Former Army typist Lee Gray came to ASU with the idea of typing students' term papers for profit. With business being slow, Gray spent most of Monday entertaining himself by blowing bubbles while soliciting his services on campus. Gray is planning to go back to his home state of Hawaii soon to look for a steadier form of employment.

Phoenician convicted of rape, kidnapping at Manzanita Hall

By Chris Coppola
Assistant city editor

A 20-year-old Phoenix man was convicted Friday on charges stemming from an incident last September involving the alleged sexual assault of a Manzanita dormitory resident.

Cleatus Wayne Wheatley was found guilty in Maricopa County Superior Court of one count of sexual assault and one count of kidnapping.

Wheatley is being held in Maricopa County Jail pending formal sentencing before Judge Phillip Marquardt Feb. 18. Both counts are Class 1 Felonies that carry a minimum sentence of 5 years in prison and a maximum of 15 years.

Wheatley, who was arrested Sept. 28 at his west Phoenix home by ASU and Phoenix police, was originally charged with three counts of sexual assault and one count of kidnapping, but the charges were later reduced.

ASU police said last September a female resident of Manzanita had reported being sexually assaulted in an upper-floor stairwell at the dormitory on Sept. 25.

Wheatley was arrested in connection with the incident three days later.

ASU police said Wheatley was reportedly seen at a Manzanita party the night prior to the incident and was later identified by witnesses as well as the victim.

Manzanita and Housing Office spokesmen later said the incident in no way reflected inadequate security measures at the dorm, but existing security would be more strictly adhered to as a result of the incident. Manzanita was recently converted to a coed dormitory.

Wheatley is not an ASU student and had no prior offenses.

Terrorist search fruitless despite $5000 reward offer

By Janine Warell
Staff writer

A $5,000 reward offered by the Islamic Cultural Center in Tempe for information concerning 11 attacks on the center since June 1980, has produced suspects but no convictions, said the center's President, Rauf Diab.

"We have suspects but we don't have any evidence. But I'm not saying anybody has called up and put the finger on anybody," said Diab, who issued the reward Dec. 12, 1982.

The latest attack to the center at 616 S. Forest Ave. was Nov. 24 when seven bullets were fired into the center's mosque. The same night seven bullets were fired at Diab's Northeast Phoenix home.

"Fortunately, nobody has been hurt in any of these incidents," he said.

Diab said damages resulting from the 11 incidents, which include the bombing of Diab's car that left a hole in the gas tank, is estimated between $150,000 to $200,000.

Diab speculates that the incidents were an effort to keep the center from building a new mosque.

"I don't think they want us to build a mosque in Tempe," he said.

But Diab added that the attacks have only increased the motivation to complete the structure which is expected to be finished in seven to nine months.

According to Tempe Police Detective Gary Lindberg, the bombings and terrorism may be tied to a political group.

"I hate to say it but I think they're linked to the global tensions in the Mideast," Lindberg said.

The Tempe Police have increased their "visibility" at the center by making regular security checks in marked patrol cars, he said.

Lindberg added that the Federal Bureau of Investigation (FBI) has assisted the department in identifying explosives used in several of the bomb attacks.

Diab said he will continue to investigate the attacks until the individuals responsible are convicted.

"The reward stands until the case is solved," he said.

Legislature to consider raising drinking age

By Mead Summer
Staff writer

A bill which would raise Arizona's legal drinking age from 19 to 21 was officially introduced in the House of Representatives last Tuesday.

House Bill 2126, endorsed by 32 representatives and two senators, would prohibit the purchase and consumption of alcoholic beverages by people under 21 years of age, said Rep. Jim Cooper, R-Mesa.

Cooper, one of the legislators who spearheaded the effort to put the proposal on the legislative menu for the fourth time in as many sessions, said the government should reverse the decision it made to reduce the drinking age to 19 in 1972.

"At the time, they wanted to lower the (drinking) age to 18, but they didn't have enough support," he said. "So they compromised and made it 19."

Cooper said studies taken in other states prove the measure is necessary.

"Young people seem to not have the ability to judge how much they can drink. With all the bad things that occur today through alcohol... (teens) ought to be grateful if we don't allow (them) to drink."

The use of fraudulent identification, which includes both use of another person's identification and altered identification, would be considered a class 1 misdemeanor.

Failure by the server to secure valid identification, as well as knowingly serving alcohol to a person under the age of 21, carry the same penalty.

Passage of the bill would not affect 19 and 20 year-olds who serve or sell alcohol as part of their employment, Cooper said.

An amendment may be added which would legally allow 19 and 20 year olds to continue drinking, although it is not on the current bill, Cooper said.

A separate referendum has been introduced by Cooper and Rep. Earl Wilcox, D-Phoenix, which would lay the decision in the hands of registered voters.

This is an alternate method, Cooper said, which will be used only if the legislative measure does not pass.

Although a majority of the House has already endorsed the bill, Cooper said there is a chance it will not go any further than the House committees.

House Speaker Frank Kelley, R-Scottsdale, assigned the bill to two committees where the chairmen look less favorably on the bill, Cooper said.

Similar legislation has been proposed in the past four sessions and has been assigned to the House Judiciary Committee.

However, Kelley elected to send the bill to the Human Resource and Commerce committees.

Cooper speculated the bill may have taken a different route because "I would imagine that somebody somewhere probably doesn't want the bill to pass... and the Speaker assigns the bills (to the various committees)."

"The Speaker determines whether a bill ever gets to the floor or not, so we've got a lot of hurdles," he said.

Strong opposition is also expected from House Majority Leader Burton Barr, R-Phoenix.

"I oppose the raising of the drinking age to 21," Barr said. "I have for the years it has been before the legislature, and I still oppose it today."

"I feel strongly that we shouldn't raise the drinking age, especially when we cannot enforce the new law. We aren't enforcing the law as it stands today," he added. "I believe that when we pass a law, it ought to be meaningful."

If a majority of the committee members disapprove of the bill, it will not get to the floor, where Cooper said it would probably be approved.

Cooper also said he is planning a second alternative, involving petition gathering, in the event that neither the House bill nor the public vote enact the proposal into law.

Three Mile Island damage suit reported settled

NEW YORK (AP) — The utility that operates the Three Mile Island nuclear plant said Monday it reached an out-of-court settlement of its $4 billion damage suit against the manufacturer of the plant stemming from the nation's worst nuclear accident.

General Public Utilities Corp. disclosed in a news release that it had reached a settlement with Babcock & Wilcox Co. and filed a voluntary stipulation of dismissal of the suit.

Under the terms, Babcock and Wilcox will provide rebates to GPU of up to $37 million in proportion to GPU purchases of services and equipment over 10 years.

OPEC fails to agree on production, price

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — An emergency OPEC meeting collapsed Monday in disagreement over production quotas — a failure that could force down oil prices and prolong a worldwide glut.

OPEC did not change its base price of $34 per barrel, several ministers said.

"We could not agree on anything at all," said Mana Saeed Oteiba, the oil minister of the United Arab Emirates.

Some oil ministers said there was a consensus that the Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries drop its overall production ceiling by 1 million barrels daily to 17.5 million, about the current level of production by the 13 OPEC members.

Committee endorses legislation to outlaw strikes

PHOENIX (AP) — The Senate Government Committee, with Republicans in control, Monday endorsed legislation that would outlaw public employee strikes.

By a 6-3 partisan vote, the committee sent the referendum and its companion measure to the full Senate. As a referendum, the proposal would refer the issue directly to voters in 1984 without requiring Gov. Bruce Babbitt's signature.

Senate Republicans have adopted the measure as part of the majority program.

Former chairman claims rights violated

WINDOW ROCK, Ariz. (AP) — Former Navajo Tribal Chairman Peter MacDonald says the seizure of boxes containing material accumulated during his tenure in office is a violation of his civil rights.

Acting at the request of the tribal Department of Justice, Navajo police have confiscated boxes in Fort Defiance and Tse Bonito. Tribal officials said they believed the boxes contained material belonging to the tribe.

MacDonald said the boxes had only personal records — plus copies of correspondence, reports and resolutions. He criticized the new administration's actions.

Violence found in 60 percent of ASU premarital situations

By Maria Khan
Staff writer

A survey of 371 ASU students indicates that over 60 percent of those people had experienced or inflicted some form of violence during a premarital relationship.

The survey, conducted by Mary Riege Laner and Jeanine Thompson of the sociology department, pointed out some of the variables which may increase the possibility of violent incidents in a premarital relationship.

The study established that one factor is the seriousness of the relationship. More often, violence occurs in more involved, rather than casual premarital relationships.

The study indicated that drinking and drugs also increase the possibility of violence.

Another factor is the cultural tolerance for and acceptance of violence. If an individual was raised in a family where violence was considered an acceptable means to solve a problem, chances that the person will use violence to resolve future conflicts increase, according to the study.

L.T. Cummings, director of University Counseling Service, said some children are raised with the only sign of caring being physical punishment from their parents. In turn, these people do not necessarily perceive violence negatively.

"Sometimes children are negatively reinforced. The child sees it (physical punishment) as an expression of caring."

But a lack of violence in childhood may not eliminate the possibility of violence in premarital relationships.

"Not having experienced violence as a child does not guarantee that one will not experience violence in one's premarital relationships," according to the study.

The study also concluded that premarital violence may "constitute a rehearsal of sorts for later marital violence."

Cummings concurred.

"What you see is what you get," he said.

He added that entering a relationship with the attitude that "I will change him or her" or that "he or she will change" will lead to little more than frustration.

Cummings said the person will be the same after marriage as he or she was before, and depending solely on the act of marriage to change a person will not work. The change must be internal.

"Unless he is willing to work on himself, it (a change) is not going to happen," he said.

Cummings added that violence is not always provoked by the person on whom it is taken out. And even when violence does occur in a relationship, there is a chance to improve, rather than end the relationship.

He said violence is an impulse control problem and if the person is willing to work with the problem, to relax more, and intervene with the violent impulses, the relationship can work out.

He added that counseling may be helpful for both the aggressor and the victim.

According to Leon Shell, dean of students, his office occasionally receives complaints regarding violence in premarital relationships.

Shell said the way the DOS office handles such complaints depends upon the assault victim's feelings.

He said they often refer the individual to the University Counseling Service, the Student Health Service or the Center Against Sexual Assault.

If the assailant is an ASU student, Shell said, a violent act can be treated as a violation of the University Code of Conduct and the DOS office will take action. He added that violence against another student can result in severance from the University.

Shell said sometimes a victim simply wants to come to terms with his or her assailant, and the DOS office can help arrange that meeting.

"Often the student feels there is a disregard and the aggressor didn't have to face up to his responsibility. They will have to confront the other party on the victim's terms."

Shell said if the assailant is not a student at ASU, the matter should be taken up with police.

ERA's resurrection points way to true equality for women

Kate Hathaway
Managing Editor

With the death of the Equal Rights Amendment in June of 1982, many people heaved a sigh of relief and felt the issue could be given a proper burial. Thanks to the efforts of House Speaker Tip O'Neill and the National Organization of Women, the ERA has been resurrected.

In an age of supposed intellectual enlightenment, it's surprising that the issue still merits debate. The ERA should have been passed long ago. Unfortunately, the ignorance of a few elected officials kept the issue from being decided last summer and the arguments continue.

This time, there seems to be a little more hope for passage. The ERA already has 210 sponsors in the House of Representatives. It only needs 209 to pass. In 1982, the ERA died only three states shy of the 38 needed for ratification.

Unfortunately, thoughts of the ERA still conjure many false images in the minds of Americans. This probably stems from the image projected by the feminists of the 1960s. These women were viewed as a volatile group of bra-burning, frustrated housewives who were dissatisfied with the life they'd chosen.

Well, all movements have their excesses. It comes with the territory. Modern-day feminists, however, have shed the image of their sisters who started the movement and, taking a more realistic view of equal rights, they concentrate on elements of life that they find important — namely, their careers.

People should take the time to realize the benefits of the proposed amendment. The ERA touches all females, from business women who can achieve more pay for a job well done in the office, to housewives who can achieve more appreciation for a job well done in the home.

In the past, traditional America was the country where the man was the breadwinner and the woman was responsible for taking care of the home. Times have changed. More women are venturing into the work force to maintain their family's standard of living. More women are also choosing a career over marriage and support themselves on a single paycheck.

Women who are working should be afforded the same rights as men in the work force. Right now, there are no guarantees that women will receive the same pay as men for the same job. In fact, just the opposite is true in many cases. Seventy percent of all classroom teachers are women. However, for the same job, they make an average of $3,000 less per year than their male counterparts.

If this is considered equality, then someone is tragically misinformed. Why should women be content with earning a mere sixty-six cents to every man's dollar? With passage of the ERA, women stand a better chance of receiving the deserved dollar for which they work as hard as the man who sits at the desk next to them.

As if women's battle for equality has not been difficult enough, high levels of unemployment facing the United States are pushing women back even further.

Before the death of the ERA last year, women who were not receiving adequate pay or benefits on the job could vocalize their dissatisfaction to their superiors and hope to receive results. This small outcry for equality has also diminished. Now women do not feel at ease making waves at work when there are 10 or 12 people standing in unemployment lines with the ability and the desire to replace them.

Aside from the high unemployment rates brought on by the Reagan administration, there are a few other choice decisions made by our leader which indicate that the situation for women won't be getting better in the near future.

Three of Reagan's administrative faults, which seem aimed at American women, are the suspension of stronger affirmative action regulations for businesses receiving government contracts, the withdrawal of wage discrimination and sex segregation guidelines for federal contractors and the elimination of $500 million set aside for child care in the federal budget.

Most women don't want jobs handed to them simply because they are women. By the same token, the administration should not strive to make the acquisition of a job more difficult for them simply because they are women. Employment should hinge on qualifications and education. And nothing more.

As a White House official put it, "... if you are a working woman, especially if you're single, there's nothing this administration has done that would make you want to vote for Ronald Reagan."

Women have also made major gains in the areas of home and sharing responsibilities with the husband. Hats off to Ted Koppel who took a year off from a steady job so his wife could finish school. He took care of the home and children then resumed work as host of ABC News Nightline. For those people who feel threatened by the ERA, you could learn a lot from Koppel.

But this isn't enough. Equality one person at a time is not the answer. More progress will probably not occur until some major legal changes take place, such as passage of the ERA. People seem to feel that society has succumbed to the demands of women enough to pacify us and keep us quiet for a few more decades without passage of the ERA. To gain true equality, we need to spit out the pacifier and go for the meat and potatoes of the problem.

Pro-lifer infringing on rights of women

Editor:

I am writing in response to a letter written by Frank Hayden on abortion in the Jan. 21 issue of the State Press. It is closed-minded individuals like Mr. Hayden and the pro-life groups that take away a woman's freedom of choice. I wonder how Mr. Hayden would feel if, with a promising career ahead of him, he suddenly found himself pregnant. Well, since that will never happen to him, he doesn't have to worry about the consequences of what outlawing abortion would do to the women of this country.

If worse comes to worse, we could go back to using unsanitary backrooms with quack doctors or even wire hangers. I'm sure that would be far more agreeable to the anti-abortionists.

The horror stories Mr. Hayden mentioned in his article on experimenting with unborn fetus' and babies delivered by caesarian section certainly aren't normal abortion procedures and I question where he obtained his information. It sounds more like a "B" rated horror flick.

If those cases do occur, I can't believe that they are legal. As far as normal experimentation on dead fetuses goes, it's the same as using cadavers for med students.

His statement regarding birth control as a perversion of man's faculty compared to sewing ones eyelids shut is like saying if God had wanted man to fly, he would have given us wings. Instead God gave us something more valuable. He gave us a brain and the ability to use that brain to improve our technology and make our own personal choices. I think since God allows humans to make their own choices, Mr. Hayden should also.

MU space should turn a profit, Tommy Boy

Editor:

On Jan. 19, an editorial by Tom Bickford ridiculed the idea of utilizing the vacant space in the Memorial Union to produce revenue for the University.

He claimed that, rather than "exploiting student finances," the space should be used as a student lounge. Mr. Bickford no doubt overlooked the fact that a lounge is available less than 100 paces from the main level of the vacated bookstore.

For those who argue that studying is impossible in the lounge already provided, there is always the library.

The State Legislature is busy attacking the university budget. What is wrong with trying to bring some additional revenue into the vacancy?

By granting use of the space to Saga Foods or any other business-type venture, ASU will collect rent. But if the space is converted into Mr. Bickford's proposed student lounge, extra funds will be expended for purposes of upkeep and furnishings.

If Mr. Bickford would consider removing his head from his posterior, perhaps he might just find that there are some valid reasons for putting a revenue-producing service in the empty space.

He said that "a genuine student service would be one that allowed students to keep their wallets pocketed."

Mr. Bickford, no one is forcing any student to welcome another restaurant with open arms or, for that matter, open pocketbooks. It simply provides students with another choice of where to go for lunch, while replacing some money in the hollow ASU coffers.

As for the feeble attempt at humor, Mr. Bickford, take a lesson from some of the more mature editors. If you can't write seriously, leave the opinion page to those who can.

If you keep your opinions to yourself, Tommy boy, people will only think you're stupid. If you open your mouth, you'll prove that those people are right.

Lawrence Alman

Byrn is a genius...

Editor:

Thank you, Karl Byrn, for pointing out the truly "anti-life" philosophy of the State Press. I have found it ironic that a paper which is so concerned with protecting the life of fetuses should promote the pro-death philosophies of "violence, mistrust, prejudice and militarism."

Rose Weitz, Ph.D.
Assistant Professor of Sociology

Byrn is a goof

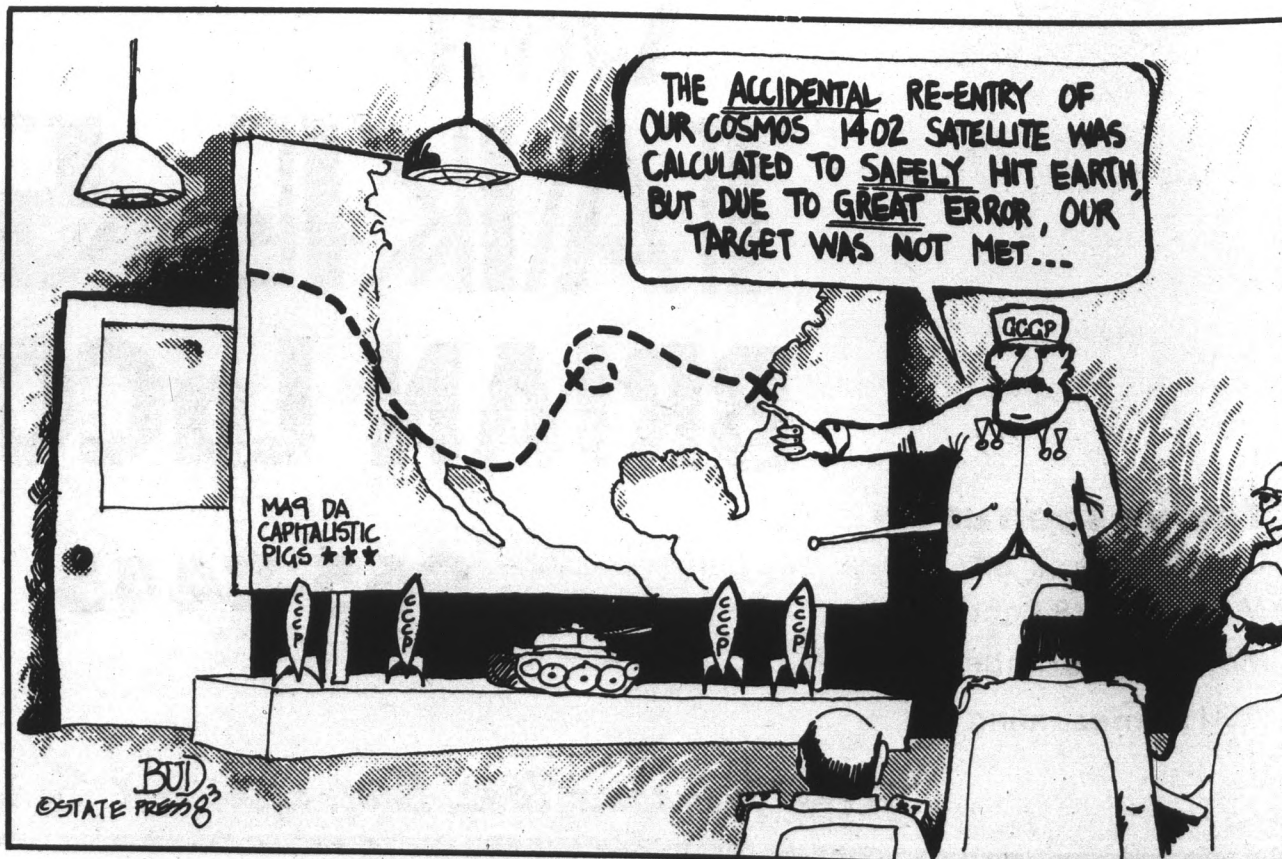

Editor:

Just when I'd thought that the days of reflexive student leftism were behind us at ASU, you print the tiresome fulminations of one Karl Byrn, "scenes writer." Undoubtedly we may expect that someone who can link Christ and John Lennon as peaceniks can also equate El Salvador and Israel, Russia and the US.

But, dear editor, is it really necessary to print this sort of silliness? Is it really necessary to debate if Christ and John Lennon are comparable?

Byrn's suggestion is, of course, that he too is on the side of Jesus while the rest of us who do not see identities in Israel and El Salvador, in the United States and Russia, but who see instead opposites, are warmongers. What insufferable arrogance. How absolutistic and undemocratic, how fanatically violent and warlike are our lovers of peace.

'Mikado,' 'Pinafore' lighten Gammage stage

By Wendy Keller
Scenes writer

The sublime quality of Gilbert and Sullivan operettas will grace the ASU Gammage Center stage in a special reappearance of Opera A La Carte, based in Los Angeles and directed by Richard Sheldon.

"The Mikado" and "H.M.S. Pinafore," both satirical works, will be presented tonight and Wednesday at 8 p.m. "The Mikado" will lead off the two-night program, followed by "H.M.S. Pinafore" on Jan. 26.

"The Mikado" is an 18th century satire about corruption in high places, a continuing problem, according to director Sheldon.

The rage in England, where "The Mikado" began its record-breaking run of 672 performances, was Oriental objects d'art, and Gilbert used this ready-made scenario as the setting to combine the times with Sullivan's masterful melodies for what director Sheldon feels is held as "the Gilbert and Sullivan masterpiece."

While poking fun at the fetish, Sheldon insisted that "the important thing about 'The Mikado' is what it is not — it is not poking fun at the Japanese culture."

"H.M.S. Pinafore" opened in London in 1878, at the Opera Comique. The London Daily Telegraph review said it was "a frothy production destined to subside into nothingness."

It comes to Gammage 105 years later, in all its glory and wit.

"H.M.S. Pinafore" tells the story of a socially-mismatched love affair between a poor sailor and a captain's daughter. The two decide to elope, and the scandalized father of the bride-to-be receives a very humbling surprise. The piece satirizes British class consciousness in the 1800s.

Sheldon feels "Pinafore" is a close second to being the Gilbert and Sullivan masterpiece. Gilbert's choice of subject matter for his works and his satire has given him the title "radical" from Sheldon.

"Gilbert's is a commentary of the times wedded to the nonsensical," Sheldon said.

Opera A La Carte has been to ASU three times before with the Summer Series program. Sheldon confided that he "loves Gammage," and feels it is one of the finest auditoriums he has ever sung in.

Sheldon has the title role in "The Mikado," as the Mikado of Japan, and is His Lordship Sir Joseph Porter in "H.M.S. Pinafore."

Both productions are sponsored by ASU's Lyric Opera Theatre.

In a special economy series, LOT will give

Making music retains a 'family flavor' for ASU prof

ASU music professor and prize-winning pianist Steven De Groote, together with his brothers Oliver and Philip, clarinetist and cellist respectively, will present two free concerts of chamber music by Beethoven and Brahms at 7:30 p.m. tomorrow and Thursday, Jan. 26 and 27, in ASU's Music Theatre.

Joining the brothers on Jan. 26 will be pianist Melanie De Groote.

The De Groote brothers first performed together more than 20 years ago when their father, Pierre, a well-known violinist in South Africa, formed the De Groote Family Ensemble.

The family quintet appeared extensively in South Africa. Its final series of performances as a quintet was in 1969 when the De Grootes made an extended tour of Europe, appearing on stage, television and radio.

"Since then our family appearances have been sporadic," Steven said, "as we have pursued our careers separately in different countries."

Oliver currently is principal clarinetist of the Cape Town Symphony Orchestra. Philip is a member of the Chilingirian String Quartet, a distinguished London-based ensemble. A graduate student at ASU, Melanie plans to return to South Africa and her performing career at the close of the school year.

All four De Grootes will be featured in the Jan. 26 program. Steven, Philip and Oliver will comprise the Jan. 27 program, which offers five Cello and Piano Sonatas by Beethoven.

Steven, who joined the ASU School of Music faculty in the fall of 1981, was the 1977 grand prize winner of the Fifth Van Cliburn International Quadrennial Competition.

A 1975 graduate of the Curtis Institute of Music, Steven has performed throughout this country and Europe, participated in a number of summer music festivals, and soloed with the orchestras of Philadelphia, Boston, Cleveland, Detroit, Minnesota, Washington, Cincinnati, Dallas, Milwaukee and Denver.

Modern magic

Wall Of Voodoo's founder

By Michael Phillips
Scenes editor

Wall of Voodoo and Translator will be appearing tonight at 8 p.m. in the Celebrity Theatre.

It is 1977.

New Wave "punk" music is making its initial splash on the American continent.

The capital of this fledgling phenomenon is a small club cloistered in the basement of a Los Angeles X-rated movie house.

The club is called the Masque and its clientele is comprised of a mixture of computer age Bohemian transients and nihilistic Los Angeles youths.

They have one thing in common: they are looking for an uncompromised voice and a music untainted by big business (read record company) commercialism.

Not surprisingly, many regulars of the Masque are musicians. One of them is 21-year-old Stanard Ridgway, a local jazz guitarist hoping to latch on to some of the strange and creative vibes emanating from this mecca of musical nonconformity.

Switch to 1983.

What was incubating in the Masque back in 1977 has now flowered on vinyl and radio playlists from coast to coast.

Modern music has arrived in the mainstream.

And although much of the early Los Angeles music has died or been watered down to mass conformity, Ridgway has never lost the spirit the Masque came to signify.

His band, Wall of Voodoo, walks the frontier. Fusing synthesizers with a collage of musical styles, rambling lyrics with a contempt for convention, Ridgway has created his own musical signature.

Wall of Voodoo's latest recording, "Call of the West," has been met by critical acclaim.

"I like to think of 'Call of the West' as music for the vast urban barbecue," Ridgway said. "The Western theme came from our orientation. We've always felt like hicks in L.A."

It was alienation that drove Ridgway to the Masque in the first place.

"Prior to '77, there was no place to play original music," he said in a recent interview. "We'd hang out in garages and jam for friends or whoever showed up. It was our only outlet."

But with the coming of the Masque, things changed.

"There was only about 100 of us into that scene," Ridgway said. "It was a very creative time. No media was ever there or anything, but it gave us all a chance to play and evolve. The Masque gave us some kind of identity."

Ridgway soon began experimenting musically, finding his personal renaissance in the dark basement of a rundown porno theater.

"I've always considered myself kind of an aural inventor," he said. "I was always trying something out, seeing what I could do."

Ridgway soon met up with a collection of like-minded musicians and Wall of Voodoo was born.

"It was more like Wall of Borrow back then," he said in a gruff chuckle. "We didn't have a lot of money, but we had a lot of ideas."

The boys next door ... Wall Of Voodoo is

As the modern music scene began to sprout, Ridgway and Voodoo found themselves playing gigs.

In 1980, Wall of Voodoo was signed to a Miles Copeland, manager of The Police, he tape.

The group's first two recordings, "Wall of Voodoo" and "Continental" received mixed reviews and launched Wall of Voodoo on a busy touring schedule.

"We've been on the road off and on for now," Ridgway said. "I can't say I really on stage it's OK, but I'm not one of those inspiration from traveling. I'd much rather inspiration, for Ridgway, is L.A."

"Los Angeles is really a working town," he said. "Hollywood doesn't exist for the average person. The people I was raised with and their attitude I find in my songs."

Those songs take a cutting look at the American scene.

"Living in America is such a paradox," he said. "We have so much going for us, but so few people where they're happy. I guess I try to work it into my songs."

uthrie, riding the rails of an earlier

America, come to mind as Ridgway speaks.

"Yeah, I took up the banjo when I was 13 and used to listen to a lot of folk artists: Guthrie, Pete Seeger, Ramblin' Jack Elliot. . . ." Ridgway said. "Then I got into black spiritual music which led into jazz and well, I like all kinds of music."

The synthesizer entered somewhere along the way.

"I don't see why people are turned off by synth music," Ridgway said. "Every instrument is cold and mechanical until the human element enters the picture. Look at the guitar — a wood box with strings."

"Computers are just tools," he continued. "It's the expressiveness of the person behind the tools that makes the difference."

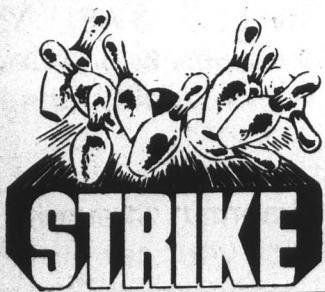

When Wall of Voodoo pulls into the Celebrity Theatre Tuesday night, Ridgway guarantees an expressive evening.

"We put on a really nuts and bolts show," he said. "The excitement is derived from the people. We don't get into exploding smoke pots and that stuff. We try to come across with an intensity ourselves, which the audience hopefully picks up on."

The Celebrity is a long way from a back street L.A. garage, but Ridgway claims he is not affected by the blossoming success of his band.

"It's all luck and public taste," he said. "Having our record get airplay or having journalists call for interviews doesn't change me. It is kind of exciting, though."

Cum grano salis by Janice Austin

The Slave-Warrior Empire of the Mamluks has come to Phoenix!

While neither a new wave band nor chums of Conan the Barbarian, it must be seen.

Minutes away at the Phoenix Art Museum await treasures of a fantastically opulent dynasty, created by brave and chivalrous warriors with a sensitivity for the arts.

Trained in warfare and diplomacy, the Mamluks could slice a man in half from horseback with one stroke. Originating out of the Sultan's body guard, the palace-trained Mamluks were chosen from the best and the brightest of the Turkish tribes in central Asia.

It was an honor to be selected as a future military slave, a guardian of the holy cities of Mecca and Medina. These superior warriors were the ones who stopped the fierce, invading Mongols and sent the Crusaders packing.

Rivalling any fantasy from the Arabian Nights, the lush art of the Mamluks will knock you out with its incredible artistry and aesthetic refinement, all created between 1250 and 1517 by this awesome culture.

The collection, organized by the Smithsonian Institute and facilitated by ASU History Professor Roger Adelson and OASIS (Organization of Arizonans Supporting Islamic Studies), presents an amazing mix of Mamluk mastery. There is armor, gold-inlaid weaponry, jewel-like glasswares and ceramics, coins, brassworks, ivory, textiles, tiles, tapestries, illuminated Koran front pieces, carved wood and architectural examples.

The undisputed star in this Mamluk galaxy is the Baptistere de Saint Louis, a treasure borrowed from the Louvre Museum that was used by Napoleon as a baptismal font for the royal family. This mysterious gold and silver inlaid masterpiece is a priceless example, perhaps the finest ever made, of Mamluk craftsmanship.

Presented with this dazzling art of the Mamluks is a free film series examining the traditional world of Islam, artistic demonstrations, parent-child workshops, lectures, and a symposium, "The Islamic Connection: East-West Interactions." Further information can be obtained by calling the museum at 257-1222.

ASU starts home stand with win over Cats

Forward Paul Williams led the Devils with 26 points, as ASU defeated arch-rival Arizona 82-69.

By Tom Blodgett

Assistant Sports Editor

Byron Scott and Paul Williams combined to score 51 points in leading the Sun Devil basketball team to an 82-69 victory over intrastate rival Arizona last Saturday night.

The Devils broke open a one-point ball game with a 14-2 spurt that started with just under eight minutes to play in the game.

Scott scored 10 of his 25 points in that span, keying the Devils' surge.

"It was a struggle there's no question about it," ASU head coach Bob Weinbauer said. "But I did like the way we pulled together defensively in the second half."

The UofA (3-12, 0-5 Pac-10) kept within reach throughout most of the game.

The Wildcats were not called for a personal foul until 10:20 was left in the first half, helping them gain a four-point lead for much of the half.

Wildcat forward Frank Smith scored five consecutive points to help Arizona overcome an early Devil lead, and put the Cats in front 16-12 at the 12:02 mark of the half.

The Devils were never able to catch up until only 2:40 was left in the half, taking a 37-34 lead into the locker room.

The Wildcats were able to capitalize on 10 Sun Devil turnovers to press to keep ASU at bay for the first half.

But a different story unfolded in the second half. ASU jumped out to a seven-point lead at the 14:49 mark, their biggest lead of the night at that point, and looked as though they would run away with the contest.

Enter Brock Brunkhorst. The sophomore point guard at the UofA had shot horrendously for most of his collegiate career, but on this night would have his best game to date.

Brunkhorst hit three 21-foot jump shots from the same spot at the top of the key, and the Wildcats were back within one with 10:37 left in the game.

Arizona took their last lead of the game one minute later when Brunkhorst hit a 23-foot jump shot from the left side on an in-bounds pass.

But Scott and the rest of the Sun Devils took over with their heroics moments later, and the Devils slowed down the ball in the game's final minutes, coasting to victory No. 100 in the University Activity Center.

The Devils got some help off the bench from Chris Beasley and Jim Deines.

Beasley dished out seven assists, and put tough defensive pressure on the Wildcats, resulting in four steals.

More importantly was the re-emergence of Deines at a forward spot. The former starting center had found his playing time dwindling considerably in recent games.

"Jimmy has been put back in that situation where he's the first forward off the bench," Weinbauer said. "We asked him to really get to the offensive boards, and he did that."

"I've been playing quite a bit of center," said Deines, who scored ten points and grabbed five rebounds. "I didn't feel confident in the center position...but I feel more confident in the forward position."

The game was a tremendous shooting exhibition for both clubs.

ASU shot .610 from the field, while the Wildcats, last in the Pac-10 in field goal percentage, hit on .571 of their shots.

"I think you have that intrastate game, and I think they were ready to play," Weinbauer said. "They realize they can salvage a little bit of the first half of their season by playing well and maybe pulling what they would consider an upset."

Devils finish tough weekend

It was a bad weekend for just about everyone on the ASU sports scene. This week's roundup of scores reads like a casualty list.

One team that survived, in fact performed admirably, was the WOMEN'S GYM-NASTICS team, which swept a pair of meets in Oklahoma. First, the gymnasts tripped up Oklahoma State by the score of 181.05-178.85. The next night the Oklahoma Sooners stumbled against the Devils, 184.10-174.15. The team score was the highest in the nation this year.

The MEN'S GYMNASTICS team didn't fare nearly as well on the road. They lost all five of their meets, falling to 3-5 on the year. First the men lost to Houston Baptist 275.55-273.90 on Thursday. The next night they fell to Louisiana State, 274.00-270.15. And to finish the weekend off, the Devils brought up the rear in a four-team meet in Norman, Okla. with three Big Eight conference teams. ASU (275.80) finished only 3.05 points off the pace set by Iowa State (278.85). Also competing were Oklahoma and defending NCAA champion Nebraska.

One other team that came out perfect on the weekend was the MEN'S TENNIS team, who upset Western Athletic Conference favorite San Diego State 5-4, giving rookie head coach Lou Belken his first ever collegiate win. Dewey Grattan, Alex Levie, and Jim Settles were victors in singles matches. Levie and Jim Baumann teamed up for a doubles win, and so did Todd Lee and Settles in the day's final match.

The WOMEN'S BASKETBALL team lost their third consecutive Western Collegiate Athletic Association game before snapping that string against San Diego State. The Devils were upset by Stanford 66-56. Kym Hampton scored 20 points and grabbed nine rebounds for ASU.

Two nights later, Hampton was limited to four points and five rebounds in 15 minutes, but Olivia Jones (18 points, 10 rebounds) and Teri Sharkey (10 points, 8 rebounds) picked up the slack as the Devils downed SDS 78-73.

Bay area teams were the downfall of the SWIM TEAMS. The men fell twice, first to Cal-Berkeley 62-51, and then to Stanford 73-40. The women did manage to outduel the Golden Bears, 87.5-61.5, but were crushed by the Cardinal, 98-15, as seven ASU Aquatic Complex records fell.

The WRESTLING squad split a pair on Saturday, defeating New Mexico 23-17, but falling short against Cal State-Bakersfield, 26-18. Gary Bohay, Tom Riley, Eddie Urbano, and Tom Kolopus were winners twice on that day.

Pritchert earns respect as walk-on

By Cindy Heverl

Sports writer

Dreams die hard.

For 100 walk-ons, the dream of playing on the ASU baseball team this year is dead.

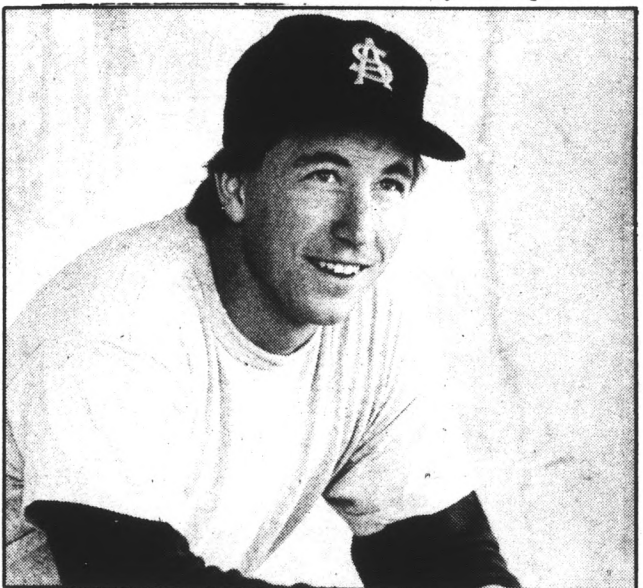

Unless you are Craig Pritchert.

The 6-foot, 180 pound newcomer from Scottsdale Coronado High School has earned the starting designated hitter's role on the 1983 edition of the third-ranked ASU baseball team.

Proving himself was not easy. Pritchert had to deal with the pressures of a misunderstanding with a former junior college coach, who is now his batting coach, a loss of confidence, and providing for his family.

After graduating from CHS, Pritchert attended Mesa Community College only to find himself on the bench and unhappy.

"I went into the coach's office one day after practice,"

Craig Pritchert

Pritchert said, "and (I) expected him to hand me over my spikes."

His ego got spiked instead.

"He told me I couldn't hit J.C. pitching, (and that) I was the worst outfielder out there," Pritchert said.

"I said to myself, 'that's it for me here.' It was...all a mistake."

According to Jim Frye, former head MCC coach and now ASU's batting coach, Pritchert's lack of ability wasn't the issue.

"We were very disappointed that Craig left," Frye said.

"I felt Craig just wasn't happy attending MCC (while) his wife was attending SCC."

Upon leaving MCC, Pritchert got himself a real job, but soon quit to attend SCC for two years of studying and playing baseball.

"We knew (of) him from J.C.," said ASU head coach Jim Brock. "Only a couple walk-ons (ever) make varsity," Brock added.

"We were waiting for him."

But first Pritchert stopped off in Alaska to participate in the Alaskan Baseball Summer League where he was coached by Jim Frye. Of all places, it was there that their relationship warmed up.

"I never held a grudge," Pritchert said. "It was just one of those things."

"He's got good power, runs well, and (possesses) an above average arm," Frye said of the "new" Pritchert.

According to Brock, Pritchert is in line for a scholarship if he lives up to his potential.

"Sure, if he plays well (enough)," Brock said, adding that "he (also) has a good chance to make (the) pros."

That would be good news for Pritchert, whose wife Laurie is expecting a son — already named Matthew — any day now. For Pritchert, the thought is sobering yet inspiring.

"Baseball in reality is a business," states Pritchert. "I have a job that needs to be done. If I don't do it, I'll get fired."

"Just with a baby and being married, it all sank in," he said. "I can do the job when they need it done."

"I've thought about attending ASU ever since I went to Coronado," Pritchert said, "but it was always just a big dream."

Say goodnight opposing pitchers...a nightmare is nigh.

One final individual note — ASU speedster Ron Brown won the battle of football players, edging Georgia's Herschel Walker in the 60-yard dash at the Sunkist Invitational track meet in Los Angeles. Brown finished the sprint in 6.11 seconds, while Walker finished second, clocking a 6.20. Defending NCAA 100-meter champion Stanley Floyd finished third, also coming in at 6.20. Three other Sun Devils competed in the meet. Walter Haywood finished third in the long jump (24 feet, 8.5 inches); John Lenstrophm came in fourth in the 60-yard high hurdles (7.26 seconds); and Eddie Davis placed fourth in the 1000-yard run (2:12.6 minutes).

Meet
BARB CARRERA & GREG SMITH
Coors
They're your connection.

SUE E. WRIGHT, PHOTOGRAPHER

Coors does more than just brew beer. We listen too. On your campus you'll find two Coors Representatives. Their names are Barb Carrera and Greg Smith, and they're there to help you in any way they can. Barb or Greg can plan your group's functions. They can explain how Coors has been a positive force in helping ASU organizations achieve their goals. They're the ones to see about involvement with your club's intramural teams. And they're not a corporation.

They are fellow students . . . someone you can work with. Barb and Greg are your Coors connection on campus. Call Barb at 964-4555 or Greg at 258-2781.

Coors isn't just a beer company, it's someone you can talk to.
