ASU Apartments will receive new fire and safety systems

By Emily Smith
Staff writer

The ASU Facilities, Management and Planning department offered a contract to Sullivan and Masson consulting engineers Monday, to design a $2 million fire and life safety system for the recently purchased University Apartments, Paul Fiedler, University planning architect said Tuesday.

"We should be receiving an answer from them (Sullivan and Masson) sometime next week," Fiedler said. "I would doubt very much if they were to refuse the contract because they gave us a proposal and there would be no point at this time for them not to (accept the contract)."

The $2 million comes from "University investment income," Bill Phelps, ASU associate vice president for business affairs said.

"All we are doing is loaning it (the money) to housing and they will pay it back,"

Phelps said. "Housing must be self-supporting."

According to Jack Shafer, ASU director of Facilities, Management and Planning, 90 percent of the money allotted to the University Apartments will be used to bring the building up to the state fire code.

This includes designing and installing smoke and those sprinkler systems."

Although approximately 80 summer school students are now living in the University Apartments, Shafer said that it is safe, even though the building does not meet the fire code.

"It is a little bit like the campus lighting — it is not really dangerous, but it is not acceptable either."

Ninety percent of money allotted to the University Apartments will be used to bring them up to the fire code.

heat detectors in each apartment and implementing a sprinkler system throughout the complex.

"There is no fire sprinkler system in the complex now, but there is an alarm system," Shafer said. "The situation is like the one we had in the dorms last year before we implemented

The other 10 percent of the money will be used to improve the lighting, remodel rooms for handicapped student's use, and put in a generation system to provide emergency power for the complex, Shafer said.

Cliff Osborne, ASU Housing Office director said that there are a few minor construction jobs currently going on in the University Apartments, such as re-keying locks and re-roofing certain sections of the complex.

"There are bits and pieces happening, but none of it is very visible," Osborne said.

He added, "Most of the work to be done this summer will be engineering and design work."

Sullivan and Masson has been given 60 days to design a fire system, according to Shafer.

"We would like to have a construction bid agreed upon and construction started by early September," Shafer said.

The University Apartments, formerly called Cinnamon Tree Apartments, was purchased last semester by the ASU Housing department.

"There was a $2 million budget established at the time the building was purchased," Cliff Osborne, ASU housing director said.

Waving robot initiates ritual to start center

By Adrienne Flynn
Editor

The first shovelful of earth was turned for the $14 million Engineering Research Center by a 200-pound robot donated for the occasion by International Robomation/Intelligence.

A host of dignitaries instrumental in the development of the center threw the seven switches needed to activate the robot.

Dean of Engineering Clovis Haden, President of the Industrial Advisory Council James Verrant, ASU President J. Russell Nelson, Arizona Board of Regents President Esther Capin, Arizona Sen. Anne Lindeman (R-Phoenix) and Rep. Doug Todd (R-Tempe) threw the first six switches.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt, a little slower than the rest in throwing his switch, quipped, "Is everybody else done? Should I veto the action?" and then threw the switch.

The jointed arm of the robot came to life without a hitch and tossed a shovelful of earth into a pile to the delight of the approximately 300 persons attending the ceremonies.

The robot then swung its arm in salute to the crowd and whirled the shovel like a drum major leading a parade.

The sophisticated, computer-controlled robot was developed for industry by ASU graduate Lawrence Goshorn and utilizes aerospace construction techniques to achieve maximum strength with minimal size and weight.

William P. Reilly, master of ceremonies and president-elect of the regents, said the research center symbolizes a partnership between Arizona industry, state government and the University.

Haden also emphasized the partnership formed to get the Engineering Excellence program off the ground. The partnership, he said will result in a "general upgrading to excellence" and "higher visibility" for the University.

Haden said the excellence program could not succeed without a partnership and then explained what each member would contribute.

"The state is our support. The Legislature appropriates our funds. We provide educational service, continuing graduate education and a source of joint research.

"The state provides a good solid business environment and is pro-industrial growth — both Democrats and Republicans. Industry provides a solid tax base and makes us near recession proof. We're not recession proof, but this helps," Haden said.

He also emphasized the program must have "strong interaction with industry and the community."

Babbitt also stressed the cooperative effort of the Engineering Excellence program saying "tremendous effort by the entire community of Arizona — between town and gown; business and academia."

The 120,000 square-foot, five-story center is scheduled to be occupied by fall 1984 and the construction crew is on the site now, said Nelson.

The center will house a 4,500 square-foot, clean room laboratory for work in solid state electronics. The room is essential for this type of work because impurities in the air can ruin even the most careful experiments on microchips.

The center will also include a solar research platform on the roof where new solar energy systems and devices will be tested.

Teacher announces candidacy

TUCSON (AP) - Republican Ann Herzer, a 5th grade teacher in Phoenix public schools, announced her candidacy for state Superintendent of Public Instruction.

In speeches scheduled for Tucson and Phoenix, she said there is too much experimentation in education, which is not helping the children, and the educational system is being run by politicians "interested in perpetuating their own political career or vested interest."

"Since the early '60s, we have had one experimental program after another," she said, "yet we have seen a decline in academic achievement in this country."

10,000 Arizonans fail to register for draft

TUCSON (AP) - An estimated 10,000 Arizona men age 18 to 22 have failed to register for the draft, says the Selective Service.

The deadline for registration for those falling in that age bracket was Feb. 26, and federal officials have said they plan to prosecute those who did not register.

Myron Derbaum, deputy state director for Selective Service, said Monday that 89.7 percent of eligible Arizonans have registered for the draft. The national average for draft registration is 93 percent, he said.

Derbaum said he advises young men who failed to register on time that if they register now, it would probably be all right and the chances of being prosecuted would be slim.

However, he said he has no idea what the U.S. Justice Department plans to do in terms of prosecuting those who fail to register.

"That's not up to us," he said. "We just register them and turn the rolls over to the U.S. Justice Department."

Federal law requires all men to register for the draft within 30 days before or after their 18th birthday.

Babbitt straddles fence in Yuma split

YUMA (AP) - Gov. Bruce Babbitt said Tuesday he looks at the vote to split Yuma County as he would a divorce between two good friends - he doesn't want to lay blame or take sides but wants things to work out the best way possible.

In an interview with

KYEL-TV, Babbitt said he doesn't think it likely that he will call the Legislature into special session because of the split.

He said, too, that he doesn't see the need at this time to change the state's law dealing with how to split counties.

He said he believes legislators should watch the Yuma County experience and see how it works and then change laws if need be.

He said he believes a court challenge is inevitable.

New parking system to start in September

By Michael Phillips
Staff writer

Some of the recommendations presented by the University ad hoc parking committee will be implemented immediately, according to Troy Crowder, special assistant to University President J. Russell Nelson.

Crowder did not specify which recommendations these would be, but he did say the fall parking registration fees would probably not be changed.

"Parking registration forms have already been mailed to some faculty and staff," he said. "So I doubt if any changes will be made in this area until the spring semester."

The committee report suggested sharp increases in parking fees, with some decals — those within the central corridor — costing up to $30 per semester.

Other recommendations called for increased tram service and improved lighting.

"I suspect the recommendations will be implemented in phases," Crowder said. "They will become reality as soon as it's reasonable to make them so."

The committee also called for the construction of parking garages to alleviate ASU's long-range parking woes.

Three such structures were suggested in the committee's report.

A garage providing space for at least 1,000 vehicles was suggested for Lot 18, south of the College of Business Administration. The report called for the construction to be completed by academic year 1983-84.

Parking structures providing space for 2,500 and 500 vehicles were recommended in Lots 42 and 1, respectively. Construction of these two garages was recommended for later academic years.

"Building parking structures has been talked about for some time," Crowder said. "But I think we're getting closer to doing it."

Reading from a statement issued by Nelson, Crowder said the President was very pleased with the work of the parking committee, saying Nelson felt the information provided in the report would be useful in formulating solutions.

Special program lacks coverage

Editor:

On Wednesday, April 7, 1982 our organization (the Hispanic Business Students Association), in conjunction with ASASU, held "Career Day 1982." This program was a University-wide event and approximately 200 students attended our workshop seminars that focused on careers available in the '80's in engineering, business, law, and communications.

Companies represented, ranged from Mountain Bell and IBM to the Arizona Attorney's Office and many more. ASU President J. Russell Nelson opened the program by welcoming all the participants and speaking on the continued importance of formal education. In addition to our workshops, we offered a luncheon that featured Gov. Bruce Babbitt as our keynote speaker. Our program was a complete success and was offered to the entire Arizona State University community.

The State Press staff was contacted on several occasions about our program and asked for coverage. In addition, several advertisements were paid for by our Association in order to promote our program through your newspaper.

I was surprised to see no article in the following days edition about "Career Day," and I am inquiring about the reasons behind the non-coverage. I feel that coverage was important to our organization as well as the entire University faculty, staff, and student population since this was the first year we have offered such an event. The success has encouraged us to offer such a program in the future. I would appreciate you writing me to explain the circumstances for the non-coverage.

Sincerely,
J. Rudolph Juarez
HBSA President

Parking advice bungled, formed to fix problems ends up creating more

Adrienne Flynn

editor

The illustrious president's ad hoc parking committee recently made recommendations they feel may solve the underabundance of parking areas on campus. Among them were raising the parking decal price from $5 per year to a sliding semester scale. Under the proposal, more desirable parking would be priced higher.

Prices would be:

- $30 per semester for parking in the central corridor.
- $20 per semester for the lots north of University Drive, south of Apache Boulevard, and Lots 8 and 16.
- $10 per semester for parking in the infamous Lot 59 (and 59E).

For the really affluent, a 24-hour, reserved space could be purchased for a paltry $150 per semester. Summer school fees would be half-price as would motorcyle parking.

As if that weren't gift enough, the benevolent parking committee generously recommended increasing fines to $25, except for more serious ones, of course, which would be $50. After three citations, the vehicle gets rhino-booted and a fourth violation results in towing or impoundment. I guess for a fifth violation you get the death penalty.

These increases are glazed over easily saying the inflated fees go to a good cause — their long term solutions — parking garages.

To facilitate movement from parking outpost to parking outpost, the committee in their infinite wisdom suggested an expanded tram service, however, they are not as articulate about this solution as they are about the details of their exorbitant fee increases.

These increases amount to usury and discrimination against less affluent students, staff and faculty. Let the poor students, enduring financial aid cuts and skyrocketing tuition rates, walk several miles in to campus from their parking spaces. They need the exercise.

Peasants are always of hardier stock and can endure more physical labor than can the frail rich, backs bent with the weight of their wallets.

The parking committee has missed the point of their mission. Their recommendations will only serve to create animosity between students, staff and faculty and the administration.

The already excessive parking fines are an undue burden on the University community. This community is a computer community. They do not park on campus by choice. They park because they have to park here. If the spaces aren't available and they have to park on campus, they will make a space available. It's human nature.

Increasing tram service is a good idea. So are the central parking authority and parking garages. Actually the increase in decal prices is sensible, but not to the point where they are priced right out of the market. If the University expects to pay for its parking garages through decal prices and not violations then it should make it convenient and affordable to park on campus.

There are many places in and around campus that will allow people from the University to park for a $5 monthly fee. These areas are certainly more desirable than parking in the badlands of Lot 59 for nearly the same price.

Also if staff members have to leave campus to attend to business they should have space near their offices so they can return and be assured of a space. Staff members from certain buildings should be assigned to certain lots to perhaps reduce spaces stolen when they must leave.

Summer school parking should also be reorganized. It is obvious in the summer that there are more students than there are faculty to teach them. However the same amount of "central corridor" parking space is devoted to the diminished ranks of summer faculty as there is the burgeoning academic year faculty. These spaces should be turned over to staff and students.

President Nelson should consider the solution other schools have come up with for their problems. One is to bar freshmen or various dormitory students from parking on campus, thus freeing spaces for commuters.

But the University cannot dole out parking on the basis of a person's financial status therefore penalizing poorer students for that status.

We need convenient parking at a reasonable rate. The parking committee is not offering this.

New dean examines college

By Dave Ryan
Staff writer

L. William Seidman is ASU's new dean of the College of Business Administration.

Appointed last week by President J. Russell Nelson, Seidman said business schools are in a period of in-depth re-examination, because, "clearly American business, competitively around the world, has got some problems. Not all of which you can blame on the business schools, but part of which you can."

"The primary (goal of a business school)," he said, "is to provide an education for the students that makes them assets to the business community when they leave the school."

"Most import of all you have to be able to, as we used to say in politics, be ahead of the curve. You have to educate the students for what you perceive it's going to be like when they get (out), not what the world was 10 or 15 years ago."

When asked about ASU's business college, and its size, Seidman said, "I do not have any firm opinion about the size, whether it's bad, good, or indifferent, except that size does give you a chance, because of the volume of dollars and the spread of students, to do some interesting things."

Seidman said student opinion will be an important consideration in any kind of change or shaping of the way the business school operates.

Seidman said he wasn't necessarily looking to change jobs when a recruiting firm contacted him about the ASU position, but at the time he was looking at possible positions with the state department and Georgetown University.

However, when he visited Tempe, he was impressed with ASU's potential under Nelson's leadership.

"Eager to do something different," Seidman will be living in Arizona for the first time when he takes his $70,000 position on September 1.

The former assistant for economic affairs to President Gerald Ford and current vice chairman and director of the Phelps Dodge Corporation, Seidman will succeed interim Dean William Reif. Reif replaced former Dean Glenn Overmann in 1980.

Seidman, 61, has been Phelps Dodge's chief administrative and financial officer since 1977 and vice chairman of the board of directors since 1980. He said he plans to continue as a Phelps Dodge director.

Prior to being former President Ford's assistant, Seidman was the administrative head of Ford's vice presidential office in 1974.

Between 1966 and 1974, he was managing partner of Seidman & Seidman, an international certified public accounting firm.

Seidman is chairman of the board of The Washington Campus, a Washington, D.C. group of leading institutions of higher education brought together to provide graduate business students and executives with courses focused on business/- government relations.

"I hope ASU will join," Seidman said of the Washington Campus, "and I hope the group accepts ASU into the consortium."

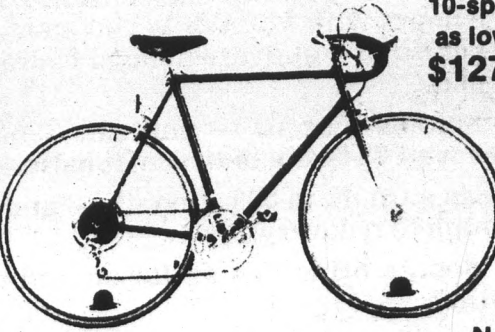

Seidman graduated Phi Beta Kappa from Dartmouth in 1943, earned a law degree from Harvard in 1948 and a master's degree in business administration from the University of Michigan in 1949.

Scientist gets honors

By Adrienne Flynn
Editor

The project leader for the Forest Services Laboratory on the ASU campus was one of 10 professionals nationwide to receive Gulf Oil's prestigious Conservation Award.

"There's only two awards that people working in my field hope to get — one is the Leopold award and the other is the Conservation Award. Just to get one of them was quite an honor," said Donald Patton.

The Leopold Award comes after many years of service, Patton said, and at 49 years old he said he is "too young for that."

"I've never set awards as a goal," Patton said. "I do a type of research that helps managers make a decision. We don't make a decision, we provide them with the information. It's not a goal (the award), but it's sure nice to get."

Patton received the award for his work with the Abert squirrel and his role in the development of "Run Wild", a data base management system for wildlife containing the habits and habitats of 745 southwestern vertebrate species.

The system, Patton said, matches the species with its habitats and can tell the scientist which foods, vegetation types and shelters the animal prefers. He said this information is vital when writing an environmental impact statement for an area.

"Run Wild" was developed by Patton on the ASU computer but is now housed in the U.S. Department of Agriculture computer at Fort Collins, Col. This gives agencies such as the state fish and game department and the Bureau of Land Management access to the computer, which can be activated over the telephone.

Patton's work on the Abert squirrel concentrated on man's effect on the squirrel's habitat and the development of its habitat model.

The squirrel, which Patton said lives in the Ponderosa pine areas of Arizona and New Mexico, "aesthetically is a pleasant animal to see."

Patton said he is only one of four forest service people to receive one of the 450 prizes awarded. He also said as far as he remembers there has not been anyone from ASU to win the honor. "No one's won it in the 18 years I've been here," Patton said.

Patton and the other 18 scientists at the ASU facility serve as adjunct professors to the University. Patton is a professor in the agriculture department and a research associate with the zoology and botany departments.

Patton holds a bachelor's degree in forestry from West Virginia University, a master's in wildlife from Virginia Polytechnical Institute and a doctorate in watershed management from U of A.

ASASU's surplus budget placed in new plant fund

By Michael Phillips
Staff writer

The Associated Students executive committee created a plant fund June 2, for the $25,000 surplus remaining in the ASASU budget.

According to ASASU President Neil Giuliano, if the money had not been transferred into the emergency, or some other fund, ASASU would have lost control of it when the new budget took effect July 1.

The money in the new plant fund will reportedly be used for physical improvements to the ASASU offices, but may be used to improve any structure on campus.

The funds may be transferred, however, for other uses once the new budget takes effect.

The executive committee also appointed six University students to the Board of Directors of the Arizona Students' Association.

ASA is a state-wide student organization which deals with the Board of Regents and the Arizona Legislature on issues concerning the Arizona university system.

The board is comprised of five students from each state university, including the student body president.

Giuliano presented a list of appointees to the committee on June 2, but a motion was passed to withhold their confirmation until committee members had time to study the applications.

On June 3, the committee met again and approved a change to the list of appointments.

Raymond Burnell, a liberal arts major, was substituted for Amy Whitehead, a sophomore in public programs.

The amended list was passed by the committee 2-1. In addition to Burnell, the other students comprising the ASA board are: Gregory Kunasek, president of the Ocotillo Hall Council and a resident assistant; David Adam, a 1981-82 ASASU senator from the College of Business Administration, and Steve Leal, a member of the executive council of the Hispanic Business Students Association.

The appointment of Burnell over Whitehead created some dissention within the committee. Activities Vice President Kim Fuller voiced regret at the decision.

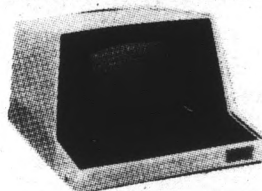

"I think not using the original list was a political decision," she said. "I'm very disappointed that we have to go into political pettiness."

"I just thought Burnell was more qualified than Whitehead," said Campus Affairs Vice President Wanda Jones, explaining her support of the amended list of appointees.

Executive Vice President Dave Hamm, who introduced the amendment, was out of town and unavailable for comment.

Both Burnell and Whitehead are past members of ASA.

Never mind convention, these rockers write their own rules . . .

More than merely rock legend:

By Michael Phillips
Staff writer
"When we started, we agreed on one thing — there would be no rules."

—Mick Jones/The Clash.
Rarely does the opportunity present itself to see a phenomenon, a shooting star burning red-hot and heading only God knows where.

Rarely, in the world of rock and roll, are there chances to see the legends being written, to observe the facts that will comprise the myths of another generation.

When The Clash storms into town this Sunday evening at the Mesa Amphitheatre, a Valley audience may get such a chance.

From its beginnings in '76, as the most politically vocal of Britain's new wave bands, the Clash has defied logic, spit in the face of traditionalists and found themselves carrying the banner of an entire generation nobody wants to touch.

For if the punks and skinheads are rewriting the history of rock, the Clash is unquestionably their finest author.

In 1980, with the release of "London Calling," The Clash broke into the consciousness of America's rock and roll establishment.

The album, and the group, enjoyed a staggering success.

At the end of the year, "London Calling" had been voted album of the year by

Clash received similar accolades as band of the year.

And less than 10 months later, The Clash stunned the rock and roll community by releasing a three-record album entitled "Sandinista!" It was yet another unprecedented accomplishment.

Rolling Stone reviewer John Piccarrella gave "Sandinista!" a five-star rating, the first album or group ever to receive that distinction.

In a single year The Clash turned the rock and roll establishment on its collective ear.

But to understand The Clash and its members' influence on rock and roll, one must understand the causes behind the effect.

End: The Clash crash the Valley

Topper Headon, and Joe Strummer. They will be appearing with the punk go beyond fashionable fad, they represent a reaction to social and political strife.

A reeling economy, massive unemployment and a government characterized as uncaring has sparked a generation into angry rebellion. The music of this movement — primitive, harsh, energy-packed and biting — is a statement from the disillusioned youths living a life, they themselves, have characterized as hopeless.

In the middle of this morass stands The Clash, the lucid spokesman of Britain's lost generation, circa 1982.

The Clash's lyrics and music paint a frightening picture of that hopelessness, evolved into rock's most poignant political critic since Bob Dylan.

At the peak of their success, with albums riding high on the charts, it was reported each band member lived on a stipend of slightly over $200 a week.

"Rock and roll's not about money," quipped The Clash's Joe Strummer.

Even on this latest tour, The Clash present an enigmatic visage. A newly released album by the group, "Combat Rock," has been met with disappointment by many critics.

And recently, guitarist Strummer was reported as missing, prompting speculation The Clash tour might be cancelled.

A spokesman for Epic Records, The Clash's U.S. label, could provide little information except to say Strummer had returned and the show would go on.

"Other than that, I don't even know where they're at," the spokesman said.

It almost seems fitting. No other band in recent memory has rekindled the spirit of rock and roll like The Clash. They have broken every rule, remained pure, refused to compromise.

To The Clash, rock and roll is the only thing that matters. Which is why the group's concert Sunday night in Mesa should be an event to remember.

Heroes, even anti-heroes, are hard to find.

First performance fails to be "Fantasticks"

By Marjorie Zeitler
Contributing writer

ASU Music Theatre opened the summer season June 4, with their second production of "Fantasticks" in 18 years. It has become such a popular musical, that more than one million people in 50 countries have flocked to see it since its New York debut 22 years ago. Despite initial unfavorable reviews the show has endured.

I'm not certain what the critics complained about in New York 22 years ago, but I know exactly what I didn't like about last Friday evening's performance.

The story is charming enough — two fathers wishing to unite their children in marriage, wisely realize that if they urge them to get married, the children would undoubtedly do the opposite. So, the determined fathers construct a wall to keep the youngsters separated, and just as expected, the two fall in love.

The children learn soon enough, however, that the sugar-coated notions they held about life and love aren't as sweet as they imagined.

Joe Woodward as the narrator-bandit performed "Try to Remember" without the vocal projection necessary to give the song its due importance. The orchestra didn't help him by at times playing louder than the handsome Woodward could sing.

Debby Rosenthal portrayed the fanciful teenager with a fine sense of comedy, but she had obvious difficulty staying on key.

Stephen Goodfriend, as the boy, played his part exuberantly and handled his songs with relative ease.

But another unfortunate aspect of the music was several of the songs were rushed.

Helping to create an entertaining evening, despite musical problems, were Jerry Harkey and J.P. Gabriel as the two fathers, Lyman Goodrich as the Man who dies, and Martin Napolitano as the old actor. These performers gave the audience some very funny moments, particularly in the first act, and though she didn't have any lines, Dawn Kennington-Bejar played the mute to quiet perfection.

"The Fantasticks" is directed by Brian Hall, and Steven Bowen serves as musical director.

"The Fantasticks" is playing at ASU's Lyric Opera Theatre June 4, 5, 6, 13, 17, 18, 19, 24, 30 and July 8, 10.

Debby Rosenthal (left) is all eyes as Dawn Kennington-Bejar reflects in this scene from "The Fantasticks."

The Dred Scott Decision
The Slave

The Roe vs. Wade Decision
The Unborn Baby

Although he may have a heart and a brain, and he may be a human life biologically, a slave is not a legal person. The Dred Scott decision by the U.S. Supreme Court has made that clear.	Although he may have a heart and a brain, and he may be a human life biologically, an unborn baby is not a legal person. Our U.S. Supreme Court has just made this clear.
A black person only becomes a legal person when he or she is set free. Before that time, we should not concern ourselves about him because he has no legal rights.	A baby only becomes a legal person when he is born. Before that time, we should not concern ourselves about him because he has no legal rights.
If you think that slavery is wrong, then nobody is forcing you to be a slave-owner. But don't impose your morality on somebody else!	If you think abortion is wrong, then nobody is forcing you to have one. But don't impose your morality on somebody else!
A man has a right to do what he wants with his own property.	A woman has a right to do what she wants with her own body.
Isn't slavery really something merciful? After all, every black man has a right to be protected. Isn't it better never to be set free than to be sent unprepared, and ill-equipped into a cruel world? (Spoken by someone already free)	Isn't abortion really something merciful? After all, every baby has a right to be wanted. How My Roommate got an A!!!!

Today Lester and I heard the ad for a free Evelyn Wood speed reading lesson. I was skeptical, but Lester said: "What have we got to lose? We've got hundreds of books to read."

We doubled our reading speed at the free mini lesson. They guarantee by the end of the course you will read 3 - 10 times faster with the same or better comprehension. I was intrigued, but didn't think I could spare the time.

Lester signed up for the 7 week course.

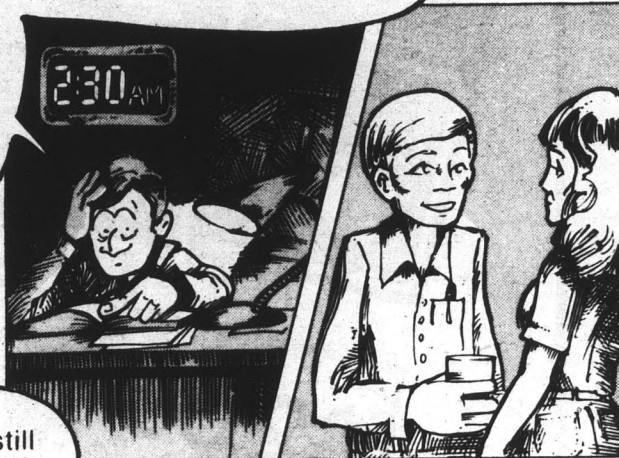

On Tuesday night Lester set out for his weekly speed reading class and I set out for a party. After all there was time till final exams.

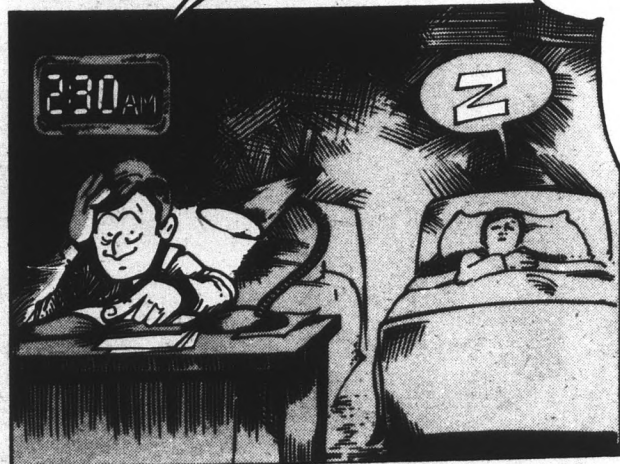

The weeks passed & before I knew it I was cramming all night for final exams.

Lester would study for a couple of hours, and then set out on a date.

7 hours until the final & still hundreds of pages to read. Lester slept like a baby, I thought he was crazy but he said he had nothing to worry about, he'd read all the material and was just going to scan his notes in the morning. I hope he fails.

The final exam comes and I finally get some sleep. After all my cramming I end up with a C and Lester gets an A. I know I'll take the Evelyn Wood course next year.

ASU limps home hurt

By Tony Alba
Sports writer

It was a disappointing finish to a fine year for the ASU track teams as both the men's and women's teams turned in less-than-sparkling performances at the NCAA Championship meet in Provo, Utah, last weekend.

The men scored 26 points in the meet, good for 18th place, while the women tied for 24th place with 13 points.

Freshman Dodie Campbell finished 12th in the women's javelin with a throw of 161-feet, 3-inches, and sophomore Leslie Deniz earned All-America honors in the discus for the second consecutive year. Deniz' throw of 193 feet, 7 inches was good for a second place finish to U of A's Meg Ritchie.

Sabrina Peters came one place away from scoring for the Devils as she finished 13th in the 3,000-meter run, and Jennifer Lemke finished 14th in the shot put, just two spots out of the scoring picture.

Lemke was at somewhat less than full strength because of a severely sprained ankle she suffered late in the year. An injury also cost ASU points in the 4x100-meter relay, when they were forced to pull out of the competition because of a muscle pull sustained by Sharon Ware.

Women's head Coach Roger Kerr said his team did fall somewhat short of his expectations, although he did sight the fine performances by Deniz and Campbell.

"We were projected to finish 22nd with 17 points and we didn't quite make that," Kerr said. "We always have high expectations of Leslie because she is a class performer. Dodie also did very well, being just a freshman."

"But this is my first time as a coach that I have not had 400-meter relay team in the final eight," he said. "That was a disappointment."

But the bigger disappointment was the men's performance.

In a meet preview released in mid-April by Trackwire, the Sun Devils were projected to finish a solid second in the meet, some 32 points ahead of predicted third place finisher, Tennessee. ASU was expected to finish with 111 points, just 17 behind the predicted winner, University of Texas-El Paso.

But just prior to the Pac-10 Championships, ASU's sprint team (the "Speed Express"), which was expected to score heavily at the NCAA meet, was struck by a rash of injuries.

Ron Brown, Kenny Robinson and LaMonte King were among the injured as the season wound down. All were expected to be key performers in both the sprints and relays at the NCAA meet, but when they went out, so did the Devils' hopes of a national title.

To top things off, one of ASU's only sprinters that did make the trip to the NCAA meet, Howard Henley, was injured in a qualifying heat in the 200-meter dash.

The "Speed Express" had turned into the "Bleed Express" as ASU's sprint corps were never a factor in the meet.

Still, six Sun Devils did earn All-America honors. Senior John Irvine finished sixth in the decathlon (7,549 points); John Lenstrohm ran a lifetime best of 49.69 to finish sixth in the 400-meter intermediate hurdles; Deon Mayfield was eighth in the triple jump with a 54-foot, 1 3/4-inches mark; and a makeshift team of Leon Tubbs, Willie Jones, Walter Haywood and Lenstrohm finished sixth in the 4x100-meter relay with a time of 39.41.

Devils hit hard by draft as vets, rookies picked

Three ASU baseball players and eight Sun Devil recruits were selected in this week's major league baseball free-agent draft.

Devil outfielder Kevin Romine was the 29th pick in the regular phase of the draft, while right-handed pitchers Don Smith and Mike Hogan were selected third and 31st, respectively, in the secondary phase.

Romine was chosen by the Boston Red Sox, Smith by the Los Angeles Dodgers and Hogan by the Houston Astros.

Several prominent high school players that have signed national letters of intent with ASU also were picked up in the draft.

Sam Khalifa, a shortstop from Tucson Sahuaro H.S.,

Duane Ward, a pitcher from Farmington (N.M.) H.S., Rob Parkins, a pitcher from Cerritos H.S. in Artesia, Cal., Dale Sveum, a shortstop from Pinole (Cal.) H.S. and Barry Bonds, an outfielder from San Carlos, California were all selected in the regular phase of the draft.

Pitchers Randy Kramer of San Jose, Cal. and James Benedict of Burbank, Cal., and outfielder Odibe McDowell of Miami Dade North (Fla.) J.C. were chosen in the secondary phase.

Khalifa, considered one of the top high school prospects in the nation, was picked by the Pittsburgh Pirates and was the seventh pick overall.

Sveum, selected by the Milwaukee Brewers, was one of the most sought after high school quarterbacks in the nation last year and has accepted a football scholarship with the Devils. He could sign a major league baseball contract and still play college football.

Bonds, who was chosen by the San Francisco Giants, is the son of former Giant outfielder Bobby Bonds.

The other Sun Devil recruits and the teams that drafted them are: Ward (Atlanta Braves); Parkins (Boston Red Sox); Kramer (Texas Rangers); Benedict (New York Mets); and McDowell (Toronto Blue Jays).

At press time, Romine,

Smith and Hogan were the only Devils to be drafted, although first baseman Alvin Davis, third baseman Ronni Salcedo and shortstop Doug Baker were good bets to be picked up. Of those six, Davis is the only senior.

PUBLIC CONFESSION

1. We are the Nautilus-Aerobics club without the indoor pool — sorry, we didn't realize people in Arizona would want to swim without the awful fear of getting a suntan.
2. We are the club which is not open from Midnight to 6:30 in the morning — sorry, we thought people would probably be sleeping during those hours!
3. We are the club where a complete Nautilus workout takes 20 minutes — again, we're sorry to hear that some people put up with the 20-minute wait just to get on the first machine at some other clubs.
4. We are the club built right next to campus — again, we thought busy students wouldn't want to drive in the 118° heat to fight the crowds at the fancy spa down the road 3 miles.
