Student association wins right to sue in court judgement

By Ann Inskeep

Associated Students of the University of Arizona won a four-year court battle Monday when a Pima county Superior Court decision established the student organization's right to sue.

The decision, issued by Superior Court Judge Norman Fenton, also declared the 1937 sale of the campus bookstore by the Arizona Board of Regents to ASUA a valid contract.

Student leaders at UofA expressed disappointment with another part of the decision that gave the university the right to "continue to maintain and exercise its supervision over funds expended from operation of the bookstore."

"It's like a doubleheader," said Dave Hameroff, ASUA president. "We're ahead of where we were last week and four years ago, but we still can't do things student associations can do in New York and California."

ASUA filed suit against the regents in January 1972. The suit claimed the regents had breached the 1937 contract by withholding bookstore profits from ASUA.

The suit also requested a court decision on whether ASUA has the right to control the bookstore profits and whether it is a legal entity in its own right (able to sue.)

The regents maintained the 1937 contract was void because, as a part of the university, ASUA did not have legal standing to enter into the agreement. The regent opinion equated ASUA with a department of the school.

William Risner, attorney for ASUA, said the portion of the decision establishing ASUA's existence in its own right is the most significant.

"This is a real change in the power structure," Risner said. "As I read it, ASUA can use its (bookstore) profits in any area that's of legitimate student concern."

Mike Ceballos, newly elected executive vice president of ASUA, was less optimistic.

"I'm kind of disappointed," he said. "At least it establishes the bookstore is ours and we can initiate the spending of funds, but it still gives the university the right to say no."

Al Senia, assistant director of the Arizona Students' Association, said the decision is not explicit about who can control the funds.

"It seems to me the judge is talking about broad guidelines. But we're definitely in a better position than we were before."

Risner said the regents can appeal the decision, and he expects the case to continue for "at least several months."

"I need to prepare a form of the judgement that is consistent with the court's opinion and present it to the regents," he said. "The regents will have a chance to dispute the form."

Judge Fenton said he could not comment because the bookstore suit still is considered a pending case.

ASUA's three executive officers, President Pat Mitchell and Vice Presidents Ceballos and Mark Webb, will meet with Risner Thursday to evaluate the decision and plan a course of action.

Fatal blast remains unsolved

By Mike Tulumello

Investigators of last week's chemistry lab explosion that killed an ASU graduate student say the accident probably will remain an unsolved mystery.

William Peter Engle, 29, a doctoral candidate in chemistry, died Sunday morning in Maricopa County Hospital. He had suffered burns covering more than 90 per cent of his body.

"We will never know what caused the explosion," said ASU safety officer Dale Partridge. "Engle's papers went up in flames and there were no witnesses to what he was working with."

Engle was working with chemicals in the lab Tuesday morning when the blast occurred. A fire broke out almost instantly, engulfing Engle in flames.

University Fire Marshal Sylvester Anderson said ASU's investigation of the accident had reached a standstill.

Anderson said Engle's clothing has been sent to a state laboratory to check for glass fragments and acid remains. But he said, "That's still not going to tell us what had to be the source

Plan calls for increase of parking prices

Ad hoc committee approves plan; sends to administration

By Hal DeKeyser

Prices for student parking stickers will go up as much as $10 per year under a plan approved Friday by the University ad hoc Parking Committee.

Sent Monday to University administrators, the plan calls for variable parking fees, installation of parking meters and three information and service centers.

Dormitory residents will be charged $7.50 per semester, commuter students $5 per semester and ancillary personnel (related to but not employees of ASU) $10 per year per vehicle.

Employees making more than $12,000 per year will pay $25 per year, while those making less will pay $15.

Parking prices for all students and employees are currently $5 per year.

Robert Fails, committee chairman, said the basic purpose of the new parking plan is to fill outer parking lots by raising the cost to park in inner lots.

He said most of the prime locations would continue to be reserved for faculty and staff.

The proposal also limits stickers to one per person.

Fails said, "Discrimination against students is horrendous because some of them have faculty or staff parents with two stickers." Disabled persons will have a high priority, he said.

The new parking plan states, "It appears that the employees...must, of necessity, be given some preference in the interest of the principal objective of the university which is to serve the student."

"What really is behind it is that we believe if they (faculty and staff) are to do their job properly, they must have accessability," said committee member Lee Searcy.

Fails said the plan should reduce parking enforcement problems, and University Police Chief George Bays, an ex officio member of the committee, agreed.

Fails said the parking plan would be financially self-supporting from the sale of parking stickers and revenue from parking meters. A limited number of parking meters will be placed in designated lots.

He added that revenue generated from parking tickets would fall off dramatically.

The committee agreed that parking fees should make no more than enough money to find the parking plan.

"If you're making money, the fees should be lowered," Fails said.

The proposal states "The parking plan should not be looked upon as a means of generating revenues for functions other than those related to traffic and parking problems."

Three campus information and service centers will provide parking information and direction, provide temporary parking permits and miscellaneous services such as making change for parking meters.

Fails said drivers still will be able to use lot 59, north of the Activity Center for free.

"A lot of people are willing to save five bucks, park without hassle and walk five minutes," he said.

The proposal has been sent to Jack Penick, vice president for business affairs, and will be submitted to student and faculty groups.

Anderson said Engle remained conscious while in the hospital, and an ASU official attempted to find out from Engle what had happened.

"But he (Engle) was still confused," Anderson said. "He asked for someone to tell him what happened."

Engle lived at 1631 E. Don Carlos in Tempe. A native of Scranton, Pa., Engle is survived by his wife, Paulette, his parents, a brother and a sister.

A memorial service will be held for Engle at 10 a.m. Wednesday at the Newman Center. Funeral services will be held in Scranton.

Students in the chemistry department have established a fund to help Engle's family pay medical and funeral expenses. Checks may be made out to Mrs. William Engle and sent to: The Bill Engle Fund, c/o Department of Chemistry, Arizona State University, Tempe, Az.

A department spokeswoman said blood donations in Engle's name would also be appreciated.

Students petition for TV classroom repairs

By Leslie Green

Television production students have petitioned University administrators to remedy ongoing equipment failures in their only laboratory classroom, Studio C of KAET-tv, Channel 8.

The petition, signed by 25 of the 30 class members, said students have frequently lost class time because KAET has not acted on requests to correct equipment failures.

The petition, given to Dr. Guido G. Weigend, dean of the College of Liberal Arts, said, "All too frequently we have had to forfeit large amounts of class time each week due to equipment failure, and apparently requests to KAET to correct this ongoing problem have had no effect."

Dr. Joe W. Milner, chairman of the mass communications department, said the problems began when the KAET staff quit teaching television production in 1973 and a full-time member of the department began teaching it in KAET facilities.

Milner said he is concerned about the equipment breakdowns. "My major concern is that students don't get short-changed," he said.

Students and teachers say while KAET does fix broken equipment, repairs take time. They say KAET should provide regular maintenance to prevent the breakages and should provide backup equipment.

It's natural for equipment to break periodically, said John E. Craft, assistant professor of mass communications. "So over a period of time what you do is develop routine maintenance and backup for the equipment," he said.

Phil Parker, a senior broadcasting major, said, "The whole problem is, if they were responsible, they'd make sure the whole thing was maintained so it wouldn't cause a loss of class time."

Chief engineer at KAET, Vic Turner, said his crew checked and repaired the equipment in Studio C last summer and in December and have since repaired broken equipment as soon as possible.

"We feel the studio is maintained adequately," he said.

Students said equipment failures have prevented production of two assignments they had prepared for, as well as interrupted class.

W. Russell Shirley, teaching assistant, said after one equipment breakdown, "We had to wait about 45 minutes for them to come down and get it working."

Class was cancelled last week when students and their instructor walked into Studio C Tuesday and found a camera dismantled, Craft said.

Shirley expressed anger that KAET had not notified the instructor that the camera was being repaired. "So they left it unassembled without telling anyone," he said.

Turner said, "It (the camera) was probably operable Monday" but was dismantled because it needed new tubes and maintenance.

The camera was repaired and reassembled Friday morning after parts ordered Monday from California arrived, he said.

Weigend scheduled a meeting with top administrators from KAET, mass communications department and the University president's office for late Monday afternoon to discuss the equipment problems.

Lack of KAET facilities forces student to rent for prizewinning tape production

An ASU broadcast student has created a prizewinning video tape, but he had to rent the equipment to do it.

Phillip Parker, a television production senior, won second place in the National Broadcast Contest for his 30-second tape "The Old Prospector."

"We enter the contest every once in a while but don't really expect to win," stated John Craft, television production professor. "Not due to lack of talent, but equipment-wise we just can't compete with other schools in the nation," said Craft.

Parker had to rent equipment because the equipment necessary to go to a desert location wasn't available through the mass communications department, Craft explained.

Lack of equipment didn't stop Parker. He rented the necessary equipment, including a professional actor and a burro, went to the desert and began shooting.

The color production was made to sell Farmer Pete's Bacon. The script included an old prospector, complete with a full beard and a burro, frying bacon over a campfire in the desert.

Bike ban bill arises anew

Some folks just never give up. Dr. Murray Sirkis, a member of the University Safety Committee, will advance his Ban-the-Bike proposal at today's committee meeting.

It is scheduled for 9:40 a.m. in Academic Services 111A. We don't suppose many students will be able to attend; 9:40 a.m. is a pretty strange hour for students.

Nevertheless, if you can attend, do.

It seems like only a few weeks ago that the committee defeated the last Sirkis proposal. And while we have to admire the man's perseverance, we think he should let dead dogs lie.

Or should University committees hear every proposal four times a year?

Sirkis wants to limit mall riding to off-hours. Fine. Who will enforce the restrictions?

That would be the University Police, of course. Good luck. We doubt whether the police are too excited about that possibility. A bicycle ban is unenforceable. So why pass a resolution that is impossible to enforce? Rules, rules, rules.

Two years ago bikers rode pell-mell anyplace on campus. Then bicycle congestion became an issue.

There are far fewer bikers on the busy malls during the busy hours these days, and many walk their bikes during particularly crowded hours. Self-regulation. That is a much better solution than the arbitrary imposition of rules.

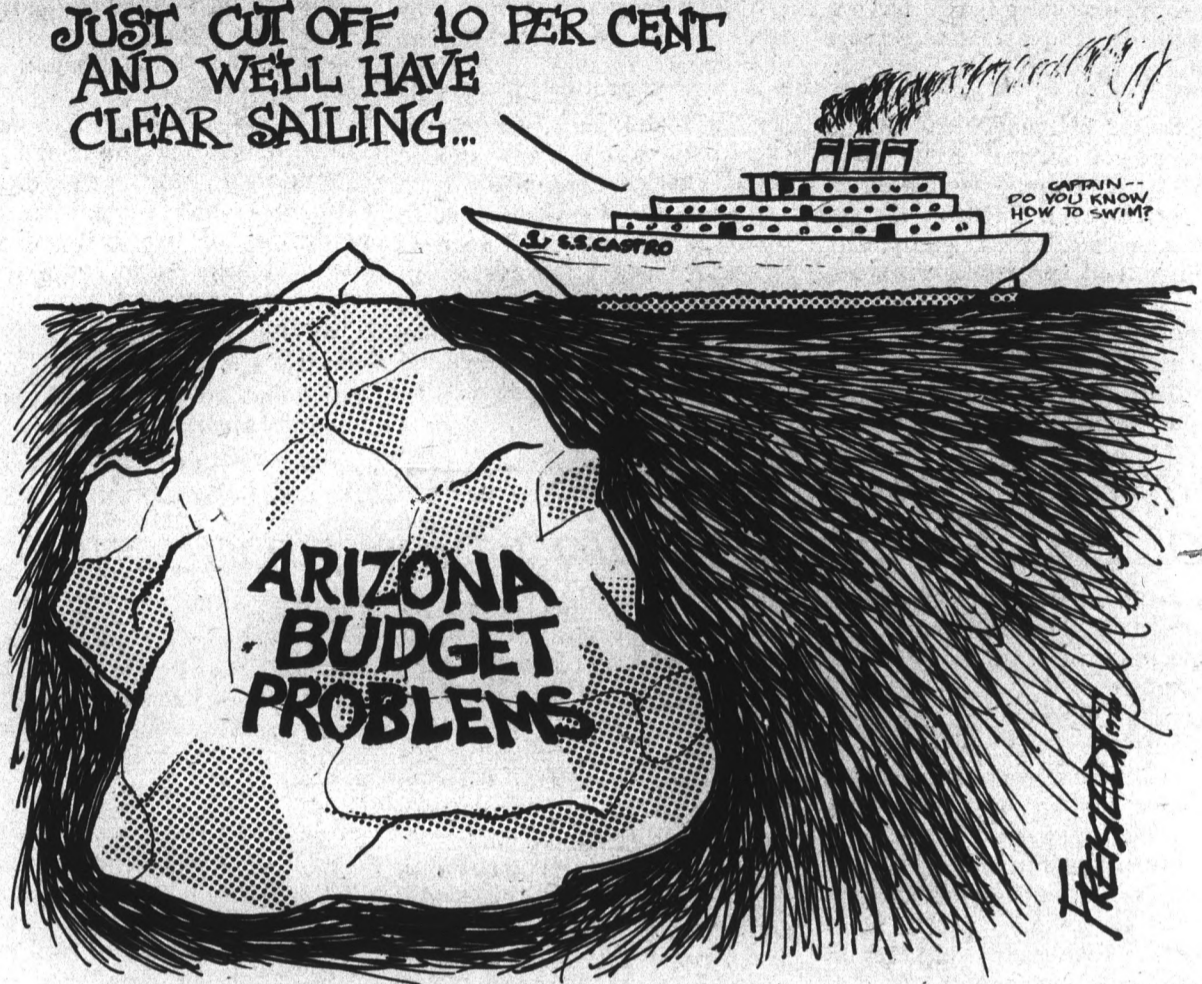

The State Press hopes the safety committee will stick by its earlier decision and defeat the Sirkis proposal. And we hope we've seen the last of the Sirkis circus reruns.

KAET-tv 'incompetence' costs TV students dearly

Editor:

I doubt if too many people would argue with the point that this University's primary function is to provide the best possible education for all its students. Unfortunately, there are people at this University who don't act like it.

I am an undergraduate teaching assistant in a television production class in the department of mass communications, MC 336. The other day, I walked into the lab class, a studio at KAET-tv, and found one of the TV cameras taken apart, and its camera control unit was gone. It seems someone had given the word to remove the tubes from the camera, but never told anyone about it. Although repairs were discussed before spring break, nothing was done until now, after classes were back in session again. Now, 30 students are left without the necessary equipment they need to perform in the class. They also face the possibility of having class cancelled for the rest of the semester. It seems no one knows when the camera will be fixed.

Required course

This class is the only one like it in the department, and is a required course. Broadcasting students are at enough disadvantage with having only one production class as it is, without having something like this happen.

In the three semesters I have been affiliated with the class, the equipment has never worked correctly. I can't remember a semester going by without a major breakdown in some of the equipment. This semester has been especially bad.

I can't begin to count the number of discrepancy sheets written up about the equipment, or the number of complaints leveled at the department, KAET and the dean of the College of Liberal Arts. Still, the situation hasn't been rectified.

Costs $30 an hour

The department of mass communications pays KAET $30 an hour for the use of the studio and equipment, and the upkeep of it. Yet, I never saw an engineer around that equipment until last week.

So, all of a sudden, after some of our complaining went through the right channels, somebody decided to do something... But they forgot to think before they decided. A the expense of cancelling half a semester of classes, we "bitchers" finally got our comeuppance. Now there's nothing we can do but wait... losing valuable time which will never be able to be recovered.

Ignorant and incompetent

For the people at KAET to render the camera inoperative without letting the instructor know, during class time, is totally ignorant and incompetent.

I'm not trying to lay the blame with any one person. It goes much deeper than that. Nevertheless, this petty bickering between adults is costing students their right to an education. Something must be done about the situation, and now. I don't care if President Schwada ends up putting that camera back together, those students deserve what they pay for, an education.

If the University doesn't have the power or concern for its students to stop this kind of incompetence, than it doesn't deserve the title of "University".

Bookstore lockers

Editor:

Although I have never lost any books at the bookstore, I have experienced the reluctance and uncertainty of leaving books and notes on the racks outside the bookstore. I do have two possible solutions that should receive consideration.

The first alternative is that a monitor would be posted at the bookrack. The monitor would place each student's belongings in a small cubby-hole (12" x 12") and hand a numbered card to the student. The numbered card would correspond to the cubby-hole. The small card (3" x 5") should bear some sticker or imprint available only to the group supervising the project. The stack of cubby-holes would replace the metal racks.

The second proposal involves purchasing or renting small lockers such as those in the lower level of the MU. The lockers can be located in the same area as the book racks are not located. The nickel or dime paid should be worth knowing that your books and notes are safe. The revenues can slowly pay off the cost of renting or purchasing the lockers.

Also I wonder whether the bookstore can legally release itself from responsibility since it prohibits us from carrying school supplies into the bookstore?

3 vying for ASASU presidency

Today, the three Associated Students presidential hopefuls express their views and platforms. The president's job is the most important position in ASASU, whose duties include presiding over the Executive Committee and making recommendations of students for University committees. Reporter Susan Leonard files this final report before the primary elections today and tomorrow. Get out and vote!

Dave Braaten says he's a voice for you, not at you. Susan Bitter has experience. And Matthew Martin is, in his own words, the underdog.

One of these people will become next year's Associated Students president.

The primary election is today and tomorrow. The general election is April 13 and 14.

Martin, the underdog because he has less experience and is not as well known, is a 20-year-old political science major. He says platform of experience. The 20-year-old junior majoring in general business administration has been actively involved in ASASU for three years. This year she is a member of First Council and president of the Business Administration College Council.

She said she thinks she could run ASASU more efficiently than the other candidates since she is more knowledgeable about it.

This is Martin's first year at

Susan Bitter

ASU. His ASASU experience has been limited to representing West Hall on the Interdorm Council.

Braaten, a 24-year-old graduate student in speech communication, said he has worked toward establishing a student regent and campus alcohol sales as the ASU coordinator of the Arizona Students' Association this year.

Bitter said she wants to coordinate, strengthen and incorporate college councils, the Interdorm Council and the large campus organizations and clubs into viable units of ASASU.

"We really haven't done a whole heck of a lot to stimulate the college councils to become active in ASASU," she said. "A lot of clubs aren't even aware ASASU can help them."

ASASU needs to encourage

and help the Interdorm Council next year by giving it higher priority than a club would receive, Bitter said.

She said she thinks ASASU should give the Interdorm Council money to sponsor educational and entertainment events, such as speakers, films, dances and concerts, at the dormitories.

Bitter said she is also going to work toward lowering textbook prices, establishing a better walk-through registration system, making sure every college has an academic appeals board and making sure students are put on the standards committee of each college, which determines admittance and probation standards.

"It's time ASASU got involved in the lives of students by helping them out and protecting their interests, not just supplying entertainment," he said. "I think the services ASASU offers are important, but I think they need to broaden their services."

"ASASU needs to become an active, vital part of the University system, speaking for and protecting students and their interests," he added.

As part of his platform, Braaten wants to reinstate the Student Bulletin next year to promote the expanded services he visualizes for Consumer Services and Tenants Association. (Last week the First Council voted to eliminate the bulletin next year.)

He promises to get out of the "hallowed halls" of ASASU offices and talk to student organizations every other month.

Martin said he plans to work toward student control of student activities fees, a portion of registration and tuition fees. This would allow ASASU to spend its money the way it wants, including suing the Arizona Board of Regents if it won't approve ASASU programs or appropriations, he said.

"Right now the administration views student activities funds as public money. It can be proven that the student activities fee, in all actuality, is private money," he said. "It isn't money that is derived from state revenues but is money that comes directly

Martin said he plans to establish coeducational housing by educating administrators and students about its advantages and by lobbying at the state legislature.

All three candidates favor campus alcohol sales, although none are stressing it in their campaigns.

"I'm in favor of alcohol on campus, but it is not a top priority in my book," Martin said. "I don't think it is the major issue ASASU should be concerned with."

Bitter said she wants ASASU to rewrite ASU's contract with Saga Foods Service, if campus alcohol sales are allowed, so ASASU will receive the profits instead of Saga Foods.

ASU nabs title; MVP to Colbern

By Mike Natter

There's nothing quite like having momentum on your side — which is exactly what the ASU baseball team will have when it faces Arizona this weekend.

The Sun Devils have won 19 of their last 20 games, including six straight in the Best in the West Championship last weekend in Tempe.

But even though the Devils swept through the tournament undefeated, their opponents were hardly in awe of the nation's top-ranked hardballers.

Grand Canyon College came out swinging against Devil ace Floyd Bannister in the championship game Saturday night, scoring two quick runs in the opening inning on a long home run by Gary Eubanks.

But Canyon's hopes of an upset of ASU faded in the second when A-State scored three times on a singles by Ken Phelps, a double by Mike Colbern, and two walks and two wild pitches by Antelope starter and lower Doug Patterson.

ASU widened the gap to 5-2 in the fourth on back-to-back home runs by third baseman Brant Humphrey and rightfielder Mike Colbern. The Lopes scored once in the fifth but ASU rebuilt its three-run advantage on a run scoring single by Clay Westlake in the fifth. The Devil lead was never again threatened, as ASU went on to a 7-3 victory.

The Antelopes, 27-10 after a 3-3 week in Tempe, received praise from ASU coach Jim Brock.

"They came to play and they weren't intimidated," the Devil skipper said. "They have a fine team and deserve a lot of credit."

Colbern, who was unanimously named the tournament's Most Valuable Player after batting .542 with five round trippers, topped off his four-day batting spree with a rare inside-the-park home run in the eighth.

The ASU junior was awarded a home run although his line drive was misplayed by Canyon in the sixth inning of Friday possible play at the plate was muffed by catcher Dave Holiday.

"It was a personally satisfying week after being in a bit of a slump a few weeks back," Colbern said after he received a radio for his selection as MVP. "It's just a question of relaxation. I was pressing for a while but now I'm sitting back and waiting for my pitch. I was surprised with the inside-the-parker but it's just one of those breaks."

In addition to Colbern, Devils Mike Henderson, Clay Westlake and Floyd Bannister were named to the all-tournament team.

Henderson had an excellent week at shortstop, filling in for the injured Bob Horner, and his timely hits sparked several Devil comebacks.

In Saturday afternoon's game with Nevada-Las Vegas, Henderson drove in Ken Landreaux with the winning run in the bottom of the ninth to give ASU a 9-8 victory.

And it was a Henderson single in the sixth inning of Friday night's game that started an ASU rally that led to another 9-8 victory, this time over Oregon State.

Earlier Friday, Westlake's three-run homer was the big blow in a 12-4 win over Grand Canyon.

Bannister, now 9-1, shared all-tournament pitching honors with Canyon's Tom Tellmann, who pitched three scoreless innings of relief in the championship game against ASU after beating Oregon State 5-1 earlier in the tournament.

In there!

The ASU baseball team didn't make too many mistakes during the Best in the West tournament, but this was one of them. A Nevada-Las Vegas runner scores as the ball gets away from Devil catcher Mike Colbern.

Gymnasts finish 6th at nationals

The ASU womens gymnastics team rolled up 103 points enroute to a sixth place finish in the national championships this past weekend.

Clarion State College captured the title with 107.95 points.

The highest Sun Devil finisher was Pam Wenzel, who amassed 35 points on her way to a 13th place finish in the all-around. Janet Goewey managed a 23rd place finish for ASU, while team captain Yvonne Sandmire captured 41st.

Devil softball team whips UofA twice

By Cindy Campbell

The ASU womens softball team pulled out extra-inning wins in both games of a doubleheader against the UofA last Friday.

The first game went nine innings with the Devils ending up on top 10-9, while the second game lasted 11 innings with a final score of 5-4.

ASU, down 9-2 in the first game, came back with seven runs in the sixth to tie the score.

Three runs scored on two walks and back-to-back doubles before Arizona pitcher Tanja Adrian loaded the bases. ASU shortstop Fran Sarullo promptly unloaded them with a grand slam homer down the right field line.

ASU dominated the rest of the game, threatening to score in the eighth and finally putting a run across in the ninth. Catcher Sue "PT" VantHof scored the winning run on a fielder's choice.

Margaret Rebenar went the distance for the Devils, allowing six hits while striking out four. She also hit one of three ASU homeruns. Jody Riechow collected the third Devil homer in the second with none on.

ASU jumped out to a lead in the second game by scoring one run the first and two in the third.

The Wildcats, who scored once in the second, tied the score in the sixth by chalking up two runs on two Devil errors and a single. The score remained tied with neither team threatening until the tenth.

UofA pitcher Tanja Adrian led off the inning with a single and scored on an error, but ASU came back to tie it up 4-4. In the eleventh, Sarullo was in on all three outs with three excellent defensive plays as the Devils again shut out the Wildcats.

With two out in the eleventh, ASU capitalized on an error to put runners at first and second. Adrian intentionally loaded the bases to pitch to Linda Pellitier, who singled to drive in the winning run.

Julia Cota threw all 11 innings for the Devils, striking out four.

Devil sprinters hit stride in relays

ASU's fleet sprint corps set a meet record in the 400-meter relay and also recorded the fastest time in the world this year in the 880 relay at the Texas Relays Friday and Saturday.

The relay team, made up of Charlie Wells, Steve Williams, Carl McCullough and Herman Frazier, flashed to a 39.54 clocking in the 400. The time eclipsed Texas A&M's record of 39.7.

The Sun Devil foursome sped home in 1:22.8 in the 880, winning by an amazing 30 yards.

ASU's Gary Burl clocked a 13.56 in the finals of the 110-meter high hurdles, good enough for both a first-place finish and a new school record. Burl broke his own record of 13.9, which he set earlier this season.

Women netters host NCAA champs today

The ASU womens tennis team will take on the national champion Trinity Tigers today at 2 p.m. at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Highlighting the match will be the battle of number-one singles players, ASU's Chris Penn and Trinity's Stephanie Tolleson.

Both are Phoenix products who tangled repeatedly while on the junior circuit. In the last five meetings between the players, Penn has won four times. Tolleson won the national championship last year and will play for the Phoenix Racquets this summer, while Penn is currently the top-ranked player in the Southwestern and Phoenix Tennis Districts.

Rounding out the singles lineup for the Devils will be Sue Boyle, Nancy Janco, Jerry Leavitt, Cheri Mixdorf and Isa Ortiz Figy. Boyle and Janco will play number one doubles; Leavitt and Penn, number two; and Mixdorf and Figy, number three.
