FORTY-EIGHT HOURS — Students wishing to drop classes have until Friday afternoon to do so. The Registrar's office advises students to drop classes before the 4 p.m. deadline to avoid the late rush.

Devils' Advocates Seeking Promoter for University

The Devils' Advocates, a service group designed to interest high school students in higher education, is seeking new members today.

Bruce Spence, high school liaison coordinator at the Alumni House, said that through personal contact with high school students, the Devils' Advocates hope to inform the prospective college students of the benefits of higher education.

SPENCE SAID the Advocates members are invited by the various high schools throughout the state to visit their schools.

He pointed out that the service organization's duties are varied. Members cover topics ranging from information on scholarships to answering questions on campus life.

The service group is limited to a maximum of 25 members. There are presently five students, one adviser and one

Alumni House representative in the group.

Spence said that invitations have been sent to 65 students on campus inviting them to attend a reception at the Alumni House Oct. 31. From these 65 students, 20 will be chosen for the Devils' Advocates.

PRESENT members of the group are:

Dr. Nicholas Salerno, adviser; Don Dotts, alumni representative; Nadia Komarnycky, president; Bob Carlin, vice president; Roxanne Decker, secretary-treasurer; Karen Dorr and Roy McCoy, members-at-large.

Sheepskin Candidates Must File Applications by Nov. 15

Planning to graduate?

All students who will complete degree requirements for graduation during first or second semester must file an application for graduation before Nov. 15, said Alfred Thomas, registrar and director of admissions.

Senior who will graduate this year must go to the Moer Administration building to pay the $5 graduation fee and make an appointment for the final check of completed requirements.

Any student filing application after the deadline will be fined an additional $5.

Graduate students who will graduate should check with their advisory committee and follow instructions in the Graduate Bulletin.

Asia Experts' Conclave Here

The University will host the Western Conference of the Association for Asian Studies Friday and Saturday. Asian specialists from several western universities and colleges will meet to discuss papers in their special areas and appear on panel discussions.

HIGH POINT of the two-day conference will be the showing of the film "China" Produced by Englishman Felix Greene, the film, subject of much controversy, will be shown in the MU Ballroom at 1:40 p.m. Friday.

The film has been described as the only major film by a British or American producer since the Chinese Communist revolution. The public is invited to attend.

Dr. Douglas Hale, professor of art and conference chairman said, "The purpose of this regional conference is so that different scholars can exchange ideas on the Orient, both economic and social."

"BY HOLDING this conference on campus, we hope to stimulate students into thinking about China."

Following the film, a panel will discuss "Ideology and Organization in Communist China," after which speakers will answer questions from the audience.

President Durham will deliver the welcoming address during a Friday noon luncheon in the MU.

Karl Pelzer of Yale University and president of the Association for Asian Studies will address those attending the Friday night banquet at the Sands Motel in Tempe at 8:30.

SCHOLARS from Arizona, Utah, California, Texas, Wyoming and Colorado are expected to attend.

Report Analyzes Bilingual Influence

Future teaching of bilingual students may be affected by a recently completed report by Dr. Kenneth R. Stafford, professor of educational psychology, for the U.S. Office of Education.

Dr. Stafford spent last year between Fort Defiance and Chinle, Arizona, studying the relationships of problem-solving behavior and language. Navajo children between the ages of 14 and 16 were used in the research although an attempt was made with a group of children between six and eight years.

WORKING with a grant of $96,000 from the Office of Education, Dr. Stafford was attempting to find the relationship between learning two languages at once and learning one language at a time and their effect on the process of thinking or problem solving.

Students who had been taught both English and Navajo by their parents while still in the home were listed as the compound group. Those who had learned Navajo first in the home and English later at school were considered in the coordinate group.

RESULTS OF the research showed that the compound bilingual students (those that had learned both Navajo and English at once) did poorer in solving the problems using mental processes than did the monolingual students or the coordinate students.

Big Game Sale Starts Monday

Tickets for the University of Arizona-Arizona State football game at Tuscon, Nov. 26, will be available to students starting Monday.

The tickets, priced at $5 will be on sale at the outside ticket windows of the MPE building from 8:30 a.m. to noon and from 1 to 5 p.m. each day through Friday, Oct. 28.

Smoking May Pose Double Health Threat

"Cancer is not the only disadvantage to smoking, emphysema is still a threat to health," says Dr. J. Toohey, associate professor of health education.

An article in a Phoenix newspaper last week said cigarette companies and private researchers think they can extract the cancer-causing element. Since then students have been asking, "Is it safe to smoke?" said Dr. Toohey.

"Two puffs of cigarette smoke can paralyze the respiratory tract cilia for up to 12 minutes. Continued smoking will kill the cilia, and contamination cannot be eliminated from the tract," says Dr. Toohey.

A human lung extracted from a terminal case of emphysema will be on display in room 103B of the men's P.E. building Wednesday afternoon from 2:30 to 3:00. Dr. Toohey will be there to answer questions about smoking and health.

THREE-CAR WRECK — An accident at the corner of Van Ness and University Dr. occurred early yesterday afternoon. Victims of the collision were sent to the hospital. Further details were not available at press time.

Speakers to See as Child

Four speakers will see "through the Eyes of a Child", the theme set for Sigma Alpha Iota, Professional Musical Fraternity's Province Day with events starting Saturday at noon in the MU Ballroom.

SAI, a fraternity for women, opens the luncheon and afternoon program at $2 a ticket.

Dr. Kenneth Seipp, music chairman for the Children's Theatre Conference and director of the Lyric Opera, will discuss "Children's Opera."

The "Suzuki Method of Instruction" will be investigated by Frank Spinoso, associate professor of music and violinist for the Faculty Chamber Music Society.

Mrs. Jean Rehfeld, president of the Phoenix Symphony Guild, will speak on the "Children's Symphony."

Alan Grier, junior in liberal arts, will talk on "Dramatics for the Child". Grier previously has created dramatics for the underprivileged child.

Reservations may be made by calling Mrs. Bonne' DeBlas at 266-2197 by noon Thursday.

Teacher Attends Mexican Confab

Dr. Quino Martinez, associate professor of Spanish and Portuguese, will participate in the conference at the University of Chihuahua in Mexico Friday through Sunday to plan exchange of students and cultural extension.

Dr. Martinez will represent the University Center for Latin American Studies, the Department of Foreign Languages, and the Division of Extension.

Journalist Fraternity Plans Friday Meet

Pi Delta Epsilon, national journalism fraternity, will meet tomorrow at 2:40 p.m. in the MU Upper Lounge.

The session will include action on two of the organization's current activities — introduction of new pledge nominees and an outline of the Ugly Man Contest.

Membership certificates will be presented to recently inducted members and refreshments will be served.

Membership in Pi Delta Epsilon is open to men and women students with at least sophomore standing, a 2.5 cumulative average, and 3.0 average in any journalism courses taken, and who are participating in KAET, KASN, State Press, Sahuaro or Catalyst.

Anyone meeting these qualifications who has not been contacted is invited to come to the meeting and become acquainted with the organization.

Baha'i Speakers To Scan Future At MU Meeting

Dr. Abid Al-Mayati, assistant professor of political science, and Calvin Thur, secretary of the American Indian Service of the Baha'i World Faith, will speak on "A Focus on the Future" at a Baha'i Club meeting next Thursday at 7 p.m. in MU7.

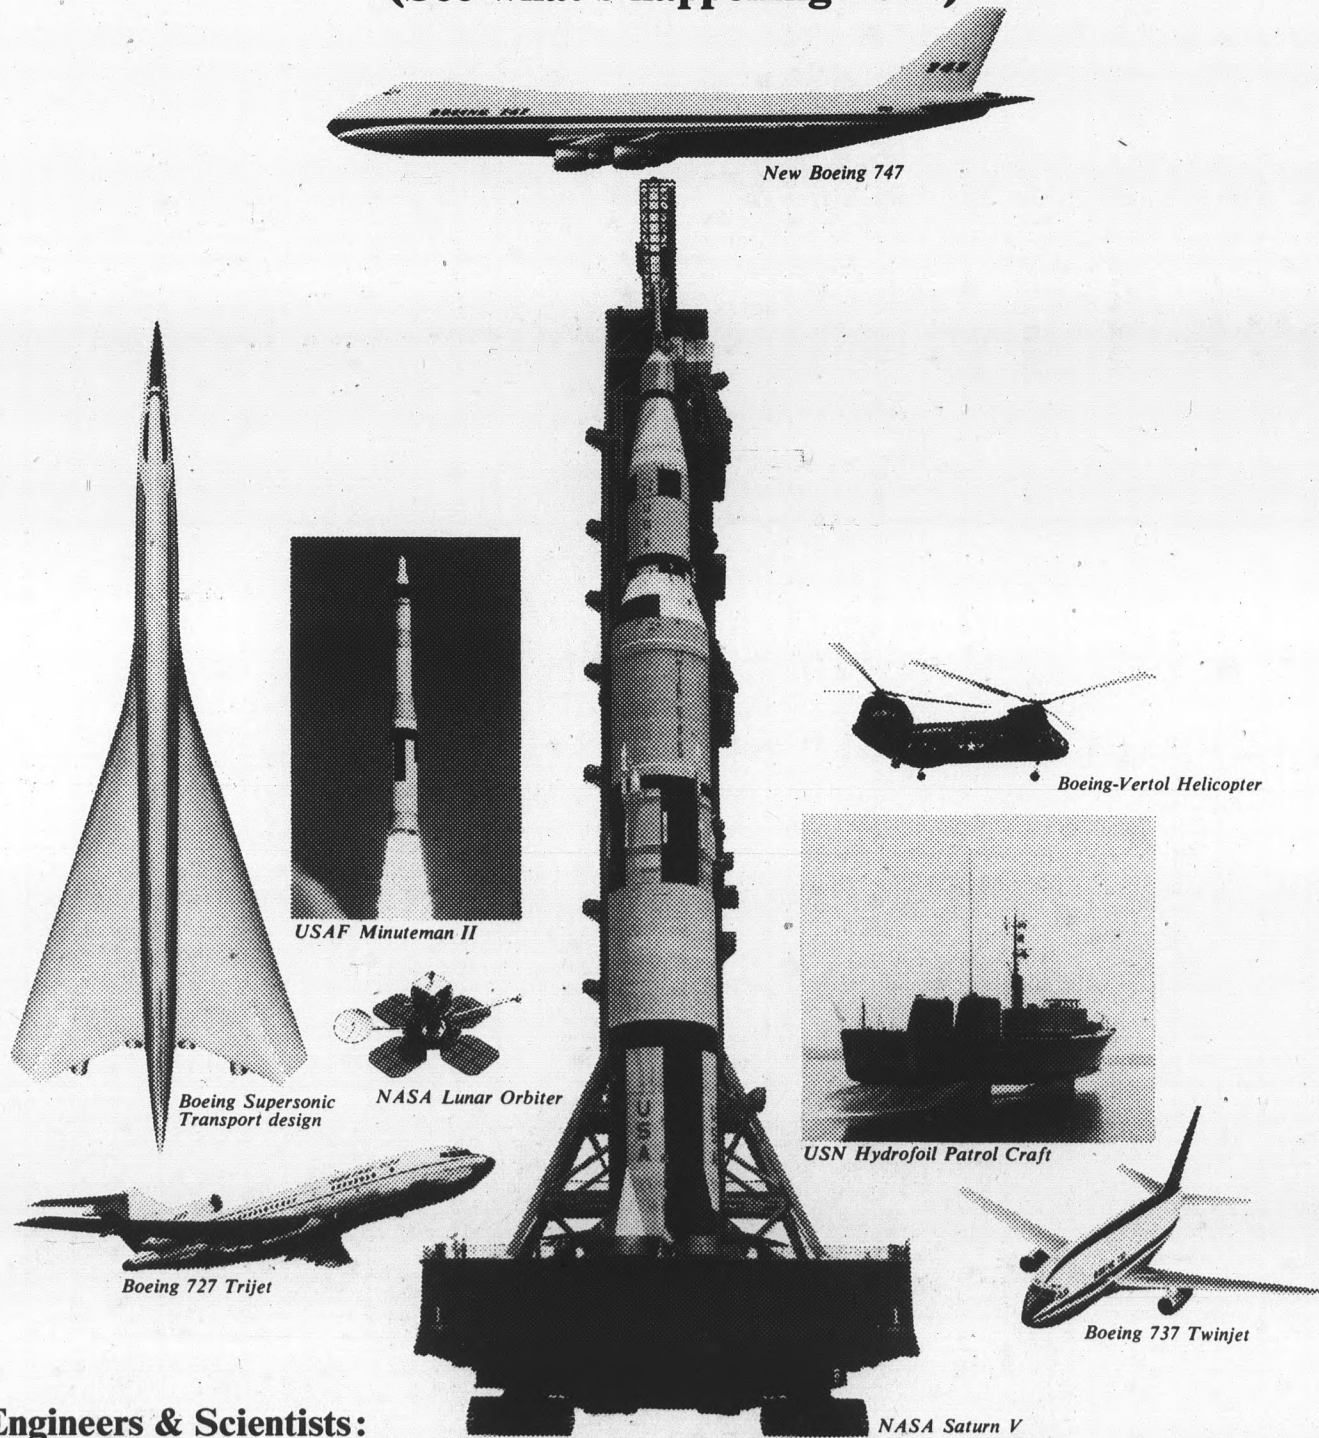

Thur received his LLD degree and a BS and MA in business administration at the University of Wisconsin. He is a practicing attorney in the Southwest.

Dr. Al-Marayati has served extensively in the United Nations, representing delegations from Iraq, his home country, and Yemen. He was also a technical assistance officer in the International Atomic Energy Agency in Vienna.

Campus Interviews, Thursday and Friday, November 3 and 4

In 1916 The Boeing Company's career was launched on the wings of a small seaplane. Its top speed was 75 mph.

Now, half a century later, we can help you launch your career in the dynamic environment of jet airplanes, spacecraft, missiles, rockets, helicopters, or even seacraft.

Pick your spot in applied research, design, test, manufacturing, service or facilities engineering, or computer technology. You can become part of a Boeing program-in-being, at the leading edge of aerospace technology. Or you might want to get in on the ground floor of a pioneering new project.

You'll work in small groups where initiative and ability get maximum exposure. And if you desire an advanced degree and qualify, Boeing will help you financially with its Graduate Study Program at leading universities and colleges near company facilities.

Often it will be sheer hard work. But we think you'll want it that way when you're helping to create something unique — while building a solid career. Visit your college placement office and schedule an interview with our representative. Boeing is an equal opportunity employer.

'Messiah' Auditions Slated For December Production

Auditions for soloists for the University's annual production of the "Messiah" by Handel will be Monday, Nov. 7, at 7 p.m. in Gammage Auditorium.

Singers will be selected from the University student body.

"Solos in the different voice classifications will be divided in order to permit more students to perform," said Margo Smith, student pianist and coordinator of auditions.

Interested students should see Miss Smith at 913 Myrtle St. to arrange rehearsal times.

The annual "Messiah" will be presented Sunday, Dec. 11, at 3 p.m. in Gammage Auditorium.

Cotton Program To Be Analyzed

Attendance at the second annual Cotton Research Roundup at the University farm next Tuesday is expected to be almost double that of last year.

Arizona Wildcat; End of a Tradition?

"Editor and Publisher — Associated Students University of Arizona."

These eight words which now appear on the masthead of the Arizona Daily Wildcat, "student newspaper" at the UofA, mark the end of a tradition. More than that, they represent the demise of a true college newspaper.

The regularly appointed editors and staff of the Wildcat ceased work on the publication two weeks ago, giving the reason of "being fed up to here with impossible working conditions." They had expressed dissatisfaction throughout the early weeks of the semester with the print shop in Tucson awarded the printing contract for the Wildcat.

In a front page editorial appearing in the Sept. 26 issue, former Wildcat editor Bill Woodruff wrote that some editors had gone 60 hours without sleep because the print shop had taken from 6-10 hours to put out the paper.

The editorial noted that a pair of "referees" (two faculty members) had been named to settle the dispute and guard against future trouble. They accomplished little. So, after four weeks of publication, the editors and staff gave up trying to publish a newspaper with which they would be proud to be associated.

After the editors left, the Associated Students University of Arizona (ASUA) stepped in and assumed publishing and editing duties.

The Oct. 11 issue of the Wildcat, the second under its new "editors," carried an editorial which read in part:

"For the first time in the history of the University of Arizona, the masthead of the Arizona Daily Wildcat reads, 'Editor and Publisher — Associated Students University of Arizona.' This is the way it should read:

"The Wildcat has been published in the past under the supervision of the journalism department with the entire staff being students in the field.

"These students have never participated in the actual affairs and have had very little insight into the actual affairs of ASUA and have consequently never felt the need to write and publish stories that directly concern the students except those that have been forced upon them by extreme pressure from committee heads; even then it was often doubtful that an article of any significance would appear.

"If there are issues that you as a student feel to be important, let us know — we care for a change. . . . The Wildcat is no longer 'their paper,' it's ours — yours and mine."

A College Newspaper?

The new Wildcat "staff" evidently has good intentions, but they are sliding over a couple of bumpy facts that will not stay covered.

First, how can they expect to report the news fairly and without bias?

The second fact is paramount: what is a college newspaper?

The most difficult task that confronts a college editor is that of publishing a paper which students feel is theirs. To be good, it must possess an intangible personality that is as much a part of campus life as Friday afternoons.

With each issue, the editor and his paper face the harshest critics of his journalism career — his college peers. College-age men and women have a sixth sense for recognizing phonies, and if they come across a phony, they will have nothing to do with it.

Necessity of College Newspapers

College newspapers are born of one necessity — that of being a bulletin board. If the paper stops at that point and doesn't develop further, then it is failing the students and has no right to call itself a newspaper. It must develop, under competent leadership, the personality that is so important to the success of university newspaper.

The paper's basic function as a bulletin board must be served. But more than that, it must be alive with humor, questions, answers, criticisms, praise and comments on life in a community where thousands of young people work, play, love and find answers to life that are sometimes soft, oftentimes harsh.

It must report the news in a fair and straight manner, but not too deeply in some instances, for the newspaper is the mirror of the campus to the outside community.

An editor will find that he, because he is human, makes mistakes when he tries to publish a daily paper which attempts to cover the happenings of a multiversity. But this is a part of his education.

Involvement

The editors and staff have a duty not to become so deeply involved in student government, or other campus activities that they cannot stand back to accurately report and appraise the work and accomplishments that the various campus organizations achieve.

When clubs and organizations send out newsletters, they are nothing more than press releases — which is only to be expected. How can the ASUA truly believe they can produce a student newspaper that is more than a press release for their organization?

They have no choice but to report the good side of ASUA and let the mix-ups, mistakes and discrepancies go unnoticed. The paper will become phony, and however good or bad the Wildcat was before, the new staff may see to it that it reverts to a bulletin board and no more.

It is sincerely hoped that the situation at Tucson changes back to normal quickly so the politicians may return to governing and the journalists can keep them on their toes.

The plane was in trouble.

Air Force One was over water and fuel was low.

The pilot knew. So did the copilot, the engineer and the radio officer. And the President knew.

The advisers, the press secretary, the President's wife weren't told. No need for them to worry until the President was sure.

The President had many other problems on his mind. The war. The South. The elections. His trip. But they faded to insignificance as he thought about the next few minutes.

His wife looked up. She knew him well. She knew there was something wrong.

But the engines were smooth; the atmosphere calm.

Just the strain of the trip, she rationalized.

Up front things were different. The radio operator was sweating heavily. He knew it was up to him to relay the message. He had to get it straight. It was up to him and he was scared.

As he heard the signal in his earphones he tensed. He grabbed his pen and started to write. The copilot looked around.

It was coming. He looked at the pilot. "It's coming," he said. The pilot nodded slightly, and for a few seconds closed his eyes. His heart pounded as he prayed.

The radio operator ripped the message off the pad and quickly got to his feet. Then he remembered he was aboard the President's plane and he tried to quiet himself.

He took a deep breath as he opened the door to the President's cabin.

The President was grave. He looked at the radio operator. He was relieved the message from the Pentagon had finally arrived.

He looked at the message and gave it back.

He thanked the operator and looked out over the ocean. There were scattered clouds below, but the weather was good.

He walked back to the cockpit and opened the door.

The copilot had the controls and the pilot was staring at the radio man intensely. The radio operator gave the pilot the message. The pilot looked at it, and then gave it back.

The radio operator sat down heavily in his chair and slowly reopened his scribbled message.

It read:

Implications

A State Press staffer is offering the use of his high-intensity lamp to replace the burnt-out bulb on the east walkway of Gammage Auditorium.

He awaits official word . . . breathlessly.

Letters to the Editor

Editor:

Your recent article concerning the Arizona Civil Liberties Union contained a significant error. It was reported that I said Arizona CLU first became concerned about university student discipline during the McIntyre case of December, 1965. I did not say this.

During the interview with your reporter the McIntyre case was never mentioned. As a matter of fact, having only recently returned to Arizona after a two years' absence, I had never heard of the McIntyre case until reading about it in your issue of Oct. 7. In checking the facts concerning this matter I find that it was never an ACLU case.

Furthermore McIntyre's attorney was not an ACLU cooperating attorney (as reported in the article) nor was he representing ACLU in any manner.

To mistakenly attribute this remark to me was bad enough but the error was compounded by having Dean Hamm respond to the misquote. Dean Hamm rebuked the ACLU for not checking the validity of statements and for never having contacted him concerning the McIntyre case.

The facts are that ACLU made no statement about it, never handled the case, and never had any reason to contact the Dean about it. The Dean's remarks were wholly the result of a misstatement of ACLU position by the State Press.

What I did say to your reporter was that Arizona CLU is interested in working with the administration in evaluating student disciplinary procedures. The ACLU believes that students have the right to all procedural safeguards of due process in disciplinary cases.

These include written notification of charges, hearing by a faculty or faculty-student committee, and the right to call, confront, and cross-examine witnesses and to seek the counsel of a faculty member or other freely chosen advisor.

ACLU furthermore believes that students in colleges and universities enjoy the same rights of freedom of expression, freedom from discrimination, and government by law within the educational community that all American citizens enjoy in the larger communities of the nation.

Mr. Frank Emspak, head of the National Coordinating Committee to End the War in Viet Nam was quoted in the State Press as saying "Why draw it (the line to stop communism) at Hawaii, it's the 50th state?"

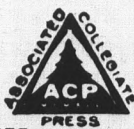

Apparently, Mr. Emspak, from the far-off state of New York, would not sing the same song if his home state happened to be Hawaii, as is my case. He would not profess his isolationist theory if his family, relatives, and friends lived in Hawaii. He would not draw the line at Hawaii if he was born and bred in Hawaii. He would not draw the line at Hawaii if he loved our 50th state with all his heart, as is my case.

Mr. Emspak is obviously callous to the wishes of the people of Hawaii. If the line is drawn at Hawaii, there will be no doubt that in the future Mr. Emspak will be the head of the National Coordinating Committee to End the War in Hawaii.

CAN BUSINESS FACE THE ISSUES?

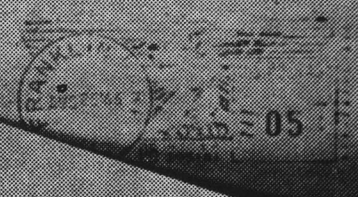

MOTOROLA

MOTOROLA INC.

Mr. Thomas H. Fehn
University of Southern California
1109 West 28th Street, Apt. 1
Los Angeles, California 90007

Dear Mr. Fehn:

August 25, 1966

ROBERT W. GALVIN, CHAIRMAN OF THE BOARD

There is an urgent need, I believe, for a serious discussion between campus and corporation. I am genuinely concerned about recent studies which indicate that an alarming percentage of college students have no interest in pursuing careers in business. Many of these students show little respect for business and have a condescending attitude towards those who do choose it as a career. Some say business leaves them cold. Lacks action. That it's boring, unimaginative, stuffy and self-seeking. Others say they don't want to be lost in the corporate crowd and that there is little chance of early recognition for a young man in business. Some question whether business offers the opportunity for the personal satisfaction that comes from humanitarian service. Their answer: Join the Peace Corps or VISTA; teach; or enter a service profession.

If you are motivated toward teaching, medicine, government or law, I say go at it eagerly. They are valuable careers for which we in business have great respect and admiration. Many of our most able business leaders have professional backgrounds and our everyday operations bring us into close contact with men outside of industry.

However, don't sell business short. If you shrug off a business career because you think it offers no excitement, no challenge, no chance for recognition or to make a meaningful contribution to society... I think you're wrong.

A tremendous opportunity for human and social betterment may well slip away if brighter students turn their backs on business for reasons not necessarily valid. The coming years promise fantastic new developments in the sciences, electronics, transportation or just about any field you can name. However, realization of these great potentials requires fresh thinking, young, vigorous minds able to channel ideas creatively and productively... able to make decisions... able to generate action, the very thing you crave.

This is why I'm concerned. If I read some of you right, we're in trouble. Something has broken down, somewhere. Perhaps certain college students are misinformed and should be set straight. Or maybe we in business had best undertake a basic reappraisal of our way of doing things. If changes are in order, I'd like to find out.

Frankly, we don't understand each other well enough... we don't communicate enough. And, therefore, I propose we set a specific course to try to resolve this.

Let's discuss business openly, two-way, pro and con, on the pages of your campus newspaper. You express the views of those around you. I'll respond. Tell me what you think is wrong with business, what might be changed. Why you feel there are more exciting opportunities elsewhere. If neither of us pull our punches, I think we have a lot to gain.

Interested? I hope so. Send me your thoughts regarding business as well as an indication that you will join in a discussion. I will print your comments and mine in subsequent issues of this paper.

We can't do this too soon. Tomorrow's problems and opportunities won't wait.

Sincerely,

 Robert W. Galvin
 Chairman

ONLY THE BEGINNING

This is the opening volley in a unique dialogue between campus and corporation—between Thomas H. Fehn, University of Southern California student, and Robert W. Galvin, Motorola Chairman. The subject: What's wrong and right about business. Mr. Fehn has agreed to voice student opinion and his reply will appear in this paper a week from today. In subsequent weeks, Mr. Galvin will tackle the issues posed. Then back to the students and Mr. Fehn's reactions to his answers. It promises to be quite a lively exchange.

To gain a cross section of opinion, Mr. Galvin has written a similar letter to 5 other students on campuses across the country. Their replies will be printed regularly in over 20 college papers. This continuing, nationwide discussion is designed to open a new channel of communications between college and industry, and provide students an opportunity to have their opinions about business published.

Hopefully, this exchange of ideas will help resolve existing differences and serve as a vehicle for greater mutual respect and understanding.

ON VISTA TRAINING —

Program Director Describes Gains

Dr. L. Mayland Parker, professor of agricultural economics, says the warm relationships that have developed between VISTA trainees and the people with whom they have worked is the highlight of his experience while working for the program.

Dr. Parker has been director of VISTA training here since March 1965. He is presently engaged in a training program for VISTA volunteers that started the first week in September. The trainees are now at the Navajo reservation in northeastern Arizona.

Working with Indian people is particularly important to Dr. Parker who originally recommended the use of Indian reservations as training sites for both the Peace Corps and VISTA programs.

Dr. Parker stresses that though VISTA is designed to help deprived people, it is also a way in which "middle class Americans are able to develop an empathy for people who are more economically deprived than they are."

WINNING FORM — Displaying a portion of one of the football plays and fine form to be used in the powder puff football game Saturday morning are Christy Felt, Kappa Alpha Theta; Patty Haskell, Chi Omega; and Patty Wasson, Sigma Sigma Sigma. The event is being sponsored by Kappa Sigma fraternity, which is also supplying the opposing team, one of which just lost the play to three coeds.

WITH BOXING GLOVES —

Kappa Sigma Slates Powder Puff Game

A powder-puff football game sponsored by Kappa Sigma will be played Saturday at 11 a.m. in the football field by Cosner

Auditorium.

The action will feature a sorority all-star team pitted against a team of men from Kappa Sigma.

The game will be flag football with the coeds wearing uniforms of a sort and the men will wear uniforms and boxing gloves.

THE COED team will be made up of representatives of the sororities vying for seven trophies, including outstanding lineman, most aggressive offense and defense and best-dressed football player.

The sorority winning the greatest amount of points from the point-weighted trophies will win the over-all Kappa Sigma powder puff bowl trophy, according to Jim Da Costa, Kappa Sigma.

Sororities participating include Sigma Sigma Sigma, Alpha Sigma Phi, Kappa Delta, Alpha Phi, Alpha Delta Pi, Gamma Phi Beta, Chi Omega and Kappa Alpha Theta.

Mums for Moms

Spurs, junior honorary, will be selling Mums for Moms Oct. 31 through Nov. 9 to be worn at Homecoming.

Mums may be purchased for $1.50 at booths in front of the MU, Quad or engineering complex. The flowers may also be ordered through any member of Spurs.

Hats Off to Devils Defense

Hats off to defensive line coach Dick Tamburo. He's making the Sun Devils an honest-to-gosh football team.

The brightest spot in the Devils' 2-3 record has been the play of the defensive front five.

Jesse Fleming, Bob Rokita, injured Larry Hendershot, and Steve Timarac have been keeping the hometown boys in the football games, win or lose.

BUT PRAISE would be misplaced if the Devils' "Rock of Gibraltar" were not mentioned.

Middle guard Curley Culp was named Tuesday WAC lineman of the week for his defensive play against Brigham Young last Friday.

AGAINST BYU he grabbed a fumble on the enemy nine to set up a touchdown. Against Washington State he blocked a punt and fell on it at the WSU nine. This too was turned into a quick six points.

It's been like that all year. Watching Culp against BYU Friday, one pro scout reportedly commented, "I wish we could get that Culp right now."

BUT HE WON'T get the big man right now. He won't even get the pride of ASU this spring, for Culp is only a junior. To the woes of the rest of the WAC, he's got one more year of eligibility after this one.

But one man can't do the whole job. The defensive line has sparkled all season.

They've allowed a meager 73.7 yards a game in rushing yardage and have conceded only four TD's on the ground.

A WEEK AGO, the Devils were the 10th best defensive unit in the nation and are second in rushing defense to Wyoming in the WAC.

Travis Williams is back in stride, averaging 4.0 yards a carry, fourth in the WAC in this department. But he owes this position to the defensive five who have held the rushing yardage down against every team they've faced. Williams has never had to run into Culp or Timarac.

Good luck Oregon State. You'll need it.

Devil, Imp Linksmen Finish High in Match

In their final fall-semester golf tournament, the Sun Devil golfers finished fourth in a field of 16 varsity teams competing in New Mexico last week.

In the Twelfth Annual William H. Tucker Invitational Golf Tournament sponsored by New Mexico University, the Devil team finished behind defending champion Houston, Brigham Young University and host New Mexico.

In a field of 11 junior varsity and junior college teams, the Sun Imp junior varsity golfers finished third.

TOP VARSITY performer was Joe Porter who finished seventh with a four round total of 302. He was 13 strokes off the pace set by Buddy Allin of BYU and Doug Olson of Houston. The duo tied for first with scores of 289.

Behind Porter's 302 were Wayne Vollmer with 308, Steve Ryan with 312 and Rick Talt with 316 for the top four Devil marks.

Top scoring ASU freshman was Gary Haden of Mesa. He closed out the 72 holes with a 306 total, landing in a three-way tie for third place in the junior varsity division.

A TOTAL of 215 players took part in the tourney. It was the golfers' last battle till collegiate spring competition.

But in the meantime, Devils Porter, Vollmer and Bruce Cotton have expressed their intention to enter the Arizona State Amateur competition Oct. 26 at the Arizona Country Club in Phoenix.

Coed Golfers Finish Third in Tournament

The Sun Devilettes, girl's golf team, finished third in team championship play at the Tucker Collegiate Tournament in Albuquerque, N.M. last week.

Carol Sorenson, Jan Crow, Nikki Norstrom and Jane

Huntsberger comprised the team.

The coeds took a first place in low ball honors at the tourney. In this play, the four-girl team played each hole on the course and took the lowest score of the four as team mark. The Devilettes finished 17 under par.
