Man jumps to his death at stadium

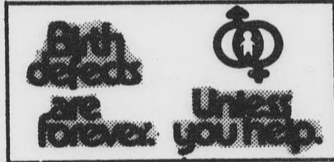

A Phoenix man jumped to his death from the newly-constructed upper tier of Sun Devil Stadium Monday.

James H. Baird, 54, of 4404 E. Coconino jumped from the northeast section of the upper level at 7:25 a.m.

Baird died before medics arrived.

Captain Norman Peck, of campus police, said a construction worker saw Baird walking up the stairs of the stadium at approximately 7:20 a.m. but no one saw Baird jump.

Peck said there is no immediate reason (known) for suicide. He said police are investigating the case because they believe Baird may have a son or daughter enrolled at ASU.

Used records selling fast, Tempe shop owners say

By Tom Sammons

In an effort to supply the record habit of stereo owners, three used-record stores have opened in Tempe since December.

The owners of the three stores say the used-record business is doing well.

"We're doing real well," said Dave McElfresh of Record Trader. "We were in the black after the first month."

The three stores buy used albums and sell them at reduced prices. All records sold are guaranteed.

"We have everything from punk rock to Arthur Godfrey," McElfresh said. "People can get the same quality album at a cheaper price."

The two other used record stores in Tempe, Birds Record Exchange and Roads to Moscow, opened recently and are supplying customers with a variety of records.

Birds is the oldest among the used record shops having been in business for 10 months. Owner Bill Cummerow said he purchases records on the basis of the condition of the album and the demand for it.

"If something sells, you buy it," he said.

At Roads to Moscow, which has been in business only four weeks, the used record shop was started from the personal record collections of the owners.

Owner Don Donaldson started the shop with a collection of about 400 albums and he said there has been "a good response."

The three shop owners said they sold records mostly to students but they try to supply records for all musical tastes.

"Anybody might come in to buy a record, but you don't want to buy exclusively for the student," McElfresh said.

"The market for this (used albums) is skyrocketing since record prices keep going up," he said. A new record retails for $7.98 at most Tempe shops.

McElfresh, who used to operate a used record shop in Kansas City, said he got into the business because he was tired of paying high record prices.

He said he buys only records in "mint shape" and as a result has a low return rate.

Americans shirk defense of freedom

Those who keep silent are accessories to murder and they imperil their immortal souls.

The Deputy,
Act I, Scene III

When the news of a young Soviet dissident, Anatoly Shcharansky, sentenced to three years in prison and ten years in a Soviet labor camp on trumped up charges of high treason was made public, the world was all but silent.

When this news reached heads of state throughout the world there were scattered expressions of sympathy and general lip service paid in behalf of the young Jewish dissident.

Anatoly Shcharansky's "crime" and the "crimes" of three million other Soviets is one of origin, that of being Jewish.

Soviet Jewry's desire to emigrate from the country that enslaves them is a direct result of, and reaction to, Soviet oppression of minorities.

There exists in the Soviet Union, quite contrary to Soviet written law, no freedom of assembly, no freedom of press, and the greatest denial of all, no right of emigration.

Why haven't the voices of American liberals and leftists surged with the same fervor and passion to these denials of human rights as they did in the name of Steve Biko and President Allende?

Where are those leftist voices when Soviet Jews are arrested, beaten and "temporarily detained" in a Soviet jail, all for attending religious services, many of whom are now permanently erased from the streets of Moscow, Leningrad and Kiev.

Now, more than eight weeks after Shcharansky was sentenced, all is quiet — no demonstrations, no protests, no lip service. The world has closed its eyes and ears to the Shcharansky case and others like it, for the world has not merely forgotten his plight, they chose to forget.

This sort of escapism not only typifies contemporary American culture but will prove to be its downfall as well.

Even for Sartre, man's willingness to act and to accept the consequences of his action is fundamental for a man's freedom. Man must commit himself, realizing that all actions have consequences and that these consequences modify and alter the character and course of the world.

"Whatever man does, and even if he does nothing, he influences collective events . . . involvement cannot be avoided. Even if we were as mute and still as stones, our very passivity would be an action."

Man is not capable of living his life as an isolated individual. He is involved in spite of himself in a collective on which he depends and which depends on him.

Perhaps Soviet anti-Semitism is not a palatable cause for those left-leaning crusaders, but freedom fighting is a gutsy business and freedom cannot be won if not won for all.

Camus in "The Myth of Sisyphus" encumbers upon us an arduous task — that of accepting Sisyphus as happy.

We are once again encumbered by Shcharansky's final words — indeed a clarion call: "I am happy. I am happy that I lived honestly in peace with my conscience. I never compromised me soul, even under threat of death."

For those of you, there are many to be sure, who choose not to actively commit yourselves, you are indeed evil, for your indifference counts heavily with the hand of evil.

In a world where individuals are seldom shocked, rarely horrified and empathy's definition is not known, the Shcharanskys of the world are quickly forgotten.

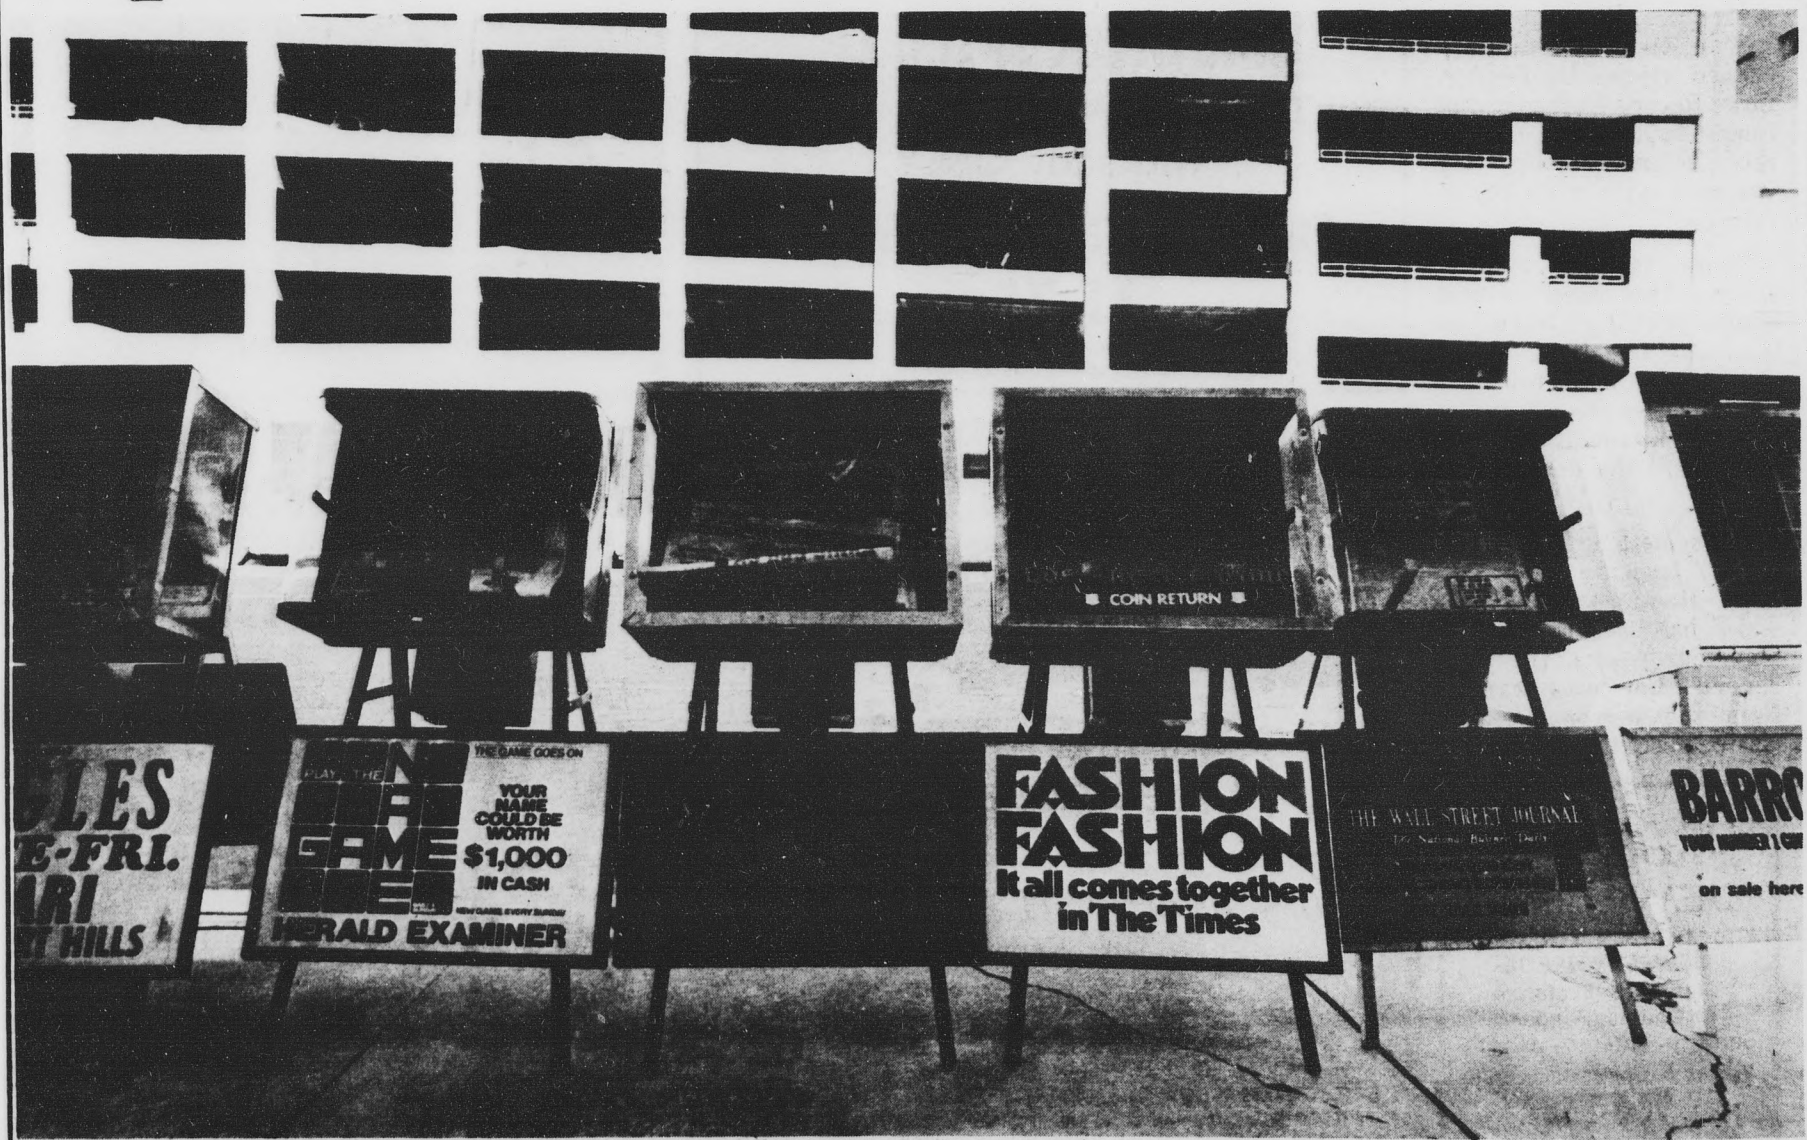

It appears that when tragedies are played out on a foreign stage the interest of the masses diminishes, anxiety subsides and concern disappears.

Alexander Solzhenitsyn put it best when he said: "For you (Gulag Archipelago) amount to nothing. You will understand it all when they bellow at you, 'you are under arrest,' and you yourselves trudge off to our (prison) archipelago."

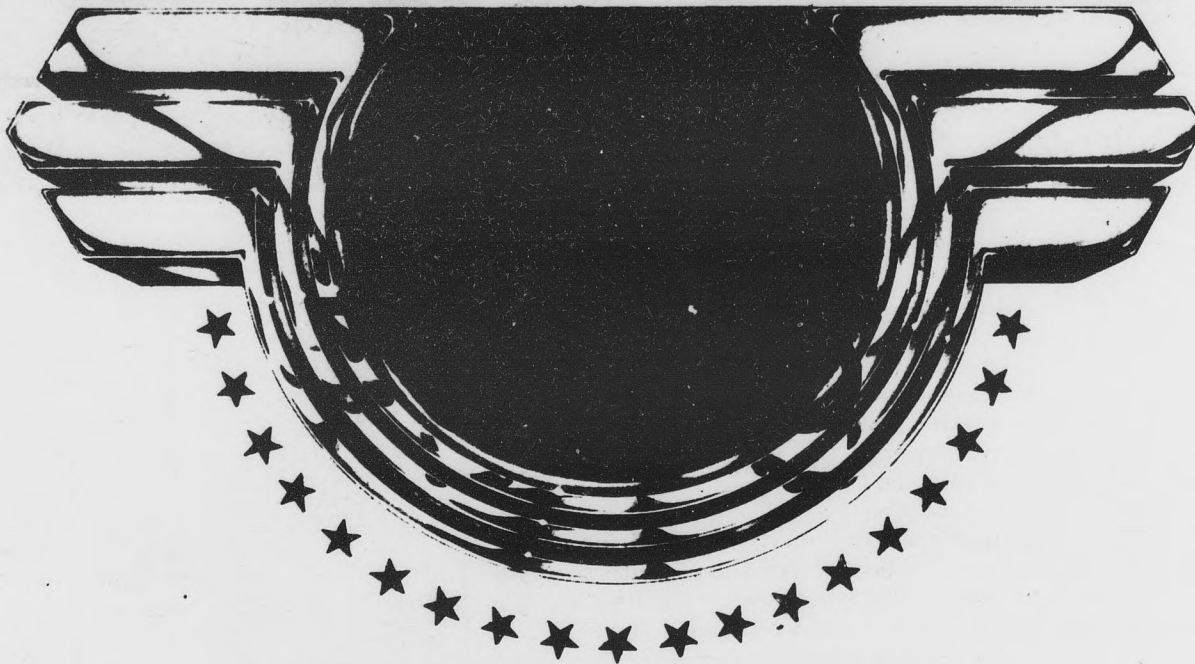

We have indeed evolved into an ignorant, apathetic, myopic mass. We are indeed, as Eric Hoffer writes, "a nation of cowards." For this alone we shall surely be damned.

Recommendations given in campus modernization

By Tony Motzenbacker

A list of proposals recommending more than $3,200,000 worth of modernization to buildings on ASU's campus was given to the Board of Regents Thursday, ASU's vice president of business affairs said.

Jack Penick said a recent fire at the University of Arizona caused the Board of Regents to ask for recommendations from Arizona's three universities to improve their safety standards.

"All over campus we have old buildings which met the Federal Code for Safety when they were built, but not any more," Penick said.

He said the proposals from ASU cover four areas of major concern:

A wing of the chemistry building which no longer meets the code for expelling gases ($1,923,000); potential fire hazards in all buildings ($538,500); recommendations to meet the Occupational Safety and Health act ($592,232); buildings required to meet Section 504 of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973, aimed at improving conditions for the handicapped ($174,000).

Penick said the most important are the proposed changes to the chemistry building.

They would include the addition of equipment that would exhaust fumes from existing chemistry labs; the addition of a new lab and its exhaust equipment.

He said the present exhaust systems are no longer satisfactory. "There have been a lot of changes in the art of chemistry, and we have three times more students now than we had when the wing was built in 1960."

Penick said the business of bringing old buildings up to present safety standards is an ongoing process. "We've been doing a lot of things over the last several years within the resources we have."

Bob Falls, director of management support services at the Department of Physical Facilities, said lack of financial resources is the primary problem for any remodeling on campus.

"To bring some of the buildings on the campus to modern standards would be exorbitant," he said. "But by ignoring these buildings, which are on prime land, we could create a downtown urban blight right on campus."

He said many of the buildings are inefficient in terms of energy, space, or service to the student, "but they are all we have right now.

"When you talk remodeling, especially when the basic utilities need to be brought up to standard, it gets very expensive, very quickly," Falls said.

"What we're doing now is to tell the regents what we have done, what we can do, and what we'd like to do."

Skydivers to show films and equipment

A film, lecture and equipment presentation on-skydiving will be held Friday at the MU.

The program will begin at 11 a.m. in the Cochise Room, MU 212. The films are entitled, "This is a Sport," "Masters of the Sky" and "Wings."

Three instructors from the Arizona Parachute Ranch at the Coolidge, Arizona Airport will answer questions from the audience.

The event is sponsored by MEChA.

THE THRILL OF INNOVATION.

It comes from getting there first. And it can be one of the finest rewards of an engineering career.

At Intel, we've had a long list of firsts since we started in 1968 — developments that have had a profound impact on the ways in which people work and live. The semiconductor memory. The micro-processor. The microcomputer. The single-board computer. And many of the technological processes that made these products possible, such as silicon gate MOS and HMOS.

It's great to be first. And even greater to be best. If you share our dedication to innovation and are about to receive your BS, MS or PhD in electrical engineering, chemical engineering, solid-state physics, computer science or a related field, we'd like to tell you about Intel career opportunities on the San Francisco Peninsula. And in suburban Portland, Oregon.

Buck stops here

Column responds to student gripes

BUCK BOX FEEDBACK

Welcome back to the feedback line. The State Press and ASASU Campus Affairs Committee will be running this column to let students know what happens to their comments, complaints and questions from "The Buck Stops Here" boxes. These green boxes are located in choice locations on campus. The following are questions asked by students directed to the committee for solutions.

Q. I didn't attend summer school, however, I'm a continuing student at ASU. This summer I went to the Health Center for treatment of my hay fever, but they wouldn't treat me because I wasn't going to summer school.

A. Dr. Richard Jones, director of the Student Health Center, said funding is the main problem. Funds are available only to treat students who are currently enrolled in classes. However, Dr. Jones did say to check with the Health Center personnel, prior to going elsewhere for treatment, as to your status.

Q: Why is there a $20 user fee for non-students to use the library? Who instituted this new program and where does the money go? What about just a library card?

A. This program became effective July 1 by a vote of the Arizona Board of Regents. The fee is to encourage non-students to use their local libraries. If they choose to use Hayden Library, the fee is used toward the cost of producing a library card and the remainder is placed toward books. The reason why a library card is not issued to non-students is the library would have no leverage over these non-students on returning the materials.

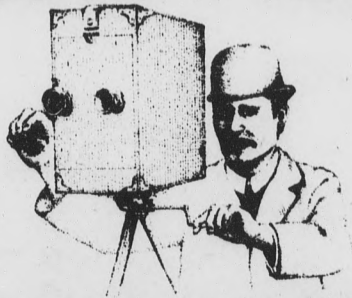

Q: I wish someone would do something about cleaning up the bike paths along the roads near ASU, since we are supposed to use them. Especially the one that is an extension of Terrace Road to McAllister.

A. Physical Facilities was contacted and by now you should have seen some results of the clean up.

Q: What is the repulsive smell that hits you as you enter the southeast stands at the football stadium?

A. The smell is caused by the concessionaires pouring out stale cola beverage that mixes with water and is baked by the sun. The stadium crew should have this problem corrected by the next home game.

Powerful evening

Price performs in one-man play

"My name is Oscar Fingall O'Flahertie Wills Wilde. I am not English, I am Irish, which is quite another thing."

So began "Diversions & Delights," the one-man play with Vincent Price as the controversial author, playwright and lecturer. It is this last profession that set the scene with Wilde giving an imaginary talk a year before his death.

Gammage Center was packed last Thursday night when Price appeared in a flamboyant 19th-century suit, wavy hair, carrying a yellow rose. The stage was bare except for an old lectern, side table and red velvet chair.

"You have come to see Oscar Wilde in the wicked flesh," he liltily drawled. It didn't take long to forget about the horror-movie king and simply savor the scathing perception. "I tend to exaggerate; let's be honest: I often lie."

Price/Wilde started describing his lecture tour of America, which he liked, with numerous complaints. "American women can talk on any subject as long as they know nothing about it."

"If I offend you ladies," he remarked to the audience, "well, I offend everyone, indiscriminately."

Price/Wilde discourses on numerous topics: art, beauty, pleasure, critics, the theater, the church, morality ("Once war is thought of as vulgar, it will lose its fascination"), the infamous libel case, and the horrors of prison.

He recited an exotic poem, "one I have committed to memory, because I wrote it," several parables and anecdotes. Also he demonstrated a speech he gave after the success of one of his plays, congratulating the crowd on its intelligence.

The crowd at Gammage loved it, frequently laughing and applauding. The single possible flaw was that though Price's voice was strong and controlled, the auditorium was too large for his projecting, even with microphones.

Newspapers help families to live more intelligently — to better enjoy living. They help people understand themselves and their neighbors.

The audience compensated by remaining absolutely silent at those moments when the real Oscar Wilde came through. He kept drinking absinthe which made him a trifle drunk, and recalled the vicious affair that led to his public disgrace.

Here Price's superiority of the role was revealed. Sober, he was coolly expressive, his barbs showing a good sense of humor. Then the underlying tension came out, his skillful rambling tongue, his careful staggering movements.

Ultimately Price became Wilde, not so much the linguist of immortal wit, but the sensitive human being, left ravaged by prison, betrayed by both his lover and his public.

It was a truly powerful evening, though not without its lighter side. In his final moments of despairing, Price allowed himself a smirk.

"Ladies and gentlemen, I have lied to you, you know," said Oscar Wilde with almost devious relish. "But you don't know where or when!"

Stills here

David Crosby and Graham Nash are in an L.A. studio recording their next duo-LP. Neil Young is touring with Crazy Horse. Stephen Stills will be at Arcosanti October 7. Do you know where your children are?

Eight Years ago, the Beatle's "Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band" album began what was to become a 113 week stay in Billboard's Hot 100 chart. This week, four weeks after its re-entry, "Sgt. Pepper's" sits at No. 28.

Joe Cocker has obtained a California driver's license and is currently shopping for a jeep.

Roy Acuff Day is October 20. On that day, country frequencies around the nation will likely assist in the celebration which will include a key to the city of Nashville to be presented to Acuff by Mayor Richard Fulton.

Joni Mitchell will write the lyrics and Charlie Mingus the melodies for Joni's next LP, which Mitchell herself is producing.

Lyman Bostock:

With malice toward none

By Walter Berry

The headline splashed across the front page of Monday's Arizona Republic sports section sent a tingling sensation through my spine.

"Shooting in family feud kills Bostock," the head read. Whatever the explanation the accompanying Associated Press story gave, the result was still the same. Lyman Bostock, at age 27 and at the height of his athletic career, was dead.

Details of his death were "sketchy" at first. He was reportedly visiting relatives in Gary, Ind., when a distraught husband mistook the California Angels' outfielder's head for his wife's and blew Bostock's brains out with a shotgun.

The murderer allegedly didn't know he had killed one of the major league's classiest performers. In fact, he wasn't even aware who Lyman Bostock was.

And they say justice is blind! I only crossed paths with Bostock once in life, earlier this year. As a rookie reporter for a Wall Street Journal-owned chain of dailies along the North Shore of Boston, I had the opportunity to cover a number of Red Sox games. One of them was a Boston-California encounter.

Half-embarrassed by being fully clothed around men in various stages of undress, and half in awe at athletes who I used to idolize in my adolescence, I approached Bostock's locker room cubicle with all the trepidations of a cotton-mouthed 15-year-old trying to ask his high school's most beautiful cheerleading captain for a date to the dance.

Bostock loved people

Bostock put me at ease within seconds.

A "soul shake" preceded some idle conversation on where I was from, where I went to school, my field of study, my athletic background and my estimation of how the Red Sox would blow the pennant this time.

We shared seconds of subdued laughter in a locker room hushed by an extra-inning loss.

Some eavesdroppers might have considered him a prude for the way he handled himself in public, or a crude for the way he kept his flowing goatee which made him look more like a philosopher than a ballplayer.

Still, Bostock knew no boundaries. He loved people almost as much as he loved their company. He appeared to make a special effort to leave the game he played behind him upon the last out. And he showed malice toward no one.

If you knew Lyman Bostock at all, you would have understood why he offered to donate the first month's salary of his $2.7 million multi-year contract to charity. He was the sensitive, unassuming sort with a strong sense of social conscience — a man led by his convictions and not his vindictions.

"It wasn't a publicity stunt. I just didn't want to take money I didn't earn," Bostock said almost in reverence as he stared at the carpeted clubhouse floor. "The California organization and (Angel owner) Gene Autry have done a lot for me. That's why I wanted to give my salary back."

Wanted to earn keep

"There's more than money involved. There's pride. Mr. Autry and (Angels' general manager) Buzzie Bavasi said it wasn't necessary. They knew I'd eventually do my job. But it was necessary to me. I wasn't carrying my load and I just didn't deserve the money."

Bostock said he sat down with his wife and discussed the situation with her. She argued that his defensive play had already won a number of games for the Angels and his plate prowess was bound to come around once he stopped pressing. Lyman, however, didn't think logic was enough.

"It's a family thing," he explained. "My grandmother instilled it in all 13 of her children. We were poor as kids. All we were told to ask for in life was that someone give us a break. We'd do the rest."

The son of Lyman Bostock Sr., a first baseman in the old Negro Leagues during the 1940s, Bostock eventually got his break in baseball. He used it to become one of the game's most feared hitters last season with the Minnesota Twins. His success paved the way for him to reap the monetary benefits of the free agent re-entry draft. It also served as an overture for the torrent of criticism Bostock

Mules laden with Blue Maguey pinas on their way to Cuervo's La Rojena plant.

Since 1795 we've gathered our Blue Magueys for Cuervo Gold the gentle way. It's the old way. And still the best.

At Cuervo we know that there is only one way to make Cuervo Gold perfect. The way we've been doing it for more than 180 years. That's why people still nurture our fields of Blue Maguey plants. And why mules are still used to bring these precious plants to our distillery. For tradition is still the most important ingredient in Cuervo Gold. This is what makes Cuervo Gold truly special. Neat, on the rocks, with a splash of soda, in a perfect Sunrise or Margarita, Cuervo Gold will bring you back to a time when quality ruled the world.

Cuervo. The Gold standard since 1795.

More about

A misunderstanding and a shotgun blast

would receive for hitting under his weight in April, spawning his idea of dispersing his salary among worthy causes.

Looking for handouts

Critics looked on him as they would a lunatic. "Money doesn't mean anything," the public seemed to say, "Give me a piece of your pie. Burden me with some of your billions."

Lyman became more than just the secret of Sprite. He was the route to an early retirement.

"It was sickening," Bostock said, contorting his mouth as if he had just bitten into a lemon. "All I heard from was lots of people begging, sticking their hands out. No one said, 'Lyman, I'm dying of cancer and need help,' and no one said, 'Lyman, I need an operation that will make me walk again.' Those people I may have helped. But not these."

Share the luck

In an era of eggshell egos, Bostock carried the yoke of public scorn on his shoulders. Half seemed to hate him for imitating a publicity monger, the other half hated him for not giving them the handout they had asked for.

Bostock maintained that he just wished to return a favor, giving the underprivileged the "chance" he'd had.

"I've been most fortunate in life so far. I was given a break in baseball and I took advantage of it. I wanted to give kids, like orphans, a chance at a better life," he said. "I have no use for someone who has been given a chance and blown it. I'm disgusted by people looking for a handout. Now, if someone had lost their parents in a car crash and needed help, I might've helped out. But generally, I give money to organizations like the Martin Luther King Foundation. The idea is to provide a chance for someone who otherwise wouldn't get one. That was my main intention. That was my dream."

The booing bothered Bostock. But he never let on to anyone how much.

Fans are meal ticket

"People have been good to me in life. I can't criticize a whole group of people for the actions of a few," he said. "Sure, I hear them heckle me in the stands. Every ballplayer does. But you have to remember that it is those same fans that are responsible for your job and put food on your table and put clothes on your kids."

"Naw, man. I can't blame anybody," Bostock added with a chuckle and slap on my shoulder. "Hating them would be the same as if I hated you. And I just met you."

In a summer spent haggling with the likes of Reggie Jackson, Thurman Munson and a myriad of other "big-name" personalities who hide behind facades like the Wizard Of Oz, Bostock was a refreshing change of pace. Whereas the others seemed to be composed of equal parts ice, porcelain, plastic, and blue smoke, Lyman Bostock was sweaty, lusty and alive.

Until Sunday "mourning" that is, when an unintended bullet silenced him forever.

Sun Devils predominate in Dolly Volley tourney

Current and former Sun Devil tennis players dominated the championship flight of the 2nd Annual Dolly Volley mixed doubles tennis tournament Saturday and Sunday.

Trophies were presented to Jim Marsh and Lynn Becker in the Championship division, after defeating John Waltz and Jerry Leavitt 2-6, 6-3, 7-6.

Bill and Jana Tull defeated Steve McCormick and Colette Kessler 2-6, 7-6, 6-3 in the A division; Ken Dowell and Monica Testor won over Thomas Semich and Julie Sythe in the B division 7-5, 7-5; Sid Borcher and Gail Patten defeated Bill DeKemper and Erin McPheters 2-6, 6-4, 6-4 in the C division.

Proceeds of the tournament, sponsored by the Sun Angel club, went to benefit ASU tennis. Women's tennis coach Dr. Anne Pittman directed the tourney.

Individuals on the women's team have tuned up at the Sedona Invitational, Kachina

Open and Dolly Volley in preparation for their opening Intermountain Conference matches this weekend against Northern Colorado and University of Colorado.

Traveling to Colorado will be Leavitt and Jodi Ricketts, both seniors in their fourth season at ASU; freshman Jeannine Balbiers from Mexico City, who is ranked as the number 6 woman player in Mexico, number 2 in juniors; and veteran sophomore Sue Clark, who won the singles championship at the Tulsa World Open this summer; and is the Missouri Valley women's singles champ.

Freshman Cheryl Hawkins from Tulsa joins the team this year, rated as the number one junior in Oklahoma, and Debbie Brown and Tracey Stern return as sophomores. Stern had a win over former Sun Devil Nancy Janco in Sedona.

Pittman said, "We should have a good, well-balanced team." She said they would stay a match ahead of their northern opponents this weekend.

Netters finish 11th; look to new tourney

ASU's women volleyball team finished eleventh in the San Diego State Collegiate Invitational tournament during the weekend.

The team was 2-1 in the round robin play, defeating the University of San Diego 15-6, 15-10, and Texas Austin 15-9, 15-6. They lost to Cal-Riverside 15-6, 9-15, 8-15.

"I wasn't really that concerned about the team's finish," Coach Mary Littlewood said. "I was concerned more about finding out about its weaknesses and trying to get things straightened out before conference play begins."

Conference play is two weeks away, and the team will have more opportunity to prepare this coming weekend when they play in the Brigham Young Preview Invitational.

They will again face tough competition with an opening game against highly rated Cal-State Fullerton. Intermountain Conference champs Utah State will also be in the pool with ASU, along with Texas-Austin and Nevada-Reno.

The round robin play will have a 22 team draw with the six teams with the most wins competing in single-elimination play on Saturday.

Winners of last week's Pick 'em

The State Press received one semi-perfect entry in last week's "Pick-em" contest. Bruce Maiman, who missed calling a tie between Cornell and Princeton, wins our first prize of three albums or tapes from Tower Records.

Second prize goes to Claude Paquette, who missed five, and third prize to Doug Marsh, who had one of several entries with six picks wrong but was closest to the ASU-WSU score.

Certificates for prizes may be picked up at the State Press at Stauffer Hall.

Frisbee Club will sponsor accuracy test

The University Frisbee Club will have an accuracy contest Sept. 27 to raise funds to support their teams in the upcoming Rocky Mountain Regional tournament in Albuquerque on Oct. 14-15.

The contest will be held at the north end of the West Hall Lawn between 11 a.m. and 1:30 p.m., and will be sponsored by the MUAB recreational committee.

Free frisbees will be given away and an information booth set up concerning local and national tournaments, world records, and individual and team events. Club memberships will also be available.
