Insurance building of punter's father torched by arsonist

By Perry Sams

Phoenix Fire Department investigators say arsonists caused a fire in the downtown insurance office of Gordon Rutledge, who is seeking $1.1 million in damages from the state, alleging his son was harassed into quitting the ASU football team last spring.

A police spokesman would not speculate whether there is any connection between the fire and the harassment complaint.

"We have no suspects at this time," Sgt. Wally Welsh said.

Rutledge filed a complaint with the Arizona Board of Regents on Tuesday, alleging his son Kevin had been harassed by coaches into quitting the team. The complaint named ASU head football coach Frank Kush, assistant coach Bill Maskill, the University and the Board of Regents.

Four engines and two ladders responded to the alarm at the Equitable Life and Casualty building, 3324 N. 20th St., late Wednesday night.

"The report indicates the fire was set in three separate places," said Capt. Manuel Benitez, senior fire investigator.

Fire Arson Investigator Tom Schwindt filed the report early Thursday, Benitez said.

A police spokesman confirmed the fire department's evaluation of the fire as arson.

"The building appeared to be forcibly entered, apparently through a window," said Welsh, a member of the police arson and bomb investigation unit.

Police and fire officials said they hope to receive information through the Silent Witness or Arson Watch programs.

Rutledge accident started 'woes,' prep coach says

By Dave Walker

A $1.1 million complaint filed this week by a former ASU football player's father against two of this son's former coaches might have started with a run-in with an assistant coach.

Literally.

Kevin Rutledge's Gilbert High School coach, Don Dunn, said Rutledge's status on the ASU team began to sour after an accidental collision with assistant coach Bill Maskill during a practice drill last year.

Dunn said he had been in contact with Rutledge, who played punter and safety, throughout his two-year stint at ASU.

"The relationship between Rutledge and Maskill was never a very good one," Dunn said. "I don't think Kevin really liked Coach Maskill. Fred Glick (who Maskill replaced last season) had a better relationship with him."

Glick now is a coach with the NFL's St. Louis Cardinals.

Maskill is one of the coaches named in the complaint, which was filed Tuesday by Kevin's father Gordon. It stated that members of the ASU coaching staff harassed Rutledge into quitting the Sun Devil squad.

The punter was not available for comment Thursday.

Rutledge is attending the University of Nevada Las Vegas, but is not eligible to play football for the Rebels this season because he has been redshirted.

A National Collegiate Athletic Association official said news of the complaint reached NCAA headquarters in Shawnee Mission, Kan., in a wire service story that appeared in the Kansas City Star.

The official, who requested anonymity, said the NCAA will make no official comment until details of the complaint are revealed Saturday at the Arizona Board of Regents' monthly meeting in Tucson.

Dunn said he does not recall Rutledge mentioning any serious conflicts with head coach Frank Kush, the other coach named in the complaint.

Dunn, who formerly played football under Kush, said he counseled Rutledge to remain at ASU during the early stages of his personality conflicts.

"I told him at that time to stick it out," he said. "They (the coaches) were just trying to make him a better person."

But Dunn said when he visited ASU to observe spring drills this year, he changed his mind about Rutledge.

"He wasn't getting any playing time during scrimmages, so I stopped trying to convince him to stay," he said.

"I still think he will be a good college football player — wherever that may be."

Gordon Rutledge was unavailable for comment Thursday, but his wife, Nancy, said Rutledge "... wishes he could still be at ASU."

In an interview from the family's Gilbert home, she said none of the Rutledge family members hold a grudge against ASU, but added the relationship between Rutledge and his coaches was so severe that "something had to be done."

She declined to comment on what specifically prompted the complaint, but added:

"I have seven children. All of them have played sports and none of them ever received treatment like Kevin got at ASU."

WARHEAD 'DUD' IS DETONATED

LAS VEGAS — An underground nuclear test aimed at destroying an unwanted dud warhead buried deep beneath the Nevada desert was pronounced successful Thursday by the Department of Energy. The powerful nuclear explosion — the equivalent of as much as 150,000 tons of TNT — rocked buildings throughout Las Vegas some 95 miles from ground zero. No damage was reported.

WORLD'S LARGEST VOLCANO ERUPTS

TOKYO — Mount Aso, the world's largest volcano and a spectacular draw for thousands of tourists, suddenly turned killer Thursday when it erupted in a shower of rock that rained down on dozens of helpless sightseers. Three were killed and 16 injured, two seriously, police reported.

CARTER RELEASES PUERTO RICAN PRISONERS

WASHINGTON — President Carter has decided to grant clemency to three Puerto Rican nationalists who wounded five congressmen in an assault on the House of Representatives, it was disclosed Thursday. A fourth, who was involved in an assassination attempt against President Harry Truman, was also pardoned by Carter.

TUCSON HOSPITALS REPORT RISE IN BIRTHS

TUCSON — Several Tucson hospitals reported large increases in the numbers of births last month, with Tucson Medical Center, the city's largest hospital, setting a one-month record. TMC recorded 385 births last month, one more than the record set in March 1977. The number of births each month this year has averaged 70 more than in the same month last year, said Pat Snyder, head nurse in labor and delivery. At the University of Arizona Medical Center, 130 births were reported in August, compared with an average of 110 to 115 a month, officials said.

DAVID KENNEDY SUSPECTED OF COCAINE USE

NEW YORK — David Kennedy, 24-year-old son of the assassinated Robert F. Kennedy, claims he was robbed during a chance encounter in Harlem. But police sources said Thursday that he went to a seedy hotel there to buy cocaine. "The kid is known as 'White James,'" said a narcotics division source, who asked not to be named. "He was brought up to the area months ago by a black dude and said his name was James. But they got so many Jameses up here they put the tag 'White James' on him, for obvious reasons."

'SWINGING SINGLES' SUE CRUISE SHIP

DENVER — Two businessmen who spent a week on a Caribbean cruise ship say that what was billed as an outing for "young singles" turned out to be an excursion for the geriatric set. They are suing Neiman-Marcus, the Dallas store through which they booked the trip. "We walked on board ship and there were all these people drinking Geritol, taking oxygen and pushing wheel chairs," said Peter B. Sherry, 29, of Denver.

CONTAMINATED FOOD BURIED NEAR TUCSON

TUCSON — Twenty-two truckloads of perishable food exposed to radiation will be buried in the middle of a military bombing range in the desert south of here, city officials decided Thursday. The decision ends a 3-month search by officials of the Tucson Unified School District for a place to dispose of the $300,000 worth of food so it can decontaminate its central kitchen and resume preparing lunches for 40,000 students.

BODIES FOUND ALONG BIKE PATH

MORTON GROVE, Ill. — The partially clad bodies of two teen-age girls, believed to have been beaten to death, were found along a bicycle path in a forest preserve. Police said the girls appeared to have been beaten about the head and there were indications they had been raped.

UA DORM RESIDENTS WANT PRIVACY, NOT LENIENCY

TUCSON — Students living in UA dormitories want privacy and security more than coed dorms and longer visiting hours, a UA vice president said, citing a recent survey. "When students think about it, they really are interested in privacy and security without having to worry about strangers wandering around on Sunday mornings," said Vice President Richard M. Edwards.

HORSEBACK PATROLS FORMED AT BORDER

PALOMINAS — Horseback patrols along the Arizona-Mexico border will soon begin an effort to spot illegal aliens and stop burglaries, residents say. Gary Bradshaw, an organizer of the patrols, said residents are hoping to reduce the number of illegal aliens coming into the area.

Dorm tenants angry

Game seating rearranged

Several dorm residents are irate because they were given football season tickets for seats other than the ones they were promised, the assistant unit director of Best Hall said Thursday.

"The (ASU Athletic) Ticket Office gave us seats in Sections 27, 28 and 35, but we were told all the students would be seated in Sections 27 and 28," Anna Guess said.

Sections 27 and 28 are between the 10- and 30-yard lines. Section 35 is in the end zone.

Students have been told they cannot exchange or refund the tickets, although the application for the tickets said the seats would be in Sections 27 and 28 only.

The ticket office could not be reached for comment.

Under a new policy initiated by Guess and two resident assistants, dorm students buying season tickets would have been seated together in the two sections.

A total of 1,205 dorm students participated, turning in ticket applications, activity cards and $15 to receive the tickets.

Guess said she was not told some of the tickets were in a different section and did not discover it until she got them back to her office.

Most of the students were placed in Sections 27 and 28, but 396 students were given seats in Section 35.

She went back to the ticket office and was told nothing could be done about it. However, the ticket office called back later and said the students in Section 35 could be put in Sections 247 and 248 instead.

Those sections are located between the goal posts and the 15-yard line and are up on the second tier of seats.

"We settled for those because they were better than Section 35," Guess said.

Leis said he hopes the situation can be straightened out.

"I just don't want it to happen again for future students," he said.

The idea of grouping dorm students together was accepted by the ticket office, said Jorge Leis, a resident assistant for Irish C Hall.

"It would raise spirit at the games, it would be an added social event for the dorm students, it would sell more tickets and it eliminated about 400 people from the ticket line," Leis said.

Leis said he was told by the ticket office Assistant Manager Tom George that no more than 1,000 seats had ever been sold to dorm students.

"So we hustled and got 1,205 sold and this happened," he said.

Many of the dorm students are angry, and doubt the effectiveness of their resident assistants, he added.

"There are even rumors that we had something to do with where they were seated, but we had no control," he said.

Only faculty, staff entitled to paid time off, director says

By Sherry Wheatley

Three Associated Students vice presidents took paid vacations this summer, but University policy allows time off with pay only to full-time faculty and staff, the ASU director of personnel said Thursday.

Students employed by ASU are not entitled to paid vacations because they are not full-time workers, Henry Koelbl said.

ASU students can work a maximum of 20 hours a week, according to University policy.

"Our system is not held accountable for the absence of the students," he said.

"The personnel office is not responsible for any student employee."

The students are paid a certain amount per hour to perform a job and no accumulation of sick leave or paid vacation is allotted to a student, he added.

"The ASASU officers should get together and develop their own records as far as absence (from work) goes," he said.

ASASU Executive Vice President Sam Armstrong, Campus Affairs Vice President Kevin Cosgrove and Activities Vice President Lori Tanner took paid vacations this past summer, ranging from two to five weeks.

The great difficulty in education is to get experience out of the idea.
—George Santayana

Take heart! Sheepskin is in!

As we stumble in and out of classes day after day, most of us wonder at one time or another whether a sheepskin is really worth all the hassle.

Thirty years ago, a college diploma was an automatic catapult into a professional, high-paying career. But as the job market tightened in most fields and competition got tougher, more and more grads wound up with jobs totally unrelated to their field of study.

It's simple—you must have money to eat, and you need a job to earn money. If you can't find the employment you want within a certain period of time, you'll settle for something less.

Almost everyone knows former sociology majors who drive trucks, or English graduates who've become carpenters. The list is endless.

But if you're almost ready to hang it up and head for American Bartender's School, try to hold out a little longer because the outlook seems to be improving.

According to a study released by the College Placement Council, a professional society of recruiters for major corporations, most college graduates of the 1970s are content with the jobs their degrees brought them.

Of more than 3,900 grads surveyed as freshmen in 1970, about a third said they felt un-

deremployed and would prefer more challenging positions.

On the other hand, more than 80 percent of the graduates, who were surveyed again in 1977, indicated they were either "very" or "somewhat" satisfied with their jobs.

The study, titled "College Education and Employment—the Recent Graduates," was funded by the National Institute of the U.S. Department of Health, Education and Welfare.

It is the College Placement Council's third report. Earlier results were obtained from 4,100 college graduates who had been surveyed as freshmen in 1961 and in 1971 and 1974 follow-ups.

Most of the latest grads said their education had been useful for employment as well as other purposes. In addition, the report said, they were confident about the value of their education even in light of the tight job market of the '70s.

Job satisfaction was found to differ considerably by occupation, but not by age or sex.

College prepares students mostly for their first job after graduation, the study found.

Business, education and engineering were the academic areas determined most likely to launch students into degree-related careers.

But most importantly, the report said recent graduates have a better likelihood than their predecessors to land jobs related to their major fields of study.

What this all boils down to is that chances are reasonably good you'll be able to use that diploma to find employment that brings more rewards than just a paycheck every Friday.

That can be a comforting thought, especially in light of all the BS you have to wade through en route to a B.S. And to learning something meaningful.

Now if only there was a way around final exams...

Letters to the Editor

Your story dropped the bomb on China

Editor:

Your Aug. 31 article on Chinese education misrepresented my view. More importantly, it did a great disservice to the friendship of the American and Chinese peoples.

My point was: education suffered during the Cultural Revolution. However, under the rigorous standards of the reconstituted educational system, Chinese students are emphatically not illiterate (contrary to your sensational headline). Rather, they are much more highly motivated and in some ways better prepared than their American counterparts.

The disruptions during the Cultural Revolution do not negate the tremendous achievement of the Chinese in providing educational, medical and other social services to hundreds of millions of dispossessed people in the 30 years since Liberation.

At present the whole society is pervaded by a sense of purpose and high morale, as I observed during my recent trip.

Letter Policy

The State Press welcomes letters to the editor on any topic. To ensure publication, however, letters must conform to a few guidelines.

Type them, double spaced, with margins set on 60 characters. Include your full name, class standing and major. Anonymous letters will be discarded. However, if it is imperative that your name be withheld, state why.

All letters are subject to editing for style, grammar and spelling, but don't be sloppy. Lengthy letters may be shortened to meet space limitations, so be brief.

Your ethics are on vacation

Editor:

After three years at this university, I can only say you've done it again.

I wonder what the State Press "by-laws" and objectives are. Could it be that one of them says: "State Press staffers will forever be endeavored to dig into the private lives and actions of every figure on this campus holding either temporary or prolonged status in the public eye, and whenever possible, twist these bits of information so that they appear as vile and sinister acts to all ASU students."

Re: ASASU officer's vacations

Your own article quotes Gary Kleemann, ASASU coordinator: "The officers are given a salary for the year — it's not per hour or per anything . . ." Why do you insist, then, that "Cosgrove spent almost two weeks with pay in Michigan . . .?"

Are you saying, therefore, that because ASASU officers are paid for the year, they are not entitled to a vacation? They must work 52 weeks every year?

Let me suggest, then, that someone stand guard up in the ASASU offices over Christmas to make sure none of our paid officers takes any time off to visit relatives or for any other asinine reason. Make sure we get our money's worth out of every last one of them, by God!

And next time elections come around, why not make sure the officers we elect don't have family or boy-friends anywhere, either. Maybe that'll reduce the temptation to regale on their duties.

Regents plan Tucson meeting to consider tuition increase and UA extension in Yuma

Recommendations for tuition-hike guidelines will be a key topic at the Arizona Board of Regents meeting Saturday in Tucson.

The meeting is open to the public from 9 a.m. through the early afternoon in the UA Student Union Junior Ballroom.

A tuition hike is guaranteed for the fall semester, but exactly how much and how to implement the future increase is undecided.

An ad hoc committee was appointed by Ralph Bilby, regent president, to study the problem.

The question of what percentage of educational costs that tuition should be based on will be reviewed by the committee.

In the Aug. 30 issue of the State Press, Rep. Jim Cooper, R-Mesa, said tuition for non-residents could increase as much as 15 percent.

Other items on the agenda include the feasibility of establishing a UA branch campus in Yuma.

Babbitt appoints geography prof to state position

The director of the laboratory of climatology at ASU has been designated state climatologist for Arizona by Gov. Bruce Babbitt. Dr. Anthony Brazel, associate professor in the geography department, assumed the position in August.

He is currently studying precipitation patterns in central Arizona. Brazel is noted for his work on Arizona's dust problem and study of climatic changes.

Brazel has taught physical geography and climatology at ASU since 1974.

Water line snaps near ASU

Students and passers-by were forced to tread water for two hours Thursday when a water main broke and flooded College Avenue and Fifth Street.

A contractor grading on the south side of Hayden Butte hit the water main shortly after noon, said Joe R. Banghart, Tempe water service supervisor.

Tanner Companies, the contractor working at the time, reported the breakage, but said it is not responsible. It added that Tempe might be the responsible party.

"We won't know how much damage was done until it is fixed," Banghart said.

Utility crews were able to shut the main off within a hour but the foot-deep water already had flooded lawns on the east side of College.

The shut-off did not effect any area businesses.

The main feeds the stadium and is used for water drainage off the butte.

Utility worker, Gilbert J. Garcia, said it would take three to five hours to get the situation cleared up. He added it happens all the time but it is a first for this site.

Water continued to flow down College towards University where the sewer drain is located. The bulk of the water had been drained by 2 p.m.

An official investigation is being made into the incident to determine who is responsible. They will be charged with the cost of the accident, Banghart said.

Garcia said, "It is going to cost somebody."

Free game parking provided for ASU decal-bearing autos

ASU students and faculty attending Saturday's football season opener will be able to park free if their cars display valid University parking decals, the athletic department business manager said Thursday.

"There will be no charge for students or faculty to park in any public parking lot," Shelly Gerard said. "We've notified all the people who will be collecting money at the lots to let all vehicles with decals pass through with no charge."

An improved traffic flow system will speed arrival and departure of fans to and from Sun Devil Stadium's home contests and also will offer more parking spaces to spectators, said University Police Sgt. Earl Simmer.

Fans arriving from the north will be directed to park on the north side of campus while those arriving from the south will be pointed toward south campus lots, Simmer said.

One of the major changes from last year's traffic flow is the closure of Scottsdale Road from First Street to University. Fans arriving from the north will be diverted to Lot 59 via First Street.

Spectators coming into campus from the south will be asked to use lots off McAllister and Rural.

Those arriving from the west will be directed to use Sun Devil Way from the Tempe Bridge to First Street, then to Lot 59E across Scottsdale Road, Simmer said.

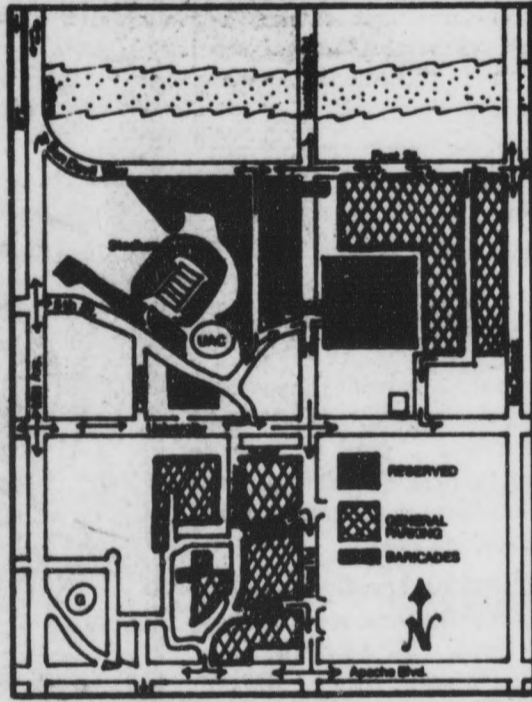

Arrivals from the east Valley should use Apache to Rural and park in lots off Rural.

A $1 fee will be charged to park in the general parking lots.

After the game, the system used for entering the campus will be reversed, with the exception that Scottsdale Road will be one-way north and College one-way south.

"It should be a spectacular sight, and it should be seen for miles," Farris said.

The club will be designing and painting a large paper ring for

"A rich bittersweet comedy overflowing with an irresistible Italianate passion for life with Monica Vitti in a tour-de-force performance in the title role."

-Kevin Thomas
L.A. Times

Imagine Barbra Streisand starring in a happy-go-lucky comic version of 'Seven Beauties' and you get the tenor of 'Teresa the Thief' - a raffish Italian comedy that shows off Monica Vitti to marvelous advantage. Vitti has a Streisand-like ability to make herself adorable at will. She lends an ecstatic energy to the film every frame.

"Monica Vitti, with her freckles and her Streisand nose, emerges as a major actress and 'Teresa the Thief' emerges as one of the season's most joyous movie surprises."

-Rex Reed
Syndicated Columnist

"Above all it's comedy and stringent social commentary. 'Teresa the Thief' offers a bravura performance by Monica Vitti. Her varied talent and unusual beauty brilliantly displayed in Carlo Di Palma's promising directorial debut."

Mother-to-be included in U.S. Marine Corps' ASU recruitment drive

By Richard Jim

The U.S. Marine Corps found seven good men — and two good women — during its ASU recruiting drive for officer candidates. One of the women is pregnant.

"She's due to give birth any day," said Marine recruiter Capt. John Switzer, part of a Phoenix recruiting team that has manned a table on the mall since Tuesday.

"She has to wait until after the birth before we can start processing her application."

The recruiters look for officer material and selected students are not commissioned until they graduate from ASU. The only military involvement of a participating student is two 6-week summer training sessions in Quantico, Va., for which a student receives about $800 per session. The Marine Corps provides free lodging, meals and plane fare, Switzer said.

The stipends for the annual summer training sessions increase with a student's years in school, he said.

"One thing most students don't know is that even if they are in the program from their freshman year through their senior year, they still are not obligated to accept a commission," Switzer said.

The recruiters averaged about 20 inquiries a day during their first two days on campus.

Volunteers sought

Planned Parenthood lacks aid

If you are "comfortable with your own sexuality" and have spare time on your hands, Planned Parenthood needs you.

According to Alive Punkal, staff and volunteer training coordinator, volunteers are needed to provide gynecological counseling at both the Phoenix and Tempe clinics.

A diverse group of people volunteer to aid the clinics, she said. Students, housewives, working women and even men find at least four hours a week to help out.

"We don't get too many men," Punkal said. "It takes a very special kind of young man to work here, but we have several and are very pleased with them."

No special skills are required, but the ability to communicate openly is important.

"We are looking for people who can communicate comfortably on a one-to-one basis," she said.

Certain clerical aspects are involved, such as taking patient histories and maintaining charts. But the main duty of a volunteer is to be an "educator."

Volunteers will become involved with patients on a one-to-one basis to discuss birth control, gynecological care and other related topics.

Sixteen hours of training prepare volunteers for their jobs.

"We give extensive training on all birth control methods, gynecological care and sexually transmitted diseases...that's the new term for VD," she said. "We also go over communication skills and personal interaction."

All positions are strictly volunteer, but there is a possibility that they could generate a paid position in the future. Punkal said she started as a volunteer while attending ASU.

Evening training sessions for volunteers will be held on Sept. 13 and Sept. 14 at the Phoenix office, 1301 S. 7th Ave. There also will be a session all day Sept. 15.

To sign up for the session, or for information, call Punkal at 258-4299.

Frog leaps to stardom in 'Muppet Movie'

The film's script reads like a joke.

The hero is discovered playing a banjo and singing a saccharine Paul Williams tune in a swamp. He's told he could be a big star in Hollywood and he sets off for Tinsel Town. The trip to the West Coast is filled with wildly improbable adventures and peopled with the kind of colorful characters—a broken-down saloon comic, an ambitious small town beauty queen—that Tennessee Williams might make something from.

There also is a villain. He is the most dastardly screen bad guy since Pearl White was shackled to a railroad track. He tries to stop the hero from arriving in California.

Laurence Olivier couldn't make this script play. Robert DeNiro or Richard Burton would end up on the dinner theater circuit if they took a crack at this one.

But Kermit the frog not only emerges unscathed, he makes a film debut the likes of which has never been seen before. He's a real charmer.

Kermit

There have been heroes and anti-heroes, even mock-heroes but Kermit's touching portrayal of the innocent on the road is the first full-fledged frog-hero.

Sure a few of the amphibious beasts played opposite Ray Milland in "Frogs," but they showed little of the histrionic flair Kermit brings to the screen. It took until 1979 and Kermit's performance in the "The Muppet Movie" to make frogs viable leading men.

One can't figure out what took so long. Think of the films Hollywood might have made if it was quicker at spotting trends: "Citizen Kermit," "Frog on a Hot Tin Roof," or "Croaking in the Rain."

Can't you see a frog brutally being sauteed in a shower at the Bates Motel. Or Alfred Hitchcock could have used frogs in "The Birds."

Anyway, frogs finally have found the screen attention they so long deserved. "The Muppet Movie" is enchanting, charming and an all together pleasant two hours spent in a theater.

And while kids might love it, their boisterous approval at a recent screening attest to this contention, there is plenty for adults.

Some of the jokes are delicious.

When Dom De Luise, as a slick Hollywood agent, is hopelessly lost in Kermit's swamp, he asks for help. "I've lost my sense of direction," he says. Kermit replies, "Have you tried Hari Krishna?"

The cast is packed with big name cameos including Elliott Gould, Richard Pryor, Orson Welles, Madeline Kahn, Cloris Leachman, Milton Berle and Steve Martin. They're all fun.

Classically trained Ponty turns jazz man

Jean-Luc Ponty

By Richard Monks

Graduating at the top of his class from France's most respected conservatory of music and being selected to play in one of Paris' finest symphony orchestras, is quite an honor for an 18-year-old.

But for Jean-Luc Ponty, who will headline 2 shows at Dooley's Sunday the mystique of being a classical violinist didn't last long. After three years he grew tired of playing classical music and left the Concerts Lamoureux Symphony Orchestra. Ponty wanted to play jazz.

"When I started I was very young and very enthusiastic," Ponty said in a recent phone interview. "But as time passed I found the older musicians didn't share my enthusiasm and I became tired of it.

"It reached the point where it became terrible and I knew I had to get out."

During his spare hours Ponty had been playing jazz with friends and now he channeled his talent in that direction.

"After leaving the symphony orchestra I knew I was taking a big chance," he said. "But I was only 21 and had time to ex-

The rest of the cast is not filled with deadbeats either. Miss Piggy is a leading lady to the manner born. Watch out Joanne Woodward. There's also Fozzie Bear, the rock and rolling Dr. Teeth and the Electric Mayhem and another big star cameo by Big Bird.

The human actors also are fairly game. Charles Durning as a fast food frog legs king pressuring Kermit into becoming his television spokesperson (spokesfrog?) is dandy. He uses a bastard Southern accent that oozes bad faith. Austin Pendleton, an accomplished actor, as his assistant is fine fun.

The special effects are grand. Fozzie Bear driving an old Studebaker is a treat, so is Kermit and Miss Piggy frolicking in a field, young and in love, hugging and spinning each other around in soft focus to a syrupy Paul Williams ballad. It is just like a television shampoo commercial.

Probably the best, certainly the one that received the biggest audience response, was Kermit riding a bicycle. He almost is flattened between two steamrollers; "If frogs couldn't hop, I'd have been 'Gone With the Schwin,'" he says.

periment. I figured if I didn't make it by the time I was 30 then I'd go back to classical music."

Now 36, Ponty can say with confidence that he never had to go back.

"There was a great market for pure jazz in Europe and I could have been very successful if I'd stuck to that," he said. "But I started to experiment with progressive rock and got away from pure jazz."

"There have been other violinists who have used amplified violins. But what I did for the electric violin was to create the sound of a new instrument altogether, the same way as the electric guitar is different than the classical guitar."

What that whole new instrument has produced is what Ponty calls, "progressive music."

"This," he said, "came about from playing with so many musicians with a variety of styles. I think I've benefited from playing with musicians with such different styles. It gave me great insight."

Ponty said he learned from playing with the likes of Frank-Zappa, Elton John and John McLaughlin. But the artists he feels have influenced him most are classical composers Chopin, Ravel and Debussy.

"Later in my life I became influenced by black American jazzmen Miles Davis and John Coltrane," he added.

Another musician Ponty said was a great influence was Stefan Grappelli, a French mainstream jazz musician.

"He was an inspiring jazz musician to me," Ponty said. "But I don't think I play like him. Grappelli plays mainstream and I was inspired by the music of my day which is much more electronic and progressive."

Ponty said he has met the 80-year-old Grappelli and played with him.

"This was quite an honor," he said.

Four things Ponty is especially proud of are his last four solo albums, Imaginery Voyage, Enigmatic Ocean, Cosmic Messenger and his new effort, the soon to be released "A Taste for Passion."

"It's hard for me to say any one of my albums is any better than any of the others, since they all represent a part of my life," he said. "But I'm very pleased with everything I've done since Imaginery Voyage."

Ponty said those who have heard his new album have told him they feel it is his best work, and the violinist himself said he is pleased with it.

"Much of our present show is made up of this album," he said. "We play the whole thing during the show."

Ponty, who is also an accomplished keyboard player, said he has been playing a lot more keyboards recently.

"That's not to show that I can also play keyboard," he said. "But because one keyboard is not enough for the sound I want to produce."

Rutledge suit clouding Devil opener

Kevin Rutledge, the former Sun Devil punter seeking $1.1 million in damages from Sun Devil coaches Frank Kush and Bill Maskill and the Arizona Board of Regents, said Thursday he knew well before he decided to come to ASU that Kush was "a rough coach, and always has been."

So why in the world would the former Gilbert High standout come to the Devils as a walk-on, rather than accept a full scholarship at UA?

"It's something I'd had in my mind for a long time," said Rutledge from the Holiday Casino in Las Vegas, where he works in the receiving department. "I had gone to a lot of (ASU) games when I was small, and I kind of followed them. Things just took their course."

It looked like Rutledge wasn't going to go anywhere after his 1976 senior season at Gilbert High even though he won all-state and all-

Southwest honors as a defensive back that year. Until he participated in a post-season all-star bowl, no school was interested in the 6-foot-2, 170 pounder.

"Right after that all-star game, the UofA offered me a full ride, so I did have a school to go to if I wanted," said Rutledge, now a redshirt after transferring to UNLV. "The ASU recruiters just kind of wanted me as a walk-on, but I guess ASU offered me a little more recognition."

But it's what has happened the past few days well away from the campus and field that has made Rutledge's name a household word to ASU football followers.

Tuesday, Rutledge's father Gordon filed a six-page, $1.1 million complaint charging that his son was harassed into quitting the team last spring. The controversy and "no comments" that came after from all parties involved have overshadowed everything connected with ASU's football team, which opens its season Saturday at home against Cal.

And Kevin Rutledge has managed to lay fairly

Good year seen for Devil football

When I first saw ASU's football schedule for this season, I had to laugh. Seven home games, no revenge-bent USC, UA at home—then I reconsidered.

Florida State, Washington, UCLA, plus Cal to open. And, losing three defensive secondary starters in a passing conference—and ineligibility and injuries would jumble the offensive line.

The are still questions, but I'm smiling.

Once upon a time, when I gladly left my Uncle Sams' and moved to Arizona, ASU had an undefeated season—12-0. A Co-Big Eight champion Nebraska team was coaxed into the 1975 Fiesta Bowl, and the Huskers promptly got shucked. ASU upset the visitors 17-14 and was rewarded with a No. 2 national ranking.

In 1976, I started college, and ASU "Reached for No. 1."

But through a combination of apathy and bad breaks, the Devils didn't reach victory No. 1 until I was almost a sophomore, five games into the season. They finished 4-7 in 1976.

This year's senior Sun Devils were freshmen then too. They really can't be blamed for it. But they remember.

"I was here in 1976! I saw what happened! And it's not going to happen again!"

After a lackluster practice last week, senior quarterback Mark Malone's impromptu team meeting echoed through the halls outside the locker room.

The Sun Devils are four lettermen and freshmen, walk-ons and phenoms, redshirts and transfers, lovers and fighters. Maybe it's just optimism, but they appear to be coming together as a team. That ASU has the talent is true; but the low up in Las Vegas, keeping in touch only with family and his lawyer, Robert Hing.

But even though he's linked to the Valley by a mere telephone line, Rutledge is also on the "no comment" bandwagon.

"All I can say is that it's a very peculiar situation, something that just happened," said Rutledge about the events leading to his father's action. "Right now, I can't even say very much of anything. Things got to happen..."

The "fallout" between the two apparently centered around the subpar job Rutledge did as ASU's punter last season. After averaging a meager 34.6 yards per kick on 34 punts through the first part of the year, Kush said Rutledge would never punt for him again.

This, on top of Rutledge's alleged missed practices, really added to Kush's ire.

According to The Associated Press story Tuesday, Kush said Rutledge "had to be reprimanded on numerous occasions."

Yet, it's ironic to note that Rutledge handled the punting during ASU's appearance in the Garden State Bowl, well after the Kush edict. Even Rutledge was puzzled.

"I really don't know why I did (the punting)," said Rutledge. "It just happened that no one else was doing the punting so I did it."

But it was a few months later when Rutledge's father first made contact with Tony Knap, head football coach at UNLV, about Kevin's transferring there.

Kevin Rutledge

"I told Mr. Rutledge that we had no financial aid available, and that it was usually best for a player to stay at the school where he started. He said 'There's no way that can happen'," Knap said.

"Evidently, Kevin got permission from ASU to let him talk to us, and he decided to register at UNLV," said Knap, who said Rutledge is getting no financial aid from the Rebel program.

Two weeks ago, Rutledge found the job at the Holiday Casino to pay his expenses. He works mornings, but has his afternoons open to start working out with the Rebels. Next week, Rutledge plans to start scrimmaging in full pads with the team, although he is a redshirt and can't play until next season.

"I looked into it (the Rebel program) before I left ASU, and it looked like a good situation to get into," said Rutledge, who still has two years of college eligibility left.

But the situation created by the complaint, which is to be answered by the Board of Regents on Saturday, has literally set the Valley on fire. Thursday morning, the North 20th Street insurance office run by Rutledge's father was hit by an arsonist, and that caused $50,000 damage, although authorities so far have ruled out any connection between the complaint and the fire.

"I'm not trying to stir things up or anything with this complaint," Rutledge said. "Things are just happening..."

Player's return can give happy end to Devil fable

By Jim Elzeger

ASU receiver coach Richard Mann knows about the bunnies and the wolves, and he knows the bunnies aren't as tough as Jimmy Carter makes them out to be.

That's one reason tight end Marshall Edwards is back in an ASU football uniform. To handle the wolves.

Mann put a continuing SOS out to get Edwards back on the team, and finally got an answer last week.

Edwards, who missed Tontozona after failing to rehabilitate his knee injured in the UA game last season, has been practicing for a week and might save some mean bunnies from getting chewed up.

"I don't want to throw anyone to the wolves," Mann said, "and that's just about what I would be doing. There just isn't enough experience there (tight end) right now. A guy like (John) Meyer has never played the position."

"I've been talking to Marshall all summer," Mann said. "We have been in constant contact with him, and he comes into my office all the time during the summer. The story that he was kicked out of camp or was not on the team was wrong. There has never been any problem with Marshall. It's just been a matter of whenever he would be able to play he would be given a shot at tight end."

The story Mann referred to was carried in The Arizona Republic Aug. 17, when it was reported that Edwards was ordered to leave the team and that his career apparently was over.

"It's true, he wasn't at camp," Mann said, "but I knew about the situation and he was working on getting his knee back in shape. He just couldn't have went through the camp at that time. No one ordered him out of camp or thought he was off the team or anything like that."

Edwards, who is working out in full pads now after just running the first couple days back in practice, was considering not playing this year.

"I was just screwing off this summer," he said. "I was thinking of just taking the year off or maybe coming back in the middle of the season. My head just wasn't in the right place, so I just Pac-10 is full of talented individuals. The Devils have the size and strength, but will face bigger teams this year. They need enthusiasm and teamwork; maybe they'll find it against Cal tomorrow, or find it's been there all along.

Coach Frank Kush has a reputation for understatement. Compliments come tough and criticism flows freely. Other than his perennial worries, producing team spirit and playing underexperienced people, he's been smiling this preseason. And when he smiles, you think of Mona Lisa—what's up the sleeve there, coach?

It's a combination of youth and experience that will jell for seven wins in the big race, the PAC, and 10 or 11 overall.

Youth will carry the offense, with leadership from upperclassmen, and offense will carry ASU, as it has in the past. Malone, a superb runner and underrated passer, might lead the world in total yards. "Turtle" Lane and Ron Washington, John Mistler and a multitude of soph and fresh runners will continue ASU's explosive offensive tradition.

But it's become a new tradition that defense beats the big ones—the Nebraskas, the USCs. Seven seniors will have to come through against the Florida States, Washingtons and UCLA's to pull off this prediction. They have shown they're capable.

In fact, Cal traditionally is tough in their first game.

This ASU team has the potential, but it's too early for the band to start practicing. "California, here I come..."

didn't do what I had to to get the knee back in shape."

Mann said, "The reasons I didn't know Marshall wasn't rehabilitating his knee properly was because I thought that a player that's been around as long as he has (four years) and has the experience and dedication would do that on his own. There is no way we should have to force a kid like Marshall to work to get into shape. With his potential and ability, we expect him to be a leader, not lead him."

Edwards has a history of injuries that could make even Marcus Welby shy away. He has hurt his back several times, once in an automobile accident and once while playing basketball in high school. He played with pain all season in 1977 after being injured in a game against Oregon State, and then was hurt after former ASU defensive end Al Harris bent him back in a spring scrimmage in 1978.

But after that injury in a long list that would continue into 1979, the ASU senior bounced back with amazing resilience, saying "It made me mentally tougher and I wanted to keep going."

After the injury in the UA game things changed, and Edwards started not doing what he has had to do for what seems like a millenium — come back after an injury.

"I was thinking about redshirting," he said. "But then I got to thinking about not doing what I like to do, playing football. It wasn't personal problems or anything, I just screwed it up."

Head coach Frank Kush said he felt Edwards "didn't really like the game that much," ac-ording to the article in The Republic, and that he "didn't always play that well."

"I don't really believe Kush feels that way," Edwards said. "I don't really think anyone could believe that a player like myself, who has come back from so many injuries, really doesn't want to play football. As much as I play with injuries, there's no way you can say I don't like it."

But Kush did say that Edwards has the potential to play professional football, and that he could be an excellent tight end.

"If coach [Kush] feels that way, and with what he knows, then I guess you could say that. I think I'm pro material. People that know football are saying it," Edwards said.

The Canyon Del Oro High School graduate caught 21 passes in 1978 last season for 289 yards, second highest on the team, while suffering chronic back problems.

At this point, Edwards said he feels he is not 100 percent, but should be back to full strength soon.

"The injury is completely rehabilitated," he said, "but I still have a flexibility problem. The knee is strong, it's just it doesn't bend like it used to."

With Edwards' blocking ability, he should help the rushing game out, which is what Kush says must happen if ASU is to run effectively.

"We need a tight end to create a running game," Kush said at Tontozona. "Without it you just don't have one."

It's for this reason that a hunt for a tight end was the primary objective at camp.

But finally Edwards got the knee back to where he could play, and after a call from Mann, agreed to practice.

"Mann told me I wouldn't be contributing to the team if I didn't play at all," Edwards said. "He asked me to do what I could because they were having problems at tight end. He said I couldn't help the team by not playing."

"With Marshall's experience and knowledge, I knew he would be ahead already," Mann said. "He is running well and I think his knee is strong enough. He has a clean bill of health to play, and we need someone like him on the team. He helps the other players out and sometimes does more for the players than a coach can do. It rubs off, a player like him."

Mann said Edwards isn't in top shape right now, but is giving 110 percent in practice.

"He is working out good right now," he said. "He's tougher mentally than before and looks like he might start, but he's going to have to win the job."

Mann said Bell and Wetzel are the leading candidates to move into the spot, but probably would be backups for Saturday's game.
