Faculty Senate tables birth control resolution

By JOHN PHILLIPS

The ASU Faculty Senate has voted to table a resolution asking the Arizona Board of Regents to give careful consideration to the Associated Student Senate resolution concerning campus distribution of birth control devices.

The tabled resolution, brought before the Faculty Senate by the ASASU Senate, said, "We support the right of our students to participate effectively in the determination of this and similar social policies for the University community."

After some discussion, the Faculty Senate meeting Monday afternoon voted to suspend the rules so they could hear speakers on the birth control proposal and make way for possible action on the resolution the same day.

ASASU Senator Bob Kenison, told the Faculty Senate the reason for haste was because action was needed before the ASASU Senate appears at the regents meeting Saturday.

Under the proposal that was sent to the regents, Planned Parenthood would provide all physicians necessary to operate the clinic, all interview personnel, instruments and all clinical lab tests.

To provide a contraceptive service, the proposal says Planned Parenthood will need a waiting room to hold 20 persons, two private interview rooms, two examination rooms and a storage area for records and supplies.

The proposed clinic would operate at night in the Student Health Center and would not cost the University anything, Kenison said.

Dr. George Hamm, vice president of student affairs, said he has talked to other Universities about the student's no cost argument.

Those Universities have "assured me that is not true." Even though the contraceptive clinic and the Student Health Center would operate as separate units, there would be a residual affect of patients coming back to be treated by University doctors, Hamm said.

Hamm said the Health Center has eight full-time doctors, each seeing up to 60 patients a day, and residual affect caused by a contraceptive clinic would burden the staff.

If the contraceptive service was incorporated into the Health Center

ASU Mideast support varies

The Hillel Union of Jewish Students is actively collecting money to support the Israeli war cause. While the Organization of Arab Students is supporting the Arab nation's cause by informing Americans of the Arab's view of the conflict.

Jeff Keller, spokesman for Hillel, said, "In the past couple of weeks we have raised close to $6,000 for Israel." He said all the money would go to the Jewish nation to help offset the costs of the war.

The Arab student organization is not actively collecting money, but spokesmen said they would accept any donations offered to the Arab nations.

Tawfiq Boqari, president of the Arab organization, said, "We want to present the Arabs' side, so they (American citizens) will understand the whole problem. They have been listening to one side all along."

"If we get the people to understand, maybe they can force the government to stop aiding the Israelis," Boqari said.

Hillel will canvas Tempe neighborhoods Sunday to collect donations for Israel, Keller said, and will sponsor a rally for Israel at 8:30 p.m. Friday in Baker Center.

Keller said Hillel's booth on the ASU mall will remain open until the Mid East war ends.

"We are very frustrated because we can only raise money," Keller said. "We are sorry we can't be over there, but we realize we would be a burden."

No other activities are presently planned by the Arab group, which will close down its campus booth on Friday.

New student ID's distributed by mail

Eighty per cent of the plastic ID's for new students have been mailed out according to John Regue, assistant ID coordinator.

Regue said students who haven't received ID's either had their photos taken after the beginning of the fall semester or the addresses or social security numbers were incorrect.

ID's may be picked up from 8-10:30 a.m. and 11:30-5 p.m. Monday-Wednesday and Friday; and 8-11 a.m. and 12-5 p.m. Tuesday and Thursday in Room 167 of West Hall.

Egypt says it will use missiles

Egyptian President Anwar Sadat announced Tuesday that Egypt has missiles ready to carry an Arab attack into "the very depths of Israel" if the Israelis attack the Arab heartland.

Jane's Yearbook of Weapons Systems says the Zafer missile has a range of 233 miles, and carries a 1,100-pound warhead. The missile has the range to hit Tel Aviv and Jerusalem.

Israel announced Tuesday a task force had crossed the Suez Canal and was attacking Egyptian anti-aircraft missile batteries and artillery.

The Egyptians said a "vicious battle" was being fought in the Sinai as Israeli armor attacked an Egyptian beachhead.

Nixon will meet with Arabs

President Nixon will meet with four Arab foreign ministers today to discuss the fighting in the Middle East.

An Arab spokesman said oil was not one of the issues the ministers wanted to discuss. He said they only wanted to discuss United States involvement in the war.

The announcement came after the President met with Secretary of State Henry Kissinger for an hour. The Arab envoys are in New York for sessions of the United Nations.

Kissinger receives Nobel Prize

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and North Vietnamese Politburo member Le Duc Tho were awarded the 1973 Nobel Peace Prize Tuesday.

The two were awarded the prize for their efforts to end the Vietnam War. The prize money of $120,000 is to be shared equally between them, announced the Nobel Committee.

Judge refuses to free conspirators

U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica refused Tuesday to free five Watergate conspirators on bail while their requests to have their guilty pleas thrown out are pending.

Sirica also criticized democratic Sen. Herman Talmadge of Georgia, for implying the judge had been too harsh with the defendants.

E. Howard Hunt, Eugenio Martinez, Virgilio Gonzalez Bernard Barker and Frank Sturgis asked Sirica to free them on bail.

facilities, the center might need three full time gynecologists, costing up to $200,000 a year, Hamm said.

Several faculty senators objected to the resolution, saying it was a "back-handed" way of getting faculty support for the ASASU birth control proposal.

Kenison said the faculty has a dual responsibility on campus. In addition to providing academic instruction, the faculty should provide direction and support for student undertakings, he said.

In other action, the faculty senate tabled indefinitely a resolution by Professor Richard Kelly of the Engineering College which encouraged the ASU planning department to accept definite specifications for future campus bike paths.

The resolution urged the planning department to accept the specification in "Arizona Bikeways," a report by Bivens & Associates Inc., a local consulting firm.

Kelly said the intent of the resolution is taken care of because John Ellingson, director of planning and development for ASU will meet with the Financial Affairs and Physical Plant committee of the Faculty Senate to discuss future paths.

Recruiter seeks researchers

A former aide to Secretary of State Henry Kissinger will be on campus today interviewing students for research positions with the Carnegie Endowment for International Peace.

Dr. Roger Morris will explain the research positions which involve documentary research and interviews with officials as well as the publication of findings.

While the main purpose of his visit is recruitment, Morris will also discuss his experiences with the foreign policy bureaucracy.

Previous research by the Carnegie Endowment has focused on United States response to the human suffering in Bangladesh, Nigeria and Biafra and the violations of United Nations sanctions against the government of Rhodesia.

Researchers are now studying American responses to the drought in West Africa.

Persons accepted for the positions will be based in Washington, D.C., and openings are available for the spring, summer and fall of 1974. The position carries a $400 per month stipend plus travel expenses.

Morris describes the program as a "Nader-like effort to bring public accountability to bear on an otherwise immune foreign policy bureaucracy."

Interviews will be at 2 p.m. in MU 269.

Talks present prisoners' life

Tom Hayden, Bob Chenoweth, Jean Pierre Debris, and Holly Near will appear tonight in a program "exposing" the system of political prisons in Indochina. The program, sponsored by Arizonans for Peace, is scheduled for 7:30 in the MU Arizona Room.

Nina Mohit, director for Arizonans for Peace, said the group is touring the nation to make people aware of the plight of 200,000 political prisoners in jails of the U.S.-supported Saigon regime.

Tempe motorists pay $25,000 to park

The click, whir, and satisfied mechanical sigh of Tempe parking meters continues to the tune of $25,000 per year accompanied by the groans of motorists popping pennies and nickels to support the parking habit.

The meters swallowed $5,286 worth of small change in the fiscal year that ended June 30, 1973. Tempe drivers also paid $20,557 in parking fines as the result of neglecting the mechanical piggy banks, according to James Alexander, Tempe finance dept. director.

Alexander said the meters are located primarily around campus and are not there to collect revenue but to control traffic.

"The sentiment of businessmen around town is generally against the meters except for the businesses around the campus area," Alexander said.

Competition opens for prestigious Rhodes scholarship

New York Knicks forward Bill Bradley; United States Supreme Court Justice Byron White; Speaker of the House Carl Albert; Senator William Fulbright; and musician Kris Kristofferson, are Rhodes Scholars.

Competition for the prestigious Rhodes Scholarship has begun and applications should be made now.

To be eligible, a candidate must be an unmarried, male U.S. citizen, of senior standing and between the ages of 18 and 24 on October 1, 1973.

Relaxation in the maximum age restriction will be considered for candidates who have completed military service.

Arizona will send two candidates to the final competition in which the top 32 scholars are picked. These scholars receive a two to three-year full scholarship to Oxford University.

Dr. Dennis V. Moran, ASU's only Rhodes Scholar in the faculty, said, "Where is ASU's next Rhodes Scholar? We haven't had one since Robert Wagers won in 1965."

Dr. Moran, assistant professor of English, invites all interested students, who think they may qualify to contact him at 965-3366.

Spiro: playing games..

While Americans are still nursing the sickened feelings in the pits of their stomachs, former Vice President Spiro Agnew is playing semantical games with us.

Rather than admit, outrightly, that he broke the law he, in his speech last night, tried to temper the disgusting truth by asking us why we should believe his accusers — "bribe-brokers, extortionists, conspirators" — in his own words.

Well, maybe their words aren't any better than his, but he's one of those bribe-brokers. His campaigns were financed by bribes — at least that's what the records say.

He says, "I have never — as county executive of Baltimore County, as governor of Maryland or as Vice President of the United States — enriched myself to the betrayal of the public trust."

Interesting.

What does he call betrayal? By financing his campaigns and, possibly, his personal worth by taking money in return for government contracts he has perverted a political system of election already under fire from skeptics and cynics. By letting the country know bribery is a way of life in Maryland he has destroyed, once and for all, the "any man can become president" myth, in all its variations.

Last night he admitted he might have done wrong in terms of the "new post-Watergate new political morality."

Once again, what Watergate and Mr. Agnew have done is confront us with the reality of dirty politics. While others glibly speak of nobility, Agnew has slapped the American people in their collective faces.

In his humble and feeble, I might add, attempt to present himself to America as a noble citizen who sacrificed himself for us, he is still not playing it straight.

After his lies and the recently revealed truth, he's still playing mind games with the American people, trying to convince us that, against the overwhelming evidence, he's innocent of malicious wrongdoing.

He even had the nerve, last night, to righteously suggest improvements in the legal system that allowed him to plea bargain.

We can thank Agnew for killing our naive ideas about politics and government. Payoffs in Maryland should put us on the lookout in our own home states and in the federal government.

If we're lucky, maybe our lost innocence will clear our perspective and, maybe, somehow, the government will be forced to again become noble in the eyes of citizens who must put their public trust in politicians.

Dan Huff

.. or is he just insane

Spiro Agnew's political demise is a reminder to all of us that we shouldn't believe what a person says simply because he holds a prestigious position.

Since the charges of political corruption were made against him late this summer, Agnew has continually denied his guilt in no uncertain terms.

Then last Wednesday he resigned, pleading no contest to a felony charge of income tax evasion.

The incredible thing about the Agnew scandal is not that an extortionist and thief could achieve such a high office — history is full of such examples.

The incredible — perhaps even terrifying — thing is that we could have elected a man with so much contempt for us.

Monday, Agnew reiterated his statement of innocence, saying he resigned to spare his family the grief and his nation the agony and uncertainty.

Agnew is either insane, stupid, or just plain insanely, stupidly contemptuous.

We can understand how a dedicated public official would decide to step down rather than see his office tainted by false charges.

But if Agnew is innocent, why did he not plead so?

Monday, he said his advisers told him it would be useless, since stepping down would be viewed as an admission of guilt.

In effect, Agnew was saying the U.S. judicial system is not competent to try him. That is the sort of garbage we would expect from a two-bit juvenile delinquent, not the former vice president.

Agnew said those who testified against him before the grand jury are extortionists and thieves who tried to buy their freedom by implicating him. In other words, he said they lied.

But by copping a no contest plea, Agnew chose not to challenge them directly. Instead he took the coward's way by denouncing them over national television and radio in the hopes of salvaging whatever is left of his good name without jeopardizing his freedom.

But he can't salvage his reputation. He can't because he is guilty, and because he wrongly believes the American people are so stupid they will accept his cop out as the magnanimous act of a dedicated statesman and ignore the Justice Department's 40 pages of charges detailing his acts of extortion, bribery and conspiracy.

Those are 40 damning pages he chose to let stand undiminished by pleading no contest.

That a man who we entrusted to such high office could have such a low opinion of us is simply terrifying.

Taking us to task and an answer

The State Press received the following letter:

Editor:

Whoever attempted to write the crusading editorial on birth control apparently has a poor knowledge of statistics. The fact that only 1500 people signed their petitions can and should be interpreted to mean that this is a non-issue for most students. I also question the accuracy of his report that support in Tempe is 14-1 for birth control on campus. (Note: this came from a survey by the Tempe Daily News). Does a majority of the 80,000 in Tempe (a 14-1 majority at that) even care about this issue? I would hope that journalistic ethics would make you ashamed of your abuse of the truth.

There has also been an almost juvenile attack on the regents over this issue. One ASASU official is going to 'hammer it into the heads of the regents', your editorial writer wants to give the committee 'more clout' — a good psychologist would be able to tell us why these people never left adolescence. It is not good diplomacy to approach people who are in a legally superior position as are the regents, with the arrogance of the birth control faction. And unfortunately, some of us may still believe that the regents do have intelligence, and possibly twice as much foresight as some student leaders and editorial writers.

My criticism of this paper is not unselfish in nature. I feel a cold anger at your disregard of the university's welfare. You may think yourselves courageous for your editorial attacks on public figures, but then, the students and the university suffer for your irresponsibility — you don't. Every time you defend some nonexistent problem as if our very American liberties were at stake, people in the legislature take note of the attitude which you assert is student opinion. And of late the picture you have painted is questionable in its accuracy and relevance.

The issue of birth control on campus is absurd in itself. People that cry for it are the same ones shouting for more individual freedom. But why then do they want the university to be a nurse for their sexual mores? A mature person should be able to break free from parental bonds and meet his own needs. Perhaps these people can't cut the umbilical cord from the university. A responsible person who needs birth control supplies will get them. Yet these people are crying for someone else's help — Why?

A tuition hike has been discussed by various people in the state government and board of regents. As a favor to the students, would you leave this issue out of your editorial pages until you find a writer with maturity enough to address the issue pragmatically and honestly, and with the welfare of the university and the students somewhere in his mind. A writer on a state university paper who has arrogant views about corruption in government and gives the political world a warning, 'to clean up its show' does not have this maturity.

The handling of the birth control issue on this campus resembles the workings of a communist state. The two crusading groups on campus are the State Press and the ASASU. The ASASU officers and senate were elected by a small minority of the students — many Soviet officials could point to similar elections of their own. The State Press editor was the only applicant for the task, and then who chose him? On this issue of birth control the State Press has consistently taken one side on this issue — declaring it to be the issue of all students — making a cheap call for student patriotism. This policy and the quality of writing on the subject mirrors the editorial ability of Pravda. Are there any other voices in the State Press who might speak differently on this issue but haven't been heard from? And are all ASASU political officers united on this issue? Are they joining the State Press in trying to dictate to us what our opinion should be?

Perhaps, if these questions are not satisfactorily answered, students should be permitted to vote for a suspension of the activities of both these groups until reform committees could decide on how a student government and university newspaper could be formed in a manner that would serve the actual needs of the students.

Michael Finn
Sophomore — History

It was felt necessary to answer this letter as the writer seems to have some misconceptions on the State Press's position on this campus.

What one reads on the opinion page in unsigned editorials is basically the opinion of the staff as presented by the editor.

The stand on the birth control issue is one of support for a service provided at many campuses across the country. The State Press is supporting Associated Students in its attempt to bring ASU up to date on this issue.

As far as the regents are concerned, just because a body has control over you, doesn't mean they are beyond criticism. In fact, it is your right to bring grievances before your governing body.

If the regents had the foresight the writer credits to them, they would provide constant channels for student input on matters like birth control.

The State Press, on the opinion page, presents to the legislature and student body, the points of view of many, but not all students. Because we can't possibly represent every point of view, letters to the editor expressing other views are printed.

The State Press has printed every letter it has received with an opinion against birth control. This was done to balance the opinion page and give other views.

It is hoped that the legislators are intelligent enough to know that what they read on the State Press opinion page is not the view of the University or every last student on campus.

On the tuition hike, a legitimate issue to students, the State Press has expressed the view of many members of the University community, including the views of some administrators.

If the writer feels the State Press has not been 'mature and honest' in its pursuit of this issue, he is welcome to say why. He chooses not to in his letter.

On the 'editorial ability of Pravda' Pravda is an organ of the state. The State Press is an organ of the students. Anybody can write for the paper or present his point of view. Neither ASASU nor the administration dictate editorial policy.

At any time, members of the State Press staff are free to express their views and will be printed. Or, any student is free to write a letter and express opinion.

If the writer can recommend specific ways the paper can better serve the students, he is welcome to discuss his ideas with the staff. The paper exists to serve the students.

Many feel that it is doing the job.

Keep out: ASU switchboard

Thousands of wires and 4 switchboard operators are hidden behind locked doors in the basement of Old Main. The enclosed area houses ASU's $40,000-$50,000 communication system, a Mountain Bell official said.

The complicated system of telephone wires and cables connects the University with the Centrex telephone system, Eldred Grass, the Mountain Bell Communication consultant said.

The locked doors and intercom system, used to prevent unwanted visitors from entering the area, give the basement of Old Main an imposing aura different from the impression received from wooden stairways and boarded windows.

The switchboard operators handle University telephone traffic in a room near the massive array of wires. In contrast to the complicated system used to transmit the outgoing calls, the operators have compact pushbutton machines which they use to relay University calls.

The operators use their own keys to get into the locked basement. The area is kept locked because of the large amount of expensive equipment, Grass said.

"It's just like anything else," he said. "We've always kept the area locked. It's nothing unusual."

The only actual threat to the University telephone system came several years ago when three molotov cocktails were thrown at Old Main, which also houses the ROTC classrooms.

The bombs caused $1,000 worth of damage to the building, but only $25 damage to the telephone equipment, Donald Ford, in charge of maintenance for the equipment, said.

Both Grass and Ford said no other threats had been made to the University communication system.

Some students do try to get in the locked doors but usually they're looking for a classroom and they're in the wrong building, Grass said.

Students' VD clinic voluntarily run

Students at the Saguaro high school in Scottsdale have started a program to fight the rising rate of venereal disease.

Students Against Venereal Disease (SAVD) has organized a V.D. "hotline" to answer calls on V.D. switchboard and established a clinic staffed by 12 volunteer doctors and nurses according to Dave Ellsworth, president of SAVD and director of the clinic.

The idea for the clinic, adjacent to Scottsdale Memorial Hospital, came from students in health classes at Saguaro high said Ellsworth.

"I suggested the opening of a clinic as a topic for discussion and the students took it from there."

He said the students sponsored fund raising functions for the clinic.

Maricopa County donated drugs and agreed to handle all the lab work, said Ellsworth and the space for the clinic was donated by Scottsdale Memorial Hospital.

The procedure for patients of the clinic takes about 20 minutes and consists of filling out medical forms and taking a blood test, he said.

Ellsworth said, "All the information is highly confidential. I am the only person who sees the records."

The clinic is located in a two-story building behind the hospital. It's opened Mondays and Wednesdays from 7 to 9 p.m.

The hotline number 947-7421 is open 1-9 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Seminar features new speech prof

The speech and theatre department's newest assistant professor will be the featured speaker at 1:30 p.m. today in the second of the department's "Communication Needs for the 70s" seminar series.

Dr. Jerry Buley, former Florida State University communications specialist, will discuss "Behavior Objectives" in Stauffer 318. The session is open to the public.

A graduate of the University of Colorado and of Michigan State University, Buley completed his doctoral work this past June at Florida State, while teaching a course called "Oral Communication in Business." He joined the ASU faculty in August.

He had, since January of this year, been communication consultant to the Florida Drug Abuse Program, developing a method for measuring impact and effectiveness of the program's public service announcements.

He has authored or co-authored six published professional papers and has participated in a number of communications experimental programs at Florida State.

Memorial services set for ASU law professor

Memorial services for Professor Leland Badler are scheduled for 10 a.m. Oct. 23 in the Great Hall of the College of Law.

Badler, a former ASU law professor, and his son died in a light plane crash last February, while en route from Springerville, Arizona, to Phoenix after a skiing vacation.

The service is for his colleagues on the faculty, his students and friends.

ASU solicits Who's Who nominations

Nomination forms are now available for selection to Who's Who Among Students in American Universities and Colleges.

Who's Who offers national recognition to students excelling in college and is a means of pinpointing students and ASU, said Allan Frazier, Associated Students assistant executive manager.

Selection is based on scholarship, honors based on ability and participation in extra-curricular activities, including community service.

Each nominee must have completed a minimum of 84 semester hours prior to the fall semester, maintained at least a 2.2 cumulative grade index and currently be enrolled at ASU.

ASASU sponsors selection at ASU.

"Some people think ASASU is doing it for their own ego trip," Frazier said. "Over the last four years, some of the student officers have not been named to Who's Who. A cross-section of students have been selected, which is the way I think it should be."

Finalists will be selected on the basis of nomination forms and a biographical sketch completed by the nominee. The 36 men and women named to Who's Who will be selected by a student-faculty committee chaired by a Student Affairs staff member.

Names of students honored will be listed in the annual edition of the national Who's Who publication in addition to being honored at the annual ASASU Awards Banquet in the spring.

Nomination forms may be picked up in the ASASU office, MU 222 and at the MU information desk.

Forms must be completed by Fri., Oct. 26. Results will be announced by Nov. 12.

Regents must approve

New degree program offered

By DEBBE NELSON

If approved by the Board of Regents, a Criminal Justice degree program will be offered by the spring semester.

"This will not be a training program for law enforcement," said Gayle Shuman, director of the criminal justice department. "Rather it will give the student a broad, general foundation for development in the area he plans to go into."

For the past nine years, law enforcement officials both inside and outside the universities have expressed a desire for a liberal arts degree to back their training programs, Shuman said.

Two years ago, plans for a program at ASU began to materialize due to a number of favorable factors.

"The biggest factor was probably President Schwada's support," he said.

Shuman said a grant proposal for funding of an undergraduate program in criminal justice was submitted to the Arizona Justice Planning Association.

"It was approved and from there it was all blowing and going," Shuman said.

He said in planning the courses, they were looking for a general, high-level, behavioral, social science curriculum.

"We visited all over Arizona and the nation, talking to people involved with law enforcement to find out exactly what type of program was desired," Shuman said.

"They told us, 'you give us a sharp thinker with a liberal arts background and we'll train him,'" he said. "You see, training changes skills, but education changes attitudes."

He said by 1980, a bachelor of arts degree will probably be a requirement for entering into any field of law enforcement.

"We hope to have our degree program by this spring," Shuman said. "The proposal is going to the Board of Regents soon — it's in the president's office now, so it is in the final stages of approval."

The criminal justice degree is not just for policemen and guards who return to school for further education, he said.

"We want to attract bright, young, intelligent people also. These young people with their ideals and dedication can look into law enforcement areas in which they are needed. Whether they are interested in anthropology, English, sociology — all these backgrounds can contribute. It's a broad enough field to take a variety of disciplines," Shuman said.

"Young people meet many of law enforcement's needs," he said. "But, also, law enforcement meets many of their needs."

Faculty music society offers chamber concert

Contemporary musical sounds will dominate when members of the Faculty Chamber Music Society perform at 8 p.m. Wednesday in the Music Theatre.

Composers Orrego-Salas and Francaix will be featured with an 18th century composition by Friedrich Wilhelm Rust.

The Orrego-Salas piece combines flute, oboe, harpsichord, and contrabass. The Rust sonata is written for viola, two French horns, and violoncello.

The Gammage Wind Quintet will perform Francaix's "Quintette," a "very difficult, not terribly profound, but quite witty piece" according to Frank Stalzer, oboist.

This chamber concert is the second in a series of performances by the Gammage Wind Quintet and the New Art String Quartet with various music faculty members.

"We perform because we enjoy playing and we think it's important that students hear us and become acquainted with the wide range of literature for woodwind quintet," said Stalzer.

"We are trying to push chamber ensembles," Stalzer said and explained that good small ensemble programs improve the quality of large groups.

He also said performers often feel buried in bands and orchestras, whereas the conspicuousness of each small ensemble player forces him to listen and play much more carefully.

The Gammage Wind Quintet was formed in 1957 and has traveled as far as Philadelphia to perform. Members are Edwin Putnik, flute; Frank Stalzer, oboe; Jack Ratterree, clarinet; Jack Rausch, bassoon; and Ralph Lockwood, French horn.

The new Art String Quartet, featured this year on the cover of 'Orchestra News,' is becoming prominent across the United States.

"We're good enough now that we could have bookings anywhere in the country" said Frank Spinosa, violin.

A recent gathering here of the American Society of University Composers featured performances by the Quartet, giving the ensemble necessary exposure, he said.

Members of the Quartet are Spinosa, Eugene Lombardi, violin; William Magers, viola; and Takayori Atsumi, cello.

Spinosa said that one of the main purposes of the Quartet is to advertise the growing string program here. Both groups perform concerts in high schools throughout the state, publicizing ASU's music programs.

Sun Devils slip in polls; Arizona joins top twenty

Despite a 28-3 win over San Jose State Saturday, ASU dropped among the rankings of the top 20 college football teams.

The Sun Devils dropped one position to 12th on the Associated Press poll and two places to 14th on the United Press International poll.

While ASU was falling in the ratings, Arizona (5-0) broke into the top twenty on both polls for the first time since 1968 when it had an 8-1 and record was ranked 19th.

Arizona is ranked 17th by UPI and 19th by AP after its 22-14 win over New Mexico last week.

Alabama, Oklahoma and Michigan still trail Ohio State atop the college football rankings following a weekend that saw Nebraska drop from second place to 11th and defending champion Southern California fall from fourth to sixth.

Nebraska dropped after losing to Missouri, 13-12. Southern California was behind Washington State 21-17 at the half, but came back in the third quarter for a 46-35 victory.

Freshmen, sophomores and first-semester juniors are eligible for the spirit squad, though candidates must be ASU students carrying seven or more semester hours. A 2.0 (c) average or better is also required.

Four men and four women are chosen for the squad with candidates being judged on leadership ability, personality, appearance and creativity. Male candidates are further judged on agility, strength and coordination and female candidates on ability to dance and coordination.

Applications are available at the Memorial Union Information Desk and in MU 222 and are due Friday.

Green gets WAC honor, career rushing record

Woody Green

ASU halfback Woody Green, who now owns the Western Athletic Conference career rushing record, has been named Offensive Player of the Week by the conference for his performance against San Jose State.

The 6-1, 205-pound senior from Portland, Ore., ran for 160 yards in 24 carries as the Devils beat the Spartans 28-3. That yardage upped his career total to 3,024 yards in 490 carries, an average of 6.2 yards per carry. Green broke the previous conference record of 2,935 yards set by New Mexico's Fred Henry from 1970-72.

As a team, the Devils have rushed for 1,274 yards and are averaging just over five yards per carry.

Green has carried the ball 73 times in five games this season, gaining 452 yards and scoring two touchdowns.

A knee injury in the Oregon game kept Green out of action for the Devils' encounter with Washington State and he saw limited action against Colorado State.

Green beat out Brigham Young split end Jay Miller and Utah flanker Steve Odom for the conference offensive honors.

Miller caught 12 passes for 186 yards in BYU's 26-24 loss to Iowa State. Odom caught four passes for 64 yards, including a 44-yard touchdown. The Utah senior also returned two punts for 96 yards, one a 77-yard touchsown.

Other nominees were Don Willis of Texas-El Paso, John O'Connor of Arizona, Mike Kubowicz of New Mexico and Andy Lang of Colorado State.

Willis gained 153 yards on 19 carries and scored two touchdowns in the Miners' 31-27 loss to Lamar University
