

ASU anticipating land gift for golf course

Staff reports

Development of an 18-hole championship golf course at ASU could begin as early as Jan. 1, if nearby land and water rights are secured in the coming months, officials say.

The Arizona Board of Regents Saturday unanimously approved a request by the University to develop a site plan for the course, which officials say would be located east of Rural Road and north of University Drive.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson told the board the request was "based on the belief that land around the Arizona Public Service Ocotillo Power Plant (located north of University Drive between Hayden and Rural Roads) would be transferred to ASU" upon board approval of the request to develop a plan.

Officials said the Sun Angel Foundation would be put in charge of funding, design and construction of the course.

Regent A.J. "Jack" Pfister, who is General Manager of Salt River Project, told the board he wanted to "acknowledge the generous gift of land from APS."

Officials did not disclose the acreage, value or location of the proposed land gift.

Pfister said APS would give ASU the land upon approval of the plan by the board, and the course would be developed at the Sun

Angel's expense.

Regent William Reilly, former chairman of APS, abstained from the vote.

Nelson said the gift of land is expected before the end of 1983. He added that the proposed gift still had to go before the APS Board of Directors for approval. APS officials involved with the land transfer were unavailable for comment.

Nelson said ASU and the Sun Angels conducted a feasibility study and, based on that study, the Sun Angels would support the building of the 18-hole course.

Sun Angel's Director Dan Devine estimated the cost of the course could range from between $3 million and $4 million.

"The hardest part we now face is securing the water rights. Golf courses use a lot of water," he said.

Devine estimated the process of obtaining water rights could take up to three months.

He said the Sun Angels will begin a fund-raising campaign for the course in the coming weeks and construction could begin by Jan. 1. He added that local businessman Seth Horn has donated $50,000 and real estate executive Rusty Lyon has donated $400,000 to the course development.

Once completed, Devine said, the course should be able support itself through greens fees and membership costs.

Brain shock victim denounces practice; others disagree

By Jim McCleary
Staff writer

Some people would like to forget June 6, 1968 — the day Robert F. Kennedy was shot.

With help from brain shock, Dennis Nester already has. The electroconvulsive therapy (ECT) Nester received when he was 19 blocked out all emotionally painful events occurring prior to that point. Nester is now looking for ASU students to help him in preventing ECT in certain areas of the country.

After 15 years, Nester now remembers everything except the day Kennedy was assassinated. He is aware of the incident only through written accounts of the murder.

The 34-year-old Scottsdale resident has spent most of his life struggling with feelings he did not understand.

He has spent the past 15 years rebuilding a life which he says doctors nearly destroyed through misdiagnosis and the use of brain shock.

Nester discovered two years ago that he had agoraphobia

— a fear of open space, often causing victims to be entirely housebound.

Nester calls it the "gamut of phobias." He said it is the fear of losing control, especially in a public place, and he is well aware of the feeling, having spent two years confined in his home.

Until two years ago, he was diagnosed as depressed and suicidal. But during group therapy for agoraphobics in 1981, he realized the symptoms of others were identical to his.

Doctors have now recognized that Nester is a victim of agoraphobia, which doctors have determined impossible to cure with ECT.

Nester described the first time he can consciously recall having an attack.

"I remember when I was about four or five years old. I felt I was being smothered and that I wouldn't wake up. I wanted to cry but I couldn't; I was too petrified.

"It was like I was drowning in an ocean and I had nothing to hold onto," he said.

He said a Michigan psychiatrist "misdiagnosed" him and after a three-hour session, prescribed "sleeping therapy." He said the doctor told him, "You just sleep a little while."

Nester said he was told to lie on his back, and the doctor put a rubber bit in his mouth and gave him two injections of muscle relaxant. After the second injection, he lost consciousness.

Nester said, in effect, he "slept" for the next two years.

Sleep therapy was a way for the doctor to disguise ECT, he said. While sleeping, ECT was performed without his knowledge, Nester said.

The two years following the treatment, he said, his awareness was gone.

"I was helpless and emotionally crippled," he said.

Nester has attempted to sue the Michigan doctors who misdiagnosed him, but lawyers have either refused to touch the case or have requested exorbitant fees, he said.

Senator says sales tax hike could affect tuition charges

By Bob Bea mesderfer
Staff writer

The Arizona Legislature will consider a one-half percent sales tax increase in December to support education at the same time it considers an equal increase to aid the Department of Corrections, according to a member of the Education Committee.

Juanita Harelson, R-Tempe, also a member of the Senate Appropriations Committee, said she would sponsor the one-half percent increase, which could raise up to $60 million for state public education.

Harelson said she told Senate Finance Committee Chairman Jeffrey Hill she would only support the one-half percent tax for prisons if a one-half percent tax for education is considered at the same time.

She said it was "unlikely we'll get it, but it will be a proposal."

The permanent one-half percent increase for prisons is sponsored by senators Tony West, R-Phoenix and Peter Kay, R-Phoenix, and Rep. Jim Skelly, R-Scottsdale, who were opposed to last April's emergency one-percent sales tax increase.

Harelson said, "Last April, when we put on the one-percent tax, we had a bloodbath over here."

Harelson said the universities need to look for other sources of financing, because the state Legislature cannot continue to raise taxes for higher education.

"We can't do it under the current taxing system," she said. "It's impossible to increase taxes to support universities. It's not an approach you're going to see at this time.

"I think as much as five years ago, I told University officials that the key to the state treasury is gone," she said.

Harelson said universities can no longer receive everything they ask for. "The golden days are gone."

But she said raising tuition should be a last resort when officials look for funding sources.

"I do worry about continually increasing tuition to the point where only those students who can come up with the money can attend," Harelson said.

"I can understand the push to make the (Arizona) universities more competitive with other western universities on tuition, but I worry about freezing people out," she said. "I worry that we're pricing kids out of a university education in an urban setting."

According to Regent A. J. "Jack" Pfister, the Arizona Board of Regents was responding to legislative pressure earlier this year when it raised tuition. Pfister said lawmakers told the regents if budgets were to increase, then tuition would have to increase.

"Given the state's (financial) limitations, if the regents didn't do it (raise tuition) the Legislature would" have, Harelson said.

"Raising tuition is an alternative, but it should be the last resort," she said. "Which is where we may be."

Validity of teacher's exam questioned

PHOENIX (AP) — The Arizona Tax Research Association Tuesday released a highly critical report on the Arizona Teacher's Proficiency Examination, questioning its validity in three areas.

Research Analyst Michael T. Martin said a study of the examination found that it was weak in the structure of many of its questions, the overall method in which the examination was scored and the failure of the examination to consider subscores in determining classroom proficiency.

The examination is required for public school teaching in Arizona.

"Not only are many of the questions on the test invalid, but the test is scored for overall knowledge on the individual basic skills and the cut off score of 80 percent was arbitrarily chosen for political reasons," Martin said.

Department of Education officials were not immediately available for comment.

Martin said an item analysis of the 150 questions administered to 2,430 applicants from July 1982 through March 1983 indicates that 58 of those questions should not be used to screen applicants.

UofA research farm sold

TEMPE (AP) — The University of Arizona's 40-acre citrus research farm was sold at auction for $5.61 million Tuesday to an Arizona-California group that plans a $200-million complex of high-rise offices, hotels, restaurants and similar properties.

The research farm was in an agricultural area when founded 40 years ago. Now it sits in a busy commercial-residential zone adjacent to two freeways and a few miles from downtown Phoenix.

It was sold under a Board of Regents decision five years ago to move most agricultural research from rapidly developing urban areas.

"We'll try to preserve all the citrus trees we can in the landscaping," said William Lund, operating head of Corporate Galleria, a California partnerships that includes Raymond Watson, chairman of Walt Disney Productions; Lanny Eberling and Lund.

The majority owners in the Arizona-California group are brothers Conley and Calvin Wolswinkel of Chandler, who are large-scale farmers and real estate developers.

A. Dean Bacon, manager of the research facility since 1977, said watching it sold "was like losing a child."

Rudd calls for Orme Dam construction

PHOENIX (AP) — Rep. Eldon Rudd, R-Ariz., on Tuesday called for construction of Orme Dam, saying the controversial dam proposed for the confluence at the Salt and Verde rivers is needed for water storage. The state's top water official immediately disagreed.

"We need to provide some real conservation of water. That means a holding facility at the confluence of the Salt and Verde rivers," Rudd said in a statement released by his office.

"Since 1978, included last week's storms, we have lost more than 6 million acre-feet," of water that could have been held by Orme, Rudd said.

"Put another way, we have lost as much water as we will receive from the Central Arizona Project in the next 53 years," he said.

State Water Resources Director Wesley Steiner said Rudd was wrong in saying Orme was needed for water storage.

"It wouldn't provide any greater storage capacity than Plan 6, not one drop," Steiner said.

Numerous interests had supported building Orme Dam, but most agreed two years ago to instead support the so-called Plan 6, which includes a new Waddell Dam on the Agua Fria River, a new Cliff Dam on the Verde, rebuilding of Roosevelt Dam on the Salt and reconstructing of Stewart Mountain Dam on the Salt.

The truth is—
Some of our services are better than others—some of our people are friendlier than others—things just are not perfect here.

You see—the one thing you'll always find here is sinners—Every last one of us—imperfect—struggling along—failing to be what we know we ought to be.

New professorship established; aids honors students' research

By Lisa Phillips
Staff writer

A new program allowing a selected professor to complete a research project while acting as a mentor to honors students has been established by the Honors Program of the College of Liberal Arts, according to the program director.

Ted Humphrey, ASU professor of philosophy, said the research professorship "provides honors students the opportunity to be in contact with a faculty member involved in a creative research project."

The professorship will allow one "especially distinguished" professor to be relieved of his normal teaching duties for a semester in order to spend time completing a research project and lecturing students, Humphrey said.

"It is an explicit expectation that this faculty member give time to the students," he said. "This will help establish a mentorship relationship between the faculty member and student."

Humphrey added that the project, which was approved by the Office of Academic Affairs last spring, uses University-appropriated funds to hire a full-time faculty member to take over the normal teaching duties of the professorship occupant.

Andrew Gilburne, a liberal arts honors student, said the professorship is the "perfect" way for a faculty member to contribute to a student's efforts to learn about research.

All honors students are required to write a thesis involving some degree of original research before being allowed to graduate from the program.

A faculty member who has time to give students special guidance in research will allow more students to overcome the fear and confusion that often accompanies writing a thesis, Gilburne said.

"I think it's necessary to have someone who has been there before," he said. "This will expose students to a professor doing research."

M.J. Pasqualetti, associate professor of geography, is this semester's occupant of the research professorship. His research project is "Decommissioning Nuclear Power Plants."

Candidates for the professorship are nominated by their departments and are selected by a committee comprised of faculty and students, Humphrey said.

The candidates are judged by an evaluation of their project and teaching abilities, he said.

"I think it is important that the project be well along," Humphrey said. "It is expected that the time will be used to actually complete the research."

He said another consideration in the committee's selection is timeliness and student interest in the project topic.

Humphrey said the new program will be beneficial to the college as well as the faculty and students, because a greater number of projects completed reflects positively on the college.

"The research that the faculty does is absolutely essential to undergraduate students and the college," he said. "If you were taught by a faculty where no research was being done, you would only get stale knowledge."

The College of Liberal Arts currently has 225 students enrolled in its honors program. The college offers an average of 14 honors class sections each semester and limits the number of students in each class.

ASU dance faculty to showcase talent

The creative abilities of the ASU Dance Department will be in full step this week as the department presents the Informal Faculty Dance Concert.

The nine-part performance will feature original choreography by faculty members and resident artists Muriel Cohan and Patrick Suzeau.

In addition, about 30 dance students will be featured in the performances, and a student production crew will be assisting in the shows.

Sheila Marion, dance production coordinator, said the experimental works are somewhat out of the ordinary. Some of the choreography includes other media, such as video and an inflatable sculpture which engulfs the stage and performers.

Dance styles will range from ballet to modern to post-modern.

Performances will be held at 8 p.m. Thursday and Friday in the Dance Studio Theatre in the Physical Education East Building. Tickets can be purchased in advance from the dance department or at the door prior to the shows.

Alvarez says style important for prospective newscasters

By Asha Nathan
Staff writer

Walking briskly across Cady Mall, the petite blue-and-white-clad figure drew interested glances. People were recognizing the woman who anchors three news shows a day in Phoenix — Linda Alvarez.

Alvarez spoke at a Women in Communications, Inc. meeting Tuesday in the MU Cochise Room.

"I got into the business quite by accident," said the KPNX-TV, Channel 12, anchorwoman, who attributes it to her ability to speak both English and Spanish without noticeable accents.

An English speech graduate from UCLA, Alvarez previously taught literature and composition on Chicago's South Side.

After her first television job announcing a community calendar of events in Chicago, she went on to do weather and co-host a talk show, then worked on a news show in her hometown, Los Angeles.

Alvarez, who came to Phoenix six years ago, is also executive producer of documentaries for the station.

"The competition is tough, so news directors have their pick," she said, adding that beginners have to be prepared to work long, hard hours.

She said it was important to develop a unique style in a field where everyone looks and sounds the same.

"I think appearance has to be non-distracting, clean, sharp and businesslike."

Although ratings might not be the best system, they are really the only audience measure, according to Alvarez. She said it was another dimension of the competitive nature of the field.

It is difficult for a person in the public eye to have a private life, she said. Of time spent with her husband, who also works for the station, she said, "We spent our first anniversary in the editing room."

Regarding her future, Alvarez said, "I feel very fortunate in doing exactly what I wanted to do, but I am open to opportunity."

- A Kodak master key and a graphic vinyl bag with contents valued at more than $300 were stolen from a room in the Noble Science Library at about 3 p.m. There were no signs of forced entry. The key was used to open Room 102 in the library, inside which

- was the bag containing two keys and $300 in currency and checks. The property belongs to the automated copy systems department.
 - Two side covers totaling $30 were stolen from a motorcycle while parked in Lot 32 at 1:19 p.m.
 - A men's Custom Cruiser 10-speed bicycle valued at $178 was stolen while locked to the bike racks at Ocotillo Hall D-wing at 9:30 a.m. The lock had been cut and left.
 - A box containing tool equipment valued at $240 was stolen from the locked trunk of an employee's vehicle while parked in the Sun Devil Stadium concourse level at 8:30 a.m. The employee told police he had locked his trunk. The gray Craftsman toolbox contained assorted screwdrivers, wrenches, a drill and a skill saw.

More about Shock

ECT is used today primarily for psychotic depression, and advocates claim it can be 95 percent effective.

In most cases, a series of six to 10 treatments is the norm, not usually exceeding 20 treatments.

It has been estimated that almost 4,000 psychiatrists in the United States use ECT on nearly 100,000 patients annually.

The ECT process involves applying electrodes to each side of the anesthetized patient's head. A current — which some doctors say can be up to 170 volts of electricity — passes between the electrodes, usually for one second.

The patient is usually given anti-convulsion drugs to keep them from breaking bones during the treatment.

Following the treatment, the patient awakens disoriented, as if recovering from a stunning blow. Patients may suffer amnesia.

Supporters of the treatment say memory is usually restored in a few days or weeks.

Nester said that following his first treatment, he "woke up with a smoking sensation" in his head.

"It was like electricity had destroyed part of my brain. It felt like something was burnt," Nester said.

hypnosis has improved his condition more than any medication or treatment.

"Self-hypnosis is the most powerful tool I have used. It's like a safety valve into the self-conscious," he said.

Even though most side effects of the shock have subsided, Nester still experiences symptoms of agoraphobia. He said he has attacks of hyperventilation if he enters a crowd or a place of authority, such as hospitals or police stations.

Nester has dedicated most of his energy recently to writing his autobiography and supporting an ECT ban in Berkeley, Calif.

Voters in Berkeley approved the ban last year, making such treatments a misdemeanor punishable by up to six months in prison and a $500 fine.

However, California's psychiatric associations have filed suit against Berkeley to have the shock ban overturned. The ban has been temporarily invalidated and ECT continues to be used, according to Nester.

Nester is rounding up support in Phoenix to fight a hearing on the legality of the Berkeley ordinance, and has asked ASU sororities and fraternities to sponsor fund-raisers to cover expenses in fighting the lawsuit.

Dottie James, philanthropy chairman for ASU sororities, said there should be a vote by Monday on a possible sorority-sponsored fund-

He was given three treatments before he realized he was being shocked, he said. "It's like a permanent stigma, a permanent insult to know it was unnecessary and barbaric torture."

Two years after the treatment, Nester started self-hypnosis, which helped him recover memories he lost during ECT. He said raiser.

Nester said he is concerned that the support for such a fund-raiser may be minimal because few people in Arizona will denounce the use of ECT.

Ernest Lendholm, professor of psychology at ASU, said determination of the use of such treatments should be left to doctors.

"I am absolutely not in favor of non-professional people telling physicians what treatments they can or cannot use," Lendholm said.

He said interest groups could benefit more by lobbying for research money in state legislatures to improve alternatives for depression treatment.

"It (ECT) certainly seems barbaric, but many patients want it. It does work for a large number of people," Lendholm said.

He said certain alternatives to ECT, such as chemotherapy, can have adverse effects as well.

Dennis Glanzman, also an ASU psychology professor, said, "When (ECT) works, it works beautifully."

But he added, "In the worst possible case, one treatment could be unsafe."

"What (ECT) will do is increase brain activity of certain enzymes which should change brain chemistry for the better."

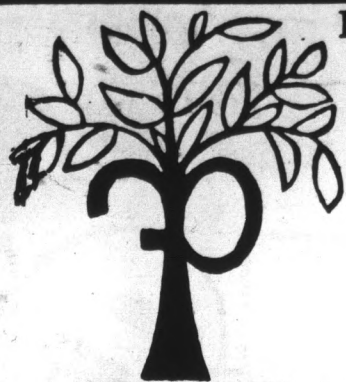

He suggested that if a person is suicidal, which is when ECT may be prescribed, he should be hospitalized and submitted to shock only as a final alternative.

"Counseling or drugs probably are safer and should be used as a first treatment. Doctors feel a moral obligation to help patients and will use what they have," even if ECT is their primary option, he said.

He agreed with Nester that doctors avoid commenting on the treatment because of fear that they will appear in favor of ECT.

Joseph Braun, a psychology professor who teaches an ASU course dealing with treatment of brain disorders, said, "I have severe reservations (about ECT). I don't think it should be used, especially how it is prescribed."

He said a person can actually come out of the treatment feeling worse than when they went in — the opposite effect it was intended to produce.

Southern Cal in unfamiliar role of Pac-10 spoiler

By Jay Taylor
Sports editor

There is a lot of talk among Pac-10 schools that this is a down year for the USC football program. The team is on probation, they can't go to a bowl game, and they already have two losses and a tie marring their record.

But then there is the other side of the coin. Although the Trojans are ineligible for the conference crown, they are still 2-0 in Pac-10 play and can play the role of a spoiler for the other teams.

Trojan head coach Ted Tollner said his team will be competitive despite the handicaps they face.

"We can't win the conference championship, but right now we're 2-0 (in Pac-10 play), and we get a chance to play most everybody," he said. "That is a goal (beating conference rivals) we can be realistic about and make the most of."

"We want to be able to say that we beat the team that goes to the Rose Bowl, and we get to play most of the top contenders."

The only contender for the crown that USC does not play is U of A, and the Wildcats are also ineligible for the Rose Bowl.

Tollner said the title chase is still wide open, with four schools having a good chance for the Roses (excluding USC and U of A): ASU, Washington, UCLA and California.

Although Tollner came to Southern Cal from pass-happy Brigham Young, he said the Trojans' offensive philosophy has not changed much from previous years.

"We didn't necessarily come into this year looking to throw the ball all the time like a lot of people thought we would," Tollner said. "We basically structured the offense around the people we have."

Tony Slaton (left) was considered an all-American candidate at center during the preseason. Trojan quarterback Sean Salisbury (right) will lead the USC Trojans this Saturday in a Pac-10 match up against the Sun Devils.

"Of course we will still use the same two or three strong-side runs and two weak-side runs we've always made our living on."

The USC offense has been more diverse this year than in the past. The Trojans have been using three tailbacks — Fred Crutcher, Michael Harper and Todd Spencer — rather than letting one back carry the ball 30-35 times a game as they have in the past.

Harper was injured last week and will not play against ASU.

Crutcher, who is the starter, is the leading USC rusher with only 294 yards.

According to Tollner, junior quarterback Sean Salisbury has also been making good progress in coming back from a knee injury, and is improving every week.

"Sean was very frustrated against South Carolina (a 38-14 USC loss)," Tollner said. "But that was the only game he's had that has been below the level of performance we need him at in order to win.

"Sean is very similar statistically to Todd Hons," he added. "They are both right at the 60 percent (completion) mark, and their touchdown ratio is higher than the interception ratio. We think Sean is on his way to having a fine year."

Tollner said the Devils' balance is one thing that concerns him.

He called the ASU offense the most versatile the Trojans have seen so far this year, both running and passing.

"They (ASU) not only have balance between the pass and the run, but they have balance within their running and passing," he said. "Darryl Clack is an explosive runner, and Hons is a polished and experienced quarterback."

Tollner said motivation is no problem for this game, as the ASU-USC series has developed into an intense rivalry.

He said that with the relative closeness of the schools, and the winning tradition of both programs, the rivalry has developed quickly.

Tollner said that despite the two losses the Trojans have already sustained, he is not feeling an undue amount of pressure.

"The only pressure I feel," he said, "is that if you have a team that is capable of playing at a certain level, and they are not, how to get them to play up to that level."

"We haven't played well, and we are capable of playing much better," he said. "It's been five games now; we have to start playing."

"There is a lot of ability here. We just haven't shown it yet."

ASU voted to have best recruits but Brock says Devils backed in

By Ken Sain
Assistant sports editor

Outside pressure could be mounting on Sun Devil baseball coach Jim Brock. For the second consecutive year, ASU has been named by Collegiate Baseball as having the top recruits in the nation.

Teams that get the best talent year after year are expected to bring home national championships. But Brock is not so sure the Devils won the recruiting title outright.

He believes the Devils slipped in the back door after other schools watched their top prospects sign contracts with professional teams.

"We didn't have a great recruiting year, I guess we won it by default," Brock said. "The other schools signed some great players but after they signed with the pros, they were left with good players."

"We were surprised that we got (No. 1-ranked recruits) again, he said."

Leading the list of top recruits for the Devils are junior college transfer Bob Grandstaff, right-handed pitcher Kevin Williamson, first baseman Luis Medina, shortstop Shawn Gilbert and outfielder Dan Ducusin.

All were drafted in last June's free agent draft by the major leagues.

Two other newcomers are fighting for a starting spot on the Devil roster. Steve Murray will be battling for the starting second base position. Mike Devereaux has a shot at starting in right field. Both are transfers from Mesa Community College.

While ASU received the No. 1 ranking, some of the other teams that usually compete for the College World Series title also managed Top 10 rankings. Here is a look at each.

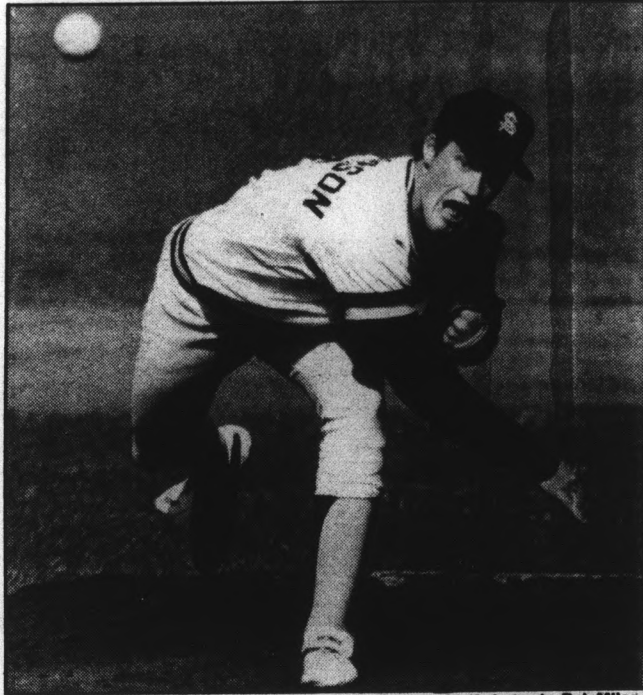

No. 2 — Oklahoma St. The Cowboys decided they needed some strong arms to bolster a strong hitting attack. Five pitchers drafted in June are expected to play for the Cowboys. In all, Oklahoma State signed 11 new recruits. It could have been better, but five top-notch players signed with the pros.

No. 3 — Texas. Graduation and the pros decimated the national champions over the summer. The Longhorns added 18 new recruits to try to regroup for the coming season. Collegiate Baseball called their freshman recruiting class the best in the nation, but their JC transfers left them in the third spot.

No. 4 — Wichita State. The Shockers have emerged as a tough team over the past few years, and the addition of 13 new players will only advance them further.

No. 5 — Cal State-Fullerton. The Titans would have won the recruiting title if four of their best recruits had not signed professional contracts. Still, the Titans did add eight quality recruits to bolster the team that went to the finals of the West II Regional Championship.

No. 6 — Arizona. The Wildcats suffered their first losing season ever last year and coach Jerry Kindall is hoping the 11 recruits he signed will change that.

Staff photos by Bob Miles

ASU's Kevin Williamson was listed as one of the top recruits that ASU was able to grab over the summer. Williamson was drafted in the first round of the secondary phase of last June's free agent draft.

No. 7 — San Diego State. The Aztecs added a ton of pitchers to a team that qualified for the West I Regionals last year. All five of their recruits were pitchers, but only one lefthander was added.

No. 8 — Stanford. The defending Six-Pac champions should be tough again. The big fish that got away in Palo Alto was Kurt Stillwell, but most of the 12 recruits attending Stanford are expected to add to the Cardinal depth.

No. 9 — Hawaii. The Rainbows have quietly been building a strong program on the Islands. They qualified for the playoffs last year, and with the addition of nine new recruits they could make it to the College World Series.

No. 10 — Oklahoma. The Sooners had probably their best recruiting year ever. With some luck the Sooners may challenge the Cowboys and Nebraska.

Brock said that for the next few years he will turn his attention to recruiting efforts on freshmen. Junior college transfers are eligible to be drafted after one season, while freshmen must wait three years before the pros can draft them.

"This year we have depth in both pitching and the position players," Brock said. "What we would like to be able to do is stay away from the transfers and concentrate on freshmen."

Lady golfers place fifth at tournament

By Vicki Serna
Sports writer

The women's golf team proved something to themselves last weekend when they competed in the Dick McGuire Invitational at Albuquerque, N.M.

Even though they felt the absence of one of their top players, Heather Farr, the team still came away just six shots short of second place.

"Anytime Heather Farr isn't there, there's a big difference," said golf coach Linda Vollstedt. She added, "We played fair, but we could have easily come in second place behind defending national champion Texas Christian University."

ASU placed fifth in the Invitational behind defending national champion TCU, Florida in second place, and New Mexico and BYU, which tied for third place.

Coach Vollstedt was content with the overall performance of her team. "I think we could have done much better, but I was pleased with the team. In fact, we played better than the way we finished."

She was especially pleased with the performance of freshman Libby Akers, who played in her first college tournament and had scores of 77-79-79 for a total of 235.

A stronger player, Nancy Moen turned in scores of 77-79-80 for a total score of 236, and was not too happy with her play. "Nancy was disappointed in her performance," said Vollstedt. "She had confidence but lost it, so now she really needs to get her confidence back."

Freshman Danielle Ammaccapane, who placed ninth in the tournament, had scores of 74-81-75-230, over the par-74 layout.

Hoop team looks for offense

By Dean Obenauer
Sports writer

Sun Devil basketball coach Bob Weinbauer will have his hands full this year experimenting with all the new faces the team will have this season.

In Weinbauer's inaugural season last year, he led the team to a 19-14 campaign that was topped with a bid to the National Invitation Tournament. It was his sixth post-season tourney in six years as a head coach.

The first challenge Weinbauer will face will be making up for the loss of 75 percent of last year's total offense.

With the loss of guard Byron Scott and forwards Paul Williams and Walt Stone, the team will need scoring from a new corps of players.

Scott was the Pac-10 leading scorer with a 21.6 point average, and probably would have been this year also if he had not decided to forgo his final year of eligibility.

Williams was the conference's second-leading scorer behind Scott with a 19.7 point per game average, and he went on to the pros. However, Williams' pro career has temporarily come to a halt after he was cut by the Phoenix Suns.

Stone was the team's third contributor with just over nine points per outing.

"Last year we had two outstanding players in Byron and Paul," Weinbauer said. "It was easy for everyone to let them take the lead."

"This year we won't have a superstar, so the others will take charge of the situations with more confidence than they've shown in the past."

The returning team members averaged a mere 16.9 points per game last year and played only 35 percent of the Devils' total minutes.

"Our returning players didn't score much in support roles last year," Weinbauer said, "but they will score more this year with the confidence of knowing the burden is on their shoulders now."

Weinbauer will be placing the responsibility on guards Chris Beasley and Kenny Vaughns. Forwards Jim Deines and Billy Jordan will be highly relied on, as will center Phil McKinney.

Beasley scored the most of any returning player with an 8.4 average last year.

"Beasley, Deines and Jordan, in particular, should score much better," Weinbauer said. "We'll look to Kenny Vaughns to create scoring opportunities, to get the ball into the scorers' hands."

"She had a poor second day, but still finished ninth," said Vollstedt.

Senior Tina Tombs shot a 76-79-79-234 and finished tenth in the tournament. "Tina could have done better than that," said Vollstedt. "She could have easily been in the top five."

Next week the golf team travels to Tulsa, Oklahoma for the Nancy Lopez Invitational at Cedar Ridge Country Club, the site of the fifth position is between Trish Certo, Julie Cross, Diane Sikorski and Moen.

Four of the five golfers competing at the Nancy Lopez Invitational are Ammaccapane, Tombs, Akers and Farr. The battle for the fifth position is between Trish Certo, Julie Cross, Diane Sikorski and Moen.

As for the rest of the season, Vollstedt feels positive about her team. "We've got the most potential of any golf team I've seen in the last two years," she says. "It will take awhile, but we'll win tournaments, and as the year progresses, we'll get better."

HELP WANTED — PART-TIME

National Marketing Company has openings for sales-minded people interested in part-time employment. Openings are available on the evening and weekend shifts. Our sales people work in a modern, comfortable business environment contacting established customers on long distance WATS lines. Earnings, which include salary and bonus, average $4-$6 per hour, paid weekly. These are permanent positions with no seasonal layoffs.

If you have a good, clear speaking voice, proper grooming for a business office, enthusiasm and competitive spirit, our business office management team will train you to sell our nationally recognized products (while being paid, of course). Our Tempe office is located approximately five minutes from campus.

Please call DIALAMERICA for details.
