Regents to consider ASU budget request

By Bob Beamesderfer
Staff writer

ASU's $151 million budget request, a 9 percent increase over the current budget, will go before the Arizona Board of Regents Finance Committee today for final approval at the board's regular monthly meeting in Tucson.

Additional requests for new programs bring ASU's overall request to nearly $160 million, a 16-percent increase over current spending.

The Finance Subcommittee, during a hearing of all three state university budget requests Tuesday, voted to recommend approval of the ASU request by the full board.

If approved by the board, the request would go before the Legislature, where approval would increase the state's general fund appropriation 24 percent above current funding.

The budget request includes $2.3 million for 71 additional faculty positions based on a projection by University officials that fall 1984 full-time equivalent enrollment will be 31,834. Current FTE is 31,198.

University budget requests are due before the Joint Legislative Budget Committee by Oct. 15.

The subcommittee also will recommend limiting new program requests to 4½ percent of the 1984-85 base request. This would reduce ASU's new program request by 25 percent, from $9 million to $6.8 million.

In other activity this weekend, the board will consider 1984-85 tuition rates.

Board President William Reilly said Tuesday the regents will probably remove a $95 one-time emergency surcharge, but rates will probably increase to maintain established levels of student contribution to education costs.

The regents established figures for non-resident student contributions at 85 percent and resident contributions at 20 percent.

Michelle Beaumont, chairman of the Arizona Students Association Legislative Committee, said ASA wants the board to remove the surcharge and hold tuition and fee increases at the established levels of student contributions.

According to Beaumont, the levels were exceeded when the surcharge was tacked on at the end of last semester. ASA figures indicate that non-resident students pay 87.3 percent and resident students pay 21.1 percent of the educational price tag.

Student representatives will present their views to the board this morning, but plans to bring a busload of ASU students to the meeting to show "their interest and concern" about rising tuition was canceled because of flooding in southeast Arizona, Beaumont said.

The board also will consider:

- A $4.4 million west-side branch campus request and funding for the Engineering Excellence program.

- Budget requests for the U of A, NAU and the central staff office.

- ASU's request to develop a plan for a golf course, which would be located on land between Rural Road and McClintock Drive along First Street.

- The three universities' capital outlay budget requests for 1984-85.

- Allocation of money from the A&M Colleges land fund. Funds from four other university land trusts were reallocated at the September meeting of the board, but a deadlocked roll-call vote on the A&M land monies tabled the decision. It was referred to the board's attorneys for further study.

- ASU's request to establish a Center for Automated Engineering and Robotics.

- A report on the academic status of athletes on football and basketball teams at the three universities.

Clause requiring car movement may encounter obstacle

By M.K. Reinhart
Staff writer

A clause in the ASU housing contract requiring north-campus residents to move their cars during home football games could be "easily" removed, but a similar clause in the Motor Vehicle Code might prevent any change, University officials say.

"I'm not opposed to looking at removing (the clause) from the housing contract," said Betty Turner Asher, vice president for student affairs. "It was primarily put in as an informational item anyway. It was never intended to be a mandate."

Earlier this week, the Residence Hall Association distributed a proposal to various ASU and Sun Angel Foundation officials asking that the clauses in both the housing contract and the Motor Vehicle Code be removed.

The proposal also asked the University to consider relocating Sun Angel parking to Lot 40, instead of allowing them to continue using Lot 53, the residence hall lot.

According to Housing Director Cliff Osborne, the Motor Vehicle Code requirements supersede the housing contract.

"To remove the clause entirely would be no problem, and it can be done very easily," he said.

Asher said parking requirements are under the jurisdiction of Victor Zafra, vice president for business affairs, who would have to authorize removal of the clause from the Motor Vehicle Code. Zafra was not available for comment.

According to several ASU officials, the desirable result would be a return to a "gentlemen's agreement" with the students.

"This issue cuts across a lot of lines other than parking," said Ed Hickcox, director of Parking and Transit Services. "I'm not quite sure that I understand why this particular issue has generated so much emotion."

Repeated efforts to reach officials with the Sun Angel Foundation for comment were unsuccessful.

University Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said Lot 46, the alternate lot designated to students during football games, is closer for most residents and has better lighting. The lot is located on University Drive, across from Manzanita Residence Hall.

Asher said, "If there has been an error on our part, it could have been that we didn't make the RHA aware that (the clause) was going into the contract."

"Putting the clause in may have breached the good faith agreement that we have had (with the RHA)," she added. "I'd like to see if I can get them to agree to returning to the gentleman's agreement that we had."

Approval of west-side campus request expected

By Bob Beamesderfer
Staff writer

The Arizona Board of Regents is expected to approve ASU's $4.4 million request to establish a west-side campus.

Regent Finance Committee and Subcommittee Chairman A.J. "Jack" Pfister said he sees no resistance from the full board to approve the request at its meeting in Tucson today.

The regents central staff Tuesday recommended the University ask for only $500,000 for planning and development of the west-side campus because of the uncertain state revenue picture.

However, the regents finance subcommittee recommended ASU submit the entire west-side funding request for consideration to show the legislature the cost of the program. The $4.4 million request includes funding for all aspects of the expansion except buildings.

"Basically, I think what the finance subcommittee said was that if the Legislature is going to support a west-side campus, they're going to have to know what it costs," Pfister said.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson said Thursday it was difficult to assess the package's chances with the regents or the Legislature.

"We know there's a lot of interest, but it's hard to predict how it will fair in competition with other interests," Nelson said.

He said, "It's clear it's the Legislature that has to make this decision."

Regent Donald Pitt said Thursday the subcommittee recommended approval of the request on the condition the branch facility offer third- and fourth-year undergraduate courses and masters' programs.

Pitt also said, "There should be a clear understanding of the increased need for money in the university system if we build a west-side campus. Everybody has to face up to the fact that it will take heavy capital expenditures.

"It is clear to me — with Maricopa County growing as it is and with the new census figures and projections — that we have to start now," he said.

Pitt said the west-side campus initially must be "an extension of ASU," but should "not take anything away" from the Tempe campus.

Former Vice President for Business Affairs Frank Sackton, who compiled a report for Nelson to assess the educational needs of Maricopa County, said the campus is needed because the "west Valley is the largest metropolitan area in the United States without the services of a four-year university."

Sackton said, according to U.S. Census statistics, the area's current population of about 330,000 is expected to triple in 20 years.

Two more counties declared disaster areas

TUCSON (AP) — President Reagan Thursday declared two more Arizona counties federal disaster areas, for a total of seven. A new evacuation was ordered in south-central Arizona, but residents of storm-torn communities elsewhere were digging out mud-caked homes, wary of another wave of rain.

Reagan's declaration Thursday added Gila and Yavapai to the list of counties eligible for federal rebuilding funds and low-interest loans, federal and state officials said. Reagan gave the same status to Graham, Greenlee, Pima, Pinal and Santa Cruz counties on Wednesday.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt, who had formally requested that 10 counties be included in the declaration, said Wednesday in Tucson all 5 of Arizona's counties should have been included in the declaration. The governor said the declaration was "a good start, and we're grateful."

Walesa says prize won't change struggle

GDANSK, Poland (AP) — Lech Walesa says winning the Nobel Peace Prize won't change him or affect his crusade for free trade unions in Poland, even if he goes back to prison as a result.

He dedicated his prize to the now-outlawed Solidarity labor movement, which he led from its birth in August 1980 until its suspension with the martial law crackdown in December 1981.

"I don't regard this award, or any of the other awards I have won, as my own," he said Wednesday after his selection was announced in Oslo, Norway. "They were our mutual awards, for our mutual program."

"I'll still be Walesa, with a wife and seven children," the 40-year-old shipyard electrician told Western reporters.

"I will always be doing what I have always been doing," said Walesa, reaffirming his commitment to the free trade union movement.

"At times I will be at home, and at times I will be in prison."

Walesa has been arrested scores of times and spent 11 months in isolated confinement during martial law.

U of A research farm put on auction block

TEMPE (AP) — The auctioneer's hammer is due to fall Tuesday on the University of Arizona's 40-acre citrus research farm here.

The farm on Priest Drive is a familiar landmark, with citrus and palm trees visible from Interstate 10 just south-east of the Superstition Freeway interchange. Officially, it is the Salt River Valley Citrus Experiment Station.

The farm has a 40-year history of research about citrus varieties, fruit quality, pests, fertilization, frost protection and other factors. A. Dean Bacon has lived on the farm and managed it since 1977. He said this week that citrus growers use many orchard-management recommendations developed here by horticulturist Dr. Robert H. Hilgeman during more than three decades of work before his 1974 retirement.

More recently, the farm has been used in studies of undesired greening of ripe fruit, of mechanical harvesting, and of alternative controls for nematodes, costly parasites formerly controlled by a chemical no longer permitted.

Phelps Dodge talks resume

PHOENIX (AP) — Contract talks between the Phelps Dodge corp. and striking unions resumed here Thursday after collapse of a strike against another producer.

Phelps Dodge has broken the talks off on Tuesday, citing harassment and rock-throwing in Morenci and Clifton, but agreed to return to the table if things calmed down again.

The company, which has hired replacements and continued operating since the strike began July 1, can take solace in collapse of the strike against Duval Corp. and Duval's Sierrita mine after two days.

Student Life office to relocate

Move to MU basement delayed by furniture

By Rosanne Dupras
Contributing writer

The opening of the Office of Student Life — postponed last month because new furniture had not arrived — is scheduled for Oct. 17, according to office spokesmen.

The office furniture, which arrived this week, has held up the move into the MU basement since September, said Jim Shepard, maintenance scheduler for the Physical Plant office.

"We're starting to move them today — mostly the minor things, like file cabinets and files," Shepard said.

"It's always difficult when you move a whole department," Shepard said. "The temporary quarters that the student life office has been (located) in are harder for them and the students."

According to Lenna Nieboer-Erickson, administrative assistant to Dean of Students Leon Shell, phone systems will be installed in the office Oct. 14.

"It takes two days to unhook everything up here and change our system to meet our needs," Nieboer-Erickson said.

"This will be the second move our office has had in four months," she said.

The Student Financial Assistance Office was remodeled over the summer. At that time, it was determined that the Office of Student Life would be relocated.

"It's very appropriate for us to be in the center of student activity," Nieboer-Erickson said.

However, she said students initially may have difficulty locating the new office because its only entrance is through the ticket office in the southeast corner of the basement.

Associate Dean of Students Joanne O'Donnell said the goal of the office is to be a "one-stop center" for students.

"We hope students will utilize our office area as an information center," O'Donnell said.

"We have student paraprofessionals in our Reach staff who are trained and qualified to help students," she said. "They can help students learn what resources are available and where."

The office provides a variety of services for students.

"We try to assist in different areas — with commuters, internationals, adult re-entry students, leadership programs and our Reach program," O'Donnell said. "We're kind of an umbrella for other areas, such as Associated Students, the Educational Support Program and intramural and club sports."

Some of the programs being planned at this time include adult re-entry, minority student and leadership workshops, she said.

According to Shell, programs focusing on the needs of commuter students are also being considered.

"There may be some workshops in the commuter-student area, but they haven't been identified yet," Shell said. "It's a new program as of this year."

The office will promote leadership skills to student groups through leadership workshops.

Neil Giuliano, coordinator of leadership development for the office, said, "We did a workshop for the business college council a couple of weeks ago that went really well."

Giuliano said the relocation will help students associate the Office of Student Life with a permanent location.

"I think the move will provide us with a real chance for students to identify where we are on a permanent basis, so we can become known in one location," Giuliano said.

"In any transition, there's bound to be a certain amount of confusion. This just emphasized to us all the more to really reach out and make sure people have the information they need," Giuliano said.

According to Giuliano, the commons area, which also will be located in the basement of the MU, will be open in "another month or two."

Give Rodgers credit

Editor:

Regarding Asst. Sports Editor Ken Sain's editorial of Oct. 5, asking Frank Kush to return to ASU is like asking Richard Nixon to run for President. Kush not only brought discredit upon himself by abusing players, lying, etc., he also disgraced ASU. Sure, Frank Kush's teams destroyed such powerhouses as Montana and Wyoming, but his teams couldn't begin to compete with the PAC-8 teams.

Instead of criticizing Darryl Rodgers, we should be lauding him for taking a team Frank Kush's abuses nearly destroyed and building it into a contender. Last year when the ball sailed over Kern's outstretched hands during the University of Washington game, Darryl Rodgers came within inches of taking the Devils to the Rose Bowl.

So what if we tied UCLA? If we had lost that game, everyone would be saying we should have gone for the tie instead of taking the chance at losing. The simple truth is that the team was exhausted. The players are only human! Rodgers need only stand on his record, as does Todd Hons. Maybe one day, the fair-weather fans at Sun Devil stadium will realize what an outstanding coach we have and cheer the team rather than boo them when they enter the stadium.

Those Frank Kush diehards make me sick. Frank Kush is gone, finished, never returning! Once people realize this, maybe they'll have fun at football games. After all, isn't that what it's all about?

West Side story not a happy one

Michael Humphreys
Asst. City Editor

Nestled on the west side of the teeming Valley of the Sun is a cozy community of about 110,000. And though it's not as glamorous as the Big Three of the east side — Mesa, Tempe and Scottsdale — it has a charm of its own. It's a peaceful hamlet called Glendale.

Despite its size and productivity, Glendale doesn't get a lot of respect or fame, though in some circles it is considered the fruit and vegetable capital of the state. But in a few years, perhaps as soon as 1987, Glendale and the whole west side of Maricopa County may be given something to be proud of: a west-side branch campus of ASU.

The Arizona Board of Regents is scheduled to discuss the matter today at its monthly meeting. ASU is asking for a little more than $4 million to fund a transition program to kick off the establishment of the campus, a request both the regents and the state Legislature would have to approve.

The Legislature began to study the feasibility of a westside campus more than seven years ago and has already set aside 320 acres of land at 43rd Avenue and Thunderbird for the proposed campus.

The branch will employ about 60 faculty members and is expected to be used by the equivalent of 4,000 to 6,000 full time students (FTE, in administration lingo).

There are already institutions of higher education in Glendale — the American Graduate School of International Management and Glendale Community College — but the former is a specialized school and I found the latter to be something of a warm-up for ASU. Neither these nor ASU/Metrocenter and ASU/Alhambra offer the same upper division and graduate courses we can get right here on our own campus.

However, if things go as ASU administrators plan, we can have a piece of ASU for Glendale and other west-side residents.

But is the proposed site for the branch campus actually in Glendale?

"No, it isn't, darn it," said a spokesman for the Glendale Zoning Department. But the campus is quite close to Glendale; in fact, it's right across the street. That's close enough to be considered as a vital Glendale interest, as is evidenced by the fact that ASU Executive Vice President Paige Mulhollan spoke to the Glendale Chamber of Commerce on the issue last week.

Now, I have lived in Glendale since I was six weeks old and am quite happy about it, but the fact is that Glendale and the rest of the west side needs the academic and cultural shot-in-the-arm the opening of a branch campus could bring.

Artistic culture is so lacking in My Hometown that the city council recently passed an ordinance declaring the situation an "emergency" and setting aside funding for purchase of art. Mayor George Renner estimated the city will spend about $95,000 in the next two fiscal years for public art.

Glendale has few fine restaurants to speak of and only a handful of inns, the swankiest being a Best Western Motel.

And while the Big Three cities on the other side of Phoenix have their own daily newspapers, Glendale barely generates enough news to fill the weekly edition of the city's newspaper. However, a quick skimming of the Tempe Daily News' headlines — which is the way I usually read it — shows that a good portion of its stories are ASU-related. A west-side branch of ASU could likewise give the Glendale Star a storehouse of stories.

So with just a few moves by voters and accountants, the regents and legislators can give the west side a whole new image as a center of culture to challenge the East Phoenix-Tri-city dominance.

An ASU branch may even be good for people interested in an education.

According to an ASU report, the west side of Maricopa County is the fastest growing county area in total numbers of population. Many of the residents of the area have to drive 20-30 miles for a University education. A campus in the northwest corner of Phoenix that offers classes leading to graduate and undergraduate degrees would allow for the education of more people with less difficulty. An additional benefit of the campus is its location on the main side of the sometimes-swollen Salt River.

Because of the overwhelming interest in business and engineering, most classes at the proposed campus will be in these areas. I suppose that makes sense, though I'd like to see an emphasis on something else for a change. We don't have to launch a program as massive as Engineering Excellence; I'd settle for Journalism Distinction or even Mass Media Mediocrity.

If the Board of Regents approves the funds for the transitional program, it's up to the Legislature. Please call or write your lawmaker in support of the west side branch campus.

The west side needs it.

ASU record shows Coach Rodgers is unappreciated

Editor:

In his column of Oct. 5, Assistant Sports Editor Ken Sain totally abolished the term "school spirit." Reading his article, I noticed contradiction upon contradiction concerning head football coach Darryl Rodgers. Being a fan of ASU football I took it upon myself to write a reply to this proposterous view of our coach.

The article brought to me a comparison of coaches: the legendary Frank Kush vs. Coach Rodgers. I feel there really is no need for comparison; both coaches gave or are giving ASU an above average football reputation. As of Oct. 5, Darryl Rodgers' record at ASU in three years is 29-8-1. That averages 8-2 a year. Coach Kush's record at ASU in 22 years was 176-54-1. That also averages 8-2 a season.

About that controversial UCLA game, which is only one incident proving that Coach Rodgers knows more about football than many think. For one who saw the game, in my view the defense would not have lasted another minute on the field; and seeing the ever-so-important momentum shift to UCLA, I feel a tie is much better than a loss anytime — especially when a Rose Bowl birth is in sight.

The quarterback subject is a hot one also. So far this year, starting quarterback Todd Hons has done an exceptional job as quarterback for the Sun Devils. But when Hons throws an incomplete pass, the fans boo him until he does something good. This has to go, just as the theory that there is more pressure on a college coach than on a pro coach has to go.

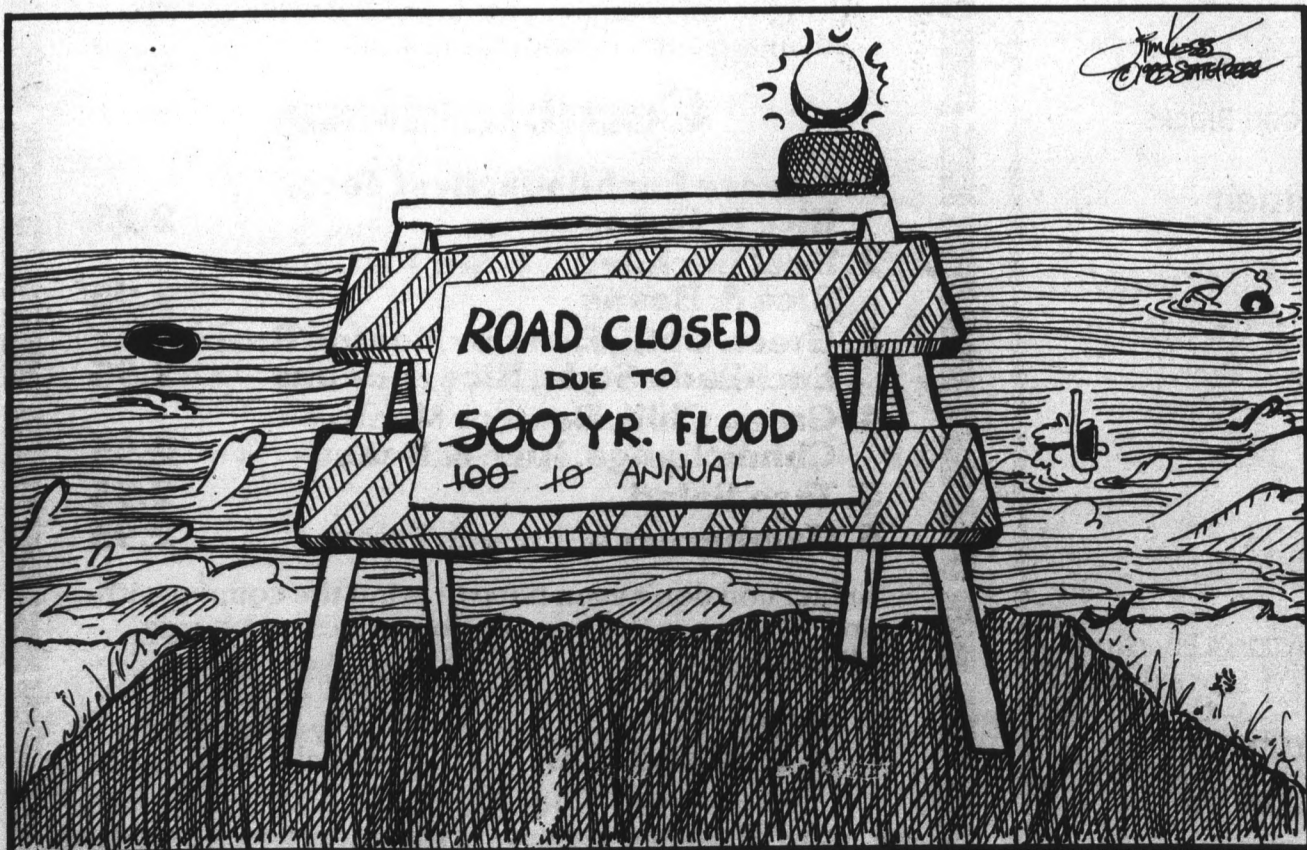

At least, that's the theory I understood from Mr. Sain's column. Seeing all this "pressure" on pro coaches, one wonders why Coach Kush didn't go to another college to avoid all the "pressure" that goes with a job in the NFL.

Finally, one must consider the "shadow" over Coach Rodgers' head. If there is a shadow over his head, it must be the same one over the head of Todd Hons, who couldn't even wear the shoes of now back-up quarterback Sandy Osiecki.

In conclusion, I would like to congratulate team captain Luis Zendejas on his feat last Saturday night and wish Head Coach Rodgers and his Sun Devils the best of luck on the rest of the season.

Students to plan 'urban villages'

By Wayne Baker
Staff writer

For most, $50,000 does not seem like a great deal of money to spend to employ eight urban planning consultants for one year.

However, for eight ASU graduate students that amount is plenty.

Elizabeth Burns, chairman of the department of urban planning, said $50,000 is the amount Phoenix is paying ASU to employ eight students — seven from the planning department and one from geography — to work on the "urban village concept."

The project is designed to give the students direct community experience in urban planning on a "far more intense scale than through apprenticeship and internships," she said.

Burns said the contract, awarded to ASU on Aug. 1 by the Phoenix planning department, calls for the money to be reallocated to the students in the form of financial aid.

In addition to money, she said, the program complements the students' classroom experience.

According to Richard Counts, Phoenix planning director, the urban village concept is a redevelopment and growth plan that divides the city into eight areas or "villages."

Each village has its own planning committee made up of a cross-section of residential and business interests in the area, he said.

Burns said one student serves on each committee with the assignment of assisting and providing specific recommendations to the city's Planning and Zoning Commission.

The students will work with committees for the full academic year, she said, adding that her department plans to renegotiate for another year next fall.

According to Counts, the urban-village committees are working to develop each village into a distinct community with its own central core.

Jim Strozier, the student who works with the Paradise Valley Village, said he found Phoenix "a city that kept going on forever without much difference."

He came to ASU this semester from Salt Lake City to pursue his master's degree.

Strozier said the village committees are doing a good job working with the communities already here.

"It's giving them the option to live, work and recreate all in their own community without having to commute," he said.

Janice Dwyer, the student member of the Encanto Park Village Committee, said she has "a real good committee with quite a bit of diversified experience."

"They know what they want to do with their village, but they're having trouble getting on paper a formalized plan," she said.

Dwyer said she acts as an adviser to the committee.

"We're supposed to be leading them by the hand, letting them make their own decisions," she said.

In addition to working experience, Dwyer said the financial assistance has enabled her to be free from employment in order to devote more time to her studies.

Burns, who recently arrived at ASU from the University of Utah, said the program is a recruiting device for the planning department.

According to Burns, five students participating in the project came from out of state specifically for that reason.

"I sometimes feel like a football coach trying to recruit the best team for the school," she said.

As the only native of Arizona among the eight students, Dwyer said she is amazed at how much she is learning about Phoenix.

"It's amazing. You can live your whole life here and not know anything," she said.

Elizabeth Burns, the College of Architecture's planning department chairman, looks over plans for the redevelopment of Phoenix that she and eight graduate architecture students are presently developing.

Lap time

Swimmers push for longer pool hours

By Sandy Sistek
Staff writer

Swimmers who frequent the Aquatic Complex pools are attempting to petition ASU officials for more swimming hours, according to one student who is helping to organize the drive for signatures.

According to Nancy LaPlaca, a junior biology major, one of the problems swimmers are confronted with is the limited hours the pool is opened for lap swimming.

Presently, the pool is opened Monday through Friday from noon to 3:45 p.m., and on weekends April through September, with a 50-cent charge.

"We find these hours very limited," LaPlaca, a regular pool user, said. "Afternoon classes to attend or teach and eight-to-five work schedules make it impossible to find a time to swim. There are no alternative times from which to choose."

LaPlaca said she knows at least 200 people who would probably be willing to sign a petition directed at ASU officials requesting additional hours.

She added the petition would be presented to the Arizona Board of Regents.

"For an enrollment of 39,000 students, not including faculty and staff, the present pool hours are extremely limited," she said. "Theoretically, the pool belongs to everyone."

LaPlaca said if additional hours were made available for lap swimming, either morning hours such as 6:30 a.m. to 8:30 a.m. or early evening hours such as 5 p.m. to 7 p.m., it would give most daytime faculty and staff and evening students the opportunity to use the pool.

"A charge of twenty-five to fifty cents would not be too much to ask for these additional hours," she said.

Ward O'Connell, director of the Aquatic Complex, said he is not aware of any major problems in existence this semester.

He added that a factor affecting a possible consideration to open the pool additional hours would be money.

"We have been open for three years on this schedule and ninety-five percent of the swimmers are happy; at least it appears that way to me," he added.

O'Connell said a problem with overcrowding at the beginning and end of each school year occurs because of the warm weather.

He said in the month of September, the complex accommodated 16,000 swimmers, adding "We got through our overcrowded period."

O'Connell said an average of 500 people are at the pool daily during the warmer periods of the year.

"Everyone has been very cooperative so far this year," he said. "We are trying to do what we can. All considerations that are made are passed on to proper authority."

LaPlaca said when the swimming and diving teams practice from 2 p.m. to 4 p.m., the lap swimmers are asked to move to the other pools which are smaller in length.

"Lap swimmers are delegated to the 'rec' pool which has five lanes, is very crowded and has potentially dangerous conditions," she said.

"Usually, the core of fifty people are affected by this. The lap swimmers can only swim from (12 p.m. to 2 p.m.) unless they are willing to fight the 'rec' pool conditions.

"We do not begrudge the swim team for their practices; we just feel we should be given additional hours when ours are taken away," she added.

O'Connell said he has to provide equal time for both recreational swimmers and team swimmers.

He said the pools vary in length, with a 50-meter by 25-yard pool, a 25-yard by 67-foot pool and a 75-foot by 60-foot pool. There are 16 pool lanes in operation, eight lanes of 25 yards and eight lanes at 50 meters, he added.

"These lanes are full now, but the business will be cut by one-third when the weather starts to change," he said.

According to a student who wished to remain unidentified, a petition was made by swimmers last semester which stated the needs and problems that existed at the pool.

The petition was sent to various officials in hopes of solving some of the pool problems the petitioners felt existed, but according to the student, no response was given by administrators.

O'Connell said at the time the petition was brought to his attention, there were not any serious problems.

"By the time the petition came to our attention, we didn't have a problem because we made additional time throughout the summer," he said.

Cady goofy golfin'

House cuts student aid to meet budget

By the College Press Service
 WASHINGTON — Congress is cutting some student aid programs in last-minute political struggles to reach a federal education budget for the new fiscal year.

House of Representatives committees recently have cut virtually all student aid programs. Although the full House restored some of the money, its most recent version still is less than the student aid budget passed last June.

Senate committees also made cuts, but they were less dramatic than those of the House.

"It's a very strange political situation," said Kathy Ozer, lobbyist for the U.S. Student Association in Washington. "We have a Democratic House coming out with lower figures than a Republican Senate."

The Senate subcommittee responsible for education spending produced a budget proposal after negotiations between subcommittee Chairman Lowell Weicker, R-Conn., and David Stockman, director of the Office of Management and Budget, a committee staffer reported.

Stockman reportedly thought spending for College Work-Study, National Direct Student Loans and the Trio programs for educationally and economically deprived students was too high in the June provisional budget, the staffer said.

Weicker then proposed cutting a total of $130 million from three programs, got Stockman's approval and pushed the cuts through his committee. The full Senate is expected to vote on Weicker's proposal early this month.

As the figures stand now, Ozer said, all the federal programs — Pell Grants, Guaranteed Student Loans, State Student Incentive Grants, NDSLs, Trio and College Work-Study — will suffer during the 1984-85 academic year, when this budget would take effect on campuses.

Swimming, friends rebuild student's life

By Mike Rynearson
Staff writer

Arthur Jacobs did something four years ago that many people thought he would never do.

He lived.

On Nov. 15, 1979, while living in New York City, Arthur was involved in a car accident that shattered his left elbow, severely damaged the right side of his brain and put him into a coma for six weeks.

During the next year and a half, he had more than 30 operations to rebuild his joints and remove calcium buildup, which doctors said was the worst they had ever witnessed.

His weight plummeted from a healthy 180 pounds to a sickly 126. As a result of the damage to his brain, he lost most of the motor control in his left side.

Once physically active in sports and weightlifting, Arthur suddenly found himself in a wheelchair, with doctors giving him virtually no hope of ever escaping his confinement.

But today, the junior philosophy major not only can walk short distances but can swim farther than most able-bodied individuals.

"A lot of doctors told me that I would never be able to walk again. I simply refused to believe that," he said.

Through counseling and close contact with friends and relatives, Arthur said he fought back depression.

"You have to talk to people," Arthur said. "Even if they can't really help you, just expressing your problems and ideas to someone who is willing to listen helps a lot."

Arthur Jacobs

"You really find out who your friends are when you go through something like this," he said.

With a desire to continue school, he enrolled at ASU in January because the warm weather was better for his joints. With the help of some newfound friends, he soon started on the road to a miraculous recovery by refusing to give in to his problems.

"Everyone has problems," Arthur said. "Who's to say whose are more important. It's all kind of a relative thing. We all have to deal with them the best way we can."

Today, less than a year after embarking on an extensive mental and physical exercise program, he can walk short distances with only the use of a cane.

However, Arthur largely attributes his most recent success to a therapeutic swimming program and his association with two members of the ASU men's swimming team.

Last spring, Arthur met Bruce Foster, a member of the Sun Devil swimming team, and Alan Voisard, one of the assistant coaches, at a local tavern.

"They genuinely seemed interested in my problems and asked me if I ever tried swimming as therapy and they invited me over to the Aquatic Center.

"I was a little concerned at first, but I figured they would be there and they wouldn't let me drown," Arthur said.

Placing himself in Foster's and Voisard's hands, Arthur reached the turning point on his comeback trail.

"I have a tremendous amount of respect for Arthur," Foster said. "When he first came here, he didn't know how to swim and couldn't even float for more than 10 seconds. He pretty much put his life in our hands."

"Because his left side is almost completely immobile, he spent a lot of time underwater at first, but he never gave up. During that time he swallowed and choked on a lot of water," Foster said.

But with Foster and Voisard working with Arthur five days a week for an hour a day, his stroke and coordination improved by using kick boards and float buoys under his arm.

"The hardest part for him to learn was how to breathe air instead of water," Foster said.

Arthur Jacobs leaves his wheelchair and cane behind to swim laps at the Aquatic Complex.

Staff photos by Andy Arenz

"Because of the accident, he only has the use of 10 percent of his lungs and he couldn't hold his breath for very long," he said. "After he learned to swim fast enough to keep himself above water and his breathing improved, we took the boards and floats away."

Today, by utilizing a sidestroke and a scissors kick, he can swim for distances of more than a mile by stopping for short rests at various intervals, according to Foster.

"He also dives off the five-meter platform," Foster said. "Arthur has a lot of courage. He couldn't even walk up the stairs to the platform by himself, but he wanted to dive off it, so we carried him up and off he went."

"Arthur is very strong-willed," Foster said. "He refuses to accept his handicap. He wants to do everything that anyone else can do. He never feels sorry for himself for his handicap. "Swimming has been great therapy for him," he said. "Not many people are able to swim more than a mile."

Arthur says he owes a lot to Foster and the rest of the swim team and has become very close to them over the past six months.

"Bruce and the swim team have given me a lot of inspiration," Arthur said. "I couldn't have gone this far without their help."

"As far as I'm concerned the progress is never going to end. Who knows, maybe by this time next year I'll be running a marathon," he said.

None of his friends doubt that. To them, Arthur is known as "The Miracle Man."

'Sin City' renamed in Tempe City Hall ceremony

By Mike Rynearson
Staff writer

It had short a life. "Sin City" is no more — dead at the tender age of 10.

Thursday, at Tempe City Hall, it was wiped off the face of the earth with the flick of a pen by Tempe Mayor Harry Mitchell and Albert Pina, director of the Associated Students' Tenants' Association.

The event was not somber, though. No tears were shed, because in the same instant, there was also a birth.

It was the official kickoff of "Operation Beautification," a project sponsored by the Tenants' Association aimed at cleansing "Sin City." The first phase was a renaming of the area.

Henceforth, the community of 6,800 students adjacent to ASU will be known as the "Sun Devil Village."

The name is the brainchild of Linda Heywood, an ASU junior, and was chosen from more than 500 entries in a "Name That City" contest as part of "Operation Beautification."

"I'm happy that I could play a part in this project. I have a vested interest in both the City of Tempe and the University," Heywood said. "I'm glad to see that Tempe is showing an interest in upgrading this area."

For her contribution, Heywood was awarded several prizes, including a vacuum cleaner and 300 square feet of free carpet cleaning.

The project arose out of numerous complaints from residents about unhealthy living conditions, faulty plumbing and neglected lots, according to Pina.

"We also got a lot of calls from people who were upset because of the name. It carries a lot of negative connotations," Pina said.

Mitchell said, "I think the name is a state of mind. When Playboy did its article, it didn't help ASU's reputation any."

"But then to have the largest concentration of its students living in a place called "Sin City," that hurts it even more," he added. "A village connotes more of a community."

The biggest problem that Mitchell and Pina face is making the name catch on.

"I think that if everybody, including the press, refers to that area as "Sun Devil Village" or even just "The Village" from now on, eventually the name will stick," Mitchell said.

Pina added that he plans to erect a sign on Terrace Drive that will act as a reminder, reading "Welcome to Sun Devil Village."

For the past few weeks, Pina has talked with owners and landlords of the 38 apartment complexes in the "Sin City" area, and has found many who are receptive to the new cleansing program.

"This is a two-sided issue," Pina said. "The landlords want assurances of more student awareness of their responsibilities."

"The manager of the Riviera Apartments had already signed a contract for reconstruction of his parking lot, and the San Miguel Apartments has already begun a lot of renovating and is about to begin an extensive exterminating project."

Phase two of the program goes into effect on Oct. 22, when the City of Tempe will donate a day of free refuse pickup to "Sun Devil Village" residents.

Pina said he has asked all residents to help beautify the area by picking up all garbage and junk around their dwellings.

"Students have become aware of their responsibilities," Pina said.

Pumping Up

Devils hope to regain confidence against UCLA

By Tom Blodgett
Sports writer

ASU volleyball coach Debbie Brown would seem to have a problem on her hands.

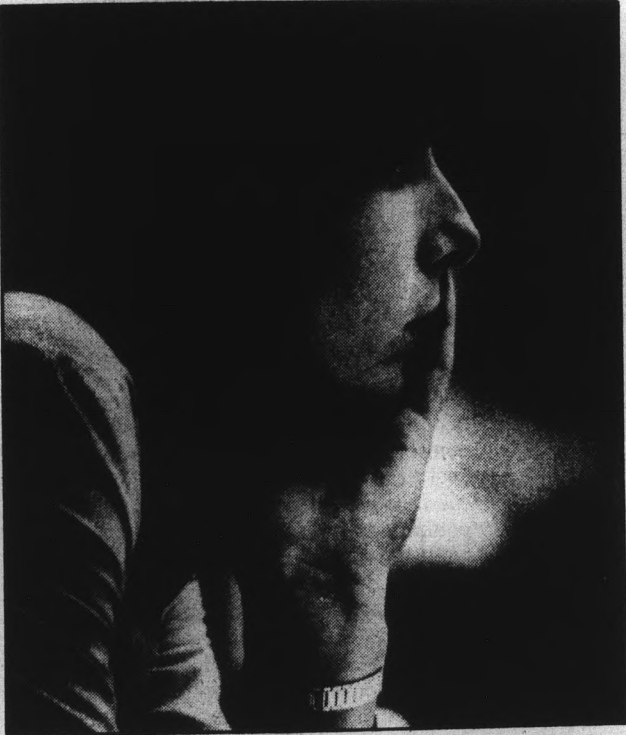

With her team having lost its first three conference games, Brown's squad now must match up with the fourth-ranked UCLA Bruins tonight at 7:30 in P.E. East.

This is the same Bruin squad that, coming into tonight's game with ASU, has won its first 20 matches; defeated No. 5 USC, No. 6 Kentucky, and No. 11 Cal-Santa Barbara (twice); won the championships of the All-Cal and Fullerton tournaments this season; and extended top-ranked Hawaii to five games twice last weekend before falling for the first time this season.

The Bruins did all this despite losing their two top players — all-American setter Jeanne Beauprey and power hitter Cammy Chalmers.

Obviously, the Devils have their work cut out for them. But Brown is more concerned with playing better this weekend than last.

"In our conference (the WCAA), it's inevitable you're going to lose some games," Brown said.

ASU head volleyball coach Debbie Brown studies her opponents intently while watching the match. The Devils will face a tough test this weekend when they face UCLA.

"It would be great if we could have a sweep this weekend. That's what we're hoping for, but I don't think that's necessarily what's most important."

What is important, according to Brown, is for the team to gain its confidence back.

"I think we need to play well," she said. "We have to get our confidence back."

"Sometimes I think we put too much pressure on ourselves to win instead of going out and trying to play well."

Despite losses due to graduation, the Bruins have plenty of experience returning.

The Bruins have one returning all-American in senior outside hitter Patty Orozco, who won those honors as a sophomore. Last season, Orozco was hampered by injuries.

The Bruins' steadiest players this season have been sophomore outside hitter Liz Masakayan and middle blocker Merja (pronounced Maria) Connolly.

Masakayan is not the tallest hitter in the league, but she is an excellent leaper. Connolly helps the team shore up the blocking, which is the weakest part of the Bruins' net play.

The Bruins will also start junior Dawn Kenny in the middle. Freshman Lisa Ettesvold could also see some action.

One freshman has cracked the starting six. Setter Lori Zeno is drawing raves for her work.

The other starting setter will be either Michelle Boyette or Tracy Saryng.

Brown feels the match could go either way and would not be surprised if ASU pulled what many would consider a major upset.

"They have weaknesses we hope to take advantage of," Brown said. "We have to serve tough and play real good defense, keep the ball in play."

Brown has been putting special emphasis on defense throughout the season, and she feels it once again may be important this weekend.

"They have not had to play a scrappy team before," she said.

Serving has proven to be a problem area for the Devils in the past. Against San Diego State, it may have cost them the match as they committed a staggering 18 service errors.

But Brown hopes to put her team's service to work this weekend as a weapon.

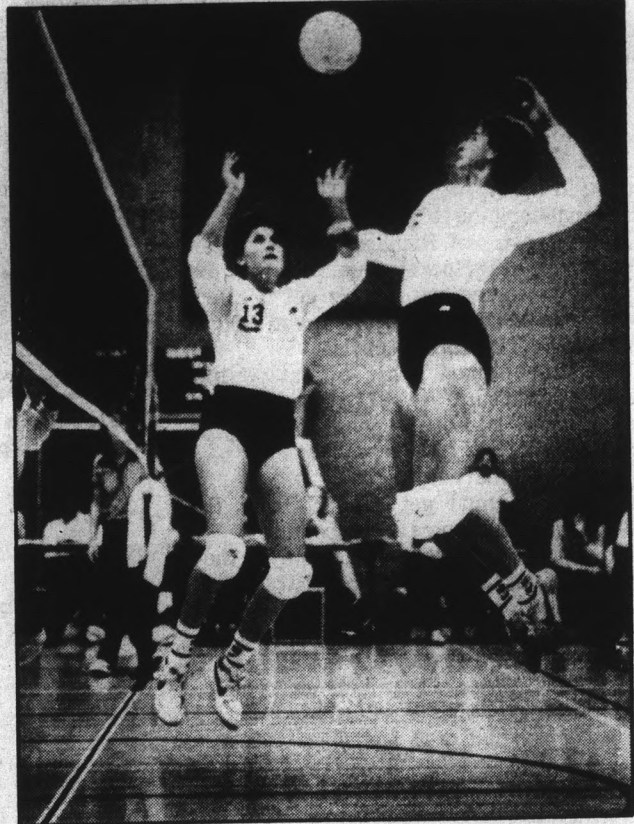

"They are not as good a passing team," she said. "If we can serve tough, we may be able to take them out of their offense."

Brown also said it will be important for her hitters to get back on track against UCLA.

"In our conference, everyone needs to play well," she said. "If one of our six players plays poorly, then it's very noticeable."

"Maybe one one player you can cover for, but if two play poorly, then it's very difficult."

Brown said the team has also been working on hitting options this weekend, "so that we will still have smart things to do with the ball when the set isn't there, instead of hitting it out or into the block."

Brown will be making one lineup change this weekend. Starting middle blocker Sherri McKibbin pulled a groin muscle in practice this week, and will not start.

Instead, Lisa Thomas, who has played well off the bench this season, will be inserted for her second start of the year. Thomas also started in the season opener against New Mexico.

Tomorrow night, the Devils will play a lesser light in Cal State-Fullerton, a traditional WCAA weakling in volleyball.

"We definitely have more potential than they do," Brown said. "But we need to prove that."

"Even though they aren't one of the better teams in the conference, they are still a good team."

Hockey club says more school support needed

By Dean Obenauer
Sports writer

It is difficult to get enough interest to make an athletic club at ASU.

And the thought of that club someday being a NCAA Division 1 team is almost an impossible task; but to the hockey club it is a worthwhile goal.

"We want to build a Division 1 hockey program," team player and general manager Bill Moran said.

Both Northern Arizona University and the University of Arizona are years ahead of ASU in establishing hockey programs. NAU's is already off the ground and competing in the NCAA, and the U of A is very close to joining the NCAA.

Both Moran and Richard Shields, president of the ASU Hockey Club, said that the support the other two schools get is much more than ASU's club receives, and ASU is the biggest of the three schools.

"We have taken some big steps this year," Moran said, "gone out on a limb and taken some gambles trying to make a change."

But it is not that easy. First they must get support from the school and that support is just not there.

"If we take the first step, then maybe they will follow us," Shields said.

Although the team wants to accentuate the positive, it is difficult to do at times.

Like the fact that they are not allowed to sport the ASU mascot on their uniforms or wear ASU's maroon and gold colors.

Another is that they were cut back this year in club funds. Last year they received $800 and this year they are only getting $700.

"We got cut back," Shields said. "It's like a slap in the face."

Their argument is justified. Hockey is an expensive sport.

"You can play rugby and lacrosse on grass for free," Moran said. "In hockey you have to pay for playing time."

Their $700 will go towards one-fifth of their ice time. Ice time at their home rink runs close to $135 a night.

The club feels that they should get more funds based on the expense of their sport versus the other sports that receive money.

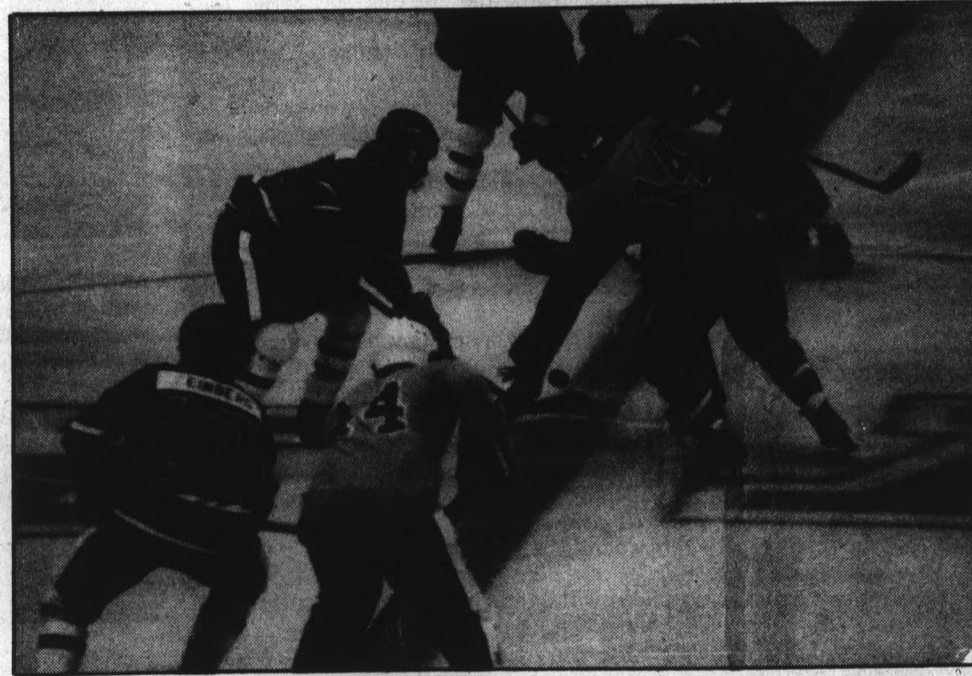

In order to make up for the cut, the players have been sponsoring fund raising events. They also have been receiving donations from families that have players on the team.

"It's like fighting a losing battle," Moran said.

The Ice Devils celebrate after last year's win over Arizona. The Devils scored with 12 seconds remaining to grab an 8-7 victory.

Ice Devils

Richard Shields of the Ice Devils faces off against U of A. The Devils will face the Wildcats twice this year.

Shields and Moran have figured that it will cost over $350 a person in addition to their $75 dollar team dues to play this season. Most of that money will go toward travel expenses.

Despite their lack of funds, the team has still been making substantial progress.

This year's team will be competing in the Rocky Mountain Intercollegiate Hockey Association. The teams in the division are Colorado St., U of A, Wyoming, USC, the University of Northern Colorado and ASU.

The Ice Devil squad will play each team twice, once at home and once on the road.

Last season there was no set league or division, and the Ice Devils just set up games with schools on an oral basis.

In addition to the league, the team has also made advances in the area of talent.

The team has players from as far away as Alaska and Canada. Players who have played for the majority of their 20 years are now lacing up their skates and playing with the Ice Devils.

"This year is by far the best year for talent ever," Shields said.

Moran said that he sees no reason why they will not be playing the U of A for the championship.

The team is being coached by Dennis Olmsteadt and Andre Hinse. Both have played professional hockey here in Phoenix with the Roadrunners.

"They are giving us a system and a lot of playing knowledge," team player Tim Wilson said.

Even with their fine coaching and their best talent ever, the team will need student support if they are to excel.

"Our goal is to get a lot more people there," Shields said.

In the past the Oceanside Skate Rink had not fully supported the Ice Devils but because of a new owner, things are looking up.

There will be hot chocolate, beer, and the heaters will be turned on to ensure a most comfortable spectating atmosphere. The cost for a rink-side seat will be about $2 and the money will go toward pucks and other equipment the team will need.

"If it wasn't for taking people to our games a couple of times there wouldn't have been many fans," Wilson said.

The first exhibition game is against the Phoenix Sharks. Admission to Saturday's 8 p.m. game is free. The two teams will face off again at 11 a.m. Sunday. Both games will be at the Oceanside Ice Rink.

Cats hoping to get back on track

By Ken Sain
Assistant sports editor

There will be a problem in Tucson Saturday night at Arizona Stadium. The problem will be the Colorado State Rams.

No, the Rams may not present much of a problem for the tenth-ranked Wildcats; the problem will be getting people to come watch the expected rout.

The Arizona officials are offering discount tickets of $5 to fans. Their Sports Information Office is trying to build the game up as the "Shootout near OK Corral."

One problem the U of A coaching staff should not have is getting their team ready for the game. A 33-33 tie with Cal-Berkeley last week practically ruined any shot the team had at claiming a national championship.

"I don't think the tie will hurt us in our quest to be No. 1 in the conference," Wildcat coach Larry Smith said. "I believe the pressure has gotten to us the past two weeks. We started to play like we were behind instead of ahead. We have to go out and have some fun."

Another motivating factor for the Wildcats is the last meeting between the Rams and Cats. In 1980 the Cats pulled off the upset of the year when they surprised the No. 2 ranked UCLA Bruins with a 23-17 victory.

That victory proved the Cats had the potential for a winning season, but a 15-13 loss to the Rams that year prevented the U of A from a winning season. They finished the year 5-6.

Some feel that was the beginning of the Wildcats' problems in beating teams they were expected to handle easily.

The reason the game is being billed as a "shootout" is the two quarterbacks involved — Tom Tunncliffe for the Cats and Terry Nugent of CSU.

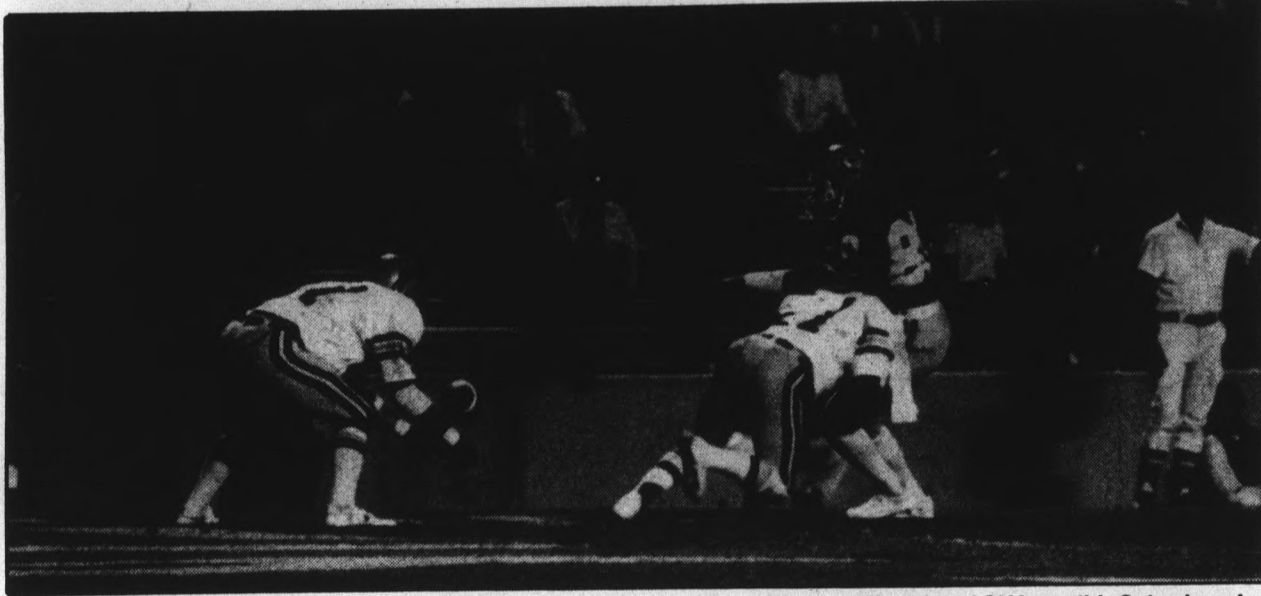

Tunncliffe has thrown for 6,257 yards in just over three years. He has thrown for more yards than any other quarterback in U of A history.

Nugent has set school records for passing (4,947 yards) and total offense (4,288 yards).

The ball should spend most of the night in the air.

Colorado State is 1-4 with its lone victory coming last week against the Utah Utes. The Rams' defense kept the Utes out of the end zone, when Utah had a first-and-goal on the eight. Their fourth down pass fell incomplete to give the Rams a 31-28 victory.

The Cats lead the Pac-10 in scoring offense, running up 40.6 points per game. They also lead the conference in scoring defense (11 per game), rushing defense (57.2 per game) and total defense (246.0 per game).

The Colorado State Rams will attempt to hold on to the ball a little better than they did against ASU here, this Saturday when they travel to Tucson to take on the U of A Wildcats.

Four conference games top Pac-10 slate

The Pac-10 season gets under way in earnest this week, with four conference games Saturday. ASU has an open date this weekend, and Arizona will play Colorado State.

Here is a brief preview of this week's conference games.

Washington State at Southern Cal — The Trojans (1-2-1, 1-0-0), are off to a terrible start by their normal standards. They were blasted 38-14 last week by South Carolina, and coach Ted Tollner is concerned about the progress of his team.

Although the Gamecocks scored 38 points against USC last week, Tollner is not that worried about the defense. South Carolina had to drive only 12, 2 and 17 yards for three of their touchdowns.

The offense has depended heavily on the passing of Sean Salisbury to move the ball this season, due to the lack of a standout at tailback. The Trojans' leading ball carrier is Fred Crutcher, with 294 yards, far below the traditionally high standards at USC.

Washington State coach Jim Walden predicted at the beginning of the season that the Cougars (2-2-0, 0-1-0) had a good chance to go to the Rose Bowl. Saturday's game will be a good indicator of whether he was right.

The Cougars have been inconsistent this year. They played a good game against a tough Michigan team before falling 20-17, but they were destroyed 45-6 by Arizona.

Washington State is led by explosive quarterback Ricky Turner, who is leading the Pac-10 in passing efficiency.

"Turner can hurt you either running or passing," Tollner said. "He's a versatile athlete with great speed who's also completed 63 percent of his passes."

Oregon State at Washington — Oregon State (1-4-0, 0-2-0) is an improved team and is becoming more competitive, but is still one of the conference's doormats.

The leader of the Beavers is fullback Bryce Oglesby, who is second in the Pac-10 in rushing behind ASU's Darryl Clack, and has been over 100 yards in three games this year. After Oglesby, the OSU offense is hurting after losing its top two quarterbacks.

The Beavers' defense has been horrendous this season, giving up an average of 472 yards and 34 points per game.

The Huskies (3-1-0, 0-0-0) should have no trouble opening their conference season with a win.

The Washington offense, best in the conference so far, is led by Pac-10 total offense leader Steve Pelluer, has been spectacular so far this year.

The running game, using a trio of tailbacks, has been able to control the ball most of the year. Last year's leading ground gainer, Jacque Robinson, has been splitting time with Sterling Hinds and Cookie Jackson, giving the Huskies a versatile attack.

UCLA at Stanford — The Bruins (0-3-1, 0-0-1) are off to their worst start in 40 years, mostly due to a tough schedule and a poor secondary. This game will be an aerial show between the No. 1 (Stanford) and No. 2 (UCLA) passing offenses in the Pac-10.

The Bruins replaced Rick Neuheisel with Steve Bono at quarterback last week, and Bono responded with a brilliant performance against BYU, completing 25 of 34 for 399 yards and three touchdowns.

The Cardinal (0-4-0, 0-1-0) also had a first-time starter last week in freshman John Paye. Paye had a good game in a losing effort against ASU.

Stanford's biggest weakness is its run defense, which is last in the conference.

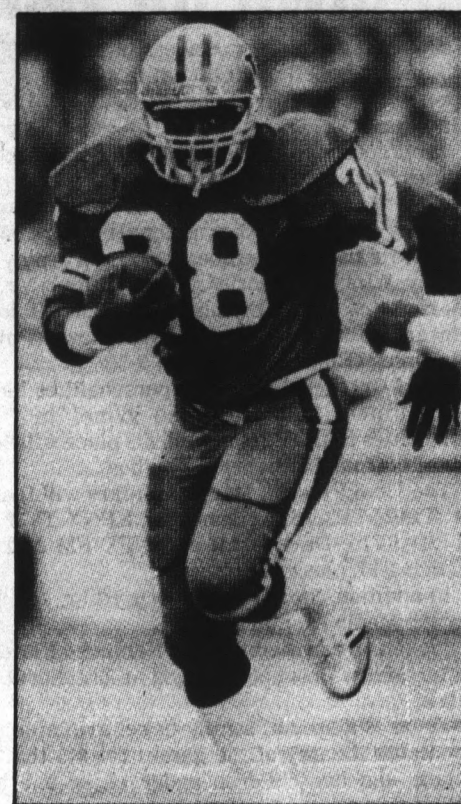

California at Oregon — The Bears (2-1-1, 0-0-1) enhanced their Rose Bowl chances greatly last week with their upset tie of Arizona. Cal has a solid team, with no major weaknesses.

Gale Gilbert has performed well at quarterback, and David Lewis is a fine tight end. Gilbert and Lewis were co-Pac-10 offensive Players of the Week last week.

The Bears' defense, led by Ron Rivera, held Arizona to only 86 yards rushing last week.

Oregon (1-3-0, 0-0-0) lost a shootout to San Jose State last week, 44-34, but the Ducks' offense continued to improve. Oregon is using a more diversified attack this year, and the results have been impressive.

The Ducks' defense, however, still needs work, as they are giving up 27.5 points per game.

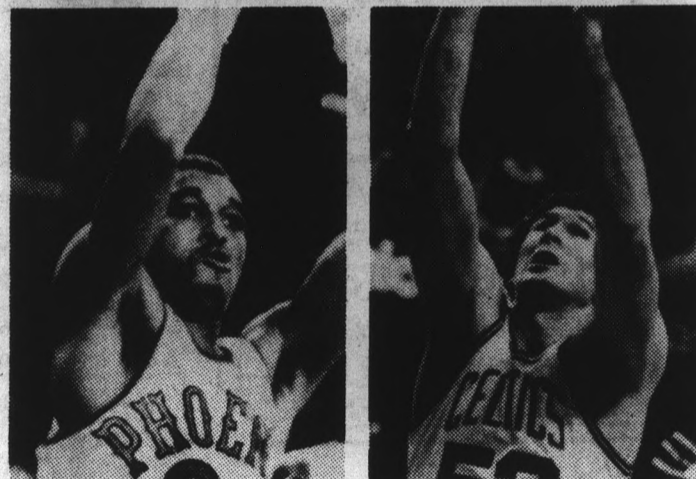

Washington's Jacque Robinson was the leading rusher in the Pac-10 a year ago. He is expected to play this Saturday as the Huskies take on the Oregon State Beavers.

Oregon's head football coach Rich Brooks has been searching for an answer to his team's problems. The Ducks will carry a 1-3 record into this Saturday's conference game against Cal.
