

Panel says hiring rules violated

By Suzanne McElfresh

ASU acted "dishonestly and irresponsibly" by violating affirmative action regulations in the hirings of eight athletic department employees, a Faculty Senate-appointed committee has found.

The Select Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics presented a 12-page report and related documents to the Faculty Senate Monday, outlining its investigation into the hirings.

In question are the hiring policies for the selection of Dr. Joe Kearney as athletic director, Darryl Rogers as head football coach and six assistant coaches.

The committee decided to investigate the hirings because of protests by a large number of faculty, the report states.

A motion also was submitted, asking the Faculty Senate to accept the committee's report.

The motion also asks the Senate to condemn the administration's actions in failing to comply with University regulations in the athletic department hirings. The motion concludes with a request that the Senate ask ASU President John Schwada to correct the situation.

The Senate will debate the report at its March 24 meeting. If it accepts the recommendations, Schwada will be asked to file a plan with them by the April meeting.

In addition to specific allegations, the report states the administration has "seriously eroded its moral authority with respect to faculty and students, has placed the University in a very unfavorable posture, has opened the University to serious legal challenge, and has endangered millions of dollars of federal funds."

ASU administration has advanced the idea that intercollegiate athletics is a separate part of the University and able to live above the law, the report states.

"It (administration) decides what constitutes affirmative action. It advertises without deadlines. It interviews before ads appear. It makes no special efforts to recruit ethnic minorities. It hires people permanently under emergency procedures."

The report charges that administration files affirmative action hiring instruction forms only when it wants, rather than when it is required.

"It gives no reasons for non-hire. It refers to such actions as 'waiver.' Let us call it what it is — dishonesty and irresponsibility," the report says.

In each of 11 statements in the report, the committee lists the necessary procedures for hirings and the actual procedures followed. The statements include:

— Emergency hirings only can be temporary, as stated in a 1977 memo from then-Vice President of Academic Affairs Karl Dannenfeldt to all deans and chairs, and included in the ASU affirmative action guidelines.

The athletic department hirings were made under emergency guidelines according to a spokesperson for the search committee whose duty it was to fill the positions.

The Administration also has declared the hirings of the athletic director, the head football coach and six assistant coaches are permanent, that the decision is not subject to further discussion or negotiation and that it satisfies the requirements of affirmative action and University hiring policies.

— Good faith efforts must be directed to the development of goals and timetables for hiring under the affirmative action plan. But the University never has required the department of intercollegiate athletics to file any such plan.

— All openings must be advertised for a minimum of two weeks, according to the staff manual. The athletic director's position was filled two days after the ad appeared and the head football coach's position was filled 10 days after the ad appeared. No ad appeared for the six assistant coaches.

— No interview may be conducted until after the application deadline, according to the affirmative action plan. The athletic director was interviewed before an ad appeared. The head football coach was interviewed after an ad appeared with no specified closing date. The six assistant coaches were never interviewed.

— Recruitment is . . . to be carried out in a vigorous and systematic fashion designed to locate and encourage the candidacy of qualified women, members of ethnic minority groups and handicapped individuals, according to the staff manual.

Cosgrove criticizes proposed boards

By Lori Welaraub

An Associated Students finance committee proposal to establish a Human Affairs Board is "a giant step backward" but has a better than 50 percent chance of gaining the Senate's approval, the ASASU campus affairs vice president said Tuesday.

"There is no need for a Men's Affairs Board (one of the boards to be included under the HAB) or any other token board," Kevin Cosgrove said. "I will not support the idea because it creates a bureaucracy within a bureaucracy."

The ASASU Senate Finance Committee has submitted a proposal to the ASASU Senate to establish a HAB, which would encompass the already existing Women's Affairs Board and Consumer Affairs Board (currently known as Consumer Services), in addition to the proposed Men's Affairs Board, Political Affairs Board, Minority Affairs Board and an Academic Affairs Board.

The committee voted to allot $19,080 to the HAB and keep $4,000 in a conditional fund to be allocated with the full approval of the Senate. The HAB, WAB and MAB directors would be the only positions funded and the other boards would be staffed by volunteers.

Cosgrove said he thinks the Senate will pass the proposal because the senators on the finance committee are "very influential" on the Senate.

ASASU Sen. Kevin Daehnke said the committee recommended the idea because of a need to have other special interest groups represented on campus.

He also said he hopes students will have a lot of input in deciding which groups they would like to see represented in ASASU.

The committee's proposal prompted the resignation Tuesday of Barbara Greenway, a WAB co-director, over what she calls an attempt by the finance committee to diffuse the WAB.

Nancy Arbuckle, the other WAB co-director, said she sees the finance committee's decision as a demotion.

"I have not heard any feedback from men about the creation of a MAB," she said. "I think men are just threatened by us and by our success."

Daehnke said he denies the move is a demotion and said that aside from Association Graphics and Advertising, the WAB received the largest increase in monies as compared to any other ASASU board.

"The WAB was allocated $2,425 in 1979-80. Next year, it is allotted $7,800," he said. "That amounts to a 322 percent increase."

Campus Affairs Committee Director John Yates said the HAB proposal might be unconstitutional under the ASASU constitution.

"The issue should have been raised by the bylaws committee, not the finance committee," he said.

However Daehnke said the committee's proposal cannot be called unconstitutional because it is only a recommendation.

"All the accusations of our proposal being unconstitutional just don't apply," Daehnke said.

ASASU Activities Vice President Lori Tanner said there is a question of unconstitutionality because the finance committee has recommended a major bylaws change.

"What the committee has done is fund something which is not in the bylaws so a major revision would be needed," she said.

Tanner said she thinks the HAB is a good idea conceptually but realistically, she doubts whether it could be staffed.

"The finance committee has almost cut the staff in half and still asks it to do the same job," she said. "It could be a step in the wrong direction."

Cosgrove said he doubts the boards with non-funded directors will work because it is "extremely difficult" to run a staff with all volunteers.

"It's hard to count on volunteers regularly," he said. "The WAB is really the only group with dedicated volunteers."

Cosgrove also said he felt the committee was out of line in recommending the HAB because "most of the student senators do not know what really goes on at ASASU and if they did, they would know the changes probably wouldn't work."

CARTER, REAGAN BIG WINNERS IN N.H.

CONCORD, N.H. — President Carter defeated Sen. Edward Kennedy in New Hampshire's presidential primary election Tuesday night, pushing Kennedy toward the brink of political collapse. Ronald Reagan won the Republican primary in a landslide, and reclaimed command of the race for the GOP presidential nomination. In partial returns, Carter was gaining half the primary vote, and was leading Kennedy by a comfortable 13 percentage points. Reagan won big over former United Nations Ambassador George Bush and five other GOP candidates. His margin was better than 2-to-1.

REAGAN FIRES CAMPAIGN MANAGER

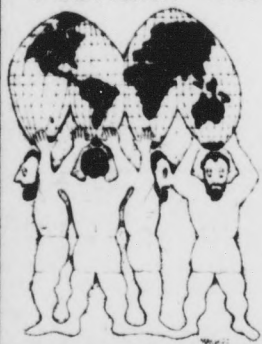

MANCHESTER, N.H. — Ronald Reagan fired his presidential campaign manager Tuesday night, even as the votes were being counted in New Hampshire's presidential primary election. He named former Securities and Exchange Commissioner William J. Casey to replace John P. Sears. Two other top campaign aides in the Reagan campaign resigned in apparent protest of the firing. Reagan said he acted to put more emphasis on "the people-to-people type of campaigning" and to reduce campaign expenditures.

NRC READY TO ISSUE NUKE PERMITS

WASHINGTON — The Nuclear Regulatory Commission is ready to begin licensing nuclear power plants again for the first time since the Three Mile Island accident, NRC Chairman John F. Ahearne told Congress Tuesday. Ahearne said his agency's self-imposed moratorium — he called it a "pause" — could end in the next few days when the NRC considers granting an interim operating license for a plant near Chattanooga, Tenn.

Train route may change to include stop by ASU

By Kelly Smith

The shuttle train that transports commuters over the Salt River via a railroad bridge may be stopping near ASU if University requests are approved by the Arizona Department of Transportation.

University Provost Paige Mulholland said Tuesday suggestions have been made to ADOT officials to reroute the shuttle train to stop near ASU.

But an ADOT official said the request for an additional stop at ASU will "most likely" not go into affect.

"We are not considering it at this time because we have had quite a bit of response at the existing stops so far," Harry Wolfe said.

"The train has been packed every day," he said. "We had more riders today (Tuesday) than we did on Monday — and it was jammed on Monday."

The five-car Amtrak passenger train carried 3,000 persons Monday, the first day. Officials said hundreds of "would-be" passengers were left behind because of a lack of space.

An extra stop near ASU would mean 20 additional minutes of travel time, ADOT told Mulholland.

Harvey Friedson, Tempe traffic engineer, said an attempt is being made to get the train to make additional stops in Tempe.

"I don't think it's possible for the train to stop at ASU because the track in front of the stadium is only a spur line, not a main line," he said. "But we are trying to get them to make stops at the Tempe railroad station and at Daily Park."

Southern Pacific Railroad officials said another car will be added to the shuttle train in about three days.

"We're bringing in one more car from Los Angeles and we're trying to bring in more if we can," said Mary Reeves of Southern Pacific's Tucson division.

Jack Penick, ASU's vice president of business affairs, said University officials have made several suggestions to ADOT to make travel over the river easier for the Tempe community.

"We have asked them to consider several plans," Penick said. "We are trying to see if we could get a shuttle bus to run from Fedmart to the University after the train drops people off there."

The train runs from 5:30 a.m. to 2 p.m. and from 4 to 10 p.m. weekdays. Stops are made at Third Avenue and Robson in Mesa, the Tempe Fedmart at Broadway and McClintock, AResearch at 36th Street and Airline Way in Phoenix, and Fourth Avenue and Jackson in Phoenix.

The cost is $1 to ride the train and exact change is required.

Neeb Hall Film Series shows 'X-rated' movie

By Ellen Haggerty

A film with a self-imposed X rating has been shown at Neeb Hall, although neither ASU President John Schwada nor the Neeb Hall Film Series director knew about the rating.

The 1975 film "Female Trouble," written and directed by John Waters, was shown Friday and Saturday nights at Neeb Hall. Waters stamped the film with his own X rating, but the movie was never seen nor rated by the reviewing board of the Motion Picture Association of America.

According to state laws, films given an X rating by the MPAA may not be seen by anyone under 17. Schwada's two-month-old ban prevents these films from being shown at ASU by any campus group.

But Michael Harner, Neeb Hall Film Series director said he did not know about the self-imposed rating.

"We're in the business of showing films, not rating them," he said.

Schwada said he did not know about the rating, and has been going by the standard rating system as determined by the MPAA.

A program consultant for New Line Cinema, a New York film distributor for the Neeb series, said Waters rated the film "X" because of its anti-morality subject matter.

"He was trying to take morality to its depths, to gross everybody out," the consultant said. "This was the final thing. It completes the circle."

"Female Trouble" stars Divine, a 350-pound transvestite, as Dawn Davenport, who begins in the film as a rebellious high school student and ends up in the electric chair.

Throughout the film there is sexual innuendo and violence, although no explicit sex is shown.

The New Line Cinema consultant said Waters has a reputation for making offbeat, cult-type films to which he gives "X" ratings.

Lori Tanner, ASASU activities vice president, said the MPAA is "the law as far as ratings are concerned."

"A self-imposed rating doesn't hold water," said Tanner.

She said the director of the film "Deep Throat" could have given his film a "G" rating, although it officially still would be rated "X."

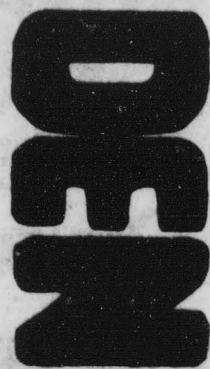

George Hamm, vice president for student affairs, said, "I've never heard of the self-imposed X rating before, I don't know what that is."

He said a subcommittee of the Student Affairs Advisory Council, which reports to him, is considering the formation of a student film reviewing board to judge the appropriateness of the content of films.

But Harner said he opposes the idea.

No non-Michigan Staters need apply

Apparently it's not only students who think the administration plays fast and loose with vital issues of concern to the University community. Professors are calling spades spades, too.

Members of the Faculty Senate select committee on intercollegiate athletics have openly challenged the actions of the ASU administration by declaring Tuesday that it allowed the department of intercollegiate athletics to be "above the law" in hiring the new athletic director, head football coach and football assistant coaches in violation of federal affirmative action guidelines.

In no uncertain terms, based on statements contained in a 12-page report prepared by the committee assigned by the Senate to investigate the hirings, the panel condemned the administration for "seriously eroding its moral authority with respect to faculty and students."

The Senate also stated that in hiring Athletic Director Joe Kearney, head football coach Darryl Rogers, and six assistant coaches, the administration "has placed the University in a very unfavorable posture, has opened the University to serious legal challenge, and has endangered millions of dollars in federal funds."

Opinion Editor

The federal millions are those that are awarded state institutions like ASU for complying with federal guidelines. Affirmative action regulations are among those guidelines.

These rules were designed by the federal government to insure that applicants for positions in all institutions receiving federal funds are treated equally, with selection of persons not based on race, creed, color, national origin or sex.

One of them states that so-called "emergency hires," as the new athletic officials were termed, be employed in a temporary capacity only. Yet University administrators have continually stated these new officials are permanent.

Another specifies that the athletic department should file an affirmative action plan, stating the department's goals in hiring personnel from ethnic and minority groups. The athletic department has never, ever filed any such document.

Still another stipulates that permanent positions be popularly advertised for at least two weeks. Kearney was hired two days after solicitations appeared in the media; Rogers was hired 10 days afterward.

ASU President John Schwada has been asked by the Senate to report back to it concerning correction of these whopping errors by its March meeting.

The athletic department is not above the law. Nor is it, as the committee contends, "a separate part of the University with special problems."

Kearney, Rogers and the assistants should tender pro forma resignations to the administration as permanent staff members and ask that their status be changed to temporary pending a new search and rehiring for the permanent positions.

Money is doing a lot of talking in this situation. Thankfully, so is the faculty, which is rightfully concerned with the equal opportunity employment of all applicants for University positions who are duly qualified to fill them.

Letters to the Editor

Who's asinine?

Editor:

In response to Lauren Ann Leigh's letter [Letters, Feb. 26], it is very obvious she is the one who is asinine. For he has no idea what she is writing about.

The behavior exhibited on New Row Monday night, Feb. 18, was not at all what Lauren speculated it to be.

There is always some rivalry between the fraternities on New Row whether it be friendly or not. During the blackout (all 40 minutes of it), all of New Row forgot about rivalry and had a good time with each other during a battle of fireworks, skyrockets, etc.

After the power returned, all ended in a good overall feeling. Everyone who was outside (about 500 guys) then gathered together and talked about the event.

All in all, I feel as do many others that the relations between each house improved much due to this event.

Also, what about the girls on every floor of Manzanita [Hall] who give strip shows every time we shine a light up there? Could we call this an attractive nuisance?

Draft no equalizer

Editor:

First of all, I am opposed to registration for the draft for both men and women. However, I feel women in particular have a political necessity to fight the draft. For centuries women in our society have been oppressed and kept out of the U.S. Constitution.

Now Carter wants us to use violence to prove our worthiness. Carter should not even attempt to register and draft women before we are guaranteed these equal rights under the U.S. Constitution. Fighting is no way of giving women these rights. Who wants to defend and die for a country that cannot even assure us of our equality?

The women's movement has always been dedicated to the idea that problems can be solved without the use of violence, and we should continue to pursue this objective of attaining our equal rights without being forced to sacrifice ourselves.

Olympic hugs & kisses get more political gold

We have been told by the president of the United States the reason for boycotting the Summer Olympics in Moscow is due to the Russian invasion of Afghanistan. Since Mr. Carter had no other alternative, after letting the U.S. conventional armed forces fall into disarray, the Olympics were cited as a sure-fire way to hurt the Russians where it counts—homeland propaganda.

After all, what can the Russians tell their comrades when half the free world doesn't show up in July for the political propaganda show of the century?

The common belief in America is that the Communist countries use sports for propaganda reasons while the West doesn't dilute athletics with the impurities of politics.

And yet as the final seconds expired of the U.S. hockey victory over Finland Sunday, there was Vice President "Fritz" Mondale jumping around and waving his arms in glee. Now at first, one may erroneously say, "Hey, Fritz digs hockey, man. He's not there for political reasons."

Sure. This misplaced patriotic inbred thought that the U.S. doesn't use sports for political purposes was thankfully corrected by a post-victory phone call from Carter, who mumbled something about having one eye on Iran and the economy and the other eye on the hockey game.

Is he trying to have us conjure up an image of the president hard at work and taking just enough time to say, "Good work" to a bunch of young college kids from the upper Midwest just because he was happy and proud of them?

Mr. Carter was using this great athletic achievement as a purely political overture to keep the current wave of Cold War Revisited nationalism pumped up. After all, Mr. Carter has found the surfer's dream wave and he's not about to jump off until the Democratic nomination is secured.

Mr. Carter's skillful infringement into the world of athletic competitions has left him a political "winner" while killing off America's Summer Olympic team with one blow and then deftly using the Winter Games as a staged media "good guy" show.

The American hockey win over the Soviet Union was remarkable because the Russians are the best team in the world. Mr. Carter's calculated intrusion into a magnificent athletic event was a carefully calculated attempt to gain political brownie points at any opportunity, including an area of American life where politics is supposedly taboo.

A strange paradox emerges as relations deteriorate between America and the Soviet Union. Sports politics, a Soviet characteristic Americans have traditionally despised now has become an acceptable standard of behavior by our leaders.

any effort in this regard. The results, however, suggest that a vigorous and systematic attempt was not made.

— An affirmative action hiring information form must indicate recruitment procedures and reasons for hire or non-hire of candidates, according to a memo to the Search Committee on Intercollegiate Athletics from Dr. Anthony Martinez, the assistant provost for affirmative action.

But the forms contain no mention of recruitment of ethnic minorities or women. Reasons for non-hire are listed only as "not as qualified as top candidate."

According to the statement, the administration's explanations for the hiring procedures state a genuine emergency existed, requiring rapid filling of the positions. For that reason, affirmative action requirements were waived.

Provost Paige Mulholland and V. Alonzo Metcalf, vice president for administration, were unavailable for comment. President Schwada refused comment until he had seen a copy of the report.

Mexican site being studied by scientists

Three ASU anthropologists have started their research project in the Mexican state of Oaxaca.

Gary Feinman, visiting assistant professor of anthropology, and graduate students Barbara Macnider, Oak Brook, Ill., and Linda Nicholas, Atlantic, Iowa, said the first few days of work have been busy.

They reported finding several fairly large occupation units including one multicomponent site having 10 mounds.

The ASU anthropologists believe it to be an early Post-Classic ceramic production center.

Other ASU anthropology students will be assigned to the project this summer.

Regent to resign if appointed as U.S. District Court judge

By Clare Gramer

A member of the Arizona Board of Regents said Tuesday he will resign from his regent post if he is appointed as a judge to the U.S. District Court.

Regent Earl H. Carroll, 54, was recommended Friday by Sen. Dennis DeConcini, D-Ariz., to fill one of two vacant federal judgeships in Arizona. To be appointed to the position, Carroll must be nominated by President Carter and confirmed by the U.S. Senate.

Carroll said if he is appointed to the judgeship, retaining his position on the Board of Regents possibly would create a conflict of interest.

"I'm sure some people would view it as a conflict of interest if I were to be a judge and a regent as well," Carroll said.

Paul Wattles, DeConcini's assistant press secretary, said Carroll would not be required to resign from his position on the board, but that the possibility of conflicting interest might create a problem.

"It is quite conceivable that a case would come before him that would present a problem where he would be forced to refuse to hear it," Wattles said.

Carroll, a Phoenix attorney, was appointed to the Board of Regents in 1978 by the late Gov. Wesley Bolin. His term on the board is not scheduled to end until January 1986. As a regent, he is paid no salary.

The judgeship Carroll was recommended for was created under the 1979 Omnibus Judgeship Act. The act established three new District Court judgeships in Arizona, two of which are in Phoenix and the other in Tucson.

Michael Nevels, a deputy clerk in the District Court, said the act was part of a bill that authorized the addition of 150 judgeships throughout the country to combat increasing case loads at the Appellate and District court levels.

"The case load is increasing 15 to 20 percent per year in Phoenix alone," Nevels said. "The judgeships were created in order to move criminal and civil trials on at the fastest pace possible."

One of the three judgeships was filled with the appointment of Valdemar Cordova, who was recommended to the position by DeConcini. The judgeship in Tucson currently is vacant.

Wattles said DeConcini originally recommended Nicholas Udall, 67, a relative of U.S. Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., to fill the judgeship that Carroll was recommended for.

But President Carter refused to nominate Udall to the position on the basis of his age, Wattles said.

Carroll is a native of Arizona. He is a graduate of the UA, with degrees in business and law. He began his private law practice in Phoenix in 1952.

Republican campaign managers to debate presidential platforms

By Jamie Johnson

Arizona campaign managers for seven Republican presidential candidates will meet tonight at ASU to debate the issues on behalf of their respective candidates.

Sen. Howard Baker, George Bush, John Connally, Rep. Phillip Crane, Sen. Robert Dole, Ben Fernandez and Ronald Reagan will be represented by their campaign directors at 7:30 p.m. in the MU Pima Room.

The debate, which is sponsored by the ASU College Republican Club, will be structured following the same type of format as the Republican debate in Iowa prior to that state's January caucuses.

Bruce Blakeman, president of the club, said each representative will be allowed three minutes for an opening statement. The remainder of the time will be reserved for questions from the audience. The questions will not be previously screened, and Blakeman said he is encouraging people to come prepared to quiz the participants.

Each question will be directed at one candidate's representative, and the others will have the option of a one-minute rebuttal.

When the question-answer period is over, each campaign manager will be given two minutes to summarize.

"All the participants have been appointed by the candidates' national committees as direct representatives of the candidates," Blakeman said.

Also, Elaine Lust will speak for Crane, Tom Rawls for Howard

Baker, Bill Baker for Bush and Tom VanSycle for Reagan.

Blakeman said he hopes the debate will bolster the "political apathetic attitude" on campus as well as "provide a forum to voice opinions."

Board considers delay

The Arizona Board of Regents may enact a tuition payment deferment for students affected by new federal regulations prohibiting the release of loan money until the first day of class, a regents representative said late Monday.

"It (the ruling) is an administrative snarl that needs to be unsnarled and, it's exactly the kind of problem the regents should solve," said Dr. Robert Huff, regents executive coordinator.

Financial aids officer James Barnhart said Monday that federal regulations do not allow federally insured and guaranteed student loan money to be given out until the first day of class.

Meetings planned for big b

By Jamie Johnson

Sharon Curtis, 8, sat quietly staring at the floor of the school bus, not wanting to think about going home. Whether her mother would be there or not was a question she faced every day. And today Sharon had so much to tell her.

The bus turned the last corner, and Sharon glanced down the street toward the house. Her younger brother was there, out in the street playing with his friends. This meant that he probably didn't go to school again today, and also that their mother wasn't home yet either.

When she got off the bus at the corner, Sharon stood for a minute, turned away from her house and started walking.

Coming down the street about six blocks away, a familiar sight greeted her eyes. She started running to meet the yellow Volkswagen that rambled along toward her.

When the car stopped in the middle of the street, a tall woman got out and held her arms out to Sharon. With tears in her eyes, Sharon began an excited discourse on the events of the day.

The woman in the yellow Volkswagen is Sharon's big sister. A big sister who is not related by blood, but through Big Sisters of Arizona. The two were matched through a month-long selection process and extensive interviews to ensure an optimum relationship that will last for years.

g big brothers or sisters, an organizational meeting is held monthly where a film is shown and requirements involved are discussed. At the meeting, an interview date is scheduled between the candidate and a caseworker.

When the candidate goes for the interview, he or she must be prepared for a battery of questions about his or her background, ethics, drug or alcohol involvement, values and sexual morals.

This is essential for the caseworker to be able to match the candidate with an appropriate little brother or sister. If the person has a particular geographic location in mind or an age preference for his or her little brother or sister, that too is discussed.

After the interview, the caseworker looks over the characteristics of the candidate and of a potential match. The list of possibilities is narrowed down within about a month until finally the best match is chosen. The big brother or sister is called in again and told about the prospective match.

A list of activities is provided by both Valley Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Arizona. Suggestions range from going to the zoo to window shopping. The two organizations also plan separate holiday parties, but they rarely have scheduled activities for both groups together.

Those people who are already matched with a little brother or sister and who would be interested in an ASU group should call Barnard at

Ned nothing but 'angel' to some

By Charlie Diaz

Homo sapiens, like most creatures on this quasi-polluted earth, have a tendency to dribble excessively during their "wonder years".

When they get older, if they still like to dribble, it is socially acceptable to do a different type of dribbling — on a basketball floor with a ball, not on their shirts.

If they are good at dribbling on the court, a high school career, perhaps college and maybe the pros loom large on the zone defense of life.

This is what happened with ASU basketball coach Ned Wulk, his high school — yes, high school — basketball coach said.

Les Ansorge, 70, said Wulk was the kind of kid every mother would want her daughter to bring home. Jack Armstrong would have been a second-teamer on the All-American boy squad with Wulk around.

"In those days," Ansorge said following the Feb. 16 ASU-USC game, "Ned probably didn't know what a smoke or a drink was. As a student, he was a very, very good one. He was in the upper 10 percent of his class."

But the trouble with angels, as Wulk seems to have been, is that they may be involved in hoopla other than the basketball variety.

"After he was off the court," Ansorge said, "Ned was jolly and had a good time. He had a dry sense of humor."

Wulk won 13 varsity letters at Marion High School in Marion, Wisc. and was a two-time all-state choice.

After graduation, Wulk attended LaCrosse State Teachers College, had a stint in the infantry and played a couple years of semi-pro basketball.

Wulk, a 5-foot-10 center ("He was the biggest guy I ever coached," Ansorge said) on Marion High's 1938 Wisconsin state championship basketball squad was the mucleage that held the team together, Ansorge said.

"Ned directed the team. It was a brotherly team and all the starters were in the top ten (statewide) scorers."

"He was one of the best high school free throwers I ever saw and probably the best athlete I ever saw. He was aggressive, steady and smart."

The basis for those 1935-38 Marion playoff teams Wulk was on was formed when Wulk was in the sixth grade and playing on a grade school team with a familiar name.

"Ironically, I played on a squad called the Wildcats," Wulk said. "A grade school teacher formed the team and all of my teammates and I played together through high school."

A big part of the Marion teams was a full-court press. "In the early days, we were one of the first teams to use the press and people didn't know what to do," Ansorge said.

"That (the press) was in the days when everyone was not as effective offensively because we used set shots and not jumpers," Wulk said. "We either took the set shot or drove to the basket. There were probably better drivers in those days."

But even with the coming of the jumper, Wulk still employs the press. "We used it extensively on the (Lionel) Hollins teams," Wulk said.

Ansorge had seen some of Wulk's teams before — some stinkers and some not so smelly. He liked the Devils against USC.

"It was not a hot shot game, not played that well by either team," Ansorge said, but "with the big fellows opening, and if Kurt (Nimphius) doesn't get in foul trouble, they're one of the better teams in the country. The guards handle the ball well."

Stephans, Pagel lead ASU sweep

The Devils wrapped up their two game series with Laverne, sweeping a doubleheader 8-3 and 5-3. The Devils will put their 15-4 record on the line against Cal State-Dominguez Hills at Packard Stadium today.

By Jim Walters

Laverne moved into Packard Stadium Tuesday looking to grab its first win of the season. They're still looking as ASU swept a doubleheader 8-3 and 5-3.

Fortunately for the 0-5 Leos, they won't have to face the Sun Devils again this year, unless they pull their socks up and make the NCAA playoffs.

The Devils jumped to an early 3-0 lead in the second game and held on through the shortened seven-inning affair to take the decision.

The Devils opened the scoring in the bottom of the first inning when Mike McCain singled through the middle and went to second on a passed ball. Mike Sadders singled to center, scoring McCain and giving the Devils a 1-0 lead.

ASU extended its lead in the bottom of the second inning. Russ Stephans singled to left and Mike Pagel sacrificed him to second.

Steve Sproesser wild pitched Stephans to third and he scored on an error by catcher Jeff Jones, who tried to catch Stephans at third. Bert Martinez walked and Stephans scored on an errant throw by the Leos' first baseman Barry Cramer, upping ASU's lead to 3-0.

The Leos scored their first run of the game in the top of the third inning.

Tim Marshall, batting for Jerry Adair, opened with a double and came around to score on a single by Bruce Hines.

The Devils responded with two runs in the bottom of the fourth.

Alvin Davis walked and and Stephans chopped an infield hit towards third to put two on with no outs. Sproesser wild pitched the runners up a base, Pagel then singled to center to drive in the final two Devil runs.

The Leos added their final two runs in the top of the sixth with a two-run home run by George Hinshaw. It was too little too late as the Devils held on.

In the first game, Russ Stephans drove in four runs on three hits to lead an 11-hit ASU attack.

Pitcher Tom Hawk went all the way for the Devils to raise his record to 3-0 on the season.

The Leos opened the scoring in the first inning when Sammy Perez walked and scored on a triple through the gap in left field by

Byron Scott earns honor

Byron Scott has been named Pac-10 player of the week for his efforts in Sun Devil wins over UCLA and UA. The 6-foot-4 freshman guard from Inglewood, Calif., scored a total of 52 points in the games — 21 against the Bruins and 31 against the Wildcats.

He is the only freshman selected for the honor this season. The Devils conclude Pac-10 play with games at Washington State and Washington this weekend.

In rankings announced this week, ASU was placed 14th by UPI and 15th by AP for their highest rankings of the season.

Wooden enjoying post-glory years

By Jim Walters

It is March 31, 1975.

The scene is San Diego, Calif., the occasion is the NCAA basketball championship game. It's UCLA vs. Kentucky.

The first half ends with UCLA on top 43-40.

The tension mounts as the final 20 minutes unfold.

UCLA outlasts Kentucky 92-85 and John Wooden has his tenth national championship.

There is a smile on Wooden's face as he makes his way to the locker-room. His players take turns cutting down the nets. The crowd is going wild.

Wooden passes through the doors of the lockerroom for the last time as head coach of UCLA. He announced his retirement following the game.

The man who built a dynasty leaves in style.

Whatever happened to the Wizard of Westwood? The man who's touch turned basketball teams into solid gold.

The legendary coach retired after winning ten championships in 27 years, and seven straight from 1967-73.

He remained on the UCLA campus for awhile and then he slowly faded out of the picture.

"They keep a mailbox on campus for me and I am averaging about 60 letters every two weeks," he said. "I usually pick it up at nights to avoid attention."

He added that he basically stays away from the campus nowadays.

Wooden may be trying to keep a low profile on the UCLA campus but he has been putting in appearances on campuses around the country, covering basketball games for different conferences.

Wooden surfaced at ASU's Activity Center last Saturday for the ASU-UA game, doing color commentary for a national home box office television station.

"Besides doing college basketball, I have been giving speeches at colleges and business conventions, helping coaches with basketball clinics, writing a couple of books and running my summer camp programs," he said.

Retired?

"I like to keep busy," he said as he signed autographs for children of all ages gathered around him. He signed every one, making sure nobody went away dissatisfied.

"I enjoy being around youngsters," he said.

During the summer, his camps handle about 250 kids a week. They run for six weeks, five for the boys and one for the girls.

"We work on the fundamentals of the game," he said.

He treats the game the same on all levels of competition, even in the 8 to 11-year-old class. His record would seem to bear out his philosophy.

Wooden has the distinction of being the only member inducted into the NBA Hall of Fame as both a player and a coach.

He started his winning ways in high school, with the state championship, and carried it over to Purdue.

Warren "Piggy" Lambert was his coach at Purdue. Lambert is given credit for inventing the fastbreak style of basketball. Wooden is given credit for perfecting the fastbreak game into a high-powered offense.

Wooden ran the fastbreak in the college ranks. He taught it as well as he played it if his championships at UCLA are an indicator.

He tried his hand at professional basketball, playing with a team based in Cleveland before the NBA was established and was considered a very competitive player.

Now he is concentrating on another level of coaching.

"The fun in coaching is working with the youngsters, not the college

Golfers play in tourney

ASU's men's golf team travels to the eighth annual Pacific Coast Intercollegiate golf tournament today through Friday in Ontario, Calif.

Sun Devil golf coach George Boutell will take Jim Bertocino, Dan Weiskopf, Dan Forsman, David Lee, Eddie Kilthau and Brian Conser.

Among the 23 teams competing on the National Golf Course will be perennial powerhouse Brigham Young, UCLA, Stanford, USC and Arizona.

Kilthau and Bertocino are coming off a one-two sweep of the Arizona Intercollegiate held last week at Ahwatukee Country Club in Ahwatukee. Kilthau won medalist honors, beating Bertocino in a playoff.

Former UCLA cage coach keeping busy in retirement

John Wooden (seated), 27 years head coach at UCLA, compiling a remarkable 620-147 record, is now taking life a little easier, doing some broadcast work and running camps around the country. He was in Tempe Saturday for the ASU-UA basketball game.

students," he said. "The youngsters are interested in how you do things, the college players always want to know why."

Wooden doesn't think the college game has changed that much, but thinks the teams are more balanced now.

"ASU and OSU deserve to be at the top of the conference," he said. "They appear a little more balanced than the other teams."

He couldn't say which team is the better of the two.

"The team that shows the best conditioning, fundamentals and team play will be difficult to handle."

"As far as UCLA is concerned I haven't really been involved with the school," he said.

Wooden has talked with Larry Brown who took over as head coach at UCLA this year.

"I have visited with him a couple times but I'm not going to give him advice because I don't think it is my place," he said. "I like him, we have a friendly relationship and I think we will keep it there."

Wooden isn't surprised with what Brown has done this year. "This is a game of fundamentals...that's the game."

But after 27 years of coaching, enough was enough.

"I am happy with what I am doing. I'm doing what I want to do, not what I have to do."

Are bargain diamonds a girl's best friend?

Hardly. Because they tend to be inferior stones, often not worth the discount price. That's a "bargain" you can't afford. Instead, come in and see our collection of quality gems, fairly priced. We base our diamond pricing on cutting, color, clarity and carat weight of the stone. As American Gem Society jewelers we guarantee the quality of every diamond we sell. You can be sure of getting true value for your money. It's a friendly way of doing business.

ANNIE HALL

ASASU NEEB HALL "Double or Nothing" FILM SERIES presents, as a service to the University community:

a double feature
Thursday, Friday and Saturday
"The In-Laws" at 7 p.m.
"Annie Hall" at 9 p.m. see both for only $1.50
(In compliance with the Sherman Anti-Trust Act of 1890, Neeb Hall does not practice price discrimination; therefore, no I.D. is required to take advantage of this low price.)

That's not all.
See another double feature this Sunday.
"Koko-A Talking Gorilla" at 6:30 p.m.
"Jane is Jane Forever" at 8:30 p.m.
for the usual $1.50

"Koko" is the story of a gorilla who learned how to communicate with people like you and me by using sign language and a 35mm camera. She quit the MUAB film committee as a result of their refusal to show double features. Required attendance for students of anthropology and the behavioral sciences.
"Jane" deals with sociologically deviant behavior; an old woman is ostracized because she thinks she's Tarzan's mate. You'll love it.

Caller creates news in newsless nook

The call of the week came in this morning, from a gentleman concerned over the lack of local press coverage on the possibility of ineligible athletes at USC and UCLA.

The concern was palpable. After watching his Sun Devils take the bullseye shot from every angle of every paper from here to Kalamazoo, he felt it was about time someone else became the whipping post. Enough was enough about ASU. Let's concentrate our attentions on the might Trojans and invincible Bruins was the cheer.

Okay. Enough is enough. ASU has had its face rubbed in the dirt for eons. It will not wash easily.

And there is nothing wrong with broadcasting just what the two California schools are up to these days. Let the masses know exactly what the undaunted athletic leaders of the great Pac-10 are made of.

What they're made of is the same thing everyone else is — humanity, which is highly susceptible to error.

The Trojans and Bruins have erred, possibly to the point of making ASU look like a choir corner.

Yes concerned citizen, both schools are being investigated by the conference for possible ineligibility of athletes and other possible conference violations that the Pac-10 office cannot elaborate on at this time.

Conference Public Relations Director Jim Muldoon has confirmed the Pac-10 is indeed investigating. They got underway last week, and are still in the early stages, so at this point, all that can be said is the hunt is on.

"We're still investigating Oregon," Muldoon said, "so right now we're a little short handed. USC and UCLA are in the early stages and as far as any possible violations or any probations, there is nothing definite. We could have something by the end of the week, possibly."

There you have it, the dead skunk in the middle of the road.

Actually, what you have is a party of investigations by the conference investigative committee that has reached such large proportions, that there is a backlog. The backlog extends on into the press. The way it is going, investigations, violations, probations, forfeits, etc. etc. etc., could run from now to when the hostages are released.

What we have to look for is motive. Is there proper perspective in jumping on every school that tries to sneak a few athletes through that can't walk and chew bubble gum at the same time.

Humbug, the press doesn't need motive, the press needs only information.

True as they come. But trying to get facts out of the conference or the NCAA about investigations is not like falling over bunk beds.

Muldoon said he isn't even sure if the conference will release the findings on UCLA and USC.

"It depends on what we find," he said. "We'll probably release something on the matter, but again, what we make public depends on what we find, if we find anything wrong."

The NCAA hasn't been called in yet as far as Muldoon knows, but he said he is almost sure they will be.

"The NCAA may be used to help us, because we have limited resources," Muldoon said.

Such was the case with ASU. The proportions of the possible violations by ASU overwhelmed the conference investigative office, and the NCAA was called in for help.

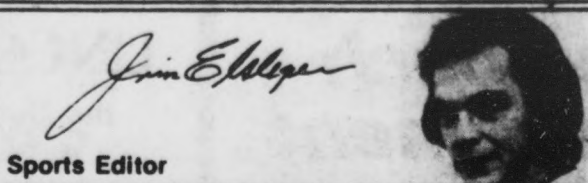

USC is being investigated after it was learned that 34 athletes were to receive credit for courses they were not attending. The school forced the resignation of its debate coach and suspended an academic advisor last Thursday. Each of the athletes was enrolled in one of three speech courses given on campus by the debate coach.

Football players from UCLA were reportedly given credit for taking classes at a community college that they never attended, resulting in the current conference investigation.

Muldoon said the investigations in some ways parallel the one done at ASU, but it is too early to formulate a definite comparison.

"We're jumping the gun a little, comparing what happened at ASU," he said. "Sure, there's a chance games might have to be forfeited. What penalties are given depends on what is found. Right now, you can't rule anything out."

More about Devils win over Leos

Tom Barnett.

From then on it was all Devils as they scored eight unanswered runs. The score was 8-1 after the fifth inning.

The Devils opened their scoring in the bottom of the first. With two outs, Mike Sodders walked and Bob Ferris doubled to put men on second and third.

Holmes walked to load the bases and Stephens singled to left, driving in Sodders and Ferris to give the Devils a 2-1 lead at the end of one.

The Devils added another run in the second when Martinez and Pagel walked to open the inning.

With one out, Mike McCain singled to center to score Martinez. The Devils led 3-1.

In the bottom of the third, Stephens doubled off the wall in left center. He went to third on a groundout and came home on a wild pitch by Pitcher Kendall Green.

In the fourth, Pagel beat out a small chopper to third. Sodders followed with a ground ball through the left side of the infield, Pagel hustling into third under the tag.

Ferris got aboard on an error by shortstop Jerry Adair as Pagel scored from third. Sodders moved over to third on the throw. Stephens singled driving in Ferris and Holmes.

Connection not Frenchy on recruiting information

So the investigations could cover anything from academic ineligibility to improper cleat tightening, and could result in anything from forfeiture of all games to 40 laps around the mulberry bush — or it could result in nothing.

Throwing light on the investigation of UCLA and USC is like throwing oil on a fire, all it can result in is a bigger heat than would otherwise be possible if you were burning just deadwood.

But as the saying goes, if you can't stand the kitchen, get out of the heat.

Between phone calls from concerned citizens, I placed a few dozen to Darryl Rogers, ASU football coach, trying to get a few comments on the new recruits. Frustration does not come easy. My finger looks like a blown out firecracker on the end, and Rogers is still not answering, returning, or commenting.

One bit of tid was found out through it all. Rogers was in a pow-wow with a group redesigning the ASU football uniforms. Now that is worth wearing your finger to a frazzle for. Film at 11.

Hello, what about the uniforms, will the recruits be wearing them?

shoplifting is stealing.
