

Board approves Senate bill

Conduct code reviewed

By RICK SNEDEKER

Saturday's Board of Regents meeting came off like so much clockwork—excepting for one cog.

In compliance with Senate Bill SB 174 (a law requiring Arizona schools to establish rules and regulations concerning student conduct in order to qualify for state funds), the Regents approved a code of conduct for the three universities.

However, the code went beyond stipulations of the law to encompass faculty members also.

The code was adopted against protests by university presidents H. K. Newburn (ASU) and Richard A. Harvill (UofA), both of whom felt the code was a "mistake."

The proposal was approved by a narrow 6-4 margin and will receive a public hearing October 23 at the ASU College of Law. However, Norman G. Sharber, regent from Flagstaff, feels that the hearing "will change nothing."

Elsewhere on the agenda, the board approved a total operating budget of $119,004,657, an increase of $21,756,249 over the current fiscal year.

Individual budget increases were: the Board of Regents, a 52 percent increase over 1970-71; ASU, 15.4 percent; UofA main campus 15.9 percent, and medical center, 101.7 percent; and NAU, 14.9 percent.

At the meeting, presidential reports from the three universities confirmed enrollment projections for 1971-72. Enrollment for the U of A main campus is expected to be 25,759, with 228 at the medical center. ASU expects 27,900, and NAU, 8,725. These figures meet or exceed projections on which current budgets were based.

Regent Elwood Bradford, reported that a new president will be named for ASU by the first of the year. Also, Bradford stated that a committee of U of A faculty, alumni, and the student body president, has been named to assist in the selection of a U of A president.

In major action involving ASU, the board authorized the University to advertise for bids and award a contract to the lowest bidder, for construction of a 55,420 square-foot addition to the Language and Literature building.

A $500,000 federal grant, and remains of the 1970 legislature appropriations, are available for the project.

President Newburn, in addition, announced at the meeting, the appointment of Howard N. Tench, of Scottsdale, as comptroller of the university.

From 1951-56, Tench was comptroller at the U of A.

Finally, Regent Bradford moved that 29 cents be appropriated for a can of three-and-one motor oil to fix the squeek in his chair.

Conduct code hit

By JIM SPENCER

"It is unfortunate that the Board of Regents chose to present the University with a detailed code of conduct at this time," University President H. K. Newburn told the State Press yesterday.

President Newburn, who opposed the action of the board in the regents' meeting Saturday, said he had hoped the board initially would take only the action necessary to comply with Senate Bill 174, which deals with administrative handling of campus disorder. The bill requires that action to keep non-student agitators off Arizona campuses be taken by Nov. 11.

President Newburn indicated that the regents' action went far beyond these requirements by instituting a complex conduct code which affects many facets and segments of campus life.

"I was surprised by the board's action," President Newburn said. He indicated that he had hoped the regents would consult more fully with the campus community before adopting the new code.

The president said he felt that University administration, faculty and students should have been given a chance to study the code and make recommendations before the regents adopted it.

A public hearing to consider the new conduct code is scheduled for Oct. 23 and revisions will be considered at that time.

The code is set forth in a 52 page document which is not generally available at this time. It is estimated that reprints will be available later this week.

The code prohibits the distributing, wearing, carrying or posting of armbands, buttons or signs which are obscene or controversial and which interfere with normal University activities.

Persons on campus are required to have a valid University identification card on them at all times or risk removal from campus. Sit-ins on walks, steps and all entrances to University facilities are prohibited.

The code also outlaws the use of menacing words, signs or gestures in the presence of the Board of Regents.

Finally the code restricts the publishing of malicious falsehoods which bring anyone into disrepute, contempt or ridicule.

Tempe woman fights admission standards

A petition filed in Superior Court to force the University to admit a Tempe woman, will be considered today at 9 a.m.

The petition filed Friday by the Legal Aid Society, asks the court to admit Patricia C. Mulhern of 2156 Cairo Drive immediately. In his pleadings, attorney Jerry Levine charges that administrative officials acted "arbitrarily and capricious" in regard to "vague and ambiguous standards" in failing to admit Miss Mulhern.

The pleadings further charge that the action was a violation of the State Constitution and the 14th Amendment to the Federal Constitution.

The trouble began on Sept. 12, one week prior to the final day of registration when Miss Mulhern sought admission to the University.

According to the petition she was told by Kent M. Christiansen, coordinator of student advisement, that she could take no further steps to register until she received a college transcript from Colorado State University.

Miss Mulhern telegraphed Colorado State for the transcript and five days later telephoned there to the registrar's office.

On Sept. 19, prior to the deadline for admissions, the pleadings state, Miss Mulhern proceeded to the office of admissions with all documents and funds necessary for admission.

At that time an assistant to the registrar refused her admittance on the ground that the transcripts, though they were still in a sealed envelope from Colorado State, had not been sent directly to the University.

That was Saturday. On Monday, Miss Mulhern was granted an interview with Registrar Alfred Thomas, Jr. Mr. Thomas allegedly opened the letter containing the transcripts and thereafter informed Miss Mulhern that registration was closed and that she had no valid excuse for late registration. He

Seating application deadline Thursday

Deadline for group seating applications for the Sun Devil vs. Washington State game Oct. 10 is at 4 p.m. tomorrow in South Hall 224.

Drawing for the seats will be at 4 p.m. Thursday.

Group seating in sections "V" and "W" of the stadium is available to all registered campus organizations. The drawing will determine which groups will obtain seats for the WSU game.

Organizations that failed to pick up and use the tickets allocated for them at the Kansas State game, however, will not be eligible again until the San Jose State game Nov. 7.

Organizations eligible for the drawing include Zeta Beta Tau, Phi Delta Theta, Phi Sigma Kappa and Alpha Tau Omega.

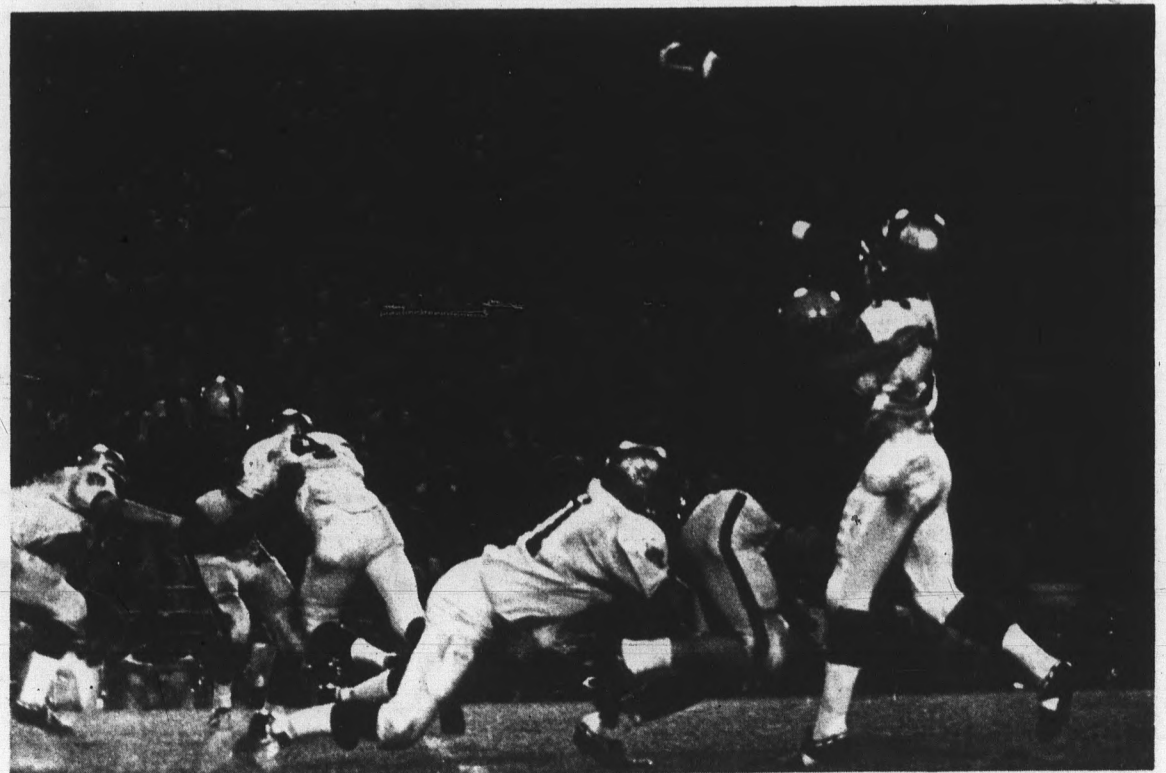

Students may obtain tickets at the regular pickup times next week.

stated that she would not be admitted.

Subsequently she received a form letter from Dean Peek of the College of Liberal Arts requesting that Thomas admit her. Registrar Thomas, however, denied to reconsider her admittance.

Saturday, Miss Mulhern's case was reviewed by the Board of regents, which refused to rescind action.

The Legal Aid Society is trying to get a court order which will admit Miss Mulhern immediately.

Newly-revised committee seeks interested students

SAM headquarters moved to ASU

By RICK SNEDEKER
Dale Dauten and Bruce Johnston, University juniors, feel that the no-committee committee is beautiful.

Their newly-revised Campus Affairs Committee is admittedly a loosely structured organization.

However, the two co-chairmen believe that the group's lack of rigid organization is an asset. "It gives us a freedom of motion available to no other ASASU group."

Originally, according to Dauten, the committee was a sort of ASASU minor-item garbage can. "Anything that student government didn't want to do, was handed to the Campus Affairs Committee."

At present the group is interested in solving the various "small problems" at the University that have been overlooked.

"To slide from little victory to little victory is much better," said Dauten, "than staggering from massive defeat to massive defeat."

The group will operate with small, isolated special investigating teams.

The committee has several Orchesis names new selections

Orchesis, the University performing dance group, has announced new members for the fall semester.

The new members are: Peggy Hill, Vicki Phillips, Laurie Zarkou, Jo Ann Pastorini, Linda Cannon, Betsy Cocke, Ilsa Bush, Pat Payne, Tony Baca, Michele Arriaga, Pam Roberts and Nancy Loftis.

The apprentice members are: Joe McDaniel, Sue Gallimore, Terry Porter, Kathy Wyly and Joyce Smith.

Mike Schwartz, publicity chairman, says Orchesis "provides a chance for people to create in the medium of dance and also becomes a source of self-expression."

The members of Orchesis are looking forward to an informal dance presentation Nov. 19 and 20.

projects now in developmental stages.

They are planning to sponsor full page informative advertisements in student newspapers on the rising occurrence of venereal disease. Dauten feels that many of the problems in this area could be averted through education.

Dauten and Johnston talk also of an experimental University teacher evaluation and presentation of student employe rights.

Peter Sellers featured in film

"A Shot In The Dark," starring Peter Sellers and Elke Sommer, is the MU's film festival feature this week.

The movie is a comedy spoof of murder mysteries and tells tales of the fictitious French Inspector Clouseau's zany, adventurous mishaps.

Tickets may be obtained all week in MU West's games room. There will be no charge for this film.

Curtain time is 8 p.m. Friday in the Art and Architecture auditorium.

National headquarters of the Society for Advancement of Management (SAM) has been transferred from Lancaster, Pa. to the University's College of Business Administration.

Dr. Joseph Schabacker, professor of management, accepted the appointment as president of the University division of SAM International, New York, N.Y., this summer.

Dr. Schabacker said the Thunderbird Graduate School of International Management has the newest chartered chapter in the nation.

"This gives Arizona the distinction of being the only state in the Union that has a SAM campus chapter in each school that offers a degree in business administration," stated Dr. Schabacker.

"A six-week European tour will be offered to SAM members this summer," announced Dr. Schabacker. The students will have the opportunity to tour Europe while earning college credits in a course entitled "Comparative Management Systems."

With the help of five regional vice-presidents appointed by Dr. Schabacker, the 155 campus chapters, composed of some 5,500 students will begin the school year "dedicated to lifelong learning in administration."

One of Dr. Schabacker's first administrative acts was to add this slogan to the existing slogans — "The future belongs to those who prepare for it" and "Industrial progress through enlightened management."

During the 1969-70 year, the University's SAM chapter received the "National Membership Growth Award" and the "Superior Performance Award" as one of the top three campus chapters in the nation.

Dr. Schabacker recently accepted the presidency of the Arizona division of the American Cancer Society and is a past president of the National Council for Small Business Management.

Labor is topic

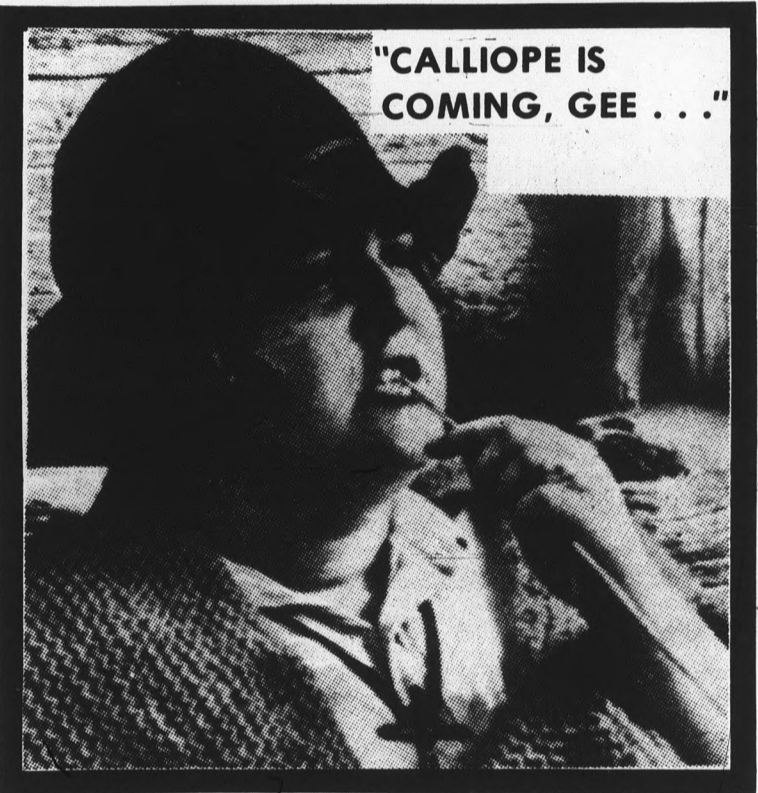

An open forum entitled "The Phoenix Labor Market" will be presented, Oct. 13 in the first of a series of forums to be presented by the Career Services office.

Edward Heler, chief of research and analysis with the Arizona State Employment Service, will speak at 11:30 a.m. in ASB 105 (formerly OBA) to students and faculty interested in career planning.

Future forums will feature topics concerning foreign employment, minority groups and work versus education.

Art review

Creative photos displayed

By GAY LUEBKIN

A total of 1,800 woman hours of creative blood, sweat, tears and excitement is being represented now at the student gallery in the new Art and Architecture building.

Graduate student Nancy Chapman is christening the new gallery with photographs representative of three years of work and experimentation with figures and multiple exposures of a film to achieve subtle buildups of color and the effect of motion.

Nancy first became interested in the multiple technique when she began her graduate work at the University in 1967. Panels in the gallery show her progression from "straight" shots which involve natural shadows and reflections of trees and rocks to the reflections she learned to create with her camera.

Nancy's work led to a fellowship at George Eastman House in Rochester, New York, in 1968. She continued her experiments in multiples and began her figure work using models with dance experience.

Two panels in the gallery show the way Nancy progresses with a model. As the figure moves slowly and she keeps shooting continuously on the same negative until the final effect becomes one of several blurred figures in motion.

The creative process of shooting the model in motion becomes one of total involvement both for photographer and model, Nancy feels. The model contributes ideas and movements and sometimes a work session will last up to five hours as one idea generates another.

Although most of the work being shown in the gallery is a reflection of several years of progress, Nancy decided to top it with a special series done just for the show and the west wall of the show room is devoted to the project she worked on feverishly for three months. Nancy feels it is better than, even though a reflection of, the work she had done before.

Concerning her project Miss Chapman said: "The abstraction in fragmentation of the human form in a controlled or natural environment provides a framework for reality and unreality. Through manipulation I was able to reveal time and motion in a graphic medium."

'Press war' not a reality

By DIANE McINTYRE

Some people think there is a press war on this campus. There really isn't.

If there ever was, it's over now. Students who want to put out a paper completely on their own, with no one but themselves to guide the content and the quality of their paper, now have it. Students who prefer to work on the State Press, under the guidance of experienced newsmen, have a paper, too. Peace has been declared, so to speak.

Some people don't see it that way.

President H. K. Newburn recently decided that the State Press should retain its function as a lab for the students in the Mass Communications Department and that the newspaper should remain under the guidance of an adviser. In a statement, Newburn said that the censorship powers of the adviser would pertain only to material which he feels is "libelous or clearly not in the best interests of the University."

No journalism student can be an expert on libel. He simply hasn't had the experience needed to understand every legal technicality.

The last part of Newburn's phrase is most misunderstood. It has been interpreted by some to mean that the State Press will not be allowed to print anything that questions the operation of this University.

For the State Press to publish under a policy like that would be unprofessional. The State Press is still completely free to investigate and report any issues which deal with the University administration.

This newspaper is, however, committed to report those issues, and all others, with good taste. Good taste is what "in the best interests of the University" refers to. Good taste does not include obscenity or rash and libelous comments. Journalistically, good taste does not include one-sided coverage or editorializing in the news columns.

Because the State Press staff has an adviser does not mean that news will be repressed or slanted. What it does mean is that students on the staff do not believe that we are infallible. We are eager to be professionals, and we are eager to benefit from the experience and teaching of those who are.

Tickets revisited

Dear Editor:

In the State Press Letter to the Editor column, Friday, September 25, Judy Niccolai made some very narrow minded remarks that affected all the "Rah-Rah Fraternity Playboys."

Mrs. Niccolai claimed that her husband was unable to buy her a ticket for the "Neil Diamond Show" because fraternity members were "jumping in line wherever and whenever they pleased." I find it difficult to believe that there is a physical difference between a male Greek and a male independent.

One of the biggest problems of our society today is the populations' ability to stereotype groups. If a Black holds up a gas station, all Blacks are robbers; if a Mexican-American picks vegetables, all Mexican-Americans are field workers; if the President of the United States is a WASP, all WASP's must have the ability to lead this great country. To me, this is the logic of a bigot. To me, this is familiar to the logic Mrs. Niccolai used to write her letter.

I am by no means saying that there are no rude or impolite fraternity men on this campus. What I am saying is that the ratio of impolite male Greeks is no higher, in my opinion, than that of any other group.

As for how a fraternity man could walk off with five or six tickets? The same way Joe Independent did, he probably knew the guy that sold them!

When I first read Mrs. Niccolai's letter to the State Press, I considered giving up my two tickets for her and her husband, but then I realized that that would be impossible. For I, a "Rah-Rah Fraternity Playboy," stood in line for one hour at the box office, and was unable to get tickets. Instead, through the generosity of myself and my fraternity brothers, I have decided to mail her one of Neil Diamond's albums, (If I can locate her address through University offices). Next time put down the box office manager, not the Greeks.

'Closed-door' policy not new but unfair

The idea of closed-door hearings is not a new one to members of the press, but it is one that has long been a stumbling block in the attempt to adequately and fairly cover the news.

The tenets of Canon 35 covering cameras in the courtroom, and the policy of the closure of hearings to members of the press are basically sound, but the harm the media can and does do in the coverage of trial proceedings is often blown out of proportion.

Cameras in the courtroom are indeed a distracting factor in some cases, but they do show what is actually occurring to a public that has the right to know.

Reporters in the courtroom are an entirely different thing.

The press has the job of informing the public about what goes on around them. In this vein, there is always the chance that some of the public will say "I knew it all along" or "I knew he was that kind of person."

This is a basic part of human nature. It is something that must be accepted as such.

In a trial, the opinions of the public are of secondary importance. The most important part of a trial is the decision rendered by the members of the jury.

Unless pre-trial coverage has been such that an impartial jury cannot be found, the media have not exceeded their avowed function of public information.

The fact that the people have the right to know still looms large in the overall view.

Moves toward open hearings and meetings deserve the plaudits of all involved citizens.

Unless the media are allowed to cover news events that have an effect on public opinion, the rights of a concerned and thinking citizenry are in grave danger of becoming extinct.

People must be informed to better form judgments of their own.

The judiciary must be made aware of this fact, not as a demand, but rather as a need. Only then can the problem be resolved in the best interest of those involved.

Project develops education programs

The Pilot Project, a program designed to enable secondary education students to study, observe and participate in teaching procedures on a more involved level, has developed in the last two years.

The primary goal of this program is to help the student gain first hand experience in relating his college classes to practical experience in this major teaching field.

As one participating student stated, "It's a good chance for students to find out if teaching is right for them before it is too late".

SMC unsure unity program

The Student Mobilization Committee says it wants a coalition of University and community but it doesn't know how this can be accomplished.

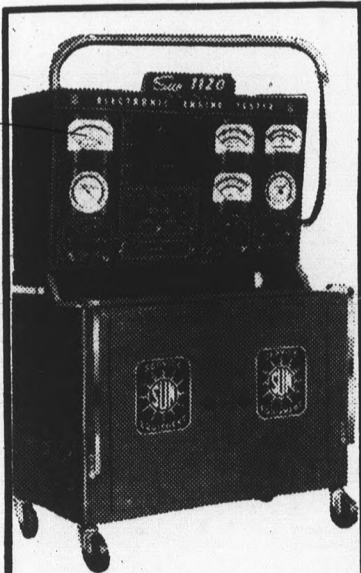

Randy Overmyer, a spokesman for the SMC, told the State Press Thursday night (after that group had decided to boycott the paper), there is a fence separating the community and the students. The SMC wishes to see that fence knocked down, he added.

SMC will attempt to draw a closer relationship together between the student and the community. Breaking the so-called communication gap and having the two intermingle is their goal, Overmyer said.

Plans for the forthcoming year are still in the drawing board stage.

The group intends to carry out mass antiwar actions both on the campus and in the community. The first of these antiwar actions will take place Oct. 31, Overmyer said.

NSF graduate fellowships set

National Science Foundation graduate and postdoctoral fellowships will be awarded March 15 for study in mathematical, physical, medical, biological, engineering and certain social sciences, history and-or philosophy of science.

College seniors, graduate and postdoctoral students are eligible and will be judged on ability. Applicants are required to take the Graduate Record Examinations on Dec. 12.

The annual stipends for the graduate fellowships are: $2,400 for first year level; $2,600 for intermediate level; and $2,800 for terminal year level. The annual stipend for doctoral fellowships is $6,500.

Allowances for tuition, fees, dependency and limited travel will also be provided in both programs.

For further information and application materials contact the Fellowship Office, National Research Council, 2101 Constitution Ave., N.W., Washington, D.C.

This year, the project is emphasizing two areas. The Bilingual Program is especially designed to help Chicano students communicate more effectively.

Education students interested in a second language are working in inner-city areas helping in this program.

Another area, Block, is designed for education students to help in tutoring students who need help in communicating more effectively.

"At Phoenix Union High, we have 16 people who spend no fewer than nine hours a week as aides in teaching in these areas," said Dr. Leroy Griffith, professor of education.

"In addition, these students attend a seminar on campus once a week, discussing what has taken place over the previous week," he said.

Students interested in participating in the Pilot Project should contact Dr. Griffith, in Farmer building 409.

Part time jobs available for interested students

Students and former University graduates looking for part time employment should contact W. S. Harris, assistant director of Student Part Time in ASB 102.

Employment on campus and in the Tempe, Mesa, Scottsdale, and Phoenix areas is available.

Interested students should check the available jobs posted on the bulletin boards before applying.

More than 3,000 jobs were listed with the office last year, with hourly rates ranging from $1.35 to $5 an hour.

Students interested in teaching in Australia should register with the Career Services office in ASB 201-G for interviews Oct. 14-15.

A recruiter from the Department of Education in New South Wales, Australia will visit the University to interview prospective teachers. This will mark the first time a recruiter has come here from Australia, according to Dr. Robert Menke, Career Services director.

Dr. Menke said the Australian Department of Education is looking primarily for secondary education teachers. Candidates must have completed their student teaching and be ready to teach by February 1971, he said.

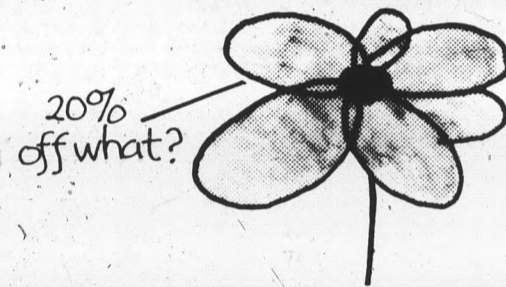

Swim tryouts

Try-outs for the University's synchronized swimming group, Naiads, will be held tomorrow and Oct. 7 at 7 p.m.

The University pool will be open at 6:30 p.m. for practice and stunt instruction.

Spagnola paces big Devil win

By BARNEY HUTCHINSON
Sports Editor

There is no common statistic used to demonstrate the special effectiveness of Joe Spagnola, the Arizona State quarterback.

In such situations, a statistic has to be created and the results show Spagnola to be a great third-down quarterback.

Spagnola demonstrated his third-down talents to the hilt Saturday night as the Sun Devils stopped Kansas State 35-13 before a record crowd of 50,255.

The senior from Naples, Italy, via Paterson, N.J., broke the school's career total offense record of 3,285 yards along the way. But it was his ability to sustain football drives that helped his team to one of the school's more prestigious wins.

Spagnola guided his team to first downs from eight third-down situations. His offensive unit failed on eight other third-down plays but Spagnola managed to pick up the first down on a following fourth-down in one instance.

And considering that on an average drive of 80 yards, a quarterback with a good offense is faced with only two or three third-downers, Spagnola came through in fine shape.

When the third-down pressure was on, Spagnola managed to fire two touchdown passes and run for a third. He plunged from one yard for ASU's first score late in the first half.

That Dickey did not play

The Devils followed less than three minutes later with a Spagnola-to-J.D. Hill pass for 27 yards and a touchdown. The play was set up on a third-down Bobby Thomas draw play of 21 yards.

Spag's third-down TD tosses went to Calvin Demery for 22 yards and Ed Beverly for nine. Both came in the third quarter and made the score 26-0.

In the eight successful third-down plays, Spagnola passed five times, gave to Thomas once and kept on the option twice to gain the necessary yardage.

All totaled, Spagnola completed 19 of 31 for 253 yards and was the team's second leading rusher with 47 yards in 11 carries. Thomas paced all ground-gainers with 134 yards in 23 tries.

Demery (5 receptions for 94 yards), Beverly (6 for 65) and Hill (5 for 76) led the way receiving.

The publicized duel between Spagnola and K-State great Lynn Dickey never materialized as Coach Vince Gibson elected to keep Dickey out of the contest for all but field goal and extra point holding duties.

"Man we really wanted to stick him," fumed a rather hot Richard Gray after Saturday night's 35-13 ASU win over Kansas State.

"All week we were getting ready for that guy (K-State quarterback Lynn Dickey) and when he didn't play it burned me. We won though, didn't we?" said the defensive tackle.

The Sun Devils certainly did win, as the much talked about Wildcat offense sputtered and the equally fabled K-State defense succumbed to the inevitable—Sun Devil speed.

As in the Colorado State win, Joe Spagnola was in complete command. The senior signal caller directed a balanced offense that rolled up an impressive 563 yards.

Spagnola said, "We were so psyched up for this game we couldn't lose. It was the biggest ASU win since I've been here."

"We had a little trouble in the first quarter because they were jamming up on our inside game so we just went wide and you saw the results."

A defense that started the season vastly underrated came on again to do a spectacular job. The architect of that defense, coach Larry Kentera, said, "We felt we had some surprises for them and our guys were really up. We were on tonight. We may be a little green, but we are picking up experience with each game and we will be very tough, let me tell you."

Calvin Demery, who twisted his knee and may have possible cartilage damage, snared six Spagnola aeriels for 94 yards and a touchdown. The junior-said, "They were zoning us all night and Joe just told me to hook into their open spaces, that's all I did. If we are not in the ratings this week, those people (pollsters) have got to be screwy."

On many of Bobby Thomas' runs, the men who sprung him were guards Ken Coyle or Gary Venturo. Coyle said, "They were slanting into our plays so we had to adjust to them. But once we did Thomas and Buchanan really went. They didn't get to Spags all night."

"I'd just like to give the Big Eight a great big welcome to Sun Devil country."

TRAMPLED — Leading ground gainer Bobby Thomas (23) of ASU is brought down by a K-State defenseman. Thomas picked up 134 yards during the game. Tom Manheim

Upsets abound

Two Western Athletic Conference upsets and a non-league scare highlighted action in the second week of the 1970 football season.

The Texas-El Paso Miners blanked Brigham Young University 17-0 and New Mexico made its first season win a big one knocking off WAC contender Utah 34-28 while an Arizona team had to rally for a 30-29 win over non-conference San Jose State.

In other action, Wyoming coughed up five last period touchdowns in losing to Utah State 42-29 and Iowa State toppled Colorado State 37-6.

Three Lobo backs, Fred Henry (208 yards), Sam Scarber (139) and Nate McCall (119) all topped the 100-yard rushing plateau. Scarber scored two TDs and Henry one. Lobo leader Rocky Long also found the endzone once.
