Regents raise summer, extension course fees

The Arizona Board of Regents Saturday approved a $2 per semester hour increase in ASU summer session course fees, effective in June, and a $2 per semester hour increase in extension course fees, effective in July.

The new summer session fee will be $20 per semester hour and the new extension course fee will be $18 per semester hour.

The action will make the extension course fees the same as regular on-campus course fees for six semester hours or less.

"This is an effort to consolidate and bring up to date fees for the summer session," said John Schwada, ASU president.

The regents also authorized Schwada to investigate the possibility of establishing a $50,000 fee for the use of Sun Devil Stadium.

Dr. Paul Singer, a member of the board, said the current charge of $2,000 plus ten per cent of gross gate receipts or $5,000, whichever is greater, seems too small a price for use of the stadium.

"That isn't much money," he said.

Singer said the $50,000 figure could be waived for non-profit organizations.

In other action, the regents:

—Supported the UofA administration in its dismissal of Dr. Earl Peacock as head of the department of surgery at the UofA Medical Center.

—Approved the award of a $73,560 contract to Tanner Brothers Contracting Company, Inc., of Phoenix, for parking lot improvements in the area south of Apache Boulevard between College and McAllister Avenues.

—Approved the establishment of a cancer research laboratory in the ASU chemistry department. The primary goal of the laboratory will be the training of graduate students. It will be supported by grants and gifts from federal agencies and private foundations.

—Approved the use of Sun Devil Stadium for the Fiesta Bowl Dec. 21, and agreed to allow the winner of the ASU-UofA game Saturday to participate in the Fiesta Bowl.

—Approved a UofA decision to pay $120,000 in architect fees and abandon a $3 million married student housing plan.

Weekend rains brought out the ASU umbrellas but the National Weather Service says the wet weather gear can be stowed away for at least the next couple days with expected clearing and sunny skies. The weather service says early mornings will continue to be cold, however, with possible lows of 32. Photo by Richard Airis

ASU free legal clinic seeks additional funds

A free law clinic staffed and funded by the ASU College of Law needs $10,000 to continue serving the residents of Guadalupe, a low-income community south of Tempe.

ASU contributes $30,000 annually to the clinic, but $10,000 more must be raised by the College of Law, David Hay, current fund-raising chairman, said.

"When the clinic's Foundation grant funding expired — my version says they lost it because Governor Jack Williams doesn't believe in free legal clinics — Dean Pedrick (College of Law) became interested," Hay said.

"I think he had a lot to do with getting the University to contribute the $30,000," he said. "Dean Pedrick has fathered the program all the way through."

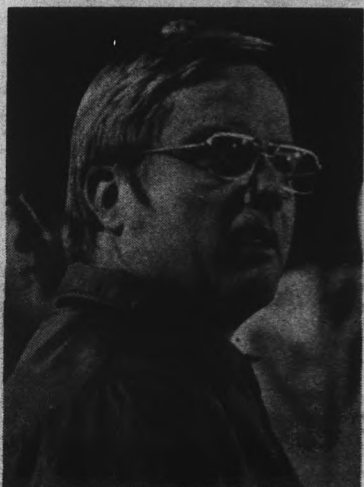

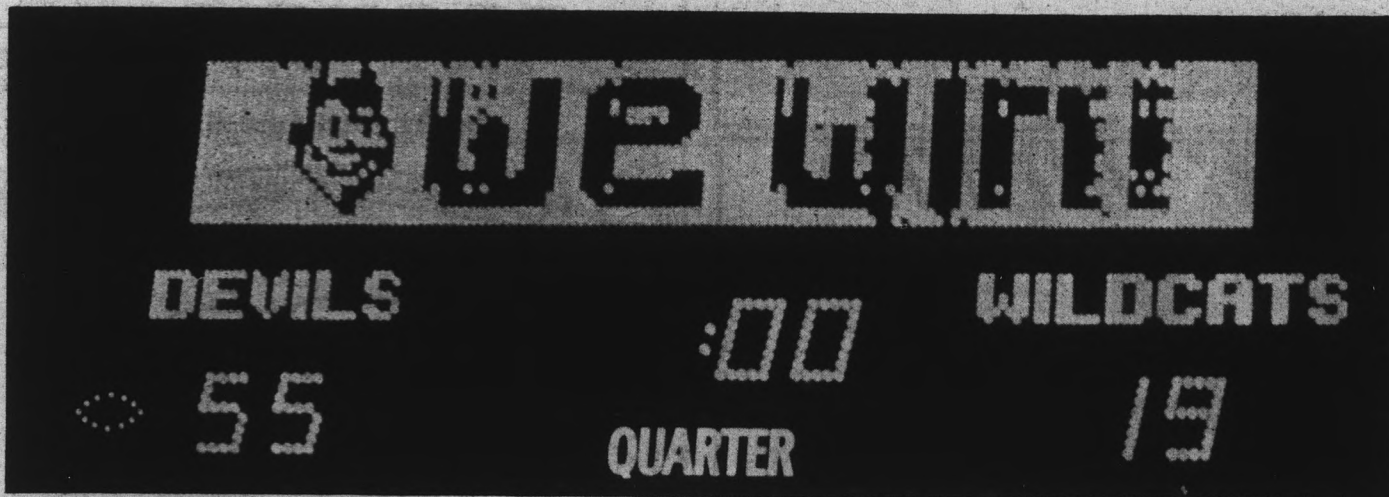

Hay said the clinic is staffed with ASU law students and graduate social work students. Free legal counseling and representation are offered.

"Cases have been taken all the way through court by some of the students — with the help of lawyers," he said.

Hay said the clinic helps the students meet their clinical work requirements while benefiting the people of Guadalupe.

How bitter-sweet it is

Arizona coach Jim Young's introduction to the ASU-UA rivalry left the Wildcat boss a bitter taste after his team collapsed in the second half and absorbed a 55-19 bombing in the "Big Game." Frank Kush appeared to be savoring the verdict as flashed on the giant scoreboard. Stories pages 6 and 7.

Tapes given to court

The White House turned over seven reels of subpoenaed Watergate tapes to U.S. District Court Judge John Sirica Monday.

The White House asked that all or parts of three of the tapes be withheld from a federal grand jury.

Three other tape recordings were given to Sirica to back the White House's contention that conversations of June 20, 1972 and April 15, 1973 were not recorded. Sirica said the court will listen to only enough of the tapes to determine the absence of the subpoenaed conversation.

The April 15 conversation was with former White House counsel John Dean, and the June 20 conversation was with former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell.

Woods heard only part of tape

Rose Mary Woods, President Nixon's personal secretary, testified Monday she had listened to only one part of a Watergate tape recording.

The White House says the tape is missing an 18-minute segment of a conversation between Nixon and former chief of staff H.R. Haldeman.

Woods testified she transcribed a portion of a conversation between Nixon and aide John Ehrlichman, and she also took down a portion when Haldeman entered the office and all three were speaking. She said she listened to the tape only long enough to be certain Ehrlichman had left the room.

Greek junta removes tanks

Greece's new military junta pulled tanks and extra troops out of Athens Monday, and began attacking pressing social and economic problems.

Lt. Gen. Phaedon Gizikis, Greece's new president, presided over a three-hour cabinet session and freed three former politicians who were put under house arrest last week.

George Papadopoulos, former president, remained a prisoner in his seaside villa. He was deposed Sunday in a bloodless coup by a group of conservatives.

For part-time students

Board considers extra fee

In a closed meeting the student affairs committee Monday discussed the possibility of allowing students with less than seven credit hours to use student facilities.

The committee reached no conclusion on the proposal for an optional $25 fee that would allow part-time students the use of special student discounts on tickets and the student health insurance plan.

Dr. George Hamm, the committee chairman said, "This would give 7,000 more students the use of University facilities."

Hamm said this would lead to an overcrowding of student facilities.

Also discussed were plans to impose stricter regulations on the use of textbooks.

According to ASASU President Mark Kerrigan, a member of the committee, it was proposed that any textbook assigned by a teacher should be used for a minimum of two years and should be used for a minimum of two years and should be the cheapest available that was suitable.

sponsored by the Student Bar Association to help close the $10,000 gap, he said.

"The movie, The Paper Chase, will be shown Dec. 5 — this will be its first-run showing — at 8 p.m. in the Thomas Mall Theater," Hay said. "It's a story of a freshman Harvard law student going through the grind—kind of apropos for the cause."

Tickets will be sold as donations at $5, $10, and $25, and will be tax deductible. Students can buy tickets for $3 each.

"We had to pay $2 a seat for the theater — an outlay of about $1600," Hay said. "We hope to get 800 the first night. Then if we've found that we've sold enough, we'll have a second showing Dec. 9."

"We'd love to get $10,000 out of this one benefit, but I'm sure we will not, which means we'll have to have other benefits this year," he said.

Giving his support to the benefit, Pedrick said, "The Guadalupe Law School Clinic is vital to the people of Guadalupe and to the educational program of the College of Law."

Physics department offers new course

"The Energy Crisis" is the title of a new course offered by the ASU physics department this spring. Topics studied will include thermal pollution, the radiation controversy, the geothermal alternative and the solar alternative.

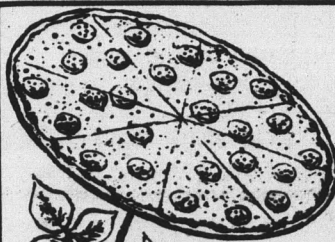

The course, to be taught by Assoc. Professor Richard Jacob, will meet at 10:40 on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Murdock Hall 200.

Students who complete a term project will earn three hours of credit. The course may also be taken for two credit hours, without the term project. There are no prerequisites.

Further information about the course may be obtained by calling Jacob at 965-7115.

STATE PRESS is published by Arizona State University Tuesday through Friday during the academic year, except holidays and examination periods. Entered as second class matter at Tempe, AZ, 85281.

Does tenure hide incompetence?

By GREG HAGAN

Once a professor has been teaching three years at ASU it is almost impossible to fire him.

The protection against being fired for almost every teaching sin except skipping class is provided under the label "Stability of employment" or "tenure" in the University policy.

ACCORDING TO the Faculty Guide, "The positions of professor and associate professor are considered permanent and are subject to reappointment until retirement or disability after three years of satisfactory continuous and full-time service in a department of the University."

After five years the position of assistant professor is considered permanent. These positions are considered permanent, the guide says, provided the individual's services continue to be satisfactory, are needed and funds are available to pay for them.

The stability of employment system at ASU provides an evaluation system for incoming professors. The chairman of each department evaluates annually each professor in his department who has not achieved stability of employment.

THE CHAIRMAN interviews professor each year, and the new faculty member is told about his performance up to that time.

Faculty not under stability of employment are informed in writing by the Dean if their services are to be terminated.

If the faculty member is recommended for stability of employment by his chairman, the recommendation is sent to the Dean.

THE DEAN refers the recommendations to the Academic Vice President, who reviews them and orders the Dean to issue letters to the professors saying they will receive stability of employment.

Faculty members who have already attained stability of employment are reviewed only in regard to promotions and raises. There is no provision for reviewing the performance of a professor to see if he is still doing satisfactory work.

If his performance falls down or he slacks off it only affects his promotion or his next raise.

CRITICS OF this policy says it protects the incompetent. Supporters say tenure is necessary if a professor is going to have independence to make his views known and argue unpopular causes.

The tenure issue at ASU is an old one. The Faculty Guide is being rewritten, says Dr. Duncan Patten, assistant academic vice president, and the ASU policy on tenure is being examined.

A committee of four deans and one professor is reviewing recent studies published on academic tenure, says Dr. Willard Pedrick, chairman of the committee.

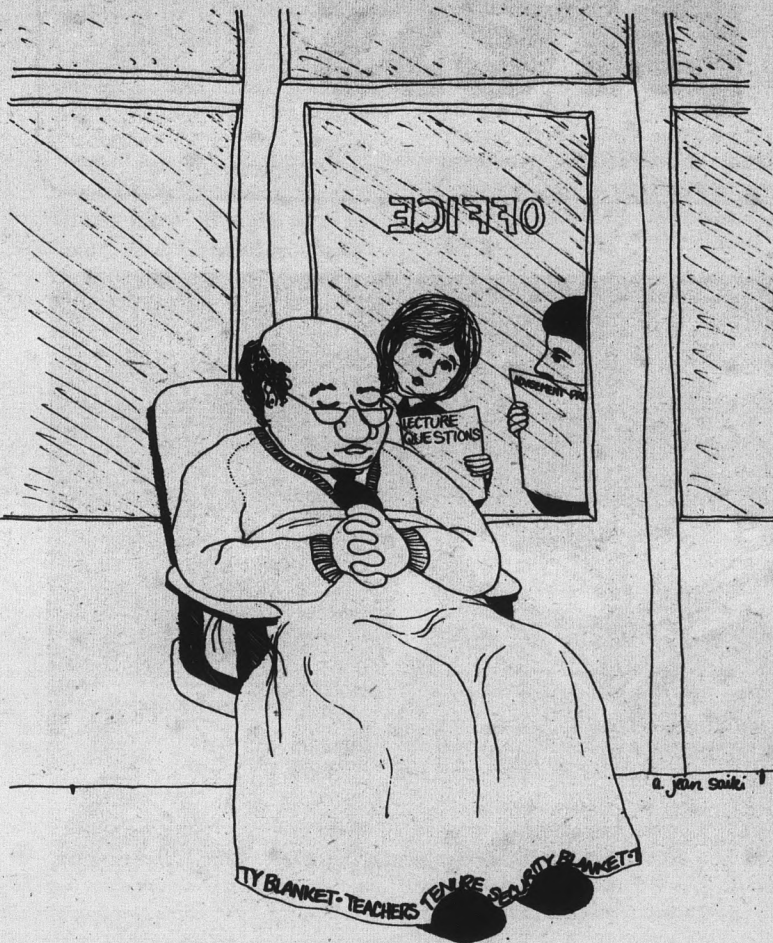

PEDRICK SAYS the committee is exploring the significance and value of the various suggestions regarding tenure.

"The committee was asked to study tenure and point out questions. It does not have the authority to finally resolve anything," Pedrick said.

Pedrick said the committee is still in the initial stages and hard at work. "We hope to have a report sometime in December," he said.

ONE OF the most important studies, says Pedrick, is a

Your $25

The University administration is willing to increase our student fee by $25 next year, but has so far been reluctant to tell us what the increase in revenue will pay for.

The decision to increase the fee was reached over the summer, and inquiries as to where the extra money will go were sent to Gilbert Cady, vice president of business affairs, as soon as school began in September.

Cady replied that an exact breakdown would be decided upon and released within two weeks, or by the first of October at the latest.

Asked again at the beginning of October, Cady said the breakdown would be available "soon."

Last week, a full two and a half months after our original inquiry, we were again told the figures would be available in two weeks.

Naturally, we're beginning to wonder about the administration's methods in regard to the fee increase. If it is that difficult to find places to spend this added income, roughly $750,000 per semester, why is it so necessary to extract it?

Apparently, the fee is to be increased to put us more on a par with other universities. Since those in charge are finding it so difficult to tell us what they'll use the money for, it's obvious the fee is to be increased merely for the sake of the increase, rather than University need.

A more reasonable way to go about the increase, if it is in fact necessary, would be to compile a budget, decide how much money will be needed, and increase, or even (heaven forbid) decrease the fee to meet budgetary needs.

This way, the needs of the students would be served. And, after all, isn't that the objective of the administration?

Blaming the prophets

When you're stuck in Ajo some rainy Sunday afternoon either out of gas or with a broken fan belt, don't curse the environmentalists for causing the fuel shortage that shut down the gas stations.

The environmentalists in fact, have been telling the American people that the energy shortage was coming.

At least five years ago, the environmentalists told the people there would be a natural gas shortage. And, by 1972, there was a natural gas shortage.

The environmentalists have been warning all of us that our fossil fuel resources are finite. Nature has provided us with only so much petroleum, natural gas and even coal to use to make electricity, run our cars and fuel our factories.

We cannot continue to use huge quantities of these fossil fuels and expect them to last forever. They will run out.

The solution is not as simple as building the Alaskan pipeline, rationing gasoline and re-allocating fuel oil.

Alternative sources of power need to be found. Whether it be nuclear, thermal or solar, another source of power will have to be found if we decide to continue using energy at our present level.

Perhaps even more severe cutbacks may be necessary. But regardless of what happens concerning energy, the environmentalists will not be the ones to blame, they will only be the prophets.

Tenure—pros and cons

report and recommendations by the Commission on Academic Tenure in Higher Education.

The commission was funded by a Ford Foundation grant and was sponsored by the Association of American Colleges and the American Association of University Professors (AAUP).

The commission's report gives the pros and cons of the tenure issue. The pro side says tenure is an essential condition of academic freedom. By this they mean a professor can work free of outside pressure regardless of his findings or his utterances, without fear of losing his job.

THE ANTI-TENURE side says, since academic freedom must be assured to all teachers, tenured or not, it can't be essential to academic freedom. They say what is essential is academic due process, and tenure is merely a condition of employment.

Tenure is an important means of attracting men and women of ability into the teaching profession, the pro side says. By minimizing competitive economic incentives, tenure encourages professors to concentrate on their obligations to their students and disciplines.

The tenure system, in times of financial stress, diminishes the institution's opportunity to recruit and retain younger faculty, the anti-tenure side says. In this respect the system operates to the disadvantage of new entrants into the profession. This makes it difficult to expand the representation of women and minority groups in faculties.

TENURE CREATES a faculty with a strong long-term commitment to the institution, which also contributes to institutional stability, the pro side says.

The anti-tenure side says the opposite. Tenure commits the institution to the individual but not the individual to the institution. Tenured professors are free to leave for a better job elsewhere regardless of how damaging their departure may be for the institution.

Because institutions have to make a decision at a definite time regarding who to tenure and who to let go, tenure allows the institution to keep those faculty who are outstanding and release those who are not, the pro side says.

THE ANTI-SIDE says tenure forces an institution to make permanent appointments before it has adequately assessed an individual's competence. This puts the young faculty member under undue pressure to demonstrate his qualifications in too brief a time period.

The commission's report cites more pros and cons on the issue and offers 47 recommendations.

The major recommendation urges that faculty be retained.

THE MANY deficiencies of tenure are in its application and administration, the report says.

Dr. Duncan Patten, assistant academic vice president, said faculty flexibility is being reduced at ASU because there are so many tenured faculty members. Almost 60 per cent of the faculty members are tenured.

Dr. Thomas Hoult, sociology professor and this year's president of the AAUP, said, "Tenure is not absolute in Arizona.

IT DOES have some strength in that those who abuse it have to go to lots of trouble to undermine it," he said.

Hoult said he feels many of his colleagues think tenure is weak, but the regents were forced to go to a lot of trouble to get rid of Starsky. Morris Starsky was a tenured professor at ASU who was dismissed for skipping a class.

Pedrick said his committee is making a canvass of the issues. He said there will probably be a considerable time lag between when the committee's report is sent to Schwada and when important changes are made.

UofA, ASU head coaches review championship game

By ROGER WITTLIN

"ASU's offensive team has to be the best I've ever seen," Arizona head coach Jim Young said following a 55-19 loss to ASU in the Western Athletic Conference championship game.

Although admitting his team was soundly defeated, Young spoke highly of the Wildcats.

"Our offensive team did an excellent job the first half," he said. "We were forced to defense a squad that was the best total offensive team in the county and tonight they put everything together."

"You have to give ASU credit. That's the type of team they are. They really take the game to you and when you're behind by a couple of TD's the only thing to do is pass," Hill continued.

"I think the reason we were moving the ball well in the first half was because we could mix up the passing game with running and the option plays."

Although ending its

ASU wrestler runner-up in Oklahoma Open

ASU junior Eric Stevens was runner-up in the 177-pound weight class at the Oklahoma City Open Wrestling Tournament last weekend.

Stevens won three matches before losing to last year's Big Eight champion Rick Jones of Oklahoma State.

Other Devil grapplers who finished with 4-2 records and earned fifth-place finishes in their division were: freshman Tommy Sain, 118; freshman Kim Jeffries, 134; sophomore Jim Weed, 126; and junior Frank Penn, 158.

Head coach Jim Wadas said the tournament had approximately 300 wrestlers and was pleased with some outstanding individual efforts.

season on a sour note, Arizona can look upon the 1973 season as a satisfying one.

The Wildcats' 8-3 record was their best since 1968 and ASU head coach Frank Kush said the Wildcats deserved to play in a bowl game. "I think Arizona would be able to defeat Missouri or Auburn and both of those teams received bowl bids.

The Wildcats also were the best offensive team ever, averaging 413 yards per game.

Arizona entered the game with some impressive WAC defensive statistics. The Wildcats were first against the pass and second in overall team defense.

Young was surprised to learn that the Sun Devils rolled up 701 total yards, saying, "A couple of key turnovers led to a few ASU scores and from then on we had to play catch-up football."

Sophomore quarterback, Bruce Hill, riddled the ASU secondary in the first half for 245 yards.

"Bruce played an excellent game and was throwing the ball exceptionally well," Young said. "We're looking for a lot of good things from him in the next two years."

Dejected and solemn, Hill spoke of his team's failures in the locker room.

"What really hurt us was falling behind in the beginning of the second half," Hill said. We were only nine points down till they scored two quick touchdowns and put us in the hole."

Assistant coach Larry Smith said, "I'm already looking forward to 1974. I'm going through the Midwest the next few weeks for recruiting purposes. Oh, one other thing I'm damn proud of every one of those guys."

Next year Arizona returns Hill, fullback Jim Upchurch and halfback Willie Hamilton, along with standout flanker "T" Bell.

"Hey you watch us next year, we're gonna do some sticking man," Hill said.

It's 'lick city' for Wildcats

By JEFF STREET

It was "Lick City" in Sun Devil Stadium Saturday night as the Sun Devils under head coach Frank Kush erupted for 29 second-half points to crush Arizona's Wildcats 55-19.

"Lick City" is a term the Sun Devils adopted earlier in the year to describe what the opposing team could expect when playing in Tempe.

And "Lick City" it was. The Devils outperformed their rivals from Tucson in every category possible, capturing a fifth consecutive Western Athletic Conference championship and a third straight Fiesta Bowl bid.

Most of the record-setting crowd of 51,383 expected the Devils to prevail, but not by 36 points. The Wildcats were said to have the necessary tools to dethrone the Devils and reign as undisputed champs of the WAC.

"We figured it would be tough against them," said middle guard Sal Olivo, "but I didn't think they would fall apart like they did." We made a few adjustments at halftime and used different stunts, which helped us contain them."

Quarterback Danny White completed 22 of 38 passes for 331 yards and broke six NCAA records.

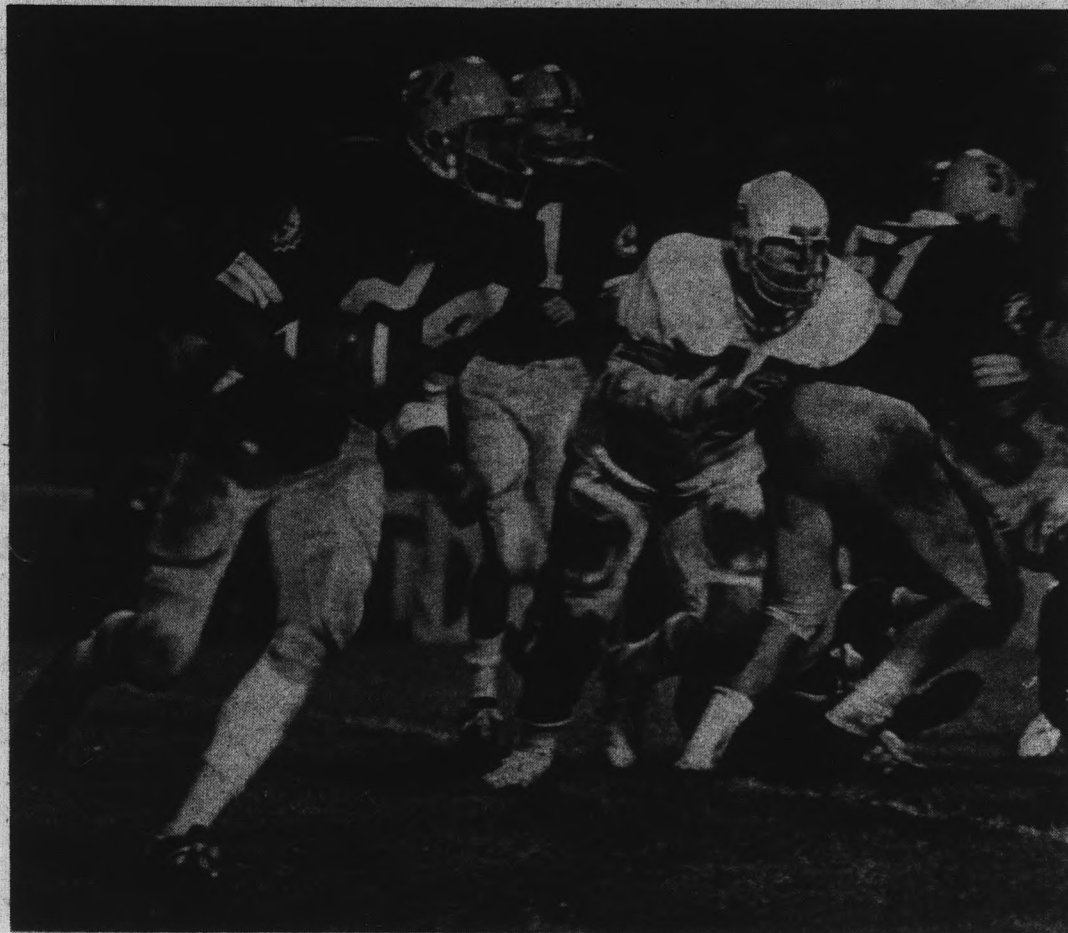

"When the defense holds 'em so well is what fires up the offense and that's what happened tonight," he said.

There was no great display of emotion and excitement in the ASU locker room at halftime, but instead an attitude of intense concentration prevailed amongst the players as they huddled in groups with their respective coaches.

Defensive coordinator Larry Kentera provided the Sun Devil defensive unit with an inspiring appeal to their pride, saying they (the defense) had failed to do their job stopping Arizona's offense.

"You guys have got to stop that quarterback or they'll run right over us and pick us apart with their passing," Kentera

White sets six NCAA marks as Devils beat rivals 55-19

Owens reverses for six

Sun Devil wingback Morris Owens scampers around right end untouched on wingback reverse for six yards and a touchdown in third quarter action against Arizona.

Devils went on to win, 55-19, for fifth straight WAC title and third straight Fiesta Bowl berth. Owens set an NCAA record of 21.5 yards per catch for 50 receptions.

shouted. "You guys have got to get off your butts and get that quarterback."

Kentera's antics must have motivated the Devil defense because they just about completely stopped Arizona's offense in the second half.

Arizona quarterback Bruce

Hill picked the ASU secondary apart with 245 yards passing in the first half, but could only manage 40 in the final 30 minutes. Fullback Jim Upchurch and halfback Willie Hamilton combined for 120 yards rushing in the first half, but met against stiff resistance the second half and got only 17 yards.

"The adjustments the defense made in the second half were great," Kush said. "Psychologically they played a tough game and made the proper changes to make the difference in the second half."

The Devils did get fired up — to the tune of 701 yards total offense and 55 points, which boosted their national lead, in the offensive categories and enabled them to take over the national scoring lead from Alabama and UCLA.

"As soon as we got out there, I knew we could score on them," said wingback Morris Owens, who got in on the NCAA record setting with seven catches for 128 yards and finished regular season play with an average of 21.5 yards per catch for 50 catches. Owens erased the old mark of 20.2 set in 1967 by Elmo Wright of Houston.

"They told me towards the end that I needed only two more catches to break the record, so I told Danny and he hit me with a couple short ones," said Owens, who now has caught 50 passes for 1,076 yards.

Halfback Woody Green and fullback Ben Malone provided a one-two running punch, combining with Owens and White to become the most prolific offensive backfield in NCAA history.

Green became the nation's fourth leading rusher of alltime, rambling 192 yards on 25 carries. The Devil senior has rushed for 1,182 yards in 11 games this season and has 3,754 yards in three years with ASU. He ranks behind such notables as Cornell's Ed Marinaro, New Mexico State's Ron P. James and Oklahoma's Steve Owens.

Malone is not far behind Green in yardage gained this season. The senior fullback carried the ball 26 times for 147 yards Saturday night and upped his seasonal yardage to 1,129.

Kush and several of the coaches were treated to early showers by the players following the win. Defensive backfield coach Fred Glick who coached at Arizona before joining the Devils emerged from the showers lamenting "It took six years for me to get thrown in the showers but it was worth it."

Goodwill helps disabled find jobs

By AMY ROBERTSON

He used to work as a diesel mechanic until he fell and hurt his back. During the next nine years he had five operations and no job. Then he was ready to start working again. He had the knowledge and the background. He had the ability. He'd just have to take it slowly. But nobody wanted him.

For a year Aloysius "Mac" Little applied for jobs. Potential employers would ask him how soon he could start and Little would say "right now." As soon as he explained the reason for his unemployment, the employer would say "We'll call you." The phone never rang.

A friend finally referred Little to Goodwill Industries of Central Arizona, 412 N. 16th St., Phoenix. Goodwill hired Little as a mechanic four years ago, giving him a chance to readjust to working. He is now the Superintendent of Transportation in charge of the 14 Goodwill trucks which pick up discarded clothing and items from the Phoenix area.

Those trucks will be picking up old clothes, shoes, radios, lamps, records and books from the ASU area Dec. 26. From Dec. 13-26 Goodwill is placing barrels on all dorm floors as part of its "Barrel it for Good Willy" drive.

The drive, which features Dorothy Loeltz, a sophomore at ASU, as Goodwill's poster girl, is being repeated because of the success of last year's campus drive.

After the trucks pick up the barrels of ASU students' discards, the items will be taken to the Goodwill plant. There the items will be sorted, repaired, and put in one of eight retail outlet Goodwill stores.

The profits from those retail stores allow Goodwill to employ about 300 handicapped workers. Through their jobs at Goodwill 104 of those handicapped people were able to find other jobs last year.

Little said he was amazed by the change in his fellow employees after they'd been at Goodwill for awhile.

"I've never seen anything like it," he said. "Everybody works hard. They were on relief or whatever. Now they're tax paying people."

Little said some of the new employees will just sit at a table without talking to anybody for a day or two. "Then when they see others as bad off, they start laughing and talking."

Most of the Goodwill employees can't make it on their own because of mental or physical handicaps. Some were drug addicts or alcoholics. Now they're receiving an average pay of $1.64 per hour.

The director of community affairs for Goodwill, Ed Savola, said the organization is nonprofit and is dependent upon the useable discards contributed by others. "It's people just giving," Savola said.

Personnel head speaks Wednesday

"Hints on Job Interviews" is the subject of a speech to be sponsored by the Student National Education Association.

Pat Pomeroy, personnel director for Mesa School District, is scheduled to speak at 7:30 p.m. Wednesday in the Farmer building, 207.

Goodwill auxiliary president speaks at AWARE meeting

Roberta Overman, president of the Goodwill Industries Auxiliary will be the speaker for Thursday's Association for Women's Active Return to Education (AWARE) meeting.

Overman will speak about "Fulfillment Through Worthwhile Community Involvement" at noon in Farmer Education building 213.

Overman was financial manager for Goodwill's $96,000 antique sale, and was recently named volunteer worker of the United States.

McClintock hall hosts tours at open house

McClintock Residence Hall will host an Open House at 3:30 p.m. Wednesday in the McClintock courtyard.

"The hall will be open to all girls who are interested in living in the hall," Sandy Janzen, vice president of McClintock, said.

Prospective McClintock residents are required to have a 2.80 grade point average.

"There will be tours of the facilities and opportunities," she said. "This will be your opportunity to explore an innovating dorm lifestyle."

Refreshments will be served.

10 locales that will set your date in awe if your apartment doesn't.

1. Visiting the ancient temples in Barbados.
2. Sailing along Dorado Beach in Puerto Rico.
3. The French Grand Prix.
4. Sail fishing off the coast of Venezuela.
5. The museums of Amsterdam.
6. Bombay and Moslem mosques in Trinidad.
7. Snorkling in Montigo Bay.
8. Opening night of a Broadway musical.
9. Sun bathing on the French Riviera.
10. Skiing Les Arcs in the French Alps.

However... we realize that in terms of distance and financial restrictions these excursions may become a little extensive for a weekend gig. Therefore, we urge that you consider Canlen House. We think you will find it not only an economical alternative, but also quite suitable for those more demanding encounters.
