Gays awarded $3,300 for week after first appropriation vetoed

By Leslie Green

The campus gay group was given $3,300 Thursday for Gay Awareness Week '76 minutes after the ASASU president vetoed an earlier appropriation for $4,000.

Free Spirit will now receive $4,210 from ASASU for Gay Awareness Week since $910 had already been appropriated for the event.

Braaten said he feared the earlier $4,000 appropriation by the First Council from the ASASU endowment fund would not be approved before Sept. 13, the beginning of Gay Awareness Week.

The appropriation was lowered because the Executive Committee felt $4,000 would be too much Braaten said.

It is unclear whether the endowment fund appropriation would have been approved by administrators. Money from the fund has not been used for such a purpose before.

The campus gay group Free Spirit had tentatively scheduled speakers and advertised the Gay Awareness Week before the group was certain it could receive funds from the ASASU First Council.

The fund-request by Free Spirit was made Tuesday at the first meeting of the First Council.

Braaten said Tuesday he had suggested to Free Spirit July 20 that it schedule the event in October or November to give the First Council more time to appropriate money.

Greg Carmack, Free Spirit member, has said he could not remember Braaten's suggestion.

Allan Frazier, ASASU executive coordinator, said once the First Council voted to appropriate money from the endowment fund, final allocation would have to be approved by the ASASU president, the vice president of student affairs and a University committee.

That committee will be the University Investment Committee, said Jack Penick, vice president for business affairs.

Dean of Students Leon Shell, who said Tuesday money in the endowment fund may be tied up in investments, Thursday said he had determined the money could be found -- if the appropriation were approved.

Rev. Moon followers migrate to East

Tempe's two CARP centers vacated

By Norma Coile

Tempe followers of the Collegiate Association for the Research of Principles (CARP), the campus affiliate of the Rev. Sun Myung Moon's Unification Church, apparently have dropped out of sight -- at least temporarily -- in the wake of adverse publicity last spring.

The group vacated and stopped paying rent on its two Tempe centers, and the most visible of last year's members have been transferred to New York, Washington D.C. and other church centers, according to the mother of the former CARP president.

"They (CARP) have really calmed down," said Mrs. Marvin Jensen of Tempe, whose son David was the president of CARP at ASU last year. David has since been transferred to a public relations position for the Rev. Moon in New York City.

But, she added, she doesn't think the group has given up yet. "They've got to be recruiting, they've got to be making money still. This much I can tell you for sure," she said Thursday.

Moon's followers still own two houses in Phoenix, Mrs. Jensen said, and new members have been transferred there from other cities to replace Valley members who have moved.

In March the cult's Tempe solicitation permit was revoked and its Phoenix permit expired. John Holyoke, Tempe license administrator, said his department has not heard from the religious organization since March.

A probation placed on the campus group last spring by the Dean of Students office, because of violations of University mall rules, now has expired.

But CARP has not requested reinstatement as a campus organization this semester, said Dean of Students Leon Shell. In fact, he said, his office has heard nothing from the controversial group for about two months.

Ralph Marshall, adviser to ASU's CARP last spring, said he has not been contacted about continuing his role for the group.

Edith Norinski of Scottsdale, who last year touched off a heated local controversy with allegations that her 19-year-old daughter had been brainwashed organization, Mrs. Jensen charged. That organization, Oz Aki Health Food, sells ginseng tea, a popular health food, and lists its address as 1001 E. Pasadena, Phoenix -- the address of the remaining CARP center. Oz Aki has a sales tax license to sell the tea but didn't have to admit any affiliation with Moon to receive it, Mrs. Jensen said.

The only person at the Phoenix center by CARP, has been looking for signs of CARP activity on or around campus this fall, and has found none, according to Mrs. Jensen. Norinski could not be reached for comment Thursday.

Although the Phoenix group no longer can support itself selling flowers since it has no business license, members are now raising money through a front

Thursday was a Japanese woman who spoke very little English but said she represented the Unification Church. She said her last name was Oz Aki, and she sells ginseng tea for the church.

It appears likely that CARP has turned its attention, at least temporarily, from local recruiting measures to national concerns.

Dave Jensen told his parents in August that Moon is organizing a rally Sept. 18 at the Washington Monument in D.C.

Meanwhile, Jensen has been contacting the publishers of Newsweek, Time and other national magazines and influential newspapers to promote positive coverage of the Unification Church, Mrs. Jensen said. The church also has a growing lobbying effort in Washington, she added.

The church also is facing legal battles for the first time. Two $1 million suits were filed last month by the church against two Arizona lawyers and their associates. It is the first time Moon's followers have taken their opponents to court.

Mesa lawyer Wayne Howard, Tucson lawyer Michael Trauscht and Joseph Alexander Sr. and his son, both of Akron, Ohio, have been charged in the suits with attempting to brainwash two California followers of Moon.

The two California disciples said in the suit they were "wickedly and maliciously" imprisoned and forced to undergo brainwashing and mind control by Howard and his associates, who run a "deprogramming" service for "Moonies." These charges are a reversal of brainwashing allegations often voiced against Moon's followers themselves.

Mrs. Jensen said Moon also is involved in a lawsuit in Indianapolis, where he is being sued by the city over alleged solicitation abuses.

Although local followers are quiet for now, Mrs. Jensen, Shell and Marshall all said it is probably too early to write the CARP obituary.

As Marshall said, "It's too early to tell what's happened to the (campus) group. They're all in Washington for the monument rally and may still return."

Former MU Activities chairmen charge staff blackballed them

By Dan Winkel

Two former committee chairmen on the MU Activities Board say they are being denied the right to participate in activities because of a "personality clash" with the board's advisory staff.

The MU Activities Board consists of the student chairmen of the five committees that make up the board. The five committees are Ideas and Issues, Film, Entertainment, the Hostesses and Arts.

George Clifton and Marty Karp said the refusal to let them participate is a "power play" by the staff members who told them in May they were "negative, destructive and detrimental" to the workings of the Activities Board.

Karp called the reasons vague and said the advisers gave no specific reasons why Clifton and he were refused the right to participate. But, he said he feels it is a "personality clash" that stems from their workings on the committees.

"I want some clarification," Karp said. "I want the chance to put these people on the stand."

Gay Holliday, assistant director of the MU and a member of the advisory staff that oversees the Activities Board, said she told both Karp and Clifton the reasons they were being denied participation.

She refused to name those reasons, citing unfairness to Clifton and Karp. She would not deny the personality clash existed, but called it a matter of "perception."

But Clifton reiterated he has not uncovered the "hard, cold facts" that are preventing him from participating in committee work. He said when he attempts to find the specific reasons, Holliday tells him he already knows the reasons and will not elaborate.

Both Karp and Clifton said they were given no chance to dispute the findings of the advisory board concerning their dismissal from committee work.

Holliday said no rebuttal was given to Clifton and Karp because the decision of the advisory members was final.

Clifton said he and Karp are taking their situation to the grievance committee in hopes of finding the reasons they have been denied participation.

Mindy Auerbach, current chairman of the Entertainment Committee, said the advisory staff has been taking power away from the student committees because they feel the students are not capable of using it.

The advisory staff told the chairmen of the various committees that if they did not support the staff's decisions, they should resign, Auerbach said.

Holliday denied the chairmen were told to resign if they would not support the decisions of the staff.

"They did not have to agree with the decisions, but agree with the right of the staff to make the decisions," Holliday said.

Students, staff plan to compete in judo contest

Several ASU students and staff members will participate in the Fifth Annual Desert Judo Championship Meet Saturday at Scottsdale Community College, 9000 E. Chaparral Road.

More than 600 entries are expected for the AAU sanctioned judo event, which begins at 9 a.m. Among them are Maj. Bill Maun, University Police, who holds a fifth degree black belt, and David Webb, ASU grounds construction. ASU students Todd Prince and Truman Young will compete in the senior division.

Competitors will represent 13 states and two foreign countries.

Icebox distribution dissatisfies student

Editor:

The purpose of this letter is to openly express my dissatisfaction regarding the university's method for distribution of refrigerators.

I was unfortunate this summer in that I was unable to reserve a refrigerator for the year, so to say the least, the university had me by the hair.

I was informed by the housing office that three hundred more refrigerators were on order and that if I signed the waiting list, I would be assured of getting one.

I put total trust in them, then they turned around and issued refrigerators on a first come, first serve basis at Palo Verde, totally disregarding the list of people who were guaranteed vendibles.

When questioned about this, I was told that they tried twice to contact the people on the list and if there was no answer, the merchandise would be given to someone else.

This may seem fair to some people, but not to me.

Unfortunately, I'm one of those poor slob who has to attend classes to get my degree, and I haven't got time to sit around my dorm waiting for the phone to ring.

How do these people expect us students to have any respect for them when they turn on us and shaft us with lies?

Are they — the people involved in spearheading this fiasco — so greedy that they can't wait a couple of days more and rent refrigerators to willing, paying customers?

Or is it that the students here are so unimportant that our needs are swept under the door?

*What this country
needs is a bike rack*

Editor:

Every so often I hear from the other students what an inconvenience it is to have classrooms so overcrowded, and what a drag to get the new sports ID, and how the parking problem is as bad as it is. Fine.

I've tried to adapt.

I leave my car at home each morning, and ride a bicycle to school, to beat the parking problem, and what happens? I can't find a place to park my bike.

Oh, sure, I can just loop a cable around it wherever it may be standing, but how sure can I be it'll be there when I come out of class? Bicycles are going like hotcakes, and most of them aren't secured to a bike rack, because all of the racks are full.

I appreciate all that ASU has done to provide such racks, and pave nice bike paths throughout the campus... I really do.

I know this sounds like just one more gripe to add to a long list of gripes, but how about it? Couldn't ASU add a few more racks?

One other thing — those bike paths are really nice for bikes, but there are all too many pedestrians using those lanes.

Let's get rid of some of those pedestrians. Just think what that would do for the parking problem. Besides, they're just an eyesore, anyway.

gary r. beyer

Bicycle paths for bikers, walkways for pedestrians

Editor:

During the summer, ASU went to the trouble and expense of expanding the bike paths throughout the campus.

This project was most likely undertaken to please the students who complained about bicyclists who careened through the malls and caused a lot of nerves to flare up when people thought they were going to be hit by a bicycle.

Today, and the past few days I have taken advantage of the new bike paths on my way to school, and I am now dodging people on the new bike paths who are walking on them.

Give us bicyclists a break and walk on the malls where you are supposed to, and we will stay on the bicycle paths.

'Distortion' upsets gay students

Editor:

I really can't understand how you could distort so badly the motives behind the planning of Gay Awareness Week.

As one who sat in on planning meetings of the Education Task Force of Free Spirit each Wednesday night for the past three months, I can assure you that we made every attempt to clarify that the proposal we were preparing for First Council was only tentative.

We realized fully that it would have to be altered and re-worked if student officials didn't grant the full budget request.

For some time, we were under the impression that we would be dealing with the Executive Committee of Associated Students for the funding, mainly because this is what ASASU regulations state as per our proposal.

Working with Exec Committee, we would have had all of July and August for their consideration of a proposal, whereas

First Council didn't convene until late August.

However, our representatives were later steered to First Council by the Executive Committee.

Why you singled out Greg Carmack as a target also confuses me. He is only a member of the Education Task Force, which planned Gay Awareness Week.

His authority in our organization is as the Public Relations Director, and he was only present at the F.C. meeting to answer questions on publicity for the week.

He didn't make the presentation and certainly didn't say that "the week would be cancelled" if the funds were denied or cut badly.

That is absurd, because the week is too important to give up all the time and planning that we've put into it.

Please correct your errors to retain what credibility you have.

Steven E. Simpson

Editorial is 'in error'

Editor:

During the meeting of the First Council on August 31st, I represented the Bureau of Public Relations of Free Spirit.

My purpose for being present was to answer questions which might relate to publicity matters for Gay Awareness Week, an upcoming project of our Education Task Force.

Mr. Wayne Smith, who represented the Education Task Force and presented the proposal for funding for Gay Awareness Week, was asked during the course of the meeting "What would happen if First Council would deny or severely cut the request?"

The meeting transcript shows Mr. Smith responding that "we would have to substitute local authorities for the national figureheads we are bringing in under our proposal."

Because I did not discuss this area of concern with the

First Council, I would assume that your editorial of Thursday, 9/2 is in error in stating that at that meeting I "implied that ASASU would cause the week to be canceled if money was not approved."

We wish to thank the State Press for observing our organization as a "worthy, respectable group" and our upcoming Awareness Week as "well organized and interesting."

Stop mistreatment of gays

Editor:

Over the past six months, I have had the opportunity to speak in classes on this campus with the speakers bureau of FREE SPIRIT.

I have heard gay people referred to, collectively, as child molesters, satanic, total "sickies," sex maniacs, men who want to be women, women who want to be men, wife beaters (!), the "people who stole my bicycle," communists, murderers, and general candidates for lynch mobs.

Now, with the help of State Press, we are gangsters who steal candy from children.

C'mon, State Press, lead the fight for stopping media mistreatment of gays — not pushing it.

Game parking unfair to students

Editor:

Yes! Believe it or not there are classes meeting Thursday evening, Sept. 9.

It is the teacher's prerogative to hold classes and some are. It just so happens on the same night is the ASU-UCLA game, which we're going to win.

I foresee insufficient areas for student parking.

This can jeopardize students attending classes meeting after 4 p.m. by making them late or so frustrated that attendance to their respective classes is no longer important due to finding a space to park their cars.

Also, it is unfair to students who commute to find they have to park their vehicles two miles away from campus because their "R" areas are filled by game attendees.

ASU's primary purpose and function is "the exchange of knowledge and the pursuit of wisdom..." as stated on page 12 of the general catalog. In straight forward talk — ASU exists to educate.

Since education is this university's #1 objective, I feel that ASU is obligated to provide adequate parking Thursday evening for students who are attending classes over parking for the game.

A solution is to use Gammage and other south university lots only for students attending evening classes on Sept. 9.

I certainly don't want to be the first one to say — I wish I was a Sun Angel so I could park my car to attend classes.

ASASU steps up drive to sign up student voters

By Jayne Clark

Associated Students is making a final effort to register students to vote before the Sept. 13 deadline.

Students can register on the ASU mall from 9 a.m. to 2 p.m. each school day or in the ASASU office in MU 208J from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

"One of the reasons we're really pushing this thing is we want to get a large (voter) turnout," said Dave Braaten, ASASU president. "Votes are power."

Braaten said a large student vote would influence legislation that affects students, specifically educational legislation.

"In the past, students have not been an important political entity," he said. "It is time to change that. The student vote will be important in all the legislative races around here," he said.

The main reason students are sometimes reluctant to vote is that they do not believe their vote will have an impact on the 'system'."

said Bill Sutey, a political consultant who is registering students on the mall.

"The student generally does not have an adequate commitment to the University community. It becomes a matter of education . . . to show them how they can affect politics and the processes involved . . ." he said. "The problem is letting them know it (voting) can change and affect their lives," Sutey said.

Sutey said because students do not vote, elected officials are not forced to be responsive to student needs and issues.

"The power of the ballot is not used as it could be in Tempe. This is why a lot of student issues are given lip service," he said.

There are from 3,000 — 5,000 voting-age people in the "Sin City" area. If every person were registered, the precinct would be three to five times larger than the average precinct, Sutey said. However, precincts around campus traditionally have had poor registration and voter turnout, he added.

From 12,000 — 14,000 students registered to vote during walk-through registration, Braaten said.

An additional 125 persons per day are signing up at the registration table on the mall, Sutey said. He said he hopes to register 3,000 more before the deadline.

"We only have two weeks left and we're in a panic situation," he said. "If you register, you don't have to vote. If you don't register, you can't vote."

ASASU recently sent a candidate survey to candidates of the Democratic, Republican and Libertarian parties of Arizona. The survey contained questions concerning educational issues. Results will be tabulated before Tuesday's election, Braaten said.

Registration continues for language courses

Registration is still open for an ASU extension class in language therapy, offered Monday evenings in room 109 of the Language and Literature Annex.

Geared especially for speech pathologists, learning disabilities teachers and reading specialists, "Language Therapy: Theory, Methods and Materials" offers three semester hours of credit. It is designated as CDX 591.

The class meets Mondays from 6:40 to 9:30 p.m., with the exception of Labor Day, Sept. 6. Registration will be conducted at the Sept. 13 class.

Dorm residents ordered to remove cars for game

By Greg Smith

A controversial University parking policy will be resumed Thursday night, requiring some dorm residents to move their cars out of a dormitory lot to make room for football fans attending the ASU-UCLA football game.

Residents of dorms at the north end of campus who park in lot 53 will be asked to move their vehicles across University Drive to lot 49, said University Police Lt. Irving Jaffe.

Lot 53 is south of Stadium Drive, between the Palo Verde dorms and Sun Devil Stadium. Lot 49 is south of University Drive, between the Physical between the Physical Sciences Building and the Physical Plant.

The lot will be cleared at 2 p.m. to allow members of the Sun Angel Foundation, who contribute to ASU's football program, to park near the stadium.

The move shouldn't cause much trouble for dorm residents, Jaffe said. "All they have to do is walk across the street" to the substitute lot, he said.

Jaffe said he hasn't heard of any complaints about the move, but added, "I would imagine they're unhappy about it."

Last fall dorm residents and members of the Inter-Dorm Council opposed the policy. The critics were unable to persuade the University to let them use all of their lots during games.

"The students felt they should not have to move their cars, and the University's position is they're requested to cooperate," Jaffe said. "Sun Angels use the lot and they are big contributors to the University."

Jaffe said University police will stand guard at the lots to make sure dorm residents are able to park in lots assigned to them.

"There should be ample room," he said.

ASU economists study tourists' border hassles

Arizona's border inspection stations are the subject of numerous tourist complaints, according to an ASU study of the state's tourist industry.

"I resented the port of entry routine," was a typical reaction of motorists entering the state, in the study compiled by ASU economists M.E. Bond and Stephan Hora. The report also details various tourist surveys, economics impacts and offers travel recommendations.

Copies of the study, entitled "The Arizona Tourism and Travel Industry," are $1 and can be obtained at the ASU Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

Hearing delayed for co-ed

A preliminary hearing for an Arizona State University student charged with extortion was delayed Thursday by Scottsdale Justice of the Peace Nancy West.

Lynne E. Davis, 26, Tempe, is accused of attempting to extort $25,000 from Vern Huff, a Scottsdale businessman and securities salesman.

The Maricopa County attorney's office requested the delay in Davis' hearing, but no new hearing date was scheduled.

Police claim Davis contacted Huff late last month and offered to sell him information for CX-$25,000 "that would keep him out of prison or put him there."

He went to police, and then a meeting was set up between Davis and Huff. The couple was kept under surveillance during the meeting, and Huff carried a radio transmitter beneath his coat.

He allegedly gave Miss Davis $10,000 in marked bills and the woman was arrested after she left the public library, where the meeting took place.

CBS newsman to give speech

Daniel Schorr, veteran CBS News correspondent, will speak at 8 p.m. Sept. 13 in the Scottsdale Community College Student Center, 9000 E. Chaparral Road, Scottsdale.

Schorr will talk on "The Public's Right to Know."

Sponsored by the SCC student government, the event is free to the public.

Schorr, a leader in the field of investigative news reporting, was described recently as "the toughest and best reporter in television news" by Sander Vanocur of The Washington Post.

He is currently under investigation by the U.S. House of Representatives for refusing to disclose the source of a House Intelligence Committee report he leaked to The Village Voice.

Here's a powerful all-purpose electronic calculator with the added advantage of pre-programmed solutions to most statistical problems. Problems like:

- Projections
- Correlations
- Means
- Trend lines
- The Novus 6030 Statistician offers all these features:
  - Single-key summation of  $x$ ,  $x^2$  and  $n$ .
  - Single-key calculation of mean and standard deviation.
  - Single-key summations of  $x$  and  $y$  values for linear correlation and regression.
  - Single-key calculations of linear correlation coefficient and slope of curve.
  - Single-key calculation of  $y$ -axis intercept or any point on  $y$ -axis.
  - Separate keys to remove incorrect  $x$  and  $y$  values.
  - Single key to store frequency for standard deviation of grouped data.
  - Mean and standard deviation calculated without destroying summations, enabling additions or deletions.
  - Single key to clear all statistical summations.
  - Square, square root, and change sign functions.
  - Automatic constant in multiplication and division.
  - Automatic repeat addition and subtraction.
  - Full accumulating memory.
  - "Live" percent key.
  - Indicator light for low battery condition.

- MOS/LSI solid-state circuitry.
- Bright, eight-digit LED display.
- Engineered and manufactured by National Semiconductor Corporation, a world-leader in solid-state technology.

Novus 6035 Programmable Statistician

After you know what it does, you won't believe what it costs.

- All the functions of the powerful Novus 6030 plus the benefits of simplified learn-mode programming.
- A learn-mode capacity totalling 100 separate steps.
- Several different programs can be contained at the same time.
- Delete feature lets you correct programs while you are writing them.
- Skip key permits skipping over entire programs to access additional programs within 100-step capacity.
- You have complete freedom to select keyboard entries as variables or constants.
- Automatic warning signal in display lets you know when programming capacity is exceeded.
- The Novus Programmable Statistician is rechargeable and comes complete with nickel cadmium batteries, charger and vinyl carrying case.

Fullinwider calls Rhodes 'unresponsive' to jobless

By Mike Tulumello
Rep. John Rhodes, R-Ariz., is an "unresponsive" congressman who has failed to combat the unemployment problem, Rhodes' likely opponent in the November general election charged Thursday at ASU.

Democrat Pat Fullinwider, who is running unopposed in Tuesday's primary elections, said Rhodes has "consistently voted against providing any incentive for providing economic growth — other than the trickle-down approach (of primarily aiding business)."

Fullinwider, speaking to Dr. Bob Hirsch's political communication class, said the unemployment rate is as high as 16 per cent in some areas of Arizona's First District (which includes ASU) and will be her "top issue" in the fall campaign.

But Jay Smith, Rhodes' press secretary who spoke to the class by a telephone hook-up from Washington, expressed confidence Rhodes would be elected to his 13th term in the House.

"If ever he (Rhodes) was going to get knocked off in his 24 years in Congress," Smith said, "it was in 1974."

Rhodes, the House Republican leader, narrowly defeated Fullinwider, by a margin of 51 to 43 per cent, in 1974. Smith blamed the closeness of the race on the presence of an anti-abortion candidate and a nationwide reaction against Republicans because of Watergate.

But Fullinwider said she campaigned in 1974 "without television, without mailings and with only one telephone," adding she is much better funded this year. She promised to keep flexible hours in her home district office if she is elected, and she pledged to institute a mobile office.

Fullinwider also vowed to vote against excessive defense spending, saying, "Cost overruns are the rule rather than the exception. They keep building new toys before proving the old toys work."

But, she said, "It's not merely the military that has fat."

Smith blamed the government's problems on the Democratic-controlled Congress.

"People keep electing Democrats, but according to a recent poll, only nine per cent of the American people think Congress is doing a good job," he said.

Rhodes is being challenged in the Republican primary this year by ultra-conservative Meas city councilman Louis Stradling. He was scheduled to speak to the class himself, but was replaced at the last minute by Smith.

ASU honoraries go coed; one elects male president

By Nina Bondarook

ASU's chapter of the formerly all female Alpha Lambda Delta is the first honorary organization in the nation to go coed, and president Tom Broderick said he thinks the move has strengthened the group.

Traditionally, Alpha Lambda Delta has been a freshman women's scholastic honorary, but on Sept. 4, 1975 men began joining. Now its membership consists of 49 women and 11 men, all under the leadership of a male president and female subofficers.

"Initially, I felt outnumbered. But after that it was alright," Broderick said. "(If a group is coed) your power is unlimited if you're okay financially."

Alpha Lambda Delta was forced to go coed by the congressional passage of Title IX. Title IX states no organization which exists at a federally funded institute can discriminate on the basis of sex.

If Alpha Lambda Delta members segregated, the honorary would not have been eligible for a University adviser and could not have utilized University facilities unless it payed a rental fee.

Broderick said the addition of men has widened members' interests and broadened group activities from traditional teas and get-togethers to more athletically inclined events.

"There's a wider range of activities that can be planned," he said. "For instance, we've planned a camping trip to the Grand Canyon, and we're hoping to publish a professor evaluation magazine."

"The reason we men didn't feel any pressure (about joining) is it's a brand new group. If it was an already established group of women we would have."

Alpha Lambda Delta changes membership each fall as new students meet eligibility requirements. The men were admitted along with a group of women.

Susan Clouse Alver, student activities adviser, is the honorary adviser. She said the addition of men has been good for the organization.

"They've (men) been very active and vocal. I think it's added a new dimension," Alver said. They have some good ideas that the women wouldn't have come up with."

She said she did not notice any problems caused by the coed transition.

"No problems...They (the women) were a little apprehensive at first just because they didn't think that men would be interested (in joining). But, they were excited," she said.

Another organization that has gone coed on campus is Delta Sigma Pi, a business honorary. The group had been all male until spring semester of 1975.

It too is unique because it is the first organization in the nation to initiate a husband and wife team.

One of Delta Sigma Pi's co-advisers said the addition of women has made visible changes in the group.

"They have added immensely to the strength of the group," Dr. Glenn Wilt Jr., adviser, said.

Opera, Bergman fans will find cinema advantageous over stage

In "The Magic Flute," showing at the Valley Art Theatre on Mill Avenue, Ingmar Bergman fans will find an opera, and opera fans will discover Ingmar Bergman.

In his highly acclaimed film of the Mozart opera, Bergman demonstrates some of the advantages the movie screen has over the stage.

Mozart's opera tells the story of two pairs of lovers and their tests of devotion in a mythical kingdom. It is not a gripping, dynamic story, but it has good dramatic moments and plenty of comic diversion.

Bergman brought together an excellent Scandinavian cast to do justice to Mozart's classic score. Operagoers who have suffered through an opera in a foreign language, not knowing what's going on, will welcome the film's subtitles.

Bergman has a reputation for his handling of heavy drama. His touch shows up in the tense dramatic scenes.

The superb lighting and tight framing by Bergman's cinematographer Sven Nykvist allow the performers to concentrate on subtle nuance rather than the exaggerated projecting of most stage presentations.

Closeups and changes in perspective add an extra dimension to the operatic medium. Opera lovers will delight in Bergman's innocent adaption.

Billed with "Magic Flute" is "Antonia: A Portrait of the Woman," a film biography of Antonia Brico, whose career as a conductor has been hindered by sex discrimination.

The film is folksinger Judy Collins' first and was nominated for an academy award.

Collins is a former pupil of Brico's and deals with her subject very warmly.

Both films will run until Sept. 13.

ASASU discusses ID's; wants contract honored

Associated Students Thursday introduced a motion requiring the athletic department to admit it acted inappropriately in issuing athletic ID's.

The motion, made by ASASU President Dave Braaten at the first meeting of the Intercollegiate Athletic Board, requests the athletic department to "make clear that it fully intends to honor the contract made between the department and the Associated Students of ASU." It further asks that the department acknowledge ASASU's right to uphold the conditions of the agreement.

ASASU also wants the department to lower the athletic ID replacement charge from $15 to $5, and allow ASASU to "reevaluate the (new ID) program an make a final decision as to its future" after a trial period of five football games has passed.

The motion was introduced after an hour and a half of semantic disagreements over whether or not the agreement, made in 1973, had been broken.

The agreement reads that decisions relative to student seating in Sun Devil mutual agreement" between ASASU and the athletic department.

ASASU contends the agreement was broken because ASASU was not consulted in the decision to issue athletic ID's.

Braaten said the agreement was violated because a student can no longer obtain a football ticket by using a campus service card as stated in the agreement. But, members of the board said no student was denied purchase of a ticket when using the campus service card, because the card or a pink fee card are used to obtain an athletic ID. Board members did admit that it was an indirect way of using the service card to get a ticket, but maintained there was no violation in the agreement.

The board finally decided to send the motion to a standing committee's recommendations, if it has any, at the next board meeting Sept. 30.

Braaten said the move does not kill the issue. "Our options are still wide open. We're reassessing our approach," he said. "We still feel the same way about the principle and the agreement."

Governor appoints prof to study matrimony

An ASU sociologist has been chosen to head a newly formed governor's committee.

Gov. Raul Castro has appointed Dr. John Hudson to chair a committee that will select a task force for a governor's conference on the status of marriage and family in Arizona.

The group will include representatives from each of the 14 counties, and legislators from both parties.

"Research has shown that Arizona has one of the nation's highest divorce rates . . . one of the world's highest for that matter," Hudson said. "Task force participants will examine the situation to see what can be done to improve and stabilize family life in Arizona."

The sociologist noted this could be achieved through education, counseling, and a variety of other techniques.

On the following two pages are profiles of four candidates for the office of Maricopa County attorney. The remaining candidates are Democrats Gary Peter Klahr and Jack McCormick and Republican Stan Jones.

County attorney candidate says he 'hates politics'

George Mount, GOP candidate for Maricopa County Attorney, said he originally entered the race because "I was afraid Bob Hungerford (a state senator opposing Mount in the primary contest) would win."

"I hate politics," he said.

Hungerford spent the last six years serving in the Arizona legislature.

Concentrating on issues, Mount, 42, said he would, if elected, assign all marijuana cases to justice of the peace courts, thus decreasing Superior Court case loads by 25 per cent.

While Mount says he opposed to decriminalization of marijuana ("marijuana use is a withdrawal from reality"), he also favors discretionary powers for police -- allowing them to decide whether to arrest a suspect for possession or issue a ticket for the violation.

Mount said the county attorney's office has fallen into disrepute because it was run by a politician -- former county attorney Moise Berger.

"Every decision was politically oriented," he said. Berger avoided controversy, tried to appease all sides, and "he lied a lot," Mount added.

But however incompetent, Berger was not corrupt, he said.

Recent stories in The Arizona Republic quote Berger telling a Phoenix Police investigator that political higher-ups stifled important white-collar prosecutions. Berger pointed a finger at former state GOP Chairman Harry Rosenzweig as one who ought to be investigated.

But Mount said the quotes in the Republic were taken out of context.

"No group or individual is strong enough to put a lid on an investigation by the county attorney," he said.

Mount, who specialized in homicide trials for two of his four years with the county attorney's office, never lost a case.

Among the 60 jury trial cases he prosecuted were the Canlen House murders where two boys were stripped, forced to engage in sex acts and then shot.

He also prosecuted the "murder-for-hire" case of Jeannie and Buster Holsinger.

The candidate, a resident of Scottsdale, says plea bargaining is necessary in the prosecution of many crimes.

"Only a politician will tell you he won't plea bargain. You have to plea bargain," he said.

Plea bargaining becomes necessary when witnesses refuse to testify or they disappear, or when a case is not as strong as it first appeared.

Mount points to land and securities frauds as key problems facing the state. The county attorney's office has six attorneys assigned full-time to investigating these and other forms of white-collar crime.

But Mount says he will decrease the number of attorneys on the white-collar task force to two and add three investigators and an accountant.

This, he says, will increase the county's effectiveness in rooting out the more sordid organized crime elements.

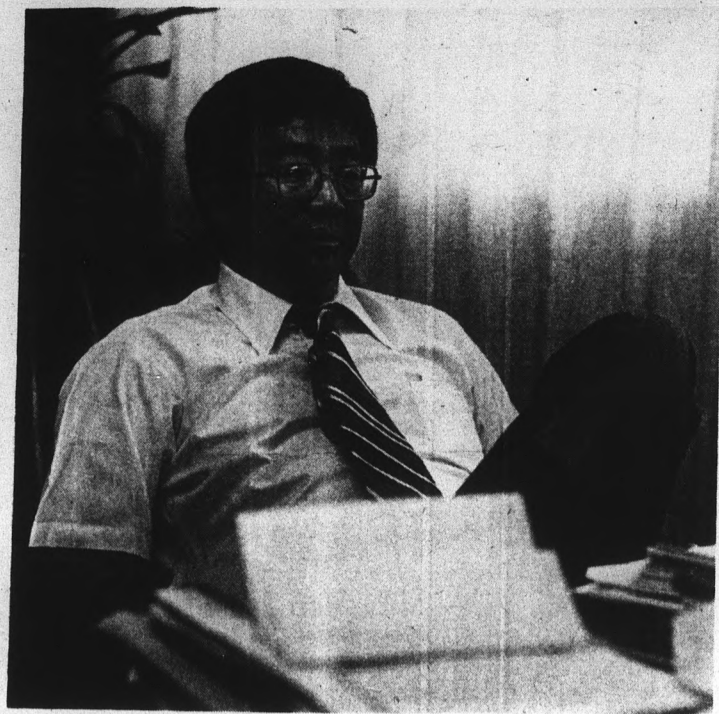

And he would establish an investigative grand jury to work hand-in-hand with the organized crime unit.

John Harvey Adamson, accused of the June 3 bomb-slaying of Republic reporter Don Bolles, will likely be convicted of the crime, Mount said. He cites sources inside the county attorney's office, which is charged with the Adamson prosecution, to back up his belief.

While Mount believes more than one person was involved in the killing, the candidate declined to say whether he believes more arrests will be forthcoming.

Mount was a Marine Corps fighter pilot and was graduated in 1970 from the ASU College of Law, the same class as his opponent Bob Hungerford.

Even though he says he hates politics, he goes out knocking on doors, some 300 every day, in pursuit of the $33,000 position.

White collar crime Lim's prime target

By Hal DeKeyser

Auditors, accountants and professional investigators are needed more than additional lawyers in the fight against organized crime, according to George Lim, Republican candidate for Maricopa County Attorney.

Lim said Thursday no local agency has the qualified personnel to deal effectively with organized crime, however, the State Attorney General's office is developing the capability.

"The sophisticated criminal is more at home with ledgers than with guns," Lim said. "Internal Revenue Service investigators and people used to looking at paper crime," is what is needed to fight organized crime, he said.

White collar crimes, such as land fraud, generally cross county lines, he said, and must be dealt with at the state level.

In his first bid for public office, Lim is emphasizing his administrative and prosecuting experience. The county attorney's job is an administrative post, but he also must be an effective prosecutor, he said, because he must be able to advise deputy attorneys. Although the county attorney spends little time in court, he must personally be prepared to prosecute important cases, like the Don Bolles case, Lim added.

"That kind of case could make or break the office," he said.

If elected, he said, most first offender marijuana cases would be tried in justice of the peace courts, which would virtually make the crime a misdemeanor.

But Lim added, the county attorney's office should not legislate marijuana penalties. The decriminalization issue should be decided by the people, and offenders prosecuted according to that decision, he said.

Lim favors 30 to 50 year sentences for "hard drug" dealers. He said because 50 to 70 per cent of all crimes in Maricopa County are drug-related, prosecuting narcotics cases should have high priority.

Attorneys should be assigned specialized areas such as narcotics, land fraud, homicide and organized crime, Lim said.

This would allow prosecutors to develop expertise in specific areas and establish good working relationships with enforcement agencies.

Lim was born in China, but moved to Tucson at the age of two. He is a graduate of the University of Arizona School of Law and was a deputy county attorney from 1964 to 1967. He is currently in private law practice in Tempe.

Hungerford promises effort to buckle down on criminals

By Marty Malone

Bob Hungerford, candidate for the Republican nomination for Maricopa County Attorney, said Wednesday he would "get tough with the criminal" if elected.

"For 25 years we've been in the throes of a humanist movement that has preached leniency for the criminal," he said. "I believe it's time to punish people for their crimes. We need to protect society and the victim instead of the criminal."

Hungerford, an attorney who is completing his sixth year in the state legislature, said he intends to battle crime by using more modern methods of prosecution.

That office down there (Maricopa County Attorney's office) is 25 years behind the times," he said. "I know it's a cliché, but I believe we have to be as 'organized as the criminal is.' It's our only chance of being successful."

Hungerford said he plans to communicate better with the public than did Moise Berger, the recent county attorney who resigned after his office became wracked with controversy over unsuccessful land fraud prosecutions.

"Berger literally had double locks on his door -- no one could get in to see him. In six years in the legislature I never saw the man. I believe the public has the right to be informed and I intend to pursue an open-door policy. I plan to hold a monthly news conference in which I will report on the criminal justice system and how it's working," he said.

Hungerford said he expected his stiffest primary competition from George Mount.

"I think it's going to be a close race, but I do expect to win. I've seen three polls and two of them had me winning," he said.

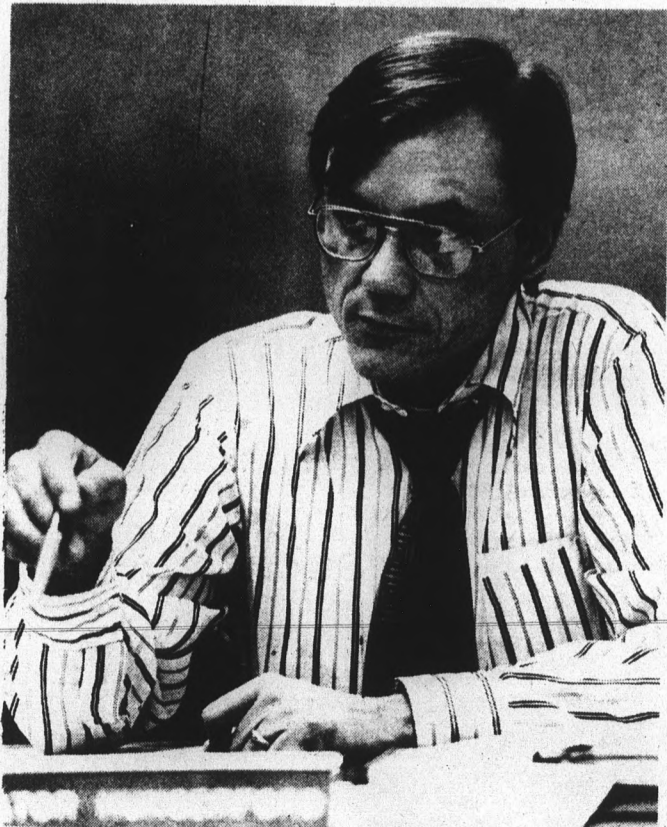

Hungerford also predicted the Democrats would nominate Gary Peter Klahr, former Phoenix councilman, over Charles Hyder, former deputy county attorney.

"I think Klahr will win it in spite of Hyder's (campaign) expenditures," he said. "Gary is a familiar face and I believe people are suspicious of all the endorsements Hyder has."

"Gary is too socially disruptive for the job, though," he said. "He's thin-skinned and can't take criticism. I think he'd end up with double locks on the door, just like Berger."

Hungerford said a total of $12,000 has been spent on his campaign to date, with $4,000 of that coming from his own pocket.

"The party, of course, doesn't give you a dime during the primaries -- it all comes out of your personal funds or from contributions," he said.

Bob Hungerford

Hyder calls for reorganization

By Britton Bloom

A complete reorganization of the county attorney's office is necessary to restore the effectiveness of the office, said Charles Hyder, Democratic candidate for Maricopa County Attorney.

The attorney's office has lost the respect of the police and the community because of the effects of politicians who know nothing about prosecution, he said.

Hyder, 37, who has served seven years in the county attorney's office in every capacity from trial prosecutor to chief deputy, said that his major goal would be to make the department a career office, to draw the most experienced prosecutors in the state.

Although he is running as a Democrat, Hyder said the party label means nothing. The attorney's office must be non-partisan and independent of politicians, he added.

"Arrests are made for one purpose: to take the case to court and obtain a conviction," he said.

To achieve that purpose, Hyder said he would recruit experienced ex-prosecutors to train young law graduates and assist in administration of the office.

Once that group of "old hands" is built up, Hyder said he would use its experience to form the central core of strike forces, or teams concentrating on hard-core narcotics cases, sexual assaults, white collar crimes and homicides.

Such teams would work on a case from the initial investigation through the trial, he said.

Better communications with police must be established to coordinate their efforts with the county attorney's office, Hyder said.

Even hospitals have to be informed of investigative procedures to preserve evidence in rape cases, he added.

Hyder said he would meet regularly with the Arizona legislature to inform members of the prosecutor's perspective on new laws that affect the attorney's office.

But, legislative tinkering with the judicial system could reduce the discretion judges and prosecutors now exercise, as in legislative proposals to institute mandatory sentencing he said.

Mandatory sentencing is a plan in which certain classes of crimes, such as first-degree robbery, would carry a fixed sentence with no exceptions.

Hyder said he thought that plan was improper because it treated all criminals covered by the sentencing the same way recognizing no difference between the first offender and a professional criminal.

Judges and prosecutors must evaluate each case on its own merits and make a determination of sentence on the basis of the facts in the individual case, he said.

Plea bargaining is the most effective weapon in the prosecutor's arsenal, Hyder said.

Skillful use of plea bargaining by a professional prosecutor can strengthen otherwise weak cases that could be thrown out of court, he said.

Plea bargaining can serve to split a group of fraud defendants so one will testify against another, he added.

But plea bargaining can be abused, especially by non-professional prosecutors, who use bargains to cover their lack of experience, he said.

Move it, Cosell; it's Tom Terrific

When I came to breakfast yesterday morning my youngest sister asked, "Do you think you're going to get on TV at the UCLA game?" I laughed a big-brother laugh and said no and that it was a ridiculous idea to think I'd ever get on TV.

She got a little embarrassed (or maybe just angry at me) because I thought her question was so ridiculous.

I was also a little embarrassed because as ridiculous as the idea is, I've had a reoccurring daydream about it for two months.

It goes something like this:

It's five minutes before the game and Frank Gifford, Howard Cosell and Alex Kerras have, for the first time ever, run out of things to say.

Usually when the ABC trio runs out of things to say, they find a celebrity in the press box and have them come on the air and say something like, "I've always been a big Pittsburgh Steeler fan — even when they were losing — I just never admitted it until they took the Super Bowl."

But keep in mind we are in Tempe, Arizona. There are no celebrities roaming around.

So Howard, during a commercial, looks around the press box, hoping for an "expert" of some kind. Well there aren't any famous football players, and all the writers — Sports Illustrated, the Los Angeles Times, etc. — are busy. Except me.

So Howard decides to put me on for a minute.

I've only been on TV once before, on a local teenage talk show, "Young Faces," or "Young Ideas," or something like that. I was so nervous the show was almost over before my voice stopped cracking.

I was so nervous in fact, I wound up with a stain on my suit (from sweating, of course).

But on national TV, I'm cool, calm and relaxed. And with my fantastic personality and boyish good looks (it's my dream) I capture the hearts of millions of Americans . . . in just one minute of air time.

They break for a commercial, and I go back to my seat, completely unsuspecting of the tremendous impact I've had on the viewers (I knew I was good, but . . .).

Then I see Howard motioning back. The switch boards are jammed with calls from viewers demanding more.

They're telling the ABC sports director things like, "Replace Cosell with this kid. He's got it all. What charm. What personality. What looks." (Actually, people have been saying this to me all my life — "What charm? What personality? What looks?")

Then I, with all that charm that has just hypnotized the entire nation, go back over to the mike. I thank everyone, consent to do the rest of the game for ABC and say something about how this is beyond my wildest dreams (which isn't exactly true — this is my wildest dream).

As the game goes on I get better and better (so do the Devils, who are walloping the Bruins 49-6). At the end of the game they offer me a $1 million contract. But I decline (you can do those kind of noble things in daydreams).

Of course I know it won't happen that way . . . Keith Jackson and Ara Parseghian will be doing the game for ABC.

Kush discourages unsolicited players

ASU's football team has had a flood of walk-ons this year, and Head Football Coach Frank Kush isn't pleased about it.

"I hope most of them quit," Kush said, rolling his eyes.

Walk-ons are the "displaced persons" of a college football team. They weren't recruited. They weren't given scholarships. They literally walked onto the football field for a tryout. And they aren't wanted.

Most of them look about as comfortable in their surroundings as a cockroach when he sees the can of Raid. But each is confident he is the answer to at least some of ASU's football worries.

"They have bad fundamentals," Kush said. "You have to fit them with uniforms. You have to worry about them getting hurt. What are you going to do with them?" he asked in exasperation.

Although none of the Devils' 22 starters or kicking specialists is a walk-on, two of them once were. Glen Lanker, who leads in the race for the center position, and Mark Jones, a place-kicker, both walked on as freshmen. They have since been awarded scholarships.

"It's like trying to find gold these days," Kush said, trying to explain the chances of finding a walk-on worthy of mention.

As usual, Kush had a solution to his problem. "We'll have some one-on-one (blocking and tackling) drills to see if we have any gold," he said.

Kit Lathrop, a freshman defensive tackle, tries to cool off at the Payson scrimmage. Lathrop and his Devil teammates will have a more difficult time cooling off in the season opener with UCLA next Thursday. The temperature is expected to be over a 100 degrees at kick off.

Devil's staff says UCLA, ASU accustomed to heat

ASU's athletic training staff won't do anything special to cope with expected 100-degree temperatures during the football team's Sept. 9 game against UCLA, head trainer Ray Robison said.

"We'll stay with what we've used before — plenty of salt, plenty of ice and plenty of liquid," Robison said.

The weather bureau estimated 100-degree temperatures at the 5:10 p.m. kickoff, adding it could reach as high as 110 degrees. An assistant coach remarked that whatever the air temperature is, the temperature on the floor of the stadium will be about five degrees warmer.

"We'll be used to it," Robison said. "Our passing

Devil's staff says teams used to 100-degree heat Poll ratings not helpful, Kush says

game workout is at 3 p.m., and starting Thursday, we'll start practice (in pads) at 5 o'clock. Our kids are — what's the word — 'climatized.'

Head Football Coach Frank Kush had said he hoped the temperature for the game would be about 105 degrees.

"I thought we'd be used to it and they (UCLA) wouldn't," Kush explained.

"But I understand it was 102 degrees in Los Angeles the other day. So I don't think the heat will be that big a factor."

Robison said that emotional tension during the game might cause some of the players to have cramps, but added his staff would be prepared for it.

"Most of our kids are in pretty fair condition," Robison added.

Frank Kush doesn't like a lot of things — among them the national rankings.

"I don't think they benefit a team too much except from a publicity standpoint," the ASU head football coach said.

Kush's Sun Devils were ranked third by the AP and seventh by the UPI in this fall's preseason polls.

"The team picked in preseason polls to win the national championship usually doesn't make it," Kush noted.

However, Kush said that UCLA, which opens its season Sept. 9 against ASU in Tempe, should have been given a higher ranking (14th in UPI, 15th in AP).

"I would have ranked them in the top ten," Kush said. Asked where he would have placed his own team, Kush remarked, "I wouldn't rank our team that high until they prove something."

Magazine ranks Sun Devils third in preseason poll

Sports Illustrated has rated ASU third in the nation in its annual preseason poll. The national sports magazine ranked Michigan first and Alabama second.

Last year the magazine excluded the Devils from their top twenty.
