Student hit by vehicle on campus

An ASU student struck by a University maintenance truck was reported in good condition Wednesday afternoon at Tempe Community Hospital.

Although a hospital spokesman said Mary Toland, 19, suffered only a broken left leg when hit by the pickup driven by ASU Physical Facilities employee Sal Cicalese, medics at the scene also braced Toland's right arm and said they suspected back injuries.

Toland, a freshman architecture student, was sitting on McAllister Mall directly west of the Industrial Design and Technology Building when she was struck.

University Police Capt. Norman Peck said Toland was apparently leaning against the front fender of the truck parked on the 16-foot-wide mall, when Cicalese approached the vehicle from the rear, got in and started it.

Cicalese said he did not see Toland.

"She was sitting on the sidewalk and nobody was there before," he said.

ASU Police and Tempe Fire Department paramedics were alerted at 9:49 a.m. and administered emergency first aid on arrival.

The Aid Ambulance Service also received notice at that time, but did not arrive until approximately 15 minutes later, witnesses said.

A spokesman for the service said the Tempe ambulance unit was "tied up," so a unit had to be sent from the Mesa facility.

David Brown, a student in Toland's design class, was present at the accident scene.

"I heard her yell, 'No, stop!' and then we heard a scream and my teacher and I ran over and started pushing the truck back," Brown said.

The teacher, Todd Smith, assistant architecture professor, said the two signaled to Cicalese to back up.

Peck released the official University Police report Wednesday afternoon, but refused to comment on Toland's proximity to the parked truck before the incident.

Statements by witnesses were contradictory. Some said Toland was sitting immediately in front of the pickup, while others said she was 10 to 15 feet away.

PHOENIX OFFICIALS VISIT ISRAEL

PHOENIX — A group of Phoenix-area clergymen, educators, businessmen and professionals will leave Wednesday on an interfaith mission to Israel under sponsorship of the Phoenix Jewish Federation. Among officials scheduled to take the 10-day tour are Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin, U.S. District Judge Carl Muecke, state Senate Minority Leader Alfredo Gutierrez and Fred Miller, Arizona State University athletic director.

CARTER CALLED READY FOR PRIMARY BATTLE

PORTSMOUTH, N.H. — President Carter, described as braced for battle in each of the 1980 primaries, told a New Hampshire town meeting Wednesday that anyone who thinks there is a simple cure for inflation "is either a liar or a fool." Carter sought to allay the concern of people faced with steadily rising fuel prices in energy-short New Hampshire, a key presidential primary state that is almost totally dependent on imported oil.

MIDEAST TREATY FORMALIZED

Israel and Egypt formalized their peace treaty Wednesday deep in the Sinai Desert. In southern Lebanon, Israeli jets, missile boats and border artillery pounded Palestinian camps, the Palestine Liberation Organization said. In Um Khashiba, outside an American surveillance station, bands played after the exchange of documents ratifying the historic peace treaty. A word was missing from an Egyptian side letter to the treaty and a delay of several hours resulted, but the document was amended and the ceremony went on.

WALDHEIM PURSUES PEACE IN HANOI

KUALA LUMPUR, Malaysia — U.N. Secretary-General Kurt Waldheim travels a route studded with diplomatic booby traps when he begins a two-week tour in Hanoi Thursday and tries to help mediate some of Southeast Asia's thorniest disputes. The Austrian U.N. executive initiated the journey after receiving what aides called "positive responses" to his offers of assistance. Besides Vietnam, Waldheim has penciled in China and North and South Korea on his agenda.

GASOLINE RATIONING CHECKS REJECTED

WASHINGTON — The House Commerce Committee voted narrowly Wednesday to reject President Carter's standby plan for rationing gasoline by issuing ration checks and coupons to car owners. Carter publicly appealed to committee members to approve the plan a few hours before the 23-19 vote, but to no avail. Though the rationing proposal did not die as a result of the committee's action, ultimate congressional approval seems unlikely. The plan will get another chance before the full House, and a vote is scheduled in the Senate Energy Committee today.

SCHLESINGER SENDS STAFF TO OIL COMPANIES

WASHINGTON — Energy Secretary James Schlesinger sent a member of his staff to California to meet with the major suppliers of gasoline to Arizona to determine if they have any excess supplies, Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., said Wednesday. DeConcini said Schlesinger also cautiously reported that Arizona's fuel allocations should reach 94 percent of last year's figure shortly, greatly reducing gasoline shortages in the state.

NRC RECOMMENDS AN EIGHT-PLANT SHUTDOWN

WASHINGTON — The staff of the Nuclear Regulatory Commission recommended on Wednesday temporarily shutting down eight nuclear power plants designed by Babcock & Wilcox, builder of the stricken Three Mile Island plant near Harrisburg, Pa. The five-member commission remained in session, quizzing staff members, as it prepared to decide the issue.

Heaviest rain ever drenches Florida

Associated Press

Residents of the Red River Valley waited nervously behind miles of spongy dikes shored up by 4 million sandbags Wednesday, while a record deluge in Florida flushed out poisonous snakes, washed through posh resorts and flooded homes and highways.

"Catfish are swimming down Andrews Avenue," exclaimed Bob Jones of Fort Lauderdale after a spring rainstorm suddenly ended a three-month Florida drought, the worst since 1971.

It was the heaviest rainfall in Miami's history, with the National Weather Service reporting a 24-hour total of 16.39 inches. Fort Lauderdale reported 14.32 inches and Homestead 10.77 with the rain still falling.

Police in Plantation, west of Fort Lauderdale, warned parents to keep children indoors and out of the way of snakes routed from their hideaways. Two snakebites were reported, but it was not known if the snakes were poisonous.

"People don't realize that second to Texas, Florida has more rattlesnakes than any other part of the country," said Patrolman Vance Curran.

On the brighter side, the Pearl River at Columbia, Miss., while still about 9 feet above flood stage, continued to drop and some of the town's 4,000 residents who had fled were able to return to their homes.

"But I'm afraid all they will find when they get home will be mud and snakes," said Jim Thornhill, Civil Defense director for the county. "I'm sure a lot of people will just sit down and cry."

War is nothing more than the continuation of politics by other means.

Karl Von Clausewitz

What about the war's 'other' victims?

The Vietnam War just won't go away. Today, more than six years after the official end of America's involvement in Southeast Asia, remnants of the conflict continue to haunt us.

When Marine Pfc. Robert Garwood came home last month after 13½ years as a prisoner of war, his family rejoiced over what amounted in essence to a return from the grave.

But for hundreds of other American families, Garwood's homecoming rekindled apprehensive hopes that their loved ones might also still be alive, rotting in some Vietnamese jail.

That's because before Garwood's return, U.S. officials had assured Prisoner of War and Missing in Action families that there were no Americans remaining alive in the former war zone.

Back in 1976, when Jimmy Carter was just a country boy from Georgia campaigning for the presidency, he promised to do everything in his power to account for missing soldiers, sailors and airmen.

He also vowed the United States would not extend diplomatic relations to Hanoi's government, lift the trade embargo or allow Vietnam into the United Nations until the war's prisoners and missing had been accounted for as accurately as possible.

Now Vietnam has been admitted to the United Nations without a whimper from the United States, and before Vietnam's war with China earlier this year, Carter already had set the wheels in motion to normalize U.S.-Vietnamese relations.

What happened to all those promises?

Ann Griffiths, executive director of the National League of Families of Prisoners and Missing in Southeast Asia, told The Associated Press that the administration is more interested in improving relations with Vietnam than in pressing for information about those officially presumed dead.

"The problem is there hasn't been any effective U.S. government effort to get the accounting that we've been promised all these years," she said. "And that is not due particularly to any lack of capability by the military. It's a political problem."

The government lists 1,150 unaccounted persons as known dead whose bodies never were recovered. Another 1,350 Americans had been listed as prisoners or missing, but were not among the 533 POWs the North Vietnamese released in 1973.

A special House panel and a presidential task force determined none of the missing were alive, and recommended they be presumed dead. Special military boards were to make the judgment in each individual case.

Despite Carter's promises there's a big question mark now in the minds of Americans as to what really happened to those people, who to most of us are just names, but to hundreds of families are a picture on the mantle and an empty seat at the table.

POW-MIA families have endured the cruelest of all of the war's atrocities: years of uncertainty.

The government of this country has an obligation to those families, because it was the government that sent hundreds of thousands of young men to wade through the jungles in a war that made no sense.

At the very least, Carter, who's tried to become the champion of "human rights" around the world, should make sure those doubts that now have resurfaced are eliminated.

The brutality of the Vietnam war will never be forgotten, nor will the thousands of men who were killed or maimed.

But the aftermath will be even more of a disgrace than the war itself if the administration's promises to POW-MIA families are forgotten along with the rest of the president's campaign rhetoric.

Letters to the Editor

Hey, Mr. Carter, they deserve help

Editor:

An open letter to President Carter:

As an extremely concerned citizen of these United States, I wish to express my deep concern with regard to the recent cut-off of American financial aid to Pakistan.

I cannot understand why, because of the fact that the Pakistanians refuse to allow inspection of their nuclear sites, you would allow such a drastic move to occur . . . one that reeks of mistrust and suspicion on our part.

Pakistan is a very poor, insignificant country, by our standards, with many people benefiting from our tax dollars. I cannot believe the United States is so cold and indifferent as to take away what little these people have, especially at a time when they are grieving, and attempting to recover from the loss of their beloved leader, Bhutto.

Is this great and powerful bureaucracy so cruel? I never wished to think this before. However, now I have my doubts, and only one person can clarify these misgivings; that is you.

I love these precious people dearly, as though they are my own, and have future plans to establish a medical clinic for their many poor. It grieves me to realize their sufferings are to be further magnified by the loss of monies and other aid they so desperately need.

Are you not afraid of causing unnecessary problems in the Middle East by reacting, or should I say, overreacting, in such a disasterous manner?

More efforts on the part of the U.S. government should be directed towards our not-so-spotless safety record before we begin worrying about tiny little countries like Pakistan. The nuclear industry and the government has suffered us deceitfully to accept nuclear power here, despite the fact that we are the ones who are dying and incurring various radiogenic diseases, such as cancers, sterilization and leukemia from the "low-level radioactivity" emitted by all nuclear facilities.

Palo Verde will be the largest nuclear facility on the face of the earth and should require more deliberation on your part, for its erection will most undoubtedly cause the most devastating catastrophe our history has ever seen. At the entire world's expense!

Leave Pakistan alone. These people are capable of taking care of their own plants . . . if they, in fact, are the ones who own them.

Restore financial aid to this struggling little country who means no harm to anyone, that they may survive. We, too, were once small.

Give 'em hell, dog kickers!

Editor:

Well all right, all right!! Today's the day. Stand up and be counted, all you closet dog kickers.

You didn't know it (makes it more effective that way), but today is "Show You're a Dog-Kicker" day! That's right. If you wear shoes today, or eat anything containing sugar, it shows for all the world to see that yes, you are a dog kicker, or you are an ardent supporter of another person's right to kick his dog. Or anybody else's dog, for that matter.

Finally, this campus' most silent minority speaks out. (And you thought ASU didn't have any more minorities that haven't spoken up! You big silly!) After years of oppression, decades of people saying "You're a WHAT?" we have gathered the courage to say, out loud, "Yes, I kick dogs."

In spite of the recent loss of one of our leaders, Max Jennings, to the clutches of the ASPCA, we continue. Remember the now-famous words of poet and semi-successful songwriter Mason Williams:

"How about they dog kickers, ain't they mean?"

Kickin' they doggies in the spleen.

"Kickin' they black dogs, kickin' they white, Kickin' they puppydogs till they bite!

How to be a dog kicker, don't need a ticket. Get yourself a dog and rear back and kick it!"

So OK! Fun's fun. But the more serious note behind this piece of fluff is this: Few people appreciate being forced into making a show of support or non-support for a cause, support being something that should be given freely or not at all.

If the gay community is going to stage a showing of support for their cause, fine. But I resent being forced into sides on the issue, and sincerely believe the gay community runs a risk of alienating more people with this forced showing of hands than impressing some invisible power-that-be.

Engineering students float 300-pound concrete canoe

By Mary Perry

What is 14 feet long, weighs 300 pounds, is painted maroon and gold, made of cement — and floats?

ASU's first concrete canoe was launched at Kiwanis Park Wednesday, and the project was deemed a success by its creators.

Civil Engineering students at ASU designed and built the boat for a national "concrete boat race" in Pomona California Sunday.

Marilyn Taylor, engineering senior, was chairperson of the project. Students worked on the boat all semester but the major construction took place in the last two weeks.

"I learned a lot I never knew before," Taylor said. "It takes concrete several weeks to get to full strength. We've only had it cast two weeks ago, so we hope it holds."

Rick Johnson, engineering senior, said he was afraid until the last minute the boat would sink.

"I felt just like a kid at his first Christmas when I saw the canoe floating on the lake," he said.

And float it did, at 3:45 p.m. Wednesday. One of the first paddlers was Dr. Thomas Higgins. Higgins, the students' engineering professor, rowed around the lake without mishap.

Universities and colleges from California, Nevada and Arizona are set to participate in the contest.

"Some schools, like Berkeley (California) have been making concrete boats for years," Taylor said. "We really expect to be the underdog."

The boat was modeled after a canoe in the physical education department. A styrofoam mold was carved and concrete was "patted on" Taylor said.

"I would have just died if it didn't float," she said. "But transportation to California will be the test of strength."

Dave Dailer and Mike Ternak, both graduate engineering students, will row the boat in the competition.

The class project was mainly to start a tradition at ASU, Johnson said.

"Maybe others will learn from our efforts," he said. "We hope the class next year will accomplish a more competitive design."

Fuel prices might rise but demand still steady

Americans appear to be little perturbed about the rapidly rising price of gasoline. Service station owners around the country report motorists are buying as much gasoline as ever with few or no complaints.

"Once in a while we get an angry person, but those are few and far between," said Jim Dunn, owner of an Amoco station in Kansas City, Mo. Dunn is charging 84.3 cents a gallon for unleaded gasoline at full-service pumps — up a penny since the beginning of the month — and 80.9 cents a gallon for unleaded at self-service pumps — a 4-cent rise since April 1.

"Most people realize that, hey, you've got to have it, and the cost is going to be higher," said Dunn, one of those interviewed by The Associated Press in a spot check of service stations owners.

"They are accepting it as something they can live with," said John Kyle, executive vice president of Oklahoma's Oil Marketers Association.

"It's not the service station owner's fault," said Charles Shipley, president of the Michigan Service Station Dealers Association. "If the customers would like to write a letter to the new dictator of Iran, that would be more appropriate. Of course, some of the big oil companies are making lots of money, too, on this."

Oil companies are indeed reporting large profits — Texaco's first quarter earnings were up 81 percent and Gulf's rose 61 percent — but the companies say they are benefiting only because oil supplies are extremely tight due to the Iranian revolution, causing the forces of supply and demand to push prices up.

The willingness of motorists to buy gasoline at higher prices is one of the reasons that gasoline demand is rising at a 4 percent rate this year.

"I tell them it'll probably be a dollar a gallon by July and they say, 'Well, even if it goes to two dollars we'll still hate to buy it,'" said Richard Warner, an attendant at Call Carl service in Washington. Unleaded gasoline there sells for 84 cents a gallon, up 2.5 cents since April 1.

"There has been no moderation in gasoline purchases that I can see," said Tom Anderson, president of Pennsylvania's Service Station Dealers Association. "If there were, why would we be cutting back on the amount customers may purchase and our hours of operation?"

The cutbacks — the combination of rising demand and the supply squeeze due to the Iranian crisis — do not seem to be deterring drivers, who, in California and some other states, are beginning to line up for gasoline in a situation reminiscent of the 1974 gasoline shortage.

"It doesn't matter if they're driving a Cadillac or an old Ford," said Fred Reid, who works at a Union 76 station in Seattle. "There's two things they'll buy — booze and gas. I never saw anything like it. It's kind of a hysteria out there."

'Phoenix population is ideal'

Official dreams of planetarium

By Steve Allnatt

ASU's plan to build the largest collegiate planetarium in the United States is still only a dream, but it's a dream Phoenix is ready for, ASU planetarium coordinator said Wednesday.

"Phoenix has the ideal population size to support such a facility, but it is not so big that there is a Disneyland to compete with," Daniel Matlaga said.

Matlaga said he hopes the facility will be built on Tempe Butte west of Sun Devil Stadium. Celestial programs would be presented in a 70-foot dome.

"There's been a great deal of enthusiasm," he said. "There even have been offers to start a 'Friends of the Planetarium' program similar to the one Channel 8 has."

Matlaga added the plans for the facility aren't final and might be considered premature.

"Everything about the project is tentative," he said. "No one even knows how much it'll cost."

Matlaga said the price of a projector for the facility has fluctuated by $500,000 in less than a year.

He added the projector cost reflected why the cost of the astronomy facility is so difficult to determine.

"Seven months ago the price of the projector was $1.2 million, then it jumped to $1.7 million," he said.

Matlaga added today the projector could be purchased from the West German manufacturer for $1.5 million because the American dollar is stronger.

No definite source of funding for the project has been found, he said.

"The problem is money. It's still just a dream."

Troy Crowder, assistant to John Schwada, ASU president, said private money is being sought.

"We're hopeful of finding someone," he said. "We're working on it."

Matlaga said Crowder went before the Tempe City Council in November to brief them of the plan.

"It was an orientation to show them preliminary plans and what it might look like," Crowder said.

He added the Tempe Butte site is not definite.

"It could be located anyplace where we could find adequate parking," he said.

However, Matlaga said the butte site would be "ideal."

"If we want people to know about the planetarium, we need high visibility," he said.

"If I could pick any place for this kind of a facility," he said, "I would put it near that complex (the zoo, botanical gardens and Papagao Park area)."

Matlaga added Phoenix needs the facility. The ASU planetarium only has a 20-foot dome.

"This one (at ASU) is used to capacity," he said. "We have to turn people away. It is the smallest planetarium in the country as compared to the population of the area served."

"The state of Arizona has not been known for museums and public facilities. Until recently the small population couldn't support it, but we're growing."

"It's only a matter of time."

MUAB theater closes doors; budget committee in the red

By Lori Medigovich

The film committee of the MU Activities Board darkened its doors April 19 because of a cut in funds, the committee's adviser said Wednesday.

"Income projections for this semester were not as high as had been planned," Dee Schroeder said, "and the spring semester's budget started out $5,000 in the hole, making things very difficult."

But last semester's chairperson, Randy Lasnick, said the allegation of a $5,000 loss for the fall semester was "an outright lie."

Lasnick resigned from the committee at the end of the fall semester because "the adviser (Schroeder), was not doing her job. She was leaning on me and rather than advising, she was telling me how to do my job."

When Lasnick resigned, he said he was told the committee was nowhere near being $5,000 in the hole.

"As of the time I resigned, I had been quoted a figure of little over $1,000 for the fall semester," he said. "I don't know where this figure of $5,000 came from."

Schroeder said the fall semester committee used more than its share of the full year's budget, causing a deficit for the spring semester.

But Lasnick said he was not aware of the fall semester being allocated a bigger hunk of the year's funds.

Closing the film series was necessary because of a "vicious circle" resulting in the money loss at the beginning of the spring semester, Schroeder said.

"Being in the hole that much made things rough for film selection this semester," Schroeder said.

"And because of this, not as many people came to view our films this semester which led to a cut in the revenues" she said.

The film committee does not receive an appropriation from the MU to run its program, Schroeder said. It is totally self-supporting.

"Consequently, when making out our budget, we project how many persons will attend the films and try to match our expenses with our projected income," she said.

Problems arose this semester with a poor showing at the films, she added, especially matinees.

"Sometimes only four people would show up for the matinees," Schroeder said.

When the film committee made the decision to halt operations for this semester, it was $9,000 in the hole.

Students receive awards for outstanding scholarship

ASU Associated Students and the Alumni Association have presented five awards to distinguished graduating seniors.

Awards were for Outstanding Woman, Outstanding Man, and Outstanding Scholar. Students nominated themselves and were chosen by an ad hoc committee composed of representatives from ASASU and the Alumni Association.

The applicants must have a minimum 2.5 g.p.a. and must be graduating within the 1979 school year. Selection was based on two-thirds extracurricular activities and one-third scholarship ability.

Sally Hartman, a senior finance major, was presented with one of the Outstanding Woman awards. Hartman will graduate in May with a 3.6 g.p.a. and plans to work as an accountant at International Harvester Co. in Chicago.

Hartman has received an Arizona Board of Regents out-of-state tuition waiver throughout her four years of college. She is a member of Kappa Kappa Gamma sorority and has held four major offices in the organization. She also served as president of the Student Foundation and is a member of the Alumni Board of Directors and the Intercollegiate Athletic Board. Hartman worked as a congressional intern in Washington D.C.

The other award for Outstanding Woman was presented to Jane Studney, a senior fashion merchandising major.

Studney is a member of Delta Delta Delta and has held five major offices in the sorority. She was a member of Spurs, a sophomore honorary society and Mortar Board, a University honorary organization.

D.C. Hoffman, a senior marketing major was presented with the award for Outstanding Man. Hoffman is presently ASASU executive vice president and a member of Phi Sigma Kappa fraternity.

Hoffman is registered in Who's Who of American Colleges and Universities and is a member of the Order of Omega, a national honor fraternity. He has held two major offices in his fraternity and is a member of the ASU Devils Advocates.

Awards for outstanding scholars were presented to Matthew Payne, a senior physics major and Lorri Jean, a senior communications major.

Now. A safe, simple way to prevent pregnancy.

It's Semicid, a safe, easy-to-use vaginal contraceptive suppository with an active ingredient proven effective by millions of women.

If you're dissatisfied with your present birth control method, you should know about Semicid, a real alternative in contraception from Whitehall Laboratories, one of the world's leading pharmaceutical companies.

Semicid is safe and effective. It contains the maximum allowable level of nonoxynol-9, an ingredient which safely kills sperm in seconds. It's the spermicide in products doctors recommend most, and has been used effectively by millions of women for over 10 years. Now, this tested, proven ingredient is available in Semicid.

Semicid is safe, too. Unlike the pill, it has no hormonal side effects. And unlike the IUD, it can't damage uterine walls. Furthermore, Semicid does not effervesce the way the other vaginal suppository does. Semicid is non-irritating to most women. There's also no unpleasant odor. Neither you nor your partner will notice Semicid is there at all.

Semicid is neat and convenient. Slim, only an inch long, Semicid is so simple and easy to use. There's no applicator, so there's nothing to fill, clean, or remove. Semicid is not messy like foams, creams and jellies. And it's not awkward like the diaphragm. It lets love-making happen naturally, spontaneously.

Within minutes after you insert it, Semicid dissolves and spreads a protective covering over the cervical opening and adjoining vaginal walls.

Semicid comes in a small, discreet dispenser containing 10 suppositories. You can purchase it without a prescription.

For more information about this remarkable contraceptive, ask your doctor. Use only as directed.

Semicid.

'Journalists sensationalize illness'

Wayne blasts news media

NEWPORT BEACH, Calif. (AP) — Actor John Wayne, released Wednesday from Hoag Memorial Hospital after a week of treatment for bronchitis, issued a statement blasting the news media for not accepting the official reports of his illness.

"I haven't lied to the press about anything, but they will not take our reports as truthful," Wayne said in a written statement released by Marcy Mobley of his office. "They sneak around trying to bribe people to say something that won't coincide with the official report."

"I don't know why it is necessary, but I guess that is modern-day 'news methods.' It used to be considered yellow journalism. Anyway, have a happy day."

Miss Mobley was unable to shed any light on just what incident or incidents Wayne was referring to. She was also unable to contact any other Wayne spokesmen or Wayne himself to get a clarification.

Nancy Lorange, spokeswoman for Hoag Memorial, said she knew of no incidents involving the news media during Wayne's stay there.

"We haven't had any incident and I'm sure I would be aware of them," Ms. Lorange said.

The 71-year-old actor went home without a public announcement.

"He just sort of slipped out of here," Ms. Lorange said.

"He's home and he's doing fine," Miss Mobley said.

Wayne was hospitalized a month at UCLA Medical Center this winter after undergoing 9½ hours of surgery to remove his cancerous stomach.

Israel label called 'bizarre'

Israel is an agent for American imperialism, a member of the Young Socialist Alliance said in a debate with an ASU faculty member, who called the charge "bizarre."

ASU student Seth Galinsky, a member of the YSA's executive committee, debated Dr. Gordon Weiner, an assistant professor of history, on "What Road to Peace in the Middle East?"

"Israel is a watchdog for U.S. imperialism," Galinsky said. "Long the victims of anti-Semitism, Jews have now changed roles."

Weiner disagreed.

"Israel is primarily a socialist country, with a purpose of its own," he said. "Its participation in western culture is out of political choice not economic structure."

Weiner added he had trouble supporting Israel's trade agreements with South Africa.

However, Weiner said Israel had to trade with the African nation "because of Arab boycotts and black-mail."

"Israel must have some sort of relationship with countries that don't knuckle under to the imperialism of oil."

Galinsky said Israelis are as firm in their policy of ethnic separation as are the South Africans.

Israel practices "apartheid as much as South Africa," he said, "only people haven't heard about Nazareth the way they've heard about Johannesburg."

He added Palestinians have been evacuated from their homes because they crossed an "imaginary line" that separates Jews and Arabs.

Weiner said Arabs calling Israel racist "is a clear case of the pot calling the kettle black."

Both men agreed the plan for peace in the Middle East hinges on the issue of a homeland for the Palestinians.

The debate was sponsored by the Young Socialist Alliance and the Israel Action Committee.

Retiring NAU president looks ahead

The retiring president of NAU said Wednesday the next decade will bring an increase in the quality of education and a new distinction for educational institutions.

Dr. Lawrence Walkup, at an honors program for the ASU College of Education, said each institution should develop a separate set of criteria to evaluate its curriculum.

"We have the responsibility to work more closely with the six regional educational accrediting associations to examine their criteria for evaluation," Walkup said. "Right now they want to initiate a single criterion to evaluate all types of educational programs."

"It is important for us to challenge the goals and objectives of each educational institution in a clear and unconfused fashion with other types of institutions.

"Throughout the last 30 years, universities have been growing so fast that legislators have only been concerned with the amount of money coming from growing student populations.

"The rise of job training programs has eliminated the traditional values of a lifetime education."

Walkup, who has been involved with Arizona schools for 31 years, was presented the ASU Distinguished Achievement Award by Dr. Robert Stout, dean of the College of Education. Walkup has served as president of NAU for 21 years.

The award is presented annually by the College of Education in recognition of an educator who has made a major contribution to education in Arizona.

Walkup said a major challenge facing educators is the ability to help students lacking background in the arts, sciences and humanities.

He said the biggest educational achievement made since his career began was the state Student Incentive Grant program, because it enables qualified, but underprivileged students to get an education.

Other awards presented at the honors convocation included: the Outstanding Senior to Margaret Romero; Supervision of Student Teaching Award to Laura Logan and the Carnation Teaching Incentive Award to Harry Begay.

Scientists explore ways of extending life span

TUCSON (AP) — Some of the projects sound like science fiction, but scientists working on the human aging process say they are seeking ways to lengthen life expectancy and prevent the maladies of old age.

The Tucson Citizen reported Wednesday that among the projects disclosed at a meeting here last week of scientists and insurance company officials from around the country were:

—A system to stifle the aging process by finding and manipulating what apparently is a control center in the brain that eventually allows the body's cells and immune system to wear out.

—A "smart pill" that can help increase a person's short-term memory capabilities.

—An artificial heart weighing less than two pounds and powered by batteries strapped around the waist.

—An after dinner drink that would keep the body from absorbing the harmful ingredients of rich and fatty foods.

The meeting was sponsored by the Institute for Higher Studies and Dr. Alex Comfort, a specialist on aging, was among the participants. Comfort said science eventually will go beyond the idea of an aging process and get to the point of controlling life span.

Another scientist, Dr. Leonard Hayflick of the Bruce Lyon Memorial Research Laboratory in San Francisco, said he thinks science eventually will leave people with little or no choice in the cause of death.

Hayflick, a cell biologist known for discovering the life span of cells, said he is working to find out what limits there are on the life span of cells. He said he thinks the answer is in genetics and the nucleus of cells.

There is a kind of clock mechanism in cells with a genetic message for aging that has a limited amount of information and eventually it wears out, Hayflick said. Ironically, he said, the answer may lie with cancer cells, which do not die but continue multiplying.

Some of the other anti-aging projects in the works are being handled through the Glenn Foundation, a research organization headed by Paul Glenn of Scottsdale.

Glenn said his foundation is improving the concept of an artificial or mechanical heart to replace the human heart when it wears out or will not work any longer.

"If your marbles are beginning to fade, choline can help for short-term memory loss," said Glenn, who added that he takes a gram of choline each day.

Schwada favors ASU accreditation change

By Lori Grzesiek

ASU President John Schwada said Wednesday Arizona universities could gain clout by switching accrediting organizations, but the state superintendent of public instruction said the change would be an "enormous expenditure" to the state.

Carolyn Warner said she "cannot see at the moment what the advantage of the change might be, because all accrediting organizations are essentially the same."

She would not estimate what the actual cost might be in changing from the North Central Association to the Western Association of Colleges and Schools, but said the major expense would be in the cost of additional paperwork and labor.

But Schwada said "cost is not a major factor" and ASU would gain clout by having a vote with a greater impact on the Western Association of Schools and Colleges.

A vote in that organization would count more because it has fewer universities than the North Central Association of Colleges and Schools.

Colleges and universities band together into regional accreditation associations to ensure the quality of the institutions by making faculty, student and physical facility spot checks.

William Phillips, ASU academic planning coordinator, said the primary objective of the change is for Arizona universities to be affiliated with universities that are similar in terms of geography and institutional policies.

Phillips added there would be another advantage in being affiliated with the Western Association because it has about 700 fewer members than the North Central Association, and includes prestigious universities such as Stanford and UC-Berkeley.

"Our voice is virtually lost in an association the size of North Central," he said.

Buck box feedback

Gotta gripe? Is something weighing heavy on your mind? Is ASU making you long for the comfort of a nice, warm, padded cell? Well, you need not pull the hair out of your head any longer. You can "get it off your chest" by depositing your complaint in one of 11 "Buck Stops Here" boxes located around campus, and we will gladly give you an answer.

Q. Get those Bike Co-op flyers out of the racks! They have been bewildering new students like me because Haigler Hall doesn't exist anymore! Where is the Bike Co-op anyway?

A. The Co-op has tried to get rid of the old flyers but there still might be a few around. The Bike Co-op is located in Matthews Hall and is open Monday through Friday from 1 p.m. until 5 p.m. and in the summer on a limited basis.

Q. Those red arrows on the mall are pretty tacky. Could funds be allocated to have maintenance personnel remove them? Are they there for any special reason?

A. The red arrows were placed on the mall as part of the Red Eye Special. They are being removed at the present time.

Q. Why is Mariposa Hall's swimming pool off-limits to everyone except those who live there?

A. Reuben Sanchez, Unit Director of Mariposa, said the pool is reserved for residents and their guests. Since the facilities are too small to accommodate everyone, the policy has been to politely ask non-residents to leave. Signs saying "Residents Only" will be posted.

Q. Why were the typewriters removed from the library to the basement of the MU? Students who wish to use the typewriters at night are out of luck.

A. Typewriters are now available in the MU until 8 p.m. The library discontinued this service because the machines were constantly breaking down, and a company providing better service has not been located.

Q. Why are there no roofs on second cars of the trams?

A. Physical facilities removed the roofs because they were creating a hazard by breaking loose. Ed Hickcox, director of physical plant facilities, contacted the company which supplies the trams requesting they design a new roof which would not be as dangerous. The company replied changes would be made and new roofs should be installed by next semester.

Students cast as Coke fans

Five hundred stars were born at Sun-Devil Stadium Wednesday.

Lured to the stadium by offers of parts in a national television commercial, students were cast as fans in a soft drink ad.

Although the production company expected 2,000 extras and only 500 showed up, the filming went well, production employees said.

Manny Figueroa, University coordinator for the effort, said the Coca-Cola Company offered ASU scholarship aid for the use of the stadium and coordination of the three-day event.

"ASU was chosen for the commercial because the football and track stadiums were available, extras for the filming were free and the climate predictable," Figueroa said.

The commercial depicts a contest between two professional football players to see who can chug a can of the soft drink the fastest, producer Bob Emerson said.

Students were given green and yellow cards to flash for the cameras during another filming sequence.

ASASU to shell out $15,000 for handbooks

The ASU Associated Students will be shelling out about $15,000 for the Devil's Aid Handbook, a 100-page booklet to be distributed in the fall semester.

Mark Scarp, editor of the free handbook, said it will give information about ASU and tips on college life.

This will be the first year ASASU shoulders the responsibility for the handbook, which was published by the Faculty Course Evaluation Program last year.

Scarp said the original handbook was poor in design, layout and organization, and was not written by journalism students.

He added the booklet will now be written by journalism students and will cover topics such as academics, recreation and student government.

About 15,000 copies of the handbook will be published.

Scarp said the responsibility for the handbook shifted to ASASU when Point magazine was formed this year.

ASU's John Freitas on his way to hitting .400 again

By Walter Berry

John Freitas has never been one to over impress the press.

If he was, the Sun Devil senior wouldn't be the least publicized .400 hitter in the country. And maybe the most misunderstood.

The knocks against Freitas are many and varied. Some detractors insist he's too slow to be a pro prospect, but his fielding is bad enough to be considered suspect. Others write him off as a troublemaker. But all are aware he can hit like hell.

"From all we've seen and heard of John, we know he's a good hitter, especially in the clutch," said Sun Devil head coach Jim Brock. "But the problem is where to use him. He's not flashy. He's not noted for his defense. He doesn't run the bases well. And he doesn't hit a lot of home runs. He does hit well, but where do you play him?"

John Christopher Freitas is all too familiar with the phrase attached to his anatomy like an albatross — all-hit, no-field . . . and no wheels.

"I've never been seen at one position long enough for people to get a good impression about me," said the 22-year-old native of Castro Valley, Calif. "I've never really had a set position, period. My first year of high school, I pitched and played outfield. My sophomore year, I caught and pitched a little bit. My third year, it was DH, catcher and first base and my senior year I played first base, catcher and outfield.

"I played a little bit of everything in junior college. Everything except shortstop and center field where you have to have a little bit of speed. Consequently, I've never been considered a complete ball-player. The scouts look at a guy like Marty Barrett (Sun Devil shortstop) and say if he can run at all, he's going to be a high draft pick. And he can, so he will. But with me, they say 'Yeah, he can hit, but what position does he play? What position will he be in the pros?' Even I can't answer that."

At ASU this season, Freitas has seen his action predominantly behind the plate with a few token appearances in left field and at first base. The long-running knock on his less-than-soft hands and "metallic" glove have not applied to date.

"I think I've only made four errors so far in about 250 chances," said Freitas, who owns a .967 fielding percentage so far. "I think that's among the team leaders and that's not bad. Don't get me wrong, though. I don't mind playing different positions. It's kind of fun to move around. It changes your perspective all the time."

Whatever position the 6-foot-1 Freitas finds himself in the batter's box, his perspective — and statistics — seem to wind up the same. Awesome. Through the Devils' first 49 games, he has hit a healthy .406 with two home runs, 40 RBIs, 10 doubles, a triple and .531 slugging percentage. It doesn't surprise him.

"I went to junior college for two years and hit .400 as a freshman and .402 as a sophomore. It's nothing new," said the former all-league selection at Chabot College in Haywood, Calif. "Here in the PAC, it was a little tougher to hit at first since I had to make an adjustment. At the other schools I attended, we didn't face the same team twice so they wouldn't have a scouting report on you the second time around."

John Freitas

As a two-sport letterman at Arroyo High School in San Lorenzo, Calif., Freitas avoided the scouting reports well enough to hit .340 his junior year and .338 as a senior while compiling a career pitching record of 12-3.

But it was in basketball that he carved his deepest niche — scoring a school record 1,942 lifetime points.

"I was never recruited out of high school for anything — basketball or baseball. I did get one offer for basketball, but it was kind of a joke," Freitas said. "My coach called me in his office at the end of the season and said this guy had been calling me. He wanted me to go to the University of Santa Barbara.

"I talked to the guy and he said, 'We'd like to have you' and offered me a half scholarship. I told the guy 'No.' I'm not a college kind of player. I'm 6-1 and slow. I knew I was just a kid who was good for high school. I knew I wouldn't go anywhere.

"It was funny, though. I had never thought of myself as a big basketball player. It was always baseball."

Moving on to Chabot (Junior) College, Freitas made a name for himself on the diamond — winning all-Northern California acclaim for a team that went undefeated and ranked second in the state in 1975 and third nationally in '76.

"I got a lucky break," he said.

Bruins rout tennis team

More often than not, the hardest part to gaining your biggest win ever is doing an encore.

The ASU men's tennis team found the parable is not to be kicked around Tuesday when it tried to follow-up an astounding win over fifth-ranked USC on Monday with an even more astounding win over No. 1 UCLA. It didn't come off, the parable held like barnacles, and the Sun Devils fell to the Bruins 7-2 at UCLA.

Coach Marty Pincus claimed that ASU's win over the Trojans was the "biggest ever" for his team.

UCLA made sure before the doubles matches ever got under way that Pincus wouldn't follow the "biggest ever" with the even bigger than the "biggest ever."

The Bruins jumped out to a 2-0 lead before Eric Sherbeck got a point for ASU, and then put the match away with three straight wins to build an insurmountable 5-1 lead going into doubles play.

Fritz Brehning got UCLA rolling in the match with a 6-4, 6-1 win over ASU's No. 1 seed, Alan Waldman. Tonnie Sie then fell by identical scores to Mike Harrington before Sherbeck took a 7-6, 6-4 victory over UCLA's Dick Metz.

Things collapsed for the Sun Devils after that as Tim Anderson fell 6-2, 6-2 to Blane Willenborg and Archie Bower, who was instrumental in the win over USC, got skunked by Bruce Brescia 6-0, 6-0. Dwain Smith also had his problems in losing 6-0, 6-3 to Marzel Freeman in the final singles match.

The loss dropped ASU's record to 21-7 for the season.

The Sun Devils will stay in California this week for the Ojai Tournament in Ojai, Calif., where they will be joined by the ASU women's team as women's and men's teams from California and Arizona compete for the title.

ASU divers

ASU's men's swimming and diving program announced Wednesday the signing of Dan Plant and Brad Hering to national letters of intent.

Plant is a three-time Arizona state diving champion out of Coronado High in Scottsdale. He has earned high school all-america honors the past three years and was heavily recruited nationwide. Hering is a Scottsdale native who attended Brophy Prep in Phoenix and has set various national age group records and was one of the premier "butterflies" in the state this past season.

Sun Devils favored to win own tourney

A total of 108 golfers from 18 universities are entered in the 54-hole Sun Devil-Phoenix Thunderbird golf tournament which tees off today at McCormick Ranch Golf Course in Scottsdale.

Included in the field is Scott Watkins of the nationally third-ranked ASU golf team. Watkins has won back-to-back medalist tournaments in the Houston All-America and the Western Inter-collegiate.

ASU is favored to win the team championship because of Watkins' presence in the field. The Sun Devils have never won the event.

"However, I like our chances," ASU golf coach George Boutell said. "Both Scott and Dan (Croonquist) are playing well. We just have to get some of the other guys going."

Two other participating teams are also ranked in the top 10. UCLA is No. 6 and San Jose State is ranked No. 9.

Rounding out the team field are BYU, Fresno State, Long Beach State, UA, Cal, Pacific, USC, Oregon State, Stanford, Washington, Washington State, Utah State and Weber State.

Male coach to head women's volleyball

Former USC head coach and Western Collegiate Athletic Association coach of the year in 1978, Dale Flickinger, has been named to head the women's volleyball program at ASU.

The announcement was made Tuesday by Fred Miller, ASU athletic director.

Flickinger will replace Mary Littlewood, who is relinquishing the volleyball coaching job she has held since 1973 to devote full time to her duties as head coach of the ASU women's softball team.

Flickinger took USC to national prominence in his only year as head coach, leading the women's team to a sixth place finish in the national tournament of 1978.

Flickinger also coached on the club level in California, taking his Orange County volleyball team to a first place finish in the 1978 Junior Nationals.

Adding to his laurels for 1978, Flickinger led the American volleyball squad to a silver medal in the Pacific Rim International Championships.

In addition to his coaching duties, Flickinger will serve as administrative assistant to Herman Frazier, ASU assistant athletic director. He will be responsible for the coordination of football parking and staging of various athletic events.

Littlewood, who has been head softball coach since 1965, compiled a 116-45 record in her six years as volleyball coach, leading the Sun Devils to 15th in the nation in 1973, volleyball's first year as an intercollegiate sport.

ASU, a member of the Intermountain Conference for the past six years, will enter the WCAA next year.

More about

Freitas trying to shake critics

"No one knew who I was. Where I came from wasn't considered a good baseball area. I was just a ballplayer from down the road apiece. All of a sudden, the school became a powerhouse that someone was going to notice. That's the only way Las Vegas (the University of Nevada) found out about me. We ended up in the state tournament and their coach (Fred Dallomar) was there watching."

He wasn't the only one.

"Oral Roberts and USC contacted me too," Freitas added. "I could've gone to SC if I wanted to. My coach thought that I was for sure. But after I talked with them, I wanted no part of it."

"Rod Dedeaux (Trojan head coach) is one of the nicest guys I've ever met in my life. It's just that his son (assistant coach) Justin and I didn't see eye-to-eye on some things, especially recruiting. I just didn't like the way he went about it."

"At first, he offered me a half scholarship, then a three-quarter. After I signed (a letter-of-intent) at Las Vegas, he offered me a full-ride. I just didn't like the way they kept fooling with me. I felt like I was luggage or something."

His UNLV career wasn't exactly lacking in controversy either. It was as stormy as it was short.

Despite being the Rebels' starting catcher in 1977 and placing 11th in the nation in doubles and 29th in batting average (.408), Freitas decided to transfer. He allegedly got in frequent arguments with the Las Vegas coaches who he thought didn't know their fundamentals.

"I got kicked off the team. It cost me a year of my life. I was at fault," said the physical education major who also played one season of JV basketball "just for fun" at UNLV. "I had to do some growing up there — mature as an individual and as a baseball player. I had a lot of learning to do."

"But let's put it this way: when I left Las Vegas, I was a free ballplayer. I could've gone anywhere I wanted. I'm at ASU now. I want to be remembered as an Arizona State ballplayer. I've given 110 percent ever since I've been here."

Not to mention about $2,000.

"Wherever I went to college, I had to have a full scholarship. I couldn't afford school myself," he said. "I knew of ASU's program. I would've loved to come here my first year. And I think they knew about me because I once went five-for-15 against them in a series my one year at UNLV. So I called up coach Brock, asked him if I could come down and if there was any possibility of me getting financial aid."

"He told me if I paid my own way for one year that ASU might pick up the tab the next year if I make the team. I said,

'Great. I'm coming then' and came down. I knew I'd have to sit out a year before I could play, but I figured I may as well play my last year at the best place..."

After spending the entire 1978 Sun Devil season as a redshirt warming up pitchers in the bullpen, Freitas slimmed some 40 pounds off his frame to get down to his current playing weight of 185. He anticipated the best for ASU in '79. And instead got the worst.

"Even though I wasn't a part of it, we did have a very successful season last year. We all went away for the summer and very successful seasons there. It LOOKED like it was going to be a good season," said the Alaskan League's third-leading hitter last year (.338). "It's just a mental thing we're going through right now. We play our hearts out and we just don't get the right hits or whatever it takes to win. We battle like hell and keep coming up short. We just get bad breaks."

"Hey, we're a young team.

We weren't supposed to win it (the Pac-10 title). But we know we're giving it our best. Every guy is out to win. It's not anybody's fault in particular. Things just aren't working out for us. But if we pull out of this in our last nine games, we had a successful year. Nobody can tell us otherwise."

Freitas will consider it a personal plus if he can accomplish the one thing his aluminum bat has yet to give him — a pro contract.

"All I've ever wanted to do since I was three years old was to play pro baseball," he said. "I remember getting kicked out of class once because I wasn't interested in anything else. I'd love to play pro. But if it happens, it happens. We'll find out June 7."

"All my life, scouts have been telling me I can't make it. I guess I'm still proving myself even now because they're STILL saying the same things. But the way I look at it, as long as I keep hitting someone will have a home for me."

Golfers take the lead in 3-day tournament

The ASU women's golf team stretched its lead to 13 strokes through the second round of the Intermountain Regional Championship golf tournament at Oro Valley Country Club Tuesday, in Tucson.

Holding a five shot lead after the first round of the three-day tournament, the Sun Devils picked up eight more on second place UA with a blistering 297 for a two-round total of 602.

Jeannette Kerr shot her way into contention for medalist honors with a 73 to go along with a first round 76, placing her second, one stroke back of Susie Berdoy from UA with a 148.

Vicki Singleton, third after the first round, skied to a 77 for a two-day total of 152, dropping her to sixth place.

Kathy Hewitt moved up three notches to fourth with a 74 for a 151 total. Kelly Fuiks continued having problems, shooting a 76 for an eighth place total of 153.

In team play, the University of New Mexico is four behind UA with a 619, followed by BYU, 637 and Weber State, 778.

Softball team bats in Utah

The ASU softball team will be back in Intermountain conference action this week, hitting slump and all, as they open a series of three straight double-headers beginning with Weber State today in Utah.

Tied for the conference lead with UA (both teams are 9-1), Sun Devils are hoping that the hitting slump they encountered last weekend in New Mexico against Texas Women's University and Oregon State stays in New Mexico.

"We can't hit like we did there and expect to beat these conference teams," Coach Mary Littlewood said. "The teams in this conference hit too well for us to expect to win very many with the way we have been hitting."

ASU had one of its lowest run producing trips of the season at New Mexico University, scoring only twice in three games.

Lucy Casarez, who has a 15-1 record, is reported to be in good condition for the six-game Utah series, after sustaining an ankle injury last week while sliding into a base in practice. Casarez pitched against Oregon State on Saturday and had to leave the game in the sixth inning because of the pain. She lost the game by a 3-0 score.

"Lucy will be able to go for sure this week," Littlewood said. "The trainer said she is okay and she said she is able to pitch, so right now I don't foresee any problems."

The Sun Devils will play Utah on Friday and face Utah State Saturday. They carry an overall record of 29-4 into today's game.

Tennis team goes to Ojai

ASU women's tennis team will participate in the Ojai Valley Invitational Intercollegiate Tournament, scheduled to begin today in Ojai, Calif. The tourney will conclude Saturday.

The Sun Devils have compiled a 9-0 record this season.
