The Untold Story: DISCO GOV!

Arizona Governor Bruce Rabinowitz does a disco shuffle on Cady Mall, much to the delight of ticket sellers pimping an upcoming gay rights debate. 'No cause for alarm'

1,200,000 deaths expected from reactor meltdown

By Dizzy Gillespie

The death toll from yesterday's Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station disaster has reached almost 750,000, and radiation from the devastating accident is expected to reach the Tempe area late this evening.

Arizona Public Service Information Officer Loyal Flakwell said Monday he believes there is "no cause for alarm," although massive doses of radiation have reduced the population of Phoenix to its lowest level since 1914.

Governor Bruce Rabinowitz, who declared the entire state a disaster area after sending Hattie and the kids to Brazil, said all escape routes out of the city are clear because "the entire Salt River evaporated just minutes after the meltdown."

The rapidly balding Flakwell added "this is all just a big misunderstanding. People are overreacting again.

"Why is it that the minute we make a little mistake everybody starts dying or moving away?" Flakwell queried.

Quoting from the official APS press statement, Flakwell advised residents within the 1,000-mile evacuation area to "remain calm."

"But if residents will feel better by taking some precautionary measures, we advise they stop breathing and refrain from eating or drinking for two to three months, or until the radiation has a chance to spread evenly over this hemisphere," Flakwell added.

Another APS executive, however, confessed he was not surprised at the catastrophe.

Laughing maniacally, Palo Verde plant supervisor Corey Meltdown admitted the plant has been operational for some time, despite APS claims that it was still under construction.

"We really kept the lid on that one," Meltdown chortled. "We almost lost our cover after that Three Mile Island thing blew up, so to speak, but thank God our projections about the stupidity of Arizonans proved true.

"Of course, we just couldn't have done it without the Arizona Repulsive and Phoenix Gazoo. It was just like having our very own

Student Rejects 'get real Bored' waiting coin toss

The Student Reject Selection Committee announced Monday it has narrowed the field to two candidates in its search for an ASU liaison to the Bored of Rejects for the 1979-80 school year.

Associated Stooges president and committee chairman Total Loss said ChiChi "Ironsides" Rosenblatt and Kemper Worthington Bigbucks III will vie for the honor of putting "I was a student reject" on his or her resume.

Loss said the student representative has all the privileges of a "regular" reject with the exception of a vote, a paycheck and a key to the executive washroom, where pre-vote meetings are traditionally held.

Rosenblatt, a FEChA activist and president of ASU's Hillel Association, said she doesn't think the fact that she has movement only in her upper lip and left ear will detract from her effectiveness as a student reject.

"If I am not chosen it will be because those racist rejects hate handicapped Chicano Jews," she said.

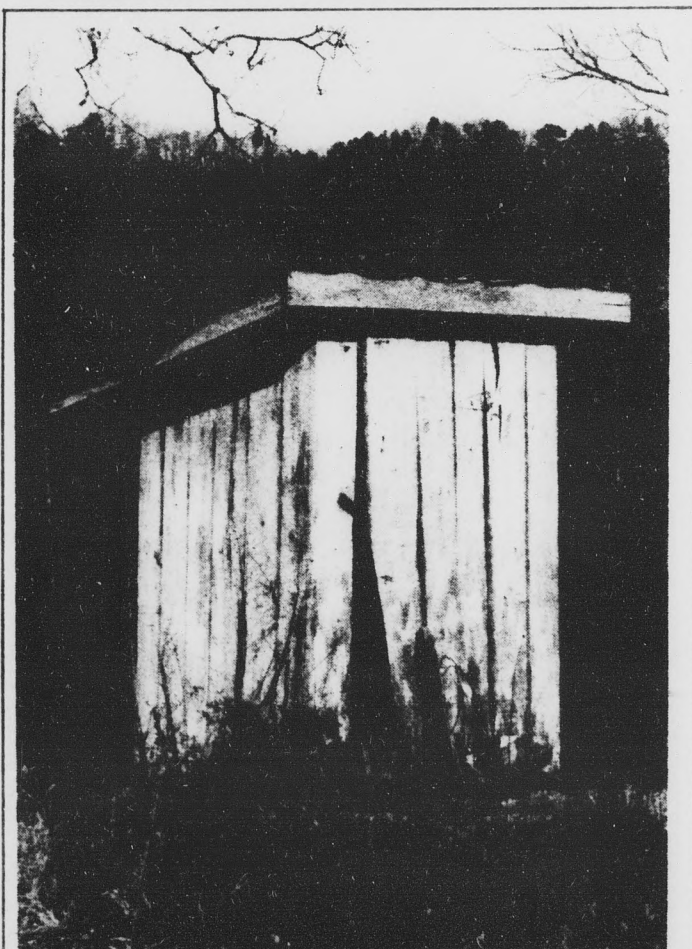

Bigbucks, who said his granduncle Kemper Marley's recommendation to Reject Dwight Pittypat that he be chosen was "perfectly kosher," and added he feels he would fit in well on the Bored.

"I'm as obtuse as any of the rejects," he emphasized. "I know as little or less about Arizona's four universities — and especially about the Arizona State Wildcats — as anybody."

The final decision will be announced as soon as the coin is tossed.

NEW YORK — Relenting to pressure, the major oil companies today vowed to start a gas war, driving prices down to 1970 levels. "We are sick and tired of making huge profits," said Fixx A. Flatt, a spokesman for Exxon.

POLES PURCHASE A-PLANT

WARSAW — The Polish government has made an agreement with the United States to purchase the Three Mile Island nuclear power plant, it was disclosed today. Officials estimated the purchase price at $4.59, plus tax. "I can't believe we unloaded that thing," said one government source, requesting anonymity.

press service," he added.

Avowed nuclear opponent Nada Nuke said the circumstances surrounding the disaster are still unclear.

APS executives said a water pump breakdown exposed the reactor core, but exactly what precipitated the problem is yet unknown, Nuke said.

"One plant janitor told me he had just reclaimed his bubble gum from the containment room when the sirens went off," Nuke said. "The question is — is this a coincidence or were they lying about the Elmer's Glue shortage like they lied about everything else?"

The death toll may reach 1,200,000 before radiation levels are considered safe, according to ASU professor and nuclear accident expert Boris Boomavich.

He advised residents to head for Red Cross stations where coffee, donuts and gas masks are being dispensed.

"However, if your hair starts falling out, you might as well hang it up and leave the donuts for the next guy," he said.

Clerk fires to stardom

Asbestos dust beneficial

By Slim Mulestink

A former ASU file clerk has turned a personal disaster into a bright future.

Bo Dassot, whose fire-eating feats have dazzled audiences coast-to-coast since his first appearance on the Johnny Carson Show in February, said Thursday, he owes his success to his recent exposure to high concentrations of asbestos dust.

Dassot was exposed to the carcinogenic fibers while cleaning files in Moeur Building Feb. 1.

Dassot visited a Scottsdale doctor one week later, complaining of a persistent sore throat. Tests concluded his respiratory tissue had been replaced by a whitish-green fiber coating.

"They told me to make out a will," Dassot said. "All I could think of was my kids. I only make $2.67 per hour."

Dassot, whose asbestos-coated lungs and throat enable him to ingest flame and hold it up to 15 minutes, said he already has saved enough money from personal appearances to put all 33 of his children through college.

"Hell, I've talked to Rep. Bull Pooper, and I'd have a couple of bucks left over if they were non-residents."

Dassot's agent, Dr. E. T. Hooley of Scottsdale, said his client has from six weeks to six months' big money ahead of him.

"We're going to make a killing," Hooley said. "The only precaution we're taking now is to make sure someone else lights his cigarettes."

Dassot said he already has hired a real estate broker to locate land near Harrisburg, Pa. He also has applied for job-training at the Metropolitan Edison Company's nuclear power plant at Three Mile Island.

Hooley said even if the cure doesn't take, Dassot might still have a job in Sunday morning television.

"Reverend Ike retires this year in December and ABC is looking for someone to replace him," Hooley said.

How can you beat a glow-in-the-dark fire-eater who can cure the Asian flu with a handshake?

"Make 'em walk? Hell, they'll be half-way home before the first amen."

Cultist forces students to drink in mass orgy

More than 900 ASU students committed mass fornication in a secluded colony near Gammage Auditorium Monday morning.

Limited news reports from the isolated village indicate that the students, lead by cultist Jed Smut, were forced to copulate in one of the most dramatic and frightening mass orgy in history.

Smut, a reformed fornicator who returned to his old ways just last month, reportedly forced the students to drink from a large tub filled with aphrodisiac-laced cherry Kool-aid before starting the love-in.

"It's no use," Smut was reported as saying.

"We've tried to lead the clean life here, but we might as well give in to the will of God and Aphrodite."

Seven of the cult members managed to escape Smut's armed guerrillas and escaped into nearby bushes. One of them, a 22-year-old coed, described the scene as "a classic example of kinky gratification."

"It was horrible," Sally

Sweetmammery said. "When I left there were bodies everywhere sprawled around the tub of Kool-aid."

"It smelled like cupid's gym," she added.

Lawrence Cuming, director of ASU's counseling service, blames "academic frustration" for Smut's dramatic takeover of the normally chaste students.

"Students just get too pent-up after four years of college," Cuming said. "When Smut came along, they were ripe for the picking."

Saga foods future service sees sag

Saga foods has announced it will be discontinuing service April 3 because of a major cut in its budget at last week's meeting of the Arizona Bored of Rejects.

The food budget, cut in half to just $36.65 for the fiscal 1979-80 school year, is "only a few dollars short of what we need to operate on," head cook I. M. Greazy said Monday.

"With our past budget of almost $790, we were able to fool those silly students and still have a few bucks to splurge on ourselves," Greazy said.

"We could still mass produce the particle board sandwiches on the new budget, but we'd have to cut out all the seasonings used and we just won't do that," Greazy said.

Relax! Radiation can be fun

All right, enough is enough.
Everyone's bitching so loud about that little mishap at Palo Verde yesterday that they've lost track of how wonderful it is to have a nuclear plant here (even though it might not be operational again for a couple years or so, or at least until the debris is cleared away).

Environmental demagogues have managed to dupe the public into believing nuclear radiation in massive doses can be harmful. This simply is not so.

In fact, a test conducted recently by Arizona Public Service proves that basking in the "rays of magic," as the ancient Incas used to call them, actually can prolong orgasms, prevent tooth decay and even enhance aureola enlargement in women's breasts.

But even in light of this indisputable evidence, many people are still insisting Monday's explosion may bring hassles. This paranoia has been brought about by a steady barrage of lies and misinformation promulgated by a handful of radical anti-nuclear reactionaries who would like to see all of us give up blenders.

Face it, folks. We need electricity, lots of it. Otherwise our TVs, vacuum cleaners and blow-driers won't work as well.

And nuclear energy, despite some of its so-called "drawbacks," is by far the most convenient way to get this power. Would you really rather have an ugly coal mine here instead? Or would you care to have your electric toothbrush malfunction whenever it's cloudy outside? Of course not.

Like the Nuclear Regulatory Commission says, everything has a price. The same holds true for nuclear power. If we want its benefits, every now and then we may have to put up with messy incidents like yesterday's. But is that so awful?

OK. So Palo Verde's meltdown may lead to having a few less people around. But what's wrong with that? Instead of being so damn pessimistic, we should try to look for the silver lining in that radiation cloud.

No doubt traffic congestion over the one remaining Salt River crossing will be eased considerably, which should make commuters' journeys to work a little merrier.

And with many of those pain-in-the-ass relatives out of the way, Christmas shopping will be much less hectic this year, no doubt. In fact, lines everywhere — theaters, fast food restaurants, sports events — will be significantly shorter.

Remember, residents have been bitching for a long time that this Valley is growing too fast. Can you think of a quicker, more efficient way to stifle this out-of-control sprawl than a little atomic blast?

But you know, whenever things like this come up in our daily lives, instead of counting our blessings, we tend to panic. Just stop and think for a minute — if radioactivity is so dangerous, why is it named after a radio, which everybody loves?

APS officials have bent over backward to bring the joys of a nuclear plant to Arizona, even though neighboring states get most of its juice. But are Arizonans grateful? Hell no. They jump all over APS' back because of one little mistake. Come on, nobody's perfect!

Wearing gas masks for a few months won't hurt any of us. In fact, you probably know at least a couple people who would look more attractive in one.

APS obviously has the public's best interests at heart. Otherwise, why would our utility rates be so dirt cheap?

When Arizona Public Service officials tell us this cloud will blow over, we should have more faith in them. After all, they've never lied to us before, and there's absolutely no reason to think they would now.

Ban students from office

Editor:

Last month, I looked at one of the ASSASU officers. While at the time nothing seemed unusual to me, later I realized the officer probably was a student.

While this may seem like a petty gripe to some, why should students be allowed to run our student government? The real power base at this institution lies in the administration, and I think it would be much more appropriate if administrators held those key positions.

Electing students to student government can only bring trouble.

Hell, I'm president, and I haven't even copped a good feel all year. Barnes told me he used to get some mud for his turtle every month.

This column is brought to you by the Campus Upoar Committee and the Stale Mess, not as a service but because we have to or we'll lose our jobs. We wish you'd quit complaining and leave us alone, but if you didn't have anything to gripe about we'd be out of work and unable to afford our beer, cigarettes and fast cars. However, we enjoy answering your complaints because it gives us sadistic pleasure knowing how miserable your lives are.

Q: We pay a fortune in tuition and housing fees, so why can't we have a disco in Manzanita? It can be pretty boring up there with such strict visiting hours. Besides, where else can you meet guys other than those lurking in the parking lot late at night?

A: CUC is in the process of bribing the Bored of Rejects into permitting liquor on campus. If Rep. Bull Pooper doesn't interfere and propose a bill increasing the drinking age to 35, there is a good chance a disco will be installed by fall semester.

Q: I drive a Mercedes-Benz 450 SEL to school every day and I'm fed up with the inconvenience of having to park in the riverbed next to someone's rusty Pinto, then having to hike back through the sagebrush only to find the doors covered with dents. Can you reserve me three parking spaces directly in front of the College of Business Administration? Furthermore, have any of you in ASSASU considered forming a car-babysitting service? This would be an excellent way not only to protect our cars but help raise funds for a multi-level parking lot with walls between the spaces.

A: Since we love to help underprivileged students, CUC asked the Bored of Rejects to build a special parking lot for cars costing more than $20,000, complete with valet parking, a carwash and complimentary dust covers. Until it is completed, we recommend you drive your Porsche instead, since it takes up less space.

Q: I would like to know where I can reach the Rev. Jed Smut, as I'd like to teach him a few things about the benefits of sex, drugs and rock'n'roll. Where can I find him?

A: The Rev. Smut can be reached at his office — Hank E. Panky's Holy Adult Books and Novelties, 18th Street and Van Buren. However, CUC doesn't think you can teach him anything he doesn't already know... too bad!

Q: We want nude sun-bathing allowed on Gammage Lawn!

A: Go for it — we're waiting with binoculars. However, if you end up in jail for indecent exposure, don't tell them CUC encouraged you — we'd like to keep our jobs.

Q: Could you please do something about the immaturity of people who complain? They get on my nerves.

A: From now on, anyone who complains will be locked in a room covered with John Travolta posters and forced to listen to Donny and Marie sing "Puppy Love."

A full-color nude centerfold of Pointless Magazine editor Marc Scrap hopefully will be the saving grace for the magazine's faltering circulation, the ASSASU vice president of campus affairs said Monday.

Still Great said the two-page foldout of Scrap in the April 6 edition is expected to make the magazine "the best-selling cheap thrill" on campus.

"This centerfold should really make Pointless take off around here," Great said. "We had an executive meeting last week and decided this was just what the magazine needed — a little more exposure."

ASSASU is reportedly scrambling to dig up the $40,000 fee Scrap is demanding for his two-hour stint in the raw.

The unprecedented centerfold could have further impact beyond salvaging Pointless from the "circulation wastebasket," Great said.

"If Scrap-in-the-raw goes over well, the 'Pointless Pictorial' may become a regular feature," he said.

"And we're anticipating using all the staff members, with Managing Editor Dianne Howlsalot naked in a tub of cool cherry jello for the May edition."

Scrap said he expected his birthday-suit shot to launch his long-awaited career as ASSASU's playbunny.

"If my layout catches on like we think it will, it will be a whole new money maker for myself and ASSASU," he said.

Fickle finger tickles stadium

By Gori Greazy

The ASU Moon Angels have changed their minds about changing their minds and now say they will not fund the Fun Devil stadium expansion unless they are allowed to watch the football games from the 50-yard line in their Winnebagos.

Hairy Rosethorn,

president of the "Moonies", said the club is threatening to tear down the north end of the stadium expansion if ASU doesn't furnish a stocked bar on the sidelines. "It's the least thing those slummies could do," Rosethorn said. "I don't care if those student's vision is blocked. For all the money we have embezzled for this school, the University should at least guarantee a few martinis."

Athletic Director Ferd Mauler said he will be forced into meeting the "Moonies'" demands because he doesn't want to risk defacement of the Mauler monument.

Free booze with tuition increase

By Gori Greazy

In a last desperate attempt to clear a $5,000 annual increase in out-of-state tuition, Rep. Porky Pest, R-Phoenix, tacked the hike onto a bill providing free beer, cigarettes and fast cars to all non-resident students.

"I'm sick of getting flak from ASU students about a tuition increase, so I decided to introduce a bill they can accept," Pest said.

The bill would provide a year's supply of Coors, approximately 582 gallons, and 1,999 packs of cigarettes. It also would provide a Datsun 280Z in every garage.

Pest estimated each non-resident student pays at least $3,000 a year for beer, $2,075 a year for cigarettes and $12,000 a year for the latest-model sports car.

Rep. Pat Wrong, R-Legend City, said she plans to tack on an amendment to use state funds for pot and pizzas.

"Perhaps with this bill, students will spend more time learning how to spell, rather than working or stealing to earn their daily fix at the pizza parlor," she said.

"Maybe then their letters to legislators wouldn't have misspellings. They would realize my first name is not spelled 'Jerkoff.'"

Pest said in-state students wouldn't feel deprived when only out-of-state students get the booze, cigarettes, joints, pizzas and sports cars.

"Arizona kids are straight-laced moral people and don't go in for that stuff anyhow," he said. "It's the California crazies and New York neurotics who corrupt ASU's morals."

Kim, Karen, Barbara and Mary, the 14th floor flying wonders of Manzy, demonstrate their latest technique for receiving an even tan. According to transportation project

Hanging out on the mall teaches tanning methods

In an effort to return students to the classroom during the "sunshine" months, the ASU Liberal Arts college will offer credit next semester to students "hanging out" on the mall.

A sociology class entitled "Mall Sitting" will soon be part of ASU's curriculum said Guido Weekend, the dean of the Liberal Arts college.

"Students cut class to sit on the mall, but would they cut mall to sit in class?" said Weekend.

The class will concentrate on the dangers of nude sunbathing, how to balance your tan through a revolutionary rotisserie method and tanning in sub-zero temperatures.

"Students will be graded on darkness, with points removed for peeling or sun poisoning," Weekend said.

The Liberal Arts college hopes to expand the mall sitting class into a major and eventually offer a graduate program, he added.

Carla Blackbottom, director of ASA, Arizonans Soliciting Attention, is trying to prevent accreditation of the class because "mall sitting could become as popular as ASU football."

"Students' rights will be affected when the Moon Angels take the prime seating near the fountain, with the students being left in the area near the Social Science Building," said Blackbottom.

Lack of shortages harry country

By Very Low

WASHINGTON — The president's advisers on economic matters announced to a shocked public today that, due to unforeseen circumstances, there would be absolutely no shortage of any kind during the month of April.

"The president says the matter is under investigation and urges the general public not to panic," a spokesman for the panel stated.

Reaction to the startling announcement was mixed around the nation's capital today.

"I don't know how this kind of thing could have happened," a senator from one of the midwestern states fumed. "It's obviously the result of gross negligence on somebody's part, and I assure you the Senate will not rest until we find out just how such a thing could have occurred."

Officials from Exxon, General Foods, General Motors and U.S. Steel held a joint press conference to disavow any advance knowledge of the impending glut.

"We pride ourselves on the coordination of our industries to allow at least one shortage somewhere a month — usually two or three," the spokesman said.

"It's just one of those things. Oil thought it was supposed to be paper's month. Paper thought steel was taking it this month. Just a lack of communication."

"But rest assured we'll take care of this just as soon as possible."

Economists did express some worry, however, on what this would do to the country.

"We're in unexplored territory here," one economist said. "There's a chance that, if something like this should reoccur, it might affect the balance of payments, the inflation rate, our entire system."

Peek a boo loosens noggin while roaring obscenities

By Goof Killbreath

An ASU political science professor was subdued and removed in a straitjacket from a classroom by hospital aides Monday morning when the teacher apparently suffered a nervous breakdown.

Lecturing to more than 40 students in the Social Sciences Building, Dr. George Peekaboo, of the political science department, began to "rant and rave" and "shout obscenities," according to students.

The incident occurred during a lecture on the presidential power of veto, said one eyewitness.

"He was talking about the pocket veto when a student in the back of the classroom asked a question. Then all of a sudden he started acting like a madman," the witness said.

"At first I thought he was joking, but when he called the guy who asked the question 'a stupid, barnacled asshole,' threw his book at him and then demanded the class stand at attention and salute. I knew something was wrong," the student said.

Arthur Nouveau, senior art major, the student who asked Peekaboo the question that apparently triggered his manic hysteria, said he was bewildered as to why Peekaboo became so obsessed.

"All I asked was a simple question, man. Like, you know, the concept was hazy in my mind, so I asked him a logical question. Hardly cerebral if you know what I mean?" Nouveau said.

Nouveau, unclear of the pocket veto procedure, asked

Peekaboo about the nature of the veto and what would happen, hypothetically, if the president had a hole in his pocket.

"I was wondering, you know, what would happen if the president had a hole in his pocket," Nouveau said. "Like if Jimmy — what's his name — had a hole in his pocket and the bill fell out and landed on the floor, would the House of Sensations or the Representatives get to vote on it again or would it lay there, like, um, you know, like in a state of anarchy?"

Polly Concupiscent, freshman liberal arts major, said the professor then "screamed 'lookout, Jap zero at 11 o'clock,'" and dived under her desk.

She said he then got up, leaned on her desk and asked if she would like to "keep a lonely sailor company" and that he would only be "in port a short time before returning to action."

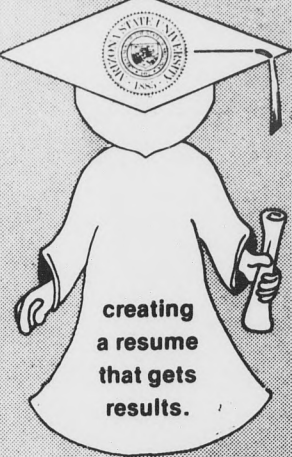

Dr. Hairy Vibrisa, Peekaboo's psychiatrist, speculated that Peekaboo had somehow relived a traumatic experience.

"It is quite common in people Peekaboo's age," he said. "The mind just starts to wear out like a frayed lamp cord," Vibrisa added.

"In Peekaboo's case, I'd chance to guess this has been coming for a long time. He probably has been a certifiable looneytune for the past five years, but he suppressed it (craziness) and hid it well by acting out his daily routine (lectures) without suspicion from his friends (Democrats) or his wife (Republican)," the doctor said.

Peekaboo's wife, Marion, when informed of the incident said, "I knew this would happen some day. I warned George when he first registered Democrat he was signing his ticket to the funny farm."

ASU plans to purchase Texas wall

ASU Provost Hack Cynick said he will meet with Tempe officials Saturday to discuss the University's plans to purchase the Galveston seawall as a flood control measure.

Cynick said Monday the 25-foot high structure, composed of granite blocks and stretching more than seven miles, is the only man-made structure capable of withstanding ravaging Salt River floods.

He said the city of Galveston is asking $15 million for the seawall.

Galveston officials said Monday they had never heard of Hack Cynick, ASU and the seawall was not for sale.

Lease, maybe.

"It is written that only the pervasity of man to steer straight current against the constantly ebbing flow of life may insure his salvation," Cynick said.

"We need that damn wall."

Student stiffens in response to delayed cashier service

By Zanie Tart

The petrified body of an ASU student was found Monday, months after he entered the cashier's office to get change for a dollar, ASU police have revealed.

I.M. Waiting, a 24-year-old philosophy major, apparently entered the cashier's office six months ago in an attempt to obtain four quarters.

He was reported missing and the case remained unsolved until Monday's discovery.

Police said a carbon-dating process was employed to determine the age of the body.

ASU janitor I. Dunno was charged with kidnapping, but the charge was later reduced to petty theft after Waiting was declared dead.

"I didn't know what was wrong with the guy. After he started to collect dust, I moved him," Dunno said.

NOMINATING FORM FOR THE CHARLES WEXLER TEACHING AWARD

Professor Charles Wexler, who served the Department of Mathematics for 47 years, passed away in 1977. Memorial gifts from his family and others have provided funds for an annual award to an outstanding teacher of undergraduate mathematics in the department. The conditions of the award emphasize that teaching assistants be given serious considerations along with those of faculty rank. Students and members of the faculty are encouraged to nominate candidates for the award on this form.

A student may nominate any mathematics teacher he has had while at Arizona State University. An explanation of why the teacher was nominated will be of great value to the Wexler Award Committee. While nominations with several signers are desirable, a single form with a large number of names and no reasons for the nomination will be of limited utility.

Nominations should be given to a member of the committee or turned in to the Mathematics Office. We need them as soon as possible but at the very latest by April 6, 1979.

SRP washes away zit removing Az. from earth

By Suzy Q. Creamcheese

Blythe, Cal. — Phoenix, Ariz., was washed off the face of the earth late Monday night after the utility company controlling water release from local dams there "got fed up" and sandblasted the blockades to smithereens.

Screw the Residents Project (SRP) spokesman and public flack Ron Hitler said the utility made the decision to expand the flood problem into a national disaster after the "overwhelming" lack of cooperation on the part of big wheel state politicians, and local Valleyites.

"We've been pushing for Orme Dam and other obtrusive, ugly harmful obstructions to be built so we can expand and monopolize the utilities efficiently, but people continually put a stopper in our plans," Hitler said.

Hitler added the Orme Dam controversy was a large thorn in SRP's side. Student tubers have persisted in blowing up their innertubes in SRP's front yard, grabbing employees as they walk out, and stuffing them in trios into the tubes, Hitler said.

"We just won't have to tolerate this lack of appreciation and respect from those kids anymore," he said. "They don't know what's good for themselves, anyway. Just look at how they protest the nuclear power plants. You'd think the damn things were poison, the way they talk."

Another reason for the wash-out was the eagle droppings on the utility outpost in east Phoenix saturated the building and employees going to and from work, Hitler said.

Birth control clinic boosts coed activity

By Tickled Recent

Thousands of ASU coeds have been "breeding like rabbits" since the opening of ASU's first birth control clinic, the director of the Student Health Center said Monday.

Dr. Richard Low Moans said campus women apparently have "thrown their morals out the dorm windows."

"Our greatest fears have come true," Moans said. "These women are hunkering down everywhere."

Demands for contraceptives at the "Extra-Horny Girls Services" program are more than 900 percent higher than previously expected, Moans said.

"It's definitely a labian revolution among the coeds," he added.

The trend is causing problems for ASU police, who reported more than three dozen sexual assaults on male ASU students by women in the past week alone.

Drunk legislators caught fleeing Erotica Motel

By Slim Mulestink
and Gori Greazy

Phoenix police have arrested two Arizona legislators after they took part in a high-speed chase spanning more than 60 city blocks.

Rep. Bull Pooper, R-Leisure World, and Rep. Pat Wrong, R-Legend City, were finally apprehended by police just outside the State Capitol.

Police said when the vehicle finally came to a halt, Pooper emerged declaring "diplomatic immunity."

He was charged with drunken and reckless driving and Wrong with obscenity and public drunkenness.

Police said the chase began near the intersection of 40th and Van Buren streets when police, responding to a complaint, attempted to stop the vehicle driven by Pooper.

Nobat Uri Synkloodt, owner of the Erotica Motel, 11111 E. Van Buren, Phoenix, called police at 10:30 p.m. Saturday. He said two customers came to his office complaining loudly when their TV set blew out.

He said the two sped away after ransacking a glass display case containing erotic hardware.

A Breathalyzer showed Pooper to have 25 times the legal alcohol level allowed under Arizona law. A test of Wrong proved to be "immeasurable," police said.

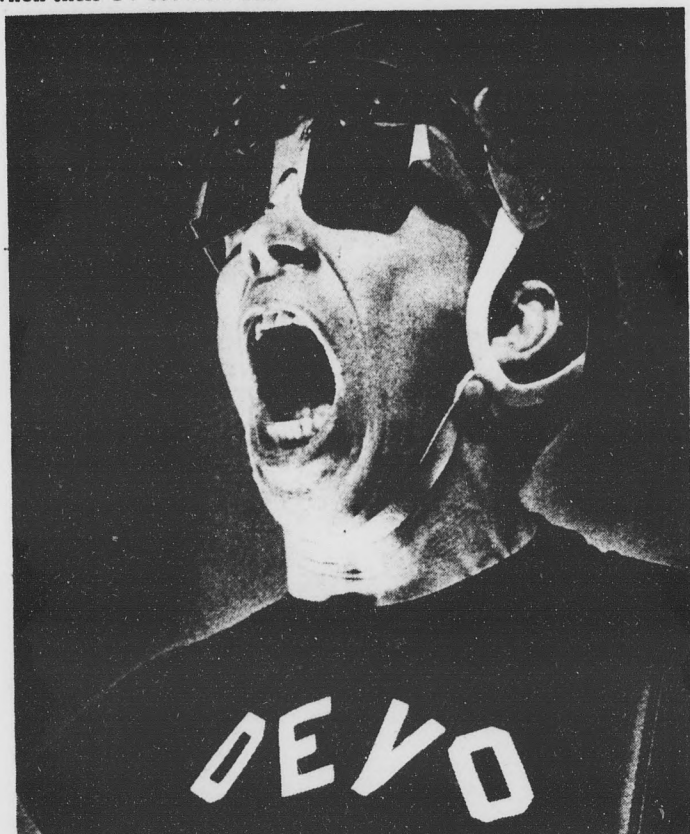

Booking procedures were delayed about an hour when the back seat of the police car used to transport the two lawmakers to division headquarters caught fire.

Officers blamed the incident on a burning cigarette. Wrong had reportedly sat on it after an officer told her smoking was not allowed.

Wrong said she "didn't feel a thing."

At a press conference today, Pooper confirmed that he and Wrong were leaving the Erotica Motel when the chase began.

"Pat and I had won the Win-A-Free-Night-At-The-Erotica-Motel contest sponsored by the ASU Society of Professional Journalists," he said.

Raffle winner to be allotted night in motel

The ASU Lesbian Society is sponsoring a raffle for its "Set Us Straight Days," Friday through April 9.

Society Chairman Dixie Van Dyke said the booth, which will open on the mall Wednesday, will be selling $1 chances to all male students.

"The winner gets to spend 24 hours with me at the Holiday Inn," she said.

"The event is being sponsored to dispute charges that 'all we need is a few good men,' she added.

However, an unidentified society spokesman said, "We're taking side bets on whether Dixie will remain in the club after the winner gets his prize. When Dixie ran for chairman with the slogan 'I'll be straight with you,' this wasn't what we had in mind."

God suggests moving ASU away from river

By Slim Mulestink

ASU will be relocated next fall to the corner of Hardy and Baseline, a spokesman for the Almighty said Monday.

Caige D. Allinfun, ASU provost, said the Lord spoke to him during a meeting that morning with the Faculty Association.

"I'd only been asleep a few moments when a blinding light appeared out of the east, from over the Physical Breakdowns plant," Allinfun said.

Allinfun added Rev. C. Thru Yoo had just completed the benediction when a vision of the upcoming game against the Philistines in Tucson interrupted his thoughts.

"I became weary," Allinfun said. "Suddenly, this voice came booming at me, telling me I must move the children of ASU further from the Salt River to a location near Guadalupe."

Allinfun said the voice, which bore a resemblance to Physical Breakdowns Director Hurb Gay, also spoke of restitution for Allinfun's repeated attempts to locate a parking lot on the north side of Fun Devil Stadium.

"The voice said materials for construction could be floated down the Salt to the site of an ancient Hohokam Indian canal, then maneuvered to a site closer to the Superstition Freeway," he said.

Allinfun added previous negotiations with God and the Army Crop of Engineers to merely part the Salt had fallen through.

Allinfun has been under investigation by the ASU budget staff after it was revealed two weeks ago he had purchased a complete set of Sears Craftsman wood-shop tools totalling more than $5,000.

Albert Goldlips, budget director, said, "We still aren't sure where he got the money or what he intends to build."

"We're looking into another report of more than 40,000 cubic feet of lumber pilfered from campus job sites."

 Arizona State University

ASASU Reports:

MU 208J • 965-3161 • April 3, 1979

By Mark J. Scarp
 ASASU Student Information Officer

A renewed effort by legislators in support of an out-of-state student tuition hike was passed by the House Education Committee, 13-3, during spring break. House Bill 2214, which is actually the capital outlay request for the three state universities, now has a rider attached to raise out-of-state tuition $500 per annum. The move is primarily sponsored by Rep. Pat Wright, R-Glendale, one of the original sponsors of the first bill, HB 2265. House Bill 2265 was defeated by the full House on March 15, 31-26.

Associated Students, through its Legislative Task Force headed by Director of Legislative Affairs Bruno Dispoto, is working to defeat this infringement on student rights, just as it had a hand in the defeat of HB 2265. Your support is encouraged, as the danger of higher tuition for nonresident students is just as real now as it was a few weeks ago. Contact Dispoto at ASASU if you want to lend any help you can.

Revisions in ASASU's Articles of Association will go on the ballot in the ASASU General Election April 11-12. The changes, if passed, will usher in a student senate, a supreme court, alter eligibility requirements for candidates for ASASU office and clean up vague language in the current document with regard to duties and responsibilities of ASASU service agencies. The First Council passed the revisions unanimously before spring break.

Student leaders renew effort to beat latest tuition hike bill

Approximately $150,000 for an ASU radio station, staffed and manned by student-professionals was approved by the First Council and forwarded to the academic vice president and provost, Paige Mulhollan, for final okay and appeal to the Arizona Board of Regents. If the board approves, ASU could be on the way toward generating its own radio signals by next year.

More than $600,000, triple any previous request, was okayed by the First Council as the annual ASASU budgetary request for 1979-80. The recent annexation of the campus radio station, the intramural department, the ASU cheer line, Point Magazine and the ASASU Travel Bureau are the reasons for the size of the request. If approved by the University, students will have control over the largest share of managing student affairs in ASU's history.

The recent problems women on campus have incurred with assaults, particularly during nighttime hours, have not been ignored by ASASU. President Lance Ross has met with University officials in an attempt to rectify the problem through better lighting, improved self-defense programs, and increased shuttle services from central campus to dormitories during nighttime hours.

Recent documents requested by former ASASU President Mark Barnes from the Central Intelligence Agency containing information pursuant to alleged CIA activity on campus has not been delivered. An appeal to the CIA, based on the Freedom of Information Act, is currently being filed. They have been notified by ASASU that court action may be in the offing if the documents are not released to the student government.

ASASU Elections for president, executive vice president, campus affairs vice president and activities vice president, in primary elections April 4-5 and general elections April 11-12. Polling places will dot the campus malls. Forums for candidates to offer their views will be held Tuesday, April 3 at Sahuaro Hall from 7 to 8:30 p.m., and in Palo Verde Main Monday, April 9 from 8 to 9:30 p.m.

You are encouraged to cast your ballot for the candidates of your choice.

Gratefully dead

Sid--contented limbo-rocker

Editor's note: The following is a posthumous discussion with punk rocker Sid Vicious who passed from this earth a few months ago. Sid is now blissfully doing time in limbo but has continued to be the writer's role model.

Q. So Sid how does it feel to be dead?

A. "Well, ahhh I don't know. Rock and roll was great to me but I think I've really found me niche... dead you know. Life is cool but it just wasn't for me, ya know. I was always messin' up ya know, locking me girlfriend in the closet and hackin' at me wrists."

Q. Would you say then, that you could be classified as a social outcast?

A. Sure, no question, what do you think I'm doin' here at this age. I was 22 when the plug got pulled, ye know.

Q. Let's get down to brass tacks Sid. Are you, or rather were you, into heroin?

A. I've continued me interest in exploring the mind you know, but I wouldn't call it physical addiction. It's strictly recreational, just to pass the time and not be bored. When I was with the Sex Pistols I needed something to get me through them shows ya know with all the spittin' and throwin' up onstage and such. Part of the business, is it is like a businessman's martini and Valium, only you inject it.

Q. Come on Sid, you have to admit the stuff really messed you up, unless of course you were bent to begin with?

A. True, I had some close scrapes because of the white stuff.

Q. Let's talk music. Do you believe people will remember the Sex Pistols or Sid Vicious in years to come or were they just a flash in the pan, a shot in the dark?

A. The Pistols were raw energy. We didn't know what the hell we were doin' onstage, just went up there and banged away, but it came out soundin' like humminbirds in May, ya know. Johnny Rotten and me could rock all night, but it was just personality conflict that broke us up. Too much creative energy bumping around. We'll be in the same category as the Beatles when everybody comes around to the sound.

Q. People say you didn't even know how to play guitar and had absolutely no musical training. Any comment?

A. Technically true, but we made up for it with the special effects, if you know what I mean, he he he...

Q. How about the media Sid? You seemed to be in the papers with a new disaster about every two weeks. Do you think they treated you fairly?

A. Them leaches followed me like a pack of bloody hounds. When I killed me girlfriend, strangled her ya know, they just about fried me in the papers. When I sliced me wrists with the light bulb, same thing. No respect, just no respect.

Q. Sounds bitter Sid. Do you mean you didn't get a fair shake in life?

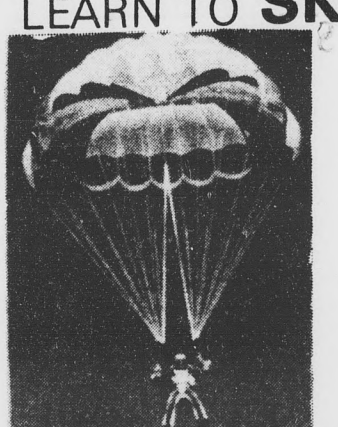

A. Damned straight. Me whole life crumbled before it ever got going, maybe I should have gotten into religion (sigh).

Q. Looks like you've put on weight. Is limbo treating you well?

A. Sure is. I'm filling out a touch. Fact is I tipped the scales at over 100 pounds last week and I haven't had too many gigs lately to burn it off.

Q. What's next Sid?

Limbo doesn't exactly have the greatest opportunities for newly dead punk rockers.

A. Good question. Probably just hang out with the other rockers. Hendrix, Keith Moon and the boys. They're good souls, ha ha, you get it, good souls, ya know — dead ... No seriously, we've got something going that could turn out o.k., it's a three piece band called "Suicide" with Keith and myself. There's quite a demand for rock and roll here in limbo and I'm learning how to play guitar to. I know two chords now, but it's so hard to get me pinkie way down there....

Winters to recall past fat and fun

The ASU Film Society will present a Shelley Winters film festival at Neeb Hall Saturday.

Ms. Winters will personally appear at the festival at noon in the MU, Neeb Hall and Hayden Library.

The two-time Academy award winning actress will offer personal reminiscences of her career and answer the fashion question of the decade; "How to Wear Black and Still Look Fat."

Ms. Winters also will present a slide presentation on the making of "The Poseidon Adventure" including candid shots of Gene Hackman and Ernest Borgnine boarding Shelley when she was docked at Long Beach.

Mauler makes jet-set

By Sans Sams

Declaring a new era of candor, ASU Athletic Director Dr. Ferd Mauler today fired his secretary, established his outer office as a press hospitality room and actually granted this reporter an interview.

"$600,000? What $600,000?" he said candidly over the phone from his new office overlooking the beach in Rio de Janeiro.

"As you know, service charges on tickets and interest from the fan has increased and the Fiesta Bowl was successful. Gardening the State of the union will not be dissolved my partnership and hotel me what was your name again — Pac 10 — we really packed 'em in, huh?" he said.

"Now, am I making myself perfectly clear?" he asked.

Mauler explained the need for a jet-set athletic director.

"I now have offices in Rio, Paris, Peking and Sausalito. It's competition. You don't think USC and other schools are sitting still right now, do you?"

"Getting the foreign student is the new vogue in college athletics. Now that we're friends with Red China, we're considering requesting the attendance-for purely athletic-er, cultural reasons, of course — of that 7-foot, umpteen-inch center that played for the Chinese national team.

"There is a new, untapped market here in Rio," he said. Latin American baseball players are known throughout the world. But I figured, why don't we ever hear of Brazilian ballplayers? Because nobody ever tried to recruit them before!

"Of course the football team is always looking for the biggest, baddest players on the globe.

"Rank Lush has told me to look for some great football players. I'm in contact with Idi Amin to see if he might want to play football for us."

"Amin may be small by Pac-10 standards, but scouting reports say he makes up for it in ferocity," Mauler said.

"I see him playing headhunter squad," he snickered.

"I'll be traveling to places as far removed as Berlin, Salt Lake City and Jonestown, Guyana, looking for very special type players. Players for the suicide squad," he said.

"Of course we did not recruit any offensive tackles for the '79 Sun Devils, so I'll be traveling to Japan to try to sign some Sumo wrestlers. Can you imagine that? Two of them, 6-foot-6, 400 pounds. I just hope they make it through Camp Tontozona."

"And soccer kickers are high on my list for possible punters

Ferd Mauler

— hell, they could kick sideways and still give us better punts than we had last season."

"We're working on minor sports, too," he said. "I'll be taking a trip to the Red China Sea soon to try to recruit some swimmers," he said.

"And, I plan on doing some very extensive scouting on the beach at Acapulco for some divers — that may take weeks!" he predicted.

This reporter was getting impatient. This was incredible. The legend of Ferd Mauler, gonzo athletic director was growing by laughs and frowns.

But what about all the rumors circulating at ASU that the athletic department could fire teachers at will, that few of the athletes ever graduated, that ASU was simply an athletic machine?

A click on the line preceded a tiny rendition of the ASU Alma Mater, sung acappella by Mauler, then he drew in a breath and said: "Making the grade, 45-degree angle, Lush's Mountain — Fountain of knowledge-have no knowledge — Fire out! Out of state! State your business — sports is a business — gimme the business, willya?"

CLICK. BUZZ. HUUUM- MMMMMMMMMM.

ASU loses a stinker

By Jack O'Shitnessey

KILBARRY-CORK, Ireland — The ASU soccer club lost out on its top recruit Monday, but coach Barry Farter said it was "no big deal."

"He stinks," Farter said. "Literally."

The player, wing-threequarter Diarrhea O'Charmin, 25, who is nicknamed "The Irishman," seems to have only two drawbacks. First, he doesn't like to take showers, and second, he likes using toilet paper when it is still on the roll.

"You might make that three," Farter added. "He also likes to throw the used rolls behind the toi-toi."

On his last recruiting visit two weeks ago, the Irishman's arrival coincided with a red-alert evacuation of the ASU campus. Farter said it was necessary to avoid mass-contamination of the students.

"Yeah, it was a pilot's scheme devised just to get the ol' stinker on campus," Farter said. "We figured, if we brought him here when no one was around, he'd go unnoticed."

However, damage to campus foliage and to buildings because of peeling and molding paint resulted from the Irishman's quick stroll down the campus main mall. Damage was estimated by ASU's Physical Plant at $1.3 million.

Reached at home, the Irishman said he had several alternatives to other schools he could attend in place of ASU.

"I could go someplace where there already is an air pollution problem, like L.A. Or else, I could attend a place where water is bloody scarce. However, I am leaning towards a place which supplies Soft and Pretty floral design toilet paper."

The only campus in the U.S. which has Soft and Pretty is Pennsylvania University, which has the appropriate initials P.U.

"The Irishman" — ASU's latest rugby recruit, demonstrates the act that has made him a scourge of Europe. As ASU coach Barry Farter says, "He's a real stinker." [Stale Mess staph foto by Crisp Fawn]

'It was the worst'

ASU baseball coach Bim Crock on the misfortunes of his Fun Devil baseball team in the Pac-10's first few weeks:

"It was the best of times, it was the worst of times, it was the age of wisdom, it was the age of foolishness, it was the epoch of relief, it was the epoch of incredulity, it was the season of light, it was the season of darkness, it was the spring of hope, it was the winter of despair, we had everything before us, we had nothing before us, we were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going the other way..."

Negative ad campaign planned

By Dick Van Dyke

The J.C. Halfwhitted Advertising Agency, which designed the 1978-79 Fun Devil television and radio ad campaign with tremendous failure, has been hired again to handle the 1979-80 account, a source close to the athletic department said Monday.

Ferd Mauler, 46, athletic director at ASU, said the firm's failure mark with athletic department ad campaigns will work in reverse this season, as negative ads and commercials will be used as what Mauler calls "reverse psychology."

"The theme for 1979-80 will be 'ASU — Lagging Behind The PAC,'" said Mauler. "We will gear our ads to make people think we'll have losing teams everywhere, so when we win, it'll be such a shock you'll think we turned them on to 100,000 volts of electricity."

The tables will be turned as far as the people appearing in the new commercials which will air in the fall. Instead of picking former and present ASU star players and coaches, Mauler and Bill Raunchy, who directed this past season's catastrophe, have come up with some real duds to "promote" ASU athletics.

"We've got Rooky Matalli and Turdle Lame to do football ads, and Fran Zbikowski and Buddy Backry to do the baseball commercials," Mauler said.

"But the biggest duds we've managed to come up with were in basketball," Raunchy added. "We've lined up Grog Zilverbugger, Jim Buttocks, Trike Meddler and Nerd Bilk — the coach — himself."

One sneak preview allowed the Stale Mess included Bilk's commercial. It shows a hundred or so fans in a scene from last year, in which Bilk was tarred and feathered during his postgame radio show. Then Bilk turns to the camera with an "aha" look and says: "You guys thought you got rid of that Nerd Bilk thing last year. But I survived and I'm back again this year to lead the Fun Devils into last place. Be sure and come see us play, and then after we lose, you can tar and feather me again. It makes for a season so interesting, it may force me into retirement!"

But Mauler said, "My favorite ad of all is the one in which Turdle Lame is reaching down his pants leg for No. 1."

Fun Devil fullback Arter "Turdle" Lame takes a page from the 1977 ASU football pre-season goal and "Reaches for No. 1."

ARE CULTURED PEARLS FAKES?

No, cultured pearls are not fakes. Only imitation or simulated stones may properly be called fakes, and cultured pearls don't fall under that category. Cultured pearls are not what you'd call synthetic, either, although man does have something to do with the process of formation. Have I lost you yet? Allow me to define my terms.

An imitation or simulated gem resembles an important gemstone but is an entirely different substance. It's usually man-made.

A synthetic gemstone is also man-made, but its chemical, physical and optical properties are essentially identical to the natural stone. The main difference is that it's grown by man in a laboratory instead of by nature in the earth.

Cultured pearls are in a category of their own. Man does initiate the growing process, but then nature takes over. Here's how it works.

A small sphere of shell is introduced into a pearl-bearing oyster. Then it's returned to the sea to let nature take its course. The oyster's defense system secretes a substance called nacre to cushion itself against the irritant. Layer upon layer of nacre form around the sphere, producing a fairly uniform, round, luminous body — a pearl. Natural pearls undergo the same process, only the irritant enters purely by chance.

No, cultured pearls are not fakes. They're just as much a wonder of nature as are natural pearls. Thanks to man's ingenuity, more people are able to enjoy the pearl's beauty than if we had to rely on the scarce supply of natural pearls.

Coach Bilk wants back in WAC basketball action

By Gym Shitslinger

ASU head basketball coach Nerd Bilk has offered to pay $250,000 for the right to reenter the Western Athletic Conference.

In the conference's yearly organizational meeting, Bilk made the offer to the Admissions Committee, saying he would do anything to get back to the WAC, "even kiss Brigham Young's picture."

Bilk smashed down the door to the main conference room where the meetings were being held. He used a telephone pole for a ramming rod, and started approximately 200 feet away. The door reportedly gave way after 20 to 30 rams.

WAC officials were reported as saying "who's there" on the 20th ram. When Bilk finally made his entrance, one official said, "Oh, it's only crazy Nerdly."

Bilk, in a raging fit, tried to strangle two of the officials, threw basketballs at the others and yelled "lemmein, wheeu, lemmein."

Even in a pitiful showing of begging and pleading at the knees of the WAC officials, Bilk wanted to make it clear that this request had nothing to do with his team's "screw-up" in the Pac-10 this year.

"Ah, we could have won if we wanted to," Bilk said. "The Pac-10 just doesn't have the same friendly atmosphere that the WAC does."

"In the Pac-10 all they think about is win, win, win. They're out for blood, and I'm sick of it. In the WAC it's a devil-may-care attitude. They're above winning. They like clean air and fellowship."

Bilk has asked the University for an advance on his salary over the next 50 years to pay the $250,000. When asked whether he thought he would be here that long, he replied, "Hell yes, I don't care what those punk kids on that team say."

When asked whether he thought he would live long enough to repay the advance, he replied, "Hell yes, I don't care what those punk kids on that team say."

Ferd Mauler, ASU athletic director, was a little more pessimistic about Bilk's request.

"We aren't running this program for the benefit of some balding, has-been coach," Mauler said. "We're in the big time now and we'll squash any ant that gets in our way."

"The creep gets my vote of confidence though," Mauler added.

The WAC committee has refused comment on the request until a decision is reached, but did say in a release that Bilk should be examined before any commitment is made.

Greggie Goo-Goo, a member of the ASU team, said he "would follow his coach anywhere but wouldn't play for him."

"I just think he's neat," Goo-Goo said. "Plus he's rich. I follow him hoping he'll drop some money and I can catch a bus to L.A."

The incident is being investigated by the NCAA also, and according to NCAA officials the Bilk offer has brought up serious doubts as to the credibility of college basketball.

"It's a shame this had to be publicized," Dan Dastardly, an NCAA executive vice-president making $2 million a year, said. "We don't need this in our program. These buy-offs should be kept from the public. We clean our own laundry. If someone is allowed to buy his way into a conference, then the next step is buying officials off or even league reps."

"Say, that's a good idea, how come I didn't think of that," Bilk said after learning of the NCAA investigation.

Bilk is currently staying at the Fony Reno Estates, a resting home for coaches who turn purple when they have to call a time out during a basketball game.

"I'm just getting my knees back in shape," Bilk said. "I did a lot of grappling the other day at those conference meetings. I sure hope they lemmein, or else I'll have to start a conference of my own."

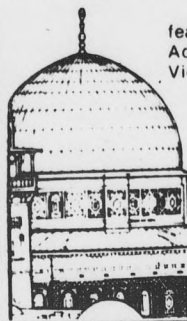

Fan reaction to the offer was mixed, with some saying Bilk should be hung from the Activity Center by his jock strap, while the more positive replies gave Bilk the benefit of the doubt and would let him "thumb hang."

USC goes in blind

ASU's stunning upset of USC last Oct. 14 may be negated as the NCAA has discovered that ASU athletic director Ferd Mauler rigged the game to satisfy the Moon Angel boosters.

In a 10-page report, the NCAA claimed the reason ASU won was because they did not actually play the top-ranked Trojans, but the Braille Institute, posing as USC.

SPORTS

from the Assimilated Mess

TEMPE (AM) — Wheat Berry, long, long time sports editor of the Stale Mess, was hospitalized yesterday for what doctors have termed "devilitis."

Doctor Morey Cutyouup said Wheat Berry was apparently possessed by a devil while writing a knock-knock column on ASU sports and was thrown across the room.

"Wheat Berry is starting to turn maroon and gold," Cutyouup said.

"What happens in these cases is the person turns maroon on one side of his body and gold on the other, thus looking something like that stupid mascot that ASU uses," he added.

Cutyouup said the results of the race disease vary, but lasting effects take on the form of rooting, especially in ASU press boxes at sporting events or doing some type of booster article for a newspaper.

Wheat Berry complained of mild possession last week, the Stale Mess has learned.

"One day he got thrown across the room," Dick Van Dyke, long time friend and associate of Wheat Berry, said. "He got knocked unconscious and when he woke up he liked Rank Lush. I tried to revive him, but all he could do was say how great Lush was and what he meant to ASU sports."

Wheat Berry, who is still hospitalized, has not been a booster of ASU sports. He was once quoted as saying, "I wish they would all blow away, then I could do all those neat features on obscure athletes that nobody likes. That would be seventh heaven."

TEMPE (AM) — ASU tennis coach Party Pinko, infuriated about not winning a Welch Pony in the semi-monthly raffles at Fun Devil baseball games, hung himself in his Oasis Hotel apartment last night, Tempe police said.

Pinko, 33, was believed to have a fetish for the animals. Police would not elaborate.

"The man was obviously a psycho," said Sgt. Martin Milner. "He probably never had a straight thought in his life."

Pinko is survived by his tennis team, two trainers, eight pairs of sneakers, a maroon-and-gold Volkswagen van, three dozen tennis balls and an overdue lease.

Funeral arrangements have not been finalized until his next of kin — a life-size teddy bear — have been notified.

berry

No immediate successor has been chosen to replace Pinko, but ASU athletic director Ferd Mauler is believed to be seeking another mafia-figure friend.

MINNEAPOLIS (AM) — Former Phoenix TV sports personality Steve Pathetic was killed early Monday when his head blew up.

Details, sketchy at this time, indicate Pathetic's inflato-hair — his trademark at Phoenix's Channel 12 when he was an announcer there — might have been attacked by a stick-pin wielding mauler in a Minneapolis gay bar. His head then burst into flames.

One report quoted the attacker as screaming at Pathetic, "I'm really going to stick it to you," just milliseconds before the pin struck Pathetic's perfectly-puffed hair.

Minneapolis police say the tragedy could have been avoided had the 25-year-old Pathetic not pumped his hair up to 60 pounds.

TEMPE (AM) — ASU athletic director Ferd Mauler was arrested today outside the stadium named in his honor, trying to sell season Fun Devil football tickets to three undercover police agents posing as poor Mexican children.

Mauler, 46, offered no resistance to the arrest, muttering only, "Cops... the dirty rotten fuzz..."

He is being held without bond, pending further questioning.

TEMPE (AM) — Former Arizona State assistant track coach Dick Durcell, convicted of stealing tools from a Mesa, Ariz. home last year, has signed a three-year motion picture contract with MGM to portray Al Mundy in "It Takes a Thief."

Track renamed

For the third time in three years, there has been a name change at ASU's track and field facility.

Now it is "Senile's Place" named after the woefully lousy head coach of ASU track, Senile A. "Curly" Caspitto.

"It's an advertising ploy," said Caspitto, eating a greasy Monster Burger from Pete's Fish and Chips, co-sponsors of the stadium name change. "Now Pete's will advertise, 'Eat at Pete's, Run at Senile's.'"

Invitation to apply for

STATE PRESS EDITORSHIP

The ASU Student Publications Advisory Board is now soliciting applications for the State Press editorship for the Fall Semester 1979.

Applicants for the position of editor:

- must have a cumulative grade index of 2.20 or better;
- must have either two semesters' service on the staff of the State Press or responsible editorial experience with a commercial, college, or university newspaper; and
- must have been a full-time student at ASU for at least the two consecutive semesters prior to applying.

Candidates must also:

- submit at least two letters of recommendation from university faculty members and/or professional journalists;
- list on the application form the titles of all journalism courses completed and the grades earned in those courses;
- submit at least two examples of a news story, feature story, or editorial written for the State Press or another newspaper; and
- describe on the application form the functions and responsibilities of previous positions held on the staff of the State Press or other newspapers.

Candidates must pick up at the State Press office, Room A-111, Stauffer Hall, application forms. The completed forms must be typewritten.

Applicants for the position of editor must be available for one or more interviews by the Board between 3:00 and 6:00 p.m. on the day specified for selecting the editor.

The Board will interview candidates for Fall Semester editor (1979) on Friday, April 13, 1979.

The deadline for receipt of applications will be Friday, April 6 at 4 p.m.

Applicants need not be journalism majors; candidates from all disciplines are invited.

Resident whores sponsor ASU team

By Sans Sams

"You might say we lost the bottle, but won the whore," laughed ASU Rugby coach Barry Farter.

"Actually, you might say anything you want in this article — you usually do," he said.

Farter is a long-lost third brother to Jimmy and Billy Farter. He hails from Rightbetweenplains and Americus-georgia, Wales.

Since it receives only three-day old Fritos and the bubblegum from old baseball cards from the ASU athletic department, the rugby club needs a sponsor.

"We thought we might get sponsored by a major brewery. But evidently, it's more profitable for the breweries to simply sell their products to us on a 20-keg discount than to sponsor us."

"Our team, after much contact with possible sponsors, came up dry."

"Then, on Saturday night, we were approached — uh — solicited — uh that is to say a group called Heart of Gold put forth the proposition — unh — they talked to us about becoming our sponsor."

"After being escorted — er walked, to the nearest bar, we had an interesting parlor — er, parley."

"Heart of Gold represents a group of independent businessmen and working women who provide a much-needed service to every community. They fill a hole — oh no, strike that — let's just say kinda bare their soul, being of the body of thought that it's better to keep potential criminals off the streets and in sleazy trailers and cheap motels — unh, spacious mobile homes and the finest in temporary accommodations — where they belong."

"You might say Heart of Gold

just rubbed us the right way.

Our muscles were aching from rugby practice that afternoon, and we received the best massages to work out all our tensions and frustrations."

"But before you go saying that the squad is prostituting itself, let me tell you the terms of the sponsors," Farter gasped.

"We say nice things about them and they aid us in three ways — we get transported to away games in Cadillacs, Rolls' or Mercedes, upholstered in rabbit fur to pamper our bruised bodies — we get our lodgings and meals free — and third, though this is completely off the record —"

Farter hung up when told this reporter doesn't believe in off the record.

While typing this, a shapely redhead, clad only in a skimpy halter and shorts a millimeter away from being a g-string appeared at this reporter's door.

Uhh — Ahhh — Heart of Gold — donations? Oooh — Yeahh!! Hell with work, I'm gonna play rugby.
