ASU farm proposal flying high

By Clarisa Grabber

Acknowledging the total defeat of its attempt to abolish the ASU agricultural program, the Arizona Bored of Rejects approved a plan Monday to grow high-grade marijuana for commercial sale at ASU's experimental farm.

Rejects' executive coordinator Bobby Bluff said the proposal received unanimous approval at the March 31 bored meeting.

"We feel this will be an excellent way to augment ASU's budget," Bluff squealed. "Hopefully, the bill to push pot to cancer patients will pass. Then we can corner all the hospital pharmacies in the Valley."

Reject Rowdy Dumbbell said the bored got tired of trying to wipe out the agriculture department at ASU, and decided instead to try to "fix it up" by cultivating vast acreage of the famed "Maui Wowie."

"Even though we always favor UA, we'd rather switch than fight," Dumbbell opined.

"I think it will work out really well. And besides, we (the rejects) will get a discount on bags, which will be outasight, because Wowie can be hard to get around here."

Agriculture department chairman Pritchard Failtest said he is excited about the program, adding students who work at the farm are "inspired" by reject support.

"We all think it's great," Failtest said. "The ag students are high on the idea, because in payment for physical labor they will be guaranteed all the smoke they want—as long as their work doesn't slack off."

Failtest said the first seeds will be planted today.

"We hope to reap an enormous harvest in the fall," he added.

Chalquest and Bluff said it has not yet been determined whether ASU students will be allowed to purchase pot from the farm.

"It's highly doubtful," Bluff said. "We hope to sell most of it to the public so we can make as much money as possible. With the obligatory discounts to faculty and legislators, we would lose money if we offered it to students."

ASU sold; Wazoo to reign at Universityland

By Dizzy Gillespie

ASU has been purchased in its entirety by Walt Disney Productions, Inc., and as of today will be known as Universityland, the State Mess has learned.

John W. Schwastika, former ASU president, celebrated his new position as the Grand Wazoo of Universityland today by distributing free sno-cones on Yellow Brick Road East (formerly Cady Mall.)

During the dedication ceremonies, visitors were allowed to shake hands with Disney characters Mickey Mouse, Donald Duck and a new member of Tempe's fantasy family, Bwucey Wabbit.

Wazoo said he believes the Disney takeover will be a smooth one, adding "these kids have been living in Fantasyworld for so long they'll never know the difference."

Wazoo claimed his use of secret files outlining the off-duty activities of members of the state Legislature and the Bored of Rejects as blackmail tools was "necessary to make those bimbos see how much nicer life will be in Universityland than it was at dumb old ASU."

"They thought the idea was a little looney at first, but after I threatened to kiss and tell—uh, I mean tell all—they seemed to warm up to it," Wazoo said.

The former ASU chief executive said the official reason for the sale of the University's buildings, grounds, staff and students to Disney Productions was given as "financial insolvency."

"But I may as well spill the beans now that I've been appointed Grand Wazoo for life," he chortled. "I just couldn't stand those whiney college students one more minute! Running that nut farm was a 37,000-volt pain in the ass."

Wazoo said those young people who formerly attended classes at the defunct ASU could stay on as guides and groundskeepers, but he added "they'll have to clear out of the dorms pronto so we can pack those gullible winter visitors in there and start filling up my private piggy bank."

Universityland spokesman and assistant to the Grand Wazoo Beige Dullsullen said work already is under way to transform Tempe Butte into a roller coaster not unlike Disneyland's Space Mountain.

"We plan to have the little cars hurtle around the butte three or four times and then fly right off into oncoming traffic," Dullsullen said.

Other projects include covering what was once Fun Devil Stadium with a giant geodesic dome, equipping it with spontaneous jet propulsion and taking individual groups of 70,000 to view spacegames competition with other planets in Universityland's conference.

"It's the final frontier," Dullsullen sighed.

In a last-ditch effort to come up with $87,000 in misappropriated government loans, the ASU Financial Aids Office has announced it will sponsor a raffle in an attempt to cover its losses.

Dewey Swapper, director of financial aids, said prizes will include six tuition waivers, three Basic Educational Opportunity Grants and two short-term loans.

"It's the only thing left to do," Swapper said. "The car wash and bake sale we sponsored last week only raised $17."

Last spring, the office erroneously doled out $87,000 in loans in the government-sponsored Criminal Rehabilitation Action Program.

Swapper said the government has told ASU that it has two weeks to return all of the CRAP money or the National Guard will be sent in.

"We begged for an extension," Swapper said. "We promised it would never happen again. But they wouldn't listen."

Raffle tickets, which can be bought for $2 at Mathews Center, go on sale today. Swapper said the drawing will be held sometime in May, so winning students will be able to use their prizes to pay next fall's tuition.

Raffle tickets were scheduled to go on sale last week, but the sale had to be postponed when a financial aids officer mistook the tickets for food stamps and gave them out, free of charge, to students who happened to be passing by.

"That's all been straightened out," Swapper said. "And the officer who made that mistake has been reassigned to our Ajo bureau."

HOSTAGES IN IRAN TO BE RELEASED

TEHRAN — Militant students holding the American embassy said they would release the 50 hostages later this week, despite a Carter administration order the Shah not be returned. The terrorists said they would accept George Burns instead. Burns said he was looking forward to the trip. "There are a few 15 year old girls there I haven't met yet," Burns said.

JUNE CLEAVER DEAD AT 36

MAYFIELD — June Cleaver, mother of Beaver Cleaver, was found dead in her suburban home Monday. Her body was discovered at 9 a.m., legs neatly folded at the ankles. A policeman on the scene would not immediately reveal the cause of death, but later admitted she had been strangled with her own cultured pearls. Beaver said, "Does this mean she won't make lunch today?"

CARTER SAYS NO DIVORCE FROM ROSALYNN

WASHINGTON — President Carter said Monday there is no truth to the rumor that he is divorcing First Lady Rosalynn. "When I said I 'lusted in my heart' I meant Rosalynn would get a little too," he said. Rosalynn had no comment from her poolside perch at the Bon Marche in Reno, except to say her next campaign stop would be Hyannis Port.

KENNEDY PROMISES TO STAY IN RACE

HYANNIS PORT, Mass. — Sen. Edward Kennedy, D-Mass., said Monday 86 straight primary defeats were not reason enough to drop out from his Democratic presidential campaign. "I'm offering Americans a real alternative to that peanut farmer," Kennedy said. When asked how he lost more primaries then there were states with presidential preference votes, Kennedy answered, "It's those damned foreigners."

REAGAN COULD RETURN TO HOLLYWOOD

LOS ANGELES — Former Governor Ronald Reagan said he would return to his film career if he loses the presidential election in November. The one-time actor reportedly has signed a deal with Paramount Pictures, who already bought the screen rights to Reagan's new book "I Was Ripped Off By Conniving Democrats." Dom DeLuise has signed to play Jimmy Carter.

ANDERSON VOWS TO START THIRD PARTY

WASHINGTON — Rep. John Anderson,

R(?)-Ill., said Monday he would start a third party if not given the top spot on the Republican ballot in November. "If that doesn't work, I'll start a fourth or fifth party," Anderson said. "I came out of nowhere this year. Surely you don't expect me to go back!"

FARRAH SAYS NO TO 'CHARLIE'S ANGELS'

HOLLYWOOD — Alleged actress Farrah Fawcett said despite stories in the press, she was not returning to the television series that launched her fame. "I will not be replacing Shelly Hack on 'Charlie's Angels' next season," she said. "What — and give up my great film career?"

STALE MESS OFFICE BURNS DOWN

TEMPE — The Matthews Center offices of the Stale Mess burned to the ground Monday. Journalism exchange students from the state hospital put out today's issue, but editor Dizzy Gillespie said there was no truth to the rumor that the inmates had set fire to the press headquarters in order to get the prestigious jobs. "Hey, one of them is moving — bring the torch over here!" she said.

NO NEWS GOOD NEWS IN INDIA

NEW DELHI — Prime Minister Indira Gandhi Monday said no one was killed in India. "There wasn't a single flood, pestilence or any of the usual things that afflict this pit of a country for 24 hours," she said. "But I promise that I will try to get things back to normal by tomorrow, if I have to dynamite a dam myself."

PROXIMIRE AWARDS GOLDEN FLEECE

WASHINGTON — Sen. William Proxmire, D-Wis., awarded his Golden Fleece award for government waste Monday to ASU and the Stale Mess. "One look at that rag and there is no quarrel with this award," he said. Proxmire added that Stale Mess Editor Dizzy Gillespie petitioned for the award. "I thought it would look good on my resume," she said.

GOV. BROWN TO MARRY LINDA RONSTADT

LOS ANGELES — Gov. Jerry Brown said Monday he would marry rock singer Linda Ronstadt Saturday. "This election is going like hell," he said. "'Love Has No Pride' and I need the Eagles' votes." Ronstadt said, "If he thinks I'm marrying him to get the doper vote he's nuts. 'You're no Good' Jerry, and definitely a drag at parties. He expected me to wear shoes when I went to meet Begin and Sadat last year. Can you believe it?"

Poll predicts puzzler

The Stale Mess straw poll Monday revealed a new trend in presidential politics.

The front running Democrat and Republican contenders fared less well than local candidates.

President Carter was the choice of 6 percent of the 9,642,135 people polled by the ASU newspaper. Reagan also received 6 percent.

The surprise winner with 62 percent of the votes was Bo Derek, who the voters felt could tie up the loose ends in the economy.

Stale Mess editor Dizzy Gillespie was the runnerup with 26 percent. None of the respondents knew why they voted for her.

Punch said to strike real hard

By Raoul Duke

The newly created soft drink product "Polish Punch" is encountering numerous problems in the Tempe test market, a Federal Food and Drug Administration spokesman said Monday.

"We are getting very peculiar reactions from test subjects who happen to be of Polish descent and who also happen to be head football coaches," Dr. Timothy Leary said. "It is rather odd that no other cross-section of test subjects has been affected in quite the same way."

Leary said when the select Tempe test group ingested the beverage, no visible effects were seen until the subjects were exposed to a simulated situation in which one of their football players made a particular poor play. Then, "all hell breaks loose," Leary said.

"These coaches would rip helmets off players' heads, apply knees to the groin and deliver some of the best one-two punches you've ever seen," Leary said. "An interesting side effect was that the whole time this was going on, the coaches would be swearing in terms that would put sailors to shame."

The random violence is not the only problem being linked with the beverage, he added.

"After drinking Polish Punch for extended periods of time, the coaches develop an insatiable desire to call press conferences before their games and announce they've been fired," Leary said. "It's very curious, because when the coaches are questioned under oath, they are completely aware that they haven't been fired," he added.

Another problem with the soft drink, which is manufactured by Nos Legna, Inc., is an apparent serious memory impairment, he said.

"When the coaches are confronted with reports of their random violence or desire to announce their firing, they adamantly claim it's all made up and is part of a conspiracy," he said. "Even when the coaches are shown sworn testimony by witnesses they categorically deny the incidents."

One of the delayed reactions of the beverage Leary said, is an apparent obsession to begin filing lawsuits against anyone and everyone for millions of dollars.

"One coach filed a $50 billion lawsuit against his former grammar school football coach for lacking the discipline to participate in the Lombardi occupation," Leary said. "The tests aren't conclusive yet, but there also seems to be an interesting compulsion to locate and sue the nearest dragstrip operator for conspiracy."

ASU president bans hot films to closet

By Clarisa Grabber

The X-rated films banned from ASU's Neeb Hall, which were thought to have been stolen, have been discovered in a room adjoining the office of ASU President John W. Schwastika.

Campus Police Chief Georgie Boy said "a small assortment" of chains and whips also were found adorning the walls of the tiny room, which housed a film projector, 7-foot screen, and several mattresses.

Schwastika banned all X-rated films from campus in December. The reels found in his office were ones scheduled for screening by the Associated Stooges' Illicit Affairs Bored, as part of the Neeb Hall Film Series.

ASASU Activities Vice President Leery Fanner, who oversees the board, said she was tipped off about the whereabouts of the missing films by Schwastika's secretary, who was upset over

Schwastika's attempt to charge her admission to see "Deep Throat."

"I don't think it's fair that I be charged when all the (members of the Arizona Bored of) Rejects get to come in free," said secretary Merri Lyn Well. "He even gives them free popcorn."

Schwastika said he was upset at being revealed, but that he was glad it was "finally out in the open."

He defended his actions by saying the money he raised by charging admission to see the films has been put into a new scholarship fund for students coming from "sexually repressed" homes.

Bobby Bluff, Rejects' executive coordinator, said no action will be taken until the bored has "reviewed the content of the films" in order to determine the seriousness of Schwastika's actions.

It's April, fools.

—Dizzy Gillespie

It's high time we nip it in the bud

It's a black day in Universityland.

This time the wanton ones who seem determined to lead us into the jaws of debauchery have gone too far.

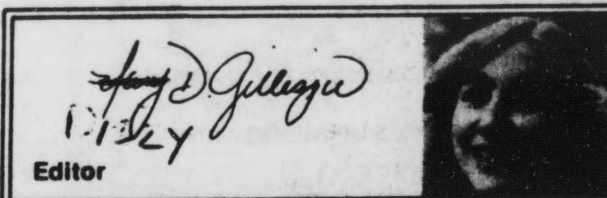

The time has come for the righteous students of this land to step forward, and in a single virgin voice decry those who would corrupt us!

If we do not act with haste, the Lord only knows what type of disgusting example our peerless leaders will think to set next.

Just look at the record. Last year, Rep. Pooper Scooper (R-Leisure World) and Rep. Flat Wrong (R-Legend City), two of our most vocal lawmakers, tried to force young, impressionable state University students to begin smoking cigarettes, drinking beer and driving fast cars, claiming these were good ways to "get your yaya's out," whatever that may mean. (We suspect it has some unwholesome connotation in underground legislative lingo.)

Then they tried to undermine our innocence on a more insipid level. Figuring (quite shrewdly, we might add,) that if they could get their hands on a student opinion leader and manage to indoctrinate him, they would have a good start on spreading the cancer of inebriation, sex (gasp!) and the Pogo throughout the student body.

So they forced a bill through to create a student member of the notoriously wanton Bored of Rejects. A thinly disguised ploy, to be sure! Our level-headed representative has held out so far, but only the Almighty can tell what the nefarious rejects have in store. (Beware those "executive sessions!")

But now-NOW comes the most brazen act of all. Our state leaders have given the OK to grow—be still, my heart—MARIJUANA—on the hallowed ground of this institution of higher learning.

It's almost too horrible to write, but the State Mess must serve as the vanguard of what little decency is left us.

A drug that the Reader's Digest has proven causes blindness, sterility, spontaneous abortions, night sweats and leprosy—to name only a few of the lesser effects.

A drug Paul Harvey has assured us is the single most potent threat to the youth of today—on campus!

Well, we have fought the good fight. It's all over. Once our youngsters get a whiff of what's blooming they will be powerless to resist.

There'll be no way to keep 'em off of the farm after they've seen Tempe.

Letters to the empress

It's the wonderfulest

Editor:

This is just to say that I love you, and the State Mess, more than life itself. It's impossible for me to get through the day without thoroughly perusing every beautifully-written column inch of my favorite newspaper. You are unquestionably fair, accurate beyond reproach, and cute. Stay as wonderful as you are.

High grade lawmakers?

Editor:

I would like to applaud the recent decision passed down by Gov. Bwukey Wabbitt requiring all state legislators to have finished the fifth grade by the time they take office.

Undoubtedly, there is a long road ahead in enforcing this mandate, given the current educational status of most of Arizona's lawmakers. It is, however, a step in the right direction.

Congratulations, Bwukey, for having the guts to make a tough decision! Our great state will be richer for it (considering the staggering figure the combined tuition of all those legislators is likely to add up to.)

Juan Q. Publico
Elementary Education

It'd drive me to study . . .

Editor:

It pains me to note that, as usual, this University is taking its own sweet time about finishing one of the most important projects yet.

The dimensions of the parking problem at this rat-trap have been amply demonstrated. As a commuter student, I have been issued a parking sticker for Octa-level Parking Garage III. A fat lot of good that does me! By the time I get here at 5:45 a.m., I am greeted by a THIS LOT IS FULL sign. I am more than a little upset, as it is April and I have yet to attend any of my spring semester classes.

Thus, I would like to know why construction has been so slow on the new drive-up classrooms approved by the Bored of Rejects almost a year ago.

It is obviously an idea whose time has come. Granted, there are a few blockheaded environmentalists squealing about wasted gas, etc., but what else is new? They wouldn't be happy if they weren't bitching about something. I say nuke 'em all.

It is imperative that this project be completed now. Lot 459, which is reserved for commuter students, may provide a good view of the UA campus, but it's not always easy to find time for a two-hour tram ride.

Let's get with it!

Litter policy

The State Mess abhors the ridiculous letters you send in, but we print some anyway because we have to.

If you expect us to even read the silly things, type them on oversized papyrus, alternately single and quadruple spaced, with margins set on three characters. Don't bother asking us to withhold your name, 'cause if you do we'll run it in bold face caps.

All letters are subject to total rewriting at the whim of the empress, and the odds are good that those that don't point out the superb job the State Mess is doing will end up in the circular file.

"THE JOKES ARE ON US."

Totally without feeling . . .

Editor's note: This is absolutely the last of 42 tryout columns (it just seems like more) by Gene E. "Sheena" Cockburn, an ASU doctoral candidate in animal husbandry. The State Mess would like to know whether you think "Totally Without Feeling" should be a regular feature or if we should just take this moron out and shoot him.

Good or bad. Black or white. Right or wrong. Always or never. Best or worst. All or nothing. Superior or inferior. Sane or crazy.

I don't think about stuff like this. I really don't. It's boring. I'd rather be drinking, driving real fast and having oral discourse with a very intelligent 15 year old girl. But my friends do. All the time.

Take my friend Ben's sister (please). Sandy's miserable all the time. It seems she only can enjoy the missionary position. And only with a Mormon missionary (you know how hard that is).

Another guy I know, Sheldon Abramowitz (the accountant), has been in therapy for approximately five years. He only recently discovered he was anti-Semitic. And my friend Jeanie's been very upset ever since the cat analyst told her her cat committed suicide without leaving a note. It's really pretty depressing.

But what can I tell them? Sure, I like them, they're a source of amusement to me, but I can't relate to all the trauma in their tacky, little lives. I mean I bought two bricks of gold a couple of years ago for $38 an ounce. My Uncle Eric is a vice president at Warners Bros. and I get a lot of concert tickets and maybe 250 free albums a month. I once guessed the correct number of jellybeans in a bathysphere at a Gulf station and won free gas for the rest of my life. Supreme.

But after listening to my poor friends bitch and moan, I started to feel totally out of touch with reality. I was doing too good. I didn't have any personal problems. I was missing something!

So I made an appointment with a doctor at the Counseling Center. Maybe there was a serious problem I just didn't realize I had or, failing that, perhaps a trained counselor could show me some modern stress-inducing techniques and help me work out a really devastating problem to victimize me and take up all my time and make my life worth living.

I expected to meet someone helpful and competent, sort of like Xaviera Hollander, only maybe smarter, or at least with a lot more books. But a very scared looking receptionist with terrible skin and a tic like a baby Harp seal waiting to be clubbed introduced me to Dr. Anne Hedonic, a balding middle aged woman sucking on a large cigar. She looked me over like an Upper Austrian Wolfhound scooping out a freshly-painted fire hydrant. "So you're the guy with no problems," she snorted contemptuously. "We'll see about that."

What followed was a two-hour interrogation not unlike those old movies about World War II and Nazis with bad attitudes. She asked me a lot of questions about my mother I really didn't understand, then made me look at a bunch of stupid pictures and "talk about them." She kept shining a really bright light in my eyes and lapsing into a weird accent I couldn't quite place.

When I tried to talk to her and find out if she was OK, she screamed that I was being hostile and violating her space. I thought about cooling her off with a fire extinguisher I'd seen in the hall, but I didn't want to get foam on myself. I had some important stuff to do later on.

"Wait a moment," she whined. "What would it take to really get you in touch with your feelings?"

I thought about it for a minute, then leaned across the desk and hit her in the jaw. Hard. Then I went to a bar. It felt good.

Representatives Jest, Pooper being held for rancid by ASA

By Oldand Maggoty

Arizona legislators Phony Jest and Bull Pooper were kidnapped and held for rancid Monday, reportedly by members of the Arizona Stooges Association.

Police suspect the two were taken to an abandoned dairy farm in Mesa.

Krud Beanbag, ASA executive director, apparently has told police he will refuse to let the two representatives go until the Legislature passes a bill allowing ASA to run the three state universities and install Beanbag as University Dictator.

Phoenix Police Chief Ruling Enigma said Beanbag's whereabouts were traced to a dairy farm east of Gilbert Road.

"We've got to be very careful," Enigma said. "I think that guy (Beanbag) might be a psychopath."

"He called us about noon and he's been on the phone ever since — about three hours. He keeps singing 'Take Me Out to the Ball Game.'"

"I think he is out of the ball game," Enigma concluded.

He said the legislative victims were returning to their offices for lunch when they were apparently knocked down, tied up and carried off by at least five masked and armed "student-government types."

He said several legislators witnessed the kidnapping, but refused to talk about it.

"We heard one guy saying something about how he wished those two would straighten out their personal lives and quit that kind of stuff in public, or 'it might make all of us look like a bunch of weirdos,'" Enigma said.

He added that when the families of Jest, R-Legend City, and Pooper, R-Leisure World, were told about the kidnapping, they were not at all alarmed.

"Oh no, they weren't kidnapped," Jest's wife said. "They're just in session."

"I know Phony (Jest) doesn't like to go in every day," she added. "It's not unusual for me to have to drop some sedatives in his orange juice, pack him up in the car and drive him downtown myself."

"But that's life in the fast lane."

The police department's taped conversations with Beanbag revealed that he is unaware he has broken any law.

"There is nothing in our contract with the Bored of Rejects that says we can't kidnap legislators," he said.

Rejects' executive coordinator Bobbie Bluff said the bored had no official position on the incident, since several members do not know what a kidnapping is.

"But we will be taking a look at this at our next meeting," he said.

Beanbag told police he nabbed the representatives as a last resort to try to get support for the legislative measures he backs.

These bills include one that would require Bored of Rejects members to wear pink tutus and powdered wigs to their monthly meetings and another that would force all ASU students whose last names begin with "A" to refer to themselves by their Social Security numbers.

STATE PRESS Newsroom Staff

Openings

Applications for positions on the News Staff of the STATE PRESS for the Fall Semester 1980 are now being received at #15, North Basement, Matthews Center.

There will be openings at most levels — reporter, photographer, copy editing, assistant sports editor, assistant city editor, arts & entertainment writer, sports reporter, city editor, news editor, managing editor, sports editor, copy chief, photo editor and opinion page editor.

Applicants must pick up job referral forms from Student Employment in Matthews Center and application blank at #15, North Basement, Matthews Center.

Moron gets hands-on lab

A three-hour lab will be added to an ASU course in Human Sexuality beginning in the fall.

FAST 332—Human Sexuality, taught by Dr. O. Whata Moron, will be offered for four credit hours in the fall.

Moron said he has been petitioning the home economics department for the lab addition since he began teaching the class.

"The students need to put what they learn in class into practice," Moron said. "Many of the students in the class don't have a boyfriend or girlfriend to work with, and the lab will be an aid to them."

Moron added all students enrolling in the class will be required to attend the labs. He said Howard Johnson's Motor Lodge will provide lab rooms one afternoon a week at a special discount rate.

Moron said extra credit labs to be taught by experts in the field (behind Sun Devil Stadium) also will be added to the class curriculum next semester.

Corrupt candidate attempts to buy votes in ASASU race

By Whori Winerob

The Associated Stoooges Executive Vice President has offered campaign workers bribes in his campaign to become "chief stoooge," a member of the ASASU Senate charged Monday.

"Not only has it been proven that Scam Hamstrung offered bribes, he can't control a Senate meeting to save his life," Sen. Keep Jerking said.

Jerking accused Hamstrung of promising members of his campaign staff two weeks free vacation if they will "do whatever is necessary" to get students to vote for him in the upcoming April election.

"Remember when the officers were accused of 'playing for pay?'," Jerking asked. "Well now Hamstrung wants to pay workers who play for him — I mean pay for people to vote for him."

Hamstrung called the charges "totally absurd," adding he believes they stem from Jerking's disappointment over not being able to deduct a four-month vacation to Maui from the Senate contingency fund.

"It was obvious from Jerking's support of a high Senate contingency that he wanted to use some of the funds, but we can't make everyone happy, now can we?" Hamstrung said.

Jerking also charged the presidential hopeful with failure to properly run a Senate meeting.

"You should attend some of these meetings," Jerking said. "Hamstrung never wears shoes, he didn't appoint me as his deputy chairman and forced me to go through an election, doesn't pay attention and always has to ask me if correct parliamentary procedure is being used."

"I ask you, is that any way to run a zoo — uh — Senate?"

Hamstrung said the charges are "totally ludicrous" and added that although he "makes mistakes," he tries to keep them at a minimum.

"None of my mistakes are intentional and even if they were, I would not be stupid enough to admit it," he added.

Pedestrians to be banned from mall

By Smelly Kith

Pedestrians caught walking on Catty Mall will be fined and reprimanded after a Safety Committee decision becomes law, a committee member said Monday.

"We have come to a decision that walking on the mall will be banned because it is hazardous to all the bikers, skaters, Frisbee throwers and joggers who congregate there," said University Police Chief Georgie Boy.

Boy said a count was taken Saturday to determine how many pedestrians, bicycle riders and roller skaters use the mall.

"Our tests show more skaters and bikers use the mall, so why should we ban them from the premises?" he said.

The Safety Committee had originally decided to outlaw biking and skating on Catty Mall, but Boy said those decisions were vetoed because "this new ruling makes much more sense."

Pedestrians will be confined to walking on the grass and police officers will be patrolling the mall on roller skates and skate boards to see that everyone abides by the new rules.

Boy said the committee had considered using electric cattle prods.

Deviants to get training

For the many students concerned about what life will be like after they graduate and get out in the "real world," one ASU college is offering students the chance to find out.

The communication department is offering a "Day on the Job" to all interested juniors and seniors, April 8 through April 27. Students will have the opportunity to spend a day with a professional in their career field, observing and accompanying them throughout the day.

Career fields offered include bank robbery, urban prostitution, drug dealing, gambling and a day with a state legislator.

The organized crime segment will be initiated as soon as the department's program participant is paroled.

Ostrich vows to veto plans for new AAB

By Whori Winerob

Associated Stoooges President Susie Ostrich vowed Monday to veto any plans for an Animal Affairs Board because, she said, "canines and gorillas have all the representation they need on this campus."

Ostrich said that she could not fund a board for a group who "cannot use the same bathrooms other students use."

"First the men complain they don't have enough representation, then the minorities," she said. "We can't represent everybody. In the American system, somebody has to be left out."

But Executive Vice President Scam Hamstrung revealed that dozens of protesting dogs have prompted the Senate Finance Committee to allocate $1.5 million to the Animal Affairs Board because "canines on this campus have been ignored for too long."

ASASU Sen. Kinky Dinky, a member of the committee, said he wanted to give the AAB $2 million because the University is not structured to meet the needs of its animals.

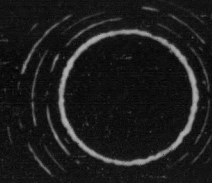

"For example, where on this campus does anyone see a fire hydrant?" he said. "It's absurd to expect campus dogs to have to walk into the MU just to use the bathroom."

A spokesman for Animals Against Harassment, who did not wish to be identified, said its organization would keep "secret files" on those ASASU senators who voted against the proposal.

"We don't wish to blackmail anybody," it said, "but the time has come for equal representation regardless of how many legs one walks on."

Ostrich said the gathering of secret files might be in violation of the ASASU constitution, and said she would ask Krud Beanbag, director of the Arizona Stoooges Association, to look into the legality of such a move.

Walkie-talkies interfere with network proposal

By Oldand Maggoty

Due to campus unrest over the proposed purchase of a radio and television network, ASU will opt for broadcasting by walkie-talkie, a move that will cut costs and "satisfy everybody," the Broadcast Bureau station manager said Monday.

"We're all excited about the possibilities of this project," Frito Lay said. "Finally the administration and the students are in agreement."

Lay said he and Associated Stoooges President Susie Ostrich are studying a program in which each student would receive a walkie-talkie at registration.

He said he does not know how much the walkie-talkies will cost, but "heck, if we don't have enough money, we can always sue somebody for something and cover the costs that way."

Lay added that the walkie-talkies will be distributed "soon, very soon. Possibly 1988."

Ostrich said the "central talkie" would be located in the ASASU office and would broadcast country western music and game shows.

The only disadvantage the project has is that the economical walkie-talkies can only function within a 500-foot radius, she said.

"The prime listening spot will be the Renegade Lounge on the first floor of the Memorial Union," she added.

Ostrich said University rules will have to be passed to prevent students from transmitting on their walkie-talkies during scheduled programs.

"If students start transmitting, we'll have total chaos," she said.

She said a suitable punishment would be to force the students to attend every Bored of Rejects meeting for a year, or spend a day in the newsroom of the State Mess.

Militant group nabs 3 hostages

By Robbing More

Militant Fun Angels, demanding the return of former head football coach Spank Tush, broke into the University Activity Center late Monday night, taking three hostages.

The 256 militants, armed with broken champagne bottles and shrimp forks, took over the unguarded UAC to protest the ousting of Tush by what they called, "a group of nasty kids who deserved to be punched anyway."

Ayatollah Hairy Frozenfag, the self-proclaimed Fun Angel "Big Cheese," said he fully approves of the actions taken by the militants. "When you get so rich you just have to take over something," he said. "Besides, they're pretty funny folks when you get to know them."

Spank Tush, who was rehired last week as an ASU tram driver, was unavailable for comment Monday, but Tush's wife Span said if he had known his "old pals were going to throw a bash at the UAC he would have surely made an appearance!"

The militants claim the hostages, two janitors and a maintenance man, are in good condition and sleep through most of the militants' conversations.

Elvis-Sadr, a militant spokesman, said the matter of the hostages will be turned over to the Monetary Council, the ruling body of ASU sports.

"Without Tush," Elvis-Sadr said, "this football program has gone to the Devils, heh-heh."

There are unconfirmed reports that the militants are bogus Fun Angels and actually are athletic supporters from the University of Swearizona, a reputed diploma mill.

KCUF sports anchor Dill Benny said the militants remain quiet until the TV cameras are turned on, at which time they honk the horns of their Winnebagos and pop beer tabs. "Once the cameras turn off, so do they," Benny said.

"I'm really glad they did this," Benny said, "because it gives me an excuse to go see Spank, Span and the kids."

Tush had been the Shah of Football at ASU for more than 20 years when a group of alleged football players, led by Mavin Butledge, deposed him in October of last year from the position.

"Skinflick" series to dig up talent at rock bottom prices

By Din Smellner

If a proposed "Skinflick" concert series is approved by University administrators, ASU students will see the likes of Jim Croce and Janis Joplin perform here next fall.

The "Skinflick" series, which would "provide the ASU student community with quality concert entertainment at the price of $1—far below current accepted prices," was organized by the Associated Students Special Effects Board, and will begin operating in the fall if the series is approved as part of the 1980-81 ASASU budget.

Deal Savus, coordinator of the series, said complaints about "skyrocketing" concert ticket prices prompted the creation of "Skinflick."

He added that even though the ticket prices will be low, the quality of entertainment will not suffer.

"I can't promise for sure, but the concert promoter I've been dealing with has promised us Jim Croce," he said. "And it's only going to cost us $400 to get him. Such a deal!"

"He may not have had any hits in a while, but he's still got a heavenly act," he added.

Savus added the promoter, Acme Concert Productions of Modesto, Calif., has also promised that Otis Redding and Jimi Hendrix, as well as the Grateful Dead, will appear in the series.

"We're trying to dig up a wide variety of musical choices," Savus said. "We want to bring some life to ASU."

For students who like oldies, Savus said Buddy Holly has tentatively been booked to appear here in October.

He said $1,000 has been appropriated for the series, half of which has already been spent on a down payment to Acme Productions.

He added ASASU has already begun making security arrangements for the Croce concert.

Onlookers testified that George Butz and Earl Wallace were fine until they ordered the daily special at the MU Cafe Ole. Two hours later, what appears to be rigor mortis set in. Physical Facilities has tried unsuccessfully to move them for almost three weeks. University President John W. Schwastika suggested Monday, "Let's build a fountain around them."

Weeping Bettie Mildew wilts newest rock flick

Bettie Mildew finally has brought her outrageous stage persona to the screen.

For 10 years, she has been rocking and shocking concertgoers. Now, Hollywood has found the exact picture for this tasteful lady. "The Thorn" is taking the country by storm.

Unfortunately, it is a warmed-over version of the old success-can-ruin-a-nice-person story. We've heard it all before — and the real story of this self-destructive singer is more interesting than any imitation.

The producers insist the story is about no one in particular, that it is a combination of many singing stars' lives of the last generation. But they cannot fool a careful moviegoer. All the drugs, booze, sex and violence in this story tells us exactly who this swinging sixties singer really is.

The more the producers tell us it isn't Dinah Shore, the more we are certain it is.

It is so obvious.

When Bettie comes on stage — stoned — and says, "How ya doin', maternal fornicators?" who else could it be but Dinah?

And when Bettie asks, "How do I keep this tired, old, battered body in shape? Sex, drugs and rock 'n' roll!" there's no denying it. It's Dinah all right — and you thought Burt Reynolds kept her going.

This is not the story of a rock singer and her chauffeur, but of Dinah and Burt. The filmmakers should fess up, they doth protest too much. Besides, what is wrong with immortalizing the Dinah Shore story? They should be proud.

As for Mildew, her performance is all wet. She cries when she sings. She cries when she shoots up. She cries when she talks. She cries when she makes love. And she cries when she laughs.

But this is a real upbeat film, and movie audiences have been deprived of this kind of religious entertainment too long. When Bettie drops her coke spoon and manages to pick it up, even though she is higher than a kite, it is an uplifting experience for all.

CONCERTS

Elvis Presley is appearing nightly at the Heaven Hilton. For tickets be good for awhile and die.

Beef Jerky and The Dry Heaves, Tempe's sassy country-swing band, will be performing at the Cuspidore Lounge this weekend.

Beef and the boys have promised some exciting arrangements for this special event including their new hit single "Don't Spit No Tobacco Juice in My Beer," a country-swing dance contest judged by the band, a wet T-shirt contest featuring members of the band and a medley of Led Zepplin hits climaxing with a sizzling version of "Communication Breakdown" specially arranged for bluegrass instrumentation.

The Razz Review Band are headlining a sold-out benefit for the "Gossip Columnist Relief Fund" Sunday at ASU's Wackitivity Center. The Rolling Stones and Fleetwood Mac are the opening acts for this gala event. Tickets are $500, $10, $9 and $8 and are available from most Valley bail bondsmen. The special $500 seats are actually located in the front row of Crammage Center, which means those lucky ticket holders will witness this "Event of the Weekend" from more than a half mile away.

Dr. Gyno and the Frosty Speculum, a group of typically burned-out heavy-metal kids will cash in on the new wave explosion Monday at "The Special Thought," Tempe's disco-turned-new-wave bar. It's the same loud crap as before, but the band got haircuts.

Barbra Strident will star in a benefit concert for Barry Goldwater Saturday in Fun Devil Stadium. Strident said "I haven't performed for a live audience in some time, but the money was good, so what the hell. I hope no one expects a good show." Tickets are available at all Valley hairdressers.

Gov. Jerry Brown will appear at a benefit for Linda Ronstadt at Crammage Center Thursday. "The She Ruined My Career Now I'll Take a Shot At Hers" program will begin at 8 p.m. and run until Jerry wins a primary.

THEATER

The ASU theatrical productions department will present the premier of Gene McClain's new production "Understandable" at 8 p.m. Saturday in a closet in Pixie Crammage Hall. Tickets for this one-time showing will be $2 for normal people, and the theatrical productions department will pay $2 to any intellectuals who attend.

FILM

The ASASU Illicit Affairs Board will present a retrospective film festival "The Best Films of Zsa Zsa Gabor." "Queen of Outer Space" will open the festival and Zsa Zsa will attend the opening with seven of her eight husbands who will beat each other on stage to see who gets to take the ol' Zsa back to the hotel.

"Life," a "living" sculpture is on display behind the Art Gallery of Pain Lab. Designed by ASU graduate student Seymour Perspective, "Life" is a multi-media work of art.

Punks punt powerful performance

I have seen the future of rock 'n' roll, "Brutality Theater," and mixed-media art — and it is Frank and the Alleged Assault.

That's right, and remember that you heard it here first. Saturday night at The Leather Lawn bar, this Valley became a large yellow trapezoid on America's punk rock map.

This quartet has redefined the meaning of the word "abuse." Opening with the new anthem for punk rock in the '80s, "Eligible or Else," Frank and the boys had 'em dancing in the aisles and on the sidelines for the duration of regulation play, or about 40 minutes including one overtime encore.

Hash Mark, the band's premier bassist, showed considerable profundity on his axe, thundering under the dual-lead-guitar "wall of sound" the band cranks up.

Lead guitarist Quick Whistle spun sinewy, metallic spirals of sound from his fretless electric guitar, somehow wringing spectacular crowd noise and marching band sounds from the strings.

Lead singer "Frank" hammered at his guitar and spat the lyrics of each song into the smoke-choked air of the first three rows of rabid spectators.

"Get Out of Tontazona, Baby," was another recognizable favorite, as drummer Pill Penny stroked away at his kit barehanded. His trademark, that fabulous "Skin to Skin" contact drumming, was truly inspirational for the crowd as audience members slapped each other silly to the wild rock beat of the song.

The by-now-infamous dance contest followed as band members instructed the crowd in the latest dance craze, inspired by the band's song, "Split the Zone."

"Get down in that three point stance, you dummies, get down!" Frank enthused.

Rumors that the band may go national soon seem sadly quite true, due to the instant local recognition the band seems to have assembled. Recruiting the best local talent from other local punk band fan clubs, as well as several transfers from Southern California, the band has built an excellent starting team of fanatical supporters.

This band deserves the success it deserves. It's that simple, just listen to the lyrics of the band's great local hit "You May Have Class, But I Won't Give You No Credit."

If Frank doesn't hit you where you live, you must be ducking.

You may have class, man
You may be an also-ran
You might be a student that gets As
You might be a jock just catchin' rays
You may have class, man
But I still won't give you no credit.

You may have class, man
You may have a sun tan
You may have a trusted confederate
Someone's words to edit
You may have class, man
But I still won't give you no credit.

There it is in a nutshell. Take a chance on this band, while they're still in the running. It won't be long now. Not long at all.

Brotherhood to conduct PR conference

The International Brotherhood of Public Relations Experts will be conducting a week-long seminar for students "interested in a fulfilling life in the PR field," starting today in the Burrito room of ASU's Memorial Union.

Yak T. Boldface, chairman of the sponsoring organization, said that the "times have never been better for people who can lie through their teeth without sweaty upper lips."

Tonight's agenda promises an evening of interesting conversation. Entitled "Flaking into the Eighties," the program will briefly recap the history of public relations, the present state of the art and the projected future of the so-called occupation.

Wednesday's program promises another informative slate. "Big Business — How to Sell It and How to Cash In on the Megabucks," will be the topic of discussion.

Kernel, Rotchers reveal 'We're minorities!'

By Buenos Dias

University officials are "dumbfounded but pleased" at the surprise revelations today that Athletic Director Dr. Whole Kernel and head football coach Barrel "Mizter" Rotchers are not anglos but are in fact minorities.

In an eggsclusive State Mess interview, Keriel and Rotchers disclosed that they have, in fact, been hiding the truth.

Kernel said he is really black, not a middle-aged white man and Rotchers said he is actually "a Chicane-o."

"Yes, my man," Kernel said as he combed his Afro-sheen laden 'fro, "you ax me if I'm black and I'll answer yes. By the way, you know where I can get a Dashiki or a little Teddy Pendergrass? Maybe some Funkadelic?

Rotchers was just as candid.

"I'll tell you, my Latino roots go back a long way," Rotchers said. The coach said Barrel Rotchers was a euphamism that he used to "get a break, because who's going to hire a Chicane-o cabeza coach?"

Neither Kernel nor Rotchers said they expect immediate acceptance.

"Some of those guys have been colored all their lives," Kernel said. "I've had to learn how to disco in one day."

Rotchers agreed.

"You think it's easy to learn this border slang and accent? It's not, hombre. I've had to watch over 100 reruns of the "High Chaparral" and listen to Manolito to get it right.

"And the food, aye, yayie," Rotchers continued. "Who is this Jimmy Changa swine that invented that sour cream-coiffed concoction? Doesn't he know it's messy to eat?"

Dr. I.M. Coming, chairwoman of the selection committee that hired Kernel and Rotchers said she was "dumbfounded but pleased" with Kernel and Rotchers' announcements and, "now maybe that will get those greaseball, crying minorities off our collective necks."

Grid coach likes sheep

By Rave Meagerballs

It appears that strong-arm tactics of former football coach Spank Tush are a thing of the past with the hiring of "Mizter" Rotchers as ASU coach.

"It's a wonderful day in the neighborhood," Rotchers said as spring practice entered its fifth week Monday.

Rotchers opens each ASU practice with a sing-a-long.

"Instead of calisthenics, we lay on our backs and look at the clouds and look for shapes like little sheeps and things," Rotchers said. "Can you say sheep?"

One of the first priorities for Rotchers, is to change the ASU uniforms.

"We're going to wear little furry slippers and pink helmets and tearaway cardigan jerseys. And we're teaching the players to put their uniforms and slippers in their lockers nice and neat after practice. Another priority is to get the players to learn the new terminology. Block and tackle are big words.

"But I like to work with our big, strong football players. When they do good in practice we give them fresh little candies. Once a week we take the day off from practice and visit the zoo."

Rotchers said the football players are growing boys and have an 8 p.m. curfew.

"We give them a snack of animal cookies and milk and the assistant coaches tell them bed-time stories every night."

Rotchers said he hopes he will have found an adequate punter by the end of spring practice.

"Can you spell punt? P - U - N - T. Unfortunately, every time I say that word the players cringe. I know it's a big word but our boys are afraid to even say it. Whenever I mention the word I have to calm them down by talking about little puppy dogs and sunny days in the wading pool."

Coach Rotchers also talked about next year's ASU schedule.

"We'll have our kids play Pin the Tail on the Buckeye to get ready for Ohio State," he said. "Then there's Ring Around the Trojan, Follow the Cougar, Blind Bruin's Bluff - I think we'll have fun!"

The interview ended with the coach singing the new ASU fight song.

"...Won't you be my neighbor?"

plaints with affirmative action officials charging that the hiring of Kernel, Rotchers and Rotchers' staff violated affirmative action guidelines.

Head of the Minority Caucus, Juan Schwartz said he was leery of Kernel and Rotchers.

Schwartz said "It's interesting to note that they came out of the closet just when the agua was starting to get caliente. But if they really are minorities, they'll say so on the census."

Schwartz noted that Kernel and Rotchers had been invited to numerous Minority caucus events but had only attended one luncheon.

"I became skeptical," Schwartz said, "When there was everything from ribs to hot links to tacos and enchiladas to eat but the only thing those two touched were the tuna casserole and ham with mayonnaise on white bread."

ASU President Dr. John W. Schwastika said he was caught off-guard by the announcements.

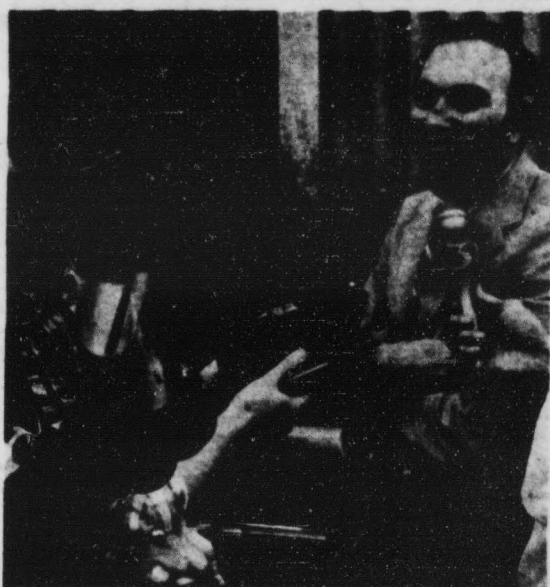

"I've known about it all along," Schwastika said. "It was my idea to conceal it until the proper time and that time is now."

"In fact, did you know that I'm really not a middle-aged Caucasian male. Really, I'm not. I'm really a draft-age Jewish girl that wants to meet a rich doctor or lawyer."

Schwartz expressed dismay and datmay about the "bandwagon syndrome that seems to be sweeping the campus."

"This is awful, simply horrendous. If everyone wants to be a minority, then we'll have to become white or male or both to get federal help and then where will we be? I'll tell you where. Today's minorities will be tomorrow's W.A.S.P.s. We'll have to adjust to a totally new life style."

Dr. Whole Kernel, left, newly named athletic director at ASU, early Thursday was attacked by his own right hand. Kernel sustained minor injuries in the incident. Head ASU football coach, Daryl Rotchers, right, had no comment when told by reporters that Kernel was attacked, except to laugh and comment, "yee, those right hands can be murder, especially when the left one doesn't know what it's doing."

Former AD, head coach get to point at reunion

By Gem Inkslinger

Former ASU head football coach Spank Tush and former athletic director Feed Millertime recently ironed out their differences over who has the power to do what with whom and when, when they got together for lunch at Hammerheads.

Millertime was heard commenting that Tush wasn't such a bad Joe, and he had a point when it came to arguing the finer points of the subject of firing.

The 'get together' was the first of such a nature since Tush bit the dust, er, was released as head coach late last year.

The two men seemed content to just rib each other a little about what when down during those two agonizing months of pure living heaven for all in the athletic department.

Millertime is now selling Fuller Brushes to retired German Shephard seeing eye dogs, and Tush is shagging tennis balls for junior high school tournaments to pick up a few extra bucks to buy a ticket to next year's Ohio State football game.

The only problem that arose during the two men's meeting, was Tush was a little upset over the choice of Millertime as to what to eat for lunch. Millertime wanted the press conference special, topped with coaches-a-la-head. Tush would have none of it, and insisted on knowing on a block of wood for the remainder of the day.

Both men left the luncheon content that some differences had been stiched up. Tush made no advance towards Millertime except to lift his hair and call him a sissy. Millertime refused comment, saying the glue gave him away.

Spank Tush, left, and Dr. Fredly Millertime, former football coach and athletic director at ASU, respectively, or disrespetively, had lunch at Hammerheads the other day to try and solve some of the differences between the two former Valley giants. Neither commented on what came out of the meeting, except to say that each would be at the bloodbank on 5th and Van Buren if any calls came in of an urgent nature. The meeting was pre-arranged as a publicity stunt for a new brand of swiss cheese in Phoenix. The company was pleased with the result.

You deserve to be part of the decisions!

Epidemic! strikes

By Gem Inkslinger

New York — (FBI) What most feared would happen, has.

An epidemic, of monstrous proportions, to the extent that the city of Tempe might have to be evacuated, is now raging out of control in the halls of the University Activity Center at Arizona State University. The disease? Envy.

Envy by every athletic coach that has ever worn the title of 'coach' in Sun Devil country. Envy of the publicity, the sympathy, the money that Spank Tush has received.

The coaches are mad that because of their placid method, their proper conduct — they, have not made every newspaper ever to roll off a printer thing.

The story, as told to this reporter by a scared, huddling little secretary, who in her own infinite wisdom, managed to take notes while barely escaping with her life and lipstick. She requests anonymity, for obvious reasons of severe repercussion and concussions.

"I was doing my daily routine. It was about 8 a.m. I just poured myself another cup of coffee. Sanka. The caffeine gives me bloody noses. Anyway, I hear this roar from down the hall, it was Nedley (Walk). He just found out Durt Nimphus would be back for another year. I thought nothing of it at the time. A typical reaction I say to myself. If I had to teach Durt how to walk again, I'd be upset too. Then I hear this thud. I hear Coach Walk yell, 'If he can do it, why can't I?' I run to the door, ask what's wrong. He takes a swing at me. I duck. He says, 'see, I can't even hit a secretary.' I run. He chases me. Coach (Georgeous George) Boatail sticks his foot out of his office and trips me. I slide head first down the hall. Coach (Jimley) Crock stops me, with a baseball bat. Before I go out, I hear him say, 'see, it isn't as hard as they made it out to be.' I come to. No one is around. I try to get up. I stagger several times, managing to get to a phone. I dial the sports information office. The secretary answers, 'sportes information, if we don't know it, it doesn't exist.' I ask where all the coaches are. She says being interviewed by every newspaper fit to print. The State Mess wasn't there. I figured they were my best bet. I call. Someone answers, 'State Mess, all the news no one cares about, may I help you in some small inimitable way.' After I put my boots on to keep my feet dry, I say I know a coach that hit a secretary. The reporter asks if it can be verified. I say yes. I hear the reporter mumbling, 'damn.' He said, 'okay, we'll take it anyway.' I relay the story. The reporter asks if I'm over 18. I say yes, but what does that have to do with anything? The reporter asks me if I would like to go out. I say I just was. I hear the reporter mumbling, 'damn.' I ask if he wants the story. He says he's too depressed now to talk. Call back in a couple of days after the binge and he'll see what he can do. I hang up. I hear a noise. It's coach (Mr.) Rotchers. He says he never saw anything so disgusting in his life. He said he wouldn't stoop to such methods just to get publicity for him and his football team. I ask him what will he do. Sullenly, he says probably die of obscurity. I tell him to call the State Mess. His cleats were tearing up the tile floor. He bumped into the doorway with his pads, I heard him saying 'darn gone it' as he faded into the hall. Poor man. Has no fight in him.
