By Paul Lorentz

Gov. Raul Castro is considering three names as possible choices to fill two positions on the Arizona Board of Regents that will be vacated in January, Ted Rushton, Castro's press secretary, said Tuesday.

Castro named Allen Rosenberg, retired president of Great Western Bank of Phoenix, John Malloy, former Pima county Superior Court judge, and Tom Chandler, a Tucson attorney, as the probable contenders for the two board positions, said Rushton.

"These are names that are under serious consideration, but no decision has been made yet," said Rushton.

The governor will select two of the three men for the posts of outgoing regents Dr. Paul Singer of Phoenix and Margaret Christy of Sedona.

Singer's and Christy's appointments expire in January.

With the two upcoming appointments and the recent selection of Dwight Patterson, Castro's team will comprise half the board.

Patterson, a Mesa rancher, was selected to replace Kenneth Bentson who resigned to work on Ronald Reagan's presidential campaign.

Coed dorms endorsed by housing officials

By Mike Tulumello

Coed dorms would have positive effects at ASU and would not hurt morals at the University, according to housing officials.

Housing director Russell Flaherty said coed dorms "might be a good move." But significant community opposition could prevent any such move, he said.

"I'm not as attuned to outside pressures as the people (administration officials) who would have to make a decision are," he said.

Inter-Dorm Council, the recently formed governing body of ASU's 10 dormitories, has announced it is checking into the possibility of setting up coed dorms on campus.

"Much of the public looks at coed housing from a moral standpoint," Flaherty said.

"But from talking with people who have had experience with it," he said, "it seems to have definite benefits. It creates a very healthy living situation and results in some good experiences between people.

"It's something we definitely work on for the future," he said.

ASU set up a coed dorm three or four years ago, said Mary Watson, unit director of Palo Verde Main and Palo Verde East. But students did not support the way the idea was implemented, she said.

"It was over at Sahuaro Hall (south of Apache), and most girls felt it was too far from campus and the lighting along the way was poor," Watson said.

If a coed dorm could be located near the center of campus, the idea would probably work, she said.

Both Watson and Manzanita unit director Ernie Califana expressed "no objections" to coed dorms.

"If the details could be worked out, it would be fine with me," Watson said.

"I could see a lot of good coming from them," said Califana. But he doubted a plan will be approved in the near future due to the conservatism of the Phoenix area.

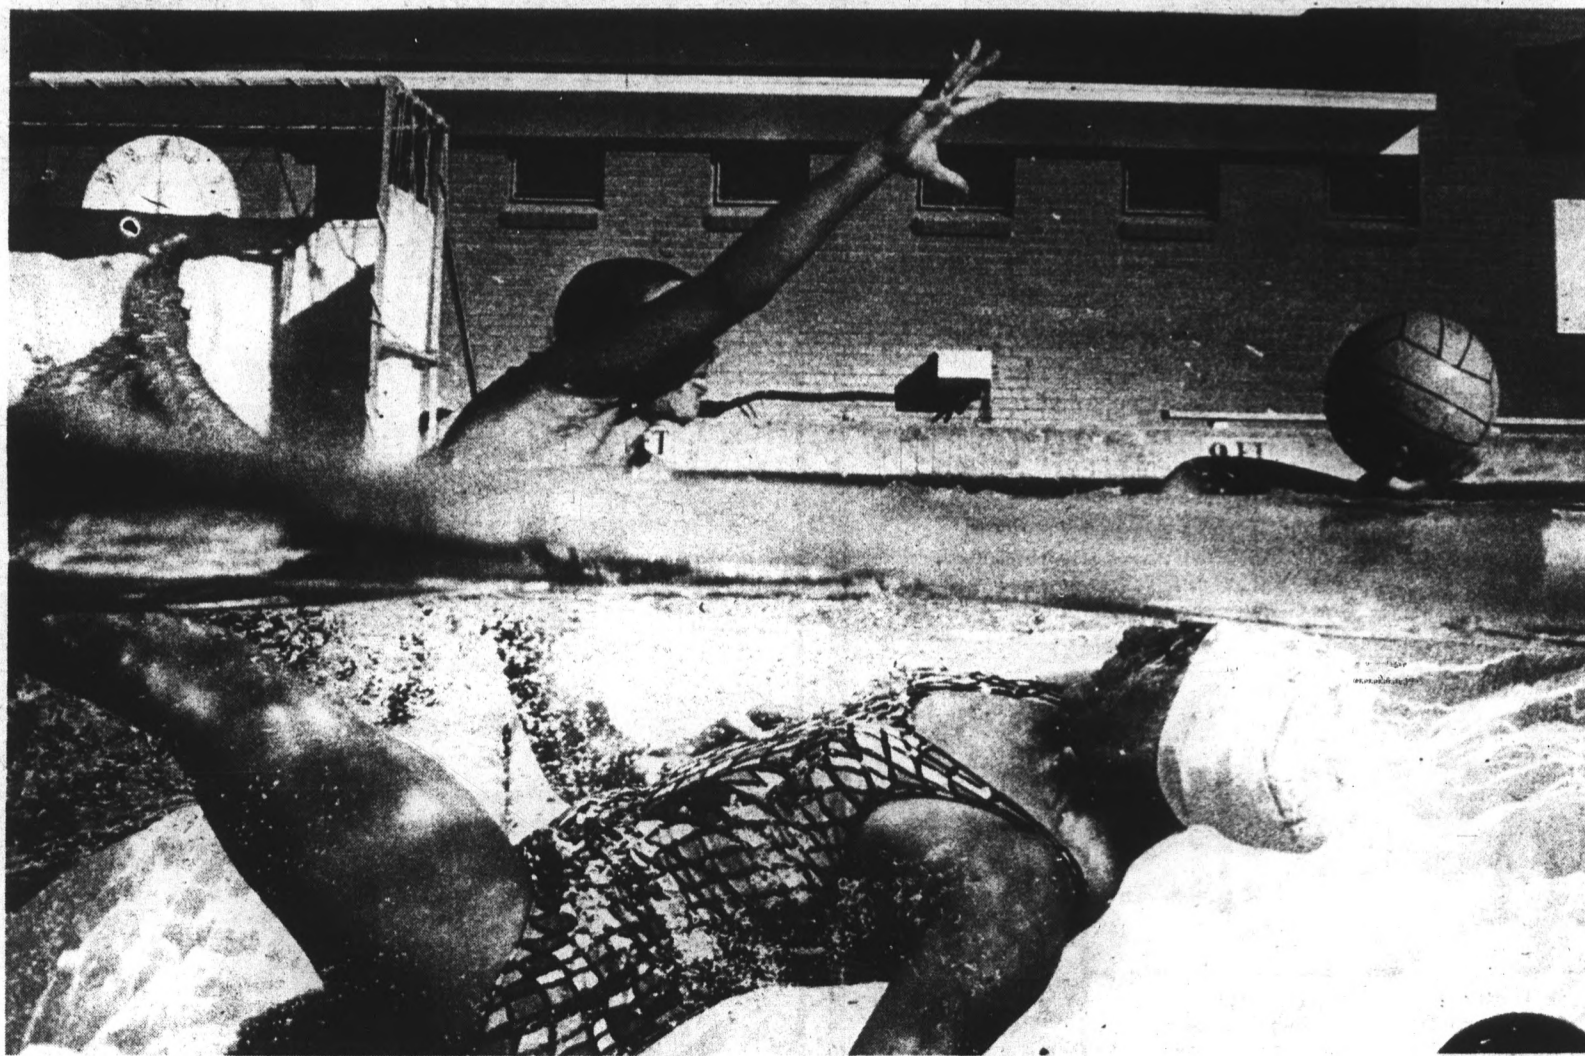

"I've never heard of them causing problems anywhere else," he said. "But a lot of people don't understand what would happen, and what would not happen.

"There are different kinds of coed dorms. A good way to start might be to have separate living quarters and common dining facilities," he said.

Califana said students at Indiana University, where he attended school, fought hard to have a coed dorm approved over the objections of many of the state's regents.

"It ended up working exceptionally well," he said.

Callahan impressed with new chairmen

By Pat Denley

Mike Callahan, Associated Students Campus Affairs vice president, said he is impressed by the initial efforts of two students recently appointed as chairpersons of the Campus Affairs Committee (CAC) and of Consumer Services (CS).

Last week the First Council approved Callahan's appointment of a junior political science major, Dave Bailey, to head the CAC and Shelly Koerner, a junior management major, as chairperson of Consumer Services.

"They've both been putting in a lot of office hours and hustling to get more people involved," Callahan said.

Bailey said one of the main reasons he took the job was to establish "bitch boxes" around campus to gather student com-

Ed Hickcox, director of auxiliary services, called it an emotional issue.

"There are too many more important issues," he said. "Coed housing, 24-hour visitation rights and booze on campus are emotional issues which have been kicked around too long.

"What upsets me is that the only image the media has projected over the years about dormitories is that students are interested only in shacking up. It's extremely detrimental because that's what the legislators and regents see," Hickcox said.

"We could end up losing student housing," he said.

Ed Conway, president of IDC, said the primary benefit of coed dorms would be to boost a feeling of community at ASU.

Kathy Sipe, secretary-treasurer of IDC, said the photo "does not convey our purpose in investigating the potential for coed dorms. It implies completely the opposite connotation."

Sipe said IDC has tentatively arranged a system of cafeteria transfers between the men's and women's dorms.

"Right now, there's hardly any interchange between the guys' and girls' dorms," she said.

"Students here have no sense of campus. Coed housing could bring people together in a more natural environment," he said.

Conway said his group is not attempting to restructure society's morals and strongly objected to a photograph which appeared in the State Press on Nov. 21. The picture, which ran next to a story about coed dorms, showed a couple in bed.

"We totally disassociate ourselves from the photograph because it distorts the image of what we're trying to accomplish," Conway said.

State Press Editor Anita Mabante said, "Poor judgment preceded the running of the photo and we accept responsibility for the incident. The people involved with the story really had nothing to do with the photo."

plaints, problems and questions.

CS Chairperson Koerner said she is looking for volunteer help for her organization. The group helps the student "who doesn't know where to go when he has a problem with a merchant," she said.

A meeting for those wishing to join the group will be held today at 2:30 p.m. in the ASASU office, Koerner said.

Koerner said CS works with the local Better Business Bureau and other agencies and will keep a record of complaints filed by students against merchants.

Her office hours, in the ASASU complex 208-J, are MWF 3:30 to 4:30 p.m. and TTH 12:30 to 1:30 p.m.

State law stipulates use of tenant cleaning deposits

By Eileen Craft

Apartment dwellers can protect themselves from the strategies landlords use to keep security and cleaning deposits illegally, according to Jim Smith, director of the Associated Students (ASASU) Tenants Association.

A security deposit can only be used to pay for damages above normal usage or for back rent. The cleaning deposit can only be used by the landlord to clean up after the tenant moves out, Smith said.

If the deposits are refundable, the landlord must make an itemized statement of how the money was spent if any part of the deposit was kept, he said. "Every cent has to be accounted for, and in writing."

"One landlord was charging for wear and tear on light bulbs and deducting it out of the security deposit," said Smith. "The landlord said the tenants had new light bulbs when they moved in and he expected new ones to be left when they moved out."

"This deduction does not apply to the security deposit and is illegal," Smith said.

To help get a cleaning deposit back, Smith stressed the importance of filling out an inventory list the tenant and landlord mutually agree on when moving into an apartment.

"When moving out, have the landlord inspect the apartment while you're there. If he won't, have people help you move so they can verify the apartment was clean," said Smith. "Some tenants even take pictures."

He said, according to state law, any deposit refunds must be returned within 14 days after the tenant moves out.

Smith said one student demanded his deposit refund the day he moved out because he was leaving town. The student waited to deposit the check from the landlord until he reached his home. The check bounced. The landlord promised to send a new check but didn't, said Smith.

The Tenants Association called the Better Bureau and the Tempe Chamber of Commerce to put some pressure on the landlord. After several months, he finally sent a good check to the tenant, Smith said.

"Once a tenant moves out of state, he could really be hurt," said Smith. "A tenant has to be physically present in court to win a case if he wants to sue to get a deposit back."

The tenant should give the landlord a written note requesting all deposits and stating his tenancy is terminated, and include a forwarding address, said Smith. "Keep a copy of the note and personally hand him the keys," he added.

"If the tenant does that, he's done everything," he said.

It's just part of the job

Salary, fringe benefits come with title

By Susan Leonard

There's a little bit more to being an Associated Students officer than just a title.

The president and the three vice presidents are each paid $195 a month. Each is also given an office in the ASASU quarters in the Memorial Union and various fringe benefits.

However, there aren't any rules dictating the amount of time each officer must put in.

Craig Tribken, ASASU president, said he works 45 to 50 hours a week. He is earning about $1.04 an hour. "You can't say I'm in it for the money," he said.

Linda LaGanke, executive vice president, said she is currently working 20 to 25 hours a week, but will be putting in more time next semester because she'll be working on the ASASU budget.

Rick Clark, activities vice president, said he works 50 to 60 hours a week. Mike Callahan, campus affairs vice president, said he works 45 hours a week.

Each officer receives two complimentary tickets to every ASASU production and to the Student Series at Gammage Auditorium.

The theater department also gave each officer two complimentary tickets to each of its four Main Stage productions.

And the officers have guaranteed seats at all football and basketball games in ASASU president's boxes.

The football box is located on the 45 yard line and seats 45. Tribken said the box is composed of 25 student seats, which sell for $1, and 20 complimentary seats which are given to various administrators, community leaders and legislators.

He said the officers usually pay for one of the student seats.

The basketball box is composed of 10 complimentary seats.

"It's nice to have a little extra to compensate for our low wages," Clark said. "I don't look upon them as fringe benefits, but rather as payments in lieu of cash. They're just other forms of paying us for work."

But according to Tribken, "My biggest fringe benefit is the marvelous opportunity I get to deal with all those wonderful petty bureaucrats and administrators on this campus," Tribken said.

The underwater world of water polo

Water Polo is more than swimming, moving a yellow ball and making goals. While spectators can easily view the above-water maneuvers, splashing water hides most of the real part of the game. Below the water level, there is a lot of kicking, pushing, and shoving aimed at keeping the opponent in a very disadvantageous position.

This subject is not taken lightly by the players. If not executed properly, the result is either a foul or, in the case of a lack of aggressiveness, a possible goal by the opponent's team.

In order to show land-locked lovers of this aqueous sport what really goes on down below, photographer Chuck Pratt donned goggles and swim suit to capture the vicious moves of Martha Brigham, Cyd Horsley, and JoAnn Newell, members of ASU's Women's Water Polo Club.

Newsman says Soviets exploit detente

By Ed Kosmac

Russia takes initiative, U.S. responds

Secretary of State Henry Kissinger's contention that the United States has not given up anything vital in the pursuit of detente with the Soviet Union was challenged Monday night in Neeb Hall by Isaac Don Levine, Kremlinologist, author and former foreign correspondent for the New York Tribune.

In a speech, "The Soviet Challenge to America," sponsored by the ASU Public Lectures Board, Levine told an audience of about 250 persons that although Washington responds to the overtures of both Moscow and Peking with regard to detente, the real winner in these dealings is the Soviet Union.

In the give and take of diplomacy since the Cuban missile crisis, according to Levine, Russia has seized the initiative while America has floundered by default.

U.S. ultimate loser
"Everybody knows who the gainer was," Levine said, referring to the U.S.-Soviet grain deal.

Levine said the initial grain deal is now to be followed by a five year plan whereby the United States will continue to supply the Soviets. He said rather than helping the Russian consumer, the bulk of the grain will go to build food reserves in support of one million Soviet soldiers who are defending the Chinese-Soviet border.

Because of the commitment of grain to Russia, Levine said a bad crop year could hamstring the United States in the sale of wheat on the free market to such friendly countries as Japan.

Another problem with U.S. policy is the country's handling of Cuba.

"We have not given up Florida," Levine said. "And we may not give up the Panama Canal."

Biggest threats ignored
But the United States has ignored the threat of missile-laden Soviet nuclear submarines based in Cuba, he said. Although an agreement made with the Soviet Union in settlement of the Cuban missile crisis allows the United States to call for a United Nations-sponsored search for hidden missiles on that island country, Levine said Kissinger, as secretary of state under two presidents, has done nothing.

"What have we done to find these missiles?" he asked.

He suggested that in forcing the removal of land-based missiles during the 1962 crisis and then not following up with inspection, "We have traded something obsolete for something far more dangerous."

Levine said it was the Cuban crisis that precipitated expansion of the Soviet navy, which now threatens to make the United States a second-rate seapower in the world. He said the increase in Soviet defense spending coupled with the decline in American spending has now made it possible for some congressmen to oppose establishment of a U.S. naval base in the Indian Ocean "for fear of irritating" the Soviet navy in the Persian Gulf area.

Soviet 'fifth column'

As evidence of other Soviet initiatives around the world, Levine cited the existence of 4,000 Cubans in the newly independent country of Angola, and the existence of an organization of communist military officers in Portugal that is "raising hell" with the duly elected government of that country. He called the organization a "Soviet fifth column" and said a similar organization exists in Spain. "Fifth column" has disappeared in the vocabulary of detente," he said.

"Foolhardy adventure"

In response to a question from the audience as to whether Vietnam was another example of Soviet imperialism, Levine called United States involvement there "a foolhardy adventure."

He said the American people were not taken into the confidence of government leaders concerning Vietnam. He said American intervention in that country was based on an anachronistic theory that the United States should deal with communism by force of arms.

He said although the United States must maintain military superiority, "We must not go in for adventures."

Coed dorm hopes killed by ph

Editor:

I would like to comment on the irresponsible journalism displayed by the State Press, specifically in regard to the article and accompanying posed and paid photo concerning coed housing at ASU. Not that I feel it has ever been of interest to the State Press what students, faculty and staff feel about their misguided efforts, but I feel there has been serious damage done by your childish sensationalism.

I want students to know that the State Press has set student housing back ten years in one swipe with their implications that coed housing and increased sexual encounters are synonymous. This allegation happens to be the biggest stumbling block with parents, regents and legislature, and your implication shows that perhaps you feel the same. The point that you should realize is that there is no relation and thus no reason for people to raise moral questions and indignation. Coed housing simply means living within the same building. Do you feel all girls in apartments thus have increased sexual activities and lower personal standards simply because of their living situation? Quite an affront.

Again, morals should never Again, morals are not an issue, so the question should never be raised.

I have swallowed the times I have been misquoted, misrepresented, taken out of context, quoted off the record, contacted by biased reporters and called concerning ridiculous stories. I have realized the hard way that "journalism students" and "classroom" story actually means "reporter" and "State Press." But now your irresponsibility has placed years of frustrating work in the gutter. No excuse.

Please place me on your list of "no comment" and "proofread before publication" adversaries. I expect that I can soon read, as did Juanita Murphy of Nursing and Jim Brock of Baseball, one of your arrogant, childish holier-than-thou editorials of chastisement. I am looking forward to it and hope others join me in my stand to now force you toward responsible reporting and a campus-responsive newspaper.

Faculty leave changes called unjust in report

By Paul Lorentz

A confidential report by a faculty group charges the administration stiffened evaluation procedures for sabbatical leave applicants without adequate participation by faculty.

The report by the ASU chapter of the Arizona Association of University Professors (AAUP) has not been released because some AAUP members and administrative officials made an agreement the report would not be publicized. Jim Becker, AAUP president, said he will ask members at the next AAUP meeting to vote on whether the report should be released.

In a Nov. 18 letter to AAUP members, Becker said the administration ignored some procedures in the faculty handbook for granting sabbatical leaves during 1974-75.

Becker said the new procedures were approved because communication was lacking between faculty and administrators. "To date, nobody has made a move to involve more faculty."

Tight budget considered

Duncan Patten, assistant academic vice president, said, "There was a need to reduce the number of sabbatical leaves" last year because of tight money. Patten said a scale of 'very strongly approved, strongly approved and disapprove' was used by college deans to grade the quality of sabbatical proposals.

"The number that were selected were the ones that were strongly approved by the deans," Patten said. The high-low scale was administered "fairly across the board as much as possible," he said.

The Arizona Board of Regents revised the faculty handbook August 15, 1975, to include new evaluation procedures for sabbatical applicants. The recommendations for the procedural changes came from a president's ad hoc committee, college deans and administrators, said Karl Dannenfeldt, academic vice president.

Becker said the administration's failure to seek more faculty input for changes in the sabbatical evaluation procedures "may have been by oversight or it may have been they didn't want to hassle.

"As far as any individual here is concerned, his chances for sabbatical leave are considerably smaller," he said.

Senate consulted

Becker said the administration should have consulted the Faculty Senate while it considered changes in sabbatical procedures. "What the hell is the senate if you don't deal with them with things like this?"

The Faculty Constitution and By-Laws state that the senate has the power to make recommendations on "sabbatical and other leaves" subject to the authority of the regents.

Patten said the new sabbatical procedures are not a change in policy. "I think the thing that worries many of the faculty is that they were not involved. Because I'm right in the middle of it, I feel there wasn't any great procedural change. But some faculty think so, and I'm sympathetic to that view," Patten said.

Patten said he is optimistic that more sabbaticals will be granted this year. He added that the number of sabbaticals granted fluctuates each year.

Sabbatical prospects dubious

Becker said the future for sabbatical leaves depends on a tight financial picture.

"We have more faculty at ASU and a reduced number of sabbatical leaves. The consequence is that the prospect for any faculty member to have sabbatical leave is a small and diminishing ratio," said Becker.

Becker said the AAUP report was made in conjunction with an investigation by the Faculty Senate personnel committee. Becker said he expected the personnel committee to present a report on sabbaticals during the Senate meeting last Monday.

Arthur Colby, chairman of the personnel committee, said the report had not been prepared for presentation to the senate last week.

MU barber says hair styles come and go

Easy going conversation comes with $3.50 haircut

By Ed Kosmac

A haircut runs $3.50, but the easygoing conversation, care of the barber, is free of charge.

The place is the MU basement barbershop, and the barber is Ike Hewett.

Hewett, who has been the shop's sole barber for the past two years, likes people and likes to talk to his customers—unless they immediately discourage dialogue.

"If they pick up a magazine, you assume they want to read a magazine," he said.

Hewett came to Arizona from Washington D.C. in 1958 because of his wife's asthmatic condition.

Likes MU shop

After 15 years of haircutting in Phoenix shops, Hewett is glad he made the move to the MU barbershop.

"I like the hours—Monday through Friday, and I like being with my family on weekends," he said.

It's also advantageous for Hewett that his clientele at ASU includes few children.

"Not that I don't like kids," he said. "It's just that I have a back problem."

Hair styling, as opposed to a haircut, costs $10 in Hewett's shop. Hewett said styling has been around almost as long as barbering, but has really become popular with men only in recent years.

Waving and dying

Although styling is the most expensive job Hewett undertakes in his shop, there are other techniques such as body waving (a $25 job) and hair dying that he could handle if he did not have a busy schedule.

"People who come in here only have so much time," he said. "Imagine limiting yourself to six customers a day. You'd have everybody else mad at you."

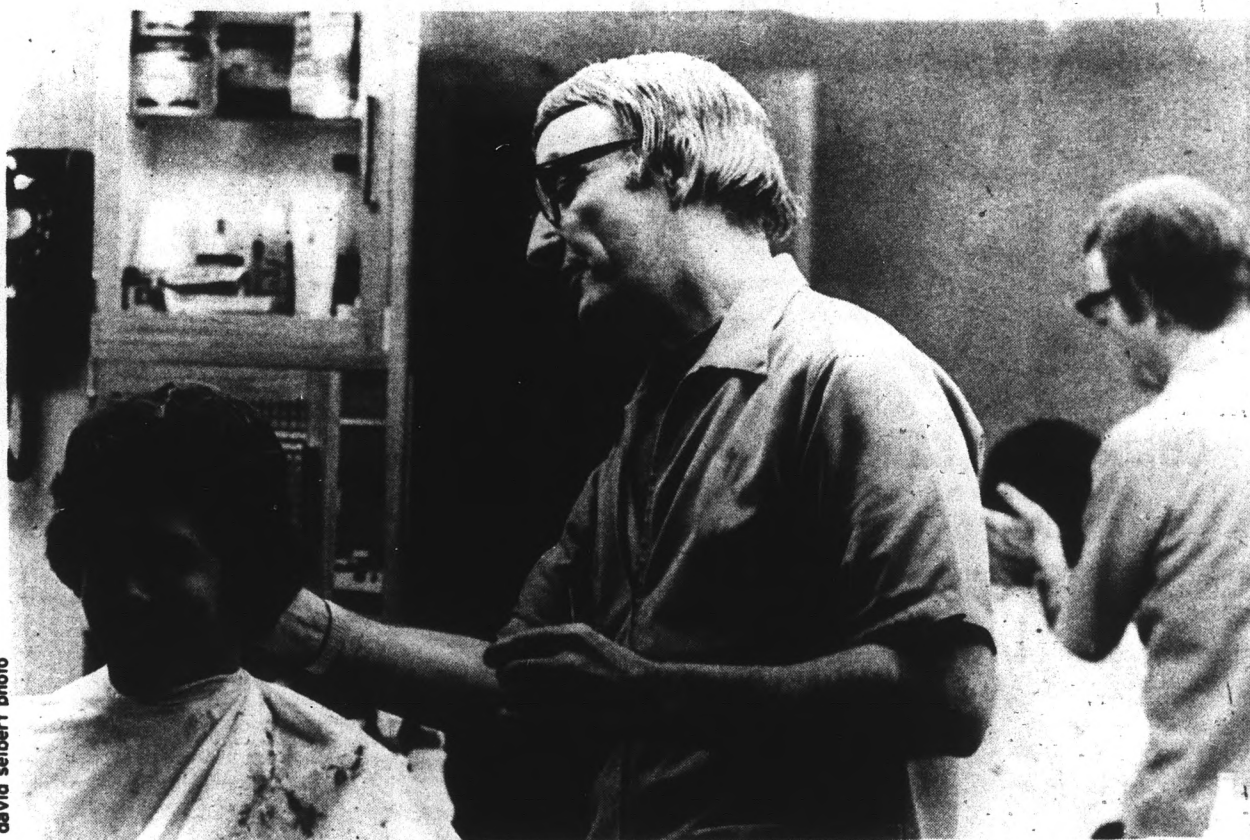

He added, however, that he would know where to send persons who wanted such services.

He said the current trend among his ASU customers is for "shorter but fuller" hair. The longer hair, which has dominated American heads for the past decade, seems to be on the wane. He said persons who have been in the military service, however, want their hair long perhaps because they missed out on it when it was popular with the civilian population.

Women too!

Hewett said that when hair got longer, it was nothing new to him because women have come to him for haircuts since he started barbering. He said, on the average, five women a week come into his shop.

"Some girls don't like going into

Hair raising

When Ike Hewett sits students down to hear their problems, it's not in an easy chair but a barber chair. Freshman Bill Waring, a business management major, shares a few minutes ... to talk and to get his locks shorn.

a beauty parlor for a haircut and coming out $15 later," he said.

Another trend he has noticed since taking over the MU barbershop is that business slacks off during exam time but picks up during job-seeking time "when guys are getting ready for interviews."

CORRECTION

The State Press Thursday incorrectly reported that three female faculty members in the graduate department had been up for promotion the past two years. The three instances involved requests for salary adjustments, not promotions.

STATE PRESS is published by Arizona State University Tuesday through Friday during the academic year, except holidays and examination periods. Entered as second class matter at Tempe, AZ. 85281.

ASU v. UofA: the game that is the end of it all

It's all come down to one game.

After months of wind sprints, hamburger drills, cheers, boos, and Sunday morning bruises, the Sun Devils and the Wildcats will square off this Saturday night in their biggest game of the year.

The battle in Tempe will decide a great many things: the state championship; the WAC championship and the right to meet powerhouse Nebraska in the Fiesta Bowl. But each of these reasons will probably be secondary in the minds of the coaches and players involved; the intense rivalry between the schools that has bloomed ever since Jim Young took over in Tucson promises to make the affair one of the most brutal ever witnessed on the floor of Sun Devil Stadium.

Most knowledgeable observers feel the game rates pretty much a toss-up, featuring the strength and quickness of the stingy Devil defense against the explosiveness of the Arizona offense.

Arizona, in the WAC, is first in total offense, rushing offense, and scoring offense. The Wildcat scoring machine is engineered by quarterback Bruce Hill, a three-year starter at that position, who has enjoyed season-long success throwing to wide receivers "T"

Bell and Scott Piper. Running backs Dave Randolph and Marvin Baker, along with able sub Derral Davis, have provided a consistent rushing game.

ASU, in the conference, ranks as the leader in total defense and scoring defense. The Devils are also second in scoring offense, total offense, and rushing offense.

Wildcat league leaders are "T" Bell in kickoff returns (32.8), Dennis Anderson in punting (43.4) and Lee Pistor in scoring (7.7 points a game). Fast Freddie Williams leads the WAC in rushing for ASU (1,163) while cornerback Mike Martinez has grabbed the most interceptions (seven).

Both teams are expected to be near full strength. Randolph and Baker, who sat out last week's Arizona romp over Utah, will both return to the lineup. For the Devils, defensive end Rob Petersen (dislocated elbow) and offensive tackle Scott Alden (knee) are ready for action.

Only Danny Kush, ASU's field goal kicker, will be out of the game. And it may prove fatal for the Devils in the end — his Arizona counterpart Lee Pistor is both capable and sure in the clutch. If the two teams are as closely matched as many seem to think, it may very well be a last minute field goal that decides the game.

Which brings us to a very interesting proposition; the Devils need only a tie to go to the Fiesta Bowl. So what will Frank Kush do if it comes down to a last minute decision to either kick an extra point for a tie and a berth in the Bowl or go for a two-point conversion and a victory? What would you do? Kush and all of Sunday morning quarterbacks had better start considering that possibility — the game might just come down to it.

NBA keeps former Devil happy

By Robert Friedman
Basket by Rudy White!

That once familiar cry by the Sun Devil announcer won't be heard this year when ASU takes the court.

White, the bearded 6'1" swing man for the '74-'75 Devil team, left ASU after three years to pursue a career in the pros.

"The offers was too good to pass up. The money is outstanding and with the American Basketball Association (ABA) folding I know I made the right move," White said Saturday prior to the Houston Rocket-Phoenix Suns matchup.

Rudy hasn't logged much court time with the Rockets because he's the fifth guard on the team. Calvin Murphy, Mike Newlin, Gus Bailey and Dave Wohl get the call from Houston coach John Egan before Rudy's name enters his mind.

"You got to remember that Rudy is a rookie. I told him before the season started this is a slow process, a learning experience," Egan said.

"I want him to get a look at all the teams before throwing him into a pressure situation.

Not many people can cover Calvin Murphy the way Rudy does during practice. I know we got a future star in this kid," Egan said.

Rudy praised ASU basketball coach Ned Wulk for his ability to drum home the fundamentals, but was quick to point out that long hours of practice outside the University enabled him to "run with the best."

White, who still makes his home in Phoenix, plans to attend ASU over the summers in order to complete his bachelors degree.

"I came back to Phoenix and it seemed like I'd been away for two years. I've had so many good times here and the people at ASU have been so good to me, I could never leave Phoenix for Houston," White said.

White likes the Rockets' chances of making the playoffs. He referred to Houston as a quality team that must stick to the basics.

"If we can cut down on the number of turnovers and move the ball to the open man we'll be tough to contain," he said.

Rudy, who received a no-cut contract and a six figure salary for signing with the Rockets, said the added wealth hasn't affected his personality. "I'm pretty much myself because I don't let all that money go to my head," he said.

Rocket coach Egan wants

Rudy to be ready. "The central division (Houston, Cleveland, New Orleans, Atlanta and Washington) play a rough brand of ball and if my guards are injured, Rudy will be expected to step right in and do a job," Egan said.

For Rudy White, the season has just begun.

Our $399
Kenwood / Ohm / BSR System is NOT

"a one week only,
holiday discount,
warehouse clearance
mad man special"

A maniac did not run through our stores and slap a "one-time-only" sale tag on our $399 system. We don't have any maniacs working for us . . . just experienced audio specialists. The system, and the price, will be the same next week and the week after, until someone can show us that there's a better stereo buy for $399.

Our experience as specialists in listening to, and carefully evaluating, good stereo equipment gives us the ability to choose the best values in moderate priced gear. Each component in our $399 system has proven its value and reliability in a series of tests on our service bench.

The Kenwood KR-2400 receiver faithfully reproduces frequencies well beyond the usually accepted limits of human hearing and delivers adequate power to drive two sets of medium efficiency speakers. It has separate bass and treble controls, balance control, tuning meter and other control functions desirable at a reasonable price.

The system is based around the Ohm "E" Loudspeakers. They are meant to be compared directly in every aspect of performance, including frequency response, to the most expensive and elaborate speakers available, and they sound clearly and dramatically better than many far more expensive systems. Countless owners and usually-biased equipment reviewers have all commented that they sound like twice the price.

The BSR 2260/X is our best selling automatic turntable. It includes a cueing lever, anti-skate control and a Shure M-81 magnetic cartridge with elliptical diamond stylus. We will set up and calibrate the changer right in our stores before we let you take it home.

The individual selling prices of these components usually total $459.90, but at Audio Specialists we'll go this value one better and sell the complete system for just $399. Stop by and see the system today. We don't bite . . . but you just might!
