ASASU seeks injunction to end athletic ID policy

Associated Students filed a court petition Wednesday requesting a permanent injunction to prohibit the athletic department from requiring athletic IDs.

Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Charles Hardy set a hearing date, Nov. 1, and ordered 13 University and Arizona Board of Regents defendants to appear. The petition requires the defendants to show cause why the injunction should not be granted.

The injunction, if granted, would restrain the athletic department from denying football tickets to students showing validated campus service cards.

It also would restrain the ASU administration from denying ASASU monies appropriated to it. The administration originally vetoed a $580 ASASU appropriation to fight the new ID in court.

The injunction would apply to all ASASU appropriations, not just the $580 allotted for legal fees.

Named as defendants are Dr. Fred Miller, athletic director; Terry Wojtulewicz, ticket manager; Dr. Leon Shell, dean of students; University President John Schwada and the regents.

The petition asks the defendants to show where they have authority to veto monies appropriated within ASASU guidelines and bylaws, and why the athletic department had power to issue new IDs without breaking the ticket contract.

The contract states that any changes must be made mutually between the two parties.

ASASU also wants a clarification on what portion of tuition fees paid to ASU become student activity fees.

"The administration tells us there is no student activity fee," said Pat O'Hara, ASASU student information officer. "They say it's all University monies."

O'Hara said, however, that $500,000 goes to the athletic department annually "in the guise of student activity fees."

ASASU filed the petition after finding a lawyer who would accept delayed payment. The students hired a Phoenix law firm, Finn, Finn and Finn to represent them.

O'Hara said if the case is won, the lawyer will be paid in full (with the money vetoed by the administration). If lost, ASASU will have to pay only court costs.

The filing fee was $30, raised in donations from students on the mall.

Athletic board tables provision for game seating

By Pat Denley

The University Athletic Board is seeking legal advice about court action on athletic IDs before it will discuss changes in student basketball seating.

Associated Students representatives wanted to amend their basketball-seating agreement with the athletic department.

But on Wednesday, ASASU filed a petition in Superior Court involving an agreement for football seating.

The board tabled discussion of changes in the basketball plan until it makes sure any action on that matter will not entangle the board in pending court action.

The petition asks for a permanent injunction preventing the athletic department from requiring use of athletic ID cards.

Student leaders object because provisions for the card are not included in a football seating agreement.

Fred Miller, athletic director, said requiring the cards was a managerial decision not needing ASASU approval.

After controversy arose over the IDs, athletic officials said arrangements for student season tickets were not included in the basketball seating agreement.

Officials also announced plans to charge $1 for student basketball tickets.

ASASU Activities Vice President Keith Leoffler wrote an amendment to the basketball agreement to implement student season tickets and eliminate the planned $1 charge.

Leoffler said the matter was tabled at the request of ASASU President Dave Braaten, who asked that the question be brought up again when legal questions are cleared.

The home basketball season starts the first week in December.

Leoffler said he thought the basketball matter could be resolved by then.

Long on students, short on funds

Business college in tight spot

By Nina Bondarook

The College of Business Administration has reached a financial crisis because of overcrowding and lack of funds for operational materials, Dr. William Huizingh, associate dean of the college, said Thursday.

"I think it's a very critical situation," Huizingh said. "It's quite clear financial allocations have not begun to keep pace with needs."

Huizingh said the college has been able to continue operations until now by "cutting costs wherever it does the least damage to the program." But he does not know how much longer that will be feasible.

Enrollment in the business college is more than 7,400, a 6.8 per cent increase over last year. The figure contrasts the drop in total ASU enrollment this year. The college is operating at 200 per cent capacity.

Although a faculty committee, which studied the overcrowded conditions last spring, recommended limiting enrollment, he said the measure will be taken only as a last resort.

"The philosophy of the faculty is we should serve as many students as possible," he said.

If an enrollment limit was to be used, it would be too hard to determine student-selection criteria, he added. "How do you do it? Do you take the first who enroll . . . or take the top students of the entire group according to G.P.A.?" he asked.

The student-faculty ratio is higher in the College of Business Administration than in any other college at ASU.

"The faculty continues to be dedicated," he said. "But I think there has to be some point where quality (of teaching) suffers due to overcrowding."

"Sixty classes are scattered in 10 different buildings around campus," he said. An ideal solution to problems would be to build additions onto the college, he said, but there is no money for the project.

In the news briefly

From the Associated Press

FORD CLEARED OF WRONGDOING

WASHINGTON — Special Watergate prosecutor Charles Ruff cleared President Ford Thursday of any wrongdoing in connection with campaign finances while he was in Congress.

DEAN NAMES 'DEEP THROAT'

NEW YORK — Former White House counsel John Dean concluded while in prison that "Deep Throat," the mysterious informer in the Washington Post's coverage of the Watergate scandal, was Nixon speechwriter David Gergen, the New York Post said Wednesday. The 34-year-old Gergen, now director of President Ford's White House Office of Communications, said, "there is not one scintilla of evidence that I had, or was in a position to have," the material Deep Throat gave to reporter Bob Woodward.

FBI INVESTIGATES HUNGERFORD

PHOENIX — The FBI is investigating Bob Hungerford, Republican candidate for Maricopa County attorney. Hungerford denies concealing assets in a bankruptcy, saying he bought a car for his client only after bankruptcy was filed.

POLICE CONTINUE BOLLES PROBE

PHOENIX — John Adamson, 32, who goes to trial Monday for the June 2 car-bomb murder of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles, may be only the first "domino," police say. "We're looking at other people," said detective Jon Sellers, who has handled the Phoenix police probe of the slaying.

SUIT FILED AGAINST TALENT AGENT

PHOENIX — Peoria rancher Stan Tanner has filed a $500,000 alienation-of-affection suit against Les Boros, a Phoenix talent-booking agent. Boros has accused Tanner of beating him in a Paradise Valley hotel room, after Boros allegedly was lured there by John Adamson. Adamson faces trial Monday for the June 2 car-bomb murder of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles.

SENATE CANDIDATES TRADE BARBS

PHOENIX — Rep. Sam Steiger, R-Ariz., charged his U.S. Senate opponent Dennis DeConcini with concealing a $5,000 labor contribution to Gov. Raul Castro's 1974 campaign. DeConcini called Steiger a liar and said, "It would be similar if I said he had something to do with fixing the case involving shooting the burros."

More about

Huizingh said if the University obtains funding for a proposed general classroom and office building — which ASU has indicated is its first financial priority — holding some classes there would help lessen overcrowding, but would create other problems.

"It's my opinion that the fragmentation of instructors and departments on campus is not desirable," he said. "When five from this college, and five faculty from that department, are sent to Siberia, I don't think it's satisfactory."

If changes are not made soon to ease financial problems, Huizingh said the college may be forced to solicit money from private sources off campus.

Actor-teacher to speak at Neeb Hall

Actor Guy Stockwell will speak at 1:40 p.m. Friday in Neeb Hall. Stockwell, former star of the television series, "Adventures in Paradise," has acted in several motion pictures, television shows and stage productions.

He now teaches classes in acting, theatre games, voice and diction for the Solari Theatre Ensemble in Beverly Hills, Calif.

More students attend UA, NAU

Rise in jobs blamed for enrollment decline

By Rhonda Prast

A drop in the number of ASU graduate students is due to an improved economy and increased competition from Arizona's other two universities, the dean of the graduate college said Thursday.

Dr. Charles Woolf said the decline has occurred in part-time, nonclassified graduate students who are working slowly toward degrees.

The number of graduates taking six credit hours or less has dropped by 2,408 since the fall semester of 1975. There are 7,067 graduate students now attending ASU.

Jobs before classes

"The students don't take classes when the economy is up," Woolf said. "If they have a job they'll concentrate on that and drop their classes."

Woolf said NAU and UA offer graduate and undergraduate classes in the Valley in an effort to increase their student population.

NAU offers more than 100 classes in Phoenix," Woolf said. "It increased its classes here this year because it has no room to grow in the Flagstaff area. This recent thrust has affected our enrollment."

ASU won't compete

Woolf said ASU does not offer any classes in the Tucson area unless UA does not specifically offer that class. "We try not to compete. I won't authorize a class in Tucson unless I know it's not being, or won't be offered by UA."

He said certain departments have raised requirements for accepting graduates, which may have added to the drop.

"The departments are trying to get the best students possible," Woolf said. "Because of a supply-and-demand problem in the job market they are trying to lower the number of students in the graduate programs."

Dr. Sheldon Simon, dean of the political science department, said that department's standards for entering graduate students have been raised over the past three years.

"We weed out the students who aren't prepared for graduate work," Simon said. "We also make sure the students have reasonably good grades on the graduate record examination."

Bill Fullerton, associate dean of the College of Education, said the college's graduate enrollment has dropped because of a new legislative mandate requiring teacher evaluations.

Evaluations affect enrollment

Because of the evaluations, teachers are concentrating on meeting the requirements rather than enrolling in graduate school.

"Our enrollment is down enough that it worries us," Fullerton said. "But we know the reasons and as soon as the evaluation is over they'll come back to school. We may even get people who were told to strengthen themselves in their areas as a result of the evaluation."

More money for research

Woolf said he would like to see the United States allocate more money for research and higher education to create more positions for college graduates.

"During the Nixon administration there was a cutback in federal spending on higher education," Woolf said. "This cutting back of funds affected our admission of graduates."

Streaking: Prof tells tale of nude runner; student carried away with idea

Editor:

I hope everyone noticed the moon was full last Thursday.

Maybe that explains what happened Friday in Dr. Richard Trelease's biology class.

It started when Dr. Trelease recalled an experience he had in a class about two years ago. Streaking was in vogue then.

He said that one day he overheard some students say somebody should pep up Trelease's lecture by streaking through the middle of class.

A six-pack of beer was offered. Dr. Trelease said he spoke up and said that whoever would do that should get a whole case.

About two weeks later, Dr. Trelease said, a guy was sitting in the front row with a camera in his lap. Dr. Trelease knew he wasn't a member of the class and wondered why he was there. He had a feeling something fishy was going on, but went ahead with his lecture—on enzymes.

About 15 minutes into the lecture, the door up front opened, Dr. Trelease said.

Out popped a naked man who bounced across the stage and out the door on the other side, with the photographer clicking away behind him!

Dr. Trelease's jaw dropped to the floor. When he regained his composure, he good-naturedly dismissed class.

He had last Friday's class rolling in laughter with the story. That's the best way to start any Friday class.

But then he went on with his lecture. Oddly enough, it was about enzymes.

Everything was fine until about 9:25 a.m.

Then, you guessed it, the door to the left of the blackboard opened, and out popped a naked man who ran across the stage and out the other door.

Needless to say, once again Dr. Trelease's lower jaw hit the floor.

He ended class by saying, "That'll teach me to never tell that story again!"

K. Carpenter

Thank you, thank you, thank you Dr. Hamm

An open letter—
Dear Dr. Hamm:

Thank you for attending the regents' hearing on the sale of alcohol on campus last Friday, and for waiting until the very end of the forum to set straight this campus' views on the matter.

Thank you for your loose, easy speaking style when you began systematically defusing student arguments which were pro the sale of alcohol on campus.

Thank you for the jokes you told as you discredited the two student-run polls taken during the last few years.

Thank you for praising your own poll and its statistical accuracy, while still, with characteristic integrity, questioning the degree to which we can rely on statistical accuracy.

Thank you for using the actual results of each poll in a manner which, though certainly a bit twisted, gave those present a clear picture of the true student view.

Thank you, Dr. Hamm, for making your own personal views on the sale of alcohol on campus understood, while somehow retaining the veil of neutrality which has always marked your office and your splendid career.

Thank you for showing us how the half-dozen or so volumes available to us all, and particularly the couple hundred page ASU study concerning the sale of alcohol on this campus, are really not sufficient evidence to warrant any decision on the matter at all.

Thank you for giving our friends the regents a way out of the pressure situation they faced, and for being instrumental in leaving the door open should the students want to reorganize in a couple of years and again push for the right to have a beer with a friend or prof in the MU.

But most of all, thank you for using your office, the much maligned office of the Vice President of student Affairs, to ram home the real student viewpoint.

Thank you, George Hamm, for using your special skills and talents to their fullest limit in your desire to help the student's plight on this campus.

Thank you again for hearing our calls from the darkness and for your compassionate representation of each and every student at ASU.

Sincerely,
Roger Wyer

This biker's solution is a little more reasonable

Editor:

In response to James H. McCutchan's claim to be "a reasonable man" (Oct. 13), I wish to take issue.

Mr. McCutchan can reasonably be expected to be disturbed by the many bikers that "take the best of both worlds."

However, I think he should also look at the other side of the coin.

By law, cyclists are not permitted to ride on sidewalks; and in areas provided with bike paths they are not permitted to use the streets.

Unfortunately, the bike paths are too narrow to accommodate all of the bicycle traffic in the area, and are so poorly surfaced that any cyclist using them is risking bodily injury and damage to his/her vehicle should he/she attempt to ride at a reasonable speed.

A second point is the problem concerning the pedestrian use of bike paths.

I prefer riding in the streets at normal traffic speeds and obeying traffic laws of stopping for pedestrians on the paths.

Unfortunately, the campus police don't well enforce regulations concerning pedestrian use of these paths.

Thank you, Mr. McCutchan, for being reasonable enough to allow me to "club" pedestrians; but I doubt that this solution would alleviate the program.

The paths would soon be littered with bodies of ex-pedestrians, and again I would be forced to take to the streets, risking citation for violation of traffic laws.

The only "reasonable" suggestion that I can come up with to solve the problems of both pedestrians and cyclists would cost the University some time, money, and planning. (The latter consideration may be the major drawback.)

1) Centralize locations of bike racks, so that most on-campus traffic is pedestrian.

2) Run constant surveillance of these parking areas to protect cyclists' property.

3) Strictly enforce all pedestrian and vehicular traffic laws on campus.

4) Maintain smooth, level bicycle paths as if they were for automobiles.

Surely, the large student body at this university is worthy of these few considerations.

Bruce R. Wilson

Maybe incorporation would teach ASASU

Editor:

I must disagree with Matthew Martin's conclusion that the ASASU incorporation scheme should be discarded.

If Braaten and Company succeed in establishing an organization separate from the University system which must be funded from outside sources, perhaps they will learn the value of a dollar.

Under the plan, monies expended for various projects would come from funds more difficult to obtain than simply voting to requisition them.

Student leaders may then begin to exhibit greater fiscal restraint and responsibility than was recently displayed by attempting to grant nearly $5,000 to fund the rather dubious activity of gay awareness week.

Mormon prejudice is appalling

Editor:

I recognize the right of anyone to voice his or her opinion on the issues as they see them.

Nevertheless, this does not detract from how appalled I was at the views and assumptions held by the Mormon Church and/or Mr. Steve Lee, presented in the State Press.

Just as women are taken care of by their husbands in the church, so are blacks looked out for by their white leaders, as I understand from Mr. Lee's statements.

And, according to Mr. Lee (though one might doubt that he has the data to back it up), black people are happy with this arrangement.

Reverberations of what is assumed to be a past era of a distant section of the U.S. come back to haunt us as we read that blacks "(do) not want the responsibility of receiving the priesthood in this life."

You've got your good ones and your bad ones, I hear; your good ones will receive their due in the next life.

We'll take care of all the difficult, mundane responsibility (and, incidentally, the power and the status that go with it) in this life.

You just be quiet and be a good black (we don't use the other word anymore); you'll get yours later.

How many times have we heard the "Let-them-stay-happy/don't-muddle-their-brains" theme?

How long is this going to keep a viable group of human beings in a different—and lower—place?

One must consider the political implications of the above claims and condescending attitude.

As in so many other places in this society, could this not be a mere justification of the situation, a conscience-easing explanation-after-the-rule for a belief that already existed?

This theme has been generalized to more than just religion.

I wonder how many people read this article and breathed a sigh of relief at the views expressed, whether or not they were Mormon.

I would venture to guess that the number who were disturbed by the article comprised a much smaller group.

Martha Bradley Rawls
Sociology

Closer look at Mormons proves no prejudice

Editor:

Much has been written about the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints (Mormons) with regards to the priesthood, and its stand concerning blacks.

There are some very important considerations that are usually left out, however, that leave the distinct impression that Mormon's are prejudiced. This is not the case.

It's important, first of all, to understand that color is not the criteria used to determine who will, or who will not hold the priesthood.

There are black bishops in San Francisco that I know of who are from the Sandwich Islands, and others from Australia. The determination is made, rather, on lineage.

Lineage is the all-important factor here, just as it has been with the Jews.

Anciently, Jews were required to know their genealogy (lineage) back to Abraham.

This is particularly evident in the long genealogies enumerated in the Bible.

Why were the Jews the "chosen people"? They were (and are) chosen because they had a special work to perform.

Does that make them superior to other humans? No.

Another aspect of the priesthood is timing.

From the dawn of civilization, certain lineages of people have had special functions to perform.

The Levites were set apart to tend the tabernacle, and later the temple.

When Christ was on the earth, he labored particularly among the Jews, and later, when the time was right, the apostles were sent to the Gentiles.

The time will come when all men may hold the priesthood, if they're worthy, but for now, some are not required to hold it, and those who do not are not penalized.

If they live worthily, they will obtain the same blessings and stature in God's kingdom as will any other — who lives as worthily.

To understand the priesthood, one must understand the purpose of life: where we come from, and why we are here.

The priesthood is not a paid position, one you qualify for with a seminary certificate or one that money can buy.

The most important thing is simply this; either God has restored His priesthood on earth with the saints, or He hasn't.

If He hasn't, then it doesn't matter who does or does not hold what isn't there.

But, if He has, (and He has!), then it would behoove those who laugh or scorn to study it out, and get with the program!

Porno star may face prison; says law threatens movies

By Dan Winkel

Porno star Harry Reems, "Deep Throat," said his prosecution on charges of conspiracy to transport obscene material rings of "McCarthyism."

Reems, speaking at a news conference in Scottsdale Thursday afternoon, said Memphis Assistant District Attorney Larry Parrish originally indicted Reems and costar Linda Lovelace.

Lovelace's name was subsequently dropped and only Reems went to trial on a second indictment. Reems said the ploy of naming Lovelace as a defendant, then granting her immunity from prosecution in order to turn state's evidence, was reminiscent of McCarthyism.

Reems was found guilty last April of the conspiracy charges and currently is waiting for sentencing. Reems said his sentencing will probably depend on the outcome of a similar conspiracy case now under consideration by the Supreme Court. Reems faces a maximum five years in prison and/or a $10,000 fine.

Reems said his prosecution in a federal court is a precedent in obscenity trials. Previous trials, Reems said, were always on a state level, as current obscenity statutes leave it up to the community to determine what is pornographic.

The conspiracy charge has been "stretched out to an arm's length," Reems said, and holds serious consequences for the movie industry if his conviction holds.

Reems said if his conviction is upheld, every artist can be held

Chance for new theatre slim, director predicts

By Gail Johnston and Diane Howell

The fate of ASU's aging Lyceum Theatre lies in the hands of the state legislature and the ASU administration.

But if past action on the matter is any indication, chances for replacing or improving ASU's crackerbox theatrical facility are slim.

"My feeling is the state of Arizona is basically anti-intellectual," said Dr. William Akins, director of the theatre department. He said if the proposed changes for the theatre are not approved by the legislature, no changes will be made.

Petition circulated

The Lyceum generated attention last year when members of the Players Club, a group of theatre students, collected 4,000 signatures on a petition stating the theatre was inadequate. It asked for campus and community support to replace the facility.

The petition was designed to show the administration the amount of student support for an improved facility, and to pressure the University into including a theatre plan among its top three priorities, Akins said.

The petition was presented to ASU President John Schwada, who was "most pleasant and congenial and understanding—and that was it," Akins said. "We've never heard another word—and frankly expect not to hear another word."

Bathroom denied

Requests to upgrade the building's wiring and to install a bathroom in the basement were rejected.

"It's not that people are blind to our problem of lack of facilities," Akins said. "But attitudes tend to shift down through the bureaucratic system and wind up getting lost. This department is sometimes nothing more than a grain of sand in the middle of the desert."

The theatre department is using other local stage facilities in addition to the Lyceum, which Akins said is a way of publicizing the "Lyceum predicament."

Built as boiler room

The Lyceum, built in the 1930s as part of the Works Progress Administration, was originally a boiler room. It was converted into a theatre in 1962. It has a seating capacity of 170, limited dressing room and stage arrangements and generally is in a state of disrepair.

"We have become political pawns. The deck is very much stacked against us," Akins said. "Everybody needs and demands money, but the leadership of ASU doesn't care," he said.

Solar industry in Arizona to expand, Fannin predicts

A sizeable solar energy industry may develop in Arizona despite several barriers hampering that effort, Sen. Paul Fannin, R-Ariz., said.

Solar energy development is being held up by economic, legal, sociological and technological problems, Fannin said in a recent article in Arizona Business, published by the ASU Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

But he cited projections of a multibillion-dollar industry by 1980, and was optimistic about the prospect of a pilot solar power plant in Arizona.

"While solar energy devices can save money over a long period, their initial cost is appreciably higher than that of conventional equipment," he said. "This economic hurdle will require education of consumers as well as money-lending agencies."

Legal barriers involve an endless stream of local, state and federal agency regulations that require hearings, he said.

"A viable solar industry is of vital importance, but may well require assistance in the form of tax incentives, loans or other help," Fannin said.

The Arizona Solar Energy Research Commission is working with the U.S. government to develop a solar pump that can serve as an irrigation source, as conventional fuel and power sources dwindle, Fannin said.

"And, a 10-megawatt solar electric plant which will generate enough electricity for several thousand homes is scheduled for completion in 1980."

He added Arizona's Solar Energy Research Commission and the state's three major utilities are aggressively working to have that solar pilot plant built in Arizona. The facility will be located somewhere in the Southwest to take advantage of the high solar radiation.

Ford, Carter pro

This is the second in a continuing series of articles by a nonpartisan political group, Common Sense, on the views of President Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Ford

Crime prevention

Ford pins his hope of crime prevention on the example of "positive, swift and just punishment." He believes "certainty of punishment prevents crime."

Ford favors mandatory minimum sentences in crimes involving handguns, in serious crimes like drug trafficking, kidnapping, hijacking, and for repeat offenders who commit violent crimes.

Ford favors the death penalty for the crimes of sabotage, espionage, treason and murder.

Gun control

Ford is "unalterably opposed to the registration of gun owners and the registration of guns." He favors prohibition on the manufacture or sale of Saturday night specials.

Ford proposes mandatory sentences for offenses involving use of a handgun, banning the import and sale of cheap handguns, strengthening current laws regarding the sale of handguns (no specific measures named) and increasing the number of federal firearms investigators.

Drugs

Ford has sent to Congress a mandatory sentencing bill for narcotics dealers. Under this bill, sentences are three years for the first offense and six for the second, with no parole permitted.

Abortion

Ford opposes abortion "on demand" but believes it is justified in cases of rape or whether the life of the woman is at stake. Ford said he would uphold the law as interpreted by the Supreme Court.

He also said he favored a constitutional amendment leaving to the states the task of redefining limits on abortion.

Profile the issues

A continuing series, compiled by the group, Common Cause, contrasting Ford and Jimmy Carter.

Carter

Crime prevention

"I honestly believe . . . that one of the best ways to cut down on crime is to cut down on unemployment . . . Your own son, if out in the street and unable to find work, might turn to crime.

"The federal government can provide a model for the states by revising our system of sentencing, eliminating much of the discretion given to judges and probation officers, insuring greater certainty in sentencing and confinement and insuring a higher percentage of serious criminals being imprisoned.

"We should upgrade the rehabilitation programs available to criminals while in prison."

Gun control

Carter favors registration of hand guns, banning of "Saturday night specials" and prohibition of gun ownership by anyone convicted of a crime involving a gun and by those not mentally competent. He opposes other restrictions on manufacture and possession.

Drugs

"I support stiff penalties for drug pushers and expanded rehabilitation programs for drug addicts.

Carter would impose criminal sentences only on large traffickers in marijuana, not on the occasional user. Carter said any change in marijuana laws should be done by the states; the federal government should stay out of the matter.

Abortion

"I think abortion is wrong. I don't think government should do anything to encourage abortion. I think abortion is the result of a failure of measures designed to prevent unwanted pregnancies and to induce the mother to carry the unwanted child through to delivery. I think we ought to do everything to have better education, family planning and contraceptives, if desired.

"I don't favor a constitutional amendment to give to the states local option on the abortion issue. If, within the confines of the Supreme Court ruling, we could work out legislation with better family planning and adoption procedures, then I would favor it. I don't have any particular law to put forward."

ASU economists approve of Friedman's Nobel Prize

By Kate Glassner

Milton Friedman, dean of American conservative economists, was awarded the 1976 Nobel Prize in economics by the Swedish Royal Academy of Sciences Thursday.

ASU economists generally were pleased by the choice. "I think the award was long overdue," said Dr. Mike Duffy, a former student of Friedman's at the University of Chicago. "Even though Friedman's policies are not always bought, he deserves the award because he is a vigorous and excellent scientist."

Friedman's award reportedly followed a heated debate among Academy members concerned with his political activity, while some felt his economic theories were unscientific.

Friedman was honored for his achievements in three fields of economics: consumption analysis, monetary history and theory and stabilization policy.

Friedman's monetary policy is a controversial subject among ASU economists and other professionals in the field.

He believes that money is the important mechanism in determining the level of economic activity, ASU economists said. But most of them don't agree that money is the most important factor.

"I don't agree with his monetary policy and I think most economists feel the same way," said Dr. Richard Winkelman, professor of economics at ASU.

"Many economists oppose Friedman's monetary policy in that the level of demand should also be important in determining economic activity," Winkelman said.

Another professor, Dr. James Chalmers, said, "Friedman treats monetary policy in a tight and mechanical way which is not the best way in my opinion. He doesn't dig into the behavioral relationship, which is also important."

Friedman has generated controversy among ASU economists but most agree his differences have advanced the discipline of economics as a science.

"I certainly don't agree with all his philosophies, but that's not important to the value of his recognition," Dr. Paul Burgess said.

"I think Friedman was the best possible choice," said Dr. Ryan Amacher, associate professor of economics at ASU.

China arrests called possible power play

The reported arrest of Mao Tse-tung's widow and three Chinese Communist party leftist leaders apparently was an attempt by moderates to consolidate their position in the government, said an ASU China expert.

Dr. Yung-Hwan Jo, director of the Center for Asian Studies, said if the report is true, Mao's widow Chiang Ching and the others probably are under house arrest.

"They are likely to be deprived of their political power," he said. "I don't believe the Chinese leaders would physically harm such a well-known person as Chiang Ching."

Premier Hua Kuo-feng, who succeeded Mao as party chairman and commander-in-chief of China's armed forces, appears to be aligned with Communist party moderates.

"When I was in Taiwan this summer, I disagreed with political scientists there who said Hua was a key figure of the radical left," Jo said. "I said at that time Hua could be moderate despite his dedication and loyalty to Mao, because of his record as a good administrator."

The ASU political scientist said China's greatest concern now focuses on the problem of how to govern.

"Hua represents the governing elite," he said. "Although not charismatic like Mao, he is the type of leader China needs to reap the fruits of the revolution."

Jo added Hua's two and a half years as China's security minister gave him access to much confidential data. He was, in effect, the head of China's FBI and would know if Chiang Ching and other leftists had been planning a coup.

"Mao's widow, a former movie actress, was unpopular from the start," he said. "Many influential party members did not approve

Castro address on Latin affairs scheduled here

Gov. Raul Castro is scheduled to address the 22nd annual Pacific Coast Council on Latin American Studies which will be held in the MU Oct. 21-23.

Topics at the meeting will include "The Panama Canal Question," "Women in Latin America" and "Spanish Arizona's Role in the American Revolution." The theme of the conference is "Revolution in the Americas, 1776-1976."

The meeting is cosponsored by ASU's Center for Latin American Studies and the American Graduate School of International Management in Glendale.

Castro will speak at 12:30 p.m. Saturday. He is expected to discuss U.S.-Latin American relations, with particular emphasis on Mexico.

of the marriage. It is possible she wanted to grab some power before Mao's influence diminished."

Jo said if the Chinese moderates consolidate their power, the diplomacy pursued by the late Chou En-lai and former president Richard Nixon will continue with no significant change in U.S.-Chinese relations.

"It will be interesting to see whether the new Chinese leaders favor Ford or Carter," he said. "There is no question that Mao favored Nixon over McGovern. If Hua follows Mao's tendency, he likely will favor foreign conservative leaders in view of their anti-Soviet stand."

Jo said it is important that any instability in China's top governmental circles not spill over into the public sector. If it should, economic chaos would result, which would cripple the country. However, Jo does not believe it is likely to happen.

Jo said China's leaders want to avoid factional struggles.

"For one thing, Mao's death left a large vacuum, and he was not the only Chinese leader to die this year," he said. "The deaths of Chou En-lai and Chu Te, China's most famous, modern military leader, were major losses."

The influence of Chinese folklore also is a factor to be considered when discussing China, Jo said. It holds that a dynastic change occurs about every 30 years, and people who are superstitious believe the deaths of important men and catastrophic physical happenings signal the end of a dynasty. China not only lost important leaders this year, but experienced great earthquakes as well.

Jo also commented on a rumor originating in Taiwan regarding China's new leader.

"Mao had three sons. One was killed in Korea, another had mental or physical problems and was institutionalized and the third disappeared," he said. "Rumors from Taiwan indicate that some Chinese Communist officials believe that Hua is Mao's third son."

responsible for his future work.
An example offered by Reems was if someone wrote an article in Playboy magazine, and the magazine was then deemed obscene in a small town, the author of the article would be guilty under conspiracy statutes.

"It is the most dangerous statute (conspiracy) on the federal books," Reems said. "It is a catchall ploy by the federal government."

There were over 100 unindicted coconspirators in his case, Reems said. They included every actor in the film; cameramen; lab technicians who developed the film; the Memphis newspapers which ran advertisements for the film; and even owners of a motel where the cast and crew of "Deep Throat" stayed.

Reems also said anyone who has ever seen "Deep Throat" could conceivably be indicted under conspiracy laws.

Reems faces the exact charge in another case being prosecuted by Parrish for his appearance in "The Devil and Miss Jones." He said he has spent almost $50,000 so far and will need another $120,000 to provide an adequate defense.

Reems currently is touring the country to raise money for the Harry Reems Legal Defense Fund, Suite 1030, 120th E. 56th St., New York, New York, 10022.

Devils still have chance at title; must top UTEP

Frank Kush scowls from the sidelines as time runs out on his Devils during their 14-0 loss to Cincinnati last weekend. Son Dan Kush [14] doesn't look too happy either. The Devils will be trying to pick up their first win of the season when they play UTEP in El Paso Saturday afternoon.

By George H. McCaskey

There's bad news and good news for the ASU football team this week.

The bad news is, of course, not really news. The Sun Devils, at 0-4, are off to their worst start in 34 years.

The good news is—they play UTEP tomorrow night in El Paso.

Saying UTEP is a bad football team is like saying pretty girls walk on the malls of the ASU campus. It's obvious.

The Miners surprised themselves in their opening game by beating Texas-Arlington. Since then they've reverted to their old form, dropping four straight games.

Last week against Arizona they put up a gallant fight in the pregame coin-tossing ceremony. Then the Miners suddenly lost their momentum and fell 63-12.

In winning their opening game this season, UTEP has already equaled their entire production of wins from last year, when they finished at 1-10. They're setting a torrid pace this season trying to match last season's record. At 1-4, they're about halfway there, and the Miners are counting on a defeat from ASU to help them along.

ASU, bruised, battered and bewildered after four straight losses, will be happy to oblige.

There's more bad news for the Devils, however. Freshman Arthur "Turtle" Lane stretched ligaments in his knee during Wednesday's practice and will be out for three weeks. Fullback Ronnie Bonner also has knee problems and will not play against the Miners.

Those injuries leave ASU critically short in an area which has caused concern all season. Freddie Williams, who did not play against Cincinnati because of a sprained ankle, should return to his fullback spot against UTEP.

There's more good news though. The play of the defense has improved steadily since the season opener. In the past two games the Devil defense has allowed only 27 points.

"We've made an astounding amount of progress on defense," said ASU Head Coach Frank Kush. "They're playing with intensity, and I don't believe we'll have major problems in that area the remainder of the year."

Much of what happens from now on will depend on Saturday's WAC game with UTEP. The Devils are only 0-1 in the WAC and still in the thick of things, but a loss to the Miners could ruin Kush's hopes for a team revival.

"We're not out of the WAC race," said Kush. "Several teams have to be favored over us, so the only thing we can do is start winning, keep winning and hope for the best."

State Press Pick 'em Contest

Put an "X" by the team you think will win. If you think there will be a tie, put an "X" by both teams.

Clip the entry blank out of the paper and bring it to Stauffer Hall, room 137. Deadline for entries is 4:00 p.m. Friday.

Winners will be announced in Tuesday's edition. Prizes must be claimed at the State Press office by noon Wednesday.

Laramie tilt to determine WAC leader

The New Mexico Lobos, WAC leaders in total offense, travel to Laramie Saturday to play the tough Wyoming Cowboys. The game is a battle of WAC unbeatens, as both teams are 2-0 in conference play.

The New Mexico offense has relied on a strong running game on the way to an average of 392 yards a game. Wyoming is second in the WAC in rushing defense and leads the conference in scoring defense.

☆The other conference unbeaten, Utah (1-0), plays Utah State in a non-conference game.

Brigham Young hosts Southern Mississippi, proud owner of a 0-5 record, at Salt Lake City. The Cougars suffered their only WAC loss last weekend against Wyoming.

Arizona is idle this weekend. The Wildcats are resting up from last week's game when they walloped the hapless UTEP Miners 63-12.

Colorado State, WAC leader in team defense, travels south to take on Air Force. Both teams are 2-3.

Tryouts start for basketball

Tryouts for men's junior varsity basketball will be Oct. 18-22 from 6-8 p.m. in the ASU Activity Center. Students taking 12 or more hours are eligible. Anyone interested should bring his own equipment.

The Quidnunc

Answers to Wednesday's questions—

No. 1 New Mexico was the first football team to ever fly to a game. They did it in 1927.

No. 2 ASU was only able to get 12 total yards offense in a game against Arizona in 1946.

Bio-Rhythms

Ever Notice That Your Life Seems To Go In Cycles?

Scientists have found psychological and biological cycles in the human body. Now, an easy technique can help you adapt to YOUR BIO-RHYTHMS.

German scientists discovered three cycles which start at birth — physical, emotional, mental. Each cycle goes through periods of high (active) and low (recuperating) energy. The switching days between are called critical. These "out of touch" days may cause accidents or a variety of other problems. Indeed, the "trauma of birth" creates a triple critical day.

Major Organizations such as airlines, hospitals and police are now using Bio-Rhythms. Why... To help people understand daily changes, especially during vulnerable periods. Examples of research conducted by organizations.

- Safety consultant firm found 70% of industrial accidents occur on employee's critical day.
- Aviation Safety Center reported 80% of private plane accidents occur on critical day of pilot.
- Bio-Rhythm research found critical days significant in study of 2100 auto accidents.

Although accidents can be reduced using Bio-Rhythms, the major purpose is to help you perceive and adjust to your changing nature. If you get along better with yourself, you'll be more compatible with others. People often use Bio-Rhythms to understand compatibilities.

OUR SERVICE INCLUDES:

- Attractive, easy-to-read calendar of your cycles. (13 mos.)
- Complete description of Bio-Rhythms.
- Critical days and composite cycle for each month.
- Discounts for distributors of 10 or more or to organizations.

Wulk scores big in postseason recruiting wars

By Tom Gibbons

The Devil basketball team's 16-11 record last year kept it out of any postseason play for the first time in four years.

However, ASU Head Basketball Coach Ned Wulk and his staff still scored some important postseason victories in the biggest game of all — the recruiting war.

"We think we had an excellent recruiting year," said Wulk. "Of course it's hard to tell, but we tend to judge recruiting on the players' credentials, and they all are excellent."

Indeed they are, with three of the recruits making all-state teams and two winning national honors last season. They include:

—Blake Taylor, from Santa Ana Junior College. Taylor was all-juco player in his one and only year there.

—Matt Barney of Safford. The 6-foot-5 forward was the outstanding high school hoopster in Arizona last season.

—Curt Niemphus, the outstanding prep basketball player of the year in Wisconsin last year. The 6-foot-10 center played for the state champs from South Milwaukee.

—Nayron Monk, from Detroit. The 6-foot-1 guard averaged more than 20 rebounds a game and was all-state in Michigan.

—Johnny Nash, a 6-foot-5 forward from Long Beach, who made first team in Parade Magazine's All-America team.

The Devils also have one other newcomer... who's been around for a year. Mark Lansbarger, a forward, transferred here last year from Minnesota and sat out the season. Lansbarger made all but the last cut for the U.S. Olympic basketball team. (He was 13th on a 12-man squad).

With six newcomers, Wulk's main concern is getting them to play together with returning starter guard/forward James "Silky" Holliman, guard Rick Taylor and two sophomores who played with the varsity last year — guard Dereck Davis and center Tony Zeno.

Women to begin conference play for volleyball title

ASU's women's varsity volleyball team begins conference play this weekend. The Sun Devils face Colorado State in the opening match Friday night in Ft. Collins.

The team will continue on the road Saturday to Greeley, Colo., where it will play Northern Colorado and Wyoming.

"Judging by these teams' past records, we should win all three matches, or at least two out of three," said coach Mary Littlewood.

"We have the potential to be strong and stand our own with the strongest teams in the conference," said Littlewood. "BYU, UA, Utah State and the University of Utah will be the toughest teams in the conference. BYU is strongest in the region and will probably be a national contender."

"We're competitive and have the ability. How we do will depend on how well the girls keep their cool under pressure. The more experience a team has, the better they keep cool, and we are an inexperienced team," she said.

Official practice was allowed by the NCAA to begin today, but the Devils will have to wait until Saturday because of the Eagles' concert tonight in the University Activity Center.

The Sun Devils open the season a week early this year. They meet the Yugoslavian national team, Olympic silver medalist winners, on Nov. 24 in the Activity Center. They travel to Tucson Nov. 26 (the night before the ASU-UA football game) to play Arizona in a nonconference game.

The UA game is a new tradition, to start this year, for the two basketball teams to play at the site of the football game on the eve of the annual grid clash.

"It's a tough way to open the season," said Wulk. "And we'd prefer to play a smaller school, as we have in the past. It's tough to prepare for the opener, and UA and Yugoslavia both are excellent teams. Arizona lost a couple key people, but they'll probably be picked as conference favorites."

It's also been proven here in other sports recently that a tough opener can ruin a season.

Possible upset*

Girls' soccer wins 1, loses 1

The ASU women's soccer team won the first match it ever played, defeating New Mexico 1-0 in Albuquerque last weekend.

But the Devils lost a second match to the Lobos 3-1.

Laura Chance scored ASU's goal in the first game, and Adell Sevcik got the only ASU goal in the second match.
