Crowded

U.S. hostages in Iran were the subject of many heated arguments on the mall Tuesday, as the Muslim Students Association found out when faced with many angry American students. The Iranians defended their point for a while and finally left.

Students clash on mall

Tempers flare in Iranian dispute

By Jacqueline Gallard

ASU Iranian students calling for the Shah's return to Iran were confronted at their booth on Cady Mall Tuesday by students arguing that the American hostages in Tehran should be released.

However, not all Iranians support the actions of the group holding embassy officials hostage. One Iranian student said that while he did not support the action, he could understand the reasons behind it.

Some 60 American officials have been held hostage for 11 days by Iranian students in the American Embassy in Tehran. Their student captors are demanding the return of the Shah who is ill with cancer in a New York Hospital.

"We had a country totally destroyed by the Shah. Many of the students holding the Americans hostage have had members of their family killed," said Hassan Nadai, an engineering student. "Seventy thousand people have been killed there in just one year. The Shah is a criminal."

"I don't say that holding the hostages is right, but how would Americans feel if the situation were the other way around and we were talking about Hitler," he added.

In response to President Carter's statement that all Iranians should report to immigration officials to determine the legality of their foreign visa status in the U.S., Nadai said he cannot agree with anything that the American government does, except to return the Shah.

Nadai added he was not afraid of being deported to Iran.

"I don't care, it really doesn't matter," he said. "We are here to work with the American people and to let them know what is really going on. A revolution affects everyone."

Another Iranian student, Mohammad Afghan, said although he would like to finish his studies here, he would be willing to return to Iran.

"It's not all that important, not at all," said Afghan. "We don't care. All we want to do is make the points clear to the Americans."

Afghan said the return of the Shah would help build a stronger relationship between the American and Iranian people.

One Iranian student, who preferred to remain anonymous, said she did not support the embassy takeover because it was not a rational means of negotiation.

"I am worried that they might kill the Americans, and I don't want that," she said. "This is not the way to deal with super powers."

She also said she did not care if she was deported because she would only "lose two years of her life and some studies."

An American student observing the discussion between the groups told Iranian students if they didn't like it here, they should "take their asses home."

Other American students however said they did not object to the Iranians dispensing literature at ASU and discussing the situation.

"They have a right to express their political beliefs," said Pat Donnelly, a business major. "Anyone who says these people should be deported, are totally ignorant of the subject."

Michael Cornelius, another business student said deportation would be a racist and short-sided act.

"Just because they are Iranian doesn't mean they hold the same ideas as those in Iran. Deporting them would only inflame the situation," he said.

"Iran has the right to call for the extradition of the Shah. I don't think we ever should have let him in but he is a puppet of our government," he added.

ASU International Student Adviser Suzanne Steadman said Iranian students who have come to her have said they are concerned about the safety of their families here in the states.

"We cannot allow anyone to be harassed no matter what nationality they are," she said. "I think we should keep cool heads because whatever violence we employ here might have grave effects on the hostages in Tehran."

Steadman said Iranian students had already come to her with questions concerning Carter's order that all Iranians report to immigration authorities.

"Immigration isn't real clear yet and we are waiting to find out more about the students, and how they should report," she said. "But as far as I know, as of the beginning of the semester, all of the students here were legal."

Students attending ASU on a foreign visa are required to maintain a full-time status.

Foreign students are also required to keep the International Student Office informed of any address changes and maintain valid passports. They cannot accept off-campus employment or transfer to another school without permission from the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

An alien address report must be filed each January.

IRANIAN STUDENTS TARGET OF CONTINUED DEMONSTRATIONS

WASHINGTON — The 50,000 Iranian students in the United States, told to report to immigration officials or face deportation, were the targets of more demonstrations Tuesday across the country. Iranian flags intended to be burned were selling like hotcakes for $13 each at a store across the street from the Betsy Ross house in Philadelphia. "We Reserve the Right to Refuse Service to Iranian Citizens," read a sign posted in front of the First Edition restaurant and disco in Oceanside, N.J.

CARTER HALTS IRANIAN EXPORTS IN 'TEST OF POWER'

WASHINGTON — President Carter ordered a halt to U.S. purchases of Iranian oil Monday in an intensifying test of will and power with Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini and his Moslem militants. "No one should underestimate" American resolve, Carter declared. Tehran radio later said Khomeini's Revolutionary Council already had decided to cut off exports to the United States before Carter's announcement.

STATE RESTS CASE IN PUROLATOR MURDER TRIAL

PRESCOTT — The state rested its murder case Tuesday against Michael and Patrick Poland after a Tucson gun dealer testified that Patrick purchased a Taser weapon. The Poland brothers are accused of first-degree murder in the slaying of armored-car guards Cecil Newkirk and Russell Dempsey of Phoenix in a $293,000 robbery on May 24, 1977.

RESIDENTS IN PATH OF TELlico DAM EVICTED

LOUDON, Tenn. — The Tellico Dam, which defeated challenges from the snail darter and the Cherokee Indians, overcame what may be its final obstacle Tuesday as federal marshals evicted the last two of 341 farmers whose land was taken for the 38,000-acre federal project. "It looks like this is about the end of it," mailman Beryl Moser said as three carloads of marshals escorted him out of the white frame home where he was born 46 years ago.

PAT NIXON HOSPITALIZED WITH PNEUMONIA

SAN CLEMENTE, Calif. — Former first lady Pat Nixon was hospitalized with pneumonia Tuesday, former President Richard Nixon's office announced. Mrs. Nixon was taken to the hospital about noon Tuesday, a spokeswoman said. Mrs. Nixon, 66, suffered a stroke in 1976 and was hospitalized for several weeks. The Nixons have sold their seaside estate here and are planning to move to New York City.

200,000 EVACUEES WAIT FOR CONTAINMENT OF DEADLY GAS

MISSISSAUGA, Ontario — Firemen controlled a blaze in the wreckage of a chemical-loaded train Monday, but police said continued threat of an explosion of deadly chlorine gas meant about 200,000 people who fled their homes here will have to stay away at least one more day. A derailed tanker car carrying 90 tons of poisonous chlorine lay perilously close to burning tankers of propane gas that exploded after the Canadian Pacific freight train derailed late Saturday in this western Toronto suburb and sent people fleeing.

MEXICO TO SPEND $88 MILLION ON METHANOL PLANT

MEXICO CITY — The government says it has allotted $88 million to build one of the world's largest methanol plants. The chemical used as a gasoline additive helps reduce auto pollution and stretch gas supplies. Jorge Diaz Serrano, director of the national oil monopoly Pemex, said Monday once the plant is complete at Coatzacoalcos on the Gulf of Mexico, it will produce about 700,000 gallons of methanol daily.

KUWAITI BIDS ON AGGIE BAND

COLLEGE STATION, Texas — The Aggie Band of Texas A&M so impressed a group of Arabs at a football game, one woman offered to buy it, lock stock and bugle. The offer to purchase the 300-member precision marching unit came when a group from oil-rich Kuwait attended the Texas A&M-Rice game as guests of the Gulf Oil Co.

Loan probe needed

ASASU lacks action, council leader charges

By Dan Feller

Associated Students should take some concrete action and stick up for the students who are being forced to pay back mistakenly awarded loans by the ASU Financial Aids Office, the president of the Public Programs College Council said Tuesday.

"I keep hearing rumblings about how ASASU is investigating the situation," said Ronald Gray, a graduate student in criminal justice. "But I don't think they're really doing anything concrete."

Gray is one of 55 students who are being forced to return more than $14,000 to the aids office. Last spring, financial aids officer Victor Louis erroneously gave out funds from the federal government's Law Enforcement Education Program and the office now must get the money back.

LEEP is an assistance program that provides loans for criminal-justice students.

"Since so many students are affected, the student government should get involved," Gray said. "They have the different channels that are necessary in a case like this."

Sam Armstrong, ASASU executive vice president, said he agreed with Gray.

"We've discussed the case and need to discuss it some more," he said. "But we really should channel more efforts into this area. It's a student matter that affects students so I guess the student association should take some type of action."

"But we've got to go through the proper channels, and that's essentially what we're doing."

Armstrong said ASASU has notified the Arizona Board of Regents about the problem and has discussed it with student Regent Joel Stiner.

Gray said he is planning to bring up the matter before the Public Programs College Council to see "if there isn't something they can do about it."

"I think the entire Financial Aids Office needs to be cleaned up," he said. "They're continually making mistakes and it's about time it stopped."

The University Financial Aids Advisory Committee has formulated a special subcommittee to investigate the LEEP program.

Bruno Disposto, who is coordinating the investigation, said he has talked to a number of students involved with the mistaken loans and is "just trying to find out some answers."

He said he does not feel that the University is right in asking the students to return the money.

"I just don't want to see these guys have to pay for something that wasn't their fault," he said.

Dr. Roger Swanson, dean of admissions and financial aids, said a contingency clause on the back of the contract signed by students who received the aid stipulated that the loans were "conditional upon the availability of federal, institutional or private funds."

That clause, he said, gives the aids office legal grounds to force students to pay the money back.

Babbitt requests ASA input before selecting new regents

By Suzanne McElfresh

Gov. Bruce Babbitt has asked the Arizona Students Association to suggest appointments for two openings on the state Board of Regents, and ASA will emphasize candidates with a knowledge of the university system, the Associated Students president said Tuesday.

"Right now that is a weakness on the board," Susie Eastridge said. "Many members do not have a university education."

"That's all right, but we would like to see someone who has insight into the workings of the University, possibly a retired faculty member."

Regents Dwight Patterson and Sydney Woods' terms will expire in January.

Eastridge said Babbitt expressed a desire for student input on the appointments, which is a precedent.

"Most of the time, the governor will appoint someone he knows, or a friend. But Babbitt said he will be considering input, which gives us a chance to get someone that students would like to see on the board."

Why is he selling a worn-out song?

I couldn't believe it. Deposed head football coach Frank Kush handing out trophies at Manzanita Speedway.

Although I have had what you might call "interviews" with the former coach — I asked questions and he said, "I won't comment on that" — I don't know him as a man nor do I care one way or the other what the future holds for him.

He lost his job. I reported parts of the continuing story, spent seemingly endless hours pondering the implications of the information and, as a result, fell almost hopelessly behind in my classwork.

Poor me.

After several weeks of the above, I finally began to put the pieces of "Kushgate" into perspective and my life was beginning to return to some sort of normality.

Until Saturday night.

I didn't mind Kush showing up at a Suns game and receiving a couple of standing ovations. That's alright, I wasn't there.

And if he wants to be in "Too Tall" Jones' corner for his second heavyweight fight, that's OK. I don't go to heavyweight fights.

However, I have been going to Manzanita Speedway all summer and driving around the clay racetrack with the good ol' boys, banging a few fenders, collecting dirt and grease and getting my weekly workout behind the wheel of a modified stock car.

Saturday night, Kush showed up to hand out trophies to the winners of the season's last race. That doesn't bother me either. I only won $10. I didn't win a trophy.

What does bother me about Kush popping up around the Valley is that he appears to be doing it for one purpose: to keep himself in the public eye.

I've even been told Kush has hired a public relations firm to make sure the lids never close. I don't know this for a fact, but the former gridiron great's actions point in that direction.

Granted, public relations is an integral part of American life, as is making a buck and selling a product.

Kush, who many people apparently think is also an integral part of American life, is reported to have made a few tax-free bucks over the years, what with a banquet here, a fund-raiser there. He has not denied the boost to his income.

I refuse to feel sorry for the man. He played "King For A While," lost the throne and apparently made off with a bundle.

I also refuse to buy the product that is being offered by Kush and those around him.

The idea of Kush paying for the services of an image-maker is not quite as disturbing as the thought that he may feel the need to change his public image or, at best, play up the better side of it.

If Kush in fact has been mistreated by the University, as he says is the case, then why go to the trouble of building another image? If he is telling the truth about not punching Kevin Rutledge and about not attempting to cover it up, why the 11th-hour effort?

"Iron Man" Kush is beginning to act like a two-bit politician who is down in the polls and changing hats just as fast as he can locate new ones to wear. And like a losing candidate, he has crossed the bounds of good taste.

It appears that Kush is mounting a full-scale assault on the public's emotions.

Will Kush and the image-makers have us believe that the public is, at least in part, responsible for his downfall by not boosting enough? In the future, the public may even be shown a photo of Frank, stooped over in prayer, pleading with Dante to go easy on us.

Kush does not appear to be suffering a great deal from his dethronement and I am beginning to think he actually is enjoying his new-found, self-defined role of fall guy. Poor Frank.

Letters to the Editor

We won't tolerate it!

Editor:

An open letter to all concerned ASU students:

At this time, the way of life in the United States and the ideals that it is based upon are being abused and degraded by Iranian students who, as guests in this country, are reaping the benefits of the American educational system.

We must put a halt to the abuse our systems and symbols of liberty face when used as a platform by Iranian students in support of a regime that is jeopardizing American lives and universal systems of communication.

The outrage that is created by such actions compels us to use the only civilized educated means of expression that is available to us today: making those with the power of implementation aware of our outrage through letters stating:

Due to the recent events in Iran jeopardizing the safety of American citizens in the U.S. Embassy in Tehran, imperilling (sic) internationally accepted lines of communication and representation, and also due to the added insult of demonstrated support of these actions by Iranian students in the United States, our only logical recourse is to call for 1) the discontinuance of further shipments of military supplies and parts to Iran, 2) a freeze on Iranian financial assets in U.S. banks, and 3) the deportation of all Iranian students from this country.

As responsible American citizens, we cannot afford to allow the ultimate universal channels of communication available for negotiation and understanding between nations — in this instance, the United States and Iran — to fall under the threat of destruction by terrorist activities and the support thereof in this country. The magnitude of our outrage can best be expressed peacefully in numbers.

We encourage all those harboring similar feelings and frustrations to send a letter or signed copy of this article to: Senators Dennis DeConcini and Barry Goldwater, U.S. Senate Office Building, Washington D.C., 20510.

Does buying a ticket mean we lose our rights?

Editor:

On the night of Oct. 26 my girlfriend and I were confronted by something vile and rotten, something that should never have happened.

We were not aware that we are in a state of marshal law or that the U.S. government and Constitution had been brought down by some fascist regime.

I was told by a representative of the campus police that by purchasing a ticket to the Graham Nash Poco concert, I had given up my rights.

A representative of the Activity Center tried to illegally search me. Yet, what is more disturbing, thousands of people (mostly men) permitted their rights to be simply disregarded that night. I saw many men — but no women — being searched. Is this not sex discrimination?

No one has the right to say that we surrender our rights or that a ticket "assumes" our rights in exchange for entertainment.

And no one — be it an individual, a department or a university — has the right to say that anyone entering a public event enters conditional to illegal search and seizure, much less do it.

I had no bottle, cigarettes, dope, alcohol, contraband or firearms, nor were my actions even contrary to what is accepted by the Code of Conduct (an atrocity to human rights). Even the Code of Conduct refers to "respect for the rights of all individuals" and states "all members of the University community have the right to assume that they will not be deprived of life, liberty and property without due process of law."

The Ac ticket-tearer told me, as she pointed to a sign, that I would not be allowed into the concert because I would not submit to a search. Her justification: "The sign says so."

I respect a rule that keeps out glass containers but I will not be searched.

It frightens me to think that others so freely allowed their rights to be taken.

Who can give such an order? How many can so sheepishly carry out such a rotten order? This is not just overzealousness on behalf of one or two individuals, but a cancerous attitude somewhere that would treat us as uncommon criminals.

Let them try it at a football game and I'd bet the police would be confronted with a riot.

I have taken steps in this matter, yet what am I but one drop in a polluted sea?

Please help us stop this travesty of justice.

There are lots of reasons not to deal with terrorists

Editor:

An open letter to the Moslem Student Association:

There are several reasons why the Shah cannot be returned for "trial."

- 1) The United States does not have an extradition treaty with Iran.
- 2) Iran is occupying the U.S. Embassy, the sovereign soil of America.
- 3) American citizens are being held captive, beaten and generally abused.
- 4) Moslem students have asked for the death of our president.
- 5) America does not deal with terrorist demands.

As for money to protect the Shah, very few

American dollars will be required to protect a well-behaved visitor. Remember, your safety is at issue, not the Shah's. We like well-behaved guests in America, not to mention those who know when their welcome has worn thin.

Leave now, or be sent back wearing feathers. Go home and wallow around in your own mud. Oh, and don't forget to appeal to American opinion as you leave.

I suggest you issue a public apology for the animal acts of your fellow students in Iran. Eat your words!!

Why do they cause a fuss for a corpse?

Editor:

Why Shaw? Why do the Iranians want him? Why Bernard Shaw? Don't they know he's dead?

What do they want to prove? And they're holding hostages for him. Live ones. Can you imagine that? They're holding live people until we hand over a dead writer.

I say give 'em Shaw if they want him so bad. Living people are always worth more than dead ones.

Band fails to march on trip

By Ellen Haggerty

Persons who pledged money for the ASU Jog-a-thon might be paying for a trip that never was.

The Sun Devil Marching Band, one of the more than 30 organizations that participated in the Jog-a-thon, held Oct. 6 and 7 at the Sun Angel Stadium track, joined the project to raise funds for a trip to the UCLA game last weekend, Dr. Richard Strange said Tuesday. The trip would have cost about $17,000, he added.

However, the bills to those who pledged with band members did not go out in time, nor was any pledged money received in time for the band to make the trip, he added.

Strange, the band director, said that the company in full charge of the Jog-a-thon, Promotions, Inc., said the bills probably would go out a week after the event.

"We've been told by two or three people that they just received their Jog-a-thon bills," Strange said.

He added that although all the bills now have been sent out, "it takes a couple of weeks to start getting good returns."

Half of the money received from band pledges still will go to the band and the other half will go to the ASU athletic department for the $1.2 million golf course, for which the Jog-a-thon was held.

"If (the band's half of the money) will either be held and used for a later trip or be used to support another band function," Strange said.

He added he did not know why the bills were held up, and no representative from Promotions, Inc., responsible for the billing and signing up of joggers, was available for comment.

Although Strange said he thinks the company was partly at fault for mailing the bills late, Promotions, Inc. made no commitment to the band that it would receive its money in time for the trip. He added that the band members who decided to use the Jog-a-thon to raise funds did so at the last minute and took a risk that the money would not be received in time.

Diplomat will discuss S. African race policy

By Jamie Johnson

In answer to the "hotbed of racial struggles" in South Africa, the ASU Black Student Union is sponsoring a lecture Thursday by visiting diplomat Harvey Nelson.

Nelson will answer questions on the South African government's policy of apartheid, which is defined by the ruling minority as "separate development."

"The white regime is in complete political control and they (the members of the ruling minority) intend to keep it that way," Nelson said. "Apartheid is institutionalized there — discrimination practices are written in the laws."

Derique Powell, president of the Black Student Union, said apartheid is used as a means of justifying "the way people live" in South Africa. He said that a large percentage of blacks in South Africa works for much less than what the rest of the population works for. The black mortality rate is about five times higher than that of the rest of the population, he added.

Balloons

... not just hot air

Seconds before liftoff thousands of spectators swarm around several of the massive vinyl dirigibles.

Nine year old Carrie Kitchel covers her eyes and regrets the decision she made to ride in a balloon Sunday afternoon.

For those who think ballooning is a dying sport — a well-worn page that turned with the century that bore it — think again. Ballooning is on the upswing.

Worldwide, the sport has grown from 350 balloons in 1973 to about 2,000 now.

The increasing popularity of ballooning in the Valley was evident last week at the fifth annual Thunderbird Invitational Balloon Race held on the grounds of the American Graduate School of Management at 59th Avenue and Greenway Road.

Sixty-two balloons participated in the race through the Glendale skies. Thousands of spectators turned out to cheer the pilots and ground crews as one by one the air-filled crafts slipped up and away.

Jim Kitchel, a balloonist for seven years and a participant last weekend, said anyone can learn to fly a balloon.

"The Federal Aviation Administration requirements to obtain a wingless license aren't as difficult as those for a winged license," Kitchel said.

A wingless license is needed for balloons while a winged license is required for airplanes.

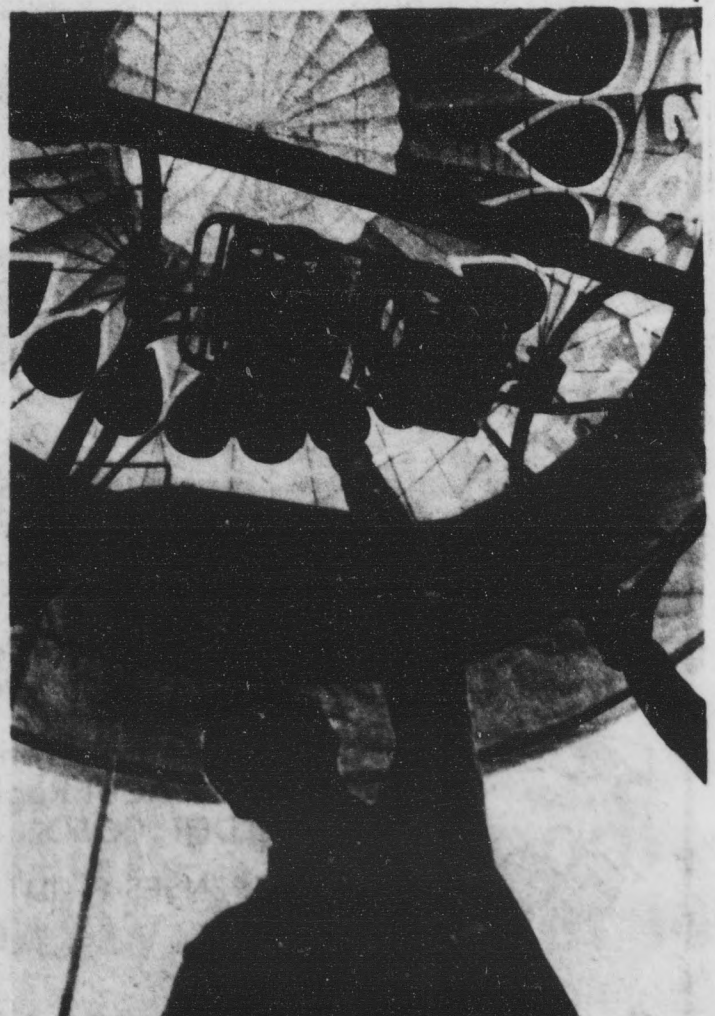

Ten hours of flight time and a written exam must be completed for a winged license.

Kitchel said equipment costs between $7,000 and $14,000 for the balloon (called an "envelope"), burners and a gondola or basket. Balloon sizes vary from 40 to 55 feet in diameter and carry up to four adults.

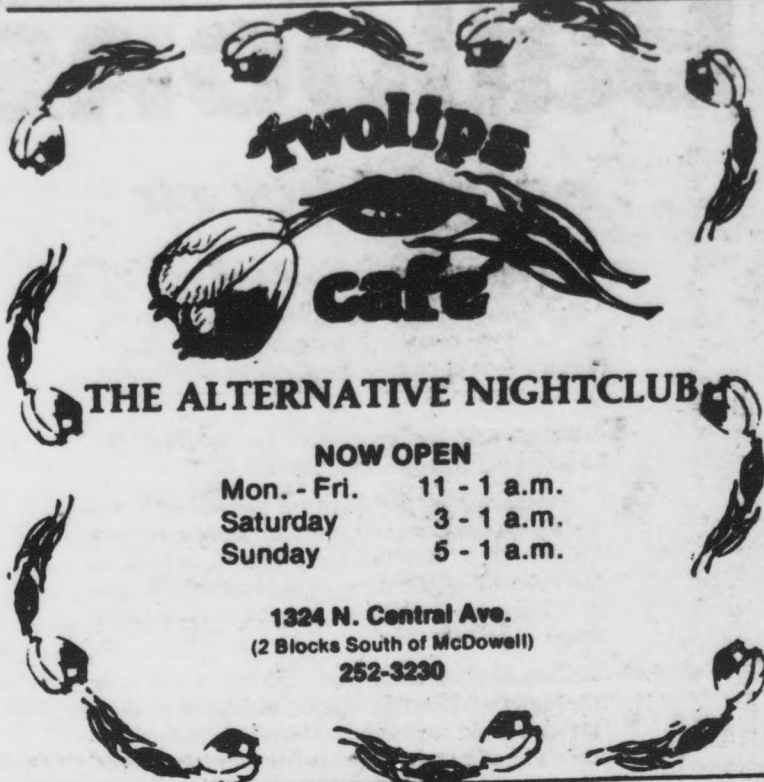

"It's actually a pretty inexpensive sport once the equipment is paid for," he added.

The ground begins to take on a geometric design 300 feet high.

Fall fun and frolic promised for Homecoming celebrations

By Dave Walker

Pep rallies, entertainment, a parade and fun, fun, fun is promised for all who participate in ASU's Homecoming celebration this weekend.

After more than a decade of half-hearted celebration, Homecoming once again is an event on the ASU campus.

Lori Tanner, Associated Students activities vice president, attributes the drop-off in student interest in the occasion to the tumultuous events that rocked college campuses near the end of the decade.

"People were into world issues then. Students were finding it difficult to celebrate Homecoming because of their concern for the war in Vietnam and other problems," she said.

The concern for those issues has not been replaced by a desire to celebrate any old occasion, Tanner said, but because student groups have a renewed interest in the traditions of the University.

She added that a resurgence in the Greek community at ASU can be equated with the increased interest in the event.

A new event this year is the selection of a Homecoming king to preside over the celebration with the Homecoming queen. Almost all of the applicants for the honor are members of the ASU fraternity system and have participated in various campus clubs and organizations.

ASU did not have a Homecoming queen for nine years, until Jeri Kishiyama was crowned by Bob Hope during last year's celebration.

This year's royal couple was announced Tuesday night at the Homecoming kick-off ceremony in the MU. Results of the balloting were not available at press time. Jesse Owens, 1932 Olympic gold medalist, was scheduled to speak.

A faculty exchange dinner will be tonight in the cafeteria of Palo Verde Main. Jadie Hall, associate dean of students, is the featured speaker.

A pep rally also will take place this afternoon on the lawn in front of Hayden Library. ASU cheerleaders will supply the motivation, and ASU alumni will supply free ice cream.

The party continues on Thursday as the Razz Review band, the most underrated teen combo in the Western Hemisphere, begins the bash with a downbeat at 11:30 a.m. A student-alumni challenge will follow and another fine local band, Sassi, will play on into the late afternoon.

Sun Devil fever rises Friday at a special Homecoming happy hour at Dooley's. And the Fabulous Forties Orchestra promises to recreate the sounds of Gene Krupa and Tommy Dorsey in a special concert Friday night at Gammage Center.

The Homecoming parade, featuring floats and entries from several campus groups, steps off at 10 a.m. Saturday. A post-parade celebration will follow on the lawn south of PV Main.

Man released after arrest for indecent act in library

By Charlie Diaz

A Glendale man was released on his own recognizance by ASU Police Tuesday after being arrested in connection with a misdemeanor sex offense.

Detective Bob Jones said Richard Starr, 33, of 7350 W. Rose Lane was arrested at 8 p.m. Monday on the third floor of Hayden Library and charged with public sexual indecency, a Class 2 misdemeanor.

Jones said a Class 2 misdemeanor is punishable by four months in the county jail and/or a $750 fine.

Jones added Patrolman Manuel Vasquez arrested Starr after ASU Police received a report from a woman studying in the library who allegedly saw Starr masturbating in an aisle between racks of books.

Jones said Starr has no prior record. He added a complaint signed by the Maricopa County Attorney will be forthcoming.

Pasta plunge is called off, but charity to get noodles

By Jamie Johnson

The annual Homecoming Spaghetti Dive, in and out of hot water since its inception three years ago, was canceled Tuesday with the decision to donate the 400 pounds of dry noodle to Valley food banks.

"There was really a big lack of communication," said Dave Birdsell, chairman of the student Homecoming Committee. "We were not told about the situation until late Friday, and then we just thought it was a few people (complaining)."

The spaghetti dive was conceived three years ago to be part of Homecoming Week every year.

Mike Pulos of The Spaghetti Co. in Tempe agreed to donate 400 pounds of dry spaghetti and one meatball, which participants would dive in and look for.

The dive only took place that first year. Last year's dive was canceled because no tub for the spaghetti could be found in time.

This year's dive started going down the drain last week when supporters of Hunger Awareness Week, declared by Gov. Bruce Babbitt to be this week, had expressed opposition to the dive being held on the same day as a planned campuswide fast.

After discussion between Homecoming committees and Hunger Awareness organizers, it was decided to dispose of the dive again this year.

Pulos said he is happy either way. If the dive is not going to be held, he "specifically wants this food to be donated to a worthwhile cause here in Phoenix."

Pulos added he intends to donate the spaghetti to the St. Vincent De Paul Society in Phoenix and also to go ahead with the $100 Homecoming king or queen scholarship even though the dive will not be held.

"I just want to do what will keep everybody happy," Pulos said.

He added that he was left up in the air until everyone decided what to do though he needed at least two days notice to cook the spaghetti.

"People are just having trouble communicating," Pulos said. "I'm going to have Barbra Streisand come over and sing 'People Who Need People.'"

ARKADELPHIA, Ark. (AP) — Norman Hobgood, 107, the nation's oldest veteran of the Spanish-American War, said the country has "gotten something" from all its wars. "We learned that certain diseases were transmitted by insects," he said Monday. For three months, at age 26, Hobgood served as a member of Company A of the 3rd Kentucky Regiment in Montonzo, Cuba, at the turn of the century.

Swim team goes on youth kick in first win

By Jim Elsleger

The ASU men's swimming team won't have to worry about wearing out this year, not with the bunch of peach-fuzz freshmen it has in camp combined with a large corp of salted veterans.

The depth of this almost unstoppable combination showed through as like black on white last Friday in an 83-12 pounding of San Diego State.

With an easy schedule early in the season, Coach Ron Johnson decided it would be an ideal time to take a look at the new guys on the block. The look was worth the price of admission.

In winning all 10 events, the Sun Devils used every swimmer on the squad, with the show-stopper being turned in by diver Dan LaSarge who shattered the school and pool record for the 3-meter dive with a score of 341.25.

"Every person on the squad did an outstanding job," Johnson said. "We discovered some new talent and it looks like our weakness from last year, the butterfly events, will be taken care of."

Kerwin Gober won the 100-yard butterfly in a time of 53.03, but Johnson was highly impressed with the performances of freshmen Brad Hering and Bill Longton, a couple of high school All-America butterflyers. Most of the swimmers were swimming "out of their events," and Hering made a good showing in the 50-yard freestyle, not his specialty, winning with a time of 21.85.

England freshman Andy Astbury, swimming in a short course (25 meter) for the first time, won the 500-yard freestyle in a time of 4:33.47.

"That is really quite a performance for someone that is swimming competitively in a short course for the first time," Johnson said. "It even surprised me a little. That was something extra for us."

Another extra that Johnson wasn't sure of before the season started was the ability of freshman Leon Pickens. After Friday, there was no doubt about his ability as he easily won the 100-yard freestyle with a clocking of 48.10.

"The whole thing was very encouraging," Johnson said. "We have a relatively easy schedule right now, but we discovered some new talent and made an impressive showing for using the

ASU women splash to two victories

The ASU women's swim team moved its record to 2-0 with a pair of weekend wins.

Saturday, the women swamped Cal State—Long Beach 98-44, after topping San Diego State 69-26 in their opener Friday.

Freshman Meg Hoefflich was the only double winner for the Devils Saturday as she won the 50-yard backstroke and freestyle events with times of 28.74 and 25.32 seconds respectively.

Another freshman, Kathy Shipman, set a Sun Devil Pool record while swimming exhibition for ASU in the 100-yard individual medley with a time of 1:00.55.

The Sun Devil 200-yard medley relay team of Hoefflich, Anne Gagnon, Shipman and Gail Amundrud qualified for the national meet with a time of 1:50.57.

Gagnon and Shipman were double winners in the San Diego State meet.

Frosh archer ties collegiate record in debut

Freshman ASU archer Tom Stevenson tied the intercollegiate record for a metric-900 round in Saturday's ASU Invitational Archery Meet.

Stevenson, of Norristown, Pa., tied the mark set by Joe Lowry of East Stroudsburg, Pa.

ASU took all three team categories, mens, womens and mixed, against Cal State-Los Angeles.

Three-time All-America selection Carole Chevront of ASU took the women's individual title. She tied with teammate Robin Woods but Chevront won with more perfect arrows.

Owens survives nailing in Coliseum locker room

Los Angeles is not the place for the reserved personality. If you go into the media mecca of the west with the attitude that all good things will pass, you'll probably end up in a chopped liver can on the shelf of Safeway.

Bob Owens, four weeks into his new job as head coach of the ASU football team, found that with each new day comes a new experience. After ASU's game with UCLA in the Los Angeles Coliseum Saturday, Owens was ready for a little chat with the local media on how it went.

What he got was a pressurized cabin 20,000 leagues under the sea.

"I wasn't really expecting that," Owens said about the "attention" he got from the L.A. press. "I really didn't feel comfortable with the way it went. But there is a lot of public interest in the situation here and you have to respond."

Actually Owens could do nothing but respond, or stand there and be drilled about the molar and bicuspid area. The sportswriters had him virtually nailed against the wall of the ASU locker room and only let him come up for air when he had to answer a question.

With several of the ASU players being from the Southern California area and many of them heading off to friend and family, there was a call for contact with Owens, just to let him know where his team could be found in the next few days. Communication with Owens was either by hand signals or messages sent by telegraph, because every time Owens made a move to talk to one of his players, someone jammed a microphone in his face and asked him something like "what do you think really came down at ASU."

"That was my first time with having that much experience with the media," Owens said. "If I had it to do over again, I would have done it differently. I would have had a prearranged setting where we could have met with the media and ran it more organized. It would have taken a lot less time then. I had not anticipated that many people."

Actually, Owens came through the nailwalling with amazing grace. Except for a few slight shoves for air and a couple of misdirection plays in an attempt to get within hearing range of his players, he handled the 20 Questions session like a man who was born in a pressurized reporter's cabin.

"You have to talk with the media," he said. "The Southern California area is such a potentially strong recruiting area that we have to make ourselves available to the media. I would have liked to talk to them after a win—but."

There were several high school prospects in the ASU locker room, many of whom also are being contested for by UCLA, according to Owens.

"Our win over USC last year and the close game with UCLA gave us some viable options with prospective recruits," Owens said. "Last week we had a positive reception from the athletes in the area while on a recruiting trip. Recruiting is tough at best, and anything we can do to make it easier helps."

If the judgement of some of the best high school players concerns the way the coach handles the media, then Owens has no worries.

ASU showed well in its first showing in the Coliseum, and Owens showed well in his first showing in the L.A. media boiling pot. Whether the press found out anything is debatable. At times, the answers really didn't seem to matter as much as keeping the pressure on with at least two questions at a time. How Owens even knew what he was answering is on for Hugh Downs and the cast of "Concentration."

Two wrong tops Pick-em

The battle for the best Pick-em score is much like reaching for a cigarette lower in "tar."

This week's winner, Donn Metheny, came up with just two wrong, and even though he picked ASU to beat UCLA he still came out on top.

There was a two-way tie for second place, so naturally, the infallible tie-breaker came through again to bust up the logjam.

Bill Schumacher came in second by predicting UCLA to win 24-21, and Paul Miller, who predicted ASU to win 24-21, came in third. Both had four picks wrong.

Spikers in wrong loop?

ASU volleyball coach Dale Flickinger believes with a little more consistency, ASU could be a volleyball power.

Now, the Devils are an also-ran in the super-power Western Collegiate Athletic Association. Flickinger praises them nevertheless.

"This team in any other conference would be going to the nationals. As it is, they are not even going to the regionals," he said.

Going to the regionals from the WCAA will be either San Diego State, USC, UCLA or Cal-State Long Beach, all top-ten teams in a scramble for the top spot.

Two losses at home Friday and Saturday lowered ASU's record in league play to 3-8. The Devils are 12-9 overall with one game left.

Saturday they fell in three games to CSLB, 15-17, 7-15, 9-15.

"It's kind of hard," Flickinger said, "when you play a great game like we did the day before, to get up twice in a row."

The day before, in a rare week-day afternoon game, 300 fans watched ASU take the first two games before Southern California rallied to take the last three and the match.

"Against SC, we came out real well, then I thought the last three games SC played extremely well.

More about Flickinger praises team

The third game, we lost a little bit of our serving edge, the fifth we came from down 0-7 to 9-11. Every match was close," Flickinger said.

Southern Cal had been under his coaching the season before, so he pretty well knew its talents. But he didn't know 1978 All-America pick Paula Dittmer-Goodwin would have the kind of game she did, with 22 kills in 44 attempts.

"She played incredible. If you had to pick one reason they won the match, it was her."

In the Sun Devils' last match of the season Saturday, the competition will be a little more down to earth. But the emotion might run high anyway. They host long-time rival UA.
