After alleged power play

Senate approves members

The ASASU Senate Thursday took up matters described by Bob Kenison, business senator, as "a typical power play between the Speaker and the Senators."

The alleged power play started with the Rules and Membership Committee recommendation that Josephine Way fill the liberal arts vacancy.

Pat Brennan, the lone TROG member in the Senate, said John Morgan, also of TROG, had applied for the position in October or November and had not yet been interviewed by the Rules and Membership Committee.

Walt Kendall, committee chairman, said this was "not a premeditated move." There were eight to ten applications for the seat and the committee interviewed five applicants.

The rest of the applications, including Morgan's were held by the Speaker

Wayne Lindquist, first vice president.

Morgan said he was interviewed by Lindquist, who asked him to help with the restructuring of the ASASU Executive offices.

"If he wanted me to work with him why did he put my application on hold," Morgan said.

Jim Witherspoon, engineering senator, said the Senate passed a bill requiring Lindquist to submit all applications to the Rules and Membership Committee within one week of receiving them.

"I think everyone who has an application in should at least be given the courtesy of being brought before the Rules and Membership Committee," Witherspoon said.

Brennan moved that the motion to appoint Way be tabled until Morgan could be interviewed. Lindquist said Way's appointment had to be voted on before any other action could be taken. The Senate voted to approve Way's application.

Further "power play" activities surrounded the attempt by Lindquist to fill the vacancy engineering seat.

Witherspoon was appointed by the Rules and Membership Committee to present a motion referring the selection of an appointee to the engineering college council.

Phil Seplow, committee member, said Lindquist originally wanted John Holcomb to fill the vacancy. He attempted to appoint Holcomb directly to the Senate, bypassing the committee, but was stopped by a senate vote directing the application to the committee.

Holcomb withdrew his application after being interviewed by the committee, saying the committee was unfair to him and to itself.

The committee later voted to appoint Halle Stevens. No action was taken on the appointment, and Lindquist appointed Dave Sepper, a freshman.

Kenison said he was told Lindquist did not want Stevens in the Senate because he had been too negative as a Senator the previous year.

At the Senate meeting Thursday, Lindquist said he did not feel able to appoint Stevens because Stevens would graduate at the end of this semester.

The Rules and Membership Committee selected Stevens over Sepper because Stevens had been a Senator and was at one time president of the engineering college council.

With the allocation of $180,000 in student activity fees in the Senate this Thursday, some committee members felt Stevens would be in a better position to represent the engineering students,

ASASU ELECTIONS ★ REPORT

Court rules today on candidacy

By JOHN BANASZEWSKI
Staff Writer

The ASASU Supreme Court will render a judgment today on John Morgan's bid for multiple candidacy in the upcoming student government elections. The court was originally scheduled to discuss the issue last Friday.

The court accepted a plea for

Petitions due

Petitions for nomination for ASASU and AWS offices are due today at or before 4 p.m., according to Manuel Figueroa, election coordinator.

Petitions are to be turned in at MU 222.

delay by the TROG member on the grounds that he was unaware of ASASU's argument against him and consequently could not formulate a written defense for Friday's hearing.

Morgan said the first time he saw a copy of the plaintiff's brief was at the Supreme Court's hearing Friday. Manuel Figueroa, administrative vice president and this year's elections coordinator, said he mailed a copy of the brief to Morgan last Monday.

Regardless, since Morgan did not see the brief he said he couldn't work up a written defense. Consequently, the Supreme Court gave Morgan until 4 p.m. yesterday to file such a memorandum.

The high court actually met last night about 9:30 p.m. to decide the matter. Since the plaintiffs in the case, ASASU, and the defendant, Morgan, have waived the right to oral argument the court said a decision will be handed down by 4 p.m. today.

That time is also the deadline for prospective candidates for ASASU offices to turn in petitions.

Wilson picks assistant to check vote results

ASASU President Mark Wilson yesterday designated Steve Kirby, assistant to the president, as his representative in the counting and validating of ballots cast in the spring election.

Wilson said a conflict of interests would prevent his own involvement in the election.

"As I am actively involved in the candidacy of Mr. William 'Moe' Mosley for the ASASU Presidency, it would be detrimental to the integrity of the elections for me to act in such a capacity," he said.

Wilson said he will fulfill his duty to make the announcement of the official results after the election.

"This binds only myself, and in no way effects actions taken by future ASASU presidents," he said.

On accreditation

Journalism faces test

By BARRY HOCHFELDER
Staff Writer

The mass communications department will face a journalism accrediting committee for the first time Wednesday and Thursday.

The American Council on Education For Journalism (ACEJ) will interview students and staff and examine facilities before deciding whether to accredit the journalism section of the department, said Dr. Joe Milner, department chairman.

The department has not applied for accreditation before because there had been no real pressure to do so, said Donald Brown, professor of mass communications and former acting department chairman.

"I wanted to wait until I felt our program was strong enough to win accreditation," Brown said.

Departmental enrollment has about tripled since 1963, Brown said.

Accreditation offers many advantages to the school Milner said.

There are scholarships available for the department, and other advantages and opportunities come up from time to time, he said.

He said organizations that want to deal with journalism schools and students prefer to work with top departments, and ACEJ accreditation is a sign of quality.

"This is the only organization that accredits communication schools and departments," Milner said.

The department should win accreditation, Milner said.

"We know our strong and weak points," he said. The new Mass Communication building opening this summer is an advantage, along with an excellent faculty and curriculum, Milner said.

He said a weak point is a high student to faculty ratio. The department has a 57 to 1 ratio while the rest of the University has a 27-to-1 ratio, Milner said.

The accrediting team will consist of 3 voting members. Two of them are academicians and one a professional journalist, Sylvan Meyer, editor of the "Miami (Fla.) News," Milner said.

He said results of the survey won't be known for about six weeks.

said Liberal Arts Senator Rand Dee Bowerman.

"We thought he could use his engineering expertise," said Kenison.

Seplow said "It was just on principle that we wanted Stevens." If Sepper wants to be in the Senate, he can run for next year."

When you try to override the committee ruling you get into the issue of personalities, and people get hurt, Seplow said.

"Holcomb was embarrassed, Sepper was embarrassed, and Stevens could be traumatized," he said.

The Senate decided, after much debate, to refer the entire matter to the engineering college council. Witherspoon said the chairman "moved to fully investigate the matter and vote at a later date. In other words, they don't want to make a decision."

Pollock speaks today at ASU's Great Hall

Jerry Pollock, the Democratic candidate for governor in an anticipated recall election, will be speaking at ASU's Great Hall today at 11 a.m.

Pollock, co-sponsored by the Law Students Alliance, the Student Bar Association and Women in Law, will talk about his chances in the special election and cover topics dealing with public interest research.

Pollock completed a 1,000 mile walk around Arizona Sunday.

The ASU Spirit Squad tryouts have been rescheduled for the week of March 26. They were originally scheduled to begin yesterday.

The change was necessary because many of the personnel involved with conducting and competing in the Spirit Squad tryouts will be attending the ASU-UCLA basketball game at the Far West NCAA Regionals this Thursday, according to Allan Frazier, ASASU assistant executive manager.

Applications will be accepted until noon, March 27. Information and applications are available at the MU Information Desk, MU 222, residence hall desks and at the EOP offices.

Lesley Ronson Morgan

ASASU election coordinator, Manuel Figueroa, has filed a petition in the ASASU Supreme Court asking it to declare "no person may run for or hold more than one ASASU or AWS office simultaneously."

Why?

For an ideal reason like protecting students from powermongers?

No.

Because ASASU officials do not like John Morgan, a member of TROG, who just happens to be running for all four top ASASU offices.

Morgan plans, if elected, to set up a parliamentary form of government. A cabinet would be chosen by the Student Senate. Control, then, would not be in the executive branch, but in the legislative. So supposedly Morgan would not horde the power.

But, they will say, in the future someone could win all four positions and horde the power.

Fine. Make a ruling on it then. Not now.

In the ASASU Constitution there is nothing which says a person cannot run for all four offices. In places it reads, "The four ASASU officers..." But it does not say there has to be four ASASU officers. It assumes there shall be four officers. There is nothing which prohibits a multi-candidate.

Student government in its present form, has neither student support, trust nor interest. The size of election turnouts and students' lack of knowledge about ASASU officers illustrate this ennui.

Students don't know how student government works, who's in it or what they're doing. The State Press bombards them with information about ASASU, but the articles go unread. The information is offered, it is just ignored.

Perhaps a new and different form of government might get some action for the students and thus secure their interest. Anything is worth a try.

Present ASASU officers are against John Morgan because of his attitude toward them, the students and the administration. They consider it a "bad" attitude.

He is proposing something new and different which just might (shudder) work. Perhaps that is why present ASASU officers are afraid.

Would they be petitioning the court, if someone they liked were trying this revolutionary action?

Senate maturity

Last Thursday a significant portion of the Senate demonstrated itself not only incompetent to handle even trite legislation but incompetent to act as even a slightly mature group of human beings.

One particular committee chairman was asked to give his committee report. Physically incapable of speaking — probably due to the excitement from all the attention — he grabbed his front teeth saying he couldn't talk, ha ha ha.

Spurred on by the occasional chuckle he received, the gentleman managed to enunciate a few words on the activities of his committee.

The committee had come, at long last, to a decision on a very important matter. The Student Affairs Committee would retain its title — the committee liked the sensuous feeling the name gave them, he said.

In all fairness to the senator, it should be pointed out that he is not the only person to act in a trite and immature manner in the Senate. His actions are merely some of the most obnoxious.

Other Senate members stand frequently to pontificate on vital legislative action for extended periods of time. The fact that no one listens does not disturb them.

The Senate is also blessed with members who run around making the asinine "Hi, how are you" cliché even more asinine.

As in any political body, there are good people in the Senate. It's only that the bad people are so obviously and continuously bad that no attention can be diverted to the Senate's occasionally worthwhile activities.

MECHA officials take undue credit

Editor:

Regarding Mr. Danny Ortega's comment in the State Press article "Chicano students tour University, ponder future," (March 9) "We, as a chicano organization (MECHA), feel an obligation to our brothers in the high schools... We feel the University is not maximizing its recruitment efforts and we hope this program can serve as an example in the recruitment of chicanos students."

It would seem that Mr. Ortega's pompous and fatuous chest beating could stand a little clarification, for though he would lead everyone to believe that the high school students' presence here last Thursday was due solely to the magnanimity of the MECHA group, Mr. Ortega failed to note the small fact that it was Associated Students that footed the bill.

Furthermore, the inference made by Mr. Ronnie Martinez in the same article that this worthwhile program has been in existence for the last three years due to MECHA's sponsorship is a laughable absurdity. The program in fact was conceived, funded, and administered solely by Associated Students.

Mr. Ortega and his rather over-zealous clan should perhaps find other ways to get publicity, for this type of conduct is nothing more than cheap soap box theatrics. Give that man a cigar and send him home before he backslaps himself to death.

Student praises Kilgore's action

Editor:

If I should ever get the chance to meet the former Senator Jeff Kilgore, I should like to shake!

his hand. Not often do you find a student government official with enough integrity to realize the 'hopelessness' of the organization. Last year, I worked in ASASU in a very minor capacity in which part of the program was a general pre-evaluation of ASASU and other student governments across the country. It took our committee only about two weeks to come to the same conclusion as Sen. Kilgore, and being sensible young men and women we took a similar course of action.

I would also agree with him on returning the $180,000 to the students; if I had my $9.50 back, I would give some of it to Intramurals and buy comic books with the rest (putting my hard-earned money to better use).

But I can't agree with him on the Senate being inactive, why last year they provided some of the best entertainment of the year. I mean to say in all seriousness, that some of their shows were really funny, in fact I would have paid to see a couple of them!

If more students really knew how some of their things were, I'm sure the gallery would be filled at every meeting.

Review method covers paucity

Editor:

Concerning the March 8 Jose Catalan opera review:

The reviewer has become infatuated with the current trend in reviewing by indulging in sarcastic little snips at whatever he dislikes. The trend originated with certain reviewers who wanted to camouflage the fact that they have no particular expertise in those parts of a production they wish to attack.

In this instance Mr. Catalan offers no evidence that he knows just why he makes the criticisms he does, even the positive ones. For instance, I wonder how he might define his euphistic phrase, "a touch of the Metropolitan Opera?" Can he really differentiate such a quality from, say, a touch of the Seattle Opera, or even a touch of the Oshkosh Opera?

At the risk of disillusioning him, I must inform Mr. Catalan that all stage sets are built as cheaply as possible. Some are simply more complex or ornate than others. Rather than approach the subject on the level of interpretive design, he must limit himself to choosing between "pretty" and "not pretty," because those are the only distinctions he can detect.

Mr. Catalan seems similarly limited in his perception of staging and acting techniques. There is no unwritten law that requires a singer to be eternally bathed in light. An informed criticism might concern itself with examining the use of shadow stylistically, rather than arbitrarily. Of this, Mr. Catalan is incapable.

Mr. Catalan was correct in his criticism of Paul Yoder. Mr. Yoder has seen the light, and to play the title role in "The Bear," he has demanded that he be furnished with a bear costume. There is no evidence in Mr. Catalan's comments that he went any further in researching the work than reading the program.

I must say I admire Mr. Catalan. It takes more courage than I could find in myself to talk so bitingly of an art form about which one knows so little

Despite cutbacks

Veteran funds adequate

By BILL ROSS
Staff Writer

Although the Nixon Administration has impounded a $25 million appropriation, earmarked for university veteran's organizations, ASU will not be adversely affected, says Loren Corsberg, director of the Veteran's Special Services Program.

"We have adequate funding now," Corsberg said. "Our office is operating on a $100,000 grant from the Office of Education, and will apply for refunding next October."

An amendment attached to the Higher Education Act by Alan Cranston, D-Calif., provided for $25 million to be distributed among colleges and universities which increased their enrollment of veterans by 10 per cent during the following semester, Corsberg said.

The amendment allocated a payment of $300 per semester per veteran to be paid to these schools, he said.

Half was to be spent on the university's academic programs and the other half was to go to the schools' veteran's organizations.

"Probably, as a part of the Administration's overall economic cutbacks, these funds were never released by the Office of Management and Budget. The Cranston Amendment wasn't viable anyway. ASU has 3,000 veterans, so it would have received $900,000, yet only $25 million was allocated, and 2,000 schools qualify for the funds," he said.

One solution to the problem would be for Congress to appropriate about $200 million more, said Corsberg.

Sen. Vance Hartke, D-Ind, is already writing a bill providing for a more comprehensive program of aid to veterans, he said.

"If we had more money, we could consider the development of more veteran's services and we could expand some existing programs," Corsberg said.

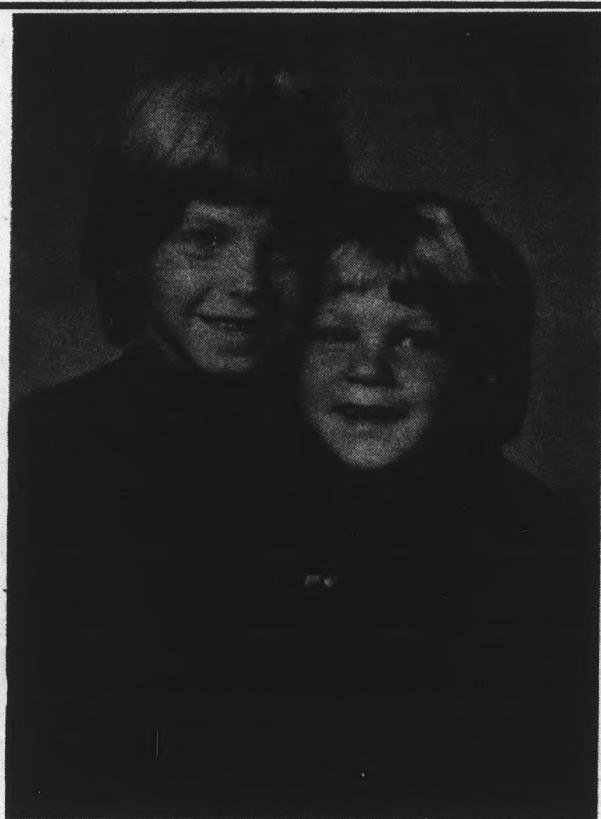

"First, we could hire more counselors to help veterans understand the GI Bill, home loans, and disability payments. We now have seven counselors on our staff, but we could use four more."

A short term revolving loan fund for veterans might also be set up if the government provided more funds, he said.

"We would also like to set up a co-op dorm for veterans, and start a job assistance program," he said.

"We try to help the veteran's entire family and would like to set up a day care center for his children," Corsberg said.

Even if the money provided by the Cranston Amendment is released, it would be sliced up among the various schools so that each one would get far less than $300. "So we wouldn't probably be able to start any of these programs in the foreseeable future anyway."

Ball team sweeps weekend contests

Arizona State's baseball team last weekend extended its current winning streak to nine and its streak over Wyoming to 51.

ASU swept a pair from Chapman College, 6-1 and 13-1 and took its two encounters with Wyoming, 7-4 and 15-5.

The Devils' record is 18-2 going into this week's schedule which includes the California Angels tonight in an exhibition game and USC in a three game set starting on Thursday.

The Devils made it 50 in a row against Wyoming Friday afternoon as errors contributed to the Cowboy downfall.

The Cowboys jumped to a 3-0 lead but that was erased by a two-run fourth inning by ASU and a solo homerun by Dennis Kendrick in the fifth. The Devils picked up three more runs in the seventh on two errors.

Doug Slocum got his fourth win of the year in relief.

Eddie Bane struck out 10 in recording his fourth win of the year against Chapman Friday night, 6-1. He gave up six hits as ASU collected eight. ASU scored three times in the third inning on Clay Westlake's double which followed singles by Tom Sain, Bill Berger, Bump Wills, and Kendrick.

ASU found the going a bit easier in Saturday's games, pounding out 36 hits and scoring 28 times in a sweep over Wyoming and Chapman.

Dick Harris led the Devils in the first game knocking in four runs with a two-run homer and a single. Jim Umberger recorded his second win against one loss.

In the second game, Tommy Sain had four hits and five runs batted in as ASU unleashed a 22-hit attack. Harris, Mike Rawlings and Gary Andrews each had three hits, including a solo homer by Rawlings in the third and a three run shot by Andrews in the seventh.

ASU is still keeping up with its record setting pace of last year when it was 64-6. At this time last year the Devils were 19-1 compared to this year's 18-2 record.

Winkles returns

Devils take on Angels

By LEE PELEKODAS

Arizona State had an easy day Saturday as the Chapman College baseball coach literally waved the white flag in surrender to shorten a scheduled nine inning game to seven. The Devils won 13-1.

But ASU won't be able to count on surrenders from this week's foes, as the Devils face Bobby Winkles and the California Angels tonight and kick off a three game series with NCAA champion USC on Thursday.

Winkles, Ole No. 1 at ASU for 13 years, is now the head man for the Angels. Actually, Winkles had charge of the club last spring for one night. That was the night ASU defeated the Angels 6-5 in 11 innings.

So "Winks" will be out to even his record to 1-1 against ASU and probably won't pull any punches.

In last year's contest, Winkles elected to go with Andy Messersmith on the mound, at the time the Angels' No. 1 starter.

ASU coach Jim Brock will probably use three pitchers, most likely those who have a chance to sign at the end of the season.

"You want to give those eligible for the draft a chance to pitch against the major league clubs," Brock said.

If he elects to stick with this theory, Brock will probably throw Eddie Bane, Jim Otten and possibly Doug Slocum or Dale Hrovat.

Face UCLA next

Devils win first

By JIM FINN

ASU muscled into the second round of the NCAA Western Regional Playoffs Saturday with a 103-78 blasting of Oklahoma City University in a first round contest at Logan, Utah.

The Sun Devils face six-time defending national champions UCLA at 9:10 Thursday night on the Bruins' home court in Pauley Pavilion.

The Sun Devils were impressive in their first round triumph, overpowering Oklahoma City with their inside strength, bench depth and their most effective fast-break of the season.

Long Beach State coach Jerry Tarkanian, watching the Sun Devils finish off the Chieftans after his own team had beaten Weber State, was especially impressed with the ASU performance.

"They have good depth and size, but I didn't think they would be beating them (OCU) this handily," Tarkanian said. "This is not a bad team they're beating here."

The Oklahomans stayed close through the first half behind the scoring of team leaders Marvin Rich and Ozie Edwards, trailing the Devils at intermission 46-43.

The ASU rebounders established themselves in the second period however, and ignited the fast break which moved the Sun Devils out to a 13-point lead with 14 minutes left in the game.

"That first half was horrible," said Mike Contreras, who led the Sun Devils with 21 points. "In the second half we just came out and started playing like a team. In the first half we weren't getting the rebounds."

Contreras said the Oklahoma City guards just failed to fall back on defense in the second period, opening up the fast break.

"Those little guys they had out there just couldn't do anything. They were a two-man team," Contreras said.

Edwards and Rich, Oklahoma's scoring machines, combined for 47 points with Edwards gunning in 31. The Chieftan bombers made only 19 of 50 shots however, and the Oklahomans finished with a 33 per cent field goal average.

The Sun Devils got top point production from the backcourt with Contreras scoring 21 points, Jim Owens 16 points and Rudy White 19. White also picked off six rebounds and handed out five assists in his strongest performance this season.

Ron Kennedy and Jack Schrader added 10 points each, Mark Wasley scored 8 and James Brown and Gary Jackson each scored 7 points for the Sun Devils.

ASU tennis team wins, loses

ASU's tennis team won a meet and suffered a loss over the weekend. ASU lost to Brigham Young 7-2, Friday, and defeated Iowa 6-3, Sunday, on the ASU courts.

Playing at number one singles for ASU, Dave Kanter won both his weekend matches. Kanter defeated BYU's Jon Bennett 6-2, 6-0 and Iowa's Bruce Nagel 5-7, 6-0, 6-3.

John Byron lost his match to BYU's Chris De Graff, but defeated Iowa's Rod Kubat at number two singles.

Barry Young, playing at number three singles for the Sun Devils, lost to Bruce Kleege of BYU, but defeated Iowa's Steve Dickinson.

Bill Ray of ASU split his matches against BYU and Iowa, winning against Jim Robbins of BYU and losing to Ian Phillips of Iowa in the number four singles position.

Malone sparks spring game

The Maroon beat the Gold in the annual spring football game Saturday at Sun Devil Stadium, 15-13.

Kory Schuknecht quarterbacked the Maroon squad to the win, hitting on eight of 19 passes for 121 yards.

Benny Malone scored two touchdowns for the Maroon. He had 144 yards in 25 carries while teammate Woody Green picked up 53 yards on 19 carries.

Fred Mortensen called signals for the Gold team, completing 13 of 32 passes for 218 yards.

ASU coach Frank Kush was encouraged by the performance of sophomores Mark Lovett, who gained 78 yards in 18 carries, and Ron Cuie, who picked up 53 yards in 13 carries.

Mike Haynes, another sophomore played the entire game on defense and offense. He caught four passes for 117 yards.

Kush said he doesn't have enough depth on the offensive squad, especially at quarterback and the receiving positions.

ASU thinclads set records

The Sun Devil track team displayed its 1973 talent by winning eight of 16 events at the annual Arizona Relays last Saturday at the newly resurfaced Joe Selleh track.

Meet records were established by ASU runners in the 440, 880, mile and two-mile relays.

In the 440 relay, the team of Charlie Wells, Carl McCullough, Phil Cheuning, and Maurice Peoples covered the oval in 40.3 seconds, beating the old record of 40.9, set by UofA in 1967.

McCullough, Peoples, John Koeppen and Ray Manning combined to clock 1:24.0 for the half-mile distance, erasing the

Gymnasts win final contest

ASU's gymnastics team closed out its regular season with a 158.85-153.80 win against Brigham Young Saturday in Sun Devil gym.

The Sun Devils finished the season with a 7-5 record.

ASU swept firsts in every event against BYU. Gary Alexander took first in floor exercise with a 9.45 (on 10 point scale); L. J. Larson took first on side horse with a 9.5; Greg Bian took first on rings with a 9.3; Bian and Alexander tied for first on parallel bars with an 8.95 score; Jim Furcini took first on high bar with a 9.45 and Alexander won all-around honors with a 49.35.

old mark set 10 years ago by a second.

ASU showed strength in the distances when Ed Zuck, Steve Pebler, Larry Lawson, and Mark Rafferty teamed to clock 7:35.5 in the two-mile, beating the old record set by ASU in 1968 by 4.2 seconds.

The Sun Devils' best performance came in the mile relay. Led by McCullough's 46.8 anchor leg, the Devil team of Manning, Gary Lewis, Peoples and McCullough sped to a 3:11.0, breaking the old record set by ASU in 1963 by 1.4 seconds.

ASU competed against UofA and NAU in the university division. No team scores were kept.

The Sun Devils won the title with a 10-4 record after being picked in preseason to finish last.

Wulk is in his 16th season at ASU with a 243-181 record. His college career mark is 332-251.

Wulk's ASU teams won conference championships in his first three seasons and in '62 and '63. The 1962 team was ranked third in the nation as it rolled up a 26-3 record.

That '62 team gave Wulk the distinction of being the last coach to beat UCLA's John Wooden in post-season play as they beat the Bruins in the NCAA playoffs.

Wulk was passed over in voting for District 7 Coach of the Year honors this season with Arizona's first-year coach Fred Snowden winning that honor.

Court stops multi-candidate

By JOHN BANASZEWSKI
Staff Writer

ASASU ELECTIONS ★ REPORT

The ASASU Supreme Court yesterday ruled against John Morgan's bid for multiple candidacy in the upcoming student government elections.

In a unanimous decision, the high court said:

"The Supreme Court agrees with TROG's contention that there is nothing in the Statutes of ASASU that prohibits anyone from seeking multiple candidacy but the court interprets the statutes as meaning one person may not run for more than once office simultaneously."

Morgan argued there was nothing in the ASASU constitution prohibiting a person from running for more than one office.

ASASU contended the legislative intent or the spirit of the constitution would be violated if one man rather than four held the executive officers positions.

"The case was railroaded in an ASASU court. The court, obviously, had nothing to base its decision on and was acting simply as a tool of vested interests," Morgan said.

He said those interests lay with Mark Wilson, ASASU president, because "Wilson was elected by 6 per cent of the student body and he appointed this court, and I can't see this one court deciding who can run.

"If I was doing something wrong, then I would have been shafted at the polls," Morgan said.

The TROG member said the Supreme Court's written decision was self-contradictory because it said there was nothing specifically in the statutes prohibiting Morgan's bid for multiple candidacy, but the court then said there was something disallowing it.

Manuel Figueroa, ASASU administrative vice president and this year's elections coordinator, said the intangible prohibiting Morgan's multiple candidacy was the spirit of the ASASU constitution.

Figueroa agreed there was nothing specifically laid down in the constitution, the Code of Conduct or the statutes which specifically prohibited a person from seeking more than one office, but said the legislative intent of those articles made it clear that one person could hold only one office.

None of the Supreme Court judges who ruled in the case were available for comment.

Morgan only can run for one office now. He would not say which office that would be.

Collision injures student

Vicki Lou Blair, ASU junior, was injured and taken to Mesa Southside Hospital yesterday as a result of a two car collision at the intersection of Apache Boulevard and College Avenue.

Blair, driving a 1970 Chevrolet, and turning left onto College Avenue, was struck by a 1963 Buick driven by Steve Green of 935 S. 59 St.

Green, who was not injured, said he was driving west on Apache when Blair's car, heading east on the same road, turned quickly in front of his car at the intersection of Apache and College.

He said he could not have avoided hitting her car.

A Mesa Southside spokesman said Blair was treated in the emergency room and released.

Ramon Elias, an ASU senior who was driving the car in front of Green and witnessed the accident, said, "She turned right in front of him."

Elias said he did not know how fast he was going but that he was sure the light was green.

Blair was cited for failure to yield when turning left at an intersection according to Tempe police.

According to Jay Lenz, another witness, when Green hit Blair her car spun two or three times before coming to rest.

Blair's head struck the passenger side of the windshield at the impact. The accident caved in the right side of her car.

Recall candidate walks to build voting interest

By TED WILLIAMSON

Staff Writer

Jerry Pollock, recall candidate for Governor of Arizona, said yesterday recall is not as unpopular as it was when he began his walk through Arizona in December.

"Recall is not the anathema it was when the campaign began," he said. "In the beginning the press made the recall unpopular. The idea that we should shake the castle at the very top was somehow supposed to be un-American, I guess."

Pollock spoke to about 100 students at 11 a.m. yesterday in the Great Hall of the College of Law. His 50-minute talk was followed by a 20-minute question and answer session.

Pollock said he opposes rapid expansion of the Arizona population.

"I would be inclined to adopt the view of Governor McCall of Oregon in discouraging immigration until we improve conditions for those who are already here," he said.

"Phoenix is already megalopolis enough. We have a community of a million people, possibly the largest in the nation without mass transit," he said, pausing, and added, "or a meaningful newspaper."

Pollock said the programs and policies of Governor Williams are "something we can't afford to keep until 1975."

"He (Williams) returns a half million dollars a year to federal government in welfare money while we're in need of welfare programs," Pollock said.

"Arizona is the only state without medicare. The health care crisis deprives every segment of society of care."

One example of the crisis is Eloy, Arizona—a town of 8,000 people with only one doctor, he said.

Arizona can solve this health care crisis almost immediately by using federal funds available for welfare programs, he said. "The legislature wants to do it. The only thing holding it up is the governor."

He questioned Williams' choice of Wendon Shofstall for superintendent of education.

"Shofstall's public statements have been that the two greatest threats to the United States are the internal communist threat and public education. That's his (Williams') choice for superintendent of education."

"I don't think it's necessary to dwell on pollution and the governor," he said. "His reputation is well established nationally. This is a man who said, 'When I see smoke coming out of factories, I know men are working.' I could say the same thing about heads rolling from guillotines."

Parking reform urged

By BILL ROSS
Staff Writer

A resolution calling for an end to separate parking facilities for students, faculty and administrators on campus has been introduced in the Student Senate.

The resolution, introduced by Phil Seplow and Michael Kelly, Liberal Arts senators, proposes designated parking lots for the handicapped, utilities, workers, members of the press, visitors and construction crews be retained.

The resolution, if passed by the Senate, will be sent to administrators recommending those changes. The final decision would be made by administrators.

"The point of the resolution is not to punish anyone, but rather to put administrators, faculty and students on an equal footing," Seplow said.

"Desegregated parking would mean people could get spaces on a first-come, first-serve basis. While everyone would probably be able to find a parking space each day, those who arrived at ASU early would get a space nearer the center of campus," he said.

Currently, groups such as commuter freshmen are assigned parking lots far from their classes, Seplow said. Seplow said desegregated parking would mean freshmen could sometimes find spaces closer to their classes, and faculty members and administrators sometimes would have to walk a considerable distance.

The $5 annual fee for ASU parking privileges would not be eliminated under the provisions of the resolution. "The fee isn't unreasonable," Seplow said.

"The resolution is aimed at commuter students who often have trouble finding parking spaces and must park far from their classes," Seplow said.

"These people have been complaining a lot lately, and they have reason to be disturbed about the parking situation at ASU."

"This resolution seems like a very simple solution to ASU's parking problems, although I would much prefer everyone ride bikes or commute on a mass transit system," Seplow said.

"It is only a temporary solution until a much-needed elevated garage is built to accommodate the overflow of cars," he said.

There has been a request at the State Legislature for funds to build a garage, but no action has yet been taken, according to John Ellingson, director of planning and construction.

Law grad speaks on land schemes

Robert Blakey, an employe of the State Attorney General in the Consumer Protection Division, will speak on "Consumer Protection in Arizona" today in BA 401.

The 3 p.m. speech, sponsored by the ASU marketing club, will center on land development schemes and pyramid selling.

Blakey is a 1971 graduate of ASU's College of Law.

A joke

ASASU ELECTIONS ★ EDITORIAL

The decision was expected by those who pay any attention to such matters — the ASASU Supreme Court refused to allow TROG candidate John Morgan to run for four executive offices at once.

And, as expected, the ASASU establishment managed to block Morgan on the flimsiest of technicalities.

While the statutes do not specify only one office per candidate, in several paragraphs relating to other matters they mention "the four executive officers."

That, apparently, was enough for the court. But circumstance implies that there might have been more to the decision.

Whether the implication is true or false matters very little because politics are involved. In such instances people tend to distrust any evidence offered by the other side, no matter how truthful the evidence might be.

But, philosophizing aside, here's the point:

The ASASU justices were appointed by student president Mark Wilson. Wilson has said publicly he supports the presidential candidacy of Moe Mosley. And it was Wilson who encouraged Mosley to run in the first place.

While there is no proof of unfair influence on Wilson's part, it would be understandable for Morgan supporters to make the accusation.

And despite the denials of Wilson and his justices, many students will find it hard not to sympathize with Morgan.

In light of the court's decision and the fact that there is no route of appeal within ASASU, Morgan's statements about the court being a joke when it comes to impartiality will take on greater significance in the minds of many.

It would be unfair (not to mention impossible) to prohibit future ASASU presidents from becoming involved in the elections.

But the integrity of the court could be maintained if the power of justice appointment were given to an impartial group not connected with student government.

Whatever the solution, the fact remains that a court which doesn't enjoy student belief in its integrity is a joke.

Preschool vs. Cultural Affairs

Editor:

In regard to "Preschool fans grow worried:"

The main fallacy in your argument concerning funding for the Preschool vs. for the Cultural Affairs Board is that you do not take into consideration the vast educational benefits of the movie series, photography exhibits, SET productions, dance events, and poetry readings.

You are grossly misinformed in saying these programs solely provide amusement for the students. Anyone thinking that all students who go to hear Nikki Giovanni or James Merrill, take master dance classes from the Ririe-Woodbury professional dance company, participate in SET productions such as "You're a Good Man Charlie Brown," or watch such modern film classics as "If..." and "Kind of Hearts" is simply naive.

I agree that the preschool is a very necessary program but I do not think it is ASASU's duty to support an operation serving such a small percentage of the student body when such far-reaching programs as those provided by ASASU and the Cultural Affairs Board are being cut.

Ad may lead to trouble

Students consulting the classified ads in the State Press: Beware of the job in connection with the Phoenix Jaycee's.

The ad reads:

Good paying part time jobs. Reliable people wanted to work in Phoenix in connection with the Phoenix JC's. 4 hrs per day at $2.65 per hour plus incentive pay depending on capabilities. Evening work only 5-9. For interview call 263-5958 Mon.-Fri. 1-5 p.m.

I thought this sounded like a good opportunity for a college student to make some money working part time, so I answered the ad.

The man on the phone told me to report at the Phoenix Junior Chamber of Commerce Office at 4133 N. 7th Street.

When I arrived I was told the job was phone solicitation to raise funds for the JC's. It involved calling prepared lists of people and reading a prepared pitch to them.

The solicitation is being done by Specialists Inc. of Boise, Idaho. They are raising the funds for the JC's by selling plastic trash can liners.

The first thing the interviewer, Don Lyman, told me when I applied for the job was that the pay listed in the ad was a misprint. The actual pay is not $2.63 an hour but $2.61 an hour, he said. "We did not think anyone would quibble for two cents."

Then he handed me a packet of papers with the sales pitch, base pay, and bonus pay charts. The base pay sheet says employees are paid a salary of $62.50 a week.

So, not only is there a misprint, but the fact is that employees are paid a base salary. Pay is not computed on a per hour basis.

The sheet further shows the $62.50 per week base salary is $2.50 an hour. Another discrepancy. Simple mathematics proves that if one works the 26.5 hours per week required of him at $62.50 per week, he earns $2.35 per hour.

The ad said employees work 5 to 9 p.m. only.

When I applied, I was told I would be required to work from 5 p.m. to 9:30 p.m. "We did not think anyone would quibble over a half an hour," Lyman said.

Next I was told I would also be required to work Saturdays from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. But the ad specifically states the job involves evening work only.

Next, Lyman tried to explain the bonus program.

Employees are required to sell $650.00 worth of plastic bags before they can start earning bonuses. Once they start earning bonus money, Specialists Inc. holds back 5 per cent of it.

Lyman said this money is held out until a reserve of $50 is built up.

He said this is in case some of the orders are cancelled. He assured me I did not have to worry because they have only a 3 per cent cancellation rate.

Lyman said if one of the orders is cancelled, the cost of the bags would be deducted from the reserve. He said the employe would not have to pay as much as the normal customer.

When I asked him why he should have to pay for the bags at all, he said, "Because he has already been paid for the sale."

The fact is, if the employe had been paid, it would have been only the commission for the sale. He should not have to forfeit the total cost of the bags, only the commission.

He assured me that I was wrong and that it did not really matter too much because not very many people cancel.

I continued to protest saying that if someone cancelled an order, the bags were sold nevertheless. Lyman said, "Yes, that is true."

Lyman finally asked me if I still wanted to work for the company even though we could not clear up the discrepancy. I decided to stay and see if the rest of the job was as full of half-truths and discrepancies as the interview and training session.

The remainder of the evening was spent in constant repetition of the sales pitch to prospective customers.

If you are a student looking for a part time job, this is one to avoid.

ASU chapel promised new face

By GERRI FIEDLER

It might be said that the Danforth Chapel Refurbishment Committee's prayers are being answered.

At the request of Gilbert Cady, vice president for business affairs, University architect Warren Gill, visited the chapel Thursday and talked with a member of the committee about plans for remodeling the chapel.

"I wasn't aware that it needed refurbishing as badly as it does," Cady said. "Now that we have become aware of it, we're going to do the best we can. I don't know how much, but there will be funds available."

The chapel's organ is pock-marked with cigarette burns. The varnish on the altar rails has worn thin and the corners are gouged and splintered. The only seating to elevate readers and speakers is a wobbly kitchen stool. Two old oak chairs at the front of the chapel have soiled cushions with cotton popping out of the seams.

Lumpy carpet

"Come walk down the aisle like a bride," said committee member Dr. Willard Stevens, "so you can feel the effect of the lumpy carpet."

A simulated bride's promenade down the corrugated carpet feels like a rehearsal for a marriage at sea. Besides being wavy and stained, the carpet is holey (not meaning sacred).

There are no restrooms in the building. Visitors to the chapel, including nervous brides, have to use restroom facilities across the Mall in the library or the MU, or whatever nearby building is open.

The committee said the chapel also needs a vestibule, drinking fountains, arcadia doors opening to a prayer garden and roof repairs.

"I have to get the feel of the building," Gill said. "The objective is to give it a little more character make it a little nicer."

Gill is working with John Ellingson, director of planning and construction, in reviewing the building to determine what is feasible and estimate costs.

"If the need is there, then certainly there ought to be some improvement," Ellingson said.

Heart of the Mall

Danforth Chapel was located near the southern-most edge of the campus when it was built in 1947. Since then time and change have destined that the Chapel be nestled in the heart of the Mall.

"I think it's a quaint little spot," Leon Shell, committee member and dean of students, said. "When you sit in a wedding you hear the fountain splashing and the birds chirping."

"If the place were nicely refurbished, it would have even more use," he said.

Since September there have been 32 weddings at the chapel, two baptisms and three memorial services.

Approximately 25 religious groups, from Baha'i to Unitarian are members of the Student Inter-Faith Council which is based in the Danforth Chapel.

Counseling services go on every day from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m.

The Danforth Chapel Refurbishing Committee is enthusiastic about the administration's interest in improving the chapel facilities.

"People come here from all over the country — New York, Chicago, everywhere — for their sons' and daughters' weddings or funerals," Stevens said. "Because the Chapel is so strategically located, a lot of winter visitors stop to look at it. Its condition is a reflection on the whole University."

Faculty Senate endorses University bike routes

By KENT IRELAND

The Faculty Senate went on record Monday supporting bicycle routes for the University.

"Now that this has happened the ASASU committee will have permission to implement their bike path into action," said Owen Wollam, Student Policy Committee chairman.

The plan proposes routes on campus specifically for bikes. "The route will go through campus but restrict bikes through the main Mall for protection of pedestrians," Wollam said.

He said the Physical Plant and an ASASU committee have submitted plans for the bike routes.

Carleton Moore, Faculty Senate chairman, said the University of Southern California and other campuses have implemented bike paths on campus with good results.

ASU routes will be marked for bike riders and pedestrians, Moore said, but route markings are not planned.

In new business, the Faculty Senate Personnel Committee recommended upgrading the salary and title of department secretaries.

Nancy Abbot, College of Nursing senator, said, "Upgrading secretaries is essential in all departments because they have so many duties. This is a university problem," Abbot said.

The Senate also adopted a resolution which would enforce safety regulations in lab classes.

This resolution changes a phrase in the ASU catalog regarding students actions in class. The original phrase allows a professor to drop a student from a class due to conduct detrimental to other members of the class. The new phrase reads "conduct detrimental to himself or other members of the class."

We're interested in your mind.

We're working on advanced communications satellites, unique land and undersea vehicles and an extremely wide range of R & D programs in many technical fields. Over the years we have had more successful launches of our spacecraft than any other company—more than 300 launches. We've developed all the FBMs for this country. And we're still deeply involved in these projects.

All of these programs require a high level of mental ability and initiative. Graduates in Engineering, Physics or Mathematics who possess these traits are invited to contact their placement office for an interview appointment.

We will be on campus March 15, 1973.

| 20. San Francisco (22-4) | | 27 |

Also receiving votes: Alabama, Brigham Young, Oral Roberts, Louisville, Marshall, New Mexico, St. Joseph's, St. John's, South Carolina, Tennessee, Virginia Tech.

Long Beach State and San Francisco State, meeting in the opening game of tomorrow's NCAA playoffs at UCLA, are both rated in the AP Top 20. Long Beach, 25-2, is ranked third and San Francisco, 22-4, is number 20.

USC series begins

Tomorrow, Rod Dedaux brings his southern California Trojans to town for a three-game baseball series against the Sun Devils. The Trojans, NCAA champions for three consecutive years, are currently 12-0.

ASU coach Jim Brock has named Jim Otten (3-0) as the probable starter for the game tomorrow at 7:30 p.m. in Phoenix Municipal Stadium.

The exhibition game scheduled for last night between Arizona State and Bobby Winkles' California Angels was cancelled because of muddy conditions at Phoenix Municipal Stadium.

'If anybody can . . .' Devils say they can

By JIM FINN

UCLA hasn't lost a basketball game in two years, but the Sun Devils are confident they can break the Bruins' record 71-game winning streak Thursday in the second round of the NCAA playoffs.

"If anybody can beat 'em it's us," Mark Wasley said after the ASU win against Oklahoma City Saturday. "We're reaching our peak right now. We have momentum and we don't have anything to lose. We can go in there without any pressure on us."

ASU challenge

Wasley, a junior forward, said most teams play UCLA with a negative attitude and ASU's attitude is anything but negative.

"Last year the attitude of the team was sickening," Wasley said. "This year it's unbelievable. Everybody is working for everybody else, looking for the open shot, playing like a team. We're having fun this year. I'm confident we can beat UCLA."

night for ASU to pull the upset.

A hot-shooting night wouldn't be out of the ordinary for the Sun Devils since they set a WAC record for season field goal accuracy, hitting 50 per cent this year. The Devils destroyed Oklahoma City with 52.4 per cent field goal accuracy.

Contreras said the UCLA press could present some problems, but "we can just take our time bringing the ball down and break it."

He said the fast break will work against the Bruins, but the rebounding will determine whether the Sun Devils can get it moving. "If we get the rebounding like we did in the second half (against Oklahoma City) we can beat anybody," Contreras said.

No superstars

Contreras said he was expecting to play UCLA when he started in the ASU program, but he looked forward to the game more two years ago. "I thought we would win the conference two years ago," he said. "But we fouled up that year."

"I'd say the team attitude was really improved this year. We didn't have a superstar and it was a lot easier for coach Wulk to discipline the team and get us to do what he wanted," he said.

Season of firsts

The players are understandably proud of their accomplishments this season.

"What we've achieved this year has been fantastic," Wasley said. "We won for the first time in El Paso, we won for the first time at Wyoming, we set the WAC field goal record. Here we are, a team supposed to be last in a weak conference, and we're going after UCLA. Even if we would have lost to Oklahoma City, it would have been a fantastic season."

Archers win in Tucson

ASU archers dominated the University of Arizona Invitational meet in Tucson last week, winning the top spots in college men's and women's divisions.

Paul Schone took first place in the men's competition and Carol Jrums won top honors in the women's competition.

ASU archer Robert Nall took third place in the college division and qualified along with Schone for National Archery Association All-American nomination.

Jurns, Wendy Vance, Debbie Drye, Sheri Torrence, Ley Yountz and Terry Wilson, competing with the ASU women's team, qualified for All-American nominations with their scores.

Shooting for an upset

Senior guard Mike Contreras said the Sun Devils have a good chance against the Bruins, but it would take a hot-shooting

New peace director has history of commitment

By CLIF GLASGOW

A point is reached in some people's lives when concern becomes commitment. Such is the case with Nina Mohit, the 25-year-old director of Arizonans for Peace and former ASU student.

Mohit became director of the center when former director Joe Gerson left to join War Resisters International in London. She is also a part-time instructor at Scottsdale Community College.

Mohit sees her involvement with the peace community as a long and natural progression which began with her family life. Her father was involved with the original Anti-Defamation League.

She says her own activities began with the civil rights movement in the early 60s and expanded into women's and student's rights movements while attending college in New York.

Her interests moved from domestic social problems to political systems as she developed a focus on the Indochina situation which she saw as the most critical situation facing America.

Mohit came to ASU in 1970 and began work on her masters degree. She was a teaching assistant in the philosophy department. She also became involved with the Tempe Peace Center, serving on the steering committee and the anti-Honeywell campaign.

She said she made a transition from externalizing the guilt for the war to accepting a personal feeling of blame for allowing Vietnam to continue.

"Many people made the mistake of blaming Washington for the war and turning to Washington to end it, but the fault was essentially with the American people for allowing the war to happen in the first place," she said.

Mohit does not believe the Vietnam war is over. She displayed a want ad from a recent issue of the Arizona Republic which called for jet maintenance men for jobs in Vietnam. She said the United States is moving from "Vietnamization" to "civilianization."

Arizonans for Peace is in a stage of reorganization, she said and the transition from an anti-war organization to a peace organization is slow and difficult.

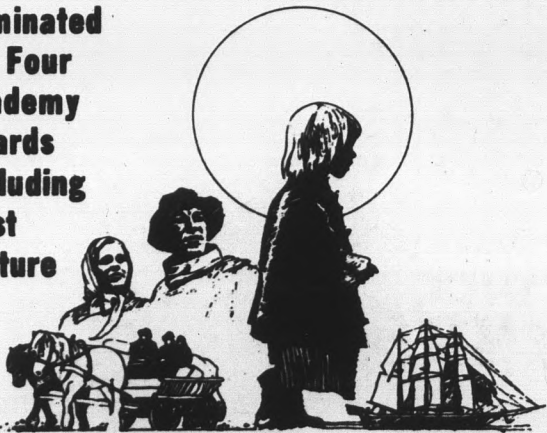

Mohit said, "There has been tremendous polarization throughout the country. In a way, I think it's good; it forces people to face situations and think about them."
