ASU considering buying hospital

By Deanne Hutchison
Staff writer

The burden of the Maricopa County Hospital on the citizens of the county has caused county officials to consider selling the hospital, and ASU has been targeted as a possible buyer.

According to Bill Henry, County Recorder, even though no decision has been arrived at, discussions of the possible sale are underway and some members of the county Board of Supervisors are anxiously awaiting a decision.

"I know two members of the Board of Supervisors who are ready to sell it right now and it only takes three votes," he said.

Henry added that he did not know how close the board is obtaining the third vote.

"My only real interest in the situation is that right now we have a teaching hospital supported by the citizens of a single county, yet benefiting the whole state," he said.

"I don't think the county should be in the hospital business. The citizens are currently subsidizing the hospital... I have heard figures in the range of $13 (million) to $20 million a year."

This cuts into other services the citizens have a right to demand, he said, for example, the police and justice departments.

"I have heard complaints that the police and other (departments) have not been able to do what the citizens want them to do."

Henry said he would like to see a university buy the hospital, but whether it is ASU or U of A would not matter.

"A university owning it would mean the cost will be spread out over the whole state," he said.

Henry said he and a member of the Arizona Board of Regents talked preliminarily with ASU President J. Russell Nelson about the University's "possible interest in the hospital."

"But the question is, are the three universities going to try to be a complete university within themselves or are they going to specialize?"

At the 42nd Arizona Town Hall in Rio Rico

this week, school officials discussed this concept, but according to Jack Kinsinger, vice president of academic affairs at ASU, the Rio Rico discussions will have no effect on ASU's involvement with the county hospital.

"A representative commission was appointed to look at the roles and missions of all the post-secondary institutions in the state," Kinsinger said. "The attempt is to limit duplication so that each institution will have a cost effective program."

But the possible ASU purchase of the county hospital will have no relation to the commission's findings, he said.

Kinsinger was chosen by President Nelson to represent ASU in the discussions about the hospital with county officials, but no discussions have been held yet, Kinsinger said.

"We are open to start having discussions about the hospital, but I have not been contacted by anyone yet," he said. "We have not formed a position yet, nor am I sure what the proposition will be. This is a very unbounded subject right now."

ASU College of Nursing officials have not been notified of the possible involvement in the county hospital, but Kinsinger said the whole question is too "ill defined" right now to involve the college.

Kinsinger said the reason ASU officials first opened themselves to considering the hospital is that, "We are always interested in space and student programs."

"We already have a lot of programs that interact with hospitals."

For now, he said, "I am going on blind faith that there might be something interesting here. It is like thinking about buying a new car."

Though Henry said the county may consider selling the hospital to a free enterprise business, he said it would be an asset to a university.

"The county hospital is definitely an appropriate place to teach," he said. "We have an excellent burn unit that ranks highly in the nation."

Violator destroys rhino boot

Student had 63 pending tickets; owed $522 in unpaid citations

By Sandy Sistik
Staff writer

An ASU student was arrested Thursday morning for destroying a rhino boot which was attached to his car, according to University police.

Lt. Richard Hydro said ASU police officers noticed at 2:17 a.m. that a Pontiac, which had been secured with a rhino boot by police, was missing from area 60.

According to Hydro, the vehicle was booted because the owner had 63 outstanding citations at ASU totaling $522, along with three outstanding traffic warrants from the city of Phoenix.

After identifying the driver of the vehicle at 2:45 a.m., the officers went to the individual's apartment for questioning concerning the stolen boot, Hydro said.

The individual, whose name is being withheld, was taken to the University police station for further questioning.

"Generally, we keep an eye on them (the cars) to make sure people don't take off the boots or destroy them," Hydro said.

According to police, the individual apparently had removed the padlock with a hacksaw, drove the car to the Mill Avenue Bridge and threw the boot into the Salt River.

The individual was transported to Phoenix and turned over to the Phoenix Police Department to take care of his three arrests, Hydro said.

He said University officers returned to the site where the boot was deposited, and recovered it in 3½ feet of water.

Hydro said at present, five rhino boots have been placed on cars for outstanding citations.

The rhino boot disables a vehicle from moving and a notice is placed on the car to inform the driver that the citations must be paid before the boot can be taken off.

ASU work study funds increased by $100,000 for summer applicants

By Emily Smith
Staff writer

An additional $100,000 in summer work study funding is available to eligible students, according to Ed Haas, coordinator of student employment.

Qualified students are those who have filed a 1982-83 ACT form with the federal government and have been declared eligible to receive funding, he said.

Haas said a $50 million federal grant for college work study programs across the country made it possible to allocate additional summer funding.

Although the portion of the $50 million grants that ASU receives will not be available for use until the 1983-84 school year, the University will be able to grant extra money this summer, Haas said.

"Knowing that we are going to get substantial money next year, the carry-back from this year can be used for this summer," he said.

The extra funding is available even to students who have used all of their ACT funding from the 1982-83 school year, according to Haas.

Receiving summer funding will have no effect upon a student's eligibility to receive funding in the fall, he said.

"We have sufficient funds to fund everybody who is eligible for the summer."

Haas said he doesn't know how much money ASU will receive from the federal grant.

"We know our award will be substantial because we know it will be proportional to what we usually receive," he said.

Requirements for the college work study program also have been loosened, Haas said.

"Now, no matter how many hours (students) are going to school in the summer, they can work up to 40 hours," he said. "Until now, a student taking six hours of summer school, could not exceed 20 hours in work study."

He said the deadline for applying for summer college work study has been extended from April 29 to July 15.

Landslide buries 150

QUITO, Ecuador (AP) - A landslide nearly one-third of a mile long slammed into the Pan American Highway in central Ecuador, burying as many as 150 people, authorities said Thursday. Thirty people were listed as confirmed dead.

Rescue officials said at least seven vehicles, including four buses, were buried under the mud and rocks that poured across the highway near the Andean mountain town of Chunchi, 190 miles south of Quito.

The slide, triggered by torrential rains and the flooding of the river Chunchi, rumbled down the Andes mountainside about 6 a.m. Wednesday.

More than a day later, authorities said they had recovered 30 bodies, and brigades of soldiers, firemen and police still were pulling victims from the rubble.

Television set contains dynamite

PHOENIX (AP) - Mary Rangel has her own story about the potential for violence in television: she found dynamite in a TV set.

Ms. Rangel, 48, told police she found a television set next to a neighbor's garbage can Wednesday morning and, several hours later after checking with neighbors as to its possible ownership, brought it into her home to try it out.

But it didn't work when she plugged it into an electrical outlet, so she took its back off to see why - and found the explosives, she said.

Phoenix bomb squad expert Bob Horath said officers found three sticks of an explosive aluminum gel in the back of the set, along with a blasting cap with a fuse cord, and a roll of safety fuse.

Police said if the material had become sufficiently hot, it could have caused a major explosion.

State delegates support Reagan on El Salvador

PHOENIX (AP) - Arizona congressmen have rallied behind President Reagan on the El Salvador issue, saying a loss there would be devastating to U.S. security.

"Unless we want Soviet, Cuban-backed governments on our doorstep, we must back the president 100 percent on his defense spending requests," U.S. Rep. Bob Stump, R-Ariz., said.

Stump, just back from a three-day mission to Central America, echoed the president's arguments that the area is crucial to U.S. interests and is being subverted by Soviet-style insurgents out to wreck the region's fragile economies and governments.

President phones spelling bee champ

CHATTANOOGA, Tenn. (AP) - President Reagan Thursday telephoned Linn Yann, a 12-year-old Cambodian who became an overnight celebrity for her spelling talents, to wish her luck in a spelling competition.

Reagan, who referred by name to Miss Yann in a speech to the nation's newspaper publishers Wednesday in New York, called the fifth grader at Alpine Crest elementary school in suburban Red Bank.

His call came as an NBC television crew was at the school to film Miss Yann and as she was making final preparations to compete against 29 other students in the Hamilton County spelling bee tonight.

"He said congratulations, and he hoped that I would win," Miss Yann said. "He said he's very proud of me."

Hinckley may have been Valium addict

NEW YORK (AP) - The parents of John Hinckley Jr. say they thought their son was becoming addicted to the drug Valium before he tried to assassinate the president.

However, John's father, John "Jack" Hinckley Sr., told ABC's Barbara Walters, in an interview broadcast Thursday on the "20-20" program, that a psychiatrist talked them out of sending their son to a mental hospital for treatment.

"We said, 'John, we think you need to go to a hospital,'" the elder Hinckley said, "and after a long conversation, he agreed."

However, the next day, the father said, he had an appointment with his son's psychiatrist, Dr. John Hopper. The elder Hinckley quoted Hopper as advising: "Don't do it. Don't send him to a mental hospital. I know what it will do. It will make a cripple out of him, and I think we can solve his problems without that. I think I can have him off Valium within 30 to 60 days."

Catalog fee expected to produce low profit

By Wayne Baker
Contributing writer

Charging $4 for the University General Catalog will not generate a lot of revenue for the University, said Shirley Wilson, coordinator of government relations.

"When the catalogs were free, everyone thought they had to get a new one every time it came out," she said.

Now that the University is charging money, she said, students and faculty will be a lot less likely to want one.

Doug Hanson, manager of the University Bookstore, said roughly 3,000 copies have been sold to the campus community since they came out in March.

That income will cover the costs to print the University Preview, which is used as a recruiting tool.

The more the Preview is used to recruit, Wilson said, the less the catalog will be relied on for that purpose.

She added that the Preview will reduce the amount of catalogs that must be printed which may save the University money.

"People need to realize the revenue from catalog sales will not pay for the next printing. It's not meant to be a self-supporting thing," Wilson said.

Among the deductions from revenue generated by catalog sales are production, handling and shipping costs.

She estimated that the University spent $100,000 for the 1983-85 edition printing costs alone.

"Another thing people need to realize is that no one is forced to buy a catalog," she added.

The general rule is that students should graduate under the requirements in the catalog under which they were admitted.

"Newly admitted students and most faculty and staff will receive one copy free," Wilson said. "And that will account for a lot of copies."

Wilson recommended that students who enrolled under previous catalogs should not spend their money to buy a new one.

"There are still copies of the 1981-83 catalog available for free," she said. "And if a student really feels a need to look in the new catalog, there's always a copy around."

The decision to charge for the catalog was made when a survey found that ASU was one of the few schools in the west that did not charge for the books, she said.

'People need to realize that no one is forced to purchase a catalog.'

been sold to the campus community since they came out in March.

"We have about 3,500 in stock and have access to more if the need arises," he said.

Hanson said it was difficult to determine how many eventually will be sold because there is no history on which to base estimates.

Wilson said she hopes charging for the catalogs will cut down on the number that will have to be printed.

The 135,000 copies of the 1981-83 catalog printed exceeded the most current edition's circulation by 20,000 copies.

Wilson estimated that each sale of a catalog will result in only $1.20 in net income for the bookstore.

Soviets stealing high technology

Since the beginning of this year, 70 Communist-bloc agents, most of whom were Soviet citizens, have been expelled by Western nations. The reason for the expulsions is clear: they were stealing Western technology — technology developed to ensure the security and stability of those Western nations, and furthermore, technology Soviet researchers have been unable to produce.

In light of the obviously subversive efforts of the Soviet intelligence network, the recent expulsions are more than justified.

The leading nations of the West, including Great Britain, Italy, Spain, Denmark, Australia, the United States and France (which expelled 47 diplomats and journalists in early April), have begun cracking down on Soviet infiltration. Reagan Administration officials predict further expulsions of Soviet officials by Western countries in the next few months.

The move by the French government to expel the 47 Soviet officials was the largest since Great Britain deported 105 Soviet citizens in 1971. But deporting 47 agents just scratches the surface of the problem in France, as well as in the rest of the West. As a former minister in the Giscard d'Estaing Cabinet noted shortly after the expulsions: "The infiltration is very difficult to measure, like trying to read the small print of Pravda. They do it little by little, where the opportunities present themselves."

According to FBI director William H. Webster, one in three Soviet and Eastern bloc diplomats in the United States is a known spy. Webster estimated that there are about 3,000 of such diplomats in the

Tracy Fletcher
Editor

United States today.

The United States recently deported three Soviet officials on charges of espionage. One was a diplomat caught with eight rolls of film containing photographs of classified U.S. documents; another was caught while attempting to obtain classified material relating to U.S. aerospace and weapons technology; and a third was seeking classified information about Soviet-U.S. relations from Rep. Olympia Snow, R-Maine, who serves on the House Foreign Affairs Committee.

The plots of these three agents were thwarted before the classified information could reach the Kremlin. However, according to a CIA declassified report titled "Soviet Acquisition of Western Technology," many of the Soviet Union's efforts have been successful. The report concludes that the Soviets have made advances in radar, missile, and air defense systems thanks to technical information and hardware stolen from Western nations.

Administration officials provide specifics about the CIA report. Soviets have gotten their hands on the U.S. technology for a quiet radar system for the B-1 and Stealth bombers; the F-15 look-down, shoot-down radar system; and the Phoenix air-to-air missiles.

Of course, the Soviet Union is interested in military secrets and military strategy, but reports indicate the Soviets have increased efforts to steal other high technology, especially in lasers and computers.

In short, by stealing technology from Western nations, the Soviets are saving billions of dollars that would have been necessary to fund research, and they are shortening the development time for weapons enough to keep pace with Western forces. Blueprints for building weapons are easier to follow than to develop. And by allowing the Soviet intelligence network to step toward clamping down on Soviet espionage. Other Western governments have followed suit.

Meanwhile, liberals in Congress have chosen to ignore the scope and intent of Soviet intelligence, instead spending their time denouncing efforts of the CIA to counteract the Soviet subversion. The Foreign Relations Committee boldly clamors for elimination of all U.S. support to El Salvador, while millions of American pacifists attempt to convince us of the need for a "mutually verifiable nuclear arms freeze."

While these misdirected souls labor to establish a more benevolent relationship freely operate in the West, we simply fuel their technological development.

Undeniably, Western nations also have highly developed intelligence networks; but the purpose of these networks is to stop subversive actions, not to steal and develop another country's technology.

The Soviet Union and the threat its intelligence network poses to national security and world peace will not go away. The Reagan Administration has taken a strong with the Soviets, in their very midst thousands of spies spend their days and nights quietly looting America of technology their own nation has been unable to produce.

Such is the folly which results when men turn away from evidence contrary to their cherished assumptions. American pacifists have set their minds on an ideal, adherence to which requires obdurate refusal to acknowledge the unpleasant realities of the situation.

Anonymous secretary attacks University on parking problem

Editor:

I am not normally one to make public protests, but in this situation to remain silent would be wrong. I'm a Secretary II on campus and I work hard every day for a paltry $11,975 per year, of which, after deductions, I bring home about $9,000 and clear $340.03 twice a month. I have had over 13 years experience in working in college institutions and other state agencies in my home state and here in Arizona and because I have enjoyed working in a campus atmosphere I've sacrificed considerably the amount of pay I could receive elsewhere — at least $3,000 to $4,000 more annually — and I would probably not have as much demand put on me as I do here. Last year we were informed that we would not be getting merit raises and we got a small 4 percent cost-of-living raise; this year there are no merit raises and from what I hear so far, no cost-of-living raises. To top it, this administration has the audacity to ask me to pay $50 for a parking space that for all I know does not even exist! I have no choice but to come to work each day, and each day I fight the parking problem as everyone else does. It makes me angry that a university this size cannot find a solution to fit everyone involved besides charging exorbitant parking fees which will not solve the problem of parking space. Mr. Hickcox, you've got to be kidding.

I think the weak excuses to use the money for restriping parking spaces, landscaping, extended tram service and limited access parking is plain stupid. If I can't afford $50 for open parking, I certainly can't afford $90 for limited access parking. As for the restriping and landscaping — who cares? A parking lot is ugly no matter what you do with it. Looking at the situation the way it is now, I would rather keep things the way they are than to pay a $50 parking fee and be appeased by a lot of meaningless "extended services". This administration is proving to be cold, calculating, and uncaring, and the parking proposal makes about as much sense as the faculty, staff and students demanding that a building be torn down to create a parking lot. If this parking proposal goes through, I will, in total disgust, start looking elsewhere for employment. I wonder, Mr. Hickcox, what you would think if the faculty and staff staged a walkout for a few days to see if your administration could run this university without the people who ARE the university. One thing is for sure - it would solve the parking problem.

Administration acting irresponsibly

Editor:

A few recent decisions made by ASU's administration should be called into question.

Consider, for instance, the recent resignations of several administrative officials, and the reassignment of three deans. There is a sound suspicion that these are the same three deans who, in 1981, refused to sign a petition nominating the current executive vice president, Dr. Mulhollan, for the University presidency before that office was filled by Dr. Nelson. How is this to be explained?

The present effort to sell Camp Tontozona is another example. Regents, alumni and faculty find it difficult to understand why ASU wants to sell Tontozona, which over the years has become a valued part of its history. Information has been withheld from the public, apparently to conceal statistics regarding the use of Tontozona. When will all the statistics be made public?

Regents OK cut in Faculty Senate

By Brian Lindquist
Contributing writer

Three vice presidents and all college deans have been deleted from membership in the Faculty Senate, according to Evar Nering, chairman of the Faculty Senate.

The Arizona Board of Regents approved an amendment at its April meeting that reduces the membership of the Faculty Senate.

The amendment excludes from membership all deans and all vice presidents with the exception of the vice president of academic affairs.

Added to the Faculty Senate membership is the president of Associated Students, whose membership had been approved earlier and has now been ratified.

Nering said Associated Students' presidents have attended meetings for the past two years.

There currently are 95 members on the Faculty Senate, representing the faculty assembly. The assembly constitutes the entire ASU faculty.

Among the areas the Faculty Senate deals with are college admission standards and class withdrawal policy, two issues it has dealt with extensively this semester.

The proposal to reduce the membership was passed by the Faculty Senate in May 1982, according to Nering. It was made official a year later.

"There were a number of reasons for the change," he said. "It is rumored that faculty members felt uncomfortable with the deans."

The vice president of academic affairs, currently Jack Kinsinger, was retained on the senate because he is responsible for the faculty.

Membership to the senate is a three-year term, and selection is made by individual departments. Members meet once a month for nine months during the school year.

"The significance to all this is that those excluded members no longer have to go to the meetings," Nering said.

Insistent airborne pollens victimize allergy sufferers

By Mike Humphreys
Staff writer

Your eyes and throat itch, your nose is stuffy, your head aches, and you generally feel tired and lousy. You're not dying, you just feel like it.

If these symptoms describe you, you're probably suffering from a catarrhic disorder of the conjunctiva and from rhinitis.

In other words, you have hay fever or other allergies.

According to Stan Archer, director of research and development for the Bioproducts Iatric Corp., a diagnostic laboratory dealing with allergies, about one in six people has some sort of problem with allergic reactions.

An allergen, which may be a pollen, animal dander, mold, dust or chemicals, is the substance that causes an allergic reaction.

When the weather is dry these allergens become airborne, but they are removed from the air by rain.

When allergens find their way into the nasal passage, they cause symptoms of allergy, and in some people, asthma.

Arizona is unique in that it has a twelve month pollen season, according to a report issued by the ASU Student Health Center. The season is particularly discomfoting from spring to early fall, because of the pollen from three groups of plants.

Most pollen from trees is in the air during the spring, and then is succeeded by grass pollen from late spring to midsummer. When those numbers decline, the battle is renewed by weed pollen in late summer and early fall.

Contrary to popular belief, pollen from citrus plants and sweet-smelling flowers generally does not travel through the air, and thus does not usually cause allergic reactions.

Archer said that many people in the Southwest, and particularly Arizona, suffer from allergies because the problem can be hereditary. Many Southwestern residents are descendants of people who moved out here because of allergic conditions.

Archer said the most common type of allergy is related to some sort of grass, particularly Bermuda grass.

Another type of allergic reaction is vasomotor rhinitis, which is associated with smoke exposure, rapid changes in climate or humidity or eating hot, iced or highly seasoned foods, affecting nerves controlling the size of blood vessels which can cause sneezing and a runny nose.

There are many ways to manage and lessen allergic reactions.

Allergy sufferers should try to plan outdoor activities in times of low pollen, achieve a dust-free atmosphere at home, and use air conditioning instead of open windows in the home and car.

If one's allergies are activated by molds, he should avoid work like raking leaves, mowing the lawn or working in stables.

Another way people with allergies find relief is through medication. The two types most commonly used are antihistamines, which counteract a chemical secreted by the body during allergic reactions, and decongestants, which decrease nasal secretions by narrowing the blood vessels in the nose and reduce the blood flow to a more normal rate.

In addition, immunotherapy is useful to counteract an allergy to an identified substance. The patient is given small injections of the allergen over a period of time, and if the treatment is successful, the body may develop a tolerance to it.

Allergy sufferers can lessen their symptoms with the proper care. Still, since one of every ten visits to a physician has to do with allergies, the problem is nothing to sneeze at.

Block of x-rated movie fails

By Mead Summer
Staff writer

An attempt by the Associated Students executive vice president to block the showing of an X-rated movie failed Thursday in executive session.

Greg Hamm said, however, he would continue his effort by trying to obtain a temporary restraining order.

Hamm previously had introduced a resolution which he said would prevent Students for Better On-Campus Films from showing "Last Tango in Paris."

He said the group intended to use an ASASU projector, and claimed that gave ASASU the right to keep the film from appearing.

But Kim Fuller, ASASU activities vice president, said the group intended to use a projector from the art department and that put the issue outside the realm of her organization.

Regardless of whether the group intended to use an Associated Students projector, Hamm said he would file for a temporary injunction based on the fact that the student group already had used a long-distance WATS line belonging to ASASU.

Fuller denied that charge, and told Hamm that the passage of his resolution could not stop the showing of the film.

Software class planned

A short course on software quality assurance will be conducted May 24-25 by ASU's Center for Professional Development.

The course, for which there is a $295 registration fee, will be held from 8:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m. in the Engineering Center.

ASSOCIATED STUDENTS OF ARIZONA STATE UNIVERSITY

Take Charge At 22.

In most jobs, at 22 you're near the bottom of the ladder.

In the Navy, at 22 you can be a leader. After just 16 weeks of leadership training, you're an officer. You'll have the kind of job your education and training prepared you for, and the decision-making authority you need to make the most of it.

As a college graduate and officer candidate, your Navy training is geared to making you a leader. There is no boot camp. Instead, you receive professional training to help you build the technical and management skills you'll need as a Navy officer.

This training is designed to instill confidence by first-hand experience. You learn by doing. On your first sea tour, you're responsible for managing the work of up to 30 men and the care of sophisticated equipment worth millions of dollars.

It's a bigger challenge and a lot more responsibility than most corporations give you at 22. The rewards are bigger, too. There's a comprehensive package of benefits, including special duty pay. The starting salary is $17,000 — more than most companies would pay you right out of college. After four years, with regular promotions and pay increases, your salary will have increased to as much as $31,000.

As a Navy officer, you grow, through new challenges, new tests of your skills, and new opportunities to advance your education, including the possibility of attending graduate school while you're in the Navy.

Don't just take a job. Become a Navy officer, and take charge. Even at 22.

ASU project of engineering excellence

By Glynnis Owens
Staff writer

The Excellence in Engineering Program is in its third year and is meeting and surpassing many of the original expectations that were set during the creation of the concept.

The idea to create an engineering program that would be among the top in the nation originated in 1979, when an advisory council for engineering was organized under the auspices of Clovis Haden, dean of the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences.

From that point, the first phase of an overall plan was developed and budgeted, according to Haden.

The projected cost for the first five-year phase is $32 million. So far, slightly more than $30 million has been acquired, according to George Beakley, associate dean of the college.

Several parts of the excellence program are evident to all ASU students.

The Daniel E. Noble Science and Engineering Library — named after the man who helped bring Motorola to the Valley — was completed, furnished and ready to open in January 1982, according to Vladimir Borovansky, head of the library.

The new targeted opening date is late August. This date is still contingent on whether funding by the state legislature, which recently concluded its session, is confirmed, according to Borovansky.

"We haven't received official word yet; the University hasn't decided on a budget," he said.

A one-year operating budget, including staff and utilities, is $700,000 and is solely dependent on funding from the state legislature.

"If we get word, the best time to move will be August," Borovansky said, adding that the moving process would be more convenient at that time because the campus will be void of students for several weeks.

Another structure, which is rising rapidly into the skyline, is the Engineering Research Center.

Construction on the building is expected to be complete in October 1983. Presently, construction is ahead of schedule, which is an almost impossible feat, according to Haden.

The $13-million research center will house the facilities for research in six areas of specialization: solid-state electronics, computer science, computer-aided design and manufacturing, energy systems, transportation systems and thermosciences.

ASU's department is only in its third year, but it has probably the best set of computer equipment in the country for the beginning student operators.

Beakley said that once the research center is complete "we will have the capability to do the highest level of research in the country."

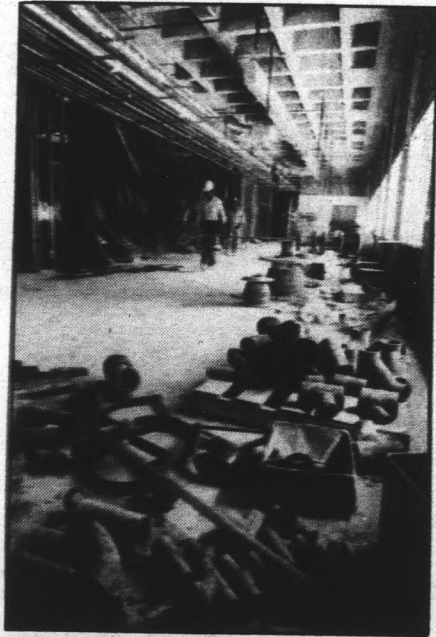

One of the ultimate goals of the excellence program is to rank among the top engineering programs across the nation, according to Beakley.

The program calls for the hiring of 60 professors and graduate assistants. Forty have been hired to date.

In addition to the physical structures evident to all, other less obvious aspects of the program are being developed.

Among those are four research centers, which are "not buildings, but organizational structures," according to Haden.

These centers include transportation, solid-state electronics, energy, and Construction of the Engineering Research Center is ahead of schedule, according to the dean of College of Engineering.

automated engineering and robotics. These research centers will have an impact on the engineering program in the development of courses, laboratories and research methods. The centers will benefit researchers, graduate students and "go right down to the undergraduate level," Haden said. Automated engineering involves the use of computer-aided technology. With this center the computer graphics equipment and its use will be extended. Automated engineering includes the study of robots, known as robotics. Currently 40 students are enrolled in the robotics course and laboratory. The computer science department is also an area scheduled for expansion under the program, according to Haden. "The department is only in its third year," he said, "but we probably have Once the students, faculty and community get a taste of an excellent school, they won't want it to stop. The best set of computer equipment in the country for the beginning user." The enrollment in computer science courses has grown from 150 students to 1,500 in three years. The growth has been "difficult to cope with," Haden said, because of space limitations. The widespread reputation of ASU's engineering program has resulted in a large increase in applicants to the college and because of this, the entrance requirements were raised. "They see it's first-class, and they want to be a part," Haden said. As a result of the increased entrance requirements, the growth has been moderated. Four years ago the enrollment in the college grew by 25 percent. Last year growth was confined to 6 percent. Haden said the college turns away approximately one third of the applicants, although that figure is less severe than it would be if the entrance requirements were not published. The Excellence in Engineering Program is "going to be a continuation of excellence," Beakley said, "not just a five-year program. "This is just the launching of a school of excellence," he said. "Once they (students, faculty and the community) get a taste of an excellent school, they won't want it to stop." Beakley said he feels that phases two and three of the program will be just as good as phase one. He attributed the tremendous acceptance of the program to "the right environment with the governor, legislature and industry working together."

Babbitt urges higher educational quality

By Chris Coppola
City editor

Gov. Bruce Babbitt, reiterating his call for a new commitment to "quality" education, told a gathering at ASU Thursday that an upgrading in University demands on students, though necessary, should not be interpreted as educational "elitism."

"What we're saying is, if you want to go to Arizona State University, you've got to be prepared," he said. "I think you do need three years of (high school) math . . . You probably need an approach to computer literacy as well."

Babbitt's remarks came at a breakfast sponsored by Associated Students as part of Governor's Day at ASU. The second-term Democrat's visit to the University also included a tour of the new engineering research center and business annex, both of which are currently under construction.

Earlier this week, Babbitt told a panel of state leaders assembled at the 42nd Town Hall in Rio Rico that the lack of a top-notch engineering and computer-science school in Arizona is one reason the state failed in its recent efforts to lure the Microelectronics and Computer Technology Corp., a fact he alluded to Thursday.

He said the state's commitment to ASU's Excellence in Engineering Program came before the University attempted to stiffen admission standards, and ASU is feeling the effects of that now.

"We started out the wrong way and now are driven progressively down a long road that includes teachers at all levels and parents as well.

"In my generation, we sort of tuned out," he said. "There was a period of anti-technology . . . We abandoned the issue of standards and paid a high price for it."

He added, however, that lower educational levels are also suffering because of a lack of qualified teachers being produced by the state.

"Somehow, it's no longer fashionable to be an education major. As the best and the brightest (students) abandon the education field . . . the University will find itself having to address the issue.

"I'm not saying you should go out and change your major at midstream . . . But the biggest political issue we have before this nation right now is whether we have the commitment needed to better education standards."

Babbitt said the "perk barrel process" by which the Arizona Legislature has appropriated money to ASU's engineering program only after considering counter-allotments to the U of A and NAU, is "in the nature" of the legislative process.

During an interview following his speech, Babbitt said recent comments by state educational leaders contending that competition between ASU and the U of A is detrimental to the state should not be dismissed.

"Competition is inevitable and desirable. But at the same time, we have to make sure we allocate our resources not to cut our inner development," he said.

"I think it's important to have comparable funding for basics such as mathematics, basic sciences and social sciences at both of the schools," he said. "The very best university systems have strong, competitive programs, and on that you have to build higher programs that don't overlap too much.

"But as we reach those higher, specialized areas, we have to be careful not to duplicate and detract from one school's specialty program for the sake of another."

He added that the two new structures being erected at ASU were "very nice" and necessary in order to carry out a state commitment to higher education.

Crucial

Playoff spot on line; Devils to tangle with Bruins

ASU catcher Don Wakamatsu has helped keep the Sun Devils in the running for an NCAA playoff berth.

By Jay Taylor

Assistant sports editor

It's do or die time for the ASU baseball team.

The Sun Devils go into this weekend's series against UCLA tied with USC for the all-important second spot in the Pacific 10 Conference Southern Division.

The Devils (33-16, 13-11) and the Trojans (24-19, 11-9) are both three games behind division-leading Stanford.

The second-place finisher in the Six-Pac is virtually guaranteed a spot in an NCAA regional tournament.

Sun Devil Coach Jim Brock is confident about the Devils' chances at a playoff berth.

"We have a good chance at the second spot," Brock said. "I think the schedule the rest of the way gives us a small advantage over them (USC), since they still have to play Stanford four times."

In addition to the Stanford series, the Tro-

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday nights, instead of the usual weekend format. All three games will start at 7 p.m. at Packard Stadium.

The Devils go into this weekend's series at UCLA as one of the hottest teams in the nation, having won seven in a row before dropping the final game of the Stanford series.

The assault has been led by catcher Don Wakamatsu, who has an 11-game hitting streak and has raised his average to a team high .370. During his streak, Wakamatsu is batting .432 (19 for 44).

Also turning in fine performances of late has been junior pitcher Kendall Carter. In his last outing, Carter fired a three-hit shutout at Stanford, winning 2-0. He is now 9-2 on the year with an ERA of 2.40, lowest in the Six-Pac.

Carter will pitch the opener of the UCLA series tonight. Saturday will see freshman Doug Henry (6-4, 3.21) on the mound for the

"I can't imagine that series being anything but gigantic," Brock said. "You can bet that they (Arizona) will want to knock us out of the playoffs."

jans have three games each against UCLA and California, the conference's fifth- and sixth-place teams, respectively.

ASU has another advantage over USC besides the schedule. If the Devils and Trojans wind up the season tied, ASU will get the playoff bid by virtue of its 4-2 win of the season's series with USC.

The Devils have only six conference games remaining — three this weekend at UCLA and three May 11-13 at home against U of A. According to Brock, the series against the Wildcats will be critical.

"I can't imagine that series being anything but gigantic," Brock said. "Since the first two games of our series will be played before any of the games of the USC-UCLA series, we will be in a position to really put the pressure on USC."

"You can bet," Brock added, "that they (Arizona) will want to knock us out of the playoffs."

The Arizona series will be played on Devils, with Jose Rodiles (0-0, 8.44) getting the nod on Sunday.

According to Brock, if ASU gets a playoff spot, there is a chance that the Devils could host the regional tournament, even if they do finish second in the Six-Pac.

"We still have a shot at hosting the regional because they (the NCAA) like to have it where they can draw the most fans and make the most money," Brock said. "Packard Stadium traditionally draws some of the biggest crowds in the west, if not in the nation, so they will have to take us into consideration."

"Plus, we will probably finish the year with one of the best records in the west, about 20 games over .500, and the NCAA likes a strong team to host the tournament."

Brock added that there is a chance that ASU could be sent to another regional because of the number of strong teams in the west.

Golfers need strong play to gain NCAA bid

By Dean Obenauer
Sports writer

One of the finest tournaments in men's collegiate golf is taking place this weekend in Scottsdale.

The 11th Annual Sun Devil/Phoenix Thunderbird Collegiate Golf Tournament will be the center of attention at the McCormick Ranch Palm Golf Course.

The tourney is scheduled for 54 holes which will be played Thursday, Friday and Saturday on the championship course.

This year's field will include 11 teams currently ranked among the nation's top 20 and four of the first five as well.

The field boasts five of last year's nine first-team All-Americans and four of the 10 players who will comprise the U.S. Walker Cup team that will travel to England in late May.

Defending champion Brigham Young (No. 5 nationally) has won five of the 10 previous tourneys. BYU will be trying to repeat with the help of All-American Rick Fehr but may have a few roadblocks in its way.

No. 1-ranked Texas will be one of those obstacles. No. 2 Oklahoma State, with the aid of first team All-American and 1982 player-of-the-year Willie Wood, will also prove a worthy opponent.

Houston, presently ranked third in the nation, will also bring a qualified team into the tournament. The Cougar squad includes All-American and NCAA Champion Billy Ray Brown, All-American John Slaughter, 1982 Public Links Champion and Walker Cup member Billy Tuten, and Dave Tentis, who is also a Cup member.

The ASU Sun Devils, who have been struggling lately, need a strong tournament to qualify for the upcoming NCAA Championships.

"We have the home course advantage," Head Coach George Boutell said. "That is our edge."

The No. 20-ranked Sun Devils will have to put one of their best efforts up on the leader boards if they want to even stay within respectable distance of the excellent field.

"They know what they have to do. Our fate is in our own hands," Boutell said.

Tee times Thursday and Friday will start at noon and go to 2 p.m. On Saturday the teams will be starting at 6:30 a.m. to 9:30 a.m.

Spectators are welcome and play should run into the late afternoon.

Jim Carter will lead ASU this weekend in the Sun Devil/Phoenix Thunderbird Collegiate Golf Tournament.

Badminton squad picks up titles in national tourney

By Lisa Phillips
Contributing writer

The ASU men's and women's badminton teams are not the most widely followed of the many intercollegiate teams on campus. But there is reason to believe that they should be.

The men proved April 16-17 that "watching the birdie" can pay off, as they won the National Collegiate Badminton Championship in Washington, D.C.

The women also turned in a fine performance, finishing second in the tournament.

The men dominated the competition, crushing second-place UCLA 32-6.

The women were edged by Wisconsin, 32-25.

The championships, which were held at George Washington University, drew teams from 12 schools around the country.

Both the men's and women's squads are coached by Merle Packer, who has led ASU teams to a combined total of 10 national championships in her 16 years as the Sun Devil coach.

Rodney Barton was the top finisher for ASU, earning the men's singles title with a victory over teammate Solomani Jonatan.

Barton and Jonatan paired up to win the men's doubles title by defeating Sun Devil teammates Miles Munson and Marty French.

Swim team gets more talent

By Phil Daschner
Sports writer

After harvesting a bumper crop of top-notch swimmers this spring, ASU swimming coach Ron Johnson said the Sun Devils are in good position to improve on last season's seventh place finish at the NCAA finals.

"We really have an outstanding group of freshmen," Johnson said. "Our freshman class will be one of the top three in the country."

Gone from last season's record high-finishing team are three world-class swimmers, including Brad Hering, who finished second in the NCAA's 100-yard butterfly and is currently ranked number one in the world in the 100-meter butterfly.

Johnson will also lose standouts Cam Reid and Andrew Astbury.

Reid finished second in the NCAA's 400-yard medley event and Astbury, who comes to ASU via Leeds, England, is a former NCAA champion in the 500-yard freestyle.

Danny Plant, an All-American and former Pacific 10 Conference 3-meter diving champion, and Sam Hewson, a former Pac-10 freestyle champion will also be gone.

"Obviously, we're losing a lot of talent," Johnson said.

But the recruits entering Johnson's program also have impressive talents.

Three of ASU's new swimmers come from England.

"Andy (Astbury) helped us a great deal recruiting over there," Johnson said.

England's individual medley and butterfly champion Paul Easter heads the list of ASU's English recruits.

Easter is joined by countrymen Andrew Jameson, the national backstroke champion, and Neil Cochrane, second-place finisher in both the backstroke and individual medley events.

Closer to home, ASU netted top-flight freestyler Kevin Cavanaugh from Santa Clara, Calif., and two Pennsylvania standouts: Brett Rose, a national senior finalist in the 200-yard backstroke, and John Laderer, a national senior finalist in the individual medley and freestyle events.

The recruits will join returning team members, led by NCAA 200-yard freestyle champion Mike Orn.

Other top returnees are butterfly artist Bruce Foster and Peter Berggren, the fifth-place finisher in the NCAA breaststroke finals. Scott Brackett, a finalist in the 500-yard freestyle last season, also returns to add strength to the Devils' program.

Suns set; Elway's feet chilly

It is an interesting week for Valley sports junkies.

It started on a balmy Sunday night when the Phoenix Suns once again found a way to become underachievers in the NBA playoffs.

It ends this weekend when the ASU baseball team travels to UCLA, hoping to keep alive a remarkable rebirth in the race for NCAA post-season play.

In between, John Elway told the world what he thought about quarterbacking for the Baltimore Colts.

The Colts and Head Coach Frank Kush gambled in the NFL draft and apparently lost.

Depression lined the face of Kush as he listened to Elway say he would rather work his way up through the Yankees' farm system than become a bona fide superstar quarterback in chilly Baltimore.

Elway, you see, thinks the weather in Baltimore is too frigid for a kid raised in California; if he was going to play football, Elway insisted, it had to be on the West Coast, or in some other warm habitat.

Now, I've been to Baltimore in the wintertime and it certainly isn't Alaska; it's not even in the same league weatherwise as New York.

During interviews, Elway also mentioned he would take his football talents to Dallas, if a deal could be worked out between Baltimore and the Cowboys.

I've also been to Dallas. In December, the city's fountains freeze over from all the "mild" weather Texas is supposedly famous for.

And since Dallas rests on a plain, the wind whipping across those badlands makes the Lone Star State feel like the Canadian tundra.

My point being, of course, that the weather didn't drive Elway away from Baltimore. Perhaps it was the excitement of going to a team that finished 0-8-1 last season, or the anticipation of working for Kush, hardly the laid-back California type, that prompted Elway to postpone his NFL career.

Only Elway really knows. As for the Suns, well, it's that time of year, isn't it?

I honestly thought the Suns had a chance to get to the finals this year and earn the right to get mashed by Moses Malone and the rest of Philadelphia's steamrollers.

But when Lucas went out, so did the Phoenix Suns.

Not that the final game against Denver wasn't a struggle. The Suns fought valiantly, if at times confusedly, to overcome Luke's absence and advance toward San Antonio.

On a brighter note, the anticipation builds for what promises to be an exciting finish to the ASU baseball season.

Unlike the Suns, the Devils appear to gain strength as the pressure to perform in tight situations increases.

The Devils have had to do what they've been doing — winning — since the halfway point of their season.

Perhaps the Suns will attend a few games at Packard, as they struggle to piece together the season that might have been.
