

Attorney General blesses Graham's use of stadium

by JASON SHAW

It is constitutional for evangelist Billy Graham to use Sun Devil Stadium for religious purposes, according to the office of Arizona Atty. Gen. Gary Nelson.

Nelson's personal secretary said Tuesday, "After much research Mr. Nelson has reached the decision that the Graham Crusade can use the stadium."

Nelson will make the announcement on his ruling today.

The controversy over the use of the stadium by Graham began January 19th when the Arizona Board of Regents voted against Graham using the stadium.

The Regents made the decision after their legal advisers told them the use of the stadium by Graham would be unconstitutional because it violated the separation between church and state.

Registration:

Computerized system works well, but long lines still fray tempers

Despite long lines for walk-through registration and drop-add, the Registrar's Office calls the new pre-registration system a success, and hopes to extend its use in the future.

"We're extremely pleased," said ASU Registrar Enos Underwood. "The reception of the new system by professors, departmental officials and students has been very good overall."

The new system uses machine-scanned forms instead of the old, hand-sorted ones, cutting the sorting time from several days to a few hours.

"The per cent of errors in filling out the forms was much lower than we expected. There was only about five or six per cent error in filling out the forms, which is about the same as it was with the old system," he said.

"Of course the key to the whole system is the proper filling out of the forms by the students. I'm sure that as students realize that this is an important document they'll spend a little more time," he said.

Underwood said 994 more students participated in pre-registration this semester than last spring semester.

"Approximately 19,000 students turned in course request forms," he said. "Of those about 17,000 received full schedules, and 14,263 paid their tuition and were registered."

Underwood said the number of complaints from students has been no higher than in the past.

"Of course there have been a number of complaints. We've received about 35 or 40, and in each case we pulled the student's form and asked him to come in to go over it with us," Underwood said.

"I don't remember a single case in which the problem was not caused by the student improperly filling out the sheet. There may have been one or two, but I don't remember them."

"For example, one boy who was an art major came in complaining that he didn't get a certain class. We pulled his form and found that he had filled in OR instead of OH. Since there is no class with an OR prefix, the computer just dropped that class."

Underwood said the new system is much faster than the old one, giving deans and department chairmen more time to review student demand for classes and make appropriate changes.

"There is greater emphasis all the time on finding out what the students want, and concentrating on meeting their needs," he said. "We're getting better acceptance of this idea all the time."

Attorney general gives okay to Graham crusade in stadium

Many of the regents, though they voted against Graham, personally supported the use of the stadium for his meeting.

Margaret Christy, president of the board said she is happy with Nelson's decision and knew it was coming.

She said Nelson's opinion overrides the regents' legal adviser.

"I'm certainly in favor of Billy Graham using the stadium," she said.

Cristy said that the regents received many letters and telephone calls in support of Graham. She said no real outside opposition is expected to Graham using the stadium.

Christy said she is sure that now the regents will all vote in favor of Graham using the stadium.

"We're letting Billy Graham use the stadium because we don't expect him to wreck it."

Another regent, Dr. Paul Singer, said he was also in favor of the use of the stadium by Graham.

Singer said he has been in touch with Nelson in the last few days and found out about his decision Tuesday.

He said the regents decision about Graham will not change their policy on the use of the stadium by outside groups, even if they have enough money to rent it.

"Personally I would vote against any rock groups using the stadium because of the pot, the wreckage and the camping."

"We're letting Billy Graham use the stadium because we don't expect him to wreck it," he said.

Singer said, "Personally I would vote against any rock groups using the stadium because of the pot, the wreckage, and the camping."

Christy said she has no objection to any other group using the stadium.

Williams appoints former mayor, academy head as new regents

Governor Jack Williams Tuesday appointed Rudy Camel, former mayor of Tempe, and Ralph Bilby, president of Arizona Academy, to the Arizona Board of Regents.

Bob Macon, special assistant to the governor, said Bilby is from a longtime Flagstaff family and is one of Arizona's most outstanding citizens. He is also owner of Babbit Bros., a trading post which Macon said is well-known all over Arizona.

"Mr. Camel is from Tempe and is a great supporter of ASU," he said. "He is a former mayor of Tempe (1966-1968) and is now on the Arizona Highway Commission."

Because Camel's term on the Highway Commission, will not expire until June 30, Macon said he will be replaced by Francis Connolly, publisher of the Tempe Daily News.

If approved by the Arizona Senate, Bilby will replace former member Norman Sharber of Flagstaff, whose term ended Jan. 21. Camel will fill the vacancy left by John Lentz of Douglas, whose term also expired.

Bilby and Camel will begin their eight year terms on the board as soon as they are approved by the Senate.

"As quickly as the appointment papers are prepared, they will be carried over to the Senate," Macon said. "These are indeed very outstanding men — I'm sure they'll be approved."

ASU student runs for Tempe mayor

Jim Barber, a 21-year-old ASU real estate major, is planning to run for mayor of Tempe on a budget of zero, if he possibly can.

"I'm not going to spend any money if I can help it," Barber said in an interview.

He took out the petition for mayor January 9 and has collected about 130 signatures by going door to door.

"Some people have a little hysterical laugh but I've had very few turn me down," Barber said.

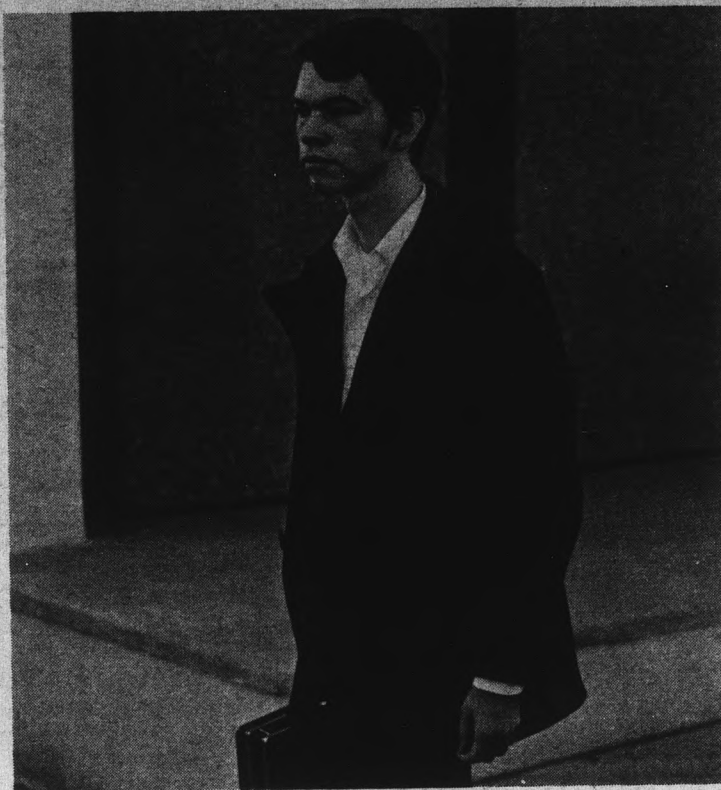

"I decided to run after I saw an article in the paper about Bill LoPiano running," he said.

Barber has a campaign staff of three people — himself and two friends.

"I plan to speak in front of public groups if I get enough signatures on my petition," he said.

Barber has not yet crystallized his campaign platform and will only say he is for bike paths and gun control.

He now works 20 hours per week at a part-time job and is taking five classes, but says he plans to devote "as much time as possible" to the campaign.

Students get new bookdrop for library

A second bookdrop at Circle Drive and the southeast corner of Hayden Library gives students a new place to leave their books.

Students were overfilling the first bookdrop and were leaving books on top of it, said Edward Danaher, assistant university librarian. Books were being stolen as a result, he said.

The second bookdrop was moved from its previous location across the street from the Women's Physical Education building, where Danaher said it only received a small number of books.

Chem students form fraternity

Eight ASU students and a chemistry professor have taken a step toward establishing an ASU chapter of the national chemistry fraternity, Alpha Chi Sigma. The ASU fraternity is a colony of the UofA chapter.

The students and chemistry professor Tom Thompson pledged to the Tucson chapter at UofA because it is the closest, said Dr. Richard Juvet, campus adviser for the group.

"The normal way to become active is to become a colony of a chapter nearby," Juvet said. "We will be a colony of UofA for about one year and then we will petition for our own chapter."

"If the group is able to sustain itself, if it expands and just doesn't fall apart, we will probably get our own chapter," Juvet said.

He said the main objectives of the group are to strive for the advancement of chemistry both as a science and as a profession and to aid its members in the attainment of their ambitions. He said the group will probably have about 35 members in a year.

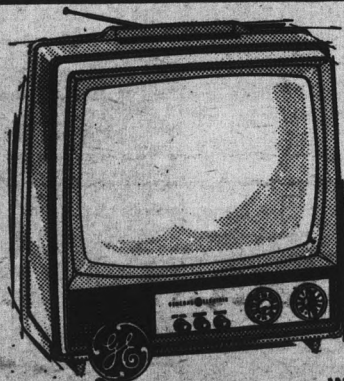

Alpha Chi Sigma has 45 active chapters nationally and is found on most campuses with major chemistry departments.

The Regents' Fiasco

The Arizona Board of Regents has disgraced the State of Arizona, this University and itself in the Sun Devil Stadium-Billy Graham Crusade fiasco.

Atty. Gen. Gary Nelson has ruled it is possible, under the Arizona Constitution, to rent the facility to the Graham crusade after all.

This state of events would seem to suggest several things. The Board of Regents voted to prohibit Graham without an adequate or correct knowledge of Arizona law, or that because of the violent reaction of local leaders and news media, the law has been changed to fit the situation. They may even have been trying to set a precedent to keep less desirables out.

None of the possible situations is particularly appealing.

It is also quite interesting to view the Graham fiasco from another perspective.

It seemed to be quite all right for Josh, a proclaimed religious crusader sponsored by the Campus Crusade for Christ, to use the men's gym and other campus facilities.

No complaints about legal conflicts between the church and state were voiced at that time. Why the big problem when the internationally respected evangelist Billy Graham plans to come? Further, if Graham was acceptable for an appearance in 1964, why not now?

Since Nelson has given the legal okay to Graham, the regents will almost certainly do the same.

The question is why the regents couldn't have gotten the same Nelson legal opinion without first voting to prohibit the Graham appearance and creating such a fiasco.

Looking ahead at ASASU

This is part two in a series by the ASASU president.

In the past few years there has been an increasing number of civil court cases involving students and universities, the majority of which have been non-academic. These cases have ranged anywhere from conflicts over admission standards to ones involving freedom of speech.

The question that must be asked is why should these cases be going to civil courts? Can they be resolved within the University? The same questions may be asked in cases regarding academic student vs. teacher conflicts that are resulting in litigation. It appears as yet the Universities have failed to develop an effective system of arbitration to halt the non-academic conflict from getting into the courts.

But is it totally necessary that academic conflicts must result in court battles? Growing numbers of universities are saying "no". They are developing efficient, effective methods of academic appeal for their students. Such appeals are remedying the conflict within the university. They are able to resolve the problem without extending the confrontation into the courts. They are eliminating an exercise that is often costly for the student and embarrassing for the professor or university.

The system being used is most often referred to as the Academic Appeal Board. This board protects the student from arbitrary behavior on the part of a professor and assures a measure of protection for faculty if students should attempt to use the civil courts to obtain their own needs.

I know that most student-teacher grade conflicts do not result in court cases. None the less, an effective system of appeal must be developed for the students so that such a situation need not arise.

In November the ASASU Executive Council proposed the establishment of such an appeal board. We have asked that the Board be composed of faculty and students and that they have as a final form of jurisdiction the power to resolve a conflict that cannot be settled within the framework of the student-teacher-classroom relationship.

In addition, there should be a process of appeal proposed so that the student knows who he has to appear before prior to his presentation to the Appeal Board. Ultimately if the conflict cannot be resolved then the Board shall have the power to do so, even if it means altering a grade if evidence necessitates such a decision.

This is but another step in the greater recognition of student rights within the classroom.

This year another attempt is being made at organizing the students of the State into an association. The purpose of such a move is to give us greater recognition as to our needs and to improve our position through unifying the students of the State's universities and colleges.

The Executive Council has proposed this association to be organized with a paid director and staff. The direction of such an organization would cover four main areas.

First, from a social position, this organization would represent student opinion on legislation affecting students. It would give students a greater voice in the public process.

Secondly, it would concern itself with consumer information and advisement to students in college communities. In addition, it would encourage establishment of student co-operatives in communities where students attend school.

It would represent student opinion on legislation concerning aid to education. Also, legally, it could be a source of information to the individual student as to his legal rights. This is especially important to the students seeking legal aid.

Finally, academically, this organization could provide coordination among the schools concerning booking for speakers. In addition, it could provide a resource center for students on a variety of topics.

Textilia: 'strangely alive'

"Textilia," an exhibit of textile art, is being shown in the first and second floor MU display cases, said Roseanne Cartledge, head of the exhibit. Gail Humphreys and Patricia Hartleben are the artists.

Because Humphreys and Hartleben are working in a new medium they are not restricted by established methods and authorities, said Dr. Anthony Gully, of the ASU art faculty.

"These constructions attest to skilled and disciplined craftsmanship," Gully said. "They demonstrate a metamorphosis of assorted materials into soft sculptures."

Alpaca, wool and cotton are materials the artists used for their sculptures. The materials dictate the direction of the art, Gully said.

"Both artists concede, to some degree, that the organic material they are working with has a life of its own," he said.

"Though quiescent, he said, the woven sculptures are strangely alive and seek a response from us."

The exhibit is open to the public from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. Monday through Friday until Feb. 1.

ASU requests over $53 million

ASU is asking for nearly $6.5 million more than last year in its operating budget request for 1974-75. A report from the University's Bureau of Publications, shows ASU has requested roughly $53.5 million.

A breakdown of the budget indicates the largest items include $39.9 million for salaries and wages, and $4.8 million for employee-related expenses.

ASU is asking for more money in these categories, the report says, to cover an anticipated enrollment increase and charges in programs and requirements. The funds would be used to create approximately 137 new faculty, staff and student positions. The $4.8 million would cover employee fringe benefits.

Over $2.5 million was requested for capital expenses. Roughly $1.1 million of this amount would go towards library acquisitions.

ASU is also submitting a separate budget, a capital outlay request, for $14,177,916. The report says this money would cover anticipated expenses for building completions and additions, campus improvements and land acquisitions.

Both requests have been approved by the Board of Regents, and they are being submitted to the legislature, which will determine how much state money will be allocated.

Business frat charged with sex discrimination

The Women's Equity Action League (WEAL) has filed complaints against ASU and 13 other selected universities that sponsor chapters of Delta Sigma Pi, an international business fraternity which limits membership to men only.

Although unaware of the complaint, Warren Soberg, president of Delta Sigma Pi, an international business fraternity which limits membership to men only.

Although unaware of the complaint, Warren Soberg, president of the Delta Sigma Pi fraternity at ASU, said he has been expecting reaction to the organization for a long time.

Delta Sigma Pi has chapters on hundreds of university campuses for students interested in business. The fraternity offers programs of professional and social activities designed to benefit all business and economics majors.

In violation of Title IX of the Education Amendments of 1972, ASU sponsors Delta Sigma Pi, an organization that denies women the participation of educational and professional activity, says the WEAL complaint.

The title states that "No person in the United States shall, on the basis of sex, be excluded from participation in, be denied the benefits of, or be subjected to discrimination under any education program or activity receiving federal financial assistance." Weal says this can be interpreted to mean programs or activities sponsored by any educational institution that receives federal monies by way of grant, loan, or contract.

WEAL contends that a university should provide equal opportunity for men and women to achieve academic and professional goals.

According to Soberg, the business fraternity has hired four attorneys to deal with this problem of sex discrimination. From past chapter votes, Soberg said that over 90 per cent of the organization is in favor of leaving membership open only to men.

In its letter of complaint WEAL requested the Department of Health, Education and Welfare send letters to the 14 university presidents requesting that the university sever its connection with Delta Sigma Pi. Any institution which refuses to do so should be barred from receiving federal monies, the letter said.

Live And Study In A Bi-Lingual City

This is an opportunity to live and study in a bi-lingual city, away from the main tourist routes, yet close enough to large population centers to experience their cultural advantages. Oñate is a thousand year old city, with narrow, winding streets... a city with a long artistic and musical tradition... a perfect place to become actively involved with a unique culture.

Utah game opens Activity Center

Dr. Fred Miller, ASU athletic director, said the University Activity Center now under construction would be completed by Feb. 21 for the final three Sun Devil home basketball games. He said it was originally hoped five games could be played at the center, but construction delays have altered this.

Ned Wulk, head basketball coach, is anxious for the center to open. "I know the seniors on our team have waited quite a while for the new facility."

Wulk said disadvantages encountered in leaving the old Sun Devil Gymnasium would be far outweighed by playing in the new arena. "The excitement generated by playing in a new basketball facility and the added fans should be beneficial," he said.

The center will have a multi-purpose, four-sided scoreboard sponsored by United Bank, Valley Chevrolet Dealers' Association and the Western States Tire Company.

The scoreboard, one of the largest in the nation, is 20-feet wide, 24-feet high and weighs 14,000 pounds. It features an electronic message center to inform fans of statistical information and upcoming events.

Reservations for the final three games are now being accepted for a "mini" season ticket package. Miller said purchase of the "mini" package would enable the buyer to claim the same seats on a season basis during the 1974-1975 season.

Someday soon

The interior of the new University Activity Center is nearing completion. Workmen have begun laying the floor and putting in the seats. At the upper left is the new 4-sided scoreboard. Officials expect the arena to be ready for the ASU-Utah game Feb. 21.

New teams draft ASU grid stars

ASU running back Woody Green was the third player chosen in the first World Football League draft of college players. Green was drafted by the Jacksonville-Orlando franchise in the new league.

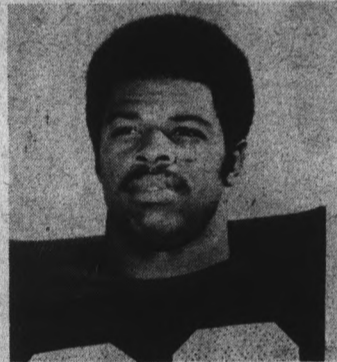

ASU quarterback Danny White was picked in the second round by Chicago and fullback Ben Malone was a fifth round pick by Toronto.

White said he would wait for the NFL draft later this month and listen to both league's.

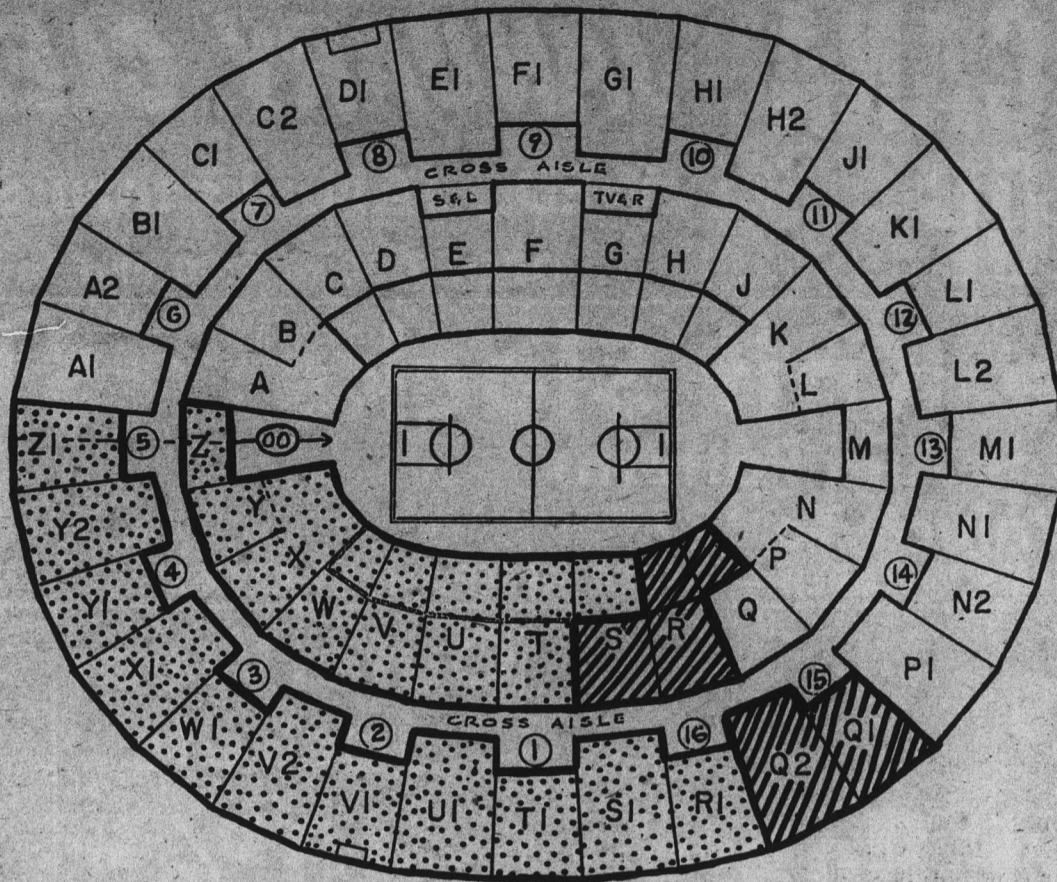

He was also drafted by the Houston Astros baseball team and will take into consideration any offer they make.

ASU sports on upswing

In a time when college athletics are struggling both artistically and financially, the programs at ASU are on the upswing, according to Dr. Fred Miller, ASU athletic director.

"We don't have a single program here at ASU that is not improving," Miller said.

Sun Devil football is gaining national recognition as exciting, wide-open, and above all, winning football.

The new basketball facility will be one of the finest in the nation with unparalleled viewing. Miller said the Sun Devil Basketball Classic tournament will be reinstated next season.

The tournament will find ASU hosting Nebraska, Long Beach State and Montana. Future tournaments will feature Wichita, San Diego, Tennessee and Northwestern.

The new outdoor track installed last year will be even better this season. The track was resurfaced because a chemical reaction damaged the original. The job was done at no charge to the University, Miller said.

Baseball has not been forgotten either. The new stadium will be opened for the coming season as the Devils once again defend their WAC title.
