Hamm admitted seeing punch, former coach Owens testifies

By Jeff Sellers

ASU Vice President of Student Affairs George Hamm told former ASU defensive football coach Bob Owens he saw Frank Kush punch Kevin Rutledge in a 1978 game against the University of Washington, Owens testified Wednesday.

Rutledge, former ASU punter, has filed a $2.2 million lawsuit against former ASU football coach Kush for punching him, defaming him, and misrepresenting the availability of scholarships.

Hamm met Owens in late December 1979 or early January 1980 at Coco's restaurant in Tempe, Owens testified. "He (Hamm) told me he had seen Coach Kush hit Kevin Rutledge."

Hamm told Owens that after Rutledge's 27-yard punt that preceded the alleged punch, he told those around him at the game he was concerned Kush might embarrass ASU in the regionally-televized Oct. 28 game, Owens testified.

But in Hamm's Sept. 9, 1980 deposition, he denied seeing any physical contact between Kush and Rutledge and said the meeting between him and Owens took place at a Guggy's restaurant Dec. 23 or 24, 1979.

"I said (to Owens), 'I saw it,'" Hamm stated in the deposition, "and then I said, 'Now let me tell you exactly what I saw. I saw a confrontation on the sidelines. I did not see any physical contact.'"

Hamm and ASU President John Schwada are named in the suit for failing to supervise Kush.

Owens also testified he received a series of phone calls from athletic booster Rick Lynch in September 1979 in which Lynch told him there were photographs, tape recorded statements from players and a videotape showing Kush hit Rutledge.

Kush's attorney, Warren Platt, has said Lynch conspired with Gordon Rutledge, the plaintiff's father, to get Kush fired.

In cross-examination, Platt asked Owens why he did not tell Kush about the phone calls.

Owens responded Kush had told assistant coaches nine months before Lynch's calls not to communicate with Lynch.

"I'd have been subject to a type of behavior (from Kush) that I really didn't want to subject myself to (if I had told Kush about the phone calls)," Owens testified.

Under direct questioning from Robert O. Hing, Rutledge's attorney, Owens testified Kush asked him in 1979 to support his claim that Owens stood next to him on the sideline during the UW game and saw no punch.

Kush then told Owens, "You were standing next to me on the sideline," Owens testified.

Owens testified he did not stand near Kush during the game and that he did not see Kush's alleged punch.

The court ruled the interference of scholarship charge against Kush and former assistant coach Bill Maskill will not be heard until the second half of the trial.

Film ban

Students to file suit against prohibition

By David Schwartz

Four ASU students will file a lawsuit today against ASU President John Schwada, Vice President of Student Affairs George Hamm and Dean of Students Leon Shell protesting the administration's "generic ban" on X-rated films at ASU.

The suit, to be filed in U.S. District Court by three ASU law students, Mark Barnes, Bob Frank and Pat Mitchell, and by Neeb Hall Film Series Director Sharon Glicksman, claims the ban violates University students' constitutional rights.

The students, represented by the American Civil Liberties Union, also will seek a temporary restraining order to allow the films to be shown on campus.

"We feel the ban is a direct interference into the students' rights," Glicksman said. "The only reason it's crystallized in the X-rated issue is because it's so controversial."

Barnes said the administration has adopted a "paternal attitude" toward students.

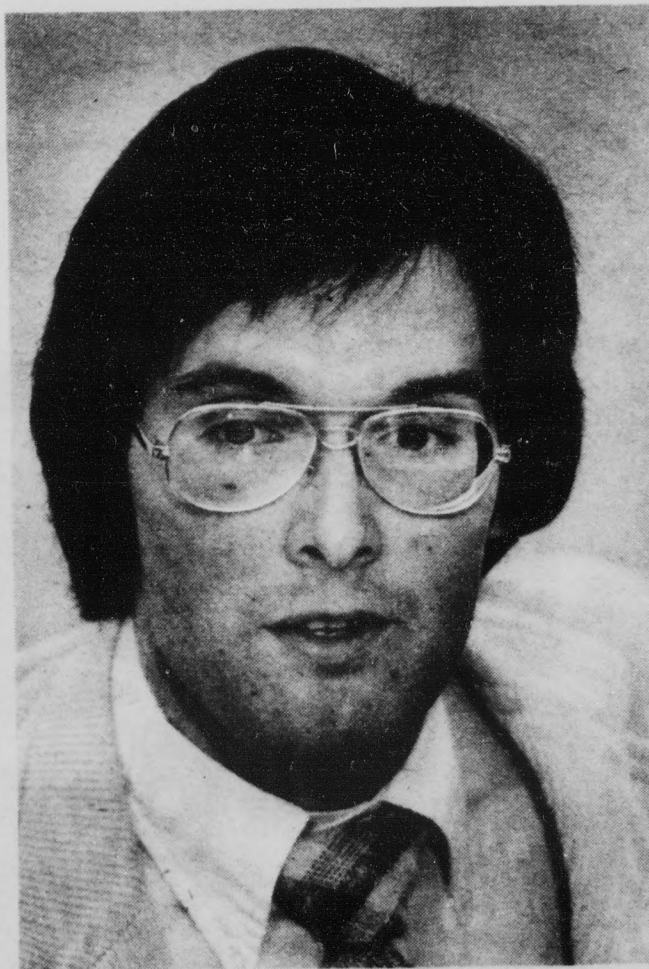

"The right of free speech, access to information, and the free and open exchange of ideas should be made available at a university," Barnes said.

Associated Students President Tom Ajamie, who said he was speaking as a member of the student body, issued a formal statement of support at a news conference held Wednesday announcing the lawsuit.

"When any University official attempts to dictate policy to students that is contrary to the law, this is a blatant and insulting disregard for the students' abilities to manage their own affairs," Ajamie said.

The administration's ban "mocks the student representation at ASU" and is a contradiction to the educational values set forth by the University, he said.

Officers view move to disregard ruling

By David Schwartz

The Associated Students Executive Committee tabled a resolution Wednesday to disregard the ASASU Supreme Court's decision that overturned the committee's X-rated film ban.

Bob Mulhern, ASASU executive vice president, said the Supreme Court judges went "well beyond their authority" in deciding the constitutionality of the United States.

"The court has no jurisdiction in matters such as these," Mulhern said. "They can only decide on the ASASU constitution and bylaws."

On Feb. 23 the Supreme Court ruled the Executive Committee was in violation of the First and Fourteenth amendments of the U.S. Constitution by forbidding the showing of X-rated films in the Neeb Hall Film Series.

The court said it "cannot judicially deny the defendants (the Executive Committee members) their right to determine the aims of ASASU and to exercise their authority" over the series.

But the court added the guideline used to determine which films should be shown was "insufficiently clear and unconstitutionally vague."

Mulhern said since the court agreed the committee's action was within its jurisdiction, the group's decision should be upheld.

However, Supreme Court Justice J.R. Roth said the Executive Committee can be held in contempt of court if it chooses to ignore its decision.

"The court's ruling is constitutionally correct," Roth said.

The Executive Committee, composed of the four executive officers and three ASASU senators, will consider the resolution again at its next meeting March 4.

Chris Spinella, ASASU activities vice president, said the resolution was

Former ambassador opposes boost in U.S. aid

WASHINGTON — The former U.S. ambassador to El Salvador said Wednesday the leftist guerrilla movement is "broken and declining" and any attempt to bolster the government through large-scale U.S. military aid could backfire with a right-wing coup. Robert White, a career diplomat currently here awaiting reassignment, said "I believe the right is constantly trying to overthrow the government, as is the left, and it's a beleaguered government in the middle."

Planned Phoenix refinery to process Alaskan oil

MOBILE, Ariz. — Crude oil from Alaska's frigid North Slope will be turned into motor fuels in Arizona's desert once a $322 million refinery and pipeline operation is completed in late 1983, a Phoenix-based company says. Provident Energy Co. says the refinery will be capable of handling 50,000 barrels a day initially and is expected to be capable of supplying 70 percent of Arizona's motor fuel needs.

Inflation drops to single-digit rate

WASHINGTON — Inflation slowed to a 9.1 percent annual rate in January, the lowest level since last summer, as rare declines in food and house prices helped offset new bursts in energy costs, the government reported Wednesday. The most unusual development was a 0.4 percent drop in house prices, the first decline in five years and the largest since 1967. However, the Reagan administration, in its latest pitch forage of the president's economic program, said a respite from double-digit inflation would be short-lived and consumers can expect steeper price increases in the months ahead — even for food and housing.

Court upholds Reagan's hiring freeze

WASHINGTON — U.S. District Judge Charles R. Richey ruled Wednesday that President Reagan's federal hiring freeze is "neither unconstitutional nor contrary to law," meaning that even those promised employment before the ban was invoked on Inauguration Day are out of luck. Richey said that the "20,000-odd" persons who received acceptance letters from federal agencies between the election and Jan. 20 were not legally hired, since Reagan's executive order was retroactive to Nov. 5.

Missing persons unit searches for two black boys

ATLANTA — The disappearances of two more black boys prompted police searches in Atlanta neighborhoods Wednesday, as prospects dimmed for a huge federal cash outlay to bolster the special inquiry into the cases of 20 dead and missing black children. Public Safety Commissioner Lee Brown said the cases of the two black boys who disappeared Tuesday were being handled by the missing persons division and had not been turned over to the special unit set up in the other cases.

Attendance up 150 percent at $1 movies

CHICAGO — Attendance jumped an average of 150 percent in about 500 movie houses in a nationwide theater chain that experimented with $1 admissions, and a company executive says the bargain will become a weekly fixture. "The experiment is over — bargain Tuesdays are here to stay," Harold Klein, Plitt Theater executive vice president, said Wednesday. "Attendance was up as much as 300 percent in some of the theaters, and averaged out to about 150 percent."

Bill denying parents' say in student promotions OK'd

PHOENIX — The Senate Education Committee Wednesday approved a bill that would strip parents of authority to decide whether their children deserved to be promoted to the next grade. Under current law, parents may overrule the teacher's decision that a pupil should not be promoted, but the teacher is still liable to lawsuits if the youngster has not mastered skills necessary for the advancement.

CAP hearing to be held in March

TUCSON — A congressional subcommittee will hold a public hearing on the Central Arizona Project next month in Tucson and then fly over the $2 billion waterway's route, Rep. Morris K. Udall, D-Ariz., said Wednesday. Udall said he hoped to convince the subcommittee that the aqueduct should be large enough "to allow considerable flexibility in source, amount and delivery of CAP water" from the Colorado River.

Official says top energy aide sought undercover "operative" mission

WASHINGTON — An Energy Department official says she felt she was back in the days of Watergate when a top aide to Secretary James Edwards wanted to send an undercover "operative," dressed in blue jeans and a flannel shirt, to a meeting of low-income people. The aide, Armand "Rock" Reiser, special assistant and counselor to Edwards, said the whole affair was a misunderstanding. But Tina Hobson, DOE consumer affairs officer, said both she and an aide took notes at a Jan. 26 conference with Reiser that show Reiser three times directed an "operative" be sent to a meeting of the National People's Action Council.

President wants more budget slashes

WASHINGTON — The Federal Reserve acted Wednesday to further tighten the nation's money growth, and its chairman embraced President Reagan's budget-cutting program "with all the ardor I can bring to bear." Later, Reagan ordered his aides to cut $3 billion to $6 billion more from the 1982 budget. Paul Volcker's endorsement of the presidential package cast aside concerns that the chief executive and the independent central bank might clash over anti-inflation strategy. Instead, Volcker told Congress that any attempt to whittle Reagan's proposals would only worsen the economy.

Mandatory exam

Health test awaits financial supporters

By Gibby Gorman

Implementation of a mandatory test to determine the individual health status of about 8,000 new or transfer students each year is awaiting funding sponsors, according to a student representative of the Student Health Advisory Committee.

Lee Paulus said the $180,000 needed to cover data evaluation expenses could come from local insurance agencies, student health insurance fees and/or tuition.

The purpose of the test is to determine potential problem areas in students' health so they can take preventive measures now to avoid serious problems later, he said.

"This test would take the place of the health questionnaire and the tuberculosis skin test presently administered to new students," he added.

The test would last about 10 minutes and would examine 13 areas such as blood pressure, stress, lung performance, glucose and cholesterol levels, percent of body fat and hearing. In an eight-hour day, about 53 students could receive the test at the Student Health Service.

The proposed test also would screen the health of all newly admitted students for ASU's Student Health Service.

"In the past there has only been random surveys involving only a minority of the students," Paulus said.

An example of the test was administered to 730 students in September through November last year by the Health Evaluation and Longevity Planning Foundation, a non-profit organization in Scottsdale, Paulus said.

The results indicated more than $400,000 would have been spent in medical costs if the students had not detected potential health problems at an early stage, he said.

Pixie Rice, a senior in health education who took the example test last semester, said she benefited from the test because it made her more aware of her health's strengths and weaknesses.

Dr. Richard Jones, director of the Student Health Service said the new test is beneficial because it relays vital information back to students, enabling them to better care for their health needs.

"Before you can do something about health you have to detect the problem," he said.

Nan Gear, a student health educator at the Student Health Service, said the test "is as important as any course a student takes here."

"If we can get the student to look at the things they're doing wrong now, we can prevent health problems from occurring when they're older," she said.

Paulus said once a student knows which health areas need care, he can seek assistance from the clinics offered at the Student Health Service.

He added current services include psychological counseling, and diet and exercise programs.

Gear said the Student Health Service will expand its clinics as student health needs are assessed.

ASU professor speaks at black youth session

Dr. Morrison Warren, ASU education professor, will be the keynote speaker at a statewide Black Youth Recognition Conference at ASU on March 7.

Warren will speak at the day's opening session, set for 8 a.m. to 9:45 a.m. in Gam-mage Center. His topic will be "It's Important to Know Yourself."

A series of workshops will be presented from 10 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. in the MU, followed by a free luncheon in the MU Arizona Room.

Afternoon sessions, also in the Arizona Room, will include book scholarship presentations and a youth panel discussion.

Facts do not cease to exist because they are ignored.

—Aldous Huxley

Court erred in disallowing history of Kush's brutality

Joe Smith has a habit of rounding the corner of Oak and Maple streets too fast. The car fishtails, his tires squeal and often he nearly slides into other cars coming down the street.

One of his neighbors has seen him do this over and over again.

One day Smith swings around the corner of Elm and Oak in a hurry to get home, his wheels lock, the car spins around and a passerby sees him hit an oncoming vehicle.

Smith is taken to court and the question arises: should this case be tried on the facts alone, or should testimony of his reckless driving at the Oak and Maple intersection be considered in the trial?

This is a rather simple analogy for what is going on now with the trial of former ASU football coach Frank Kush, who is being sued for $2.2 million by former ASU player Kevin Rutledge.

Robert O. Hing, Rutledge's lawyer, asked for a special Arizona Supreme Court ruling that would permit evidence of Kush's history of verbal and physical abuse of players to be considered by jurors.

The evidence had been ruled inadmissible for the first half of the trial (unless it pertained specifically to Rutledge) on Jan. 12 by Maricopa County Superior Court Judge Thomas Kleinschmidt.

The primary evidence in question is the testimony of former defensive coach Bob Owens, who said that during his 12 years at ASU, between 15 and 20 players left ASU because of abuse from Kush.

It is understandable the Supreme Court chose to keep out of the whole mess. Since special actions are inordinately time-consuming, the high court traditionally discourages rulings on them.

In the Rutledge-Kush case, however, the high court should never have had to decide — Kleinschmidt should never have dismissed that evidence.

Owens' testimony shows a consistent course of conduct that is directly applicable to the suit's primary charge — that Kush punched Rutledge after a bad punt in the 1978 game against the University of Washington.

Among Owens' statements is testimony that during practices Kush hit players with irrigation pipe, pieces of wood and boat rope.

Owens' testimony also told of a particular incident during team practice at Camp Tontozona in which Kush kicked former player Michael Lee in the ankles and "grabbed his face mask and jerked it around."

Later, Owens testified he found the player hitchhiking back to Phoenix with "lips... completely swollen up and bloody where he had been hit in the mouth."

Kleinschmidt is not the only judge who would have denied the necessary inclusion of Owens' testimony to the case, but then not all judges make just decisions all the time.

Hing took the only recourse he had by seeking the Supreme Court ruling, but he probably sensed it was a vain effort. As it stands, the trial will continue under Kleinschmidt's ruling.

The motions and requests and special actions that clutter a trial are many, and the final rulings are few.

With this action put under the rug, the jury may not have enough facts to discern the truth.

That's too bad.

Owens' testimony shows Kush's history of player abuse in the same way the testimony of Smith's neighbor shows a history of Smith's reckless driving.

And player abuse, whether in practice or on the field, is still player abuse.

Yammering boobs at yokel convention

Editor:

One rarely sees such a collection of yammering boobs as those who filled Gamme Friday for the Rodney Dangerfield show.

The catcalls, hooting, hissing and foot-stomping during the warmup piano act made me wonder if I had crashed a convention of yokels.

These were college students? Impossible. It wasn't bad manners — or even no manners — it was a competitive crudeness by a bunch of yahoos who thought they were the main act.

Editor:

You'll get no argument from me regarding the Arizona State men's basketball program not having the tradition of a UCLA or a Notre Dame. We are approaching the end of the second consecutive season finishing second in the PAC-

Amnesty group battles dissident suppression, torture in any country

By Sharon E. Bushard

Torture as a state policy largely disappeared after the Middle Ages, but has increased in today's world, a spokesman for Amnesty International said Wednesday.

Dr. Michael Nelson, a member of AI's international executive board, said the number of torture victims reported to the organization has increased yearly.

"Modern states are deliberately creating paraphernalia of torture," Nelson said. "Refined methods leave no physical marks and allow states to deny the torture happened."

AI is a non-partisan organization that opposes torture and suppression of non-violent dissidence in any country without regard for the offending government's political ideology, he said.

Nelson spoke to ASU's newly formed AI campus chapter.

Today torture is used as an governmental instrument in Argentina, Brazil, Chile, the Philippines, South Korea and is employed by "people of all political stripes," Nelson said.

Victims suspected of dissident activity are often grabbed on the street, taken to their homes and tortured for several days, then released with warnings not to repeat their actions, he said.

AI also is concerned with people who are defined by the organization as prisoners of conscience, Nelson said.

These are people who are imprisoned or persecuted for religious and political beliefs and who have never advocated violence, he said.

AI also is against the death penalty "across the board, no matter what country employs it," Nelson said.

The organization, founded in 1961, won the Nobel Peace Prize in 1977 for its support of human rights, he said.

Names of torture victims and political prisoners are sent to the organization's international secretariat in London from a variety of sources including families and friends of victims, lawyers and other organizations in the offending country, Nelson said.

AI's research department cross-checks the information with other sources, he said. Once the information is verified, the AI network of adoption groups are informed of the victim's circumstances.

The adoption groups send letters to officials in the offending government, maintain vigils at embassies, educate their communities to the situation, circulate petitions and seek the support of non-governmental international organizations in appealing for the prisoner's release, he said.

Nelson said adoption groups receive three names per month, one each from the East European bloc countries and the Western and the Third World nations.

The AI network is funded by private donations and AI groups raise money to support families of prisoners, Nelson said.

The 21-year-old organization has 100,000 members in 78 countries and has adopted 13,000 prisoners of conscience since 1961, according to an AI report. Of those prisoners, over one-half have been released.

Doors open by looking good career seminar speaker says

By Richard Burr

A college education may help students keep their jobs, but looking good will get them in the door.

Sal Calvano, owner of Cutters Hair, a Phoenix hair salon, said appearance is the key to making a good first impression in an interview.

"You never have a second chance to make a first impression for employment,"

Calvano said.

The program in the MU Coconino Room was part of Associated Students' Career Awareness Week presentation on dressing for success.

"We feel the name of the game is getting it all together — not just the hair, not just the skin, but all of these together," he said.

Personal grooming is especially important in Arizona, he added.

"Skin and hair take an extreme beating, compared to Chicago and New York, in Arizona because it is a low humidity area," Calvano said.

He said a haircut is a financial investment.

"You are basically investing in yourself for the future when you get a haircut," he said.

Shell denied the administration's move is an effort to impinge on student leadership.

"If a policy that is consistent with the attorney general's opinion is a mockery, then I can't speak for the law," he said.

Arizona Attorney General Bob Corbin issued a statement last May that the University has the final word when expending monies for student recreation.

In a Jan. 9 memo, Shell issued a ban on spending University funds for purchasing, leasing or renting obscene and/or X-rated, pornographic movies for viewing in University facilities.

The ASASU Executive Committee supported the administration's position by voting Jan. 29 "to show disapproval of any further effort to show X-rated films on campus."

On Monday, the ASASU Supreme Court ruled the Executive Committee's ban on the showing of X-rated films in the Neeb Hall Film Series violated the First and Fourteenth amendments.

Also on Monday, Glicksman gave Shell a requisition order for the X-rated film "Emmanuelle: Joys of a Woman," saying she needed a response within 36 hours to ensure delivery of the movie for this weekend and proper advertisement.

Shell said he refused to act on the "premature requisition" because the court stipulated the Executive Committee must first formally structure its guidelines for choosing films.

"I'm not persuaded that all the institutional processes have been exhausted," Shell said.

Because my mouth
Is wide with laughter
And my throat
Is deep with song,
You do not think
I suffer after
I have held my pain
So long.

Because my mouth
Is wide with laughter
You do not hear
My inner cry,
Because my feet
Are gay with dancing
You do not know
I die.

"ridiculous" in going against the decisions made by the judicial branch of the ASASU.

"We should be in compliance with their decision because that's the way the Constitution was set up," Spinella added.

The five-member Supreme Court is chosen for a term not exceeding two years by ASASU President Tom Ajamie with approval of the ASASU senate.

Matthew Scully, Executive Committee member, said the committee should "simply ignore" the Supreme Court decision and continue to refuse to spend University monies on X-rated films.

Ajamie said the committee should consult legal counsel on the resolution before deciding on the question.

Two heads are b

By J.J. Martin

Other than the fact he has two heads, life couldn't be more comfortable for Loren and Leroy.

He just hangs out in a three-by-five foot terrarium all day and gets fed four mice every 10 days.

Occasionally one head tries to bite the other, and they often squabble over who gets to eat first, but despite their differences they seem to get along just fine.

The critter in this case is a two-headed Yuma Kingsnake. Larry Nienaber, the animal caretaker in the ASU Life Science Center, said the snake was loaned to him by a lady who found it near her home on South Mountain.

"She kept the snake for three years, but needed someone to take care of it while she went on a trip to Boston," he said. "Then she moved to Jerome, Arizona and asked that we keep it here because it was hard to get mice there. That was eight months ago and I haven't seen her since."

Because of the snake's uniqueness, Nienaber said he decided earlier this month to put it on display for others to see.

He said it is unusual the reptile lived on its own at South Mountain, and added it would have little chance of surviving for very long out in the wild.

"The heads would be competing for the same food and they'd never be able to eat because of constant fighting," he said. "When I feed them, I let whichever head grabs the mouse first eat it and then keep the other head busy so there'll be no trouble."

Nienaber said no one side is more dominant than the other although sometimes they do try to go in opposite directions.

"One head is bigger and eats more often. But since it (the food) goes to the same place it doesn't matter. What it does psychologically — who knows?" Nienaber said.

e better than one

The Yuma Kingsnake can be found only in Arizona and parts of Mexico. They can grow up to four feet in length and will eat anything they can catch, including each other.

According to M.J. Fouquette, a socio-professor of zoology, the snake's dual heads were formed in its embryonic stages.

"We can only speculate that something caused the head part of the embryo to split," he said. "It just didn't split very far. Instead of twins he just ended up with twin heads."

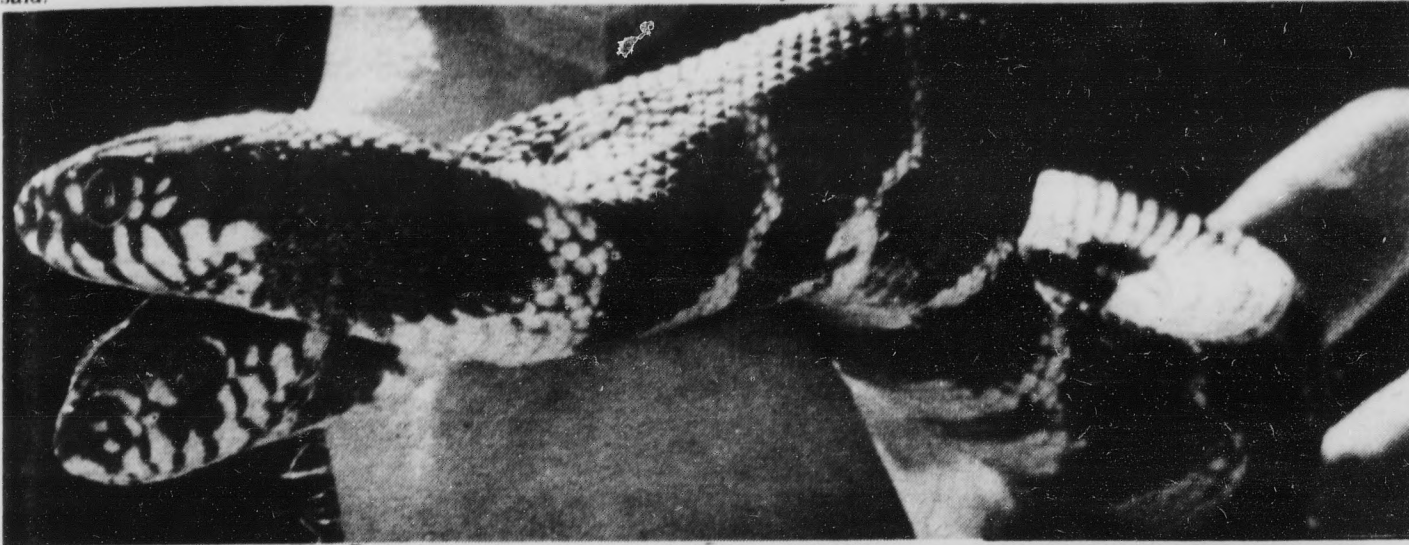

Since both esophagi start out separate and then run together, both heads believe they're the one that should eat, Nienaber said.

The snake's two heads can't eat at the same time because it would block the apex of the esophagus, he added.

Nienaber said neither head is totally dependent upon the other.

"Since both heads can control the body I would guess that you could chop off one head and the other would still live," he said. "It might even be better for the other head because there'd be less competition and fighting."

Nienaber did not speculate as to who would go — Loren or Leroy.

Jones, Stanford hope for 2nd straight upset

By Pete Prisco

Most human beings set some sort of goals in their lives.

Some of these goals are met, some are missed and some are even exceeded.

Stanford's freshman guard Keith Jones is one of the lucky ones who has exceeded his goal for 1981.

"My goal at the beginning of the season was to be a starter by the time conference games began," Jones said. "And I did that, so I am very pleased."

Jones, however, has gone light years past his goal, as he is averaging 10.2 points per game and scored a career-high 23 points in the Cardinals 74-72 upset of UCLA last weekend.

For his efforts against the Bruins, as well as his 14-point performance against USC, Jones was named Pac-10 Player-of-the Week.

Jones said he is very surprised, but honored, to receive the award.

"It was a very unexpected surprise," Jones said, "but it really feels great."

Jones, who played his high school ball right here in the Valley at Phoenix Union, hit nine out of the 10 shots he took, including the game-winner against the Bruins.

Jones said his jump shot was going down against the Bruins because he has loosened up since the early part of the season.

"I've always had a lot of confidence in my shot," Jones said. "But against the Bruins I just opened up a bit and began mixing it (shot selection) up."

Besides being a bit tentative earlier this season, Jones also had a knack to turn the ball over — which can be expected of a freshman.

Lately, the turnovers have been cut down and Jones said this is mainly because he is thinking about what he's doing a lot more.

"I had problems with turnovers because I wasn't concentrating," Jones said. "I would throw a pass and then wish I had it back."

"But now I'm using my head more before I throw a pass."

Jones, who was the Arizona State Player of the Year his senior year, decided to take his talents to Palo Alto, Calif., because of the academic standards at Stanford.

"Stanford is an excellent school, and I thought it would be a good place to get an education," Jones said. "I'm majoring in economics here, and I hope to attend graduate school someday."

Like any other freshman, Jones said he has struggled with school work at times, but always manages to come through in the clutch.

"I'll get behind and then

Gymnast sparks Devil comeback

By Kevin Widlic

If the ASU men's gymnastics team was a movie, Donnie Hinton would be nominated for best supporting actor. But as it is, Hinton's talents will have to be relegated to simply being one in a galaxy of stars.

Following gymnasts Jeff Beason, John Cadigan and Tom DeWitt on the ASU roster you'll find Hinton. But it's taken plenty of hard work for the junior, who now tops the team in the floor exercise, to even be mentioned in the same breath.

Born in Washington, D.C., and raised in Potomac, Md., the 20-year-old Hinton began his career at ASU as a non-scholarship performer. This could've been a bitter pill to swallow after a high school career (Walt Whitman High), which culminated in his being named the 1978 All-Around State Champ and recognition as a prep All-American.

Hardly. "I was offered scholarships to several smaller colleges, but I didn't really want to go to any of them," Hinton said. "I came out here for the sun — and for gymnastics."

"I walked on my first year, but last year coach (Don Robinson) gave me a scholarship."

Earning that "free ride" was goal No. 1 for Hinton, and a score of 9.7 (out of a possible 10) in his specialty, the floor exercise, against Northern Illinois last season certainly helped pave the way.

"Hey, Donnie was darn good — he really worked hard for that scholarship," Robinson said, "and he's not slacking off at all."

"I think he's going to ask me for more (full scholarship) after this year."

Hinton, who also enjoys diving, started gymnastics in the ninth grade, which is right around the time most gymnasts begin the trail of toilsome work. And he had a fine tutor to start him off on the right foot.

"I really enjoyed gymnastics in high school," Hinton said. "Although we didn't have a very good program, it was fun."

"The man who taught me the most was my coach, Jack Leonard. In fact, he used to be the National Tumbling Champ."

More about Hinton

Another "Champ," formerly the world's best, Sun Devil assistant Coach Kurt Thomas also has added to Hinton's technique "when he's here."

After last season's impressive record, more of the same was expected of the Devil gymnast. However, it's been a laborious struggle since the recent season began. Out early with a sprained ankle, among other injuries, Hinton missed the first four meets. Facing Chico St. and Odessa College in a Jan. 23 triangular, Hinton finally burst onto the scene with a score of 50.90 in the all-around.

It was in Saturday's Southwest Cup where Hinton at last put it all together. Placing second in both the high bar and in the floor exercise, where he scored 9.55, the business major helped ASU to second in the meet behind Cal-Berkeley.

"Donnie should've won that floor exercise," Robinson said. "Looking over and over at the films of the meet, there's no way he shouldn't have taken first."

But Hinton said he looks out for the team first.

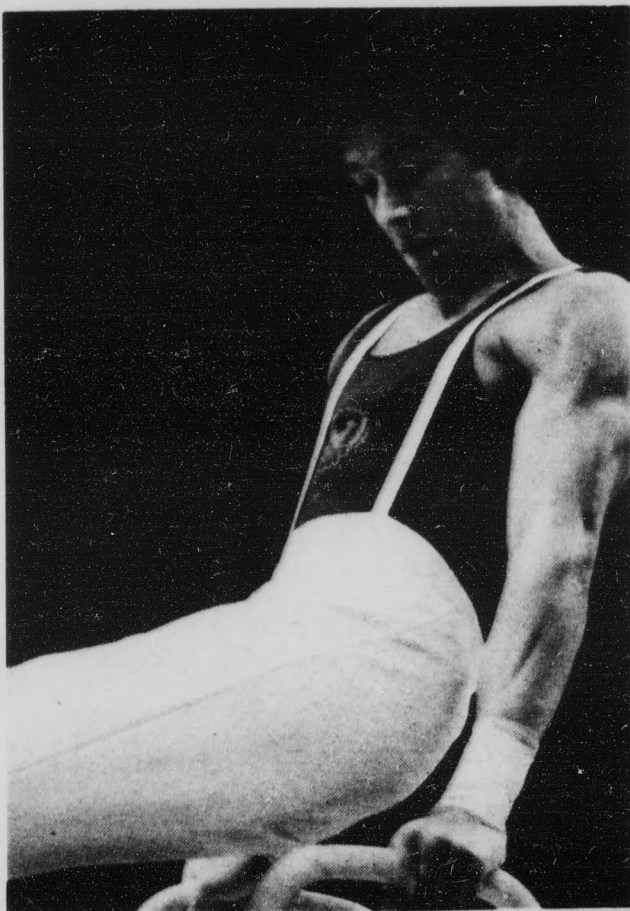

"We're proud of the team here," Hinton said. "We've gone to Nationals seven years in a row, which is a record."

"But with the new system (of gaining admission to the NCAAAs), we've had to go hard every meet."

"We should make it — easily."

With ASU's slow start matching Hinton's, the Sun Devils have suddenly made a turn for the better beginning ironically in January — like Donnie Hinton's. But the correlation between the two is hardly ironic.

Maybe after this year's successes the guy will be up for best actor next season.

The Devils are enjoying a recent victory in the University of Arizona Collegiate, their third win of the 1980-81 season. In the event, ASU shot a 562 total to out distance its closest challenger, UA, by 22 shots.

Sophomore Dennis

LeDonne eagled the last hole in the tournament at Ahwatukee Country Club to win the individual title with a 137 total, seven-under par. Brian Conser finished second with a 138 total with Tony Grimes shooting 139 to claim third place.

Those making the trip for the Pacific Coast tournament are Dan Forsman, LeDonne, Conser, Grimes, Roy McMillin, and James Crow.

Matmen eye another Pac-10 championship

The ASU men's wrestling team will attempt to win back-to-back Pac-10 titles as they travel to Corvallis, Ore., for the PAC championships Sunday and Monday.

The Sun Devils, who won the Pac-10 title in Tucson last year, will be led by Dan Severn in the Heavyweight division, Gary Bohay at 126 pounds and Harlan Kistler at 134 pounds.

Severn won the PAC title last season and went on to finish second in the NCAA tournament.

Bohay and Kistler also took part in the Pac-10 Championships last season, although for a different team.

The pair transferred to ASU from UCLA, after the Bruins dropped their wrestling program.

Although the Devils won the Pac-10 meet last season, while totaling up 82 1/2 points, ASU head Coach Bobby Douglas said he feels this year's meet won't be quite as easy.

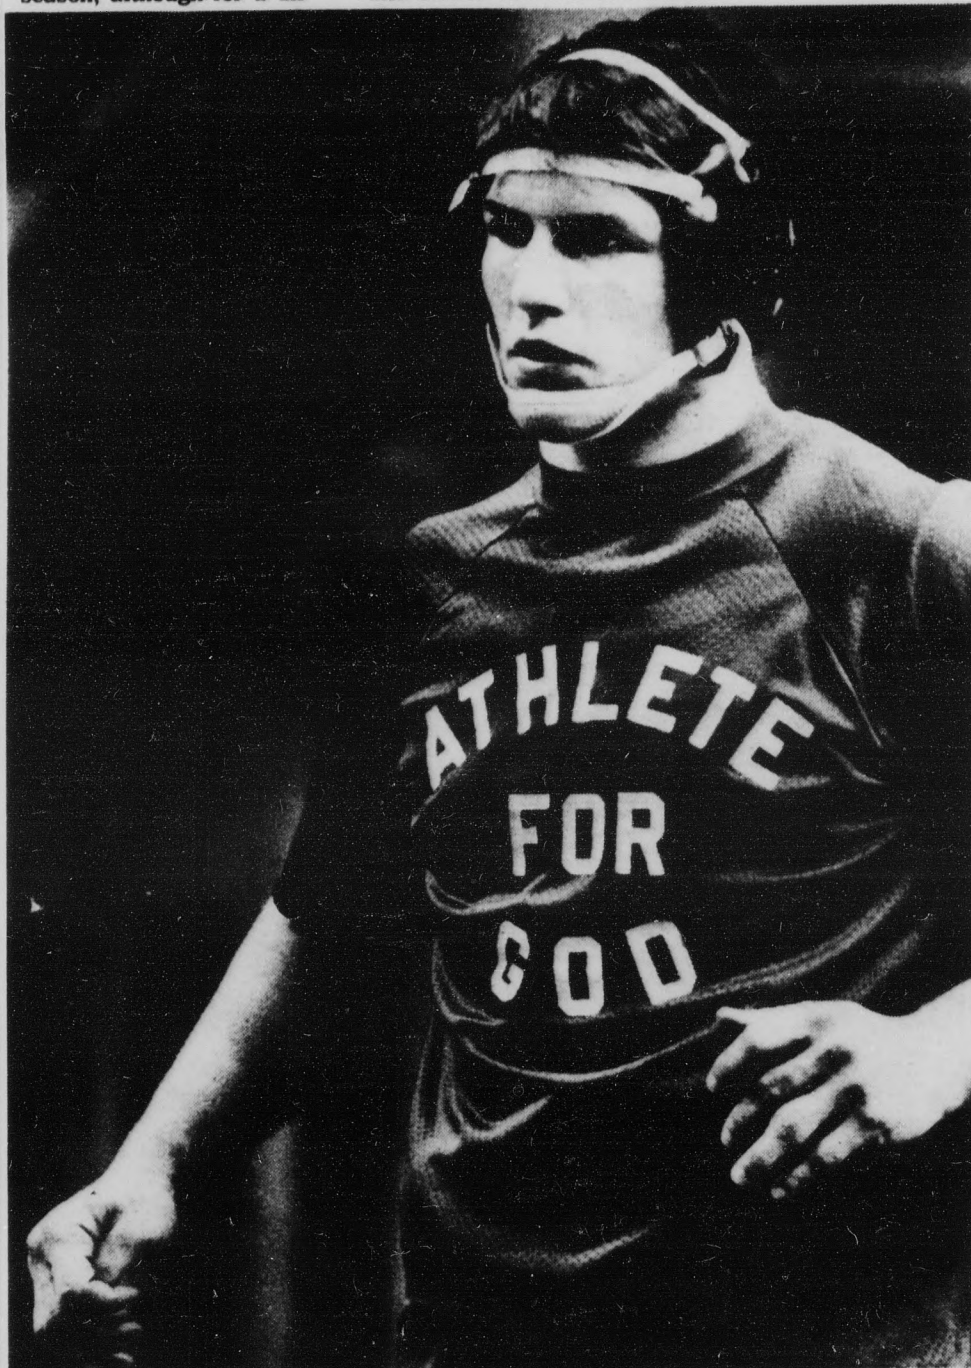

"On paper Oregon is the team to beat," Douglas said. "Even though we beat them in a dual meet (20-19) I would still have to consider them the favorites because they will be practically wrestling in their own backyard."

The Devils tied a school record this season by winning 15 dual meets, while losing only one.

The ASU lineup for the Pac-10 meet looks like this:

- 118-Fr. David Martin (18-9-1)
- 126-Jr. Gary Bohay (25-1-1)
- 134-Jr. Harlan Kistler (17-4)
- 142-Jr. Bobby Williams (13-10-1)
- 150-Jr. Jackson Kistler (13-7-1)
- 158-So. Chris Bodine (16-6)
- 167-Jr. Joe Koeth (7-6)
- 177-Sr. Tom Rankin (8-2)
- 190-Fr. Mike Severn (12-10)
- HWT-Sr. Dan Severn (32-2-1)

More about

I'll really have to bog down to make it," Jones said. "Sometimes I don't think I can do it, but somehow I always do."

When the Cardinals face ASU tonight at 7:30 p.m. at the Activity Center, Jones will team with 6-foot-2 Doug Marty in the Stanford starting backcourt.

He said he feels their matchup with the ASU guards, Byron Scott and Fat Lever, could be the deciding factor in Stanford's quest for a second upset in a row.

"We have to keep Scott and Lever under 22 points collectively," Jones said. "If we do this, as well as screen off the boards, we will have a chance to upset them."

As is the case with any homecoming, Jones will have the added pressure of playing in front of friends and relatives.

Jones said he's going to try and block that thought out of his mind, but he said it will be hard.

"It's a good feeling to play against guys I played against in high school (Lever, Paul Williams) in front of the home fans," he said. "I know they (friends and relatives) are going to be in the stands, and I'm going to try and pretend they are not there. But that will be hard to do."

While the Cardinals are still riding high on their upset of the UCLA Bruins, Jones said he is disappointed in the team's record to date.

"I felt we could finish in the upper division of the the Pac-10," Jones said. "But we lost quite a few close games, so there was no way we will finish up in the first division."

Joining Jones and Marty in the Stanford starting lineup will be leading scorer Brian Welch (15.0), 6-foot-7 freshman John Revelli and 6-foot-9 freshman Hans Wichary.

Jones said that if the Cardinals do upset ASU they will be a very high flying team.

"If we beat them," he said, "it will take us a long time to come down."

I BET YOU DIDN'T KNOW
By Larry Dragiewicz, CLU
Do you believe in fate? ... Here's a true, tragic basketball story about fate ... In 1977, David Furr tried out for the University of Evansville basketball team but he injured an ankle and was dropped from the team ... Then he became the team's statistician for home games only ... On Dec. 14, all members of the Evansville team were killed in a plane crash on the way to a road game ... Furr wasn't on that plane, and you'd say he was lucky to have injured his ankle, and lucky again that the university didn't take him to away games as a statistician ... But right after the team's plane crashed, Furr was driving his car near Evansville ... The car skidded on a patch of ice, collided with a truck and Furr was killed instantly ... It seemed that David Furr's time was up whether he had made that fatal air trip with the Evansville basketball team or not.

Although many basketball fans feel that referees' calls decide many games, it's an odd fact that only ONCE in the last 30 years has the team that made the most foul shots in the National Basketball Association also won the NBA title ... The only time it's happened was 1966-67 when the 76ers led the league in free throws and also won the championship of the NBA ... You'd think it would have happened more often, but it hasn't.

I bet you didn't know that with the purchase of your College Life Policy you have GUARANTEED INSURABLE. Regardless of any changes in your health and occupation you have the right to add up to $150,000.
