Contract change requested

Political science approves chair

By Chet Barfield

After months of controversy, ASU's political science department passed a resolution endorsing the Barry Goldwater Chair of American Institutions, but asking for a renegotiation of terms of the contract.

Funded by a $750,000 trust in the name of the Arizona senator, the University's first fully-endowed chair is designed to bring distinguished scholars to ASU.

Debate within the department has focused on one provision of the contract which gives trustees who control the funds a role in the selection of nominees for the chair.

Trustees Robert Goldwater, Harry Rosenzweig and Dean Burch included a clause in the contract, which University President John Schwada signed in May, that allows them seats on a seven-member selection committee.

The other four committee members include Schwada and three faculty members.

Sheldon Simon, chairman of the department, said he has discussed the new resolution with Schwada.

"I have talked to the president and will talk to him again," he said.

Schwada said Monday he is listening to the grievances the political science department has concerning the chair, but was reluctant to speculate whether he would push for changes in terms of the agreement.

"I think the Goldwater chair is an important development for this University, and I don't see any problems with it," he said. "We'll continue to discuss it."

The resolution "urges both the donors and the University to renegotiate the contract so that the selection process operates in accordance with normal University procedures which place the determination of faculty appointments solely in the hands of University faculty on the basis of outstanding scholarly achievement."

Dr. Mark Reader, who drafted a resolution in August that the department disassociate itself from the chair on the grounds that it threatened academic freedom, was reluctant to comment about the new resolution.

"We're waiting to see what happens," he said.

At least one-third of the 27 faculty members in the department oppose the terms of the contract of the chair, especially the one which gives the trustees a voice on the selection committee.

"I think the president is aware there's a lot of us down here who don't like it," said Bruce Bowen, an assistant political science professor who had supported disassociation.

Roger Coate, an assistant political science professor who seconded Reader's August proposal, said he sent out letters to professors at other universities and officers of the American Political Science Association asking whether they believed the present terms of the chair were objectionable in their opinion.

Coate said he received scores of responses, most of which were negative.

"The results show an overwhelming sense of general opposition," he said.

"Here you have a chair that is supposed to represent the American system, and at the same time undermines academic freedom. It's totally inconsistent," Coate said.

Bowen said the trustees are out of line to involve themselves with the selection of a scholar.

"It's like having your mother-in-law give you money for Christmas, then telling you how to spend it, then saying she doesn't like the color of the shirt you bought," he said.

Elijah Kaminsky, a political science professor, was one of three professors who submitted a counter-proposal to Reader's in September.

Kaminsky's resolution said basically the same thing as last week's: an endorsement of the chair itself, but a dislike of being told how it should be administered.

Kaminsky said the department voted not to disassociate itself from the chair because a majority of the faculty did not want to create a "bad situation."

He said the department will have no role in implementing improvements in the contract if it disassociates itself.

Besides, Kaminsky said, the problems inherent in the agreement may work themselves out with time.

"Maybe after two or three years when on the one hand the trustees see that wild people are not selected, and on the other hand the faculty sees that responsible people are selected, the atmosphere might improve," he said.

ADAMSON BOOK FOUND

PHOENIX — A small black book dug out of a second-hand sofa may provide important new clues to the 1976 car-bomb slaying of newspaper reporter Don Bolles, a police detective said Monday. Phoenix police detective Jon Sellers said the book, with names and phone numbers, definitely "corroborates quite a bit" of testimony given so far in the case by confessed slayer John Harvey Adamson. Sellers said Adamson, 33, identified the book as his last week.

PNEUMONIA VACCINE OK'd

WASHINGTON — The Food and Drug Administration approved a vaccine Monday that scientists say can prevent most cases of pneumococcal pneumonia, which kills thousands of Americans each year. The vaccine, called Pneumovax, will be available Feb. 1.

SS BILL BLOCKED

WASHINGTON — A globe-trotting congressman is delaying final action on major Social Security legislation, a bill that both President Carter and Capitol Hill leaders want passed this year. Responsible for the delay is Rep. William Ketchum, R-Calif., who has blocked until at least Nov. 29 House-Senate conference committee sessions. Ketchum, now on a taxpayer-financed, 17-day trip to eight African and Middle Eastern nations, was unavailable for comment. A spokeswoman for Ketchum said he blocked conference committee action because he wanted to serve on the panel.

SPENDING LIMITS DISCUSSED

DENVER — Political conservatives in Colorado and at least a dozen other states quietly are organizing a campaign to impose limits on state and local government spending through state constitutional amendments. The campaign is being spearheaded by a group called the National Tax Limitation Committee, headquartered in Loomis, Calif., and operating an East Coast office in Briarcliff, N.Y., whose goal is to amend the constitution in every state.

HONEYMOON PLANE CRASHES

BARILOCHE, Argentina — A chartered Argentine jetliner carrying honeymooning couples and other vacationers to this lake and ski resort crashed during foul weather early Monday. Austral Airline officials said there were some survivors among the 79 persons aboard. The national Noticias Argentinas and Telam news agencies reported there were at least 40 survivors among the 74 passengers and five crew members.

STRIKE PLAN CONSIDERED

PHOENIX — The Amalgamated Transit Union was scheduled to present a counter-proposal to Greyhound Lines negotiators Monday as the two sides worked to prevent a Thanksgiving holiday strike. Owen Jones, president of the union's Greyhound Council, said in a telegram to union local presidents Monday a proposal presented by Greyhound at the end of Sunday's negotiations was unacceptable. But Jones said the offer did show some movement.

SULFUR RULES TABLED

SANTA FE, N.M. — The state Environmental Improvement Board postponed action Monday on particulate and sulfur dioxide regulations covering the Four Corners Power Plant. The board will continue hearings in Albuquerque through Tuesday as a continuation of hearings held in Farmington in August.

SADAT CALLED 'ENEMY'

BEIRUT, Lebanon — Palestinian guerrillas and leftist-governed Arab nations called Egyptian President Anwar Sadat as great an enemy as Israel and stepped up appeals Monday for his overthrow. The Sadat opponents, who had already vowed publicly to assassinate him, took particular objection to his declaration in Jerusalem that the 1973 war was Egypt's last with the Jewish state.

Changes needed, ASASU says

ASU government unresponsive

By Lori Rabinowitz

The present Associated Students First Council system is unrepresentative and unresponsive to student needs, said Mike Tansy, ASASU Campus Affairs vice president.

Under the present system, two representatives from each college, Tansy, ASASU Executive Vice President Dave Crowley and ASASU Activities Vice President Ellie Glazer compose the First Council.

"More than 50 percent of the students at ASU fail to be represented under our present form of government. The First Council representatives from the college councils are hand-picked and are not voted upon by the students in the colleges," Tansy said.

Tansy and Crowley will present disputes of the First Council as a representative form of government to the ASASU Disputes Board on Dec. 1.

The disputes board is the judiciary branch of ASASU composed of five students and it will come up with alternatives to the present system, said Monty Dill, disputes board chairman.

"We are looking for four alternatives, two of which will exclude the college councils from the official decision-making role of ASASU and two which will include the college councils," Crowley said.

The alternatives will be voted on during a First Council meeting during December, Crowley said.

"Tansy and I will present the alternatives to the First Council as part of our complete rewrite of the constitution," he said.

The First Council is the legislative branch of ASASU and it is responsible for setting bylaws and policies. In addition, it determines the budget before it is sent to the office of student affairs.

Crowley and Tansy originally submitted the dispute to the disputes Board on Nov. 9 but later withdrew it on Nov. 15 because College Council representatives said they had insufficient time to prepare a statement on their behalf.

Students who wish to participate in government on the college council level are unable to do so because of the sporadic meetings of the councils, Tansy said.

"The problem is there is little grass root representation on the college level. We are not trying to smear the college council members but we are trying to come up with an alternative form of government that would represent the majority of the students," he added.

Crowley said only four of the ten college councils regularly meet once a month as stated by the ASASU bylaws. They are Colleges of Architecture, Business, Law and Engineering.

However, there are no provisions in the present bylaws which require that they meet, Tansy said.

"Many students are not even aware that the college councils exist or what their functions are. These councils are basically arbitrary because they hardly ever meet, and do not serve any purposes," he said.

The First Council system of government has been in existence since the 1975-76 academic year and was originally formed in an attempt to have better representation of the students, Crowley said.

"The First Council system was created because the Senate system which was in existence from 1953 through 1975 was not effective. This system had representatives from the colleges apportioned by population," he said.

"However, investigations of college councils' reports presented to the First Council have shown that this system is not working effectively," he added.

"The smaller colleges have the potential for working very well but the larger colleges do not have anything to bind them together in a cohesive unit," Crowley said.

Crowley and Tansy are disputing the First Council as a result of a request by University President Schwada that the ASASU review itself.

Opinion

There's no reason why a woman shouldn't be in the White House. But she'll be sorry when she gets there. —Harry Truman

"We have had enough — four wars in 30 years." Egyptian President Anwar Sadat.

For his courageous efforts to heal the Arab-Israeli conflict, Sadat has been threatened by Syrians with death for treason, his countrymen have been urged to overthrow him and an Egyptian airline office in Jordan was bombed.

Arabs less violent in their hatred of Israel have applauded Sadat's visit for what it was — the single, most important development in Middle East relations.

The conflict, in recent years, has seemed to be a battle of pride rather than of issues. The Arabs, badly defeated in wartime, but greatly outnumbering the Israelis, have vowed never to accept the existence of a Jewish state in their backyard.

The Israelis, clannish and cocky from lightning victories against outgunned opponents, swore to continue the fight and eradicate all Arabs in their way.

"Let us raise two slogans — no war and security."

The answer for a long time clearly has been to call an end to this macho chauvinism and for each side to give an inch or two.

But until Sadat admitted to Walter Cronkite that he would travel to Israel if invited, no one in the front lines of this centuries-old gang war would be so humble as to agree to swallow a little pride in the interests of developing a workable peace.

Sadat has been a colorful, animated face in the news for years. But the events of the past week have shown a new side to the previously sour-looking Menachem Begin, prime minister of Israel.

Begin greeted Sadat warmly and they said they found a sense of humor in the other fellow. That may not seem like a significant step forward, but it probably will prove to be one.

For it seems that the leaders of Egypt and Israel have stepped out from behind their official masks and begun to look at each other as fellow human beings. That is a long way from a declaration of brotherhood and undying love, but it is an irreversible step.

Henry Kissinger (you know him, he used to have some government job but now he's a hot-shot NBC-TV analyst) made a wise observation. He said this whole new tack in Middle East affairs will mean nothing unless the two leaders gave each other their phone numbers and promised, like new lovers, to remain in touch.

They didn't have to pledge a reunion in some romantic place, say, Geneva, but they certainly needed to have another date and maybe set up blind dates between some of the less glamorous members of their respective governments.

Kissinger wisely noted that Sadat's visit was purely symbolic and he couldn't be expected to get down on his knees in the Israeli parliament and beg for peace.

"No war. Let every girl, every woman, every mother here and in my country, know that we shall solve all our problems through negotiations around the table rather than start wars."

Sadat and Begin have committed themselves and their nations to proceed to a Geneva conference. But there remain many hurdles and possible disruptions that can occur in an area as volatile as the Middle East.

For one thing, Sadat only committed his nation, Egypt, to seeking peace. There are other Arab nations, some that border Israel, that have declared reconciliation between Jews and Arabs to be impossible.

For Sadat's visit to become, in reality, more than a grand gesture, he must do some down-to-earth jawing with other Arab leaders and convince them, by whatever means necessary, to go along on the ride to Geneva.

The militant anti-Arab factions in Israel and in the United States are going to have to keep their hands out of the delicate, but promising relationship.

It seems at last the Middle East has been blessed with having two reasonable leaders dedicated to solving what has seemed to be an insoluble problem.

They will succeed is other don't jump in and screw it up.

ASU unlawfully denying residency, attorney says

By Mary Connell

ASU is denying cheaper in-state tuition status unlawfully to some students, a Phoenix attorney said Monday.

"The way the situation is handled is not always within the law," said Bruce Feder.

Guidelines established by the Arizona Board of Regents to determine whether a student intends to stay here are reasonable. But, they aren't stringently applied in all cases, Feder said.

"The situation surrounding denial (of in-state fee status) is very hazy," he added.

Feder refused further comment because of a pending lawsuit.

Feder represented an ASU sophomore before the University fee status appeals board earlier this month. The case was rejected.

Feder's brother Harold, also an attorney, has challenged the methods used by ASU in determining fee status a number of times over the past five years.

"I've represented ASU students in lawsuits on these charges," Harold Feder said. "I lost the first case."

"But on two others the University settled out of court, and my clients were granted residency (tuition status)," he said.

"I also know of another attorney who has a case before Superior Court," he added.

Terry Tobey, ASU fee status officer, said the criteria established by the regents are applied stringently.

"The burden of proof (of intent to remain in Arizona) is on the student," Tobey said.

"They have to show a number of evidences, such as registering a car in Arizona. If a student doesn't have a car, that's too bad — it's up to them to come up with the evidences."

"Sometimes it's kind of rough on them," Tobey added.

To be granted in-state tuition status — which saves a student about $600 per semester in tuition — proof of living in Arizona for a year must be made.

Other evidence includes state income tax returns, voter registration, Arizona drivers license, proof of a full-time job, or ownership of property in the state.

An in-state student pays $225 a semester for registration fees, whereas an out-of-state student is charged $820 a semester.

About 58 percent of those who apply for in-state tuition status succeed, Tobey said. Almost 2,500 students a year file for the less-expensive fee status.

"Each student submits a file, and based on evidence, we make a decision," Tobey said.

"It's not all clear-cut," he added.

About half of Tobey's decisions are appealed and 50 percent of these are overruled by the fee-status appeals board. Out of 306 students denied the cheaper tuition last spring, 140 appealed, Tobey said. About 73 of these were granted in-state fee status.

"We're more lenient than Tobey is," said Laura Nelson, student member of the fee-status appeals board.

"Tobey works on a straight black-and-white basis," she said. "We try and look at the total picture — what the student has done since he came to Arizona."

"We look at it subjectively — Tobey stays out of that."

Determining what a student intends to do after leaving ASU is a difficult task, Nelson said.

"Sometimes it really gets tough. We have to look at things like where the student went on vacation."

"We give the student the benefit of the doubt," she added.

Arizona loses a lot of money to students who should be paying out-of-state tuition but aren't, said Jack Penick, vice president for business affairs.

"The state loses the money it is putting up to support higher education," Penick said.

"It costs about $2,000 a year to educate a student. For those who pay the in-state fee of $225, the state Legislature appropriates the difference," he said.

Students favor coed housing

ASU students overwhelmingly support coed housing facilities on campus, according to a recent survey by Associated Students Campus Affairs Committee (CAC).

Almost 94 percent of students polled said they would like to have dormitories housing both men and women on campus, said Kevin Cosgrove, CAC co-director.

Close to 30 percent of those polled said they would like to see dorms with alternate male and female suites. About 35 percent preferred dorms alternating floors housing men and women, and more than 11 percent thought male and female wings should be alternated.

Just under one fourth the students questioned thought men and women should share rooms.

The poll results and a resolution passed by ASASU First Council in support of coed dormitories will be used as evidence of student support when the issue is presented to President John Schwada and the Arizona Board of Regents, Cosgrove said.

"We have received many letters of support from religious organizations," Cosgrove said.

Prof goes to Washington to testify against treaty

By Art Moore

The controversy over the new Panama Canal treaty has a lot of people talking and an ASU history professor, Lewis Tambs, is one of them.

Unlike most others, Tambs had the chance to talk to people in a position to make a decision. He was one of four professors from around the country called to testify to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee.

"They wanted two for the treaty and two against it," Tambs said. "I was selected to testify against it."

Tambs testified Oct. 11 on relatively short notice.

"I was called on Friday and had to testify the next Tuesday," he said. "I spent the whole weekend working on my statement."

Each of the four called testified for about 10 minutes each,

Tambs said, and the committee asked them questions for about two hours.

The terms of the treaty call for Panama to take control of the canal on Jan. 1, 2000. The U.S. would also make payments of 30 cents per ton that passes through the canal, $10 million annually in revenues from the canal, and up to $10 million more if revenues and traffic are up.

The pact also calls for up to $275 million in economic development aid to Panama.

Tambs, who has been studying Latin American affairs for "about 25 years" and has been to every Latin American country, said the new treaty would invite intervention, which he opposes.

"We don't have to intervene if it is our own territory," he said. "The treaty will cause confrontations and we will have to intervene."

Giving up the canal would cost the U.S. because the canal still is not paid for, Tambs said.

"The canal construction company still owes $319 million," he said, "and that is based on 1903-1914 dollars."

Tambs said the American people should have a voice in the ratification of the treaty.

"Americans should have a plebiscite," he said. "The Panamanians did and we are just as smart as they are, so why can't we have one?"

"The polls show people are overwhelmingly opposed to it," he added.

Tambs said the closeness of the Panama vote was surprising, considering the voting procedure.

"They had two different color ballots, one for the treaty and one against, and they had to be placed in the ballot box in full view of government officials," he said. "They knew where everyone was on the issue."

A decision on retaining control of the canal should be made now, Tambs said.

"If the canal is important, let's keep it," he said. "If it isn't, we should just give it to them now, pickup and leave."

The treaty requires 67 votes for ratification, but Tambs said he couldn't predict what would happen.

"It won't be brought up until after the Christmas recess," he said, "and who knows what will happen between now and then?"

Tambs said he thinks President Carter doesn't really understand the treaty.

"As late as August he talked about the U.S. having perpetual rights in Panama," he said. "I don't think he has really read the treaty, at least not up until then."

"He could be a great president," he added, "but no matter what he does in this matter, it will hurt his credibility."

While the trip was supposed to be at government expense, it ended up costing Tambs about $100.

"The government gave us $35 per day, and it costs $50 just to get a motel room in Washington," he said. "Plus it cost $27 just to get a cab from the airport."

"Hello?"

"Hey, Mike old buddy, this is Mark. You know, we've got a long weekend coming up — what do you think of getting some people together and . . . ?"

"Gee, I wish you'd called me sooner. I'm going on a religious retreat up in Oracle, Arizona, this weekend."

"I've never heard of the place."

"Neither has anybody else — that's why we're going. Retreats are big business, everyone's trying to get in on one. So what better time than Thanksgiving weekend to go to a place nobody's heard of?"

"Hi, Judy, this is Mark. Since this is a four-day weekend, I've been trying to get some people together . . ."

"Oh, wow, sounds good, Mark, but I've already arranged to have some friends from Tucson come up to go to the UA game."

"Hey, Joe, it's Mark. Why don't we get some people together this weekend and . . ."

"Sorry, friend, going home for Thanksgiving. It pays off money wise to show my face at the old homestead once in a while. My parents say they like to see the results of their investment at least a couple times a year."

"Tom? Mark. How about getting together this week . . ."

"Wish I could, but I'm going to Los Angeles to watch the USC-UCLA game. The Trojans have got to win, and I sure don't want UCLA in the Rose Bowl."

"Yeah, Tom, I guess it's important for you to be there."

"Teresa, my dear, this is Mark."

"Who?"

"Mark. Scarp. S-C-A-R-P."

"Is this an obscene phone call?"

Brrrrring. Brrrrring. Brrrrring.

"Son, are you sticking around for Thanksgiving?"

"I guess so, Dad."

"That's good. You know, it wouldn't be much of a holiday around here if you weren't here with us."

"Thanks, Dad. It'll be good to stay home."

You just can't get your friends together for a good game of Monopoly anymore.

Ombudsmen available for student problems

ASU students with problems or questions about parking, grades, admissions, loans, transcripts and tuition needn't feel helpless — there are 13 ombudsmen on campus to assist them.

"An ombudsman is a neutral third party whose assignment is to cut red tape, facilitate communication, expedite solutions and establish fact," said James W. Creasman, ASU director of special events and programs. Creasman is chairman of the ombudsmen.

"We need to have people know about us," he said.

The ombudsman committee has existed on campus since 1968. This year five new ombudsmen were asked to serve by the University president after they were nominated by the deans of their colleges.

Creasman said the goal of the committee is to have an ombudsman in each college.

Committee members help students contact those who can help with a specific problem. "He can often get the facts where the student is lost," Creasman said.

Creasman said he assists about 200 students a year.

"The best part of this was that the student does it all, on my suggestion," Creasman said.

"We all listen a lot. Everything is confidential, we want to make people happy," he said.

But Creasman said ombudsmen cannot reverse decisions or change university policy. "We can't always save them," he said. "We can be an advocate if we believe the student is right."

Residents participate in Trivia Bowl contest

GOOD EVENING, FRIENDS, TO
"THE
... NOW FOR
OUR 1ST 20
TOSS-UP QUESTION!

Nursing home residents may not know where the world's highest fountain is, but they had no trouble naming the two most popular pin-up girls of World War II.

The ASU Recreation Club held a "Trivia Bowl" contest Thursday night at the Medicenter in Phoenix. Medicenter is a combination nursing home and rehabilitation center.

The 20 members of the club are recreation majors. "We want to professionalize the field of recreation," said Linda Sovola, president of the club.

Twelve residents of Medicenter participated, teamed with members of the club. Contestants were given 20 seconds to answer a question read by Roy Chavez, who acted as master of ceremonies for the occasion.

Questions included historical facts, movies, TV, radio, geography and sports.

An audience of about 40 other Medicenter residents watched the contest, and occasionally couldn't resist helping the participants.

Most of the contestants couldn't answer the question, "Who was comicstrip character Dick Tracy's wife?" But one resident had to give it a try. "Mrs. Tracy?" he ventured.

Women's lib not sure cure for all societies, grad says

By Patricia Walsh

Western technology and women's lib do not hold the answers for women in other parts of the world, says the creator of a new ASU course next spring called Women in Other Cultures.

"Westernization does not always imply improved status for women," said Teresa Bijlsma, a graduate student in anthropology who will teach the course. "Where you have a traditional society with complimentary status between the sexes, introducing Western techniques can alter, even lower the status of women."

Bijlsma said one idea behind the course is to educate Western women to the needs of women in other parts of the world.

"People in lesser developed countries are more concerned with getting enough to eat and getting housing. U.S. women have these things assured for them, so they are looking at other things," Bijlsma said.

However, she added, this doesn't mean that women in other countries are more discriminated against.

"Just because we term a certain country underdeveloped, that does not mean the women are less liberated or in a less fortunate position," Bijlsma said.

"One of the goals (of the course) is to look at women in other cultures and to realize that everything is not the same as in the U.S. People have other interests and other basic needs than what the women's movement in the U.S. is about," she added.

Bijlsma said these differences resulted in a rift between Western women and those of the third world at an international women's conference in Mexico City a couple years ago.

Bijlsma said the course will cover topics such as women's role in economic participation, rituals, control of language, and the effect that modernization is having on these roles.

As examples of different cultural roles among women, Bijlsma said in some societies, as with the Kung Bushmen of Africa, the women gather as much or more of the total food intake of nuts and root crops as men do.

Also, in many parts of the world, family names are affected by women.

"Here, names are taken from the man's side but in other places, people trace their lineage through the mother's name," she said.

Bijlsma said she has no alternatives to offer for women in developing nations, but feels recognition of the differences between women of the world is important.

"I just want people to start thinking in global terms instead of just women in the Western World," she said.

Sun Devils forget antifreeze in 25-14 loss

By Walter Berry

The plight of a few select ASU football players and their sums owed the Mountain Bell Telephone Company has been well documented in recent weeks.

But little did the Devils realize that Alexander-Graham-Bell would be summoned to collect the difference . . . and then some.

Colorado State's Rams — behind the panting pass rush of Alexander "Bubba" Baker and Mike Bell and the offensive output of Dan Graham — butted a lethargic ASU team around the cold, snowy Ft. Collins' confines of Hughes Stadium Saturday afternoon and sent the Sun Devils skidding to a 25-14 setback.

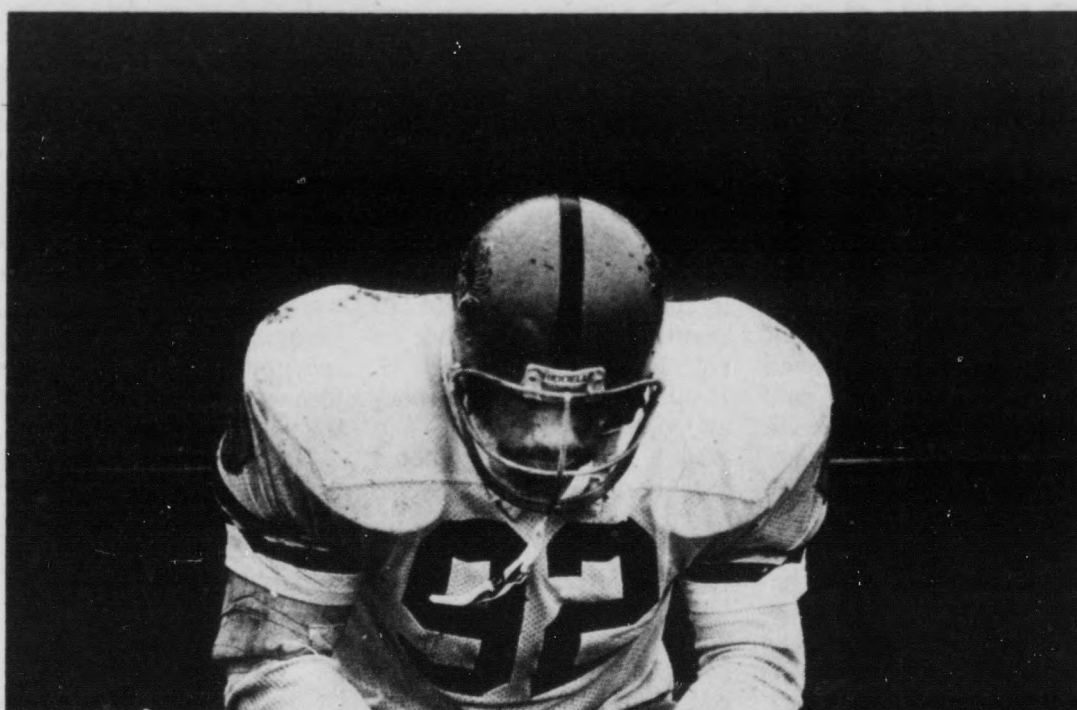

The loss put a severe damper on ASU's Fiesta Bowl-clinching party while catapulting CSU back into contention for the Christmas Day "classic." The Devils now stand 8-2 on the season and 5-1 in the WAC — tied for the lead with BYU — while the Rams upped their overall record to 8-2-1 and 5-2 in league standings. If ASU should lose to UA Friday night, CSU would go bowling instead.

"We were pathetic . . . completely flat and nonaggressive," said an obviously displeased Sun Devil head coach Frank Kush of his squad's performance. "The best team certainly won. Our offense was terrible."

ASU's usually lethal offensive machinery evidently forgot to bring its antifreeze northward as it coughed, sputtered and rusted to a complete halt in the ice box-like environs. The Devils managed just 15 yards rushing against a tenacious Ram front four which accounted for 93 yards in losses and held ASU's total offensive outage to 146 yards, 311.7 below their national fourth-ranked 457.9 average.

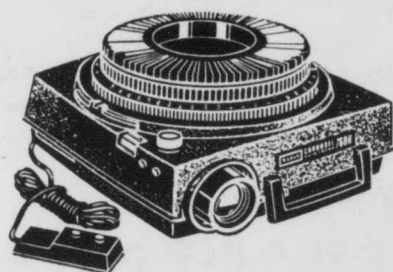

"It was my fault. Blame it on me. I had a bad game," said ASU quarterback Dennis Sproul in the hushed tone, reflective of the morgue-like post-game atmosphere. "I've been the hero for the past few weeks. I'll be the goat for this one."

With snowflakes cascading down upon him, ASU defensive tackle Kit Lathrop reflects disconsolately on the fortunes which befell the Sun Devils Saturday afternoon in Ft. Collins. ASU's 25-14 loss to the Rams stalled its Fiesta Bowl bid, and kept CSU's slim hopes alive. The Devils must beat UA Friday night in Tempe to claim a share of the WAC conference crown and subsequent Fiesta Bowl berth. [State Press photo by Walter Berry]

The ABC-HMO
State enrollment period ENDS
November 25th

If you haven't enrolled in a health care plan, you've got until November 25th to do so. If not, you could possibly be without insurance for ninety days.

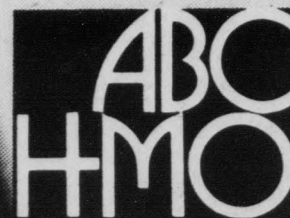

But before you enroll, take a minute here to consider the benefits of enrolling in ABC-HMO.

ABC-HMO is a very attractive alternative to conventional health insurance that does more than finance your health care. It finances and delivers it, at four modern health care centers throughout the Valley.

ABC-HMO not only covers you when you're sick, it covers you when you're well too. In fact, that's the whole idea behind ABC-HMO, to help keep you well.

And ABC-HMO now covers dental work as well. At no additional cost it'll cover all dental work for dependents 13 years and under except orthodontics.

ABC-HMO, an attractive alternative to conventional health insurance. We think you'll enjoy it.

ASU freshman Trent Lyght celebrates after stunning Arizona's talented breaststrokes in the 200-yard breaststroke during the first dual meet of the season for ASU and UA. UA's men defeated ASU 58-55 and the Sun Devil women dropped UA 76-37.

Women swimmers win, men just miss

By Karen Andrus

The ASU national champion women's swim team beat the UA easily Saturday at ASU, but the WAC champion men's team from the UA squeezed by the ASU men by three points.

The ASU women won 76-37 and the UA men won 58-55.

Fifteen records were set or tied, one being the AIAW national record. UA's Diane Johnson set a national collegiate record in the 200-yard individual medley (I.M.) with a 2:05.5 breaking the old record of 2:06.0.

"There were so many places we could have won the meet," men's coach Ron Johnson said. "Any first place instead of a second would have won the meet."

Johnson cited a close race between ASU freshman Sam Hewson and UA's Rick DeMont, the 1972 Olympic champion and former world record holder. Hewson lost to DeMont in the 200-yard freestyle by six one-hundredths of a second, Johnson said.

"I would say this team is potentially the best team I've ever coached," Johnson said, "including the Mexican National team prior to the 1968 Olympic Games." Johnson also coached the Mexican National team prior to the 1972 Olympics.

"I've never had a team do so well in the pre-season," he added.

Women's coach Mona Plummer shared Johnson's sentiments. "I think the times really were outstanding for this early in the year," she said.

"That swim Pam (Rogers) had was unbelievable for having a broken finger," Plummer said. Rogers, a junior, took second in the 100-yard breaststroke behind UA's Johnson. Rogers was an AIAW finalist last year in the event.

ASU men first-place finishers are sophomore Blake Johnson in the 200-yard backstroke and I.M.; freshman Sam Hewson in the 100-yard freestyle, freshman Trent Lyght in the 200-yard breaststroke and ASU in the 400-yard freestyle relay.

ASU women first place finishers are ASU in the 400-yard medley relay; sophomore Sandy Thompson in the 1000-yard freestyle; freshman Gail Amudrud in the 100- and 200-yard freestyle; sophomore Sue Sloan in the 100-yard butterfly; junior Melissa Belote in the 200-yard backstroke; freshman Cheryl Gibson in the 500-yard freestyle and senior Theresa Brookbank in the one- and three-meter diving.

Johnson said the meet was held in front of a record crowd of about 1,000 for an ASU dual meet.

The next dual meet for the men will be against UCLA at 3 p.m., Dec. 2 at ASU. The women's team will compete against San Diego state Dec. 2-3 at San Diego.

Sproul, in his second non-productive outing in as many weekends, connected on just 11 of 32 passing attempts for 131 yards and one touchdown. The bearded senior signal caller was also intercepted twice and sacked eight times under a torrid Ram rush which struck an amazing similarity to its Los Angeles counterpart of the late 1960's.

"CSU was fired up," Kush said. "Their defensive line stuffed our offensive line."

"I didn't even have a chance to set up," said Sproul whose gold football pants and white athletic socks bore enough grass stains to impersonate a lawn. "Everytime I turned around, there was somebody chasing me."

The fired-up Rams took the initiative early in the game while ASU started sluggishly and never appeared to get fully in gear, although they did carry a 14-10 lead in the locker room at halftime courtesy of CSU turnovers.

After Tom Drake toed a 35-yard first quarter field goal to stake the Rams to a 3-0 lead, Sun Devil defensive end Al Harris stormed in to block an attempted quick kick. Linebacker Dave Barthel recovered at the Ram seven to set up Sproul's four-yard touchdown keeper two plays later.

Jeff McIntyre's recovery of quarterback Graham's fumble at the CSU 25 led to Arthur Lane's seven-yard TD reception six minutes before intermission, which offset a 34-yard touchdown strike from Graham to Larry Jones.

The Devils should have quit at that juncture if they had known of the ill wind (and accompanying blizzard) that was awaiting them in the second half.

Sproul's screen pass from ASU's 20-yard line on its first possession of the third quarter was picked off by Ram linebacker Dana Isoline and returned 15 yards for a score and 17-14 CSU lead. Two Drake field goals of 30 and 42 yards — coupled by Bell's tackle of Sproul in the end zone for a safety — accounted for the remainder of the game's points.

"I told our kids to go out and have a lot of fun and don't worry about mistakes," said CSU coach Sark Arslanian. "We had nothing to lose and to beat Kush has to be the highlight of my career. (The Rams had lost all 15 previous encounters with the Devils.)"

"The weather was tough," Arslanian added. "But I had stated before the game to the local papers that the only things we needed in order to win was to get the breaks and to have it snow. We got both."

Although the Devils don't face the Rams now until 1981 because of Pac-10 obligations, it'll be a long, long time before they shake the memory of this loss. It may take them even longer to thaw out.

Sun Devil kicker Mark Jones heats his hands on the ASU sidelines before going in to punt. The senior from Tempe was called upon on nine occasions in the Devils' 25-14 loss to CSU Saturday afternoon and compiled a 43.2 yard average per kick. Trip to bowl riding on game

LOS ANGELES (AP) — A lot will be riding on the outcome of Friday night's annual UCLA-Southern California football collision at the Coliseum, but in a way the tangible reward is of secondary importance.

That's the opinion of UCLA Coach Terry Donahue, whose Bruins can earn a berth in the Rose Bowl with a victory over the Trojans.

"Both teams will have a great deal at stake besides bowl bids," Donahue said Monday at his weekly meeting with reporters. "When you get down to this game it's a matter of pride."

"Even if we were not playing for the Rose Bowl we would play well," added Donahue. "I expect USC to do the same."

"It's a very intense, very competitive rivalry, but I don't think it's a bitter rivalry."

If the Bruins win, they will oppose Michigan in Pasadena Jan. 2. If they lose, they'll spend the holidays at home.

If the Trojans triumph, they will face either Texas or Texas A&M in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl New Year's Eve. And if they are beaten, it will mark the end of one of their most disappointing seasons in years.

The Bruins will bring a 5-1 Pacific-8 Conference record and a 7-3 overall mark into the game, to be viewed by a sell-out crowd and a nationwide television audience. USC is 4-2 and 6-4.

Washington has clinched at least a tie for the Pac-8 title with a 6-1 record. The Huskies will play in the Rose Bowl if USC wins or the game ends in a tie. If the Bruins prevail, Washington will play in the Astro-Bluebonnet Bowl.

Donahue said his team was fortunate to have nearly two weeks off before playing the Trojans.

Xerox presents 90 minutes with one of literature's most celebrated heroes.

Bilbo Baggins, the reluctant adventurer created by J.R.R. Tolkien and idolized by millions of readers of all ages, comes to television in a spectacular animated special from Rankin/Bass Productions.

Everyone will want to see how the timid Bilbo finds the courage to confront the fearsome Gollum, the mighty Great Goblin and, finally, the awful Smaug.

Once you've seen this Xerox presentation, you'll never again believe animated specials are only for children.

ASU matmen win 9 individual titles

ASU's wrestling team won nine individual championships last weekend at the Hall of Fame Open in the Sun Devil Gym.

The biggest surprise of the night, however, was an ASU loss in the 190-pound weight class. Mike Johnson of the Bakersfield Express, an AAU team, decisioned ASU's Dan Severn, 3-1 in overtime. Severn was previously undefeated in the collegiate ranks with a 34-0 record.

Four of the championships won by ASU were over Sun Devil teammates. The champions among these were at 142-pounds, Mike Pike decisioned Joe Romero, 17-9; 150-pounds, Tim Jeffries decisioned George Espinoza, 8-5; 220-pounds, Bob Jenkins decisioned former Devils Bruce Young, 4-3; and heavyweight James Mitchell pinned Robert Westbrook.

Other ASU winners included at 126-pounds ASU assistant coach Mark Mangianti; at 134-pounds Eddie Ortiz; at 158-pounds Royce Oliver; at 167-pounds Tom Kostrezewski and at 177-pounds, Dave Severn.

ASU's first dual meet will be Nov. 30 against powerful University of Minnesota in the University Activity Center.

WSU leads runners to win NCAA crown

SPOKANE, Wash. (AP) — Kenyan Henry Rono of Washington State led a pack of 253 runners Monday to capture his second straight NCAA Cross Country Championship.

Rono led wire to wire for an unofficial time of 28:34 flat on the 10,000-meter track at Hangman Valley Golf Course south of Spokane.

The University of Texas-El Paso was the unofficial team leader with 108 points to 138 for the University of Oregon. The same teams finished 1-2 in 1976. There were 30 teams competing from 73 schools.

Next were Wyoming, Brigham Young, East Tennessee and Providence College.

About 4,000 fans endured below-freezing temperatures on a sunny day and cheered as Rono finished more than 50 yards in front of runnerup John Treacy of Providence.

Joel Cheruiyot, Rono's Kenyan teammate, finished fifth. The two were the only WSU runners after the Cougars failed to qualify their team.

Jerald Deegan of Providence finished third and Marc Hunter of Cleveland State was fourth.

"They're not going to catch him. They're not in his class," said an excited John Chaplin, Rono's coach.

Rono ran his first NCAA race last fall when he finished first in the 38th annual cross country meet at Denton, Tex., with a slightly slower time of 28:6.6 for 10,000 meters. Last winter Rono led Washington State to the NCAA Indoor title, winning the two-mile and placing third in the mile. In the spring he placed second in the NCAA Outdoor steeplechase.

The men's and women's gymnastic team will be leaving Wednesday for a meet against the University of Mexico Nov. 22-27 in Mexico City.

The women's basketball team lost its season opener to Cal Poly-Pomona Friday 78-47. The top scorers were freshman Kim Griffie with nine points and sophomore Cathy Aiken with eight.

In the women's volleyball Intermountain Conference Championship in Salt Lake City, Utah State defeated BYU for the title (15-10, 9-15, 15-9).

Although the Sun Devils came back without a win they came close to defeating the UA Wildcats who finished third. UA defeated ASU (15-10, 13-15, 16-14), Utah State defeated ASU (15-9, 15-7) and NAU defeated ASU (15-9, 15-11).

The men's tennis team will compete in the Carefree Invitational Nov. 24-27 in Carefree. ASU junior Eric Sherbeck won the Carefree Invitational last year at the #3 singles spot.

WAC Roundup

4 Holt TDs lead 'Cats over UTEP

UA flanker Harry Holt scored four touchdowns Saturday to pace the Wildcats to a 41-24 win over the University of Texas at El Paso. UA faces ASU at 7:10 p.m. Friday at Sun Devil stadium to determine if either the Devils or the Colorado State Rams will play in the Fiesta Bowl on Christmas Day.

Holt rushed for 102 yards on eight carries and caught two passes for 42 yards against the Miners. Holt wasn't the only Wildcat to have an outstanding game as tailback Hubert Oliver rushed for 186 yards and fullback Dean Schock pounded his way for 91 yards.

UA wound up with 558 yards total offense Saturday to better its season high of 478 yards against Utah. The win ups UA's record to 4-6 overall and 3-3 in the WAC. Meanwhile, UTEP dropped to 1-9 overall and 0-5 in WAC play.

BYU's quarterback Marc Wilson tied an NCAA record by completing 27 passes in the first half but a fourth quarter completion was the crucial one which led to the Cougars' 30-27 win over Long Beach State.

Wilson passed 15 yards to Tod Thompson with 5:43 left in the game to give BYU the victory. BYU had led 24-0 late in the second quarter but the Cougars fumbled four times which enabled Long Beach State to go ahead.

On the day, Wilson completed 37 of 55 passes for 408 yards and one interception.

The University of Florida scored 28 points in the fourth quarter to give it a 38-29 win over the University of Utah, in Florida. The Gators rushed for 531 yards on 50 carries in the game.

Utah scored a touchdown with less than three minutes in the game to pull within two points at 31-29 but the two-point conversion failed.

Quarterback Marc Cousins came off the bench to score two touchdowns in the second half to lead Wyoming to a 23-21 victory over the University of New Mexico. Wyoming scored all of its points in the second half.

The Lobos played the game without its star halfback Mike Williams who was injured.

Big win over UA crucial for Devils

It could have been so easy. The only ingredient missing was a victory over a mediocre team from upstate Colorado. The Devils would have been respected nationally with probable rankings in the top ten in both polls and would have been set to meet Penn State in the Fiesta Bowl.

But no. All the Devils can do now is hope to beat UA Friday to win the WAC title and Fiesta Bowl trip. Hope is the right term because one has to wonder whether the Devils will be motivated for the regular season finale against the Wildcats.

According to Frank Kush on his after-game radio show Saturday, the Sun Devils were not MOTIVATED against CSU and on top of that they were FLAT. Peculiar symptoms when the WAC title and the Fiesta Bowl was on the line.

It is understandable that the Devils might have been looking past CSU after their win over BYU the week before. The ASU win over the Cougars was far from convincing however, and the Devils should not have been too cocky.

Nevertheless it is inconceivable that the Devils were not motivated. They play only 11 games a year, far less a demanding schedule than most sports at ASU, and receive by far the most support from the campus and the community.

It is not too much to ask, with supposedly quality athletes available, the support of a huge budget and 57,000 fans, to expect the Devils to be motivated for every game. Especially when the team had only one loss, was nationally ranked, most likely bowl-bound and with an excellent shot at finishing in the top ten.

ASU will face a tough game Friday against Tony Mason's Wildcats. UA (4-6) is in the spoiler role and coupled with the intense rivalry that already exists its season will be considered a success with a win Friday.

The set team in the Fiesta Bowl, Penn State, in its greed to get TV money from ABC, agreed with Pittsburgh to have its game date changed in order to televise the game. The result is that Penn State and Pitt will meet this weekend, seven days too late for the Orange Bowl people to wait and see.

Penn State lost the Orange Bowl bid and with it hundreds of thousands of dollars. On top of that, the Nittany Lions (9-1 and ranked ninth) will play either a second-place team from the WAC in Colorado State or a team from Tempe that has trouble getting motivated.

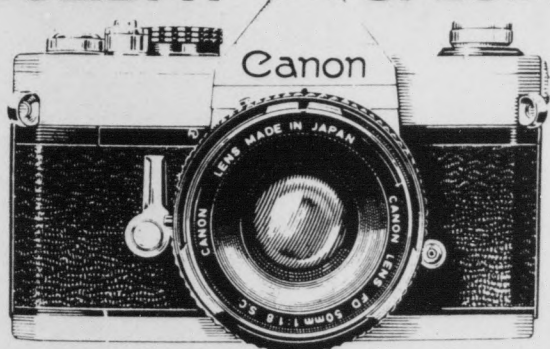

The Nittany Lions of Penn State gambled and lost far more than they expected.

Nash breaks leg

ASU's basketball team, already decimated by defections, suffered another blow last night when sophomore Johnny Nash broke his leg during a collision with a member of the Cuban National team.

Nash was taken off the floor on a stretcher and will be lost to the Devils for indefinite period. Nash was expected to be a key man in the Devil's offense that has been racked by the loss of Mark Landsberger to the pros and the ineligibility of Alton Lister.

Fiesta play lures Lions

Ninth ranked Penn State accepted a Fiesta Bowl berth Saturday after not receiving a bid from the Orange Bowl. The Nittany Lions have a 9-1 record and finish their season this weekend against Pittsburgh, 8-1-1.

Penn State had been counting on an Orange Bowl bid but it went to Arkansas, a team the Fiesta Bowl committee had been watching.

Here are the Match-ups for the major bowl games:

Liberty Bowl, Dec. 19 — North Carolina (8-2-1) vs. Big 8 runner-up, Oklahoma (9-1) or Nebraska (8-2).

Tangerine Bowl, Dec. 22 — Texas Tech (7-2) vs. Florida State (8-1).

Gator Bowl, Dec. 30 — Clemson (8-2-1) vs. Pittsburgh (8-1-1).

Sun Bowl, Dec. 31 — LSU (6-3) vs. Stanford (8-3).

Peach Bowl, Dec. 31 — North Carolina State (7-4) vs. to be announced.

Bluebonnet Bowl, Dec. 31

Clip and Save!

— Texas or Texas A&M vs. Oklahoma (9-1) or Nebraska USC (6-4) or Washington (7-4).

Cotton Bowl, Jan. 2 — Notre Dame (10-1) vs. Southwest Conference champion Washington (7-4) or UCLA (7-3).

Sugar Bowl, Jan. 2 — Ohio State (9-2) vs. Texas A&M (7-2).

Orange Bowl, Jan. 2 — Alabama (9-1).
