet to award the degree of PHT (Pushing Hubby Through) to wives of graduating seniors.

The banquet is scheduled for next Wednesday in the MU ballroom at 7 p.m.

James Creasman, executive secretary of the ASU Alumni Association, will give the welcome address; Mrs. Grady Gammage, wife of ASU's president, will present the diplomas; and James Loper, assistant director of the Radio-TV Bureau, will act as master of ceremonies.

Reservations for the event may be made through Monday at the MU information desk. Senior's wives who are unable to attend the banquet may submit their names and addresses to the MU and obtain diplomas by mail.

The PHT banquet is sponsored by the Student-Faculty Relations committee.

New Mexico's Board of Regents has approved two proposals aimed at establishing a medical school at the University of New Mexico, according to that school's newspaper.

Step one was that of inviting the American Medical Association and the Association of American Medical Colleges to make a study to determine whether the university warrants the foundation of a modern two- or four-year medical school program.

Also approved was student-body president Tom Popejoy's proposal that he be authorized to study and negotiate with agencies interested in establishing hospital sites on university land.

And why not?

The ASU student senate passed a bill Wednesday setting up a special loan fund "to provide funds not appropriated in an annual budget to be used for special projects benefiting the student body."

Projects operated directly by organizations of Associated Students will be granted the loans interest-free. Interest from loans to groups other than these will accumulate within the fund.

We're beginning to sound like a bank — but then banks do all right for themselves, don't they?

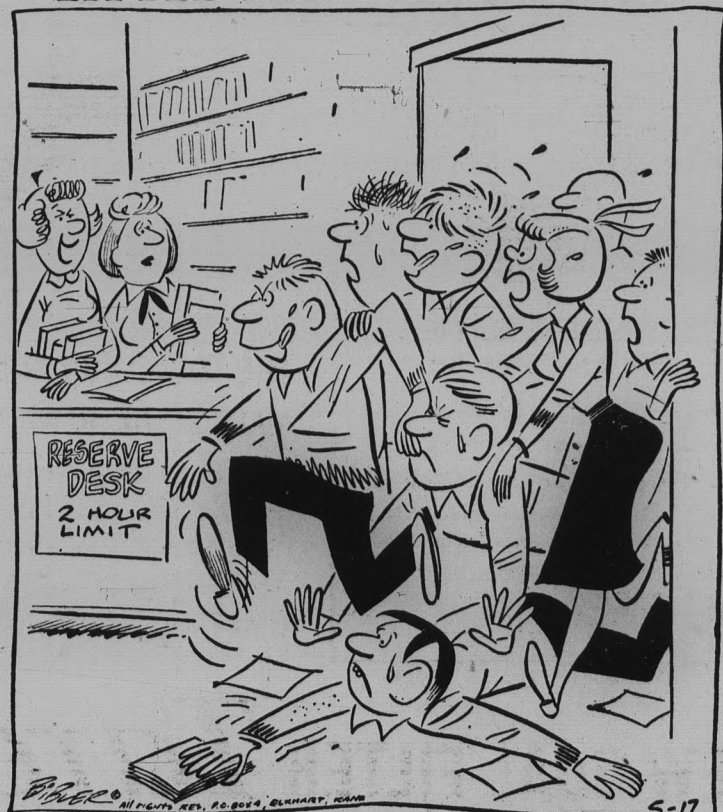

To the Editor,

Thank you very much for the satire on Peachville Junior College in last Friday's State Press. It reminded me of a college I know about. It is indeed a shame that some schools are no longer places to get a scholastic education, but have turned into institutions such as your article depicted.

It would be interesting to find out how many Arizona State University students agree with me. I would like to know.

Yours very respectfully,

A ten point victory in the 880-yard relay gave Alpha Phi Alpha enough points to win the intramural track championship Wednesday.

Final totals showed Alpha Phi Alpha had 29½ points, a seven-and-a-half point bulge over runner-up Kappa Alpha Psi, with 22.

Alpha Phi's Jim Newman was the meet's top performer, garnering a pair of first-place victories in the 220 and 440-yard dashes, and running a leg of the 880 relay.

3 Sun Devils In LA Relays

Three ASU track and field stars have been invited to compete in the Coliseum Relays in Los Angeles, Calif., May 23.

Mal Spence, Tom Whetstine and Joe Rose were invited to the trackfest, which includes outstanding athletes from throughout the country. Spence recently ran a 47.4

quarter-mile to win his event in the Border Conference championships. He also has 46 and 46.6 clockings to his credit while in relay events. Spence held the ASU school record in the 880-yard run until teammate Alex Henderson erased his standard in an exhibition meet.

Whetstine held the second-best high jump mark in the nation last year, 6'10". In spite of injuries and a flu attack this season, he managed a 6'7½" leap.

Pole vaulter Joe Rose cleared 15'1" two years ago and has kept consistently at the 14'-plus level this season.

Golfers End Season

By RON CONTRERAS

Arizona State University's golf team ended its season with an 18-6 won-lost record. Devil golfer Duff Lawrence led the team with a 72 average for the season.

Sophomore Rex Wilsen followed with a 73 average. Joe Kallof finished the year with a 76 average, and Don Boaz and Dave Klein tied with 11 apiece. Phil Brignall's season average was 79.

Lawrence shot the lowest score of the season, 67, against San Diego Naval Training Center, Luke and Williams AFB. His highest score was 76 against the UofA at Tucson.

Wilsen had a low score of 69 in four meets. The matches were against Williams and Luke in a dual match; a four-way meet with ASC, UofA and PC; UofA here, and two 69's in the border conference finals.

The Demon's Lair

By BOB LAIRSON

With final examinations creeping up on us and almost every sporting event concluded, it's time to start thinking about football again.

* * *

Arizona State shows indications of continuing to dominate the Border Conference, although the improvement of BC football dictates no sure champion this fall. Last season the Sun Devils were rated by most fans, coaches and players as the best all-around grid power in the Southwest. The Demons were caught napping, unfortunately, and found themselves resting in second place of conference play.

* * *

This fall the Demons will have no undefeated skein to add incentive to opponents, they will have a better-blanced team with no outstanding hero, a younger team with a wealth of experience from banging heads with older players the past two seasons, a dynamic coach who has the respect of all his players, and a new stadium with an excellent playing field.

New Mexico State University is currently heaping praise on two prospective backfieldmen who should steal headlines this fall. Charley Johnson, who as a sophomore quarterback gave ASU linemen a frustrating night in Sun Devil Stadium last season, will be on hand again to guide the Aggie attack. The other back is Bob Gaiters, who stands 5-11 and weighs 205 lbs. and runs the 100-yard dash in minus-ten seconds. He was named to two JC All-American teams last season and is reported to be wrecking havoc in the Aggie grid camp this spring. NMSU football mentor Warren Woodson rates Gaiters the greatest back he has coached in his 28 years of college experience. It is interesting to note here that Woodson coached Doc Mobley, Hook Davis and Art Luppino. All were the nation's leading rushers during their college careers.

While we are still on the subject of football, the Lair would like to know if something can be done about organizing a league including the four members of the former Pacific Coast League (Stanford, UCLA, USC and California) and Arizona State. The recent decision to allow membership in the Border Conference to two Texas colleges, on the grounds that the conference needs more members and the older Texas members of the conference would be able to cut down on travel expenses by including the new schools on their schedules, is in no way beneficial to ASU. The California schools are the same distance away from Tempe, and the crowds would certainly be much larger for opponents of this caliber.
