SAE reprimanded for rape publicity

By Norma Coile

The Greek Relations Board, judiciary arm of the Inter-Fraternity Council (IFC), has imposed sanctions against Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity for adverse publicity resulting from a stag party in November that featured a go-go dancer.

An SAE member was charged with first-degree rape in connection with the party, but charges were dropped in December because of a lack of information in the case.

According to Joe Neff, IFC president, the board has decided to ban SAE from social functions connected with Greek activities (with the exception of rush tours) for one academic semester. SAE will also be denied points for participation in intramurals. The period of probation will be from March 22 to Nov. 1, the equivalent of one semester, Neff said.

SAE is appealing the decision to the Executive Council of the IFC, Neff said. If upheld there, the case will go before the presidents of the fraternities.

"The purpose of the action is to show the fraternities we don't condone stag parties, whatever, and the publicity that came from it (the SAE incident)," Neff said.

He said any action casting an unfavorable reflection on one fraternity or the whole Greek system is considered sufficient reason for a misconduct case.

"We really considered the SAE publicity as a whole, rather than any specific allegations," Neff said. He did say, however, the hiring of go-go dancers is in violation of IFC rules.

The board deliberated the case for two days, he said.

"There hasn't been an action like this before, at least in the last two years, as far as I know," he said.

Dr. Leon Shell, dean of students, said the probation status placed on SAE by his office is in effect until the end of this semester.

"We're going to be talking with some people from the SAE national office to see what they're doing in terms of leadership training and management," Shell said. "I want to see the (national) SAE leaders aware and involved, quite frankly."

Shell said since the county attorney's office did not prosecute the rape charge and the Maricopa County grand jury did not return an indictment, his office will not investigate the matter further.

Panel wants to cut interstate traveling

Several campus organizations may face cutbacks in travel funds next year because of a new budget policy recommendation by the Student Affairs Board to discourage out-of-state travel.

But Dr. John Reinard, director of the debate team, said restriction of out-of-state trips would "kill our program and do damage to the students."

"The new policy — initiated primarily by the students on the budget committee — is to restrict out-of-state travel as much as possible," said Dr. John Decker, chairman of the Student Affairs Board Budget Committee. The new policy is only a recommendation, subject to approval by the University Budget Committee, he added.

"In the past, there have been many recruiting trips, particularly in the music department," he said. "We (the committee) agreed the last thing we

Injunction leaves clients of defunct insurance firm unprotected from losses

By Ann Inskeep

A Superior Court injunction issued Thursday prevents creditors from suing the financially troubled Arizona Health Foundation but leaves policy holders — including some ASU employees — unprotected.

About 70 ASU employees, who earlier were told the injunction would prevent creditors from collecting debts for 90 days, now are personally liable for an estimated $50,000 to $70,000 in medical bills.

The Foundation went into receivership March 18.

Lawrence Ollason, attorney for the State Director of Insurance who drew up the order, said the provision protecting the policy holders was struck by Superior Court Judge Robert Corcoran.

The Arizona Health Foundation plan was one of six health insurance plans offered by the state to its employees.

Several ASU employees already have received demands for payment of medical bills that would have been paid by the company, if it hadn't gone into receivership.

Henry Koelbl, ASU director of personnel, said Tuesday emergency relief legislation appears to be the only way the stranded employees can be helped.

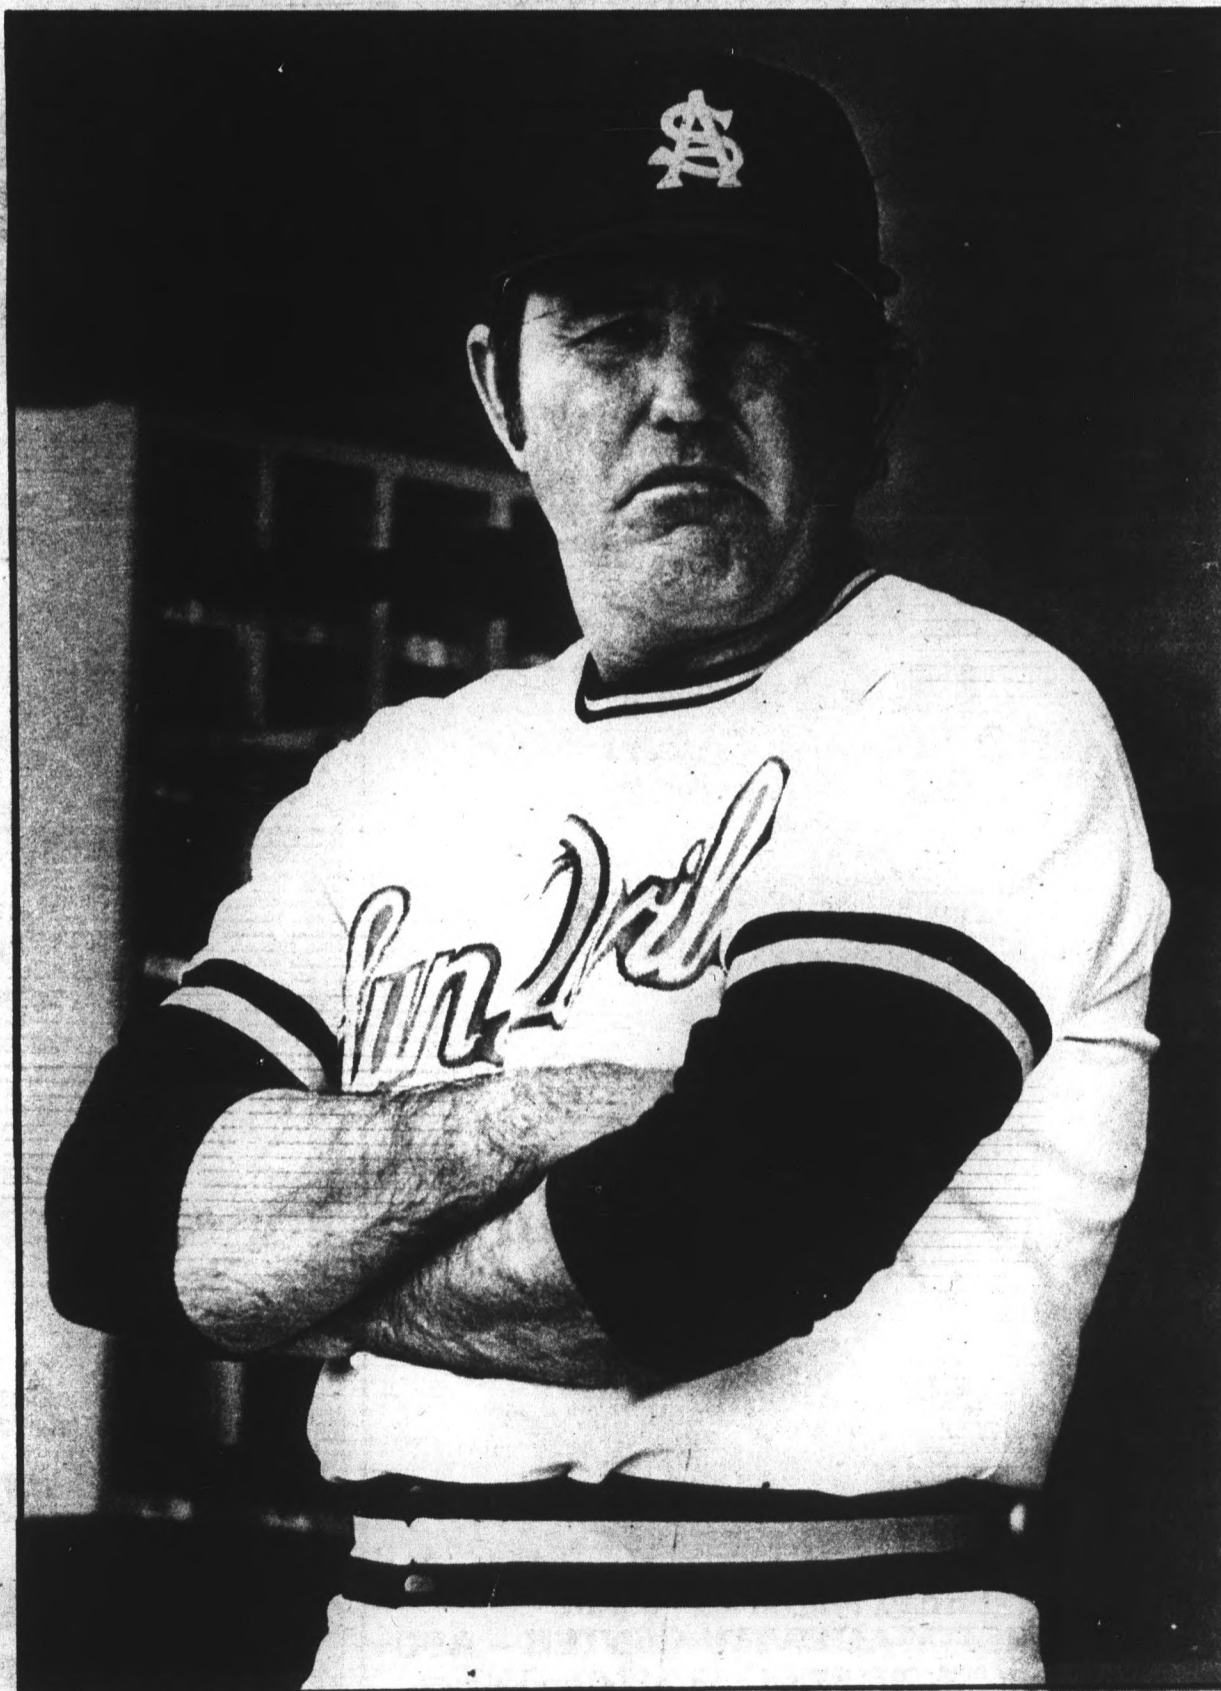

Rep. Juanita Harelson, R-Tempe, said although the deadline for introducing bills has passed, there is a possibility a measure could be introduced with the consent of the House Rules Committee.

"It seems to me it's not an unsolvable problem," Harelson said.

She said she spoke with Stan Akers, R-Phoenix, Speaker of the House and chairman of the Rules Committee, last week about the issue.

"Mr. Akers said it's possible the state will have to pick up a portion of it (the medical debts of state employees)," Harelson said.

She said people with claims should call Akers' office to urge passage of relief legislation.

Reinard said the debate team must take about 18 out-of-state trips a year because "there just aren't enough forensic opportunities in Arizona to give us any national recognition."

"Debate skills are the No. 3 criteria for admission to law schools," he said. "It is to the students advantage if we are a national power in forensics."

Decker said the committee will consider, individually, out-of-state trips for competitive purposes. "People will have to come to us and appeal," he said.

Decker said the committee will be open to appeals of the recommendation.

3 polling places planned for ASASU elections

Procedure may give students multiple votes

By Britton Bloom

Current election procedures could allow students to vote more than once in the upcoming ASASU elections if plans for three polling places are retained, said Bob Kunde, assistant election coordinator for ASASU.

A validated campus service card is required to qualify a student to vote in the primary election on April 6 and 7 and the general election April 13 and 14, Kunde said.

Kunde said he opposed the idea of using more than one polling place because students with duplicate service cards could vote repeatedly.

It is known, he added, that there are students with more than one service card. If there are several polling places, there would be no way to keep people with duplicate cards from voting more than once.

Kunde said he did not expect a large number of people to vote twice, but "if even one person voted twice, it wouldn't be a fair election."

Mike Callahan, election coordinator for ASASU, said he did not feel multiple voting would be a problem.

Callahan said he thought the dispute was fabricated by people opposed to using more than one polling place.

Most students are not familiar with the requirement for a validated ID, and only those who knew it would realize multiple voting is possible, he said.

Having only one polling place would cut down the number of students who voted, he said.

"Imagine a city of 33,000 people (the current enrollment of ASU) with only one polling location," he said.

Callahan admitted students with multiple ID's could vote more than once, but "the handful of people who would vote twice isn't going to affect the results unless the outcome is very close."

The ASU campus is regional, he said; people have most of their classes in one area and usually don't circulate.

If there is only one polling place, probably located on the central mall, many people in the education or science departments are not going to vote, he said.

Allan Frazier, coordinator for ASASU, said the responsibility of ASASU is to see that the election is run as fairly as possible.

"If we know there are multiple cards, we have to take steps to keep people from using them to vote more than once," Frazier said.

He added that he was in favor of using more than one

Lawyer says lawsuit charging ASU with bias is four months from action

By Mike Tulumello

A class-action lawsuit charging ASU with discrimination is at least four months away from "any real action," the lawyer representing the plaintiffs in the case said Thursday.

Ronald Logan said the lawsuit, filed nearly a year ago in the U.S. District Court in Phoenix, is still in the investigative stage. Logan said federal cases usually take 18 months from the time of original filing until they are actually heard.

The suit contends women and ethnic minorities are concentrated in low-salaried positions. The plaintiffs are Cynthia Yoshitomi, a former instructor in the health, physical education and recreation department and Dr. Leo Munoz, who applied unsuccessfully for a job in the special education department.

The suit alleges Yoshitomi's salary was less than her male counterparts and seeks recovery of lost wages. It also requests Munoz be hired to a position for which he says he is qualified.

"It's a monstrous case as far as the size and scope of it is concerned," Logan said. "We've spent a substantial amount of time during the past few months checking into the details of it."

Logan said the suit's impact could be "significant," if the court accepts the thrust of his clients' arguments.

"Some very fundamental questions are being asked about how the University handles its faculty and staff. One of the most significant changes would be that the University, for the first time, would have to give the faculty the benefit of a regular and rational evaluation."

He said the suit is particularly concerned with "the removal of artificial barriers" to employment.

Logan did not discount the possibility of an out-of-court settlement.

"If at any time we thought they were making a reasonable proposal, the case would probably be settled. It's only when one side takes an unreasonable stand that a case like this goes to trial."

Logan said he thought both parties had the goal of "maximizing the efficiency of the University."

Time to stop a witch hunt

For God so loved the world that he gave us CARP. We may not like all of God's gifts, but we live with them anyway.

CARP has been criticized in the pages of the local media, including the State Press, for being, among other things, too political and too business-oriented.

While the State Press questions certain methods of the Unification Church, we see the suppression of the church as far more dangerous to our society.

"Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof..."

While the First Amendment quoted above refers to Congress, the document's meaning is clear.

Every American is free to choose any religion he or she wants without fear of discrimination.

The Unification Church can hardly be singled out for its political and business operations. The Catholic and Mormon Churches — just to name two — are both very active in these areas.

And the campus is literally surrounded by churches that actively engage in proselytism (conversion from one faith to another).

CARP is looked at as strange and radical. Martin Luther had much the same image. Was Martin Luther a political animal?

The quest to rid ASU and the surrounding communities of CARP and the Unification Church has taken on the proportions of a witch hunt.

The State Press has been guilty of contributing to this witch hunt by the attention it has given the issue. As long as it is an issue, we must cover it.

Consequently, we urge the Student Affairs Board to expedite their investigation and to return the verdict of not guilty.

Wrong way courts

If there was any doubt in anyone's mind as to the justness of our judicial system, a superior court decision handed down Thursday removed all speculation.

It ain't fair.

The court approved an injunction preventing health agencies and doctors from suing the insolvent Arizona Health Foundation, a state-offered medical plan for state employees.

The doctors and hospitals are not looking to sue the defunct company; the patients themselves are being besieged with threats against their credit ratings by the hospitals. The injunction should have provided temporary relief to the once-insured victims, not the Arizona Health Foundation.

Laws are sometimes interpreted in mysterious manners. The only relief now possible for the affected state employees is emergency relief legislation.

If you are so affected, call Speaker Stan Akers, R-Phoenix, at 271-5836 to voice your concerns.

The campaign carnival

Beginning Monday at 6 p.m., ASU will become a carnival of campaign paraphernalia. Candidates for Associated Students offices will saturate almost every corner of the campus with posters, banners, flyers, etc.

There is nothing wrong with that, providing campaign materials are not placed in areas where they are prohibited. We don't want the campus looking like a dumped-over trash can.

And any insidious characters found stapling flyers to the trees on campus will be dealt with on this page.

Just a reminder, folks; have a good campaign.

Letters

ASU is lucky to get Wings for only $9.50 per ticket

Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter from Mr. Edwin P. Dixon appearing in the March 24 State Press concerning the high price of tickets to the Paul McCartney and Wings concert. I'm sure Mr. Dixon's intentions were good, but he is obviously ignorant to the entire situation.

I would hardly call Paul McCartney, the lead singer and one of the major driving forces behind the Beatles (who incidentally have been offered $30 million to appear together for one concert) an average "run of the mill" rock star.

He also sees fit to exclude the fact that ASU is the only university included in the Wings tour, and that it is also the lowest priced. (The rest of the concerts will be $12.50 as compared to $7.50, $8.50 and $9.50 at the activities center.

Phoenix has long been excluded from the schedules of many major rock bands due to the sore lack of facilities and inadequate organization. If the Wings concert meets with the same success as did Elton John, I think we can look forward to many more quality rock-and-roll performances. If not, we might as well get used to driving to California to take part in quality rock performances and paying a significantly higher price per ticket.

I also feel that ASASU should be commended on signing such other groups as Pink Floyd, Bruce Springsteen and others. I'm sure the job wasn't easy.

Thomas A. Webb

Coed housing is a reality we must face

Editor:

The biggest problem with discouraging coed housing is that it is inconsistent with reality. Except for the University, almost all apartments — wherever located — are coed.

I believe that part of the University educational process should be the development of a persons ability to make choices, including social, which will effect his/her well-being. The concept of "in-loco-parentis" has had its day and must now gracefully give way.

Streisand look-alike gets role of stand-in

By Kim Kleinschmidt

Barbra Streisand look-alike Marilyn Sommer had the thrill of her life over spring break when she played the stand-in for Streisand during filming of the movie "A Star is Born" at ASU.

"The impact of this experience hasn't quite hit me," said the senior fine arts major. "I think she (Streisand) is just great. She's by far and away my favorite singer. The entire situation has been a real rush," said Sommer.

Streisand and Kris Kristofferson are at ASU to shoot portions of an updated version of the early 1950's hit, which starred Judy Garland and James Mason.

Sommer said she was picked as Streisand's stand-in after sending a photograph to the Bobbie Ball Agency.

"They (the agency) said I resembled Streisand and we were the same height.

"I remember screaming after hanging up the phone. I was totally elated, although it is kind of bad that I wasn't picked on talent but only on looks and height.

"At first I didn't want to approach her as a typical fan, because she's a human being, not a thing," Sommer said. "When I did talk to her, she was like anybody else. But everytime we finished conversing, I felt elated.

"The first time she asked me my name, I remember feeling very humble then, as I do now, yet I feel more relaxed now when I'm in her presence," Sommer said.

"Although I'm enjoying being Streisand's stand-in, the best thing about the whole experience is the behind-the-scenes people who make the movie work. They're all very friendly and treat me with the utmost kindness," Sommer added.

Sommer said her job as a stand-in consisted of proper placing in a scene so that lighting and camera angles could be figured out. "Sometimes we spend as much as a hour on one shot," Sommer said.

"One of the nicest things to happen to me occurred last Saturday at the concert, when a photographer from a Cleveland newspaper said he took seven pictures of me before he realized that I wasn't Miss Streisand," said Sommer. "Needless to say this was very flattering to me."

Sommer said the experience will help her in her career. "Working with actors and staff of this caliber can only help me in my learning and the practical experience can't be measured.

"Although the initial thrill of being around the movie set and all these talented people has begun to wear off, I find that I still get chills everytime I hear Miss Streisand sing. She is one talented lady."

Voting procedure

* polling location if the problem of multiple cards could be solved.

One possible solution would be to hook a computer outlet to each poll so the voters would have their student numbers on the record after they voted, he said.

But a lack of time and telephone connections to the polls may make the computer plan infeasible, he added.

"The problem is if a candidate knew somebody could vote more than once, and we didn't take precautions against it, the candidate could make a good case for having the election invalidated," Frazier said.

Simon, Sallie, and poodle "Shawn" relax after an afternoon workout.

Grooming a Chum

Sallie Cheatham and "Simon" Brunswick, two transplanted Oregonians, have been best of friends for 2½ years. Sallie, a 21 year-old ASU Mass Communications major, and Simon, a 7 year-old thoroughbred, spend twenty hours a week together, riding, eating, grooming and socializing.

Sallie and Simon are partners in the horse business. The pair made their biggest coup in 1974 when they won the Amateur Working Hunter Oregon State Championship. Successful partnerships involve dedication and often affection. Six days a week Sallie and Shawn, a Sheltie poodle, give Simon a one and a half hour workout at the Pretty Penny Ranch in Scottsdale.

"We never miss a day of riding," Sallie said. "We work toward a common goal — horse shows."

Four times a week, Simon gets his apples or carrots depending upon his pleasure.

"He never bites," Sallie said. "He loves people, and loves to be hugged. He's just like a big dog in many ways."

Shawn's problem is he thinks he is a horse. Shawn likes to run under Simon during workouts. He's only been stepped on once, however.

A horse's teeth must be checked regularly but Sallie doesn't mind because Simon never bites.

ASU vs U of A CONTEST

win STANTON Gyropoise TURNTABLE

ATTENTION ASU and U of A students: This is your chance to defend the honor of your favorite ivy-walled institution and win a $200 Stanton turntable at the same time. Enter the First Annual Flying Disc Derby, demonstrate your competitive spirit and unerring accuracy by flinging discs at our target and return home the proud owner of a new Stanton Model 8004, Series II, a great piece of equipment for spinning your own discs. Entry details are devastatingly simple: Just sign up at either the Tempe Jerry's Audio Exchange in the University arches or the Tucson location at ten-thirty-seven North Park (depending on your academic allegiance) on Saturday, March 27, between noon and one o'clock, show proof that you are a student, then limber up your flinging arm. The runner-up will receive a nifty consolation prize from Stanton and the first 100 contestants will receive a free Stanton flying disc. CAUTION: Should Flying Disc Flinging become an Olympic-sanctioned event, winning this contest could endanger your amateur status!

The Native American Student Association will sponsor a fried-bread sale at 11 a.m. at the Baker Center. Ask for the chef's special.

The Campus Crusade for Christ meets at 8 p.m. at 13th and Mill, across from Gammage Auditorium. Elmer Lappen, area director of Campus Crusade, will speak on the relevance of Jesus Christ.

Seek Advisement Early! See your advisor for course selection for the fall semester as soon as possible. You can avoid the crowds if you seek advice now and complete the computer sheet during the April 1-9 early registration period.

The Arizonans for Peace will meet at 8 p.m. at the Lutheran Campus Center, 1414 S. McAllister. On tonight's agenda will be the film "Lovejoy's Nuclear War," an award-winner about the citizen, our environment, the law and nuclear power. Donations requested.

MONDAY

Attention Vets! Register now for summer school. Come by Academic Services 303 to do the paperwork for your advance paycheck.

The Black Discovery Group will meet at 6:30 p.m. at 205 E. 15th Street in Tempe. The meeting will deal with black students finding the relevance of the life and teachings of Jesus for the black community.

Hypnosis teacher says practice is not harmful

A teacher of a self-hypnosis course in the MU disagrees with Valley experts who say the old "look into my eyes" practice is harmful.

"Everybody has a built in self-preservation," said Nelson Gammon, instructor of the six-week hypnosis course. "They won't do anything they wouldn't do normally."

Yet Dr. Maier Tuchler, a Phoenix psychiatrist, said mental illness "can be stirred up in the wrong person," if hypnosis is not used properly.

"You must have adequate training in either psychology or psychiatry, otherwise you're a showman," Tuchler said.

Glen Miller, an ASU associate professor of psychology, maintains that a hypnotist cannot know exactly what reaction a person will have to hypnosis.

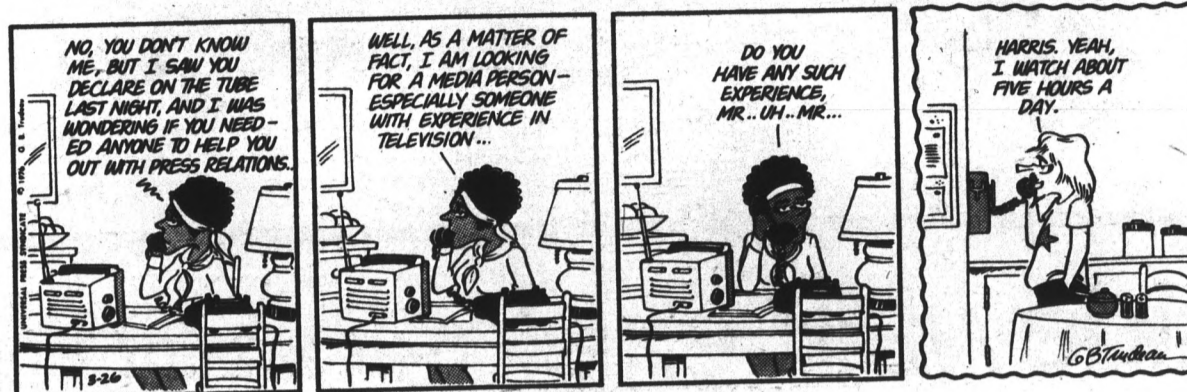

Gammon said hypnosis makes people more aware. The person under hypnosis wouldn't do things blindly unless it was his nature to do so, he said.

Gammon, a hypnotechnician, said there is no danger in taking his short course. He simply tells people "things they can already do," Gammon said.

Course goals are to teach people how to improve concentration, memory, recall and relaxation, he said.

Councilman says class theory applicable to practical politics

By Hugh Daley

After eight years as a Scottsdale city councilman, an ASU political science professor says he is convinced that classroom political theory applies to practical politics.

"The stuff we teach from textbooks is often closer to the

Don't look here for magazines, librarian says

Students should look for popular magazines at a public library instead of Hayden Library, according to the assistant University librarian.

"Hayden Library's primary function is to supply the University with research materials, not popular magazines," Helen Gater said.

She said the library can't afford to spend money on popular publications without cutting the amount of scholarly material.

"Sure the University has a social function," Gater said, "but it can't be all things to all people. The University was founded for academic research and that is the purpose of the library."

Gater admitted popular magazines are as important to a journalism student as scientific publications are to a science student.

"The library tries to order a cross-section of popular magazines without cutting into the academic area," she said.

Periodical requests by the faculty are evaluated, she said.

"The library determines whether a periodical will be ordered on the basis of its academic content, cost and whether the information is available from another source," Gater said.

Art festival set to begin for women

The second annual Women's Art Fair and a workshop on establishing a Women's Center in Phoenix are part of a month-long Women's Festival of the Arts planned for March 27 to April 25.

The Festival will "spotlight the significance of women's art," according to Betsy Benjamin-Murray, co-coordinator of the Women and Arts Task Force.

The workshop is set for Saturday and the Art Fair will be April 24 and 25. Both are sponsored by the task force and cosponsored by the Arizona Commission on the Arts and Humanities.

truth than many people would like to think," Dr. Heinz R. Hink said.

Many people and even some politicians think of politics as an art, not a science, but his experience as a city councilman has proved just the opposite, he said.

"Issues come up all the time (on the council) in which a knowledge of overall political operation is helpful," he said.

Yet Hink added that his participation in local government has provided experience valuable in the classroom. "I've learned a good deal on how government actually operates, especially through my involvement in state government," Hink said.

Hink's work in state government includes participation on the Commission on Judicial Qualifications and chairmanship of the Governor's Committee on Legislative Apportionment.

Hink said his wife and three children take an active interest in his work on the city council. Hink said his youngest son, John, an 8th-grader at Hohokam Elementary School, is president of the student body council.

The Scottsdale City Council meets formally two Tuesdays a month. Hink said the council work does not occupy a great deal of his time. He regards his job as political science professor as his life's work, he said.

ASU paper to accept editorship applications

Applications for the editorship of the State Press for the fall semester will be received in Stauffer Hall A-111 until Friday April 9.

There are no forms to fill out. Applicants should submit a concise resume of experience in reporting, writing, editing and layout as well as of qualifications to direct an editorial staff and to make editorial decisions.

Included also must be full name, address, telephone number, class, major, grade point average, anticipated graduation date and number of semester hours to be carried in the fall.

Applications will be reviewed by the manager of student publications and by the Student Publications Advisory Board. Leading candidates will be notified and asked to prepare for an interview April 16.

Candidates from all majors will be considered. The new editor will be announced by April 19.

Associate dean says

SAT, ACT used less

American universities have been relying less and less on entrance examinations during the last 10 years, an associate dean of the College of Education said Wednesday.

Dr. Robert Grinder said many schools, such as Harvard and Yale, do not require the high scores on the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and the American College Test (ACT) they once did. The ACT, which is used by ASU, and the SAT are the most frequently used entrance examinations for universities.

"These elite schools have realized they must use different criteria, in many cases, for determining entry," Grinder said. "They have recognized that the country has to sustain its plural heritage in regard to accepting many minority students."

The tests reflect a student's ability in cognitive skills. But many students are more concerned with a search for personal meaning in life, Grinder said.

Because students are concerned about this search for personal meaning, they have lost some of the personal motivation that characterized many students 10 years ago, Grinder said. As a result, test scores are lower.

"Tests are going to have to be revised. They no longer are really valid for the population they intend to test," Grinder said.

Tom Wolfe to talk on US politics, art

Tom Wolfe, exponent of the new literary genre known as the "nonfiction novel" or the "new journalism," will lecture Thursday April 1 at 8 p.m. in the MU Arizona Room.

The title of his talk, which is free to the public under the sponsorship of the Cultural Affairs Board, is "Unmentionable Battles for Superiority."

Described by Kurt Vonnegut Jr. as "a genius who will do anything to attract attention," Wolfe has been called a professional rogue. The pop journalist will discuss art, politics and America.

Wolfe says: "I believe that it is possible to achieve a nonfiction form that combines the emotional impact usually found in novels and short stories, the analytical insights of the best essays and the scholarly writing and the deep factual foundation of hard reporting."

Raised in Richmond, Va., he was educated at Washington and Lee University and at Yale University where he received a doctorate in American Studies.

At Washington and Lee he served as sports editor of the campus newspaper, was one of the founders of the literary journal "Shenendoah," and was a pitcher on the baseball team.

After an attempt at semi-pro ball, he went to work for the Massachusetts Union and soon joined the Washington Post, for which he won the 1960 Washington Newspaper Guild awards for foreign reporting (Cuba) and humor (stories and drawings of the 1960 Senate civil rights filibuster.) In 1962 he went to work for the New York Herald Tribune and also worked for Esquire magazine.

'Exactly what size boobs are you offering?'

'Boots?! But sir, that's not what your ad showed'

By Rene Lessard

Should a boob offer a boot to a cowboy?

Two ASU students won a free pair of boots by pondering this question.

Their opinions of a controversial boot ad featuring a seminude model and a provocative headline ranked first in the "Have I Got a Pair for You" contest.

Winners Diane Stone and George Pierce entered the contest while taking an advertising class last semester.

Students in beginning advertising and buyer behavior classes were asked to express their opinions of a Sanders Boot Co. advertisement that was rejected by Western Horseman magazine.

Sanders came up with the new approach for advertising boots in July 1975. Instead of using a western scene as the approach, Sanders put out an ad displaying the top of a female model garbed in only a cowboy hat. The headline "Have I Got a Pair for You" ran across the top of the ad in black capital letters.

Western Horseman magazine refused to run the ad, saying it was "too provocative" for a family magazine.

In place of the original ad, Sanders substituted a black picture frame with "censored" printed across it. Readers were invited to send for a copy of the censored ad and voice their opinions as to whether the original ad was too provocative. The best opinion would receive a free pair of Sanders boots.

Dr. Charles Patti, an ASU marketing professor, read about the ad controversy in Advertising Age, a trade magazine. Patti wrote to Sanders and asked if they would give a free pair of boots to ASU students who wrote the best opinions of the ad.

The company agreed. "It was an opportunity for students to comment on the use of sex in advertising, which is a very controversial issue," said Patti.

The results showed that 225 students out of 374 thought the ad was too provocative for Western Horseman.

Patti sent the top 36 opinions to Sanders, which picked the best pro and best con opinions.

Pierce, winner of the pro category, said the ad was a good eye-catcher and felt it was not as risqué as ads found in Cosmopolitan.

Stone, taking the negative opinion, said,

"This is without a doubt one of the grossest ads I have ever seen. Since the product has nothing to do with the picture, I

April 10 fete set to honor retiring prof

A dinner honoring Dr. Gordon B. Castle, zoology professor, will be held April 10 at the Fiesta Inn.

Castle, who served as acting president of Montana State University in 1958-59 and academic vice president at ASU from 1964-67, will retire at the end of the spring semester.

The 8 p.m. dinner in the Galleria Room of the Fiesta Inn, corner of Broadway and Priest in Tempe, will be preceded by a no-host reception at 7 p.m.

can't see using it. The appeal is tasteless not only for a family magazine but every magazine as well. It would be different if the product was for a body lotion, breast developer, etc. I'm not a prude, just against such blatant sexism!"

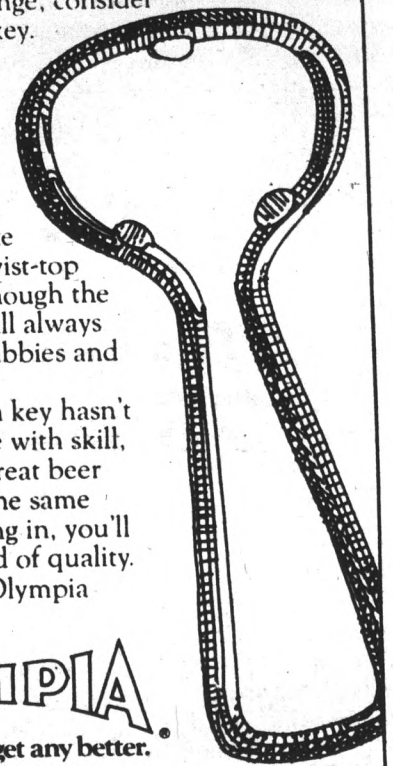

Olympia Brewing Company, Olympia, Washington *OLY*®

In a world buffeted by change, consider the unchanging church key.

On a fateful day in October, 1919, Mac C. Rosenfeld received Patent #1,260,321 for it. A gleaming symphony of spring steel, the church key was used by three generations of thirsty collegiate Oly drinkers. Not until the twist-top was its utility questioned, although the discriminating Oly drinker will always keep one on hand for tav-Stubbies and Oldtime bottles.

The design of the church key hasn't changed because it was made with skill, ingenuity and simplicity. A great beer doesn't change for many of the same reasons. If it's done right going in, you'll have an unchanging standard of quality. Some things never change. Olympia never will.

First Wings tickets to go to students

By Susan Leonard
Students will get an opportunity next week to buy tickets for the Wings concert, featuring Paul McCartney, before notice is given the general public, said Rick Clark, Associated Students activities vice president.

Clark would not release the date tickets will go on sale. But he said next week an ad will appear in the State Press the morning tickets go on sale for the April 14 concert. Posters announcing the ticket sales will be placed around campus the same morning, he said.

Tickets for the ASASU-sponsored concert are expected to sell out within two or three days after they go on sale, Clark said. The event will be held in the University Activity Center.

The promoter, Concerts West, set the $9.50, $8.50 and $7.50 ticket prices, Clark said.

Concerts West gave ASASU another pricing option — $8.50 general admission. But Clark said he decided the first option would be more fair to ticket holders.

Originally, the promoter wanted 70 per cent of the Activity Center's seats to be sold for $9.50, 20 per cent for $8.50 and 10 per cent for $7.50, Clark said.

He said he negotiated the percentage for each ticket price down to 30, 30 and 40 per cent respectively. "We got the best deal we could," Clark said. "Our only other alternative was not to have a concert at all."

The ticket prices are consistent with those being charged at all other cities on the Wings tour, Clark said.

ASASU expects to make about $10,000 if the concert sells out. Clark said he would like to see the money used for student loans.

The ASASU Executive Committee will determine how to use the profit, Clark said.

State Press to carry free lost, found column

Starting with the April 2 edition, the State Press will carry every Friday a free lost and found column in its classified advertising section.

The new feature is sponsored as a service to the ASU community by Western Savings.

Anyone who has lost or found an item may turn in copy for a classified ad for inclusion in the 'Friday Free' column to run on Friday only. Deadline for copy to be received either at MU room 208, or Stauffer Hall A-111 is 2 p.m. Wednesday.

MU program will claim JFK death covered up

Were the events which occurred in Dallas, Texas, on Nov. 22, 1963, the beginning of a period of conspiracy and official cover-up in America? So asserts Rusty Rhodes, executive director of the Committee to Investigate Political Assassinations (CIPA), in a presentation he will give March 31 entitled "Who Killed Kennedy?"

Rhodes, who appeared at ASU last April, will come here again to offer facts, films and words about the 1963 assassination of President John F. Kennedy, and about the truths which Rhodes claims were left out of official investigations and hidden from the public.

His appearance, at 3 p.m. in the MU Arizona Room, is being sponsored by the MU Ideas and Issues Committee. The event is open to the public free of charge.

Rhodes' multi-media presentation includes a copy of the controversial "Zapruder film," which allegedly shows President Kennedy was shot from in front, rather than from the rear as government investigators say.

The CIPA director, who founded the organization in 1968, has been probing Kennedy's death — and other political assassinations — in an attempt to have the case reopened so that all the evidence can be revealed.

Devil mistakes lead to beating from Tennessee sports

ASU pole-vaulter Dave Herman attempts to clear 16-6 in Wednesday night's track meet with Tennessee and BYU. Herman missed on this attempt, but was successful at the height later and finished second.

The Devil tracksters had some problems Wednesday night.

The 440-yard relay team got them off on the wrong foot by dropping the baton in the opening relay.

Charlie Wells pulled up in the 100 when he aggravated his tendinitis.

Ray Wicksell missed the mile with a sprained ankle.

And the Devils were easily beaten by Tennessee 80.5-64.5 for their third loss without a victory this year. BYU finished third, tallying 44.

Yet coach Baldy Castillo was still smiling. "The bad pass and the injuries hurt us, but we have a good team and we are going to win some meets this year," he said.

The lively crowd of 2,837 was smiling too, after witnessing a fine early season track display.

Tennessee's Reggie Jones, who has covered 100 meters in the world record time of 9.9, teased the crowd by gliding through a 9.4 100-yard dash.

Guest star Paul Cummings, formally of BYU, dropped in and ran a nifty 3:56.7 mile. And for kicks, Cummings broke the track record in the two mile, turning in a 8:46.2.

UT's Phil Olsen, tossed the javelin 267 feet—10 inches to easily win that event, setting a new national mark for his Canadian homeland in the process.

ASU's Rick Walker edged teammate Francois Aumas in the 440 intermediate hurdles, leading a Devil sweep in the fine time of 51.0.

Devil star Herman Frazier ended the exciting evening when he streaked past Gerald Borough in the home stretch, anchoring the ASU mile-relay team's victory over a team of tough Devil redshirts.

Steeplechase—Marsh, BYU, 8:57; Wathne, BYU, 8:58.4; Addison, Tenn., 9:06.6

Aw . . . C'mon

Brock shows a little of his famous temper.

After being pulled, pitcher Jim Peterson listens to Brock.

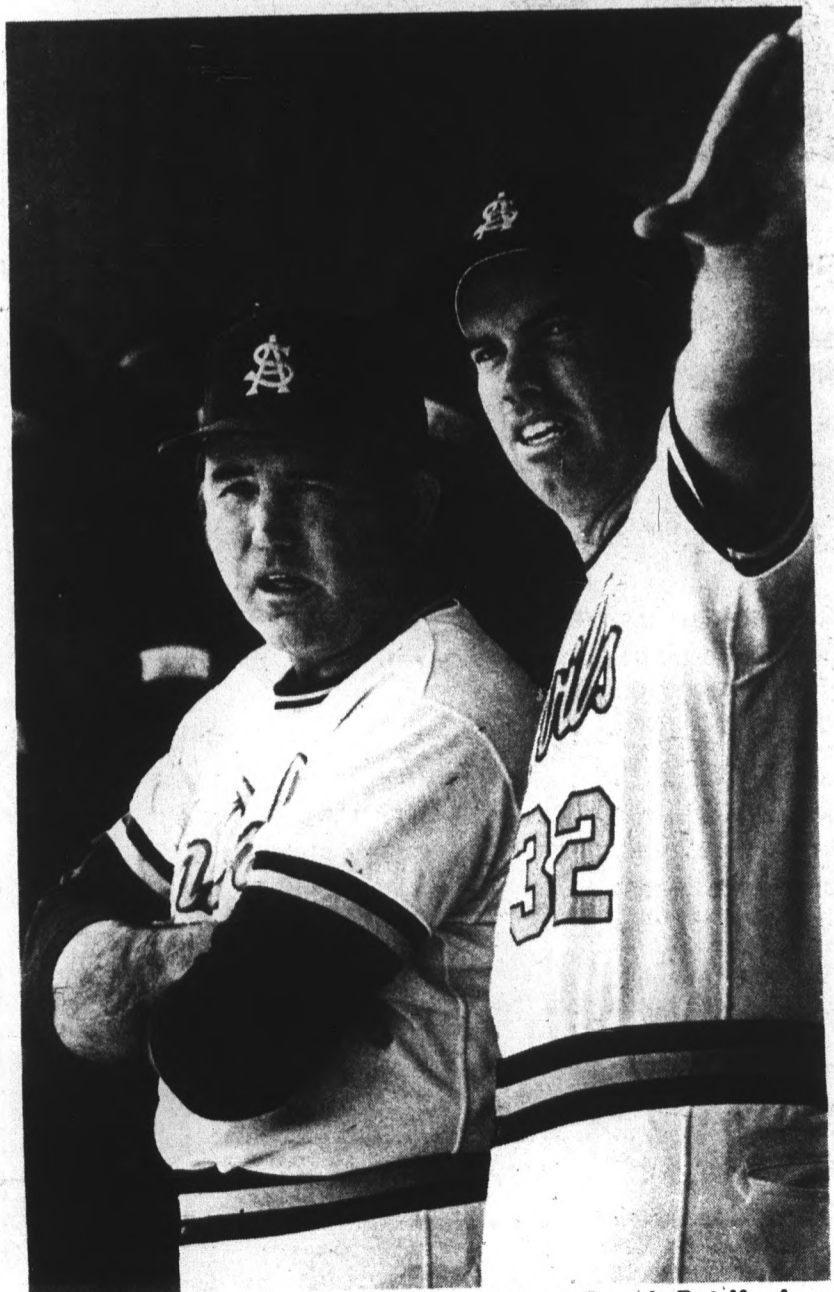

Whether ASU baseball coach Jim Brock is shouting, listening, advising, or yawning, he's almost always winning.

During his four-plus seasons as Devil coach, his teams have won over 250 games. The Brock-coached Devils have won three WAC titles and gone to the College World Series in Omaha three times, finishing second there twice. This year's squad has compiled an impressive 28-6 record.

But winning that much can sometimes cause a coach to yawn a little [picture below].

In fact, Brock has amassed almost as much of a reputation for his "lively" criticism of umpires and his short temper as he has for winning ball games.

Brock considers advice from Assistant Coach Pat Kuhner.

Maneuvering players with a 14-run lead isn't too challenging.

Tennessee sprinter aims for 'world's fastest' title

By Mike Natter

A crowd is rarely treated with the opportunity to see an athlete like Reggie Jones; a man vying for the coveted title of "world's fastest human."

This is an Olympic year and when Jones came to Tempe with the Tennessee Vols Wednesday night, observers had to be thinking ahead to Montreal, wondering whether the UT junior would be the man who might restake the United States' claim on the prized 100-meter gold medal.

Jones ran away with the 100-yard dash Wednesday, clocking 9.4. But the man who shares the world record in the 100 meters (9.9) said he could have done better.

"I have a sore ankle and I eased up at the end. But if I pushed it, I could have gone a lot lower," he said.

The 6-4, 188-pound

Volunteer is the Olympic favorite, according to many observers, including ASU coach Baldy Castillo. However, the affable sprinter from Saginaw, Mich. said it is still too early to be thinking about the Montreal games.

"I try not to think or talk about the Olympics, because if I talk, people expect me to be there. If I am not there, I don't want to disappoint others or myself," Jones said.

Jones said the Olympics and his world record haven't changed his outlook on running.

"I get the same feeling each time I step out on the track. It's like I know what I have to do," he explained. "Just because I'm Reggie, that doesn't mean I'm going to win. Anyone can win. I have to make things happen out there."

Pre-Olympic pressure hasn't affected the 6-4 sprinter either.

"Some people who are promoting the games put pressure on the athletes, but it affects each individual differently. Some people feel pressure, but I'm not thinking about the games so I don't feel the pressure," Jones commented. "But it is tough not thinking about something that has been your lifetime dream."

Part of that lifetime dream would be the honor of representing his country in the Olympics, Jones said.

"I would feel good representing America. I take pride in my country," he said. "The United States has done a lot of things that people don't like, but I think that if things didn't happen the way they did, we wouldn't be here right now."

Ladies' golf festival to benefit ASU team

The Lady Sun Devil Golf Festival will be held Monday at Century Country Club in Scottsdale. The tournament will begin at 9:30 a.m., and proceeds will benefit the ASU women's golf team.

Local golfers and members of both ASU and the UofA women's golf teams will make up the 24-foursome field, coach Judy Whitehouse said.

Whitehouse said the highlight of the day will be a luncheon featuring KTAR-tv weatherman Dewey Hopper and other Valley personalities. She said there will also be door prizes and awards for the four lowest team (foursome) scores.

The $35 entry fee will be used by the golf team to sponsor the Lady Sun Devil Collegiate Tournament in April. This tournament will feature 10 to 15 top college teams, Whitehouse added.

Sports at a glance

THE WOMEN'S SOFTBALL team will open its season against Mesa Community College Saturday at 4 p.m. Mesa is also the site of the team's first Intermountain Conference game next Tuesday at 2 p.m. against NAU.

THE ASU WOMEN'S TENNIS team will make use of the new Whiteman Tennis Center Saturday and Monday. The unbeaten netters take on the UofA's "second" team at 9:30 a.m. Saturday. Monday the women will host Phoenix College at 2:30 p.m.
