Lifesavers

In a cooperative demonstration and training exercise Tuesday afternoon between Phoenix Baptist Hospital's "Survival Flight" and the Tempe Fire Department, Tempe firefighter Robin Kwaitkowski was airlifted from the MU East Lawn. Kwaitkowski simulated neck and back injuries. "Survival Flight," which averages about two flights per day, is a community service offered by Phoenix Baptist Hospital. Joining Phoenix Baptist in the air ambulance service are John C. Lincoln's Air Evac and the Department of Public Safety's helicopter ambulance.

Legislator wants $310.3 million request cut

University budgets termed 'fat'

By Dan Feltner

The $310.3 million 1980-81 budget request for the state's three universities "has a lot of fat in it" that needs to be trimmed, a member of the House Appropriations Committee said Tuesday.

"I haven't studied it specifically, but from what I've heard, it needs some cutting," said Rep. Jim Cooper, R-Mesa. "There are areas we are going to have to look very closely at."

The Arizona Board of Regents approved the combined budget Saturday for the next school year.

And to meet it, the regents must ask the Legislature for more than $222.6 million, an increase of more than $20 million over current appropriations.

ASU's operating budget for 1980-81 was set at $100.5 million, almost $10 million more than this year's budget. Of that total, $76.3 million will be requested from the Legislature.

Cooper, a member of the Appropriations Committee for nine years, said it is "no secret" that he has fought continually for less spending by the state's universities.

"I think there are certain areas in instruction where we should be getting more for our dollars," he said. "For instance, professors ought to spend more time in the classroom. Many of them are in there for only nine hours a week."

Cooper added that too much is being spent on research.

"Research is important, sure, but I think there's areas where it's being done that aren't necessary," he said.

The Legislature will begin reviewing the budget requests in January after the governor has a chance to make his own recommendations on the proposal.

Sen. John Pritzlaff Jr., R-Phoenix, appropriations committee chairman, said he is unsure how much of the budget will be approved by the Legislature.

"I make no predictions," he said. "I have no way of knowing what the situation is going to be like three or four months down the road."

Alan Carroll, ASU's director of institutional budgets, said there are "too many variables" involved to make an accurate forecast of how the Legislature will react.

"Prior to Proposition 101 and the spending limitations it imposed, I think we would have had a very good chance of getting what we wanted," he said. "Now, I'm just not sure."

Proposition 101 limits the Legislature to spending no more than 7 percent of the state's personal income.

Pritzlaff said most legislators feel the regents always ask for more money than they realistically believe will be appropriated.

But Carroll said the University is "justified for everything it's asking the Legislature for."

There were a number of areas of funding that ASU administrators had wanted in the budget request, but were not approved by the regents, according to Carroll.

"We had requested a lot more," he said. "But it really wasn't unexpected."

Carroll said he thinks the regents could have approved more funding for off-campus educational facilities and new equipment purchases.

CARTER TO CONTINUE ECONOMIC POLICIES

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Tuesday he will pursue tight money policies as a weapon against inflation, even if it hurts him politically. "There is no doubt in my mind," Carter said on a nationally broadcast news conference, "... the No. 1 threat to our national economy is inflation." Carter also predicted the SALT II treaty will be approved this year by the Senate.

JOAN BAEZ TOURS REFUGEE CAMPS

HONG KONG — American folk singer Joan Baez embarked Tuesday on a tour through Indochinese refugee camps to study firsthand what she called the "massive form of holocaust going on" in Southeast Asia. She said she doesn't care what actress Jane Fonda thinks about her. "At home in the United States, people don't really want to pay much attention" to the refugee situation, Baez said at a news conference after arriving here from San Francisco.

ACCUSED MESA TEEN WILL BE HELD

MESA — The court-appointed attorney of a Mesa teen-ager accused of shooting a police officer Oct. 1 said he will not seek to have his client set free before his Dec. 11 hearing. Jordan Green said Tuesday he talked with Raymond Arviso late Friday and decided for undisclosed reasons not to appeal the court's decision to hold Arviso, 16, in the Maricopa County juvenile detention center.

REPRESENTATIVES WAGER ON WORLD SERIES

WASHINGTON — Rep. Doug Walgren, D-Pa., told Rep. Barbara Mikulski, D-Md., Tuesday to "put up or shut up" over who'll win the World Series. Mikulski, whose congressional district is Baltimore, has been boasting among her colleagues that the Orioles will defeat the Pittsburgh Pirates in four straight games. Walgren said he will wager one set of stainless steel knives forged in his district against a bucket of Baltimore crabs that Pittsburgh will win the series.

LONDON — Britain on Tuesday gave the guerrillas at the Zimbabwe Rhodesia peace talks 48 hours to change their minds and accept a compromise constitution for independence.

COMPOSER-PRODUCER MAKES APPEARANCE ON RAPE CHARGE

LOS ANGELES — Composer and record producer Jack Nitzsche made a brief, silent court appearance Tuesday and was ordered to return Oct. 22 for a hearing on charges that he raped actress Carrie Snodgrass with the barrel of a gun. The Nitzsche case is expected to test a new California "rape by instrumentality" law which carries a five-year prison sentence. The musician is one of only three people to face charges in Los Angeles County under the statute.

TUCSON RESIDENTS UPSET OVER SEMINUDE DANCING

TUCSON — Northwest side residents are upset about near-nude dancing featured at a restaurant and have asked Pima County officials how to keep the upper-middle class area from attracting more such businesses. Sebastian's, a restaurant that two weeks ago began featuring the "exotic dancing" by men and women, is in the fastest growing part of the metropolitan area.

Energy savings predicted in 3-day building closure

By Ellen Haggerty

Three additional staff holidays will be energy-saving days if a University Energy Conservation Committee idea to close campus buildings on December 26, 27 and 28 is implemented, the committee chairman said.

Although the exact savings is not known, "it will be a substantial amount or we would not be considering it," said Dr. Elmer Gooding.

By shutting off all electricity in almost all buildings for the three days, the campus will use little energy for 11 days, because the other eight days already are scheduled holidays, said Gooding, also an assistant provost.

Only a few buildings, including the Life Sciences Building, where the desert animals are kept, will use any electricity, he added.

Gooding said he assumes those weekdays will be considered vacation days for the staff.

The conservation committee, whose job is to make recommendations to the office of business affairs, has not made a formal proposal, he added.

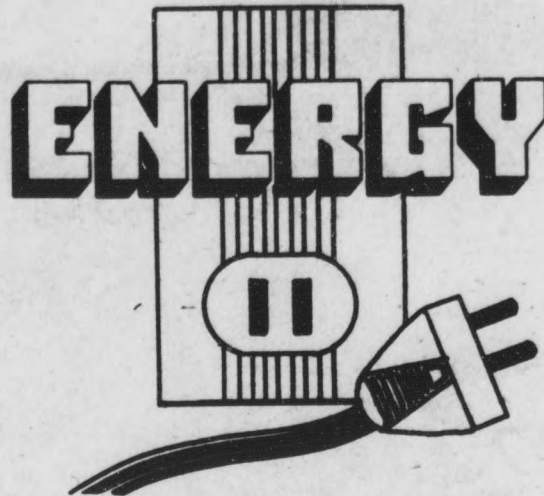

Committee member Diana Regner, assistant director of Career Services, said "the feeling is very positive" for the proposal within the committee and various staff members.

Another idea being considered by the committee is a four-day week during the summer school sessions.

The college deans now are looking into the academic effects of a four-day, 10-hour-a-day workweek, Gooding said.

Regner added that the proposal includes the use of fewer building during this time.

Among ideas not discussed by the committee is Regner's suggestion to stagger staff schedules so cars will not waste gasoline idling in traffic.

Dr. Stanley Mumma, associate professor of architecture, has devised some "quick-fix solutions" that he said do not cost much and are easy to implement.

These include removing unnecessary light bulbs, putting up energy-conservation signs and mechanical timers that would turn off lights or air conditioning at a certain time.

Mumma also suggests an incentive program in which the committee would put together a team to detail the energy use of each college and appropriate sufficient funds to each dean. Money left over from energy savings could be used for academic improvements, he said.

Gooding said the six members of the committee will meet Thursday with two Arizona Public Service Co. energy consultants to discuss the "mechanics" of conserving energy.

Elevator fails in Stauffer; students often get 'shafted'

An ASU journalism student was trapped in an elevator Tuesday at Stauffer Hall in what appears to be a regular occurrence.

"It happens quite often really," said Officer Tom Garvey of the University Police. "The elevators get stuck like that and we have to call the elevator company and have them come out and open it."

Garvey added it sometimes takes a Phoenix elevator maintenance crew up to 40 minutes to get to ASU. Meanwhile, people stay trapped in the elevator.

This time, however, Officer Raul Morales arrived at the scene and kicked at the elevator door until it opened.

The unidentified student was released in about 10 minutes.

Even when the facts are available, most people seem to prefer the legend and refuse to believe the truth when it in any way dislodges the myth.

—John Madison Brown

Why not wait to choose our fate?

After a first-hand look at Three Mile Island, a Massachusetts congressman believes this country should pause a minute before plunging headlong into increasing reliance on nuclear energy, and he's asking for your help.

Democratic Rep. Edward J. Markey is sponsoring an amendment that would call for a six-month halt on the granting of construction permits for nuclear reactors.

Markey was named to the House's special task force to study the Three Mile Island accident. After visiting the site and talking with the plant's control room operators and Nuclear Regulatory Commission officials, he said he learned "catastrophic nuclear accidents are not as remote a probability as industry and government have led us to believe."

"The significance of the accident last spring is not how many people were, or were not, injured by radiation, although that is certainly important," he said. "Nor is it whether the accident was caused by human blunder, design defect, corporate incompetence, regulatory failure or a combination of all four."

"The significance of Three Mile Island, in my opinion, is that the country had a close call with a nuclear accident that could have killed thousands, caused the evacuation of major cities — Philadelphia, New York, Washington — and contaminated half the state of Pennsylvania."

Markey said "strange and unanticipated events" happened at Three Mile Island. He's right. At the height of the crisis, the NRC chairman was quoted as saying, "We are operating almost totally in the blind." Another high-ranking NRC official said, just after the accident, "We are seeing failure modes we never thought possible."

The full impact of the Three Mile Island incident might never be understood completely. In any case, it's going to take months just to figure out exactly what went wrong and why.

That's why Markey believes we should take a closer look at the safety of nuclear power plants before we build any more.

"I am calling for a nuclear respite, a breathing spell, not a shutdown," he said. "My amendment is neutral and objective. It says, in effect, wait until the facts are in — the safety issues from Three Mile Island sorted out — and then, but only then, continue nuclear construction if it still makes sense to do so."

"If my amendment passes, it is a signal straight to the heart of millions of concerned Americans the the U.S. Congress will not tolerate unsafe nuclear power or 'business as usual.' It is a signal that we are not going to be forced to experience a reactor core meltdown before we crack down on the industry and the NRC."

Consumer advocate Ralph Nader called Markey's amendment, which is scheduled for a House vote sometime in the last two weeks of this month, the most important vote in Congress this year on nuclear power.

If passed, the amendment would be attached to House Resolution 5297, the 1980 Nuclear Regulatory Commission Authorization Bill.

The House Interior Committee voted 23-7 in favor of the amendment in May, and it has won the support of the United Auto Workers, the League of Women Voters and the Union of Concerned Scientists.

But unless enough people — in Arizona as well as nationwide — take the time to call or write their representatives, the measure faces a certain uphill struggle. The nuclear industry already has launched a fierce counterattack and has flooded congressional offices with letters from employees of nuclear-related companies.

Markey's proposal isn't reactionary — it's just good common sense. Is it really going to send this nation back to the Dark Ages to just reexamine nuclear safety before it's too late to do so?

Unless you're the type of person who believes fire extinguishers shouldn't be inspected until after the building has burned down, you should speak up and let Arizona's congressmen — John Rhodes, Morris Udall, Bob Stump and Eldon Rudd — know you support the Markey amendment.

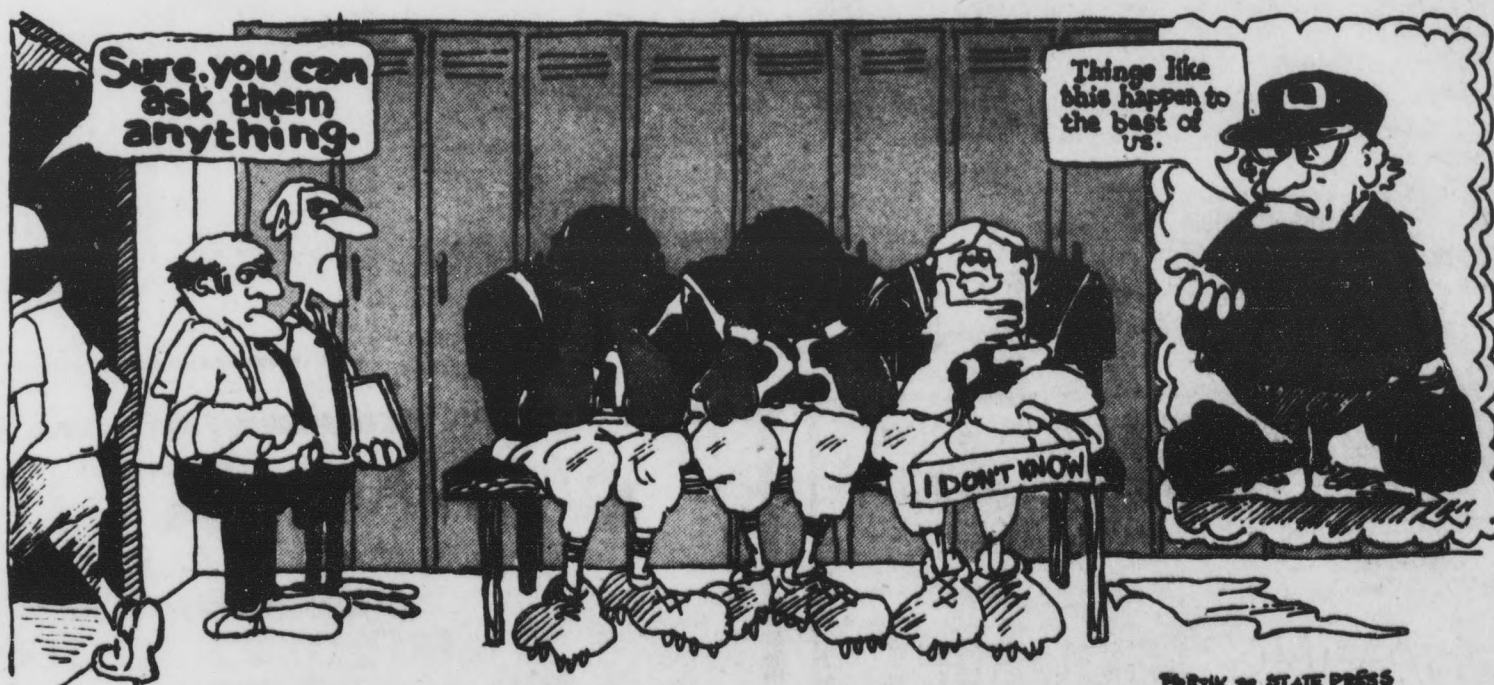

Let's act now before the next "Three Mile Island" jolts us out of the complacency the nuclear industry has tried to instill.

The State Press welcomes letters to the editor on any topic. To ensure publication, however, letters must conform to a few guidelines.

Type them, double spaced, with margins set on 60 characters. Include your full name, class standing and major. Anonymous letters will be discarded. However, if it is imperative that your name be withheld, state why.

All letters are subject to editing for style, grammar and spelling, but don't be sloppy. Lengthy letters may be shortened to meet space limitations, so be brief.

FORTIN BY STATE PRESS

Letter to the Editor

Give us beer around here

Editor:

We wish to reply to the article published in the Sept. 25 State Press concerning the ASA alcohol plan. The article consisted primarily of statements made by Mr. Don Reno, owner of Dooley's. We feel that Mr. Reno is mistaken on a few points.

First, we seriously doubt that allowing alcohol on campus would adversely affect Dooley's business. It is, after all, a rare opportunity to go into Dooley's and not have to wait for a drink.

Mr. Reno added this would affect the lifestyle of the ASU student. Alcohol already is available many places around campus. Why shouldn't it be available on campus itself? We can't think of any drinking establishment that probably has had more of an effect on the lifestyle of the ASU student than Dooley's.

In addition, allowing alcohol at athletic events would probably lessen problems due to the monitored control, as Miss Eastridge points out. No one is enforcing any rules as it now stands.

Previous to transferring to ASU, we both attended large Midwestern universities with major sports programs. Both schools sold beer at these events, and we can assure you that the majority of students still went to the bars afterwards. This is an error in Mr. Reno's thinking.

If Mr. Reno is so worried about his business, maybe he should lower his prices to attract potential customers (we don't think ASU would be charging $3 a pitcher). We support the ASA plan, and we don't feel that the fate of 38,000 students should be affected by one nightclub owner.

After all, Dooley's presently holds a near monopoly on the alcohol business around ASU.

Do you people really think every German is a Nazi?

Editor:

The article in your newspaper based on an interview I gave your reporter on Sept. 27 was of great interest to me. A compliment is in order: Sherry Wheatly did her best as a young journalist, to handle a complex problem.

However, that doesn't mean that she understood everything I was trying to get across.

The main point I attempted to make was that the young generations in our two countries (the United States and West Germany) must learn to work together and understand each other to achieve and maintain a policy of peace in a spirit of solidarity. This is an important historical lesson which should be drawn from our experience in the 20th century.

The headline "NAZIS," on the other hand, appears to me to be completely out of line. What was the editor of the newspaper, or the person responsible for this heading, thinking about when he or she used this expression?

Was the purpose in using this "attention grabber" just to draw more readers? Or was the person who thought up this headline of the opinion that German professors can be considered only in such categories? Did he even mean to imply that the person interviewed was still a "Nazi"?

Allow me to make a short reply. The manner in which this headline was fabricated is a good example of poor journalistic style: prejudices are reinforced, and knowledge is left by the wayside when sensationalism replaces objective information.

These tactics are used in spite of the obvious contradictions between the content of the article and the headline. In my opinion you have done a great disservice to our common purposes, namely that of peace and real understanding between the nations and peoples of the world.

30 students sought

Legislature to recruit interns

The Arizona State Legislature is looking for 30 student interns from Arizona's three universities and Grand Canyon College to assist research staffs in the 1980 legislative session.

"The students will be asked to perform a wide range of duties," said Dr. Mathew Betz, ASU's assistant provost. "But primarily they will be involved in research and that will mean a lot of reading and writing."

The interns will receive college credit while getting paid for their work, he said.

"Undergraduate students will get 12 hours of credit and graduate students will receive nine," Betz said. "In addition, they will receive a $1,600 stipend and full tuition and fees."

He said ASU students have been successful in past programs sponsored by the Legislature.

"Last year more than 20 of the interns were from ASU," Betz said. "There were more than 30 openings though."

"We usually account for about half of the accepted interns."

In order to qualify for the internships, a student must be a candidate for a bachelor's or master's degree and attain senior status by the end of the fall semester.

"Filling out the application is just the beginning," Betz said. "Everybody nominated by campus coordinators must go to the Capitol for interviews. It's open competition down there."

He said students from any academic discipline are eligible, although many past interns have been from the departments of political science, public affairs and business.

"Before anybody applies, I would recommend they go to a meeting on Tuesday," Betz said. "The application requires several letters of reference and a personal letter."

"There will be past interns at the meeting to answer questions and explain experiences. It's a good idea to find out what this is all about first."

The meeting is scheduled for 2:30 p.m. Tuesday in the MU Cochise Room.

Applications are available in the provost's office, the Administration Building, room 207. For information call 965-4995.

Prof in intensive care after vehicle accident

An ASU assistant professor of English was in intensive care Tuesday after an automobile accident Friday.

Dennis Moran, 6795 E. Bluebird Lane, Scottsdale, was recovering in Good Samaritan Hospital's intensive-care unit from injuries received in the accident and the amputation of his left foot.

A spokesman in the English department said he heard Moran was injured on 48th Street between Indian School and Camelback in Phoenix, but could not confirm it.

The city of Phoenix's traffic bureau record department said it had no information to give because their logs would not be complete until today.

Moran, 47, received an A.B. from the University of Notre Dame; a B.A. and M.A. from Oxford University where he was a Rhodes Scholar, and a Ph.D. from Stanford University. Moran joined the ASU faculty in 1964.

Drive bleeds past 850-donor goal

Arizona Blood Services' ASU blood drive produced a record 888 donors, exceeding its goal of 850, the drive's coordinator said.

Sandy Seitel said the donor total was bolstered by the donations of 220 persons Friday in locations in the MU and near campus dorms.

The final amount was more than twice that donated by the University community in October 1978, she added.

Traveling trophies will be presented soon to the campus fraternity and sorority with the highest number of donations, Seitel said.

The next drive is scheduled for Feb. 25-29, 1980.

Piggy goes piggy-back at ASU farm.

The calves are taken early from their mothers.

Students find 'barn' full of knowledge

By Clare Gramer

Every day on the farm the chores have to be done.

At the ASU Agricultural Field Laboratory, on the corner of Price and Elliot in Mesa, students do everything from milking cows to breeding pigs to studying plants.

The farm is part of the agriculture department's education and research program.

Because of a July request by the Arizona Board of Regents to phase out all production areas of the farm, the department is working on a plan to move the lab to new University property at Price and University. Now, milk from the cows is sold to a local dairy co-op and animals no longer needed for research are auctioned at local sale yards.

Dr. R. Chalquest, director of the division of agriculture, said it plans to reduce the number of animals and plants keeping only enough needed to continue lab classes and research.

At the farm students work with cows, pigs and sheep to learn animal husbandry. They also study animal nutrition and breeding and conduct research in these areas. Other students grow and research plants and raise grains and alfalfa as food for the animals.

Chalquest said the public has a misconception as to why the students work on the farm. He said a lot of people think the students are out there just to learn how to be farmers and this is not so.

"We are dealing mostly with students interested in plants and animals who weren't raised on a farm. We try to let them become more experienced in this type of work. Many will go to work in some area of agriculture, but they aren't aiming for a job on a farm."

Mark Pater, a junior range conservation major, has worked on the farm for two years.

"I like working with the animals," he said. "Last semester I worked with breeding pigs and it was good experience."

Pater said he does not plan to work on a farm after he graduates, but feels the practical work is valuable to his education.

Farm Superintendent Joe Byrd has worked for the farm since he graduated from the ASU agriculture department in 1951. He coordinates all farm activities and teaches a class in farm mechanization.

"There's no substitute for practical learning," Byrd said. "Every student I've ever had seems to think it's (working and studying on the farm) exactly what they're looking for. They really get a lot out of it."

He said one of the favorite classes taught at the lab is Introductory Animal Science. Each student in the class gets an animal to study and work with at the beginning of the semester. They even get to name the animals and at the end of the semester the animals are judged in a 'county-fair' type show.

Devils play hide-and-seek with tight end Edwards

By Jim Elsleger

If Marshall Edwards wants to play football for ASU, he's going to have to climb out of his Serpico outfit and get into gear.

"Your guess is as good as mine," Sun Devil football coach Frank Kush said when asked about Edwards' return. "I don't know what he's doing. If he wants to play football for us, he's going to have to get in and let the doctors look at his knee. We can't do a thing until he does something himself."

Edwards was supposed to let the team physician, Dr. Joseph Reno, look at his knee on Monday to see if he could be cleared to practice.

Edwards himself said on Friday he would be at practice Monday night, and that his knee felt fine. He didn't show up for practice and Dr. Reno said he hadn't heard from him at all.

"As far as we're concerned, he's on the team," Kush said, "but he won't play and we can't even let him practice until he sees the doctor. I can't tell you a thing about what he's doing right now."

Edwards was not available for comment, and neither the football office nor any of the players know where he is. He hasn't been to practice or to see the doctor for over three weeks, and hasn't played football since the first game of the season against California.

Even if Edwards did show up, there's always the chance the knee isn't what he says it is. Even if his knee is what he says it is, there's always the chance he can't get into shape before the season ends. And, even if he did get into shape, it's doubtful whether he can regain the touch in competition to make any significant contribution.

"He's been out so long it's going to be really tough for him to come back," Kush said. "When a player misses that much time, it's doubtful whether he can get back into it."

Edwards also missed Camp Tontozona this year.

A few of the football players showed surprise before Saturday night's practice when they learned that Edwards was still on the team, but refused comment.

Kush said Ron Wetzel, Edwards' heir apparent, has showed signs of improving, but adds that the freshman has been having his problems.

"When there's continued pressure from game to game, like he's been playing under, there's a tendency to lose track of the fundamentals, which is what he's been doing at times," Kush said. "He's been doing well in practice on the last few days, but in competition he still has a way to go. There's no pressure in a practice."

Kush's offense is in a recuperating pattern with the week off, but still hasn't developed the consistency that he is looking for.

"We needed the week off, there's no doubt about that," he said. "It will help us to a degree, like letting Kani's (Kauahi) injury (shoulder) heal up."

"But now (Tony) Loia (another offensive lineman) is hurt with an ankle injury."

Kush also said that Mike Lee has lost his starting spot in the defensive backfield, and that he will have to win it back if he's going to play.

"We can't afford to use him," Kush said. "He has been making too many mental errors and just hasn't been getting the job done, so we're going with the younger players who can get it done."

With an offensive line vulnerable to injury and a tight-end group that finds crowds bothering it, the signal might go out to have the good doctor make a house call on Edwards, if he can find him.

Devils prepare for Washington

By Perry Sams

With a scoring average of 37.3 points a game, a football team has to kick something fierce for an encore. Washington did. The Huskies scored 41 versus Oregon State.

An ASU defense faulted for giving up 17 and 31 points in two losses to Cal and Florida State needed to earn some respect. Two straight shutouts helped. But weak opponents Toledo and Oregon State — who Washington played last week — were ASU's scoreless victims.

Questions remain. Washington beat Oregon State, Fresno State, Utah and Wyoming easily but just got by Oregon, 21-17. Just how good is Washington?

ASU coach Frank Kush will find out soon enough, as his team faces the Huskies this weekend. Naturally, he won't downplay the game.

"Washington is probably one of the super football teams in the country, offensively and defensively. The bulk of their kids are back. I think 18 of their 22 starters are seniors," he said.

First, ASU has to hope the defensive backfield doesn't get porous. Conversely, or on the other foot, the defensive line has to get Porras.

Tom Porras, the Husky quarterback, that is. His offensive line has protected him well so far.

After four games, he's thrown 78 passes in a row without an interception — with a 60.6 completion average.

Kush said he feels ASU's defense is improving, though. "I think our defense has done a good job," he said. "We're not a great defensive team, because of our inexperienced secondary, but we're good."

Starters in the secondary should be junior Ralph Dixon and freshman Ron Brown at cornerbacks and freshman Mike Richardson and senior Don Hendricks at safeties, he said.

Only Dixon remains from the four who started against Cal — and none of them started against Washington in Seattle last Oct. 28. Maybe it's for the best. ASU was shocked, 41-7, after an open date last season.

But last season, ASU had upset USC two weeks before traveling to Washington — and that win seemed almost to justify the season, and probably led to an invitation to the Garden State Bowl.

Kush won't put that "USC" emphasis on this game, though Washington could be the toughest game remaining on the Devils' schedule.

"We have to play — excuse the old adage — one at a time. With the problems we have, injuries and inconsistencies, we have to be satisfied with simply making progress from game to game."

Though a three-wide-receiver offense worked well against Oregon State, Kush said probably it wouldn't against Washington.

"They will be aware of it. They're really sound all over. We can't say, if we're at a certain hashmark, you can use this play to get this yardage," he said.

"You can't use that trickery and deceit too often, or it gets back to you. You finally have to resort to good tackling and blocking."

"And that's what Washington is good at."

Spikers travel to Mesa

ASU women's volleyball team travels to Mesa Community College tonight to face the Thunderbirds at 7 and will host San Diego State and Cal State-Dominguez Hills over the weekend.

The Sun Devils beat Mesa in three straight games earlier this season, but will face a tough San Diego State team, ASU coach Dale Flickinger said.

The Aztecs were ranked fourth nationally in the preseason polls and will come here with a 10-4 record. They are led by All-Americans Wendy Wheat and Dana Wells.

The Western Collegiate Athletic Association game with San Diego State will be at 7:30 Friday night in the PE Building East. The Cal State-Dominguez Hills game is slated for 2 p.m. Saturday.

ASU's record stands at 7-4 overall and 1-3 in WCAA competition.

Devils' loss can be majors gain

By Bob Petrie

While ASU football coach Frank Kush juggles his availables at the Devils' tight-end position, little does he realize that the guy he probably wanted to use all along is right in his backyard.

Namely Tempe Stadium.

And Al Chambers, who signed an ASU football letter-of-intent last March to play tight end for the Sun Devils, would like to give Kush a call.

Only it wouldn't be of the business variety. Because in June, Chambers instead decided to pursue a baseball career. And after the Seattle Mariners made him their first round pick in the free-agent draft, they signed the 18 year old from Harrisburg, Pa., to a reported $100,000 contract.

Yet, Chambers, also a standout tight end at Harrisburg High who caught 20 passes his senior year, wonders what it would be like playing football at ASU.

"Before I even came down for a visit (in February), I knew they had a tight-end problem," said Chambers, who is playing for Seattle's Arizona Instructional league entry this fall. "I knew they might be starting a freshman, and now I know that if I would have come to ASU, it would have been me in there (playing).

"I felt there were a lot of opportunities for me at ASU. There's a very good football program there. I feel as though they throw quite a bit to their tight ends, and it would have been interesting to see what I could have done for them, to catch a few passes for them."

In addition to the Devil football program, Chambers found ASU's business administration department and, of course, the Arizona sunshine, pleasing to his palate.

"I did feel like getting away from the winter weather," he said. "When I made my first visit it was about 16 degrees where I was from and it was 65 or 70 down here. It changed my mind about a lot of things."

But, suddenly, Chambers changed his mind about ASU.

"It depended a lot over what round I would be chosen in the free agent draft," said Chambers, who hit .484 for his prep baseball team his senior year. "And they (the Mariners) kind of gave me more than I asked for, so I couldn't turn it down."

"Also, I talked to Frank Kush and told him if I couldn't play football and baseball, I might sign with a pro (baseball) team. When I visited the campus, I saw an ASU baseball game, and it seemed like a very good program, and the baseball competition in the Pac-10 was something to look forward to."

Instead, Chambers signed with the Mariners and hit .276 for their Bellingham, Wash., Class A team in 1978. He wasn't satisfied.

"I thought I had an average year. I know the pitchers were throwing me away, and I kind of figured the pitching in rookie ball would be a lot different than high school," Chambers said. "There were a lot of pitches I had to get accustomed to."

There was also the problem of homesickness.

"It was the first time away from home, and there were a lot of things to get accustomed to," Chambers said. "Once I got accustomed to being away, it wasn't much of a problem anymore."

As judged by his fall batting

Real Estate

FREE ROOM & BOARD
If I had a brother, sister or relative attending ASU, I'd tell them how to obtain 'FREE ROOM & BOARD.' In order to do that they would simply need to purchase a home in Tempe rather than rent. There are many ways to purchase including co-signers and FHA 245's. Rent money is spent money. Why not have your roommates rent from you? And, when it comes time to graduate and sell, the appreciation may pay for graduate or professional school. Call me for more details or low cash to loan homes around ASU.

WE GUARANTEE that if we can't sell your house, we will buy it. THAT'S A FACT!!

average, which is "somewhere between .425 and .450."

"Yeah, they're giving me a lot of opportunities here, a chance to play every day," said Chambers, sporting a knit Mariners jersey with No. 36 on his back. "Now I'm starting to take advantage of the pitchers."

He also wants to take advantage of a slow, yet steady progression to the majors.

"I don't want to get there too soon. I want to have everything down pat, and once I'm aware of that, it'll be time for me to go to the major leagues," Chambers said.

"I felt that if I went into pro baseball, I wanted to get into the system early, at a young age, and be familiar with the things I should know by the time I am 21. I made a decision to play baseball, and this way I can concentrate on it."

Which doesn't mean Chambers has snubbed college altogether.

"I plan to go to a school over on the East Coast next fall. Being away from my family for five or six months a year, I want to be where I can come home and be with them."

"Also, I know baseball won't be there forever, and I'll need something to fall back on for a good job after my baseball career is over."

But it appears that Chambers' football career is the one that's over.

"I miss football, but I guess I'm pretty much into baseball now," he said.

And the way Chambers is hitting, he shouldn't be "detrimental" to the Mariners' program for years.
