

Agnew resigns

Vice President Spiro Agnew resigned Wednesday.

Agnew pleaded no contest to one count of tax evasion in a federal court in Baltimore. U.S. District Court Judge Walter Hoffman said he considered the no contest plea an admission of guilt, and sentenced Agnew to three years probation without supervision and the maximum $10,000 fine.

Agnew had been under investigation for bribery, extortion and conspiracy as well as tax fraud. He said he was innocent of all other charges.

Atty. Gen. Elliot Richardson said the Justice Department agreed to the single count plea in an arrangement that included the vice president's resignation. Richardson personally asked Hoffman to spare Agnew a prison sentence.

President Nixon learned of Agnew's resignation at a meeting Tuesday night. Nixon said he accepted Agnew's resignation with "a sense of deep personal loss."

Agnew admitted that he received payments in 1967 which he failed to report for tax purposes. He denied that any of the payments influenced his execution of the public trust as Baltimore county executive, governor or as vice president.

The Justice Department filed and made public 40 pages of allegations compiled against Agnew in the investigation of kickbacks by contractors doing business with the state of Maryland.

"This evidence establishes a pattern of substantial cash payments to the defendant during the period when he served as governor of Maryland, in return for engineering contracts with the state," Richardson said.

He said there was also evidence of payments by engineering firms continuing into December, 1972. Agnew has been vice president since Jan. 20, 1969.

Agnew failed to account for $13,551.47 in taxes for 1967 according to the charge. He reported an income of $26,099 and taxes of $6,416. The charge said he had an income of $55,599, and owed $19,967.47.

Speaker of the House Carl Albert, a Democrat, will be next in line for vice-president until Nixon nominates a successor to Agnew. Within minutes of Agnew's resignation, extra capitol policemen were assigned to the corridor outside Albert's office.

Nelson: resignation 'encouraging'

Gary Nelson, Arizona attorney general, said the encouraging aspect about the Agnew resignation is the fact that the vice president is not above the law.

"Believe it or not, most of us who are elected or appointed to public office are just as honest as the rest of the people. But there is this syndrome that whenever somebody is called before the Bar of Justice who happens to be elected, he gets the headlines, and the people — 99 per cent who are working their ass off, are underpaid and wouldn't think of taking a dime for lunch — they suffer," said Nelson.

"I hope the Democrats . . . won't try to make this a Republican tragedy. It is one where all political systems can learn," said Nelson.

Nelson said "Sure it's reasonable as far as he is concerned. It's the death sentence as far as his public and personal career. The impact on him and his family — you might as well take them out and shoot them."

Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater said in a statement released by his office, "In effect he was tried and judged in a manner completely foreign to the proper pursuit of justice in the U.S., a manner which convicted him by headlines and newscasts based on leaks of official information, but before a single charge had been filed. I hope that never again in my lifetime will I witness this kind of abuse of an American by people in responsible positions."

Goldwater's office made no comment on who would be appointed by Nixon for the vice presidency.

Charles Pine, Arizona Democratic chairman, said "He was forced to admit he received money from Maryland contractors, and Agnew acknowledged he did not declare these on his income tax return. I don't think he had any other choice under the circumstances."

Pine said, "In this way, I admire him. He admitted his guilt and took his medicine. That is more than the White House has done in the Watergate scandal."

This will affect the way people around the world will look at this country in the future, because the administration campaigned on law and order and the administration has been dishonest, he said.

Arizona Senator Fred Korry, (R) from district 17 and Majority Whip, said that the press helped to bring about Agnew's resignation.

"I was personally stunned and shocked," he said.

Arizona Senator Ray Rottas, (R) from district 19 "The Agnew affair and the Watergate affair are signs of the times. The government has gotten too big and the time has come to assess the government."

Both Rottas and Korry said former Secretary of the Treasury John Connally would have a hard time being approved by Congress, if appointed by Nixon.

David Smith, state chairman of the Arizona Federation of College Republicans, stated, "I didn't expect it. I expected him to stick it out for the remainder of his term."

Smith said he was sure there was great political pressure applied to Agnew to resign.

Nixon will probably try Connally for Agnew's replacement, but the Democratic Congress will probably give some initial opposition, he said.

Representative Alfredo Gutierrez, (D) from the 23rd district, had no initial reaction to the resignation, except complete surprise and shock. He said this will have a definite effect on Arizona politics in the future.

"In the next few years, there will be a Democratic majority in the legislature," said Gutierrez.

Gutierrez said the federal government has been unresponsive to the needs of the public. He cited the Vietnam war, Watergate affair, and now the Agnew affair.

"The Nixon administration has included corporate, outside interest within the workings of the federal government," he said.

Mid East fighting continues

The fighting in the Middle East continued in its fifth day Wednesday.

Israeli planes bombed Damascus airport in a series of air strikes against Syria. Israel also bombed two Egyptian air bases north of Cairo, the Syrian naval headquarters, and a power station north of Damascus.

Syria claimed it drove off the attack on the Damascus airport, and shot down three Israeli planes that carried out the strike.

The Syrian command said it shot down 33 Israeli planes. This made a total of 231 downed Israeli warplanes claimed by the Arabs.

Iraq joins war

Iraq joined five other Arab countries yesterday in the Middle East conflict.

The Beirut newspaper An Nahar reported that 18,000 Iraqi troops with 100 tanks had arrived in Syria. The paper said Iraq was "taking an active part" in the fighting.

Radio Baghdad reported that Iraqi planes flew 80 missions over the Golan Heights on Tuesday.

Soviets resupply Arabs

U.S. officials said yesterday that the Soviet Union has begun a big airlift to resupply Syria and Egypt.

The officials did not say what types of supplies and equipment are being delivered, but they said so far there is no evidence the Soviets are replacing fighter planes knocked down by the Israeli air force.

The U.S. officials said the Russians are using their best transport planes for delivering "very large tonnages" to airports in Egypt and Syria.

Pentagon spokesman Jerry Freidheim would not comment when asked if the United States is engaged in resupply measures for Israel.

There have been no reports so far of Israeli attacks on the Soviet transport planes.

Troops will stay in Thailand

The United States will temporarily suspend the withdrawal of American troops from Thailand, Premier Thanom Kittikachorn said yesterday.

The main reason for suspension is the uncertainty of the military and political situations in Indochina, he said.

"North Vietnamese troops are still planning to occupy the northern part of Laos and South Vietnam, and the plan for a coalition government in Laos may create more trouble in the region," Kittikachorn said.

Spiro springs surprise

Yesterday's resignation of Vice President Spiro Agnew was greeted by ASU's faculty and students with shock, dismay and praise.

"I'm not terribly surprised. I think that people charged like him ought to resign from a position of public trust," said Bruce Merrill, assistant professor of political science.

Former ASU assistant professor of mass communications John Coyne, now a member of Agnew's staff, said he did not approve of the vice president's decision, but would not comment further.

"My reactions are personal at the moment," he said. Coyne said he would be available for comment at a later date.

Dr. Jack Holmes, chairman of the political science department, could not be reached for comment. A representative of his office said Holmes' reaction was "stunned silence."

Students were willing to say more.

"The political ramifications are far-reaching. This is a political witch-hunt. They are pacifying the American public by castrating and crucifying politicians," said freshman Charles Knight.

"I'm happy he resigned. I felt that he had no right being there in the first place," said Andy Seplow, Liberal Arts sophomore.

"I think it's kind of a bad deal. It proves to the rest of the world that the United States is politically unstable. If they can't keep their political leaders at home, how can they expect to lead the world?" said

John Salmon, business freshman.

Patricia Bittner, psychology senior, said, "What were his choices, really? Stay or not stay? Pretend the thing never really happened? I don't think he really had any other choice."

"I think he made a smart move instead of waiting to be indicted. He took a bad rap for Nixon; took the public eye off Watergate," said Earl Siegel, political science junior.

Vice presidential vacancy

Leaders confer on replacement

"Whenever there is a vacancy in the office of the vice president, the President shall nominate a vice president who shall take office upon confirmation by a majority vote of both houses of Congress."

So states Section 2 of the 25th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, ratified Feb. 10, 1967.

A choice for vice president must be ratified by both the House and Senate instead of just the Senate as in the case of cabinet members, judges and other top officials.

After the announcement of Agnew's resignation, Nixon went into a meeting with four top Republican congressional leaders. They included Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Robert Griffin of Michigan, and Reps. Gerald Ford of Michigan and Leslie Arends of Illinois.

Nixon also summoned two congressional Democrats, House Speaker Carl Albert of Oklahoma, and Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield of Montana, to a meeting today.

The main purpose of the meetings was "to talk about procedures" to be followed in Nixon's nomination of Agnew's successor, said Gerald L. Warren, presidential spokesman.

Prior to the meetings, White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Nixon would, "promptly begin consultation with appropriate national leaders" as he moved "expeditiously in selecting a nominee . . ."

Included in the list of considerations for replacements are former Secretary of the Treasury John B. Connally, who switched from the Democratic to the Republican party earlier in the year; New York Gov. Nelson Rockefeller; former Secretary of State William P. Rogers; Sens. Hugh Scott of Pennsylvania and Barry Goldwater of Arizona, and House Republican Leader Gerald Ford of Michigan.

White House officials refused to give a timetable for selection of a new vice president and would not speculate on suggestions for the post.

The office has become vacant 14 other times when vice presidents died in office or succeeded dead presidents. The first vacancy ever to occur in the office was in 1818, when George Clinton, vice president to Thomas Jefferson and James Madison, died in office.

The most recent was when Lyndon B. Johnson became president at the death of President John F. Kennedy in 1963.

John C. Calhoun was the only other man ever to resign from the nation's second highest office. He quit as Andrew Jackson's vice president on December 28, 1832.

Calhoun had been politically at odds with President Jackson and resigned to fill the Senate seat vacated when Senator Robert Hayne of South Carolina resigned.

Since Agnew's resignation is the first vacancy under the new amendment, there has been no precedent set for the type of man President Nixon may be expected to look for as his new vice president.

Goldwater may replace Agnew

The name of Arizona Senator Barry Goldwater has been mentioned by several prominent Arizonans as a possible choice to succeed Spiro Agnew as vice-president.

Sen. Fred Korry, majority whip of the Arizona Senate, said he thought Goldwater might accept the job if it were offered.

He is respected by both parties in Congress and isn't too old to do a good job. Confirmation would be no problem, Korry said.

Charles Pine, state democratic chairman, agreed the Arizona Republican would be a good choice.

"I'd have no objection to Barry Goldwater. He's not an announced presidential candidate for 1976 and has always been honest," he said.

"I think Goldwater has a very good chance," said ASU assistant professor of political science, Bruce Merrill.

Merrill worked as a public opinion consultant for the Nixon-Agnew ticket during the 1972 presidential election.

Goldwater declined to comment on his chances for the office or his willingness to accept the position if offered by President Nixon.

Goldwater was the Republican candidate for president in 1964 and was defeated by Lyndon Johnson.

State Chairman of the Republican Party Harry Rosenzweig, said he was caught completely by surprise.

"I thought he was in there to stay to the bitter end. He probably did this to save himself and his family embarrassment, and to get it over with," he said.

Rosenzweig said it is hard to assess the damages to the Presidency, but Nixon will probably bounce back.

Agnew

When one is hit by such devastating news as the criminal conviction and resignation of the Vice President of the United States, it creates a sense of shock mingled with mixed emotions.

The final realization that the second highest government official, Spiro Agnew, has committed crimes against the law of the land can only heighten the increasing distrust of this administration.

President Nixon and his ill-fated running mate long have accused the protesters and dissenters in America of undermining the country. Now we have a vice president admitting that he has broken the law he swore to defend. Who is undermining the country?

If this is the kind of attitude our leaders show to law and order, can other citizens of this nation be criticized for showing disrespect for the law?

In plea bargaining (pleading guilty to a lesser charge to avoid prosecution on greater charges) after spreading for so long the lie that he was innocent, Agnew has destroyed his own credibility. Have the final bits of respect people still had for the government likewise been shattered?

Perhaps it is the lies that hurt the most. Agnew did not have to lie about his connections in the Maryland kick back case. Silence would have been preferable.

No man is required by law to comment on his guilt or innocence of charges of law-breaking; in fact, the Constitution specifically forbids involuntary self-incrimination.

But, in choosing at first to lie, Agnew has only deepened the impact of his guilt on the credibility of the government.

It has eroded even further the 32 per cent national support that the present administration showed in the last opinion polls.

When high government officials break the law or lie, it shakes our faith in our democratic system like no other event can.

Palm Walk or Scoreboard Walk?

Dear Sir:

It is regrettable that the once-pleasant stroll up Palm Walk has been made unpleasant by someone's obtrusive erection of a garish red and yellow billboard-scoreboard. Its offensiveness is compounded when one considers that the huge sum of money lavished on it could have been used to meet the very pressing and rather more central needs of a university: teaching, learning, and their marriage, research.

The central issue is really this: how will this university make its reputation — by producing gladiators or by producing scholars? To date, the scholars have been getting the shaft.

I've always enjoyed sports, but never much cared for vulgarity, fiscal or otherwise. And now that we're stuck with that red and yellow misconception, how about sky blue?

Test could prevent brain damage

By BOB BARRETT

A simple test to determine a rare disease causing mental retardation in newborn babies is not required by law in Arizona, but Byron C. Moore, associate professor of special education, said it should be.

Phenylketonuria (PKU) is an inherited disease. If not detected within a few weeks after birth PKU will cause severe brain damage resulting in mental retardation, according to Dr. Ted Baum, director of maternal and child health division of the Arizona State Health Department.

"In those people affected, the body doesn't metabolize an amino acid, phenylalanine, properly. His body doesn't break down these amino acids but builds them up, and this causes severe damage to the brain," Baum said.

Phenylalanine is produced from protein, and this is why babies who are fed milk are affected immediately, Baum said.

The test for PKU is simple. It requires a drop or two of blood from the newborn baby on a piece of filter paper which is sent to the hospital lab, Baum said.

"Labs do the test for about $5," he said.

Moore said if the test is done within a few weeks after birth, brain damage will be avoided. However, hospitals aren't required by law to test for PKU. Moore blamed doctors for resistance to a law requiring the test.

"Doctors fought the law because they don't want anyone telling them what to do," Moore said.

Baum said a law requiring a PKU test isn't necessary.

"The test doesn't appear to be necessary in Arizona. Only one out of 15,000 babies have it. The laws passed in other states were passed years ago. No cases have gone undetected in Arizona in the last six or seven years," Baum said.

Moore said most hospitals in Arizona don't test for PKU because they release newborns within a few days after birth.

Baum said some hospitals in Arizona don't have the PKU test as a matter of policy. No figures were available because the Health Department has not checked with the hospitals in the last two years.

The Health Department doesn't recommend that hospitals adopt the PKU test.

"The burden is on the hospital doctors to carry out the program," Baum said.

Law College plans program on bankruptcy

A program to study the new Arizona bankruptcy procedure rules, effective Oct. 1, will be Oct. 27 at the ASU College of Law.

The program is sponsored by the State Bar of Arizona.

Particular emphasis in the program will be on commencement of bankruptcy cases, administration of the estate and the rights of the debtor.

Arizona lawyers wishing to participate should contact the State Bar offices in the Security Building in Phoenix.

Correction

The State Press incorrectly reported Arizonans for Peace would sponsor a program designed to expose the continuing crisis in Indochina, yesterday at 7:30 p.m. in the MU Arizona Room. The program will be next Wednesday, Oct. 17.

Satires of American family adapted for Readers Theatre

"At Wit's End" will open tonight at 8 in the Lyceum Theatre. It will play through Sunday and also Oct. 18-21.

Dr. Janet Elsea, director of the play, said that "At Wit's End" may be the answer to getting the public more interested in ASU Theatre.

Elsea said the play, which she adapted from the satiric newspaper columns and books of Erma Bombeck, should have a strong appeal to many people outside of the academic community.

"Bombeck's writings have a great appeal to many people who have gone through the same life experiences that she writes about," said Elsea.

She said the play is a series of short skits dealing with the everyday problems of an average American family in an exaggerated humorous way.

Elsea admits that there will probably be a "stuffy academician" who will object to this kind of theatre, but that the deluge of ticket information calls received by the box office makes the difference.

She said the play will be done in the Readers Theatre style. "Readers Theatre is a style much like old radio in that it uses suggestion, not demonstration," she explained.

Elsea said the actors play facing out to the audience, including the audience in the play.

Tickets for all performances are available at the Lyceum box office. Prices for students are $1 for Thursday and Sunday performances and $1.50 for Friday and Saturday shows.

"At Wit's End," a series of short skits condensed from the writings of Erma Bombeck, opens tonight at 8 in the Lyceum Theatre.

Arlo Guthrie brings 'Alice' to Gammage

Arlo Guthrie, popular singer-guitarist, will perform Nov. 14 at 8 p.m. in Grady Gammage Auditorium.

Tickets are available beginning Oct. 14 and mail orders for tickets are now being accepted. Ticket prices range from $3 to $5. The show is co-sponsored by Gammage Auditorium and the Associated Students Social and Traditions Board.

Guthrie's tongue-in-cheek rendition of "Alice's Restaurant" at the Newport Folk Festival in 1967 won him underground fame. Two years later the film version of "Alice's Restaurant" was adapted from his original composition. He was also featured in the film "Woodstock, 1969" which was filmed at the Woodstock Music Festival.

Guthrie has appeared on major television shows. His most popular recordings include "Washington County," "Hobo's Lullaby," "Last of the Brooklyn Cowboys," and "City of New Orleans."

Guthrie is the son of the late American folk singer Woody Guthrie, best known for his original composition of "This Land is Your Land, This Land is My Land."

Theatre's 'Patience' provokes laughter

By CAROL PYNE

Be prepared to laugh if you are planning to attend the opera this weekend. The Lyric Opera Theatre's opening production of "Patience" caught the audience off guard last Friday night, earning audible giggles and outright laughter as the cast frolicked through the Gilbert and Sullivan comedy.

Dr. Kenneth Seipp, "Patience" musical conductor and producer of the Lyric Opera Theatre, was pleased with the audience reaction. He said that the spontaneous hand-clapping in time to the music and the throwing of green carnations (traditional in Gilbert and Sullivan theatre) were unexpected high points in the performance.

"Patience" is the simple tale of a dairy maid, named Patience, who discovers love through the attentions of two flower-waving aesthetic poets. When told that it was her duty to fall in love, Patience says "I had no idea love was a duty, no wonder they (the lovesick maidens) all look so unhappy."

Plumply cherubic in his blue velvet playsuit, Reginald Bunthorne, the naughty poet played by Forrest Bachtel, practically stole the show as he waddled nimbly across the stage spouting ridiculous poetry.

"Patience" is a deliberate spoof of mankind's weaknesses, but the sarcasm is so buried by humor that the opera's main objective seems to be pure audience entertainment.

The Lyric Opera Theatre, a part of the music department, is the University educational theatre for training opera students. Other productions to be performed this year are "The Marriage of Figaro," "Double Trouble," "Alive and Well and Living in Paris," and "Tales of Hoffman."

"Patience" will be performed at 8 p.m. Friday through Sunday in the Music Theatre. Ticket information is available at the Music Theatre box office 965-3398.

INTRODUCING THE ESS amt 1

Threadbare though the word "revolution" has become, the ESS amt 1 loudspeaker marks a revolution in high fidelity reproduction through its incorporation of the Heil Air Motion Transformer, developed and perfected by Dr. Oskar Heil, of Heil Scientific Laboratories, Inc., over the last four and one half years. This exciting new device gives the ESS amt 1 the first authentically new approach to sound generation in fifty years. As an achievement, the ESS amt 1 leaps far forward in the pursuit of acoustic perfection, and it is so clearly superior to all other loudspeaker systems that no previous experience in high fidelity reproduction will have been adequate preparation for this revelation in sound delineation.

ASU tries new parking permits

By SHARON SIMPSON

ASU is experimenting with a new type of parking permit this year.

Maroon and gold metallic bumper permits have replaced the window permits used in the past.

The Ad Hoc Parking Committee, a temporary committee concerned strictly with parking, recommended a bumper sticker that would be used for a three-year period with validation stickers issued yearly. The stickers, similar to those issued for state license plates, will be purchased instead of buying completely new permits.

David Gourley, associate professor of marketing and chairman of the parking committee said the bumper style was recommended to provide display uniformity, because five states prohibit window stickers and because of the savings involved for the University.

Henry Spomer, assistant comptroller, said the permit should reduce the extra book work caused by changing permit numbers every year.

The new decals were designed by Lt. Thomas Godbehere, University police.

"We had a lot of complaints about putting the permits in the window," Godbehere said, "so we went to the bumper permit." He said the metallic permits are easier to read at night.

"To be on the safe side, we went to the bumper sticker so that somebody's view might not be obstructed," said Chief John Duffy, director of University police.

Several problems have been encountered with the new stickers, however.

Godbehere noted the gold is not bright enough on the maroon background, making it hard to distinguish the letter on the sticker.

Corp. John Trimble University police, said he now must check each row of cars rather than every other row as in the past since the new lot permits are the same color.

"At times you even have to get down on your hands and knees to check the permit," Trimble added. Some decals have been affixed so they face the ground.

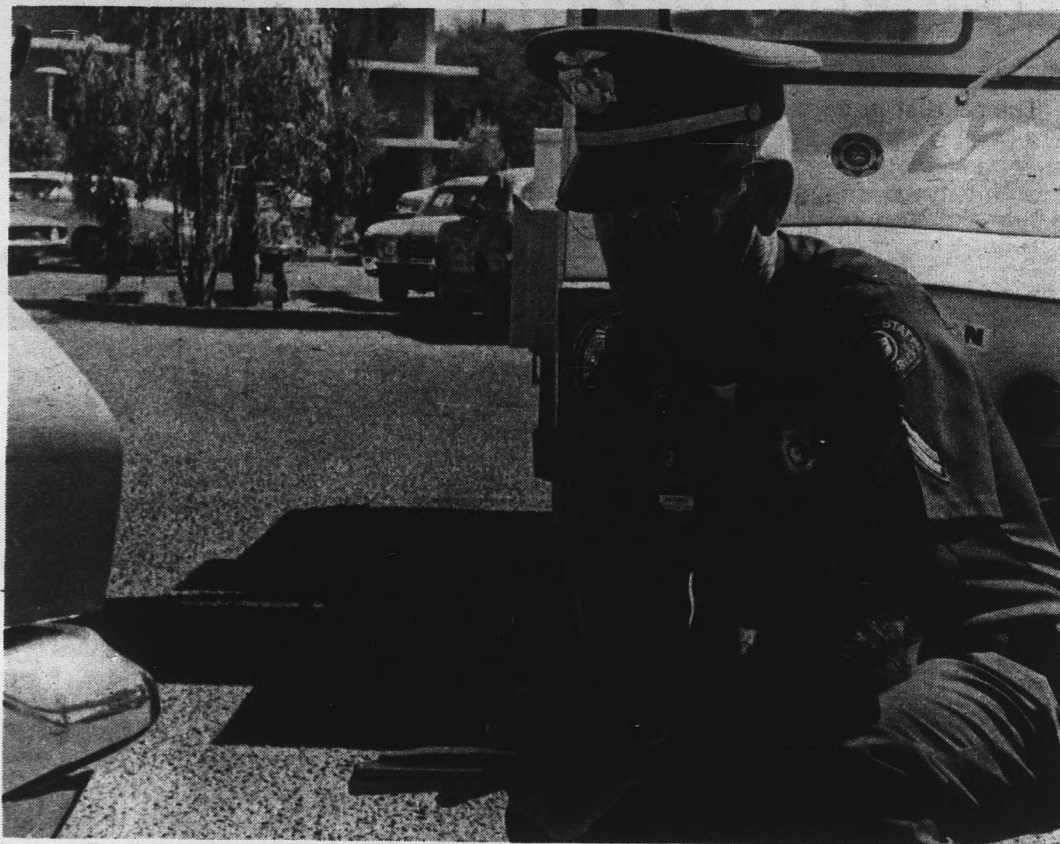

Theft is another problem now occurring because the permits are no longer placed inside the car window.

Duffy said 13 reports of stolen or lost stickers have been filed with his office. Arthur Bowie, parking administrator, noted his office has received 30 reports.

If people had followed instructions and completely cleaned their bumper, Gourley said, once the permits were put on, they could only be ripped off.

Bowie requests that lost stickers be reported to the Accounts Receivable office.

Parking permits will be replaced for the re-issuance cost of 50 cents if the report filed can be substantiated, said Spomer.

University police Corporal John Trimble checks the car's bumper for the new parking decal which must be displayed by all on-campus vehicles.

Arab, Israel organizations

Mideast war stirs ASU groups

By JOHN PHILLIPS

The conflict in the Middle East has caused several campus organizations to mobilize and make their opinions known.

Rabbi Barton Lee, advisor to Jewish students on campus, said Hillel, a campus Jewish organization, has raised more than $4,000 to aid Israel.

"All money goes to Israel for use in maintaining humanitarian services," Barton said.

"It's not a question of sending money to a foreign country, but it's a question of helping a member of your family, a brother and a sister," he said.

Members of the Arab Student Organization on campus called on Americans to withhold any money that would go to aid Israel.

One member of the organization, a graduate student who asked not to be identified, said the money is used to fight the war rather than for humanitarian purposes.

Nancy Sloane, a junior in elementary education, said she was in Israel last spring and foreign students there felt fighting would break out sometime.

"I'd like to see them (Israelis) return to the borders they had before the war, make them secure, and somehow reach a settlement through this war so this will be the end of the wars over there," Sloane said.

"What I hope for is that Israel will regain the territory that has been lost and then proceed to destroy the capacity of Egypt and Syria to make war," Lee said.

The President of the Arab organization, who also asked not to be named, said "the Arabs are fighting now to regain the lands they lost in the 1967 war."

The Arab student group said it believes the Arabs will stop fighting after they have regained the land lost by that war.

The Arab students said they believe the main cause of the war is Israel's immigration policy.

Abdul Almusallam, a senior theater major, said the United States should ask Israel, why have so many Jews been helped to immigrate to Israel, when they have no place for Palestinians.

The Arabs said this is too exclusive. "It does not exist anywhere else in the world, except in Israel," said one of the students.

"We would like to see a democratic, nonsectarian, state in Palestine," said another of the students.

"They (the Israelis) just want peace," Sloane said. "That's all they want."

Lee said from the Arab view it was a brilliant tactic to attack during Yom Kippur when the farthest thing from Jewish minds was war. However, "it sadly testifies to the intention of the Arab leadership," Lee said.

Almusallam said he believes the United States will intervene militarily in the conflict on the side of the Israelis if the Arabs succeed in regaining the territory lost in 1967.

"And this act will not heighten the issue of peace, but will give the United States another Vietnam which I believe is another war the people of the United States don't want to go through," Almusallam said.

Almusallam said the present conflict "is the Arab countries fight to put across that they will always be looking ahead for peace, not from the ground that there is a superior (Israel) to tell them what to do, but from the ground of equal dignities for both sides."

The Arab students said they are planning activities to explain the causes of the present conflict and that literature can be obtained from their organization by contacting the Foreign Student Office in Moer Administration building.

Sloane said Hillel will meet at 10 a.m. this Sunday at the Alpha Sigma Pi house, 717 Alpha Dr., to canvas neighborhoods for additional funds. She asked all interested persons to come.

Hillel is planning lectures on the mall to explain the history of the Mideast situation, she said.

Parachute club wants newmembers to attend meeting

Disciples to make Salt Lake trip

The Devils' Disciples, a student pep group, has arranged round trip transportation to Salt Lake City for ASU students, faculty and staff who want to watch the Sun Devils play the University of Utah on November 3.

The cost for the trip on chartered buses is $32 and includes a ticket to the game. Passengers will be expected to provide their own food.

Buses will leave from the Memorial Union Friday evening and will return Sunday morning. No overnight stops are planned.

The deadline for obtaining seats is October 19. Any person desiring to reserve a seat should inquire at Memorial Union Room 238.

White wins WAC honors against Lobo Defense

ASU quarterback Danny White, who makes it a habit of having his best games against the Lobos of New Mexico, was named Western Athletic Conference offensive player of the week.

Danny White

White completed 18 of 28 passes for 343 yards and four touchdowns, as the Devils posted an easy 67-24 victory over the Lobos. Two years ago, as a sophomore, White threw for six touchdowns against New Mexico.

He has thrown for 981 yards on the season by completing 46 passes in 76 attempts. He is averaging 21.3 yards every time he throws the ball and has been intercepted only twice.

White also does the punting for the Devils, averaging 39.2 yards per kick.

Entering the 1973 season, White was closing in on Johnny Bright's NCAA career record of 7.16 yards per offensive play with an average 7.36 yards per play. His average for four games this season is 9.90 yards per play, far above the average needed to break the record.

Others nominated for the offensive award were Arizona halfback Willie Hamilton, Wyoming end Archie Gray, Colorado State quarterback Jan Stuebbe, UTEP quarterback Frank Duncan, BYU tailback Mark Terranova, and New Mexico end Ken Lege.

Devils take first in scoring, place second in total offense

After two consecutive 67-point winning performances, ASU took over the top spot in scoring and moved into second position in total offense and passing among the major college football teams, according to National Collegiate Sports Services statistics released this week.

The Sun Devils, who top the scoring list with an average of 45 points per game, moved ahead of last week's leader, Oklahoma, with a 42.8 average. UCLA is third with a 42 point average, following a 66-16 rout of Utah.

Riding on the performances of quarterback Danny White and receivers Morris Owens and Greg Hudson, the Devils moved into the No. 2 spot in passing offense with 261-yards-per-game.

In total offense, the Devils are averaging 491.5 yards each game and have gained 1,966 yards in four games. Alabama is the leader with a 507 yard average and 2,028 yards so far.

Devils move up one in AP football poll

The ASU football team moved up one spot to 11th place in the Associated Press college football poll, after a 67-24 victory against New Mexico.

Ohio State remained in first place followed closely by Nebraska. Last week Nebraska defeated Minnesota 48-7 and Ohio State won over Washington State 27-3.

Third-ranked Alabama was victorious over Georgia 28-14 and Southern California, the pre-season favorite, held onto fourth place after a 21-7 win over Oregon State.

Michigan, ranked fifth, blanked Oregon 24-0 and sixth-rated Oklahoma downed Miami of Florida 24-20 to hold their positions.

ASU remained in 12th place on the United Press International's board of coaches poll.

Michigan and Southern California reversed 4th and 5th positions on the UPI poll while the rest of the top ten remained identical to the AP poll.
