Board elects UA attorney as new legal adviser

By Tricia Reeson

The Arizona Board of Regents has chosen a former attorney from the University of Arizona as its new legal adviser.

Charles D. Adams, 33, was selected unanimously Saturday at a regents meeting in Tucson. The appointment is effective immediately.

Adams is replacing former adviser Blair Benjamin, who announced last month he will be ending his seven-year stint with the board to go into private practice.

A 1974 UA law school graduate, Adams has served as legal counsel for that university for the past five years.

His experience working for UA will "overlap" with his new job, Adams said Monday, but with "some substantial differences" in where his influence will be felt.

"The universities deal with day to day operations. The board's perspective is towards all three universities and setting policies for them."

Adams said he expects to have "some impact" on the board's policies and would influence its decisions "to the extent that any policy decision involves the legal counsel."

In the face of pressure from students and faculty lobbyists, Adams said his top priority will be representing the regents, although he expects in most cases to give "objective legal counsel."

"As a lawyer hired to represent the regents, I think my job in part is to represent the board and my stance will reflect that," Adams said.

"If the board has taken a position (on an issue), it would be my position to represent it."

Carla Blackwell, director of the Arizona Students Association, said Adams was "open-minded" and had indicated a willingness to work with the students.

Regents approve department shift to create college

By Lori Grzesiek

The Arizona Board of Regents has approved the reshuffling of several academic departments to create a new College of Public Programs at ASU.

The sweeping reorganization "will permit more efficient operation of academic programs, create a more logical alignment of disciplines and recognize substantial growth in several disciplinary areas," said William Phillips, regent academic planning coordinator.

At the board's Saturday meeting, it approved a plan calling for a new college which will include: the present Centers for Criminal Justice and Public Affairs, a department of journalism and telecommunication, a department of leisure studies and a department of communication.

The department of journalism and telecommunication will encompass the present department of mass communication.

The new department of leisure studies is the result of a split between recreation and the existing department of health, physical education, recreation and dance. Also derived from that department will be a new department of dance.

Speech and hearing science will form a separate department in the College of Liberal Arts.

Removed from the existing department of humanities and religious studies, an autonomous department of religious studies will be located within the College of Liberal Arts.

The new college will begin operation July 1 with 53 faculty members and 2,600 students.

ASU Provost Paige Mulhollan said department reorganization has been discussed for about eight years at ASU. He stressed the University is not asking for "any new resources" from the regents.

Mulhollan added the primary purpose of the plan is to organize the departments in a logical manner.

"Many units have functioned with virtual autonomy from the groups they are associated with despite the fact that they were in the same department," he said.

Phillips said there will be no staff changes in the reorganized departments, but the new college will require a dean and secretary.

He estimated funding for those positions will cost approximately $50,000, which will be reallocated from the old departments.

from the Associated Press

IRANIAN GENERAL ASSASSINATED

TEHRAN, Iran — Gunmen killed a high-ranking military officer of the new government Monday in the first assassination of a major figure of the revolution. Gen. Mohammad Vali Gharani, the former army chief of staff, was shot in his garden and died during surgery. New fighting broke out between ethnic minorities in the northwestern town of Nakhadeh after the second government-sponsored ceasefire in three days collapsed. A third truce was called Monday night and appeared to be holding.

SAUDIS SEVER EGYPTIAN RELATIONS

RIYADH, Saudi Arabia — Saudi Arabia decided Monday to break diplomatic relations with Egypt in compliance with the Baghdad Arab summit decision last month to impose sanctions against the Cairo government, the official Saudi news agency reported. The sanctions are intended to punish President Anwar Sadat for signing a peace treaty with Israel.

GOVERNOR BACKS NON-EVACUATION

WASHINGTON — Pennsylvania Gov. Dick Thornburgh said Monday that he believes he acted correctly in deciding against evacuating tens of thousands of people from the vicinity of the Three Mile Island nuclear accident. "I could not in good conscience have ordered such a step with the facts at my disposal," he said. Testifying before a Senate subcommittee, Thornburgh also said the crisis makes him doubt the country should continue to rely on nuclear power as a significant source of energy.

AMIN SHOPS FOR ARMS

NAIROBI, Kenya — Ousted dictator Idi Amin visited Iraq over the weekend on an Arab-states shopping tour for weapons to make a comeback in his tribal birthplace in northwestern Uganda, Arab diplomats said Monday. Their reports raised the prospect of protracted fighting that could drain the energies of provisional president Yusufu Lule's 2-week-old government as it seeks to repair economic damage caused by six months of war, two weeks of looting and eight years of Amin's rule.

RAINS PLAGUE MINNESOTA

Weary volunteers worked in incessant rains Monday to fight back the Red River, which rose to its highest point this century at East Grand Forks, Minn. Its waters breached dikes and spilled through city streets and affluent neighborhoods. More rain also bode more trouble for Columbia, Miss., on the Pearl River, where half the town's 7,500 residents have been homeless for several days, waiting for the flooding river to recede. More than 2 inches had fallen since Sunday, and the National Weather Service had predicted 3 or more inches could send the river back up again.

CAMBODIANS FLEE VIET OFFENSIVE

BANGKOK, Thailand — Fifty-thousand Cambodians fleeing a major Vietnamese offensive in their own country trekked south along the frontier, inside Thailand, apparently on their way to sanctuary in the rugged mountains of southwestern Cambodia, newsmen at the scene said Monday. The large number of refugees, as well as victory claims by the new pro-Vietnam Cambodian regime of President Heng Samrin, indicated the forces of toppled pro-China Premier Pol Pot were suffering heavy losses in western Cambodia.

ASASU president satisfied with Legislature's actions

By Susan Clark

The recently ended legislative session followed through favorably on most measures affecting Arizona's three universities, Associated Students President Lance Ross said Monday.

"I would give the legislators a fair mark for their efforts" in effectively handling issues of importance to the three state universities, he said.

"We were able to see the passage of the SSIG (State Student Incentive Grant) Program and the final defeat of the tuition hike measure.

"ASASU did very well this year" toward successes for the universities, but "we really need to expand and get more support in some areas," Ross said. "In certain respects we had some shortcomings."

SSIG, an extension of a present scholarship program for needy students, made it through the Legislature and will become effective July 1, according to Arizona Students Association Director Carla Blackwell.

ASA lobbied hard for the measure in which the state will put up $150,000 in grants to be divided among all post-secondary education facilities, she said.

That $150,000 will be met with an equal amount from federal funds, bringing the entire figure to $300,000.

"The funds will be distributed to the universities based on the number of students at the school," Blackwell said.

But Dr. Roger Swanson, financial aids director, said the new program will "not mean much" to ASU.

"The problem is going to be probated according to enrollment to all secondary education facilities," he said. "This means everything from horseshoe school to beauty clinics.

Swanson speculated the "all post-secondary" institutions clause was included in the measure "because the legislators wanted to make sure the program wasn't discriminatory" against smaller schools.

Ross said because of "discrepancies and inconsistencies" in the campus Financial Aids Office, "I have a real doubt the program will be handled effectively."

ASU President John Schwada said he is disappointed over the allocated $61.7 operating budget for ASU, which was down $2 million from what was requested.

"I could talk about a month on the subject" of the side-effects the budget cut will have on the University, Schwada said.

He added the cut should not hurt class size or teaching quality, but will probably show up in administration areas.

The controversial tuition hike measure, which appeared this legislative session in the form of a bill and later an amendment, was successfully squashed last week.

But Minority House Leader Alfredo Gutierrez, D-Phoenix, said he is "absolutely sure" the issue will come up next year in the 35th Legislature.

"It has been a perennial problem for many reasons," said Gutierrez, an opponent of the increase.

Do minorities soak up financial aid?

During the 1960s Congress recognized a need to provide assistance to low-income persons in pursuing a post-secondary education. Federal financial aid programs were instituted under the direction of the Office of Education with the disbursement of federal monies to be administered by each individual institution.

The establishment of financial aid services was a result of growing dissatisfaction among Chicanos, Blacks, Native Americans and low-income Whites with the lack of educational opportunities available to them. The costs of education having a negative impact on minority students being substantial.

Yet, as with other social programs instituted following the riots of the 60s, financial aid programs really have never serviced those students with substantial need nor have they served to rectify the gross underrepresentation of minority students attending post-secondary institutions. The mass availability of financial assistance is relatively new. With the passage of the Middle Income Assistance Act on Nov. 2, 1978, financial aid now will be available to all persons whose family income does not exceed $25,000. This will result in practically all students being eligible for some type of assistance. The impact of the act also will prove to have negative results for minority students who historically have been denied equal educational opportunities.

While the opportunity for white middle-class students to receive assistance to pursue their education is being furthered with the passage of the Middle Income Assistance Act, ignorant attitudes and misinformation continues to persist concerning availability of aid and disbursement of funds.

The belief that Chicanos and other ethnic minorities are given preference over whites is ignorant, if not racist, to say the least. It is appalling that white students continue to blame minorities and the poor for problems afflicting the middle class.

Across the nation financial aid is increasingly being disbursed primarily to white students. The notion that aid is preferentially disbursed to minorities is false. Arizona State University is a case in point.

This year, 1978-79, the Financial Aids Office disbursed grant monies in excess of $6 million. White recipients received more than $5 million of this free money. Approximately 78 percent of BEOG, Basic Grants, more than 70 percent of the Supplemental Educational Opportunity Grant and 70 percent of State Student Incentive Grants go to white students.

Of the 6,000 recipients of the aforementioned grants, approximately 4,500 are white. This year 3,000 students received scholarships, tuition and fee waivers with more than 2,400 of the recipients being white. Of the 400 private scholarships more than 350 were awarded to white students. White students receive more than 80 percent of all institutional monies disbursed by the Financial Aids Office. The actual distribution of funds therefore shows that white students are receiving assistance. Financial aid is awarded according to need, not race, on a first-come-first-served basis. No preference is given to minorities on account of race.

What is occurring at ASU and other universities is that the white student is being serviced and the Chicano and black student being denied full educational opportunities because of the lack of availability of financial assistance.

Informational services provided by ASU under Dr. Roger Swanson, dean of admissions and financial aids, are geared toward the prospective white student. ASU has a visitation team which visits schools throughout the state with no full-time Chicano or black staff member. The Financial Aid Office employs a financial aid officer who has been visiting various schools in the metropolitan area and the state. Not one of the schools being provided assistance is located in South Phoenix, the inner city, or has a significant Black or Chicano enrollment.

The effect of the lack of services will further decrease the number of minority students enrolled at ASU as financial aid becomes more readily available to middle-class whites.

Students concerned with the availability of aid should turn their concern to federal and state authorities rather than blame minority students. It is sad to see that so much ignorance continues to persist at this university. Blacks, Chicanos and Native Americans historically have been excluded from gaining political, social and economic mobility through education.

Financial aid is the main avenue by which many minorities have found access to higher education, yet it appears that this avenue toward equality is slowly being closed and full educational opportunity being denied to people of color.

Letters to the Editor

'I am damn mad!'

Editor:

I am taking 16 hours this semester at ASU and working part-time to support myself and my two children. I have been fortunate enough to receive a Basic Educational Opportunity Grant from the government to help supplement my income and pay tuition fees.

Having never received financial aid prior to transferring to ASU from Mesa Community College, I looked to the Financial Aids Office for advice and assistance. I was told to complete a BEOG packet and mail it, and that was the extent of the assistance I received. I learned quickly at ASU that any information concerning such administrative matters is picked up by "trial and error" or from other students who have already figured out the best way to proceed.

At the beginning of the semester, I made application to the Scholarship Office. Having twice made further inquiries there, I have been told I have little chance of being awarded a scholarship because I am a junior, although I have a 3.75 grade point average. From there, I went to the Financial Aids Office to see if there was any additional aid I could receive. I was told that even a long-term student loan was impossible in the middle of the year.

On April 12, I read in the State Press that I might have been able to apply for an SEOG grant, had I been informed of that possibility. Though I do not know that I would have received this additional aid I was not even afforded the opportunity to apply.

According to the article, Mr. Valles admitted he did not publicize a surplus of available SEOG aid because he did not want a "flock of students" coming in his office because it would "interfere with ongoing business." I have functioned under the naive assumption that helping students "indiscriminately" (my quote) to seek necessary financial aid was precisely the point of the business of that office.

I am not only appalled, I am damn mad!

We're not the scapegoats

Editor:

This letter is in response to two letters which appeared in the April 13 edition of the State Press. It is directed to all the Robert Zubia's and Christine Wickerd's on and off campus. It was to avoid this type of racist responses why we at MEChA did not comment sooner on this issue.

MEChA at no time had anything to hide from the public or the students of ASU. We never did any wrongdoings. Frank Granillo was invited by me, two weeks prior to his presentation, to keep us informed of all opportunities existing at Financial Aids.

Each and every Chicano who received aid was entitled to it. Chicanos, Native Americans and Blacks received the minority of the money which was available. Even so, the money was but a bone thrown out to be fought over. This is the old tactic of "divide and conquer."

We Chicanos, Native Americans and Blacks will not fall for this trickery. Nor will we Chicanos be the scapegoats for the failures of the higher education administrators and politicians to supply students with adequate means for continued education.

Robert Zubia and Christine Wickerd made the mistake of attacking the wrong problem. They further made the mistake of attacking Isidro Valles, MEChA and Chicanos in general, instead of the administrators and politicians.

Our office is located in the MU, room 210, for those who feel more explanations are needed. Furthermore, MEChA pledges to stand behind Isidro Valles in every way possible.

The following student organizations endorse this letter: La Raza, Law Students Association, Raza (graduates), Chicanos Unidos Para El Bienestar Social (social work students), Chicano Business Students Association, Native American Students Association, Black Student Union, Alpha Phi Alpha, Young Socialist Alliance.

$74.5 million considered for Tempe improvements

By Mary Perry

The City of Tempe will be "finished" if $74.5 million in capital improvement funds are approved by the city council, Tempe mayor Harry Mitchell said Monday.

The funds would go toward the completion of Tempe's five-year capital improvement plan mandated by the Legislature by June 1984.

"Our boundaries are already set. We can't grow anymore," Mitchell said.

According to the plan, Tempe will have all necessary streets, sewer programs and park facilities for the city's future use, when the project expires in 1984.

Councilman William J. Ream said the highest priority on the list of city improvements is the water treatment plant in South Tempe.

"We have a 10-million-gallon storage plant down by Price and the canal," Ream said. "But we have nothing to purify the water."

The largest allocation ($45.9 million) would go for water and sewer needs. The plan includes the extension of a sewer line to Phoenix's 91st Avenue sewage plant.

"When you look at that $74 million figure, 50 percent of that is inflation," he added.

Street and bridge improvement and new police briefing stations are planned, Mitchell said, as well as a new fire station on Guadalupe Road.

Allocations for park projects are not on the top of the list, but Ream said Kiwanis Park may get its improvements soon because of matching federal funds.

"The Bureau of Outdoor Recreation will give us grants to match our own funds," Ream said. "This may speed up the park improvements."

The City Council will consider the five-year plan at a public hearing May 10.

May 1 deadline nearing

5,000 students file for rebate

Approximately 5,000 Arizona university students have filed claims for court-ordered refunds to part-time students, the attorney who represented the students said.

Tucson lawyer Bruce Burke said approximately 2,200 of 9,000 eligible ASU students have filed claims.

The refunds were awarded after the Arizona Students Association filed a class action suit on behalf of all Arizona University part-time students, claiming they were overcharged.

The court ruled in favor of the students Feb. 14.

Burke said students have until May 1 to file claims. He added the process was proceeding "very smoothly" and he was pleased with the operation.

"At first we thought the mailing list was poor because students move so frequently, but it has been better than some had thought," he said. "Only 20 percent of the announcements have been returned as undeliverable."

Writer applies pants-to-seat technique

By Dave Gianelli

Marguerite Buchanan Nobel, a 70-year-old ASU alumna, has discovered that the art of writing is the art of finding both time and tenacity to apply the seat of the pants to the seat of the chair.

Two years ago, the retired elementary teacher began writing a novel. One year of writing and one year of revisions later, the book was accepted by Random House, and is scheduled for release in June.

Previews have been enthusiastic. Lily Tomlin has purchased an option on the book's TV rights and Nobel has discovered that instead of retiring, she inadvertently has changed careers.

Her book, "Filaree," is the story of a woman's fight to maintain her dignity and sense of self-worth after her marriage crumbles.

The story is set in Territorial Arizona. The characters and settings are composites of people and places from the Tonto Basin area, where Nobel spent her childhood. The story is autobiographical in part, Nobel said. Adding that her first marriage ended in divorce and she raised two children by herself.

"I had to give up bridge and golf, and have found that my home life has been interrupted by callers who want their manuscripts read or a speaker for their luncheon," she said.

"So far, I've spoken to sororities, writers' clubs, historical groups, high school assemblies and a Phoenix College group, to mention a few. And although it sometimes is an imposition, I've never yet turned down someone who wanted a manuscript read because I remember how important encouragement was to me."

A New York columnist called Nobel a "late starter," a charge that causes her to bristle.

Even then, time was a problem. Nobel remarried and moved from Phoenix to Payson, and found herself torn between nurturing both her writing and her home life.

"I supported two children, working simultaneously as head of the household and as a teacher," she said. "I don't agree with people who claim that if someone is motivated to write, he will. It's been my experience that fatigue saps creativity. While my children were growing, I could do my job and run the house, but not write. It wasn't until I retired that I had time to write."

"My husband supported what I was doing because he loves me," she said. "And because I love him, I had certain standards to maintain. The writing was there, but I'd do it after finishing the housecleaning and cooking. There was no specified time and place to work, so I was forced to discipline myself."

Nobel, who received a bachelor's degree from Arizona State Teachers College (now ASU) in 1930 and a master's degree in education in 1958, has never really retired from the classroom.

Instead of teaching, however, she learns. She currently is enrolled in a creative writing class at Payson High School.

"Once asked by a classmate why I was taking a creative writing course after having published a novel, I answered 'Why, for the same reason as you. To learn.'"

"I'm still just good old stock born in Punkin Center, and that's all I'll ever be."

Judge rules that law firm has right to advise patients

By Jim Muhlstein

A Phoenix law firm is waging war on nursing homes that refuse to allow them to counsel patients about the tax credits they are eligible for but do not know about.

U.S. District Court Judge Walter Craig on Friday ruled volunteers from the Arizona Center for Law in the Public Interest have a constitutional right to visit patients of the Waitwell Nursing Home at 59th Ave. and Northern in Phoenix.

However, Terry Slaven, lawyer for Waitwell, said the preliminary injunction blocking the Waitwell administrators from interfering with the visitations is being appealed to the 9th Circuit Court of Appeals.

"They have a responsibility to safeguard their patients against outsiders," Slaven said. "Most of our patients are older and don't understand the forms. Many are fearful of a stranger who comes in talking about things like tax rights."

The average age of Waitwell patients is 75.

The county fiduciary's office, which completes the forms for patients who are wards of the court or have county guardianships, said no records are kept of the exact number of these patients who reside in nursing homes.

Betty Longstreth, assistant county fiduciary, said they move in and out of the homes constantly, so there is no way of knowing how many have filed for the tax credit.

However, Bruce Meyerson, attorney and executive director of ACLPI, said he believes administrators at the home fear Waitwell's tax classification might be affected.

"I can only characterize their reasons for refusing us as 'overly cautious,'" he said.

The tax credit is aimed at Arizona residents who rent their homes and earn less than $4,000 a year.

Meyerson said the group has made several attempts to enter the Waitwell home since last October.

However, Slaven said ACLPI volunteers were allowed "limited access" to patients Feb. 8.

"They (ACLPI) sent a letter in advance stating the time they planned to be there," he said.

Slaven said volunteers were allowed in for a short time to discuss the patients' "bill of rights" accompanied by staff members.

"We try to fill everybody's needs," said Waitwell administrator Joseph Grabowski. "We have assisted those we believe are eligible, but we don't have enough knowledge of everyone to fill out the forms for all the patients."

Meyerson said the ruling only applies to the Waitwell case and the long-term effects are uncertain.

"Nursing homes, and even some patients, still perceive us as a threat," he said. "We are going to want to meet first with representatives of other homes to avoid any more litigation."

The volunteer program, part of the ACLPI's Outreach Project, has been refused entrance at a majority of the Phoenix-area nursing homes, Meyerson said.

Gunshot death of ASU coed called suicide

The death of a 19-year-old ASU student Friday was an apparent suicide, Tempe police officials said.

Joanne DesJardins, 1120 W. Broadway Road, died at Tempe Community Hospital of a gunshot wound Friday night.

DesJardins was found by her sister at 7 p.m. Friday, police said.

They also said several residents in the apartment complex reported hearing a gunshot before DesJardins' sister came home, but added they had not been called earlier.

Tempe Police officials also reported arresting an ASU student for alleged sexual abuse Sunday.

Steven D. Helton, 27, of 2030 E. Apache Boulevard, was charged with two counts of sexual misconduct involving two Tempe teen-agers.

The girls, aged 13 and 14, reportedly were molested in Helton's apartment earlier Sunday.

Treat Williams and Charlotte Rae in a scene from "Hair."

'Hair' on screen 'groovy' look at '60s

When "Hair" opened on the New York stage in the 1960s, it already was outdated, but the rest of Broadway's commercial offerings were mired even further in the conceptions of the past. "Hair" seemed like a breath of fresh air.

"Hair" on the stage was fun, but as a sociological statement about the Woodstock nation, it failed dismally. The performers who had hit songs with "Hair" material weren't exactly in the vanguard of the 1960's artistic revolution; The Cowsills (remember them?), the Fifth Dimension, Three Dog Night.

Almost a decade later, the '60s already ripe for the nostalgia mill, "Hair" comes to the screen. Director Milos Forman ("One Flew Over the Cuckoo's Nest") brings a refurbished, high-spirited musical to the movies.

Here is a romantic version of the sixties, with "hippies" dancing around Central Park, with choreography by America's contemporary muse of the dance, Twyla Tharp.

The time since the play opened has softened our impressions of the sixties. The polarization Vietnam caused is over. Racial inequities have equalized enough to get the issue off the streets. The campuses are quiet.

Our new vision of the sixties, more mellow than the fracturing reality, perfectly coincides with the spirit of "Hair."

The movie shows the fun times. It demonstrates what went on behind the barricades on college campuses, not why the barricades went up.

The minimal plot involves an Oklahoman rube in New York for a few days before being inducted into the Army and Vietnam. He is

The Allman Brothers

Group abandons former backbiting

Their experiences during the last two years seem like a noontime soap opera; almost too ludicrous to believe.

Jealousy and backstabbing along with a good old-fashioned case of heroin addiction made the Allman Brothers Band disintegrate in 1975 after a short but notable hitch as the nation's top southern rock band.

The group splintered, fled to their various musical corners and a couple succeeded on their own. Most survivors just fizzled.

Through all the personal grudges and stubborn differences the Allman Brothers music has survived — and even improved.

A reunion, which guitarist Dicky Betts said last year would never happen, was arranged last July and soon the "new" Allman Brothers will appear in Tempe to test their rejuvenated sound.

Two weeks ago rumors circled that the Allman's had canceled their tour of the West and California. The advance whisperings proved correct. But with the addition of Eddie Money, who agreed to open for the group (a spot he now never occupies) the Tempe performance was put back on the calendar.

The Allman Brothers are touring to promote their new album, Enlightened Rogues. But the fact that they have been able to put together a group, much less an album, is nothing short of amazing.

The group broke up when Gregg Allman agreed to testify against his former road manager in a drug trial. The rest of the band saw this as an unforgivable breach of the "good ole boy" ethic and jumped ship.

Dicky Betts fared best after the separation with his spinoff band Great Southern. Lamar Williams and Chuck Leavell left for a jazz-oriented band called Sea Level of which they still are an active part.

Gregg Allman made a worthless album with his new wife Cher and had his name plastered in gossip columns almost daily.

Dicky Betts proved his talents on guitar were being well used last year in Phoenix's Symphony Hall when he and Great Southern played their Allman-like music to a near capacity crowd. "Bouganvillia" and "Nothin' You Can Do," both Bett's compositions, were highlights of the show.

After the concert he repeatedly denied a reunion was possible and bristled at comparisons to the old Allman Brothers band. Dicky made a pair of interesting albums with Great Southern and appeared destined for a successful solo career. Not so.

Last July in an outdoor concert at Central Park the band's former members decided to stop kicking dirt in each others faces. Drummers Jaimoe and Butch Trucks along with Greg Allman joined Great Southern onstage and a new Allman Brothers band was conceived.

The "old" Allman Brothers consisted of Barry Oakley, Gregg Allman, Duane Allman, Dicky Betts, Butch Trucks and Jaimoe. Motorcycle accidents killed Duane Allman and Barry Oakley in the span of one year.

The future Sea Level crew of Lamar Williams and Chuck Leavell replaced the elder Allman and Oakley.

At the Fillmore East is generally regarded as the band's best effort and the last before Duane's death, followed by Eat a Peach and Brothers and Sisters, their big-selling, commercially successful album.

Win, Lose or Draw a tame effort with a few good instrumental tracks followed in 1975 just before the breakup.

According to a recent article in Rolling Stone magazine, Dicky Betts was the foundation in bringing the band back together. Three of the six members of the "new" Allman Brothers are from Great Southern; Betts, David "Rook" Goldflies, bassist, and "Dangerous" Dan Toler, the group's second guitarist.

Dicky wrote eight songs for the Enlightened Rogues album and is supposedly the cement in the bands previously fragile relationship. Critics have alternately praised and lambasted the new effort for being catchy and full of finesse but also predictable, stale southern jamming.

Performed live, the material supposedly is top-notch. That doesn't really account for their cancelation of the western dates.

Controversy and criticism follow the band like the cliché storm cloud over the head. They can definitely be classified as "rogues" by their previous back-biting and bickering.

To see how "enlightened" their music is now supposed to be will require a live sampling without question. If their persistence and musical savvy of the past holds up, the results should be positive.

—Tom Sammons

Everyone sings and dances and has a marvelous time, and the group even follows him to basic training in Nevada.

The music has a numbing sameness but it's fun hearing some of the hits of the '60s. The lyrics' social commentary is simple and doesn't get in the way. And they all are performed with exuberance by an attractive cast including John Savage ("The Deer Hunter") and particularly Treat Williams as the group's leader.

ASU baseball strikes out again

By Walter Berry

Usually about this time of year — with the forsythia fading, with students exchanging bon mots in class yearbooks and short-sleeved shirts staging their annual coming-out party, pushing overcoats officially to the back of the bus — the ASU baseball team is well on its way to its 50th win.

This season is distinctly different.

Not only are the Sun Devil still searching for victory No. 30, they are also inadvertently inching closer to loss No. 25.

UCLA made sure of the latter last weekend at Packard Stadium, sweeping a three-game series and pushing ASU to the brink of embarrassment in the process.

Now 29-24 overall and finding themselves firmly entrenched in the league cellar with a 6-15 record, the Devils have become the Toronto Blue Jays of the Pac-10. Never have the words "hapless" and "ASU" been uttered in the same breath in conversation pertaining to college baseball.

"It has been a total nightmare," said ASU head coach Jim Brock. "In 24 years of coaching, I've never felt anything like this. Never. I have no answers at all."

Likewise, the Sun Devils seem to be without a solution to breaking the Bruin stranglehold on them. In six games against UCLA this year, ASU has yet to win. Three of the contests have been decided in extra innings.

Jim Brock

Last weekend, the Devils held the lead only twice in three games — both by 2-1 scores in the sixth innings on Thursday and Friday nights. Each time, UCLA came back.

Mike Gallego's seventh inning double on Thursday broke a 2-2 tie and carried the Bruins to a 4-2 4-3 win in Game One. Dan Gausepohl's 10th inning base hit sparked a four-run rally on Friday which culminated in an 8-4 UCLA victory. Saturday night saw Bruin designated hitter Don Slaught drive in three runs and score another as the UCLA starved off a ninth inning ASU rally and won, 6-5.

"I think that the last out of the last game summed up our season so far. (Greg) Stahl couldn't have hit the ball any harder," said Brock of the apparent game-tying line drive that was speared by diving UCLA second baseman Gallego. "Our guys want it (a win), work for it, and then it doesn't happen. It's been disappointing."

"But the problem is all of us. To turn it around, we can't sit around and talk about it. It has to happen and we have to make it happen. I think that was obvious Friday night when we had a chance to put the game away in the middle innings and didn't."

In retrospect, the latest UCLA sweep of ASU wasn't as damaging as the first one in Los Angeles on March 2-3.

"We had no margin for error this season. We knew that even before the season started. We saw it coming," said Brock. "Talent-wise, we were down and with the losses of (senior pitcher Mitch) Dean and (Jamie) Allen in the early going, it made it that much tougher. I thought we might be all right if we started good and felt good about ourselves. But then we got off to a terrible start."

"If I had to pin it down to something, I'd say the turning point was those three losses to UCLA on the coast and then coming back home and losing two-out-of-three to Cal. It got us going downhill."

Despite the slide, Brock could not find fault with any of his players in particular.

"Attitude-wise, I'm pleased with the team. It's just that they can't see themselves winning," he said of his squad which hosts Grand Canyon College tonight at 7. "I feel extremely sorry for them."

And for the first time in five years, the fans who frequent Packard Stadium are beginning to feel the same way — calling ASU "a sorry bunch."

Sad, but true.

Casarez injures ankle: and then there was one

By Jim Elsleger

When it comes to precarious positions, ASU softball coach Mary Littlewood may have the whopper of all time.

With an extended schedule, Littlewood has to rely on only two pitchers to see her through a 68 game schedule. It is painfully evident that if she loses a pitcher to injury — that leaves one, and precarious becomes spelled with a capital "P."

Such was the case this past weekend when the Sun Devils traveled to the University of New Mexico to play a pair of doubleheaders on Friday and Saturday.

In practice on Wednesday, Lucy Casarez caught her foot on a base while sliding and twisted her ankle. She would not be able to go in the doubleheader on Friday against Texas Women's University.

Fortunately, Littlewood was able to get one of the double-header games on Friday canceled without penalty of a forfeit.

"They (Texas Womens') let us cancel a game because they could pick up a couple of games on Sunday before they had to return to Texas," Littlewood said. "Lucy shouldn't have been sliding on Wednesday. From now on I'm going to hit for her so she won't be doing anymore of that."

Casarez made the trip to New Mexico anyway and pitched on Saturday in the opening game against Oregon State. She dropped her first game of the season 3-0 after winning 15 straight.

She was locked in a scoreless dual through five and one-third innings before the ceiling caved in and she had to be relieved by Shawn Richey. Although Casarez managed eight strikeouts, her ankle bothered her too much and Oregon State tagged her for all three runs in the sixth.

"I should have pulled her out sooner," Littlewood said. "The trainer said she was okay, and she said she could go, but I still shouldn't have left her in there that long."

Richey came in and allowed only one hit over the final one and two-thirds innings, but the Sun Devils couldn't score — collecting only four hits in the game.

In the second game Richey salvaged a split with a 1-0 shutout. She gave up only four hits in raising her season record to 14-3, after dropping a 2-1 decision against Texas Women on Friday.

Peggy McAbee provided all the runs in the game in the first inning when she drove in Andi Sinhoui with a single. Sinhoui had led the inning off with a single, advanced to second on an error and made it to third on a fielder's choice. McAbee then drove her in with a sacrifice fly.

Carol Sinn went two for three in the game to lead the Sun Devils in the hitting department.

On Friday against Texas Women, Richey found herself in a pitchers dual with one of the country's premier hurlers, Kathy Arendson, an All-American and member of the ASA national championship team, the Connecticut Brakettes.

ASU broke on top in the third when Suzy Gaw singled in Linda Belcher who had singled and moved to second on a walk. Texas came right back in the bottom of the third on a pair of singles to tie the score at 1-1.

That's the way it remained until the bottom of the seventh when Texas put together three straight singles to win 2-1.

ASU could manage only four hits against the powerhouse team from Texas, which ended up fourth in the country last year.

"We are in a hitting slump," Littlewood said. "Arendson is good, but we were just off at the plate. I think if we were hitting the way we can get to her."

The series left ASU at 29-4 for the season as they prepare to re-open conference play this Thursday. The Sun Devils are tied with UA for the league lead at 9-1.

ASU has now outscored its opponents 135-44 through 33 games, with Casarez carrying a 0.48 ERA and Richey a 1.12.

Track team fortune turns

The ASU men's and women's track teams fortunes turned for the better this weekend in El Paso — a town not really known for its bright spots.

The struggling men's team captured second place behind host Texas-El Paso in the second annual El Paso Invitational. ASU scored 102 points compared to the Miners' 149, but the Sun Devils finished ahead of noted teams such as Texas and Auburn.

Titles were captured by ASU last Saturday by Greg Moore in the 200-meter dash (20.83 wind-aided), Rick Rogers in the pole vault (17-0), Kyle Arney in the high jump (7-0½) and Dannie Jackson in the long jump (25-11½ wind-aided).

Other top performances were turned by Brady Crain in the 200-meter, who finished second with a wind-aided 20.83. Sidney Mitchell in the long jump, landed a second with a wind-aided 25-3½ and Ken McClendon in the triple jump, second with a 53-¼.

The ASU women's contingent also did well in the city along the Rio Grande. The Sun Devils' 4 x 100-meter relay squad with Kathey Crawford, Val Boyer, Frieda Cobbs and Brenda Calhoun posted a 44.6, just shy of the 44.44 national record.

Also at El Paso, ASU's Ria Stalman won the discus (172-4), Julie Cart finished second in the discus (147-0), as did Cathy Greaves in the long jump (18-7¼). Foursome Denise Waddy, Crawford, Calhoun and Sharon Acker set a school record in the sprint medley relay with 3:58.5.

At the Mt. SAC Relays in Walnut, Calif., ASU freshman Kathy Mintie won the 3,000-meter run with a career best and ASU record 9:30.4 — 13 seconds better than her previous best time. In the javelin, ASU's Celeste Wilkinson finished second with her heave of 170-9.

Tennis team volleys to 8-1 weekend win

The 15th ranked ASU tennis team took a convincing 8-1 decision from Cal State-Irvine Friday at the Whiteman Tennis Center.

Led by No. 1 seed and the 11th-ranked men's singles player in the country, Alan Waldman, ASU won the home match in easy fashion as it wept through the singles without a loss before the 20th ranked Irvine team could manage a doubles win to avert a shutout.

Waldman needed three sets to get by Matt Woldridge to open up the match, 4-6, 7-5, 7-6. Tim Anderson followed with a straight set victory over Curt Stalder 6-2, 6-2, and the Sun Devils were on their way.

Other singles victors for ASU included Connie Sie with 1-6, 6-2, 6-2 win over Mike Edles, Eric Sherbeck turned back Paul Oldenburg 6-2, 6-2, Mike Carruthers took straight sets off Lance Good 7-5, 6-4 and Archie Bouwer won his match 6-3, 7-6, against Alan Eisner.

The win gives ASU a 20-6 record for the season as they went up against USC on Monday and UCLA today in a pair of road matches.
