

Riot Bill Presents No Change-Durham

President G. Homer Durham said Tuesday he "can see very little in the Senate (anti-riot) Bill which would do more than spell out by the state what exists on the campus."

"It places in statute the situation already in effect at ASU," said Dr. Durham.

ASU is peculiar from other Arizona universities in that it is intersected by city streets, he said.

Unlike NAU and the UofA, Campus Security policemen are deputized officers of the Maricopa County sheriff.

Although the "Regents already have the power to enact ordinances, what that phrase means has never been fairly adjudicated," he said.

THE REGENTS now have the authority to run the universities, but they don't have any legal sanctions. For instance, the regents have the sanctions of admission and expulsion from the universities, and it uses the sanctions to run the universities.

The House Bill, on the other hand, poses "sticky problems for a lawyer," said Dr. Durham.

"IT CONTAINS some clauses which would be difficult of interpretation and therefore difficult to administer and probably would break down in practice."

The word "congregation" is one such vague word, he said.

"When does a congregation congregate?" That would be a matter for interpretation, he said.

AMS President Resigns Position

The presidency of Associated Men Students (AMS) is vacant today after a letter of resignation from Stephen Klock was accepted Tuesday by the ASA-SU Executive Council. Klock had held the office since September.

Klock gave personal reasons for his resignation, which followed by 24 hours the passing of a Senate Bill proposing the elimination of AMS next year. Associated Students President Bob McConnell yesterday announced that the faculty and student committee seats held by the AMS president hopefully will be filled by appointees this week.

No immediate plans for filling the office of AMS president were announced. Power to appoint lies with the Senate.

Tempe Sales Tax May Be Avoidable

If the City of Tempe wins its bid to tax on-campus proprietary activities, the University may yet avoid the tax.

President G. Homer Durham proposed an alternative at his State Press news conference Tuesday.

"THE REMEDY I have in mind," said Dr. Durham, "if we were to lose the case in the courts, would be to obtain a statute from the legislature clearly defining the status of the University as 'a creature of the state' and therefore not subject to the power of a municipal corporation."

The University is presently the defendant in a "friendly suit" by the City of Tempe to tax so-called "non-educational" activities on campus.

"This issue never came up until Tempe acquired its new municipal charter about 18 months ago," said Dr. Durham.

THE NEW charter permits the city to tax, and Tempe has since enacted a one percent sales tax.

"The city has attempted to apply it to the University by memorandum, and telephone calls to our people," said the president.

Student Anti-Riot Bill Trimmed in House

The Arizona Senate passed anti-riot legislation, SB 135, was drastically amended Tuesday by the House Education Committee.

Broad authority granted by the original legislation to the Board of Regents to formulate regulations for student conduct was eliminated.

THE AMENDMENT added by the committee would allow security police at state universities to enforce state laws. However, aside from traffic and parking violations, the Board of Regents would be unable to pass special campus regulations.

A committee member suggested that officers of higher caliber be hired if they will have additional responsibilities for law enforcement.

A UofA student who presented a pamphlet of objections to the original bill from UofA and NAU student organizations said that proposed regulations, though perhaps needed at campuses like Berkeley, were unnecessary at Arizona universities.

HE ALSO criticized the contention of Dr. Paul Singer, a new regent, that most students weren't opposed to the legislation.

The bill will now be studied by the House Rules Committee. Rep. Al Kluender, R-Maricopa, said he expected the bill to reach the House floor this week.

Grant, Contract Money Received by University

The University has received $165,486 in research contracts and grants, scholarships, other student aid, and gifts since January 31.

This includes a $23,476 contract with the Office of Naval Research for "Systems Analysis of Isolation and SEALAB" conducted by Dr. Arthur J. Bachrach, chairman of the Department of Psychology. A $43,401 contract with the U.S. Office of Education enables Dr. Willard Abraham, chairman of the Educational Services Department to direct an "Institute for Advanced Study in the Field of Disadvantaged Youth."

Other contracts include $3,300 from the Bureau of Educational Research and Service directed by Dr. R. Merwin Deever, the Mesa Center for Educational Advancement, and the Board of Trustees of Madison Elementary Dist. No. 38.

Another contract is for $6,850 from the Office of Education for "The Development and Improvement of a Programmed Learning Sequence for Use in Constructing a Teaching Unit," directed by Dr. LeRoy H. Griffith, associate professor of secondary education.

The grants include $29,131 from the Office of Economic Opportunity for an "Upward Bound Project," directed by Dr. Richard T. Wootton, professor of education, and $14,921 from the National Aeronautics and Space Administration for "Approximate Models in Solid State Circuit Analysis and Design," conducted by Dr. John Straudhammer, professor of electrical engineering.

Drill Field Is the Stage For SDSers

Members of Students for a Democratic Society (SDS) will offer petitions for the abolition of compulsory military and aerospace science courses at this morning's Air Force drill.

John Livingston announced yesterday the SDS will set up a table at 7:30 either on the drill field or the volleyball courts "to solicit signatures from the men themselves" in support of Arizona House Bill 272, outlawing compulsory ROTC.

"I've got to decide if I want to put my life on the line by joining the six participants in this project," Livingston said.

Blaze Evacuates Palo Verde West

Palo Verde West was completely evacuated Monday night when a fire broke out in the garbage chute. A cigarette was apparently dropped in the dumping shaft, according to Mary Lee Webb, assistant head resident.

Miss Webb reacted to a fire alarm set off on the seventh floor and she put out the blaze with a fire extinguisher. Tempe firemen arrived at 9:55 p.m. and found the situation under complete control.

No damage or injury was reported and the girls re-entered the dormitory at 10:20 p.m.

Counselors to Present Guidance Techniques

Two national authorities, one representing existentialist-inspired counseling and the other representing behaviorist-oriented counseling, will lecture and give demonstrations on campus tomorrow.

Dr. Gerard Haigh, former University faculty member, will speak on the "Existential Encounter," emphasizing the significance of existential human encounter as a process for discovery of life's meaning. He will speak at 9 a.m. in the MU ballroom and 2 p.m. in ED 309-312. He is currently with Psychological Associates of Los Angeles.

"Revolution in Counseling" will be discussed by Dr. John Krumboltz, professor of educational psychology at Stanford University, at 10:15 a.m. in the MU ballroom and 3 p.m. in Ed. 309-312. Dr. Krumboltz will deal with the implications of behaviorist-oriented psychology in counseling.

Group discussions will be held after the two lectures. Dr. C. Gilbert Wrenn, professor of educational psychology, will deliver an address entitled "An Observer Reports." He will compare and contrast the material presented during the morning session.

The conference will conclude with group discussion from 4 to 5 p.m. in Ed. 309-312.

Dr. Wayne Maes, associate professor of educational psychology and counseling, will preside at the meetings. Guests will be welcomed at the opening session by University Vice President Dr. Gordon B. Castle.

Designed specifically for professionals interested in working to achieve changes in human experience and behavior, the conference is sponsored by the Department of Educational Psychology and Counseling in conjunction with the guidance services division of the State Department of Public Instruction.

A Study In Studying

It is said that New Yorkers never see the Empire State Building nor do Parisians see the Louvre.

Perhaps this University has nothing as monumental as these, but it certainly has something equally significant and equally unnoticed — students.

So State Press photographer George Wood set out to show the University's major assets doing what they do best (or at least most) — studying.

$1 Million To Boost Campus Construction

A total of $957,393 has been allocated by the Arizona State Commission for Higher Education to assist in the construction of three building projects.

The funds include supplemental grants of $176,334 for the Business Administration Building, north of Goodwin Stadium, and $77,327 for the Mathematics Building, north of the Engineering Sciences Center. The funds also include $703,732 for a Music Building which will be located north of the Gammage Auditorium.

Earlier this year, the Commission approved $329,200 for the Ira D. Payne Education Building, to be constructed at the corner of 10th Street and Forest Avenue, and $98,091 for an addition to the Home Economics Building.

The Commission is comprised of members of the Arizona Board of Regents and administrator's federal funds available under the provisions of the Higher Education Facilities Act of 1963.

Tempe Tax

"But the University is a creature of a different order than a municipal corporation," and therefore should not be subject to Tempe taxation, he said.

IN ATTEMPTING to circumvent the problem of taxing the University activities while the issue is still in the courts, the city recently tried to tax the Del E. Webb company, currently constructing Manzanita Hall on University Drive. The company is opposing the taxation, he indicated, and the two parties have gone through a number of discussions.

Interestingly, a Superior Court in Tucson ruled the Ashton Construction Company, erecting a building on the UofA campus, must pay sales taxes to the city. The construction company is appealing the case to the State Supreme Court.

Education Professor Questions Final Exam Value

Dr. John C. Abbott, associate professor of education, last week questioned the value of finals in their present form as a learning experience.

Abbott, an associate professor of education, said that finals tend to be impractical because the students don't meet to review the results.

WITH 16 years as a university professor behind him, Abbott has found that very few students inquire about their success on finals. He tried to solve this problem last semester when he required all his students to meet with him to review them.

"I felt it was time to deal with the student in a more personal way," he said. He feels this will encourage the personal interaction between teacher and student that is often lacking in a big university.

Abbott also feels that giving only a midterm test and a final puts too much weight on these results. Quizzes should also be scheduled, so that the student has every opportunity to make a good showing, he said.

HE FAVORS essay questions over multiple-choice questions because the latter tend to encourage guessing.

Abbott said that grades should not rest entirely on test results. He feels that attitude in class is also an important factor.

Matmen Look for Win Over UofA In Hopes of a New Team Record

Coach Ted Bredehoft's Sun Devil grapplers will be out to set a new team record tonight at 8 in the Sun Devil Gym when they tackle the UofA Wildcats.

If the Devils take the meet, their season's record will rise to 9-2, the best results on a wrestling slate in the sport's five year history here.

THE HOME gym won't be the only factor on the Devils' side, as they defeated the Wildcats, 20-11, earlier this season in Tucson. It was the seventh win of nine meets between the schools in five years of wrestling competition.

As usual, the squad will be headed by the University's favorite strongman, Curley Culp. With a 15-0 record so far, including 11 pins, Culp was recently named to the mid-season second team All-America by the Amateur Wrestling News, official publication of the NCAA Coaches Association. First team heavyweight was Dave Porter of Michigan, a fellow junior Culp hopes to meet in the NCAA finals.

THE DEVIL line-up will be the same as that returned from the recent WAC tour to Wyoming, Utah and BYU. They are Glenn McMinn (115), Pete Russo (123), Gene Parrish (137), Jim Forler (145), Pat Seferovich (152), Ralph Gambin (160), Dick Thompson (167), Wayne Partee (177) and Culp.

The Devils will control Sun Devil Gym again tomorrow night when they go against the University of Colorado.

One week from tomorrow the Devils will host the WAC championships with the UofA, Utah, Wyoming, New Mexico and last year's champs, BYU, attending.

DOUBLE PLAY — Second baseman Fred Nelson pivots as he starts to release the ball to first base for a two-out play.

Batmen to Host California Team In Ball Series

The Apache Boulevard nine will host California State College of Los Angeles today at 3 p.m. in the first of a four-game series at Sun Devil Field.

Jeff Pentland with a 1-0 record will take the mound in today's game with Tom Burgess scheduled to hurl Friday's encounter.

Coach Bobby Winkles has indicated that Larry Gura and either Doug Nurnburg or Sam Chipps will pitch in Saturday's doubleheader.

The probable starting lineup for today is Larry Linville, centerfield; Fred Nelson, second base; Scott Reid, leftfield; Randy Bobb, catcher; Dave Grangaard, third base; Ron Davini, rightfield; Joe Paulson, first base; Jack Lind, shortstop and Pentland.

Summing up the San Fernando games, Winkles said, "We looked pretty good for only sophomores and juniors, but we're playing a much better club today."

He added that hitting has been the club's strongest point. Winkles also said, "The pitching wasn't as sharp as the earned-run average indicates for the first three games."

THE "NON-ECONOMIC" VALUES OF BUSINESS

Thomas Fehn, University of Southern California

Robert W. Galvin, Motorola Inc.

(A Businessman Invites a Student to Bring His Values to Work)

Dear Mr. Fehn:

Your last letter told me that the members of your generation do not want to be "organization men" in business. My two answers since have tried to show why you do not have to be. As you suggested, let's table this for now.

In this letter, I'd like to discuss your comment that your generation has a "new appreciation of non-economic values" and that this is the key to the misunderstandings between your generation and mine. You feel your generation always has lived the good life, materially, and that you always will have enough economic substance to be able to make decisions "on non-monetary criteria."

I am happy you do not feel "limited to a struggle for survival" and that you know you thus have a wider range of career choices. As I said earlier, business has a real appreciation for the individual's choice of his specific way of making a living and contributing to the world. Being a businessman is certainly not the only right way of life.

But your generation is not making a new discovery of these "non-economic values," and non-economic values are not separable from economic values in the working of the world. If I understand you correctly, you would see such things as love, respect, integrity, as non-economic values; profit and material reward as economic values.

Consider areas like education, housing, and food, and you'll see how economic and non-economic values work and live together. The reality is that non-economic values must draw substance and support from the economic sector of society.

Why do teachers strike for more salary? What caused the pressure that pushed federal salaries to levels at least equal to those paid for comparable work in private industry? It was just that people whose careers might be seen as non-economically oriented wanted to support their families as well as their neighbors did.

I am thankful that there are churchmen who devote full time to helping people solve personal and social problems. I also am thankful that our society can support these churchmen while they do it.

Money will not solve all the world's problems. Giving a man the opportunity to earn a good living will not automatically change the hearts of those who once sought to deny him this. Making it economically possible for a Negro family to move into an all-white neighborhood will not guarantee that they will be happy there. But the move could not have been made in the first place except for "economic values."

A businessman's values are not limited to what he can see on his balance sheet. A college graduate may buy a new suit for his first day at work—but he need not and he should not scrap all his old values as well.

Every generation worth its salt has found new ways to interpret and apply the constant basic values of life. Every generation which has left its mark in history has found wrongs in the world and has done its best to right them. God so made the world that Man must keep finding and solving these problems.

One thing our generation has learned is that you can't come up with a workable solution to a problem of society if you do not plan for the economic contributions to that solution.

Business is the key to these economic values. Whether you personally wish to engage in a business career or not, understanding this will help you build a comprehensive understanding of life.

"We" are going to leave "you" with all kinds of unsolved problems. You will find and solve problems we never dreamed of. But you, in turn, will leave unsolved problems to the men who follow you. Do not lose sight of your values. Apply them and, as you do, keep your mind and your planning open to the essentiality of economic values and what they will add.
