

Panel Discusses Required ROTC

By DAVID ANDERSON

Compulsory ROTC is not a necessary evil, a panel of civilian and military leaders said here Tuesday.

It is either a positive good, training students to be military officers and better citizens, or an unnecessary restriction on their freedom.

THE FIVE PANEL members who spoke to the ASU chapter of the American Civil Liberties Union and about 100 students, included Gen. Joseph Ahee, former head of the Arizona National Guard; John Ahearn, member of the Industrial Commission and 1964 Congressional candidate; Gary Peter Klahr, U of A law school graduate who has long been active in efforts to abolish compulsory ROTC; Dave Lubin, a leader of the current abolition drive; and Bill Rehnquist, Phoenix attorney.

"Compulsory ROTC is a means of better preparing the armed forces of the United States for sudden wars which might not allow time for preparation," said Gen. Ahee.

Furthermore, opponents of compulsory ROTC are inconsistent, because they fail to oppose compulsion in other subject areas such as English or foreign languages.

LUBIN REPLIED that although any compulsory course violates a student's academic freedom, compulsion should be maintained if the subject (English, for example) is of primary importance for success in any line of endeavor.

He agreed with the others that voluntary military activity had a legitimate place on campus. However, "Education becomes indoctrination. . . . when removed from the democratic framework of the university and placed in the totalitarian framework of the military," he said.

Concurring with Lubin, Klahr said, "I think the purpose of a university is to teach people how to think, not how to take orders."

KLAHR DISAGREED with Gen. Ahee that compulsory ROTC provides useful training. Rather, he said, it imposes a double military obligation on students, forcing them to engage, while deferred from the draft, in military training which will have no effect on their draft status later.

Ahearn, substituting for former Gov. Sam Goddard who is recovering from an operation, agreed that much of the discontent with the program is caused by the form and content of the two-year basic course. He suggested integrated study of cold war aspects of economics, geography and other topics as an alternative.

Protests Just Starting Says Negro Pacifist

Peace demonstrations on campuses across America are just beginning, says Dickie Harris, who claims to be one of the 50 people who got into the Pentagon during peace demonstrations in Washington last Saturday.

Harris, brought to campus yesterday at noon by the Committee to End the War in Vietnam, told a crowd of about 150 students on the Mall that the struggle for peace begins with the draft.

"I am 24 years old and have 24 years invested in this country, so it's mine," said the former member of SNCC and CORE. He is now working with the Resistance, a national group opposing the Vietnam conflict.

Harris said he was proud of the four ASU students who turned in their draft cards. He also predicted that more draft cards would be turned in on Dec. 4. Harris himself turned his draft card in Nov. 16.

"The majority is always benefiting from the efforts of the minority," he said.

All Agree Problem Exists, But . . .

Majority of Tempe Merchants Disapprove Tow-away Policy

Ed. Note: This is the final installment in a series of three articles examining the views of Tempe Center merchants concerning the recent towing-away of student cars parked in the customer parking lot.

By DAVE GURZENSKI

The complaints continue from the merchants, some condemning, others condoning the towing away of student cars by the owner of the Tempe Center.

"The students who park here all day are the ones causing the problem for the rest of them," added the manager of Kings Fashions.

George Gatesh of Lee Optical admitted he is against towing away cars. "I drove my son's car down one day and it was towed away. It's going to take a better solution than that to solve the problem."

"I don't have a better idea," said Austin McAvoy, manager of Pioneer Camera Shop. "We used to have caretakers give warnings, but that didn't work. There must be a better solution than towing away cars; maybe it will come from a student."

Ryan-Evans also feels the present system is unfair. Assistant Manager Roland Wilcox doubted whether it was possible to accurately decide which students are shopping and which are attending classes.

Marv Shwartz of Scott Jewelers spoke out against the towing of cars and also referred to the fight last year over the practice. "After ten of the merchants had printed an ad in the State Press saying we were against towing away cars, we were all placed on probation and told our leases were in danger. The towing away of cars has jeopardized my business, and my fight against it again will probably jeopardize my lease. The small businesses have no say even if they are in the majority because many are afraid to speak out," said the manager.

Pearl Gruse of the Sewing

Basket feels the University is responsible for providing more parking for its students. "I don't like seeing the student cars towed away, but I don't think it is fair to fill the lot with their cars and force the customers to go elsewhere."

"Some shops here depend on ASU for their livelihood; others couldn't care less about the students," admitted the manager of Sherwin-Williams Company. "From the beginning I have been against towing, but the decision is not up to the merchants."

Morris Thatcher, manager of the Standard Service Station, brought out the fact that the merchants are responsible for the cars that park in the lot. "If someone would steal a car, we would be held liable for damages," he said.

The State Farm Insurance representative, Ben Davis, TeePee of Toys also said that giving warning to the student

Traffic Ticket Unfairly Given?

Students wishing to appeal tickets may appear before the Traffic Appeals Board every Wednesday at 2:40 p.m. in MU 210.

Witch Laughs On Night Run In Men's Hall

It was the witching hour. And one sister-in-lore took advantage of the time, 12 midnight on Halloween, to charge down the halls in Best A men's dorm as shocked residents stood by, mouths agape.

"Hee, hee, hee. Come up to my haunt sometime and visit me, dearies," the old hag cackled as she galloped through the dorm on her broom.

And for the first time, when a girl visited the men's dorms, the residents didn't know what to do.

Chairman Connie Outcalt said they can obtain an appeal blank from the Administration building and return it to Campus Security prior to their appearance.

She also suggested that students review rules regarding temporary parking permits.

"Many students apparently don't know that it doesn't cost anything to get the permit and they can get a $5 ticket if they don't have it," Miss Outcalt said.

Anderson WAC Back of Week

Sun Devil halfback Max Anderson was named Western Athletic Conference Back of the Week for his performance against eighth-ranked Wyoming. Anderson shot up the middle of the Cowboy defense for a record breaking 99-yard Sun Devil touchdown.

Merchants' Views

(Continued from Page 1) does not accomplish anything doubted the students' case and said, "I fail to understand how the student feels that this is a public area made for his convenience. It was made for shoppers. This is the University's problem. They should build high-rise parking and in time it will pay for itself."

and added that what the owner of the center is doing has to be done. Woody Wilson took his place behind the owner of the center by telling the offenders to ask themselves the question, "Did I park here for my convenience or to shop here?" "The students will see they are wrong in parking on private property," said the manager of 31 Flavors.

Tops Liquor Store saw this as a problem of the large merchants. "We are open late at night and never have a problem," stated Marie Yablon.

"The University should act as disciplinarian in this matter. Even though this is private property, tickets should be given as though we are one of the lots on the campus, because towing away the cars is not the answer," commented University Sporting Goods manager Nolly Trujill.

Dennis Bower of White Shield Drugs admitted he had parked on the lot when he attended the University. "That was many years ago and the problem is still with us. I know if my car was towed away I would hold it against the merchants," he said.

Zzzona Laundry ended the list of comments by saying space around their establishment is needed for drive-in service. "We have to think of our student customers. It isn't fair having them walk across the lot because other students are parking here and going to classes," said Mildred Pospicil.

Hills Record and Book Shop and Rosamond's Beauty Shop would not comment on the problem. First National Bank was the only merchant who could not be contacted.

Speaking for the owner of the Tempe Shopping Center, David Abrams, assistant director of property management for O'Malley Investment and Realty Co., defended his position.

The property manager said that an increase in the number of complaints by the merchants themselves brought about the final action of towing away cars.

"Some of the merchants threatened to stop rent payments because they were not being given the number of parking spaces stipulated in their leases," said Abrams.

After the opinions of the merchants were tabulated, the number of small organizations who were against towing away cars outweighed the large lessors who were in favor of the action.

Albee Satire and Drama Scheduled for Lyceum

Two plays by Edward Albee, America's most discussed playwright, will begin a three-week-end engagement tonight at 7:30 in the Lyceum.

"The American Dream" and "The Death of Bessie Smith," presenting sharply contrasting satire and realism, will be performed by the University Players.

BASED ON an actual incident, "The Death of Bessie Smith" portrays the auto accident death of blues singer Bessie Smith in Memphis, where racial bias delayed her entry into a white hospital that might

GEN. AHÉE said that from 1959-64, when he worked in a military department dealing with reserve requirements, the armed forces were never able to secure the number of men they needed.

Klahr dissented vigorously, saying that continuous statements from the Defense Department under Secretary Robert McNamara indicate that voluntary programs are capable of supplying a sufficient quantity of officers.

have saved her life.

The play will feature Howard Kirk, Billie Pearlstein and Mike Rapinchuk.

In delightful contrast to the serious, realistic "Bessie Smith" will be the hilariously absurd "American Dream," a comment on American life and ideals.

BOB GRAYBILL and Jonie Anderson portray Albee's satirical Daddy and Mommy, and Caryl White, Linda Leppa and O.B. Lewis play Grandpa, Mrs. Barker and the American Dream, respectively.

Performances of both plays will continue Saturday and Sunday at 8:30 p.m., and for the next two weekends, Nov. 9, 10, 11, 16, 17 and 18. Tickets may be reserved at the Lyceum box office for $1.

STATE PRESS is published by Arizona State University as the official campus newspaper every Tuesday through Friday during the school year, except holidays and examination periods, and is entered as second class matter at Tempe, Arizona, 85281.

In Government Work -

Leaders Needed

Students interested in making more money and who plan to work for any branch of government should check on the Masters of Public Administration program being offered by the political science department's Institute of Public Administration, said Dr. William Gable, director of the Institute.

The Masters of Public Administration program is designed to meet the extreme need for urban administrators and to train qualified administrators at all levels of government.

EIGHTEEN STUDENTS are now in this program, two-thirds of them working in government agencies, and about fifteen students have graduated from the program.

Dr. Gable states that all branches of government are upgrading their administrative personnel and "all the colleges and universities are not now producing the people needed for municipal administration."

Dr. Gable would like to see students who have completed their undergraduate work in subjects such as economics and social sciences fill the increased demand for administrators by seeking the Masters in Public Administration.

Phantom of the Airwaves

Signal Unheard

By TOM GORRELL
CAMPUS RADIO station KASN (730 kc) has a unique distinction. It has the smallest audience of any station in the Valley. And what's more, program director Larry Dunkel doesn't care.

Dunkel, a junior radio - television major, said the only place that can receive KASN's signal is PV Main, and not very well at that.

"The signal is sent over the electrical system," said Dunkel, "but right now the signal is rather weak and has a slight buzz. We hope to improve the signal sometime next week."

DUNKEL, WHO is a weekend announcer on a local rock station, said it really doesn't matter that no one listens.

"What's important is that the students who work at KASN learn broadcasting skills and techniques," he said.

KASN is not licensed by the Federal Communications Commission, and apparently has in past years been operating illegally.

"Last year the station used a ten watt transmitter which at times sent signals over the air. This violated Federal law," said Dunkel.

KASN PRESENTLY broadcasts Monday through Friday from 1 to 10 p.m. Announcers select their own music, which may range from country - western to classical, but most of the music is rock.

Dunkel, who uses the name "Larry Dean" on his commercial broadcasts, is optimistic about KASN's future. He foresees a new communications center which will house ASU's educational television station along with KASN.

"Plans are now being formulated for such a project, but the money hasn't been appropriated yet," said Dunkel. He expressed hopes that by then KASN will have an FM transmitter capable of being received all over the Valley.

Dunkel also hopes that by then KASN will have more than its present mini - audience.

Fun and Games in ROTC

On one hot, sweaty, dirty Saturday morning not too long ago, a bunch of senior ROTC cadets busily (see left) got together and planned a devious demise for almost 100 unsuspecting junior cadets. The plot was carried out under the guise of an Army Physical Training (PT) Test, which is administered regularly (more or less) to members of the regular Army and ROTC advanced cadets.

is administered first of all the events for the simple reason that it dirties the clothes and person immediately and creates the right frame of mind for the rest of the PT Test.

manded and directed by Brigade S3, cadet Col. Tom Guilds, affectionately nicknamed "The Wry One" by his contemporaries.)

FOR THE junior cadet, the test is part of a very tough training program designed to prepare him for the rigors of spend six weeks between his junior and senior years learning what it's like to be a private in the regular Army.

The crawl was conducted in the most advantageous of locations — the 4-foot-deep sand of the river basin. Where times usually run around the 30-second mark, in the sand the seniors were careful to provide, times got up around 40 seconds.

THE RUN - DODGE - JUMP (left) is the event cleverly designed to pull more muscles and turn more ankles than all the others combined, not to mention the sacroiliac trouble it can cause. Here the juniors jump a six-foot trench, and run in and out (or vice-versa) of some high-jump props.

The first of the tests is the 40-yard low crawl (below), which

Those seniors thought of everything. (They were com-

The favorite of the five events for the juniors is the grenade (simulated) throw (right). Not only do they get to lie on the ground, but in throwing the weight, the clever junior can usually manage to hit a senior scorer rather than the target. Here, the Army also examines the sadistic tendencies of its future officers.

The juniors will undergo the same test next summer at summer camp, along with a number of other examinations designed to test them on various phases of Army tactics, leadership, attitude and military competence.

THE PT TEST is the one real taste of camp the underclassmen will get here before next June, and from the looks on their faces, it's probably just as well.

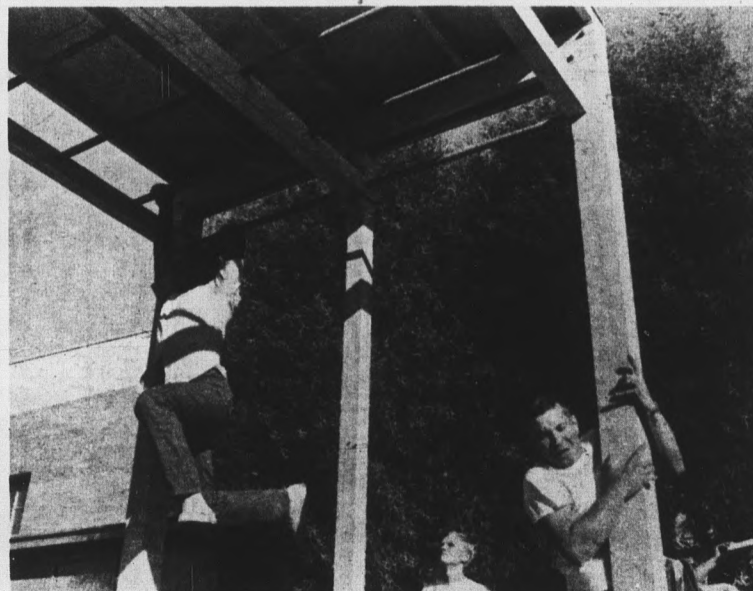

But at least the seniors look like they're enjoying it (bottom right).

WHO'S THE SENIOR? — Obviously, there's only one person in this picture really enjoying himself. It's cadet Capt. J. Hudson as he watches the juniors buzz by in the middle of the mile run, the last event the underclassmen struggle through. The mile is hardly a smidgeon of what they'll get in the way of running at camp.

SOME CUT IT AND SOME . . . — The parallel bars were the most difficult event for most of the juniors. Maximum score was 76 bars, up and down the ladder three times. Apparently, half the game was just getting started, and one discouraged junior looks as though he'd rather he hadn't.

Organization Aids Women In Education

An organization with the older woman students in mind is AWARE, the Association for Women's Active Return to Education. Its purpose is to help women strive for excellence in education and help each develop her greatest potential ability.

AWARE, founded in 1965, now has three Arizona chapters: Glendale, Mesa and Phoenix. To receive the benefits of the chapters, a woman must have missed two consecutive years of college. Scholarships, counseling services and career planning are some of the advantages of AWARE.

The chapter also provides a counseling service that works with local institutions and their available educational programs for women.

In career planning, AWARE helps show women how their education and family life can be combined.

Any woman who is interested in the organization may attend the AWARE meeting this Friday at 12 noon in Matthews Center, 150G.

Linda Yee

Tennis Champion Amazed by Wins

By EDYTHE EDGAR
Assistant Sports Editor

Recent winner of the Southwest Intercollegiate Tennis Championship, Linda Yee remarked, "I'm always amazed when I win — this time I was even more amazed"

Now competing in the mixed doubles finals of the local Tropicana tournament, she has held Washington State, Oregon State, Pacific Northwest and Chinese National championships, in addition to being featured in a recent issue of Sports Illustrated.

MISS YEE was taught the sport by her mother who recently entered the finals of the National Indoor Senior Women's Championship. She smiled as she explained that her parents had to remove a wall in their home to accommodate the family's tennis trophies.

Linda has won more than 200 trophies since her tenth birthday.

"We're really a tennis family," she said, "My mother started us all and has taken us to tournaments as a family."

MISS YEE admitted her nervousness before a match, although an opponent favored to defeat her doesn't cause as much anxiety as when she is favored to win.

"If they're supposed to beat me, I just try my hardest to do the best I can; if I'm supposed to win I'm always afraid I may lose," she said.

A tennis player is able to read articles about his oppo-ents' skills, Miss Yee said. "When you go into a match, you know exactly what you're up against," she continued.

CONCERNING the part of the game that bothers her, she commented, "Most winners jump over the net — but I just can't seem to make it."

A Spanish major who sews her own clothes and enjoys creative splurges, Miss Yee admitted that she likes to spend her time on a variety of activities.

"I also like to do spur-of-the-moment things," she smiled, "and sometimes I enjoy being a little mischievous."

Pikes Triumph In Flag Game

The Pi Kappa Alpha pledges fought off a second-half rally by the Phi Kappa Psi pledge class to win a flag football game Sunday afternoon, 30-24.

The Phi Psi's were first on the scoreboard early in the first quarter but then failed in a conversion attempt.

Following a dispute over a personal foul, the Pikes bounced back with two touchdowns before the end of the first half.

First half score was Pi Kappa Alpha 12, Phi Kappa Psi 6.

In the second half the Phi Psi's came on strong scoring the first two touchdowns and threatening a third, but the Pikes stopped the drive and scored the winning TD in the last minute of play.

Kicking accuracy was off with neither team scoring by field goal or conversion.
