Organizations Halt Activities; Await Result Of Suggestion

The Young Democrats and other organizations that joined in Friday and Monday's distribution of SDS literature and that also manned the tables in front of the Social Sciences building said they will suspend activities pending the formulation of new administrative policies toward organizations on campus.

The SDS also announced they will discontinue activities for a period of "two to three weeks."

The Young Democrats were warned Friday that their charter would be in jeopardy if they continued to assist the unrecognized SDS organization in the distribution of their materials on campus.

ASU's Philosophy Club, and the local United Campus Christian Fellowship, Lutheran Campus Ministry, Student Religious Liberals, American Baptist Student Movement, Wesley and four ministers joined the Young Democrats Friday and yesterday in support of what they called the right of free distribution of literature by campus organizations without prior censorship by the University administration.

The following statement was issued yesterday and carried names of those organizations.

"The following groups who have supported the right of free distribution of literature by campus organizations without prior censorship by University administration, have decided to suspend activities that are alleged to be in violation of present administrative policy."

"We do this as an act of good faith in anticipation of the speedy formation of a committee whose task it will be to formulate a policy of academic freedom consistent with the First and Fourteenth Amendments to the United States Constitution."

The Faculty Senate in a meeting Monday was rumored to have passed a resolution backing Dean Shofstall's upcoming request to the Student Affairs Committee for a tabling of action.

However minutes of that meeting were not immediately available in time for verification.

Fred Reish, AS president said that the faculty Senate did adopt a resolution affirming Dean Shofstall's move.

Reish added that the proposed faculty-student committee has encountered opposition from Senate members on the grounds that the area of student academic freedom is a concern of the Student Senate and not a joint committee.

Earlier, Mark Steinberg, president of the Young Democrats, quoted Reish as having said there would be no student-faculty committee during a conversation the two had.

Sahuaro Sets Final Deadline

Friday is the last day to purchase space in the 1966 Sahuaro yearbook in MU 207.

Groups interested in buying space may pick up a contract from Alan Fraizer, yearbook supervisor before Friday, and must return the contracts before the 4:30 p.m. Friday deadline. The MU office is open daily from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m.

Shofstall Asks For Policy

Four senior members of the faculty of Arizona State University met with me to discuss the issue of student academic freedom, the faculty members are Dr. Thomas Hoult, Chm. Department of Sociology; Dr. John W. Hudson, Associate Professor of Sociology; Dr. George A. Peek, Jr., Professor of Political Science; and Dr. John P. White, Chm. Department of Political Science.

In a deliberate, calm and rational way, we found to no surprise that there were wide areas of agreement, and that a more precise policy concerning the rights and responsibilities of student organizations, and of individual students, needs to be drawn up.

We agreed that there can be no freedom without order and that there are necessary limits upon freedom. To paraphrase O. W. Holmes, "No one has the right to shout fire in a crowded theatre and cause a panic." This University, like all universities, is a center for the free play of the mind in an atmosphere of rationality and order.

To achieve these high ends, we are suggesting that President Durham appoint a committee of concerned faculty, administration and students to formulate an official statement of guidelines. In the meantime as a member of the student affairs committee I will recommend that they table action on all cases that have been referred to them pending the development of the guidelines.

Debators Get Honors

In a field of 70 teams from 25 schools the ASU debate squad won second place this weekend at the University of California Invitational Debate Tournament, Santa Barbara. The team of Dave Stamat and Bill Walker took second place in lower division.

Other teams attending the tournament, entered in upper division, were Dick Taylor and Allen Haggard, Pat Price and Lois Drossman, and Connie Lundberg and Larry Stephan.

The teams which went to Santa Barbara and Jim Stoffa and Mike Yarnell will attend the Western Speech Association Tournament at Albuquerque, N.M. over Thanksgiving weekend.

Stoffa and Yarnell tied for third place Oct. 23 at the Texas Tech Forensic Festival on October 23, and were fifth Oct. 16 at the University of Colorado Invitational Forensic Festival.

World Briefs

SAIGON — The U. S. Army's 1st Air Cavalry on Chu Pong Mountain near the Cambodian border has been engaged in heavy fighting with North Vietnam regulars for the past four days.

Despite heavy B52 bombings of the North Vietnam positions, the Communists regrouped yesterday and launched three separate attacks against the American forces.

Monday night American troops battled their way to a platoon that had been surrounded for more than 30 hours.

Eyewitness reports from the battle area described American losses as heavy.

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court handed down a decision Monday that ruled unconstitutional the registration requirement for U. S. Communist Party members.

The judges felt that the requirement is inconsistent with the Fifth Amendment of the Constitution which deals with self-incrimination.

National Communist Party leader Gus Hall welcomed the decision as opening the way for increased Communist activity. "Wherever it's possible we're going to run Communists for public office," Hall stated.

TUCSON — Authorities added the name of Alleen Rowe to the list of teen-age murder victims and arrested two young men and a woman in connection with the killings.

The Pima County Attorney said the three, John Saunders, Charles Schmid, Jr., and Mary French, all of Tucson, will be charged with the murder of the Rowe girl.

Schmid has already been charged with murdering sisters Gretchen and Wendy Fritz.

The string of related murders came to light last Wednesday when the bodies of the Fritz girls were found.

TUCSON — Princess Margaret and Lord Snowdon left the home of Mr. and Mrs. Lewis W. Douglas Monday after a five-day visit for a whirlwind tour of Washington.

Organizations Complete For Top Banner

It's Banner Contest time again for the Wyoming-ASU tilt Saturday in the competition for all home football games, according to Lolly Williams, banner contest chairman.

Organizations will pit their originality, art work, and themes against each other again as they vie for the seasonal trophy and the traveling trophy, she said.

Organizations should pick up entry forms at the MU information desk and return them to the desk, addressed to the Rally and Traditions Board by 5:00 p.m. today.

Competing banners must be posted by 5 p.m. tomorrow. Entrants will be notified how they place and top banners will receive points for first through third places.

Entries should aim their talents at aiding the Sun Devils at downing the WAC leading Cowboys, said Miss Williams.

Viet Vote Slated For December

Student vote on the nation's policy in Viet Nam has been scheduled by Associated Students for Wednesday, Dec. 1. AS President Fred Reish said purpose of the campus-wide balloting is to give students an opportunity to express their approval or disapproval on the controversial issue.

Plans will be presented to the Administrative Co-ordinative Council Wednesday by Kay Martens, chairman of the Elections Board, which will handle the balloting. Further plans will be discussed at the meeting.

Conductor Mehta Shows Brilliance

By CATHRYN GODDARD

The Los Angeles Philharmonic Orchestra and its conductor, Zubin Mehta, deserve separate reviews. Mehta displayed a genius which was difficult to transmit to the orchestra. When the exchange occurred, the result was brilliance.

Mehta, a brilliant conductor who directs from memory, asserts a tense control over the orchestra. His extreme sensitivity to the music is obvious as is his struggle for perfection from his company. He does not always get the perfection of interpretation he is seeking, but when it takes place, it is indeed perfection.

At all times, he is the star. Mehta is dramatic, attention getting, and magnificent. He seems to cry with the triste's and laugh with each allegro. The entire audience focuses on him.

The opening Shostakovich, Symphony No. 1, displayed the control of percussion essential to the interpretation of the Russian composer. At times the orchestra would drift, only to be snapped to attention by the forcefulness of the conductor.

In Anton Webern's Six Pieces for Orchestra, Opus 6, the magic connection between orchestra and conductor was complete. Mehta asked and he received. The swellings, the undulations, the dramatic tensions were amazingly vivid. The artistic integrity of the performance, the unity of the leader and his followers, was masterful.

The final number, Richard Strauss' "Ein Heldenleben," showed the orchestra's skill at creating mood. The members moved through the various parts of the narrative with ease and familiarity bringing to an elegant close an evening of excellence.

'Guys And Dolls' Perfect Comedy

(Second in a two-part Series)

By BONNIE JAMES

Lead players are Bill McLaughlin, Sky; Carol Carpenter, Sarah; John Williams, Nathan; Jo Anne Yeo, Adelaide; Allan Grier, Nicely-Nicely Johnson, and Harley Meyers, Benny Southstreet.

All the dance numbers are being choreographed by Kathleen Erickson of the physical education department.

"The play has everything a musical-comedy should — acting, dancing and comedy," he said.

Explaining what he considers the hardest part of preparing for his roles, Stump said, "I have to be sure that I understand exactly what's going on around me. My reaction, and the reactions of the other supporting actors, must be appropriate to the situation so the audience will interpret it exactly as the director does."

Giving reasons why supporting actors are important to a play, he said, "Without supporting actors, it would be like a lead actor, or any actor, going on stage without his clothes on. The audience would be pretty bored with just one person on stage."

He continued, "One of the best ways to discover what the lead character is like is noticing how he reacts to the supporting actors." Stump feels that the entire interpretation of a scene can depend on the supporting players.

Before the final rehearsal, "blocking rehearsals" are set up to have the actors stand and move in relation to the set and the other players. "During the final rehearsals, the play has been gone over so many times, the actors move almost sub-consciously, concentrating entirely on perfecting the characters," said Greg.

AS President Gives Views

A good deal of confusion and controversy has risen from the denial of the petition of the Students for a Democratic Society for recognition as a campus organization.

Since the letter informing the petitioning students of the decision was vague in some areas, I must accept my share of the responsibility in creating the confusion. It is, therefore, in hopes of removing the ambiguity that I write this open letter.

First, the group which denied the petition was the Associated Students' Executive Council, composed of Sam Linder, AS First Vice-President; Max Goodrich, AS Administrative Vice-President; Linda Oakley, AS Activities Vice-President; Marty Stelhorn, AWS President; Bob McConnell, AMS President; Judy Meyer, AS Secretary; and myself, as chairman. During the discussion and voting, only these people were present in the meetings.

Secondly, it is my belief that we should recognize any national or local organization, regardless of its beliefs, which wishes to be recognized on campus, unless that organization:

- (1) Advocates the violent overthrow of the governments of the United States, the state of Arizona, or the university.
- (2) Advocates the violation of the Constitution and laws of the United States, the Constitution and laws of the United States, the policies of the Board of Regents or of the University, or the Constitution, statutes, or policies of Associated Students.
- (3) Acts or has acted, on the national level or in different areas of the country in such a manner as to make the organization an undesirable addition to the campus.

How do the Students for a Democratic Society fit into this policy structure?

SDS, in the opinion of the Executive Council, has acted in a manner which affect points 2 and 3 of the policy. Among the bases of the decision are the following:

(1) "They (an alliance of students and faculty must wrest control of the educational process from the administrative bureaucracy." (Port Huro Statement, pp. 62-63, published by SDS in 1964).

(2) "... if you oppose the war—you can try to get c.o. (conscientious objector) status, and if it is denied, you can appeal it and hold the draft off for at least a year... this could be both a way of registering protest and of clogging up the draft system." (SDS Bulletin, Vol. 4, No. 1, reporting the actions of the West Oakland ERAP Project—ERAP designates the Economic Research and Action Program, an arm of SDS)

(3) "We will train SDS members and others to be draft counselors—giving advice and making known the facts of many ways in which people have stayed out of the draft." (SDS Bulletin, Vol. 4)

(4) Acts of civil disobedience and/or any conscious violations of laws committed by the organization. (Confirmed by articles in publications and by SDS journals)

The objections of the Executive Council were to the national organization, and the decision was that the national organization of Students for a Democratic Society could not have a chapter on the ASU campus.

The AS Executive Council has no desire to curtail academic freedom or freedom of discussion. If the students behind SDS legitimately desire to form an organization as a media for transmitting their ideas, and will abide by the three points of the policy, I can see no objections to their approval as a local organization.

So, now we find the issue being disputed—whether the national organization shall have a chapter on this campus, not academic freedom or freedom of speech. And, it follows, that those groups and individuals who have involved themselves in this dispute are not supporting academic freedom, but, instead, are supporting the national organization of SDS and its policies.

Fred Reish - ASASU President

Letters To The Editor

Editor:

Recently the University has refused to charter a student group on campus, the Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) for the reason that it is not in "harmony" with the university.

Another student group, the Young Democrats, has been criticized and may lose its charter for allowing the SDS to distribute literature on campus. It seems important at this time that the major issue underlying this controversy not be lost.

The role of a university is to encourage learning. In performing this role a university must be a forum where all points of view can be examined and discussed. For only by being such a forum can a university create an environment and provide the stimuli conducive to learning, and in turn provide students with an opportunity to examine the complex issues facing society today.

In providing such a forum, it is irrelevant whether one agrees or disagrees with the views of any campus group.

The acceptability or unacceptability of any view will be determined in the marketplace of ideas by the students themselves. This role of a university appears to be the one most in "harmony" with ASU when considering whether a particular group should be allowed to organize on campus.

A. R. Gutowsky

To the Editor:

The open letter of Professors Evans, Salerno, and White to the faculty, which contains a letter to the people of Phoenix, presents some interesting problems. I am reminded of Tertullian's famous "Credo quia absurdum," which focussed attention in a striking and paradoxical way on the problem of faith and reason.

But there faith embraced a supreme goodness. The authors of this letter have complicated the situation. They suggest that many educators who find war an unholy and absurd way of trying to resolve international differences nevertheless support the government policy on Viet Nam.

Not only does absurdity not deter them; even holiness — and I presume one would use this word only for what one considered to be of supreme value — is thrust aside.

Is a doctrine of degrees of absurdity and holiness implied, so that non-war under the present circumstances is a more absurd method and, in character, more unholy?

Then why not focus attention on the practical principles that really govern their decision and leave the Divine and rational out of the picture? The person who says "This is the ideal, but we must be practical" hasn't chosen the ideal. Perhaps he believes it cannot be chosen. Then he should recognize that it is a mere wish, not a living ideal. In this case "absurdity" should be ascribed to the ideal.

But it is not my intention to exhibit a polemical attitude. Rather I wish to suggest that we think seriously, and philosophically, about the problem of induction. Hume asked how we know the future will be like the past.

This could be put in moral terms: how do we know on the basis of past failures that we are incapable of the moral courage necessary to take a stand against war?

Robert Rein'l

Dear Merv—

Dear Merv

Since the mid-semester grades are coming out this week I think I am going to need to develop some new study habits. My parents warned that college would be a series of new experiences for me, but I didn't realize they meant I'd have to study too. How can I stay in my parents' good graces as easily as possible?

Stuart Dent

Dear Stu

Quit school and stop being a drain on their pocketbook; that simple solution should appease them. If you really need to develop some new habits as easily as possible try working for a living. You'll develop (or be underdeveloped) before you find out you never really had any problems.

Contest Nears End

Application entries close today in KASN's computer contest as members of the station and the computer center start plans for the drawing Monday.

The contest uses the ASU computer center to match personalities of applicants. This match-making technique is not new. Harvard, among other colleges, has used computers and a few of the "computer companions" have married.

KAET television will televise the drawing and interview the winners on its regular series, "College Beat," hosted by Al Michaels, at 6:30 p.m. Monday.

All other applicants will have the opportunity to find out with whom they were matched at that time.

$500 worth of prizes include dinner for two at the Superstition Ho, two $100 watches from Paul Johnson's CDI, $100 of merchandise from both Campus Career Fashions, Ltd. and John Horan, an orchid corsage from the Flower Fountain, an 8x10 portrait of the couple from Pioneer Camera Shop, and use of a 1966 Ford convertible from Hertz Rent-A-Car For a day.

Station manager Jim Kehoe was "surprised by the success of the contest." We have almost 1,000 entries now, and most of them seem to be on the level.

Drawing will begin at 2 p.m. in the patio directly behind the Engineering Center. Entrants must be present to win.

Sun Devils In Title Clash

With the end of football season in sight, the question of who will win the Western Athletic Conference title arises.

Part of the decision could come Saturday night in Sun Devil Stadium when the University of Wyoming Cowboys puts its league lead against the Devils who four weeks ago weren't given a hope of managing a pair of wins.

The Cowboys are 3-1 in the conference and the Devils have a 1-1 mark. But a Devil victory Saturday would put the title into a split with Brigham Young, 2-1 still in the race.

A Wyoming win would put the Devils out of the race.

BYU will be trying to soften up the UofA in Tucson Saturday then going on to New Mexico two weeks from now.

Upsets over favored New Mexico, Texas Western, and Washington State led some Devil fans to expect another upset.

A win over the Cowboys (6-2) would put the title on the line when the Devils meet the Wildcats here Nov. 27, pending the outcome of the Lobo-BYU contest.

Wyoming, beaten by Army last Saturday at West Point 13-0, outrushed the Cadets 319 yards to 186 and held a 19-7 edge on first downs.

The Cadets stopped six Wyoming drives inside the 12 yard line at West Point.

With those drives in mind, Wyoming is not taking the Devil defense, who stopped the Washington State Cougars on the one inch line Saturday, too lightly.

Past Present

The Company's first engine, the Wasp, took to the air on May 5, 1926. Within a year the Wasp set its first world record and went on to smash existing records and set standards for both land and seaplanes for years to come, carrying airframes and pilots higher, farther, and faster than they had ever gone before.

In recent years, planes powered by Pratt & Whitney Aircraft have gone on to set new standards of performance in much the same way as the Wasp had done in the 1920's. The 727 and DC-9 are indicative of the new family of short-to-medium range jetliners which are powered by the highly successful JT8D turbofan. Examples of current military utilizations are the J58-powered Mach 3 YF-12A which recently established four world aviation records and the advanced TF30-powered F-111 variable-geometry fighter aircraft.

Your and the Future

Take a look at the above chart; then a good long look at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft—where technical careers offer exciting growth, continuing challenge, and lasting stability—where engineers and scientists are recognized as the major reason for the Company's continued success.

Engineers and scientists at Pratt & Whitney Aircraft are today exploring the ever-broadening avenues of energy conversion for every environment... all opening up new avenues of exploration in every field of aerospace, marine and industrial power application. SMASHES COUGAR TRY — Washington State quarterback Tom Roth (11) in the white jersey is pulled to the ground by Devil defensive end Jesse Fleming as Roth tries to throw for the two-point conversion following a late Cougar touchdown. Devil left tackle Bob Rokita (74) leaps the pileup. Fleming's stop on Roth helped the Devils upset the Cougars 7-6 Saturday.

High School Wrestlers, Coaches Invited to Clinic

By DICK MULLINS

Wrestling practices continue as Coach Ted Bredehoft braces his charges for the defense of the Western Athletic Conference title.

Bredehoft and ASU will host the fifth annual High School Wrestling Coaches' Clinic Saturday, beginning at 8 a.m. in the lobby of Sun Devil Gymnasium.

Since Bredehoft's arrival at ASU the wrestling program has made giant steps forward year-by-year.

Progress will also be made this season, but it may not be reflected in the overall record, for the scheduling has more than kept pace.

The Sun Devils will meet the always strong Western Athletic Conference teams plus recognized strengths such as Colorado Western (two time NCAA College Division Champs), Colorado State College, Colorado, Cal Poly (SLO) and Southern Illinois plus such perennial national power as Oklahoma, Oklahoma State and tentatively, Iowa State (1965 NCAA Champions).

Devils Host Clinic For State Cagers

By JON MORRIS

The Western Athletic Conference basketball race promises to be as close as last year's, if not closer.

The New Mexico Lobos have been given a slight nod to win the WAC crown by 24 sportswriters and sportscasters.

In a mail poll conducted throughout the five-state conference area by Commissioner Paul W. Brechler, the defense-minded Lobos captured 124 points to Brigham Young's 117. Wyoming was third with 101, Utah fourth with 74, ASU fifth with 38, and Arizona sixth with 32.

The New Mexicans received 11 first place votes, Brigham Young nine, and Utah and Wyoming two each. One scribe picked the Lobos to finish lower than third.

In the tabulation, six points were awarded for each first-place vote, five for second, four for third, three for fourth and two for fifth. No points were given for sixth.

Arizona sportswriters were of the opinion that the Sun Devils and Wildcats would finish in the lower division, although one picked the 'Cats for third place.

Arizona scribes gave four first place votes to BYU, two to New Mexico, and one each to Utah and Wyoming.

Brigham Young's Cougars did not sew up last year's WAC title until the last week of the 1965 season, finishing with a 8-2 record. A 5-5 second place tie was gained by the Lobos, Wildcats, and Cowboys. The Devils finished fifth at 4-6 and the Utes sixth at 3-7.
