Superior Court case remains

Rutledge lawsuit dismissed

By Bruce Kaplan

Kevin Rutledge's $1.1 million lawsuit in U.S. District Court against deposed ASU football coach Frank Kush and others was dismissed Thursday, but the action will not be the end of the suit.

Robert O. Hing, the former ASU punter's attorney, filed an identical suit in Maricopa County Superior Court Oct. 22.

The federal court suit was dismissed by Justice William Cople due to "lack of jurisdiction," according to a clerk in the federal clerk's office.

"I don't think it (the dismissal) affects it (the suit) at all," Hing said.

"When the claim was originally filed, we believed that because of the high public emotion, the federal court would provide the best forum," Rutledge said in a statement released by Hing.

"However, in view of all that has transpired since the filing of my claim and what I consider to be a neutralizing of public opinion. We feel confident that the state court will handle this matter fairly.

"The transfer of the case to the Superior Court may be welcomed by the press and the public since depositions in the state courts are a matter of public record when filed with the clerk of the court.

Rutledge added that whether he will appeal the federal court order or not will be decided by his attorneys at a later date.

Kevin Rutledge, the former ASU punter who now attends the University of Nevada at Las Vegas, filed a complaint with the Arizona Board of Regents on Sept. 7. Rutledge alleged in his complaint that Kush punched him during the ASU-Washington game in Seattle last year.

He also said Kush and other coaches harassed him into quitting the team and forfeiting his scholarship.

The regents dismissed his complaint and the elder Rutledge then filed a suit in his son's name in Tucson federal court Sept. 17. The case then was moved to Phoenix.

Peace Pilgrim walks road toward harmony, humility

By Dave Walker

Forty-three years ago, the ideals of the Golden Rule prompted a woman to chuck all her worldly possessions and prepare for a relentless 25,000-mile trek for peace on earth.

Peace Pilgrim, her legal name, has been speaking to classes and church groups at ASU this week and will speak again before moving on to Tucson in January.

She wanders until given shelter and fasts until given food; her only possessions are the blue clothes she wears.

The 25,000-mile mark was passed years ago—so long ago that she has lost track of the miles traversed since.

Her age was forgotten also, but she says that is not important because of her "control of thought."

The only hint she gives of her age is that her hair had turned to silver before she started the journey. She walks with the energy of conviction only, she says; the energy of youth disappeared long ago.

"I came out of my empty life of money. I live to give now instead of to get," she told a roomful of would-be social scientists at ASU this week.

Her message is an appeal for spiritual maturity, a psychological "growing up" that she says every person is capable of. Without that achievement, the world will be subjected to almost certain nuclear annihilation, she said.

When a person becomes committed to the idea of this spiritual growth, different levels of tranquility are achieved until a oneness with the universe is accomplished.

Pilgrim's philosophy, which so closely parallels religious teachings, makes her a natural for speaking engagements at church groups.

"When I first began, I was being asked to speak to these groups. I had no formal religious upbringing and I wanted to relate to these groups in a medium they already understood, so I went to the Bible," she said.

Pilgrim found that she was already living the teachings of Jesus Christ—the precepts of the Golden Rule.

"That principle, practically applied, can only bring harmony," she said.

Pilgrim's future of speaking engagements is booked up solid until 1985, which will delay the filming of her life story, a proposition she has already heard from at least four film companies.

Of course, she plans to play herself.

Her scheduled ASU speaking engagements, which she notes down on a faded yellow fold of paper, will be: 11:40 a.m., Dec. 3 in Social Science 303; 9:15, Dec. 4 in Murdock 102 and 10:40 a.m. in Life Science 191.

MOSLEMS THREATEN TO SPEED UP 'TRIALS' IF SHAH LEAVES

TEHRAN — The Moslem militants holding the U.S. Embassy threatened Thursday to speed up a trial of their 50 American hostages as "spies" if the United States allows the deposed shah to leave for Mexico. In a telephone interview with the Associated Press, a spokesman for the militants also hinted strongly that the hostages would be mistreated in revenge.

TEAM INVESTIGATES SHAH'S FINANCES

TEHRAN, Iran — Iran's banks are turning over financial records to a government investigating team seeking evidence to support Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's accusation that the shah and his family diverted billions of dollars in public funds to their own use. The investigation is being carried out by officials of Iran's Central Bank under the leadership of the bank's new governor, Ali Reza Nobari.

PILOT APPARENTLY ERRED, CAUSING DC-10 CRASH

CHRISTCHURCH, New Zealand — The pilot of the Air New Zealand DC-10 that crashed into a remote Antarctica volcano, killing all 257 persons aboard, apparently made a navigational error that took him on the "wrong" side of the wind-lashed mountain, the head of the recovery operation said Thursday. An airline spokesman acknowledged that the pilot, Capt. Jim Collins, 45, had never flown the Air New Zealand antarctic sightseeing route before.

POLICE FORCE SUSPECT TO COUGH UP DRUGS

DENVER — Police obtained a search warrant for the stomach of a 48-year-old man they said swallowed a balloon containing suspected heroin when an officer attempted to arrest him. Police said that after the search warrant for the stomach of Ralph Fernandez of Denver was issued Wednesday by Denver County Judge Paul Weadick, Fernandez was taken to Denver General Hospital and given a solution that made him vomit. A balloon containing suspected heroin was recovered, officers said.

'RING CHIMES UNTIL HOSTAGES ARE FREED': UDALL

TUCSON — Arizona churches should ring their bells every day at noon until the 49 Americans being held hostage in the U.S. Embassy in Iran are freed, Rep. Morris K. Udall has suggested. Udall, an Arizona Democrat, also said churches should lead the nation in prayer and contemplation for the safe release of the hostages.

Historic race case reopens

TOPEKA, Kan. (AP) — The historic Brown vs. Board of Education case, which began here 28 years ago and led to the U.S. Supreme Court's 1954 ban on racial segregation in schools, was reopened by a federal judge Thursday after a group of parents complained schools are not yet integrated.

U.S. District Court Judge Richard Rogers ruled that a group of black parents who asked him to revive the case have a continuing legal interest in seeing that the court's desegregation order is properly carried out.

The parents contend Topeka schools remain racially imbalanced and cite figures that some schools have as much as 70 percent minority enrollment.

Among those asking to reopen the case was Linda Brown Smith, mother of two Topeka pupils. The original U.S. Supreme Court decision bears her maiden name.

School officials deny they have failed to carry out the Supreme Court's desegregation order and say recent federal investigations have dismissed charges of segregation in Topeka schools.

The original Brown decision struck down a 1949 Kansas law which allowed racial segregation of school children in some cities. In the early 1950s, Kansas was one of four states which permitted segregation, while 17 states and the District of Columbia required segregation.

Kennedy backs Carter's Iranian policies

PHOENIX — President Carter is handling the Iranian crisis in a manner that best guarantees the safety of American hostages, Sen. Edward Kennedy said here Thursday night.

"The president and I have agreed and disagreed on many issues," Kennedy told an audience of more than 1,000 at the Phoenix Civic Plaza. "I support President Carter on Iran."

Speaking at a $125-a-plate Democratic testimonial fund-raising dinner for Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., Kennedy said the Iranian situation has proven that "we are one nation, indivisible, in protecting the rights of Americans everywhere."

"We won't surrender to blackmail anywhere in the world."

Kennedy said he supports the Central Arizona Project, but added legislation must ensure Indians' water rights.

"There's no reason we should sacrifice projects like the Central Arizona Project with the backwater of budgetary waste," he said. "But Indians should not have to forego their rights to water."

Labelling Sun Belt states the "crime belt," Kennedy called for a renewed assault on urban and suburban crime.

"Crime stalks everyone like a shadow and follows the economic growth in the Sun Belt," he said.

The Massachusetts Democrat added, however, that Arizona's fight against organized crime has been exemplary in the wake of the murder of Arizona Republic reporter Don Bolles in 1976.

"Because of Don Bolles, the new criminal code revisions will for the first time impose stiff penalties for such crimes as murder for hire," he said. "Don Bolles' legacy is a revised fight against crime across the country."

Kennedy, who seeks the Democratic nomination for president next year, called the United States a "land of common concerns."

"The pioneers didn't turn back from passage into the West," he said. "Neither must America shrink from its passage into the '80s."

Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who is on an official tour in the Soviet Union, was the state's only upper-echelon Democrat who did not attend the dinner, which reportedly raised $250,000 for DeConcini.

Firemen called to building twice

For the second time in 24 hours, students were forced to evacuate the Art Building when a fire alarm sounded Thursday afternoon.

Two ASU fire trucks, one rescue squad, two squad cars and a battalion chief responded to a 2:45 p.m. alarm. It later was found to be caused by a malfunction in the building's alarm system, ASU Police Sgt. Paul Lee said.

"All the alarms showed (indications of) fire, smoke and water, but apparently it was a malfunction," he said.

A fire broke out about 3 p.m. Wednesday when a match was thrown into a cardboard box. The building's sprinkler system extinguished the blaze, which caused no damage.

Profs are in group protesting freeway

By Kym Fox

Two ASU professors are members of a group that has filed a suit calling for a halt to Papago Freeway construction on grounds the construction is destroying prehistoric Indian artifacts.

Dr. Fred Plog, anthropology department chairman, and Dr. Gordon Weiner, history professor, are officers in the preservation group Arizona: Past and Future.

The group filed the suit in federal court in June against the Department of Transportation and the Federal Highway Commission. Plog declined to comment on the content of the suit.

Though no trial date has been set for the suit, Plog said his lawyers have advised him not to comment in light of a libel suit, also involving the freeway, that was filed against Weiner.

Bill Ross, the principal engineer of Interstate 10, said the group's suit is against the archaeological testing in progress at the freeway sites. The testing is being done to see if artifacts exist.

Goodbye ain't that easy

I'm washed up. Through. Finished. Done. A has-been, former, ex-type editor.

With this issue the fall staff, myself included, bids you goodbye. On Monday the new editor, Mary Gillespie, and her spring staff takes the reigns of this fishwrapper for its final week of publication this semester.

I can't shake this feeling that I'm losing my best friend. After six semesters — the last two as editor — this newspaper has become the focal point of my life. Now it's over.

It's hard to imagine what next semester — my last at ASU — is going to be like, picking up the State Press on the way to class...

Remembering all those 60-hour weeks and the late-breaking stories that meant re-doing the front page and the electricity that fills this newsroom every afternoon. Remembering the people I've worked with and bitched at and thanked God I've had around. I love them.

It feels odd, sitting here in front of a Cathode Ray Tube half an hour before deadline trying to put into 15 column inches what for me has been the most rewarding experience of 26 years. I'll never forget it.

I'm damn proud of the State Press. Thanks to the effort and the dedication of 30 staff members working together, this newspaper has become legitimate. This semester's crew has been head and shoulders above anyone's expectations, and it shows. I couldn't have asked for a finer group. Thank you.

As for this university, I hope someday it becomes a place where students come first. As it is now, Arizona State University is a misnomer — it should be called ASU, Inc. I can't understand why the goal of an institution of higher learning is to operate with a healthy profit margin instead of dedicating itself to the highest academic standards possible.

Why must students be the byproduct of a moneymaking assembly line? From what I've observed, the attitude among too many administrators is that this university would operate much more smoothly if students weren't underfoot and in the way. It's disgusting.

There are many fine faculty members here — I've been lucky enough to come across a few. But there are many that should have been dumped long ago — I've been unfortunate enough to have found several of them. It is possible to learn something at ASU, but it's easier just to learn how to get through.

Anyway, as of today my role as a part of a publication that's supposed to stimulate you to think about those things is over. I'm grateful to have been a part of it.

I know next semester's State Press is in good hands, and I hope you readers will continue to write letters, stand up for yourselves and try to make something worthwhile out of your experience here.

Good luck, State Press. I'll be your most faithful fan.

Letters to the Editor

Jocks have brains as well as brawn

Editor:

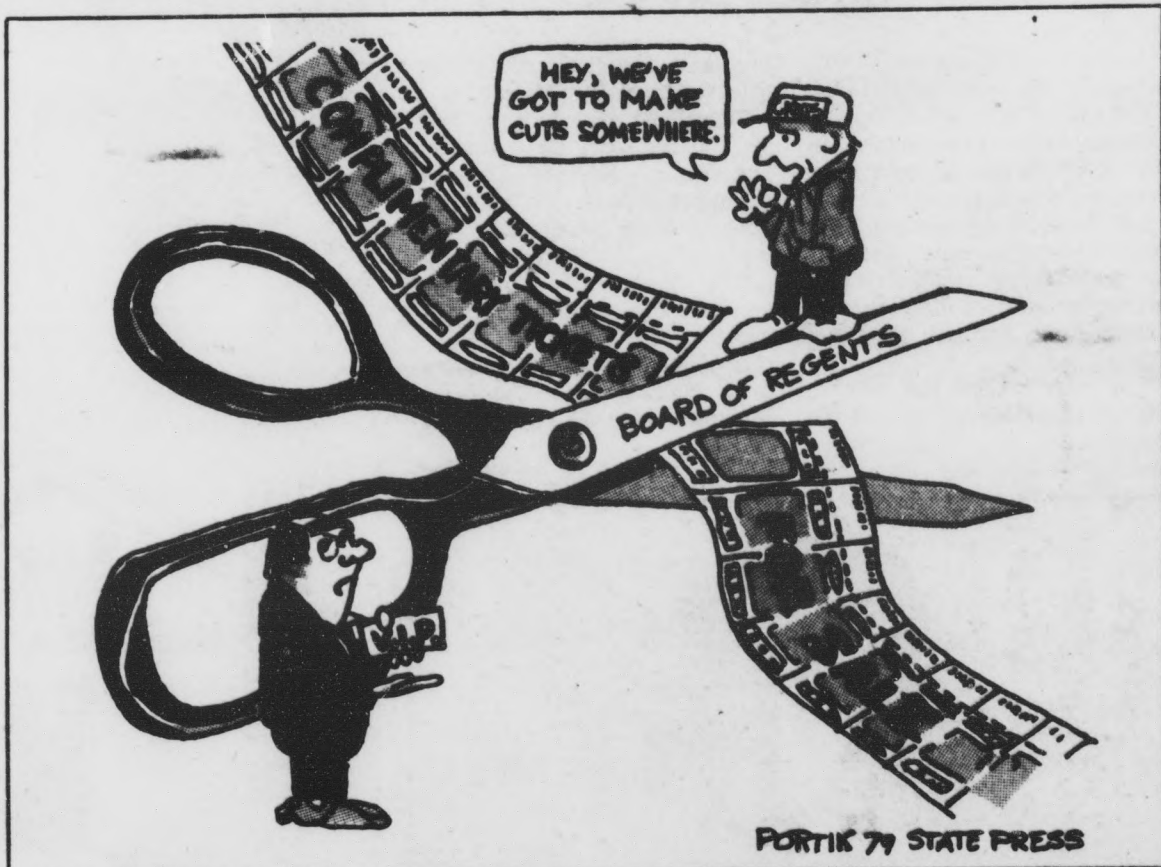

In answer to Professor Demos Gulopulos' "student-athlete" guidelines in the State Press on Tuesday, I would like to point out that ASU fields 20 teams in men and women's athletics. It could be found that the GPA of this group of several hundred student athletes is considerably higher than the student body at large. The vast majority of these sports are non-professionally oriented. Let's just take the sport that I work with for instance, swimming.

The GPA average for the women's team has run above 3.0 for as long as I can remember with two girls carrying straight 4.0 averages. The GPA of the men's swimming team last semester was 2.9, and with the group of freshmen we have recruited, I am sure it will be considerably above that this semester.

We have no one in trouble academically in this sport and the same could be said for the vast majority of athletes at this school. On the contrary, I believe that student athletes are, in general, super-achievers in just about everything they put their minds to. At least that has been my experience.

The members of my team represent an excellent cross-section of the campus community, with some majors in just about every area offered at ASU. We are proud of our athletic accomplishments, but every member of my team is moving toward a degree in his chosen area, and the vast majority of them with distinction academically. We resent very much your tagging us with the label of "campus misfits."

Who cares if our alma mater looks like it can't hold water?

Editor:

I don't see what all the fuss is about.

I mean, big deal if we forfeited a few games because we used ineligible players. Big deal if those eight players never went to class.

So what if we fired our head coach prematurely on the word of a few players, our athletic director and dragway owner.

So what if Frank is suing us for $40 million? This is no time to bicker about who punched who!

So we gave out a few thousand complimentary tickets. So that's not within Pac-10 policy, University rules or standard accounting procedures — big deal.

We're being investigated left and right, we've made a national scene and we might be put on probation.

Well excuse us.

Why pedal rules on just bikers?

Editor:

I have been riding my bicycle to campus regularly for the past three years. I have made a point to walk my bike on the mall and in other places where pedestrian traffic is heavy.

Realizing the hazard that bicyclists can be, I am all in favor of either outlawing bicycle traffic on the mall as proposed by the University Safety Committee, or, better yet, making north-south bicycle paths on the mall. However, if we are going to get tough with bicyclists and ticket them for offenses, let's do the same for those pedestrians who insist on walking on bicycle paths.

The available bicycle paths are few enough as is. Something should be done to insure that we who are bikers retain our rights in those places where we can legally ride.

With Feeling

If I'm not perfect, at least I'm perfectly content

Are you a procrastinator?

If you get an "A" on an exam, do you feel bad because it wasn't a 100 instead of feeling pleased with your effort?

Are you constantly internally monitoring yourself — picking, picking, picking, always finding things not quite good enough?

Do you find yourself not talking to people because you're not sure "just the right thing" will come out and you don't want people to think you're ...

Do you avoid trying new things — i.e., a class, a hobby, a new idea, or whatever — because you're afraid to fail?

When you make a mistake do you think how dumb you are? Or how bad of a person you are?

Do you feel you must always come in first, rather than second or third or fourth — or last?

Do you feel you can't play because you'll "waste" time?

If you're like me, you can answer yes to several or all of these questions. And that might mean you're a perfectionist.

Perfectionists, I think, can be born out of messages many of us have received. We're often taught we're either the best — or the rest. We're everything or nothing.

We get taught how to do, do, do, instead of be.

We learn to value ourselves for what we produce, not for who we are. We get recognition for working late, so we produce more, so we can be liked more ...

Perfectionism, I believe, is one reason why the second highest cause of death for college students is suicide.

And it's a contributing factor to all the stress we feel, and the strain we put on our bodies. "Stress management" is now a household word.

"Burnout," either as students or professionals, is common, and is partly caused by that compulsiveness to perform.

I've stopped much of my perfectionism by realizing how unuseful it is.

If I allow myself the option to fail, then I end up giving myself much more freedom which allows me to be more creative — and more productive.

I feel better when I give myself the same right to humanness as I easily give to others. Then I can relate to others better because I'm not expending all my energy worrying about everything I do.

When I take care of myself with as much kindness as I give others I am less tense, critical, workaholic, etc. And I'm more comfortable, spontaneous, joyful and constructive.

The goals I originally chose perfectionism for are better met when I'm not a perfectionist. I guess I've added some words to the Golden Rule: "And do unto thyself as you do unto others."

Gambling . . .

Odds are bettors don't get an 'even' chance

Editor's note: This is the second of two parts on illegal gambling in the Phoenix area.

By Dan Fellner

Illegal gambling activity is thriving in the Phoenix area. And for local law enforcement officials, catching up with illicit gambling operators is quite a challenge.

One of the major problems they are faced with in tracking down illegal gambling is its covert nature. It just doesn't take place on the sidewalk for everyone to see.

"Most of it is very clandestine, behind closed doors," said Capt. Richard Bequette, who heads the Phoenix Police Department's vice-squad. "You have to know somebody who can introduce you to somebody who can get you into the game."

"You generally cannot go into a bar or a business or open establishment anywhere around the Valley and step right in and join a game. It is not open to the public's view and as a result, it's confined within a certain element of the community."

But it is not confined to specific areas of town, Bequette said, but takes place "anywhere that two or more people get together and decide they want to gamble."

Detective Jim Tharp of the Phoenix Police Department's Organized Crime Bureau, said it is very difficult for a newcomer to get in on some local casino action.

"They won't accept someone who just happens to walk in off the street," he said. "It's usually done on a referral basis."

But once a potential gambler does make that first connection and enters the world of illegal gambling, they often find it not to their liking.

Officials say games are often rigged and payoffs sometimes do not conform to the odds that are quoted.

"It's very difficult to get a fair wager down when you're dealing with someone you don't know," Bequette said. "You're taking quite a risk to participate in that type of operation."

"If you go to Las Vegas, you're betting with an establishment where the odds are pretty clear-cut. You know when you place your bet that you're going to get a legitimate payoff, and you know that the odds are going to be published right there on the board for everyone to see."

"Whereas locally, when you're betting with some guy behind a building someplace, you don't know what the odds are that he is quoting. You don't know for a fact that you're going to get any kind of a payoff, even if you win."

Gambling debts legally are not collectable in Arizona.

Tharp said local casinos are the biggest ripoffs.

"Most of them are crooked," he said. "The house just doesn't have the capital, equipment or personnel like the Las Vegas casinos do. In order to make a profit, they have to enter cheating into their operation."

Tharp said mirrors, marked cards and rigged dice often are found during police raids on illegal casinos.

"They make it a real friendly atmosphere for everyone to gamble in," he said. "But they're stealing you blind and you don't even know it."

Often it is the "degenerate" gambler, the one who cannot stop, who frequently is taken to the cleaners by crooked casino operators, Bequette said.

"We generally find out about these operations by complaint," he said. "People will call us and tell us the game is rigged or a wife will call and complain that her husband lost his whole paycheck at a certain local casino."

Bequette said parlay card operators' payoffs

He also said he could not comment on the suit.

Ross said the areas in question are plots south of McDowell between 75th and 83rd avenues, 59th and 48th avenues and near 41st Avenue. The area between McDowell and Van Buren and 16th and 24th streets now is being cleared for testing in the near future.

The suit questions the authority of the Department of Transportation to conduct the tests, Ross said.

In an article in The Arizona Republic Thursday, it was reported the federal government also is investigating the archaeological testing based on information that a rare Hohokam Indian burial site was destroyed earlier this year by workers hired to assess the value of the ruins.

Weiner could not be reached for comment.

Firemen called to Art Building

"There was water all over," art student Michele Knotter said.

"The sofas got wet and some of the students' prints were ruined, but it wasn't that bad."

Lee said the false alarm Thursday probably was triggered by lingering smoke from Wednesday's fire.

Firemen searched the building, including ceiling space, but found no fire or smoke, Lee said.

Students remained outside the building for about 20 minutes until firemen were able to complete a check of the building.

$3 million bid for ASU will be voted on by reg.

By Dave Walker

The Arizona Board of Regents will vote on the latest in a long line of estimates for a new swimming pool complex next Friday, the ASU director of Physical Facilities said Thursday.

"If the bid is approved, construction can begin in January," Mike Ray said.

The bid for construction of the facility was entered by Chris Evans, a private contractor. Ray said the $3 million complex would be completed one year after construction begins.

The original estimate for the planning stages of the pool was given by the board in October 1978.

Ray Johnson, ASU vice president, said Thursday the success of the bid depends on the new physical education center.

The swim team also won at McClellan High School in Phoenix, Johnson said.

"There are seven other bids that have better pools than ASU," Johnson said.

A $3.5 million bid to build a new pool was rejected because it was too high and was rejected in December.

Johnson said several features of design have been eliminated in the new construction.

"We won't have the kind of pool we had at McClellan," Johnson said.

Johnson said the new pool will have a more modern design and will be more functional than the old pool.

Student group to host 10,000-meter run

The ASU chapter of the Society of Professional Journalists, Sigma Delta Chi, will sponsor a 10,000-meter race and a two-mile fun-run Dec. 9.

The student group is holding the "1979 Fish Wrapper Run" to raise money for the 1980 SPJ, SDX regional convention it is hosting April 11-13 at The Pointe Resort in Phoenix.

The races will begin and end at Sun Angel Stadium. Check-in begins at 7:30 a.m. The two-mile fun run will start at 8:30 a.m. and the 10,000-meter race will begin at 9 a.m.

Registration is $5 before Saturday and $6 afterwards.

Runners also may register the day of the race.

There are separate divisions for men and women, and prizes will be given to the first three finishers in all divisions. T-shirts and certificates will be given to all entrants.

are only a fraction of what they should be in order to be fair wagers.

"An interesting facet there is that people do not understand the odds," he said. "For example, if you pick three teams and you get three out of three picks correct, the payoff is $5 on a $1 bet. But the actual odds are 8-1."

"As you progress higher, they have what's called a 'sucker' bet. It's to encourage you to bet on all 10 games. If you bet $1 to pick 10 out of 10, the payoff is $100. However, the true odds of that happening are 1,064-1. So the payoff of $100 is less than one-tenth of what it should be in order to be a fair bet."

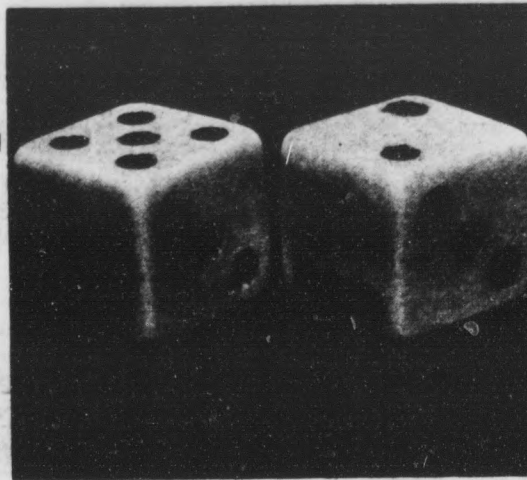

Consequently, Bequette said parlay card dealers have extremely profitable businesses.

"We had a parlay card operator who was producing a thousand cards with a minimum bet of $5 a piece so his income was at least $5,000. In one of the weeks we arrested him, his payoff was only $489. He was making a profit of more than $4,500."

Marvin (he wished to withhold his last name), a member of the Phoenix chapter of Gamblers Anonymous, said bookmakers' payoffs on illegal bets are much smaller than their Las Vegas counterparts.

Bookies will only pay a maximum of 35-1 on win bets on horse races, 17-1 on place bets and 12-1 on show bets.

"If you put $2 down on a horse with a book-maker, and you get lucky and it pays $120 at the track, the most the bookmaker will pay is $70," Marvin said.

It is the rigged games and poor payoffs that Bequette finds most objectionable about illegal gambling.

"I think the public generally looks upon most forms of social gambling as harmless," he said. "And I don't necessarily disagree with that view. But when you get into some of the more organized forms of gambling, then the public is not getting a fair shake locally."

"It's difficult enough to go to Las Vegas and come back with your shirt on your back, and they're playing fair. But you take the average person playing one of the illegal casinos down here, they believe that they're saving the money it would take them to go to Las Vegas."

"And they think that's more money for them to gamble with. But they're totally, totally wrong."

Four-day plan 'unlikely,' assistant provost says

By Jamie Johnson

The possibility of ASU going to a four-day work week to conserve energy next summer is slim, the assistant provost said Thursday.

"There was substantial concern regarding what impact it (a four-day work week) would have on academic programs," Dr. Elmer Gooding said. "Now we're getting close to the time summer schedules are worked out."

A proposal was made in October by the Energy Conservation Committee to go to four-day instruction weeks by next summer. The committee had been researching its possibilities.

Henry Koelbl, director of personnel, said the committee would have to analyze whether any real savings would result from closing down all the buildings and trying to cool them again three days later.

"It all depends if a real value or savings will result from going in that direction," he said.

Gooding said that input on the possibility had been requested from other deans. Those who responded were not sure that lengthening the summer-class periods would be well received, he added.

Fair starts today

Legal problems plague disabled

By Charlie Diaz

The handicapped in Arizona are without legal recourse to pursue discrimination actions, a disabled ASU student said Thursday.

"At the present time, there is no place in the state for handicapped people to seek relief from discrimination" in areas such as housing, employment or other matters that currently are handled for those covered by the Civil Rights Division of the Arizona Attorney General's Office, Glenn Goodrich said.

Goodrich, a senior management student who is confined to a wheelchair, serves on a state committee within the Civil Rights Division. He said a movement is under way to place the handicapped under the jurisdiction of the division.

Because of this, and because of pressure from the handicapped themselves, a meeting is being held 8 a.m. until noon Saturday in the MU to draw support for the inclusion of the handicapped under the division.

Phillip Austin, assistant attorney general for the Civil Rights Division, said, "This is not an original idea. More states have this kind of law than not. Arizona is probably in the minority in that it doesn't have this kind of law."

He said a "great deal of interest in the handicapped community in civil rights" helped prompt the action.

However, Goodrich said any change in the division will have to be approved by both houses of the Arizona Legislature because the lawmakers originally established the division.

ASU awarded $1.5 million for physics facility

The ASU physics department has been awarded a four-year $1.5 million grant from the National Science Foundation to establish a nationwide research facility.

Dr. John Cowley, faculty adviser in the Center for Solid State Science Electron Microscopy, said the grant will be used to build up instruments, acquire new staff and finance more research.

"For the past nine years we have developed methods for looking at atoms in crystals," Cowley said. "We are the only group in the United States that has these methods."

The high-resolution electron-microscopy facility will make techniques and instruments available to scientists around the world.

Chart busting Billy Joel concert smash at UAC

In his ballad "The Entertainer," Billy Joel laments that "If I go cold, I won't be sold...I won't be here in another year, if I don't stay on the charts...."

Well, Wednesday night at the University Activity Center, the 30-year-old balladeer-turned-showman from Oyster Bay, Long Island played Tempe for the second time in a year. And, it's pleasing to report that his show is as hot as ever.

And that opinion was echoed by the 11,000 or so who took in his wide-versioned array of 19 songs, spread out over a two-hour period.

Staying on the charts hasn't been one of Joel's problems since his LP The Stranger hit record stores two years ago. He followed that with the identically successful 52nd Street, and according to his sax player Richie Cannata, another yet-to-be-named album will be unveiled around New Year's Day.

Among Joel's 19-song program were three new singles, ostensibly destined for the new release, and all three received strongly favorable reaction from the crowd. One of them, "You May Be Right (I May Be Crazy)" looks like another Top-40 topper.

But Joel's charisma is such that he could've received a standing ovation for playing "Turkey In The Straw." It's easy to note why.

In his bag of compositions are a multitude of feelings, angers, passions, and love songs — in addition to his original ballads, for what he was primarily known for in the early '70s.

Add to that Joel's style on stage. It's fun to watch. He just doesn't take the stage — he overpowers it. Opening his show with "Only The Good Die Young," Joel took advantage of the clever little ramps and stairways built into his stage, storming from mike to mike — as well as piano to piano — with exhausting motion.

Then, after a hand motion to "salute" the Ayatollah Khomeini, Joel, dressed in his "tough guy" outfit featuring an unkempt paisley sport coat, narrow-striped tie, jeans and Nike shoes, moved into "Movin' Out (Anthony's Song)," followed by a pair of selections from 52nd Street—"Honesty," and "My Life."

Reaching back into his storied past, Joel changed gears and slipped to his bench to play "Piano Man," the 1974 title track from that LP, but the slowdown didn't allow him to catch his breath long enough, as he had to towel himself off for the first of many times during the night.

After another new slice of Joel's future, "All For Lana," he took to the piano again for "Prelude," and "Angry Young Man," off of Souvenirs, where Joel's masterful piano work was at its finest.

And then the stage took on sort of a sleazy aura, as the lights were dimmed, Joel kicked back, lit up a cigarette, donned a pair of dark glasses, and put the crowd in a "New York State Of Mind," which included one of the first "sax solos" this side of the Hudson by Cannata.

Joel rolled upstairs to his Baldwin baby grand to bang out his "Root Beer Rag," which featured a short sparring match with drummer Liberty De Vitto, and then moved to his Yamaha electric piano for the passionate and sarcastic "She's Only A Woman."

Then he switched to the defensive, as he stayed with the Yamaha to play the understanding yet confused lover of "Just The Way You Are." Cannata's sax came through beautifully, along with the easy pace set by drummer De Vitto.

His main show ended with two more cuts off 52nd Street, wrapping up with the same kind of bravado it opened with as he belted out "Big Shot."

Here, Joel used the portable mike to its farthest extent, showing, roving up and down and around the stage, showing his Stallone-like countenance to the fans who occupied the "cheap seats" behind the stage. Then, his acrobatics took him bounding about the stage, as he shook the hands of fans in the front row of the floor seats. His trails led him over a speaker or two, on top of his main grand piano on the front stage, up to the back Baldwin for another verse of the song, back in front for more handshakes, to the towel for a brief respite, and then to the piano, where he fell on his back to rest on its top, into a German soldier-style march, heiling Hitler all the way, and back to the front, to take a final bow.

The first of three encores, "Scenes From An Italian Restaurant," got most of the floor section fans on their feet and up to the stage. When the lyrics "Cold beer, hot lights...My sweet romantic teenage nights," came around, Joel reached for his characteristic bottle of Heineken Light, and took a long, cold swig.

The band reappeared for "Get It Right The First Time," off of The Stranger, and then Joel ended it himself, as he usually does, with the classic "Souvenir."

And as the lights began fading for the last time, Joel gave his trademark send-off to the crowd: "Goodnight, Arizona, and don't take any shit from anybody."

Wednesday night, that's the only thing the audience didn't have to worry about.

Wulk wary of Windsor despite lackluster record

By Bob Petrie

One can almost be certain that whenever the ASU basketball team opens its season — it'll be against a weak sister.

But in the Sun Devils' case, it's always a weak sister of foreign origin.

In the past two years, ASU faced and disgraced teams from Cuba and Poland. Tonight's Activity Center lid-lifter (7:35 p.m.) will pit the Devils against our friendly neighbor of the North — Canada. It will, no doubt, be the third mis-encounter of the foreign kind, because the University of Windsor basketball team hasn't exactly raised any eyebrows since taking on teams down here.

In fact, the Lancers have been browbeaten three times on the American road — including losses to Utah (115-53) and Nebraska (113-69).

But then ASU just needs someone else to kick around, since the Devils have been knocking themselves crazy for the past five weeks or so. Coach Ned Wulk puts it in a bit nicer perspective.

"It's been a long haul in preparing for the season," said Wulk, entering his 23rd year at the Sun Devil helm. "I think that all of us, players and coaches alike, are looking forward to facing game conditions."

But the "game" opponents stop with Day One of the 1979-80 season, as ASU has to travel to face the perennially tough Houston Cougars for a Monday

SUN DEVIL STADIUM

Hawaii offers Sun Devils a chance at classy aloha

By Jim Elsleger

Perfunctorily, Hawaii calls its football stadium Aloha, which in Hawaiian means hello and good bye. The point being, you never know whether you're coming or going. But in Hawaii, who cares?

The islands are paradise away from home. No snow, no smog and no Cleveland. Of course, you might have to brush up on your breaststroke to get there if your finances are at the point of dilapidation.

ASU won't have to swim though. The Sun Devils are flying over to play football pineapple style this weekend, but not on a DC-10, so they should make game time.

What the Hawaii Rainbows will be trying to do this Saturday is the same thing UA was doing last Saturday, come up with a winning record. Feeding off of teams like Santa Clara (52-3), Prairie View (62-0) and Texas El-Paso (27-12), the Rainbows stand at 5-5 and are going for a second straight winning season. One satisfaction that ASU can derive from the trip to the land of volcanoes, is teams going for respectability and winning seasons won't have them to kick around anymore. This is the grand finale for the Sun Devils in a season that has been anything but memorabilia for grandmother's scrapbook.

The big question on the lips of 10's, is whether ASU can get up for the game. That is, is the motivation there to go a couple of million miles and cream a team that lost to Wyoming?

Devil fullback Gerald Riggs speaks for the mass. "We've done it all season, we can do it now." This is the crux, they have done it all season, winning when everyone in the universe saw no reason for them to roll out of bed. Especially after the Sun Devils had all their victories tossed in the dippy-dumpster. But they came out and wasted West Virginia like it was for all the marbles in the can.

Hawaii has been under adversity itself this season. In a conversation with head coach Dick Tomey, which Mountain Bell saw its way clear to make sound like it was coming from the moon, he said, "We have... offense... now, be able to... along with.... (garbled beyond recognition)."

What Tomey was trying to say above the static that made one believe Gorgo was trying to escape the Japanese scientists, was Hawaii has offensive problems. With both starting quarterbacks out with injuries sustained in last week's game with Colorado State, the Rainbows will have to use Blane Gaison, a free safety that hasn't thrown a pass for over two years. He did go in against CSU last week, and the creaking sound was deafening. Tomey thinks he'll be prepared though.

"He... go, practicing real... has (run Gorgo)," he said.

Hawaii isn't a team that needs all the words there anyway. They're a team that can surprise you if you hit the Hawaiian punch too much the night before a game, as evidenced by USC last year, when the Rainbows lasted until late in the fourth quarter, trailing only 7-5 before being snuffed out after the Trojans sobered up.

But the Sun Devils shouldn't have any such problem this Saturday, since they have the depth to go to with more inexperienced players if the front line has a hangover.

ASU hockey club hosts Greyhounds

The ASU ice hockey club will take on the Phoenix Greyhounds — a semi-pro team — in matches Friday and Sunday.

The Ice Devils, who have a record of 2-2 on the season, take on the Greyhounds Friday night at 10:45 and Sunday at 4:30 p.m. Both games will be at Oceanside Ice Arena in Tempe.

night game in the home of Lone Star Beer.

And from there, ASU returns to face three tough opponents in its Fiesta Classic tournament next weekend in the Activity Center. Southern Cal, Southern Illinois and Seattle will make their way to Tempe to try and unseat the Devils from their two-year reign as tourney champs.

But Wulk remains undaunted at the murky waters lurking ahead.

"There's no denying that we'll have our hands full with the kind of team that we've scheduled early," said the bespectacled mentor. "But the positive side of that situation is I hope we'll arise to the challenge and learn some valuable lessons prior to the heavy schedule of conference games in January and February."

Some of Wulk's Devils haven't seen any challenges at all — most notably freshmen guards Byron Scott and Paul Williams. Both will see plenty of action alongside seasoned sophomore Lafayette "Fat" Lever in the ASU backcourt.

Also, tonight's game with Windsor will mark the first real look at the Sequoia line Wulk plans to unveil up front this season. The forward wall, which includes juniors Alton Lister and Sam Williams plus senior Kurt Nimphius, total some 20 feet, 6 inches in combined height, which placed end-to-end might create a nice indoor skyscraper for the Activity Center.

But despite the definite height advantage the Devils will enjoy (Windsor's tallest starter is 6-foot-7), Wulk is wary.

"Several of their players have had a great deal of experience in international competition, they've been around, and they know how to play winning basketball."

Except in the United States.

Archery coach confident

ASU archery coach Sheri Rhodes has a lot of confidence in her men's and women's teams this year.

"We should do very well," she says about the Devils' chances in the Cal State-Los Angeles Invitational Saturday. "We have an unbelievably strong team this year, and Cal State-Long Beach and Cal State-Los Angeles are both in rebuilding years."

"Last year we won everything but men's team (at the LA tourney), and we want to win the men's this year as well," said Rhodes.

Both men's and women's teams have justified her confidence thus far this year—and the men's team, which figured to be rebuilding with two freshmen recruits, has been a plus due to the talent of the freshmen, Rhodes says.

First-year Sun Devils Glenn Meyers took second while Tom Stevenson took fifth at Henderson's Phoenix Open last weekend. Their performance coupled with a second from Cindy Vezzetti and a sixth for Robin Wools brought both men's and women's tourney titles to ASU.

The LA Invitational finishes ASU's fall archery schedule. The team starts its spring schedule after Christmas break.

Owens glad season ending

Relieved that the season is finally coming to an end, ASU head football coach Bob Owens is looking for a good time and a big win in Hawaii this Saturday.

"I will be relieved when the Hawaii game is over," he said. "Needless to say, it's been a tough season. First will come a complete reevaluation of our football program prior to setting a course for next year."

Owens said Wednesday he didn't know whether he would be back in the head coaching spot next season, or even if he would accept it if offered, saying he still has reservations about the position and nothing would be finalized until after the season anyway.

Whatever the situation next season, this season isn't over, and when the Sun Devils go up against the Rainbows, the team rushing title will be on the line, as quarterback Mark Malone goes into the contest leading with 460 yards, followed by running backs Robert Weathers with 427 and Newton Williams with 398.

Tom I don't understand. The coach should be proud of you. That just goes to show, these coaches just aren't fair, right Tom?

What's wrong Tom?

Not really. It was my touch down that lost the game.

Coach is mad at me.

Well, I can do wrong way.

Why Tom?

Well I was trying to tackle da guy with da ball, and then all of a sudden he dropped it. So I picked it up and made a touch down.
