University Plaza Hotel investor linked to purported Mafia chief

By Greg Smith

The self-made millionaire who is a principal investor in the planned University Plaza Hotel had business meetings in the 1960's with Joseph (Joe Bananas) Bonanno.

Bonanno, purportedly a former New York Mafia chief, was living at his Tucson home at the time of the meetings with sports promoter and land financier Anthony Nicoli, 49.

Nicoli is listed in Arizona Corporation Commission documents as president of University Plaza, Inc. The corporation was formed in November 1973 with ASU Athletic Director Fred Miller, Sun Devil

Expanding athletic complex embraces Kush-Miller hotel

Newly acquired land adjoins hotel site

By Carol Pyne

A proposed hotel on the edge of campus which will be partially owned by University athletic director Fred Miller and football coach Frank Kush is emerging as a future commercial headquarters for ASU sports programs.

Since Kush came up with the idea for the hotel on the northeast corner of Rural and University, several developments have occurred within the athletic complex which seemingly will enhance the value of the proposed hotel.

Miller, as chief architect for athletic planning, has had a hand in many of those decisions.

See related stories pages 2, 3 and 8

"Of course the athletic department is involved — there are athletic monies in there," Miller said.

Several of Kush's former pupils, including professional football players Danny White, Art Malone and Benny Malone, have invested heavily in the hotel partnership.

As he did when the story of the proposed hotel was first printed last January, Miller again denies any conflict of interest. "The motives are to go ahead and improve the physical plant here at ASU — purely and simply," he said.

The plans for the hotel were solidified when sports promoter Anthony Nicoli, a personal friend to Kush, threw his backing behind the project. Since that time, tenuous athletic expansion plans are becoming a reality:

Developments

—Joe Selleh track was constructed by Rural Road, approximately two blocks from the hotel site.

—The new University Activity Center has been completed, approximately two blocks from the hotel.

—The new Packard baseball stadium has been built near Rural Road, approximately 2½ blocks from the hotel.

—The athletic department has completed plans to build a new tennis complex almost across the street.

—The Rio Salado Project to develop a recreation area along the Salt River bottom, is taking shape. It would form the north boundary of the ASU athletic complex. The bridge at Rural Road has been completed and has arches that are sufficient to accommodate an eight-man racing shell.

—The University has traded land bordering the residence of ASU President John Schwada for land adjacent to the proposed hotel. The land, just north of the hotel site, will be used for practice fields, leaving no possibility for other commercial development in the immediate area of the expanding athletic complex.

According to hotel planning experts, there are no existing hotels in the immediate area which can accommodate large groups coming to ASU for football events, sporting events, University academic activities and the Fiesta Bowl.

Hotel plans have been modified from the original plan of 200 rooms to 300 rooms, ac-ording to Ray Evarts, an International Leisure Hosts executive directly involved with the hotel plans.

A survey to determine the size of visiting groups was taken by an ASU student, Evarts said. The partnership (the group of people planning to build the hotel) wants to employ University people rather than others, so Miller has been suggesting students for work such as advertising and publicity, he said.

The hotel is to be commercial, rather than a resort hotel with recreational facilities, Evarts said. "There are other facilities in town that you can work arrangements with to use," he said. A swimming pool is the only presently planned recreational facility.

ASU's new tennis center will be located near the corner of Transvaal and Rural, south of the track and nearly across the street from the proposed hotel.

This location was chosen by Miller in his role as athletic director, according to tennis coach Martin Pincus and

River bed sprouts goals

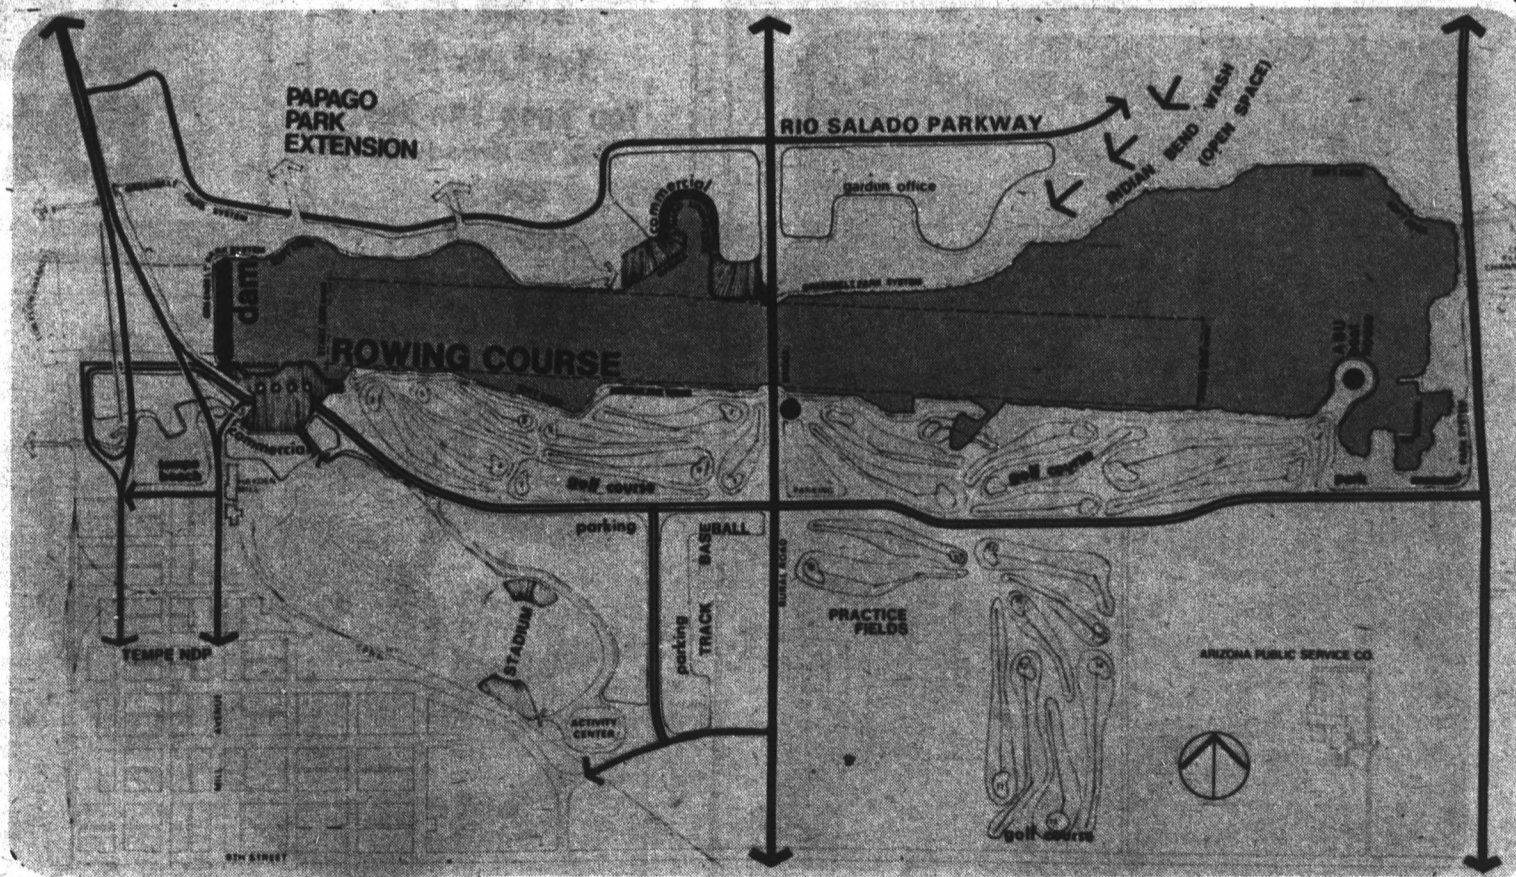

By Lynne Gittes and Nancy Wiese

The Rio Salado Project is an ambitious plan to turn the 40-mile 22,000 acre Salt River bed into a recreational, housing and industrial community.

The city of Tempe has appropriated $100,000 to purchase land on the river's north bank east of Mill Avenue as the site for the Rio Salado pilot project. The funds will be matched with another $100,000 from the Arizona Legislature, said Frank Bosh, executive director of the Valley Forward Association (VFA), a non-profit corporation that operates in conjunction with the Maricopa Association of Governments.

Senate committee votes student regent

By Patrick Denley

A bill to put a university student on the Arizona Board of Regents as a voting member was passed unanimously Thursday by the Arizona Senate Education Committee.

The committee disregarded personal statements opposing the bill by regent Rudy Campbell of Tempe and Lawrence Woodall, executive coordinator of the board.

Campbell and Woodall said students probably would not be knowledgeable enough to contribute to the work of the board over a proposed one-year term.

"I would like to see more student participation in some ways," Campbell said, but suggested students be advisory rather than voting members on the board.

"We're in charge of a $160 million budget, and we need people with background and experience in business to vote on that kind of money," Campbell added.

Sen. Bob Hungerford, R-Scottsdale, responded,

"By the time a student works himself through the educational process to where he may be appointed, he has served his apprenticeship and is just as knowledgeable as any present regent. We need refreshing young minds in the decision-making process."

After the committee's action, Campbell changed his position, saying, "It's fine," that the student regent be given a regular vote.

Woodall said he shared Campbell's concern that students will find little of interest on the board. "The regents are concerned with long range problems. They take very little action that has an immediate effect," Woodall said.

Sen. Sue Dye, D-Tucson, asked Woodall, "Do you believe a student would only be interested in improving conditions during his time as a student?"

Woodall answered, "Of course, a student, like any citizen, is interested in long range problems."

"Most of the problems students have are with the president of the university, not the regents," Woodall said.

Sen. Arthur Hubbard Sr., D-Ganado, asked: "Don't the university presidents follow the guidelines of the board? Just because you get bankers and businessmen on the board doesn't mean you get immediate recognition of students' problems."

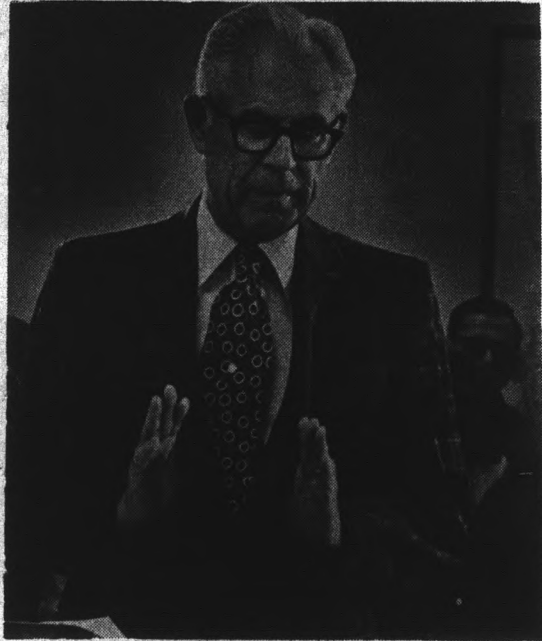

Associated Students President Rick Weiss said, "With help from the Arizona Students Association (ASA), the student regent will probably have more information available to him than most regents."

The ASA brought the idea of a student regent before the legislature, and has been lobbying for passage of the bill.

Jim Boardman, ASU student and executive director of the ASA, said to the committee, "To intimate that out of 7,500 students not one has the expertise to make any valuable contributions would be to insult the many fine colleges and departments in our universities."

Boardman said 18 states, soon to include California, now have students represented on university governing boards.

"Student membership on the Board of Regents would represent the final step in the evolution of student participation in government," he said, commenting on such decisions as granting the right to vote to 18-year-olds.

River may become park

The Rio Salado Project was conceived in 1966 by a fifth-year design class from the ASU College of Architecture.

ASU has been working on the program for three years, and the VFA for five. "A lot of progress is going on, and there's a lot of enthusiasm for the project now that people have something to look at and work on," Bosh said.

James Elmore, ASU architecture professor and chairman of the Rio Salado Steering Committee, said ASU and the city of Tempe will work together on the part of the project just north of the campus.

ASU development plans include a golf course directly behind the ASU sports complex, stretching west toward Rural Road. The river will flow behind the golf course, and a mile of the river will accommodate ASU water sports such as rowing contests, Elmore said.

Elmore said a bridge, now being built as part of phase one of the development, will connect the ASU golf course to a park system on the other side of the river near Scottsdale Road.

Practice fields and tennis courts are being planned next to the golf course, Elmore said. Fred Miller, ASU athletic director, said he wants rowing and golf courses planned for the project. But Elmore said, "It's not a factor who has the say so on what's constructed. I like to believe it's a cooperative venture up and down the river."

Elmore said he considers the Rio Salado a lengthy process rather than a project — lengthy because completion may not be expected for 100 years, he said.

The ultimate cost of the project is unknown. "How do you figure the cost of something like this?" Bosh said. "It's like trying to determine how much it cost to build Phoenix."

Miller comes on strong

Dr. Fred Miller became athletic director at ASU in July of 1971.

Miller came here from Long Beach State where he had headed the athletic program there since 1967. During that period, the Long Beach athletic program graduated from the college to the university division.

In Miller's last year at Long Beach, 1971, his teams won seven conference titles and the basketball team reached the semi-finals of the NCAA Western Regionals.

Although the NCAA never accused Miller of wrongdoing, an NCAA probe conducted in 1973 resulted in the Long Beach football and basketball teams being placed on a three year probation. The 56 violations cited by the NCAA were said to have occurred between 1971 and 1973.

One of his most dramatic triumphs at ASU was the acquisition of an all-weather track. No state monies were available, but Miller initiated a public subscription drive which eventually raised $175,000. With that money, ASU was able to obtain a 10-lane Tartan track of artificial turf.

In September of 1973, the State Press reported that Miller was a member of the board of directors of a company that received a subcontract to do construction work on the University Athletic Center.

Miller said his duties on the board was to "serve in an advisory capacity" and that he saw no conflict of interest because the bidding procedure called for competitive, sealed bids and the sub-contractor dealt with the general contractor rather than with the University.

Athletic Board gets request for tutor for football players

The University Athletic Board broke tradition Thursday by a majority vote to open its meeting to the public.

This marks the third time in 15 days that a major University committee has opened its doors.

Athletic director Fred Miller proposed that the board hire an academic counselor for football players.

"If we recruit them on to the campus, we want to make sure they succeed," he said.

According to Miller, the counselor would coordinate services of the tutors already employed by the department and deal with problems of discipline.

At the board's request, Miller will make a further report next meeting on the specific jobs and duties of the proposed counselor before any action will be taken.

In other actions, the board discussed the use of athletic facilities by outside groups and learned of the resignation from the board by Associated Students First Vice President Bob Kenison.

football coach Frank Kush and sports facilities financier Gray Madison to build the multi-million dollar hotel on the northeast corner of Rural and University Drive.

Reports in Phoenix newspapers said Nicoli sought a Nevada gambling license while considering purchasing a Holiday Inn Hotel and casino in Reno.

A Nevada Gaming Commission report said Nicoli's land development activities included meetings in the early 1960's with Joseph Bonanno at his Tucson home.

Nicoli reportedly said in 1970 that he did not transact business with Bonanno and didn't associate with him since meeting more than 10 years ago.

Contacted by phone Thursday, Nicoli refused to comment on his past or give details on University Plaza until the project is financed. "This has all been out in the Phoenix newspapers before," he said, refusing to comment further.

Because arrangements to finance the University Plaza are not completed, he said, "a premature story at this time could hurt the development of it."

Nicoli mentioned earlier: "We really don't know that we're going to build a hotel." He later added, "We're certain it will happen, but until you sign on the line, there's a chance that it won't."

The Arizona Republic quoted Nicoli as saying Miller is "one of my closest friends." The story said Nicoli "fell in love" with the hotel deal.

Newspaper reports say Nicoli was born in Milwaukee, Wis., to an artist who painted angels on church ceilings. He grew up in Chicago and Peoria, Ill., and worked his way to financial success.

Working for a housewares firm in Chicago, he saved $10,000 to form a partnership with four others to invest in uranium.

After investing in Alaskan oil, real estate, tool making and other projects, Nicoli bought a private jet.

He settled in Phoenix in 1959. He is married and has three grown children.

Someone out there needs to be thanked

There's a new ramp for wheelchairs in Palo Verde West dorm.

We ought to congratulate somebody for ordering it, but we've got a problem. We don't know who is responsible for the new ramp.

Neither do University officials. At least if they do, they're not talking.

Actually, before we discuss the new ramp, we should make some remarks about the old one.

It was a disgrace. City regulations say the maximum allowable slope of a ramp should be one foot in length for every inch of height. The old ramp was 20 inches high and less than nine feet long. The law also stipulates that a ramp should be four feet wide. The old ramp was less than three feet wide. The law states that a ramp should have a hand-drail. The old ramp did not.

People have been complaining about the old ramp for more than two years. University officials apparently listened politely, but did nothing.

A couple of weeks ago, there was a near tragedy. A student was backing his wheelchair down the ramp when his chair caught the side of the narrow ramp and overturned.

That brought us into the picture.

We tried to find out who is responsible for replacing ramps on campus.

The answer was apparently nobody.

Robert Troxell, the property supervisor in housing, referred a reporter to Dale Partridge, the University Safety Officer, who referred the reporter to somebody else. Warren Gill, the architectural planner, didn't know anything about it and neither did Don Crabtree, assistant director of housing.

The list was almost endless. Finally, John Ellingson, the director of planning and construction, suggested the reporter talk to Troxell.

By that time, lo and behold, there was a new ramp.

To be fair, we should add that the new ramp was in the planning stages for almost a year. In fact, government money was given to the University last summer for just that sort of improvement.

The new ramp was ready to go after two days of work. But it took almost seven months for the paperwork to go through everybody's office.

That's a lot of red tape.

We're glad the new ramp has been constructed. We only wish we knew who to congratulate.

Wisdom questioned in hotel involvement

Dr. Fred Miller is an excellent athletic director, certainly one of the finest in the country.

He's also a shrewd businessman. He wouldn't be a good athletic director if he weren't well-versed in financial matters. An important part of his job entails raising money for the University. He does it frequently and he does it well.

His personal financial affairs normally should be just that — personal. We don't begrudge the man for trying to make a buck. And we don't necessarily think there's anything wrong with the athletic department expanding in the general direction of the hotel in which Miller has a financial interest. In fact, a quick glance at a map of Tempe indicates that the riverbottom land around the hotel is in the natural direction University expansion should take.

So why then are we running a story that Fred Miller will stand to gain financially from the decisions of the University, decisions in which Miller had a considerable input?

We'd answer that with another question.

Should any University official become involved in a private enterprise that is directly affected by decisions he must make in his official capacity?

We're not questioning Miller's integrity or his expertise as athletic director. We have absolutely no indication that he has placed his own interests ahead of the University's.

We're not questioning his integrity or his motives, only his wisdom in getting involved in the entire affair.

Revise thinking

Editor,

I would like to comment on the University Director of Personnel's plan to conduct an "educational drive" to counter an expected increase in union activity on campus.

What the staff needs at this point is not to be "educated" but to be listened to. There would be no need for organized labor to move on campus if the administration were more receptive to the needs of its employees. As it now stands, staff employees have no channel to voice their problems and hope to be heard.

The various committees created by the administration (I am talking about the Grievance Committee and the Staff Personnel Committee) are at best inefficient and powerless. The Personnel office understands its function strictly as one of yesman for the administration.

Unless ASU administrators re-evaluate completely their personnel administration program, not only in terms of what is good for the administration, but also in terms of what is fair to the employees, organized labor will be welcome on campus.

And what form of organized labor will represent us should be decided in the appropriate democratic manner in which these things are to be conducted.

The disadvantage of joining a labor organization in terms of how much it is

Illogical price

Editor:

The ticket price structure for Sun Devil baseball games is very illogical. ASU full-time students obtain free admission with I.D. The general public pays $2 and students with school I.D. get in for $1 unless that school I.D. is for part-time ASU enrollment.

Yes, a part-time ASU student must pay $2. As ridiculous as it may seem, high school students get a better break at ASU baseball games than do part-time students here. As a part-time student myself, I will continue to borrow other students' I.D. rather than submit to this obvious discrimination.

Sincerely,
Keith Molever

Vets need access to computers

Editor:

I understand there are almost 6,000 veterans attending ASU and that according to the Arizona Republic, attendance at Community Colleges has risen by more than 1,000 veterans this semester alone. With the current trend in national affairs (Unemployment) the VA estimates a sharp increase in vets using their GI bill. Rumor has it that vet attendance can easily go up to 7,000 by next fall at ASU.

That is a large percentage of students and they're being cheated by the state university. At present, two or three people have to thumb through all the vet cards which could easily be fed through the ASU computer.

Computers are being used at the community colleges and it helps cut down on the mistakes sent to the VA. Use of computers speed up the whole process that vets go through to get their GI money.

If used at ASU, it could help ease the logjam that results from tuition payments and cut down the number of vets who use the waiver system because they haven't got their money. Obviously, it could cut down the number of emergency loans that vets invariably seek when their payment is delayed.

How low on the totem pole are vets who make up nearly 20 percent of the student body?

Veterans and concerned non-vet students should do whatever they can to publicize the problem before it's too late.

Sincerely,
Mike Martena

Bluegrass musicians appreciate the earthy sound of their music

By Lisa Jost

Music first, money second is the philosophy of the bluegrass Dusty Desert String Band, a foot tapping, string twanging group of four ASU students.

Banjo picker John Donahoe, guitar strummers Brian Judd and Leo Rosenstein, and fiddler Ron Privett are, therefore, not all that rich yet. But they don't mind. It's not that the band wouldn't like to get paid for playing. "We're looking for an engagement right now. But we'll play for anyone for free if they appreciate bluegrass," Donahoe said.

Each is a musician, but bluegrass is first in their hearts. Donahoe used to play rock but he quit because it was too loud for him. "Bluegrass has an organic sound because the instruments are all wood and not electrical," he said. "Wood instruments have a real earthy sound."

Playing the fiddle is a kind of meditation for Privett. "It induces high feeling. When I hear a good fiddle player, like Vasser Clements, I go into the ozone," he said.

Rosenstein thinks bluegrass is the purest form of music. He also likes it because it is a challenge. He thinks "it can make or break a musician." He said he has seen some good rock musicians who could not learn to play bluegrass.

The music is not only a source of enjoyment for Judd; the lyrics appeal to his inner self because many of the tunes have a message about God. "God means a lot to me," Judd said.

They all agreed that bluegrass musicians were "earthier and happier" people than rock musicians. They said rock musicians are too concerned with money and stardom. "People from the hills" started bluegrass, Rosenstein said. To express feelings and thoughts or just to relax was their motivation. Money was not involved, he said.

All four members of the band prefer "old-time" bluegrass, like the music of Bill Monroe, a founder of bluegrass. New bluegrass usually features the same songs, but is often played at a faster pace or on electric instruments, Rosenstein said.

After seeing the movie "Deliverance", Donajoe became serious about bluegrass. "'Deliverance' really made bluegrass popular to everyone," he said. He thinks it is great that bluegrass is becoming popular and hopes it isn't just a passing fad.

Privett said he became interested in bluegrass after listening to Clements, a top fiddler of today. To the unknowing Privett sounds like a pro. His fingers are fast and his tunes have "real hill flavor." But he has only been playing a year. He said he probably got his talent from his father who also plays the fiddle.

Blues were a favorite to Rosenstein until he listened to Doc Watson, bluegrass guitar player. "Doc Watson's music completely convinced me that there isn't any better music than bluegrass," he said.

Judd, Rosenstein's partner on the guitar, became interested in bluegrass after meeting Donahoe. He said he has always liked all types of music and is currently studying music at ASU. He also leads a folk group at the Catholic Newman Center and is interested in classical music.

Although music is first in their hearts, it is not first in most of their lives. Rosenstein's dream is to tour the country with a band but he said this is probably not feasible in order to make a living. He is considering a major in math although he has considered music. But when it comes to music theory he's not so excited. Some music theory is good but too much makes one a technician and makes him lose the ability to listen, he said.

Ron Privett has played the fiddle for only a year but handles his instrument with the skill of a veteran.

Donahoe agreed with Rosenstein that playing bluegrass is no way to become rich and hopes to become an architect. Privett is considering a major in education.

Judd and Donahoe began the band early this fall after meeting at a retreat. Privett joined the band after answering Judd and Donahoe's advertisement for a fiddler. Donahoe soon met Rosenstein, a fellow high school rock band member, and the Dusty Desert String Band was born.

Sports complex embraces proposed hotel

women's athletic coach Anne Pittman.

The definite decision to purchase the practice field land adjoining the hotel site was made in conjunction with all interested parties, ASU Vice president Gilbert Cady said. The athletic department was an interested party.

The dates and events relating to the purchase of the practice fields and plans for the hotel:

Frank Kush

1969 — ASU attempts to buy entire practice field area but only has enough money to purchase part of the land and lease the rest with an option to buy later.

August 1973 — Land lease expires. APS allows ASU to continue to use the land while ASU tries to find the money to buy the property.

Nov. 5, 1973 — University has old ASU farm, adjacent to Schwada's home, appraised to determine its value.

Nov. 12, 1973 — Nicoli, having been approached by Miller and Kush, puts an earnest payment down on the APS property at the corner of University and Rural. It is understood that a partnership will be formed soon and that the land will be used to build a hotel. The land is in escrow.

Nov. 29, 1973 — Formation of University Plaza, Inc. — includes Kush, Miller and Nicoli. This corporation becomes the general partner in the "Partnership" which is financing the hotel. White and the Malones become partners later. Each full interest in the "partnership" costs $60,000.

Dec. 6, 1973 — The old University farm land is put up for bid. The zoning has been changed so the land can be developed. ASU hopes to sell the land so it can buy the practice field land from APS.

Jan. 15, 1974 — The bids are due and there are no bidders for the old 53-acre University farm between College and Mill Avenues south of Broadway.

March 1974 — Both the ASU farm and the APS property are appraised. Negotiations become more serious.

May-June 1974 — Board of Regents approves a land trade between APS and ASU.

Aug. 28, 1974 — The deed is signed. ASU now owns the practice field land adjacent to the hotel site.

NOW — Escrow will close soon and final construction plans are being made. Evarts estimates construction will begin in July and be completed in 13 months.

The University hopes to buy the Federal land north of the practice field area and south of Rio Salada. A proposed golf course will be in this area. An aquatic center with diving towers is tentatively planned.

"We have built so rapidly here — we have a super plan," Miller said. "When I first came here four years ago we drew something up and said 'we don't know what we're going to do but let's get something to give us a target.' I keep that in mind," he said.

"I believe Rio Salada's going to happen — we're going to make it happen. We said we want a bridge here. The bridge is now here. We've been shaking supervisors all over town to get that bridge in," he said. "We want a golf course. We'll get a golf course."

Miller said it is his responsibility as athletic director to improve the athletic program. "There is no conflict of interest," he said.

was never like this.

Emmanuelle is sensual, but she's elegant. Emmanuelle is fantasy, but she's fun. But most important, she leaves you with a singular lack of guilt. And that's the clue to its overwhelming popularity.

"The X-rating has been honestly earned, but without descents to activities that disgust the queasy... This picture can be legitimately classed as aphrodisiac in effect, not embarrassing for mixed company. "The exotica includes a Thailand boxing match, with kicks, and a feat of cigarette smoking that can only be described as open-ended or bizarre."
— New York Post, Archer Winsten

"Voluptuous sophistication with gorgeous sexual couplings."
— Village Voice

"The entire French colony, including our heroine, her husband, and every other French man or woman on the scene, devotes full time to fornication."
— New York Magazine, Judith Crist

"Glossy, erotic."
— New York Daily News

Emmanuelle

Let's you feel good without feeling bad.

"Emmanuelle is a thinking man's X; a very specialized how-to film; a stylish sex trip across the skies from Paris to Thailand, down Bangkok's canals, and through the senses of perhaps the most physically beautiful cast of top-caste women ever assembled in one film."
— After Dark, Norma McLain Sloop

"Sex done with taste and beauty. A lush erotic atmosphere."
— Cosmopolitan, Liz Smith

"France's top box-office blockbuster... centers on a pretty wife of a young member of the French Embassy who spends nearly all of her time in a variety of couplings... a succession of lesbian bouts... a trip to an opium den where she is raped, then to a prize fight where she is the prize."

Wrestling squad seeks victories in weekend WAC championships

ASU's wrestlers enter the 13th annual Western Athletic Conference wrestling championships today and Saturday in the role of spoilers seeking upsets of key wrestlers from the WAC's mat powerhouses.

Matches get under way this afternoon at the University of New Mexico with semifinal competition scheduled for tonight. Consolation titles will be decided Saturday afternoon with the championship matches set for that evening.

"I see the WAC as a toss-up between BYU, Wyoming and Colorado State," said ASU wrestling coach Bobby Douglas. "As for ASU, I see us playing the role of spoiler. Whichever team wins will be the result of key individuals being upset by someone from one of the weaker schools."

Douglas predicted his wrestlers could place in the 118-, 134-, 150- and 177-pound classifications.

state press sports

"I think we can score points in those weight classes," the Sun Devil mentor said. "However, other individuals are progressing and we have several wrestlers who seem to do better in tournaments than in dual meets."

One the meet's feature match-ups will pit Jody Sloan of Wyoming against ASU's Roye

Oliver. The freshman Oliver is the only wrestler in the conference this year to defeat Sloan, the defending 158-pound champion, and that came by a 7-6 score.

Douglas' wrestlers will be out to improve their last place showing at the 1974 WAC title meet. Colorado State came out victorious last year edging BYU for the conference crown.

ASU finished regular season competition with a 7-6-1 dual record after defeating Arizona 31-12 and dropping 15-19 contest to Air Force last weekend in Tucson.

Track team expects tough year; sprinters keep Devils in the race

ASU's TRACK TEAM will have more than its share of individual standouts this season, but will be lacking sorely in depth said Sun Devil coach Baldy Castillo.

The outdoor track season officially opens Saturday at 1 p.m. with the staging of the Sun Devil Relays at Joe Selleh Track. The meet will include Northern Arizona University and junior colleges throughout the state.

Sprints will be the Devils long suit as Castillo can call upon such standouts as Steve Williams (9-3 speed in the 100), Carl McCullough (9.4), Herman Frazier (9.4) and Charley Wells (9.5).

"This could be the strongest year ever for the Western Athletic Conference as a whole," said Castillo, entering his 25th year at the Sun Devil helm. He rates Texas-El Paso, with its field event strength, as the team to beat.

Castillo also ranks the ASU schedule as the "toughest in the school's history and probably the toughest in the nation."

In the first month of the season, the Devils will meet defending NCAA champion UCLA and national powerhouses USC, Oregon, Brigham Young and UTEP.

AFTER WINNING BY 5½ points over WAC nemesis New Mexico in Sun Devil Gym last Saturday, ASU's gymnastics team will travel to Albuquerque for a rematch with the Lobos on Monday, March 4.

Last year, ASU rolled up an impressive 13-1 record in dual meets on its way to the WAC title, the only blemish being a loss at New Mexico.

Although ASU has yet to meet Arizona, owner of a 210 score this season, the Devils again appear to be the strongest team in the conference this year following Saturday's win over the Lobos and BYU in a tri-meet at Tempe. ASU scored 213.60 to New Mexico's 208.5 and BYU's 193.5.

Those two wins, along with a victory over Colorado Friday, upped ASU's dual meet record to 5-2. A rematch at New Mexico and a March 7 home encounter against Arizona is remaining.

THE ASU WOMEN'S swimming team, which has already qualified 17 swimmers and six divers for national competition, will travel to Tucson for the Western Regional Championships this weekend.

ASU will be the host of the AIAW National Swimming and Diving Championships March 13-15. The Sun Devils are the defending national champions.

THE ASU SOCCER Club will meet Arizona at 2 p.m. Sunday behind Women's P.E. Admission is free, and club vice-president Dave Bailey said the match should be the most competitive of the year.

Rams, Cowboys may be trouble for Sun Devils

By Mike Tulumello

It's hard to imagine ASU's basketball team looking past an opponent which nearly destroyed the Sun Devils last month.

But that appears to be the seventh-ranked Devils' primary danger when ASU hosts Wyoming at 7:30 tonight in the Activity Center.

ASU coach Ned Wulk is concerned that his team may tend to ignore the Cowboys in favor of Saturday night's game with Colorado State. The Rams downed the Sun Devils 91-80 last month at Ft. Collins and Saturday's contest will be the only time this season the Devils can gain revenge on a team that defeated them earlier in the year.

"It's definitely a big worry of ours," said Wulk. "A lot of people forget that Wyoming got ahead of us by 16 points in Laramie."

Season's turning point

ASU eventually pulled that one out, 79-67, to gain a crucial split on the northern road swing.

"That was a very critical point in the conference season," said Wulk. "If we hadn't won that one, we might not be in the position we are now."

That position is first in the WAC—the standing ASU has held all season long. The Devils are 9-2 (20-3 overall), one game ahead of Texas-El Paso.

Wulk said his halftime speech at Wyoming (when ASU trailed by 14 points), was "nothing special."

"I might have cussed them out a little, but basically I tried to appeal to their winners' instincts. We just weren't taking care of the ball, and were taking bad shots.

"We also changed our offense around and went with three guards. It's worked for us ever since then."

Moonshots prove vital

Wulk noted Mike Moon's emergence as a key performer in the Devil backcourt in ASU's stretch drive the past month. Moon was nominated for the WAC's player-of-the-week award after scoring 24 points against New Mexico last week.

"Mike has ideal adaptability," said Wulk. He's the type of kid who does well in whatever situation he's placed in.

"In some games, when Lionel (Hollins) is getting a lot of defensive pressure, Mike will step right in and pick up the scoring slack. Other times, he'll pass off or he'll come up with some important steals.

"He doesn't seem to plan what he's going to do ahead of time, but goes by what the situation dictates. It's a rare ability."

ASU stat leaders at this point are Hollins in scoring (16.7) assists (112-a school record), Jack Schrader in field goal percentage (.569), Scott Lloyd in rebounding (6.5) and Rudy White in free throw percentage (.761).

Wyoming (10-12 overall, 3-7 in WAC play) is led in scoring and rebounding by forward Stan Boyer, with averages of 15.6 and 9.7, respectively.

Colorado State (12-10 overall, 4-6 in WAC play) is led in scoring by guard Barry Sabas (13.3), who scored 30 points in CSU's win over the Sun Devils.

Women gymnasts pit skills against state rivals in meet

The Arizona Collegiate Women's Gymnastics Meet will begin this weekend in the women's physical education building. Compulsory exercises will begin Friday at 6:30 p.m. and the optional exercises take place Saturday night. The best combined team score takes the championship.

The nationally sixth-rated ASU squad will compete against Arizona, Scottsdale Community, Glendale Community and Mesa Community. The top two teams in the state meet will progress to the Western Athletic Conference Championships March 14-15 at ASU.

The Sun Devils raised their record last weekend to 11-1 by defeating the University of Nevada at Reno and Arizona in Tucson. The ASU team totaled 95.25 points to edge Reno (92.05) and Arizona (87).
