ASU coeds want 'the pill' on campus, poll reveals

By Rhonda Prast

Birth control pills and a full-time gynecologist should be made available by the ASU Student Health Center, a majority of women said in a survey conducted by the ASU Women's Affairs Board.

Nancy Kemmeries, head of the board, said the survey was taken to find out how well the health center is meeting students' needs, especially those of women.

"We found out that without a full-time gynecologist, the health center is not doing an adequate job," she said. "The women also said they want a woman hired for that job."

Kemmeries said surveys were distributed to the women's dormitories and nearly 400 were returned.

"We didn't get a large number of surveys returned but we found out what we wanted to know," she said. "There is definitely birth control support on campus."

Two part-time gynecologists, both men, are working at the health center but each one is available only one morning a week.

Dr. Richard Jones, director of the health center, said he is working on obtaining additional gynecological help for the center — but it's not his first priority.

"My top priority is mental health — I'm very worried about it," Jones said. "A full-time gynecologist is my second priority because there is ample coverage for the students from the part-time gynecologists at the present."

Jones said no pills or birth control devices are distributed by the center because of a prohibitive ruling by the Arizona Board of Regents.

"We can talk about birth control and distribute literature," he said. "We also refer the women to Planned Parenthood and Maricopa County clinics."

Jones said he is in favor of making birth control methods available to students.

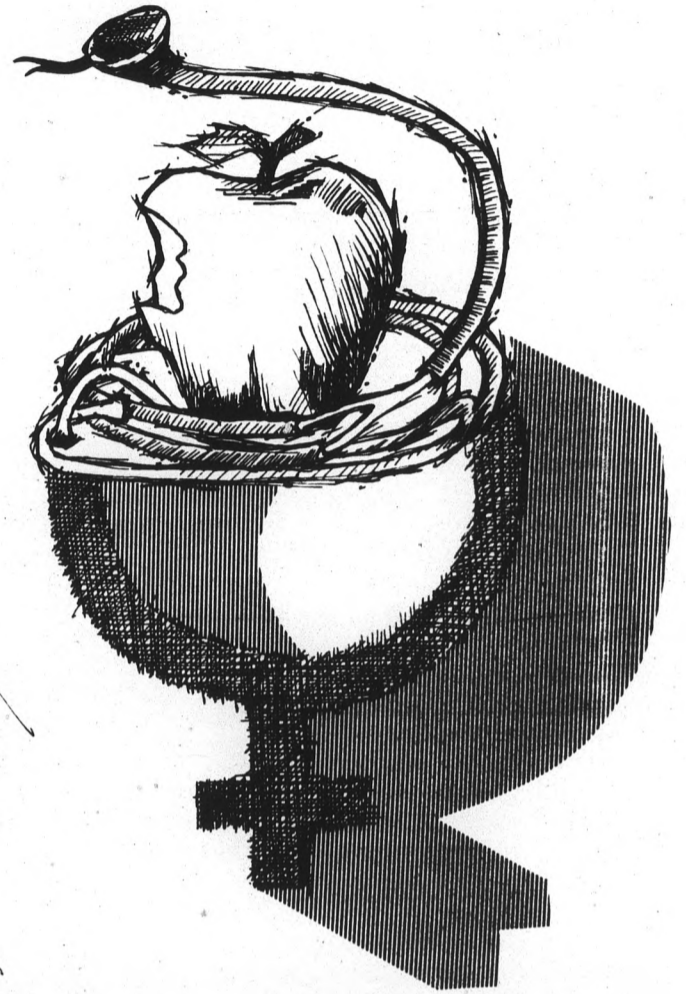

"I think the main advantage is that women would get an examination regularly. I think that's a big plus," Jones said. "I also think it would improve the image of the health center."

Jones said more part-time gynecological help would depend on additional funds added to the budget to pay their wages.

"A full-time gynecologist would cost over $50,000 a year and there aren't that many women doctors here in Phoenix," Jones added.

Kemmeries said the ASU administration and state legislature show a general lack of concern for women's health by not hiring a full-time gynecologist for ASU.

"It's a dangerous situation — it basically gets down to funding," she said. "But you're dealing with the system and that's always frustrating."

In efforts to bypass administrative vetoes

Student leaders urge incorporation

By Britton Bloom

Student government leaders agreed this weekend the best way to circumvent administration vetoes of student projects may be to form private, off-campus corporations.

About 60 student officials, representing the three state universities, met at a Prescott ranch to compare common problems and discuss how each organization is handling them.

Money requests vetoed

ASU administrators have consistently cut funds for student programs and vetoed requests for more money, ASU student officials said.

The ASU representatives said a corporation could be used to fund a day care center, a birth control clinic, lawyers' fees and other student government programs that have been vetoed in the past.

Papers of incorporation have been drawn up and will be filed with the Arizona Corporation Commission "as soon as we get the bucks," according to Roger Wyer, first council representative from ASU.

Fee filing planned

A request for the $50 filing fee has been made of the administration, Wyer said, "And we're waiting to hear their answer."

If the request is turned down, he added, ASASU will generate its own funds for the fee and file anyway.

Associated Students of the University of Arizona (ASUA) also is planning to form an independent corporation, ASUA President Pat Mitchell said.

An independent student organization with its own funds, which university administrators cannot control, should have enough leverage to influence university policies, Mitchell said.

Student input 'nil'

At present, student input to administrators is nil, Wyer said.

Administrators view students primarily as an excuse for the administration to exist, he said, and added there are other reasons for a university to exist than to guarantee jobs.

Administrators at ASU and UA view universities as business corporations — as monopolies — Arizona Students Association Executive Coordinator John Ridgway said.

"You subscribe to them or you leave," he said.

Controlling their own money would guarantee students some input into running the university, and make it responsive to student needs, Ridgway said.

Many of the problems at ASU and UA do not exist at NAU, partially because NAU administrators are more accessible, said Eddie Sanchez, president of Associated Students of NAU (ASNAU).

"I can go into any vice president's office anytime. Or get in touch with (NAU President Lawrence) Walkup, even at home, to talk," Sanchez said. "This cuts the bureaucracy in half."

Also, he added, ASNAU approaches its administrators with a positive attitude and there is cooperation on both sides.

Compromise made easy

"If we're trying to get from point A to point C, we'll settle for point B," he said. "But point C is always the ultimate end result."

However, Ridgway pointed out, NAU is a smaller campus than ASU or UA, and there are fewer power centers where important decisions are made.

Regents to consider campus alcohol sales

The sale of alcoholic beverages on campus will be considered by the policy committee of the Arizona Board of Regents at 10 a.m. Friday in the MU Mohave Room.

See related story page 5

In a letter to David Braaten, Associated Students president, Lawrence Woodall, executive coordinator for the regents, said "sufficient data is available to bring this matter to the attention of the board of regents."

Organizations wishing to take part in the meeting and voice their views are asked to select one spokesman, Woodall added.

The committee is to consider all facets of the question as it affects the students, schools, community, state and private enterprise.

"In order to accomplish this it is desirable that both the pros and cons of this question be thoroughly developed by those having expertise as regards this particular problem," Woodall said.

In the news briefly

From the Associated Press

ADAMSON DENIED VENUE CHANGE

PHOENIX — The murder trial of John Adamson, 32, will remain in Maricopa County and jurors will be sequestered, Superior Court Judge Frederic Heineman ruled Monday. Defense attorneys argued unsuccessfully that massive publicity about a June 2 car bombing that killed Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles would prejudice any jury.

INDIANS OPPOSE ORME

FORT McDOWELL — Fort McDowell Indians say they will fight any attempt to condemn their land northeast of Phoenix for the Central Arizona Project's Orme Dam. The tribe voted last week against accepting $33.5 million for 25,000 acres of reservation. Tribal attorney Thomas Fredericks said the government could condemn the land, but he is sure it will pick another site.

PRISONERS WANT 'PLAYBOY'

PHOENIX — Three Arizona State prison inmates have sued the warden and state corrections director to get back on the mailing list for three "girlie" magazines. Timothy Seeboth, Jerry Rector and Patrick Maloney say they sold their blood to pay for subscriptions to Playboy, Penthouse and Oui. But prison officials say the magazines could hinder rehabilitation efforts.

UAW, FORD MOTOR EXPECT CONTRACT

DETROIT — Announcement of a tentative contract settlement was expected shortly as bargainers for the striking United Auto Workers and Ford Motor Co. met on Monday, the 20th day of the nationwide walkout. Sources close to the talks said all that remained was to tie together loose ends on noneconomic matters.

BUTZ RESIGNS

WASHINGTON — U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Earl Butz, embattled over voicing an obscene racial slur, resigned Monday. President Ford was quoted as telling a group of black workers that Butz was "merely telling a story" when he made an obscene and derogatory comment about blacks. Asked what he would do now, Butz replied, "Campaign for President Ford."

BUSINESSMEN CLAIM SUPPORT

NEW YORK — The National Small Business Association (NSBA) says it believes it has won a commitment from Jimmy Carter that he would seek the expansion of "the small, independent business sector" relative to big business and government. Carter's position was made in response to a request to him and President Ford for statements regarding what the NSBA claims is an erosion of the power of small and medium-size companies.

COURT REFUSES REHEARINGS

WASHINGTON — The U.S. Supreme Court refused Monday to reconsider its decisions in two previous cases. Side-stepping the controversy over court-ordered busing in the racially troubled Boston public schools, the justices let stand their order of last June 14 declining to review the federal court decree under which Boston children are being bused. The court also rejected a petition on its decision to uphold the capital punishment laws of Florida, Georgia and Texas.

A third decision let stand a ruling by the California Supreme Court granting union organizers access to privately-owned farms.

Minority recruiting program continues despite funding cut

By Nina Bondarook

Although federal funding for ASU's minority assistance and recruitment program has been eliminated, the program will continue under a skeleton staff salaried by the University, the coordinator said Monday.

The program, Talent Search, will be staffed by three students and a counselor, said George Carillo, director of special services on campus. The staff formerly had 15 members.

When funding for the three-year-old ASU program was eliminated this year by the Department of Health, Education and Welfare, University minority leaders feared the ratio of minority students to Anglo students would be reduced.

During the past three years, ASU's Talent Search received more than $97,000 from HEW. It was used to support student/counselor teams that visited inner city schools encouraging students to pursue college educations.

"We're not operating like we were in the past," Carillo said. "The only thing we're doing right now is talking to counselors and letting them know what's happened to Talent Search."

In an effort to streamline services, he added only high school seniors who already are interested in postsecondary educations will be contacted by staff members.

ASU will re-apply for federal assistance for the next fiscal year as soon as applications are available. Meanwhile, Carillo said the University is fulfilling minority recruitment and assistance obligations through another program, Upward Bound.

Upward Bound is a precollege preparatory program aimed at improving academic skills and the desire to learn in youths from all low-income families.

It is designed to aid students in grades 9-11 who are under-achievers and inadequately prepared for college.

"We're going to bring a maximum of 80 students on campus every Saturday for 30 weeks," he said. "Here we give them assistance in basic academic skills so that they can succeed in school."

"I can see in many respects it's (Upward Bound) made dramatic changes in their lives - it's opened their eyes to the fact they can succeed," Carillo said.

Upward Bound was awarded $76,776 by HEW for this fiscal year.

"That's the only program (where) we really do recruit (directly to ASU)," he said. "(Last year, through Talent Search) we worked with about 1,174 people, yet all those did not state they'd go to ASU. About 300 showed an interest in going to ASU."

In contract, Upward Bound students who participate in a summer program actually live on campus, 24 hours a day for eight weeks, he added.

"They're not only given orientation, but exposed to the campus atmosphere," he said. "Everything is monitored to make sure we're making success with the student. We feel that we are."

University needs candidates' help

Only 22 more shopping days until the general election Nov. 2.

Not much time to sort out conflicting claims, ill-defined issues and campaign rhetoric.

But for the sake of quality education at ASU, take time to identify candidates who agree that too much time has passed since funds have been approved to ease the school's classroom crunch.

Two legislative sessions have gone by without appropriations for classrooms at ASU.

Enrollment has grown until present facilities are stretched to the breaking point. Outdated facilities haven't been replaced.

Yet next year's lawmakers may be tempted to cut ASU funds.

Why? Because of a drop in enrollment this semester.

There is no clear indication the drop will be anything but temporary. Social and economic factors make predictions difficult.

But Valley population growth isn't going to stop soon, if ever. That growth has been the biggest source of strain on ASU.

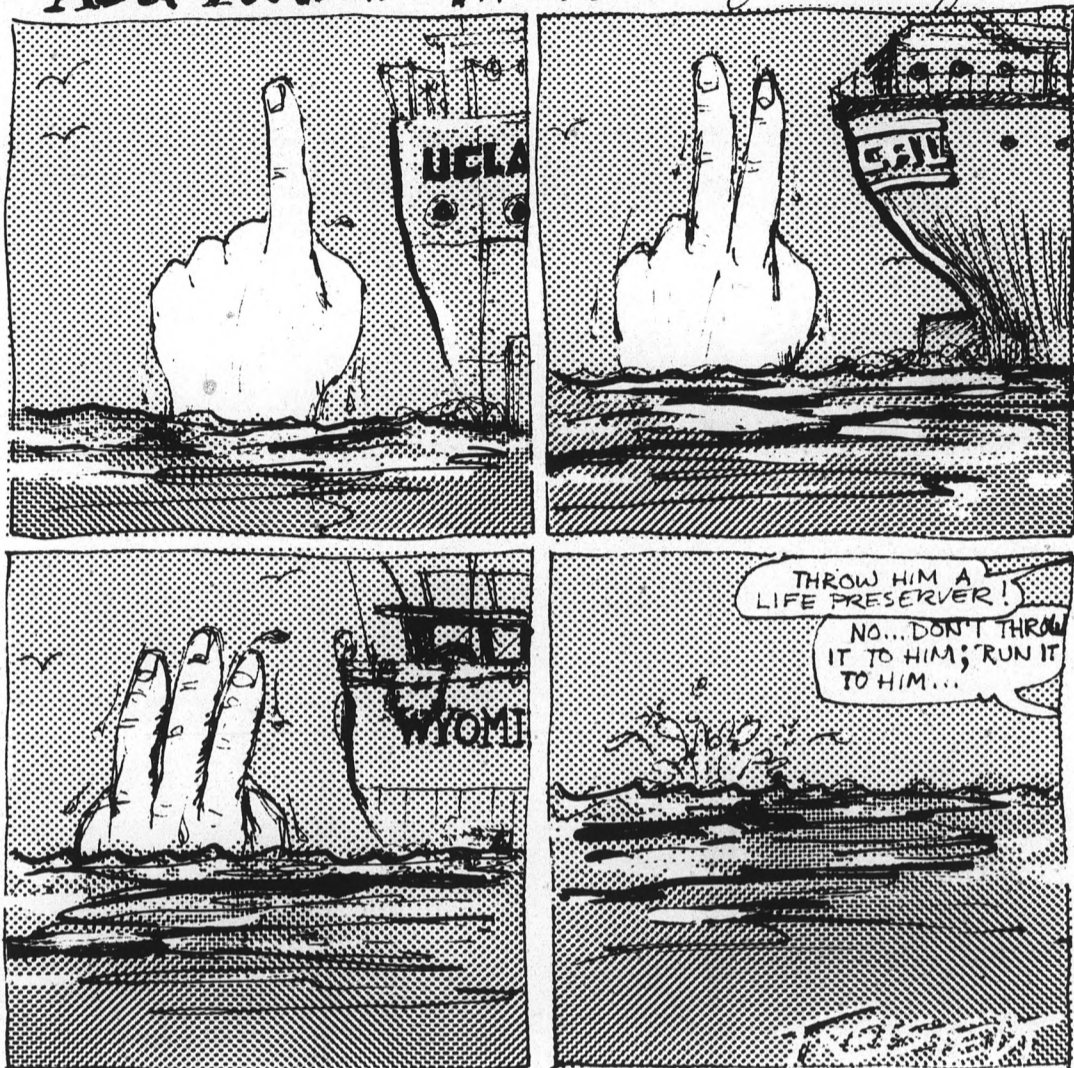

Considering ASU's space problems now, need is as great as ever for capital appropriations from the legislature.

So make your candidate list for November elections and check it twice.

Check it once to see if your man or woman has a clear commitment to bettering the quality of education at ASU.

Check it again to make sure your candidate will back up that conviction when hard decisions are made late next spring at the state capitol.

ASU Football - That Sinking Feeling...

'Fast foods' can be part of diet

Editor:

It is unfortunate that there was such a confusion over the article appearing in the Sept. 17 issue of State Press.

I was asked to comment on "fast food" not "junk food."

I neither advocate nor condemn "fast food" (that food coming from fast food establishments).

However, I would emphasize that the meat in a McDonald's hamburger is not less nutritious than meat from another source.

Even candy bars are useful to those who have an otherwise adequate diet and need carbohydrate calories.

Use of "fast food" must be evaluated in terms of the total diet.

Which "fast foods" are being eaten and how much?

Does the person consume a variety of foods from all of the basic four food groups (milk products, meat and meat substitutes, fruits and vegetables and breads)?

Is there a high consumption of carbohydrate-rich foods at the expense of foods with greater nutrient content?

No one food, for example, hamburgers, can supply all the necessary nutrients which is why we need to include a variety of foods in our diet.

For most sedentary individuals, carbohydrate-rich foods (cokes, candy, sweets — "junk foods"?) which are high in energy and low in everything else should not be included in the diet because their energy needs should be met with foods supplying sufficient amounts of other nutrients besides carbohydrates.

In regard to the emotional, uninformed reaction by Ms. Tice in the Sept. 24 issue of the State Press, we are not being systematically poisoned by the food industry.

Some evidence indicates that some additives (intentionally and unintentionally) may be potentially harmful to man (their use has been restricted) on the basis of animal studies.

Other evidence indicates the potential (and actual) benefits of other additives.

An extreme position on additives should not be taken which is simply not based on good scientific information.

"Chemical" is not a dirty word. We are made of chemicals, as is all our food.

Unlike us, plants use simple elements-chemicals to produce the more complex chemicals they need (some of which are required nutrients for us).

The plant does not care whether these chemicals come from synthetic fertilizer or "organic" cow manure.

I would hope that university students look carefully at the source of information regarding nutrition.

Is the source sensationalizing information to sell books or health food products?

What is the scientific basis for their claims?

Unfortunately, anyone can call him/herself a "nutritionalist" and in fact there are many persons including some MDs who make fantastic statements and claims based on little or no nutritional training and a superficial knowledge of the science of nutrition.

Try prison for mind waste

Editor:

Ten years of my personal experience and observation serve to refute Jones' allegation that smoking pot "... can destroy you in a few years."

But I cannot conceive of anything more likely to cause "an active and interesting person (to) . . . fall into a withdrawn and disoriented state of mind" than a one-to-ten-year prison sentence, as provided for in Arizona law for the possession of marijuana.

This law is incredibly harsh, and should be repealed immediately in favor of a decriminalization approach, such as the one advocated by NORML.

Mormons expected to testify

Liquor sales opposition anticipated at hearing

By Rosemary Schabert

The Mormon Student Council probably will voice opposition to campus liquor sales at an Arizona Board of Regents hearing Friday, a spokesman said Monday.

"We're definitely against it (campus liquor sales)," said Wynn Call, adviser to the student group at the LDS Institute near campus. "We think it's a detriment to the academic atmosphere. It's a depressant, which certainly can't enhance learning."

Other local religious groups also are expected to attend the hearing and oppose liquor sales, said Associated Students President David Braaten.

The hearing, before the Arizona Board of Regents Policy Committee, is scheduled for 10 a.m. in the MU Mohave Room.

"We realize that there's going to be a number of self-interest groups speaking. People representing bars in the area will be there," Braaten said.

He said the bar owners are afraid on-campus beverage sales will interfere with their business.

"It's the minority that organizes and the minority that's most vocal," said Braaten. "We need a visible show of support from the student body if people would like to be able to have a beer in the MU with lunch or at a game."

Braaten said he is sending out letters to fraternities and sororities urging their support at the hearing.

A referendum taken last year showed about 73 per cent of ASU students supported the sale of alcohol on campus.

Braaten said ASASU will present statistics and letters of support from campus groups at the hearing, as well as studies of alcohol sales on other campuses.

"We're not condoning alcoholism," said Braaten. "We're not saying people should run around drunk. But people who want to sit down and have a beer between classes should be able to do that."

Braaten said alcohol sales would increase revenues for both the athletic department and the MU.

John Ridgway, director of Arizona Students Association, (ASA), said the hearing probably will determine whether the regents will lift their ban or not.

He said ASA supports the liquor sales on campus.

"There's no reason why this University should be different from any across the nation," he said. "It's time for the University to enter the 20th century."

The Mormon Student Council planned to meet at 6:30 a.m. today to make plans for the hearing, Call said.

Call compared the ban on alcohol sales to a ban on classroom smoking.

Call said those opposed to alcohol would be affected by student drinking on campus because "we associate with them — we participate in class with them."

Bio-Rhythms

Ever Notice That Your Life Seems To Go In Cycles?

Scientists have found psychological and biological cycles in the human body. Now, an easy technique can help you adapt to YOUR BIO-RHYTHMS.

German scientists discovered three cycles which start at birth — physical, emotional, mental. Each cycle goes through periods of high (active) and low (recovering) energy. The switching days between are called critical. These "out of touch" days may cause accidents or a variety of other problems. Indeed, the "trauma of birth" creates a triple critical day.

Major Organizations such as airlines, hospitals and police are now using Bio-Rhythms. Why? To help people understand daily changes, especially during vulnerable periods. Examples of research conducted by organizations:

- Safety consultant firm found 70% of industrial accidents occur on employee's critical day.
- Aviation Safety Center reported 80% of private plane accidents occur on critical day of pilot.
- Bio-Rhythm research found critical days significant in study of 2100 auto accidents.

Although accidents can be reduced using Bio-Rhythms, the major purpose is to help you perceive and adjust to your changing nature. If you get along better with yourself, you'll be more compatible with others. People often use Bio-Rhythms to understand compatibilities.

OUR SERVICE INCLUDES:

Fair to employ 2,200 in temporary positions

The Arizona State Fair is looking for people to fill about 2,200 temporary jobs.

Positions include ushers, office workers, tour guides, parking lot attendants, security guards, cashiers, ticket takers, maintenance workers and technical personnel.

A trailer, located on the fairground near McDowell Road and 19th Avenue, will serve as the employment center for completing job applications. It will be open Friday through Nov. 7.

"We are giving preference to those (qualified applicants) who are really in need of a job," Fair Personnel Director Thomas Tausig said. To insure equitable hiring, a special effort will be made to hire qualified handicapped persons and other employment minorities, he said.

The fair is scheduled to run Oct. 22 through Nov. 7

Group postpones Gammage plays

Young Americans' performances of "Music Man" and "Oklahoma," originally scheduled for Monday and today in Gammage Auditorium, have been rescheduled.

Both musicals will be performed May 8. Ticket holders may get refunds from the Gammage box office or use their same tickets for the May 8 performances.

The shows' producer said the Young Americans cast was not prepared to give the quality of performance he felt was necessary in Gammage.

Show times for the May 8 performances will be 3 p.m. for "Music Man" and 8 p.m. for "Oklahoma."

Woman strives to prove capability as store owner

By Kate Glassner

The owner and operator of Hill's Books and Records in Tempe Center says her major problem with business is that she hasn't been out of the kitchen long enough.

"I don't want to be put down because I'm a woman," said Bonnie Storm-Barlow, who acquired the store through a divorce from her husband in April. "I have three kids to support and I'm doing things my way."

The store has been advertised as a "woman owned, woman run" establishment because the owner says she wants to make the community aware that women can be competent business people.

"If I am standing behind the register with one of my male employes and a salesman comes in the store, he will ask if he can speak with the owner and will always direct his questions to the male. That burns me up," said Storm-Barlow.

When she took over the store from her husband in April, she took over the store's financial debts also.

"My husband had already established other means by which he could make a successful living, and I needed the business to support my family," Storm-Barlow said. "So I also acquired past debts."

The image of the store is not the only change being made. Storm-Barlow said she wants to return the business to a book store and get rid of the records. And she says she will not censor the materials the store sells.

"I won't censor girlie magazines and the like because of my own opinion, as long as it's legal," Storm-Barlow said. "I won't deal with pornography."

Hill's new image does not discriminate against men, she said. Eric Finn and his brother William Finn are employes at the store.

"I'm a feminist, not a women's libber, and in my opinion there is quite a difference," Storm-Barlow said.

A new and growing edition to the store is a feminist section, and the store also is a distributing point for Women's Rising, the Valley's first and only feminist paper.

Abolition of library grace period jostles few

By Diane Mason

Although Hayden Library's grace period for overdue books hasn't been in effect all semester, many students still are surprised when they are asked to pay fines for a three-day late book.

The three-day grace period was abolished to increase accessibility of books, said Helen Gater, associate University librarian. "In effect, it was simply extending the circulation period by three days," she said. Since the library is a single-copy collection, a shorter check-out period is needed to accommodate the students, she said.

The fine now is 25 cents for every day after due date (21 days after a book is checked out). However, a 10 per cent discount is given if fines are paid at the time overdue books are returned. The maximum fine is $10 plus replacement costs for any book not returned.

Gater said the old system was confusing. "If a person kept a book out more than three days, then they were fined for the first three days as well," she said.

The calculation of the due date also was changed. "In the past, weekends weren't counted but we do now count weekends," said Gater. So a book is due exactly 21 days after check-out.

David Braaten, Associated Students president, said he had heard nothing about the change in the library's grace period.

"We will have our Campus Affairs Committee check on that to see if we can change it back," said Braaten. "I think it's a very unfortunate move."

Officially, ASASU "doesn't have any say in it," said Braaten.

Gater said there have been few complaints. "The feedback I've received from the head of circulation is that they've received very little reaction from it at all," she said.

But some of the assistants working at the library check-out desk disagree.

Dave Tanner, a student who works at the desk, said 75 per cent of those who turn in books late complain about the abolishment of the grace period.

"I had some boy who came in the other day... and he was saying how lousy the library system was — especially the grace period," said Tanner. "He was using some pretty flowery language."

Lobos lead WAC; Utah gains ground

New Mexico took an early lead in the race for the WAC football crown Saturday by defeating Colorado State 33-20. Quarterback Noel Mazzone passed for one touchdown and ran for two others for the Lobos, who are 2-0 in the WAC. CSU is 0-2.

In another intraconference game, Utah collected its third victory in 26 games with a 38-14 decision over lowly UTEP. The Utes forced seven UTEP fumbles and scored 24 points in the second period to win in Salt Lake City.

BYU scored two field goals and a safety to squeeze by San Diego State, 8-0. It was the first time the Aztecs had been shut out since 1971.

The Arizona Wildcats defeated the Northwestern Wildcats 27-15. UA rolled up 483 yards in total offense to run its season record to 2-2.

sports shorts

FIVE ASU WOMEN GOLFERS will compete in the Tucker Invitational golf meet in Albuquerque. The Invitational in which the Devils finished third in 1975 opens Wednesday.

Fourteen former ASU women athletes are in the running for induction into the Arizona Sports Hall of Fame.

Judy Severance, Sue Kellogg, Carol Jurn, Jean Stephenson, Linda Ullon, Jane Bastanchurry, Carol Fleniken, Margie Law, Amy Peralta, Marilyn Rau, Jan Hawkins, Kendis Moore, Ann Scheer, and Pam Champagne hope to join the four ASU women who entered the hall as charter inductees in 1975.

Intramural team captures softball 'World Series'

"Whatever You Want" won the world series of over-the-line softball Thursday by defeating "Athletes Inc." two straight games.

The three-man team of Rick Taylor, Dave Tarrant and Rick McCutcheon of the ASU Intramural American League squeaked by Bob Santini, Rick Loesberg and Mike Feldman of the National League in the first game, 6-5.

The second game was a different story. Paced by Dave Tarrant's four home runs and a grand slam, Whatever-You-Want ripped Athletes Inc., 19-4 to sweep the series and the championship.

Contest winners announced

Once again the tie-breaker decided the winners for the State Press Pick 'Em Contest.

Michael Feeney, Shelly Reid, Jamie Lascari, and Ray Daniel, all missed one and a half games (UCLA-Ohio State was a tie).

Reid was the closest on the score of the Wyoming-ASU game, picking the Cowboys to win 21-10 (actual was 13-10). Feeney finished second and Daniel and Lascari tied for third.

ASU may have lost shot at WAC title

At the beginning of the season the Sun Devils were going to be national champions.

After Saturday's 13-10 loss to Wyoming, it looks like they might not even wind up as WAC champions.

The Devils put themselves in a hole to defend their conference title, by losing their WAC opener to the Cowboys in Laramie — before 25,406 people, the largest crowd to ever witness a sporting event in Wyoming (big deal).

The loss — which dropped ASU to 0-3 for the season (0-1 for conference play), and upped the Pokes' record to 3-1 for the year and 1-0 in WAC play — put the Devils two and one-half games behind league-leaders BYU and New Mexico (both 2-0 in the WAC).

The Devils had Saturday's contest almost wrapped up, leading 10-7, with 3:08 to go in the game, when Cowboy Bob Davis threw a halfback option pass to John Arnold, after suckering the Sun Devil secondary, for 64 yards and a touchdown.

The Devils had dominated most of the way, holding Wyoming's Wishbone offense to just 100 yards on the ground (due in part to the injury to Poke quarterback Don Clayton).

"If ASU had played this kind of defense its first two games, they wouldn't be 0-3," said Wyoming coach Fred Akers.

Even ASU head man

SPORTS

Frank Kush seemed pleased with the play of the defense.

"Our defensive line play was much improved," Kush said, "I thought Kit Lathrop, Bob Allison, Clifton Alapa and Willie Scroggins all played well and Al Harris played best of all. He makes things happen."

Unfortunately for the Devils, Alapa — who recovered two Poke fumbles — will be lost for at least one month because he cracked a bone in his left leg.

Kush didn't seem as happy with the offense, though.

ASU's Dennis Sproul connected on just 9 of 29 passes for 129 yards. But the Devils got a good running attack going — despite having Fast Freddie Williams sidelined by an ankle injury he suffered in the first quarter — mostly on the strength of Arthur "Turtle" Lane, who picked up 159 yards on 33 carries.

"What we did out there was an insult to the game of football," he said. "Wyoming deserved to win because they wanted it more than we did."
