

Committee tables measure placing campus police under DPS

By Robert S. Beamesderfer
Staff writer

The Senate Committee on Government Monday voted unanimously to hold indefinitely a bill that would have transferred control of state university police departments to the Department of Public Safety.

The 8-to-0 vote to table the measure means the issue will not resurface this session unless an amendment to a related bill is introduced on the Senate floor.

The bill, which would have created a division of university security under the DPS, faced strong opposition from the Arizona Board of Regents, university police departments and local police, including Tempe Police Chief Arthur Fairbanks.

A committee staff member reported DPS had taken no position on the bill and nobody from the department testified.

DPS Director Ralph Miltstead told the State Press Friday, "I would not even consider supporting that proposal unless the university presidents, the regents or the governor called on me."

Rep. Jeff Hill, R-Tucson, sponsor of S.B. 1144, had said the proposal would save the state "over a million dollars." He also said when he introduced the bill it had a "good chance" of passing, despite the failure of similar bills in the past.

Some supporters of the bill said it was necessary because of the way certain incidents were handled at the U of A.

One of the supporters, Rep. Jesus "Chuy" Higuera, D-Tucson, said he co-sponsored the bill at the request of officers "at one of the institutions" because of charges that cases under investigation were dropped at the request of the administration.

Richard Holtz, a U of A police officer, said, "There are some problems at the U of A that need to be looked at."

Holtz cited an incident in which a University staff employee on probation was pressured to withdraw a traffic complaint against a person with "political connections with the University administration."

Holtz said members of the President's Club, a benefactor's organization, were considered off-limits from parking and traffic citations.

A letter in support of the bill and signed by 24 of 29 certified police officers was delivered to the committee by Holtz. He added the problems did not involve U of A Police Chief Mike Thomas, who has held the post since August 1983.

ASU Police Chief Russell Duncan said no allowances are made at ASU for members of the Sun Angels or for those in the administration, under orders from President J. Russell Nelson.

Duncan said the bill would not save money because DPS officers are paid about $4,000 per year more than ASU officers, who would retain their jobs at the higher salary under the DPS in the event of a transfer.

Under the measure, all police officers and support personnel employed by the universities would be transferred to DPS control.

"It has never been studied by DPS or the university police department to find out how good an idea it is," Miltstead said.

Duncan said the idea needed to be studied to determine the impact on the University community, which he said is a "sensitive entity" with special needs.

"There is a need for campus police officers at ASU, just as there is a need for a Department of Public Safety Highway Patrol and a need for municipal police in a city," Duncan said.

Fairbanks, while conceding the DPS or Tempe Police could handle campus security, said he does not believe ASU police "could be run any better than by an organization on campus."

Duncan told the committee most of ASU's police officers are trained at a DPS-operated academy in Tucson.

Sen. Gregg Lunn, R-Tucson, chairman of the committee said problems at U of A would be studied and Sen. Pete Corpstein, R-Paradise Valley, recommended investigation by the attorney general's office.

Union targeting ASU employees in drive to obtain 'viable' status

By Wayne Baker
Staff writer

A public employees union is seeking more than 800 members among ASU classified staff workers in order to gain "representative status," a union official said.

Cindy Falck, an international union representative with the American Federation of State, County and Municipal Employees, said the union needs 25 percent of ASU's classified staff work force in order to have a "dues check-off" system.

Deducting dues directly from employees' payroll would give AFSCME recognition on campus as a viable representative of ASU classified staff workers, Falck said.

According to Dick Murra, ASU director of personnel, said there are 2,418 full-time staff employees and 914 part-time workers. He defined a full-time employee as any permanent employee who works 20 hours a week or more.

AFSCME will need 833 University staff members to comply with an Arizona statute that says the union must represent at least 25 percent of a state-funded organization's work force in order to have representative status, Falck said.

"We're slowly obtaining our goal," she said, "but it's going to take some time to educate people."

Les Locker, president of the ASU chapter of AFSCME Local 3208, said the union currently has approximately 100 dues-paying members.

Locker, a University electrician, said the union is recognized on campus but is trying to "get enough members to where we have a voice in the Legislature."

He predicted that the ASU chapter of AFSCME should reach its membership goal by the end of this year.

Falck's comments came at the end of an announcement by AFSCME national President Gerald McEntee that Arizona is being targeted for a worker organization drive to bring the state "into the 20th century" in labor relations.

Approximately 8,500 employees of ASU and U of A are being targeted by AFSCME, McEntee said.

Falck said her chapter is working closely with the ASU chapter to organize a membership recruitment drive.

Chris Smith, ASU history professor and president of American Federation of Teachers Local 2050, said his union will support AFSCME's efforts at the University.

"We naturally are very supportive of any and all attempts of unions to better things for University employees," he said.

'It's going to take some time to educate people.'

However, he said ASU employees are permitted to join "any organization they wish for whatever purposes."

Murra said University employees are represented in the administration by a 10-member committee elected by fellow workers.

"That's a very viable organization on campus," Murra said in reference to the committee. "It's not as if (staff employees) are not represented here."

Murra said he could not determine what impact the union's efforts might have at ASU. "It's too early to speculate on anything unless it's more definitive," he said.

Commissioner expresses regret over teaching hiatus

By Jim McCleary
Staff writer

Reminiscing while walking down Cady Mall, Marianne Moody Jennings sounded more like a lady in love with teaching than a commissioner eager to set utility rates.

After teaching her final class Monday, before leaving to begin a term on the Arizona Corporation Commission, Jennings was surrounded by more than a dozen students who expressed their gratitude.

Her students' response is an indication of why Jennings was named teacher of the year in the College of Business Administration in 1980. Her teaching assistant said she would try to keep students from dropping the class when she leaves.

Now, after returning to ASU three weeks ago from a year-long sabbatical, Jennings, 30, will leave ASU again for 11 months to serve on the Corporation Commission.

"This is my life. It's going to be sad to be away," Jennings said as she walked down Cady Mall holding a good-luck card from a student.

She has been a professor in the department of administrative services since August 1977. She will return to the department next January.

The Republican Jennings accepted the commission seat vacated by Diane McCarthy, also a Republican, who left her post Friday to operate a mobile-telephone company.

She said it will not be awkward to follow the controversial McCarthy, who had been accused by critics of favoring the utilities' request for rate increases. She said she would favor neither the utilities nor the customers. "I'm a fair person," she said.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt appointed Jennings

'This is my life. It's going to be sad to be away.'

Friday with the stipulation that she not seek re-election.

That same condition was requested by the governor when Democrat Junius Hoffman, a U of A law professor, replaced Bud Tims, who died in office last summer.

The other seat on the three-member commission is filled by Democrat Richard Kimball, also the board chairman. Commissioners' salaries are $40,500 a year.

Babbitt reportedly asked William Seidman, dean of the College of Business Administration, for his recommendation for a replacement. Seidman could not be reached for comment Monday.

Lohnie Boggs, chairman of the administrative services department, said he spoke to the governor and gave Jennings a very favorable recommendation.

He said Jennings' appointment will be "great for her, great for us, and great for the state."

Jennings said she would not comment on the ACC hearings on the Arizona Public Service request for a $492 million increase in gas and electric rates, some of which may be used for construction of Palo Verde Nuclear Generation Station, west of Phoenix.

Although Jennings has little knowledge of utility regulations, she is a specialist in business and finance.

"I know it will be an education and maybe that's what makes it appealing," Jennings said.

She received her bachelor's degree in business-management finance at Brigham Young University in 1974 and her law degree from BYU in 1977.

Beirut government in crisis as fierce fighting erupts

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Anti-government Moslem militiamen seized most of west Beirut in furious street battles with the Lebanese army Monday and demanded the resignation of Christian President Amin Gemayel. Lebanese Christian radio said the U.S. battleship New Jersey shelled anti-government positions in nearby hills in retaliation for a rocket attack on the U.S. Marine base at Beirut airport. The report could not be immediately confirmed. One Marine and eight Italian soldiers in the Beirut multinational peacekeeping force were reported wounded in the fighting, which exploded across the city and plunged the American-backed Gemayel administration into its worst crisis since it took office 16 months ago.

Ex-ambassador says White House 'created' Salvadoran leader

WASHINGTON (AP) — An ex-U.S. ambassador to El Salvador charged Monday that the Reagan administration had "created" rightist Salvadoran leader Roberto D'Aubuisson as a serious presidential candidate by concealing evidence tying him to "death squads." "How can people cast a free vote if vital information is denied them?" asked former Ambassador Robert E. White about El Salvador's March 25 elections in which D'Aubuisson is a leading contender.

Jury selection begins in barroom rape case

FALL RIVER, Mass. (AP) — Potential jurors answered a two-page list of questions Monday on what they knew about the case of six men accused of raping a woman on a barroom pool table, as jury selection began for two simultaneous trials.

An initial pool of 75 people was summoned in what was expected to be a difficult selection process because of the case's notoriety. A total of 32 jurors must be selected for two trials.

Study blames government leaders for new hunger problem

BOSTON (AP) — Hunger "has returned to America" because of unemployment and government policy, according to a study released today that differs sharply with the recent conclusions of a White House task force. The commission of educators, physicians, religious leaders and social workers who conducted the study concluded that malnutrition is a serious problem spreading to new groups of Americans. "We have found that hunger is widespread and increasing," the authors wrote. "Hunger is the result of clear and conscious actions taken by government leaders."

Disaster scenario rehearsals precede altitude assault

PAGE, Ariz. (AP) — Two spacesuited balloonists crawled into a cramped aluminum capsule Monday, practicing what to do if anything goes wrong in their effort to take a hot-air balloon to an altitude of 80,000 feet. At that height, nearly 25,000 feet above the current hot-air balloon record, the air is so thin that their internal organs would explode were it not for their pressurized capsule and their spacesuits, spokesman Peter Mason said.

Students gain access to police logs

By Tisa Striegler
Staff writer

Journalism students have won access to daily activity logs kept by Tempe and Scottsdale police departments.

In apparent violation of state law, Tempe and Scottsdale police department officials had been denying journalism students access to records defined as public by lawyers for the City of Tempe and the First Amendment Coalition of Arizona.

Tim Delaney, an attorney with the firm of Brown and Bain, defined public records as being "records kept by public officials."

On Wednesday, Tempe Chief of Police Arthur Fairbanks reversed his department's previous policy of non-access after conferring with Tempe City Attorney David Merkel.

Merkel explained to Chief Fairbanks that anyone could review the daily log during normal business hours.

However, Scottsdale News Media Officer Gary Maschner is only permitting access on a limited basis.

On Thursday, Maschner invited a journalism student for a tour of his department and a review of the public records but explained the department's policy of non-access still stands.

Maschner said he sought council from acting City Attorney Richard Filler and Scottsdale Chief of Police Michael Gannon, and all three agreed the policy was appropriate.

Filler was unavailable for comment, but Scottsdale Assistant City Attorney Don Loeb said, "The city attorney's office will stand by that policy."

Maschner explained his decisions regarding access are made on a case-by-case basis.

Since both departments are technically allowing access, Delaney said he feels the issue has been favorably resolved.

Pac-10 universities balance bowl costs, divide up revenues

By Jerry Brown
Staff writer

Even though it has been a month since the final college bowl games have been completed, ASU athletic director Dick Tamburo said it would be until May before the University gets its share of the Pac-10 money.

Tamburo said UCLA, who defeated Illinois in the Rose Bowl, and the University of Washington, who lost to Penn State in the Aloha Bowl, are still busy figuring expenses.

"I'm sure UCLA is still counting bills and expenses from its game," Tamburo said. "It will take them quite a while to finalize their figures."

The Rose Bowl total, which is reportedly around $5 million, will be equally divided among the Pac-10 and Big Ten conferences. The Pac-10 will divide its money into eleven equal shares. UCLA will receive two shares and all other schools will get one.

Tamburo said money from the Aloha Bowl will be very small because of the travel expenses to Hawaii.

Putting things on the table

Editor:

I write in response to the opinion editorial by Matthew Scully, Feb. 3 in the State Press. In his column Mr. Scully attacks social science as an impediment to happiness — a moral corrosive, focusing his attacks on a course intended to educate students in the matters of modern sexual behavior. Mr. Scully seems to believe that the "value-free" examination of sexual behavior as presented in FAS 332, Human Sexuality, poses a threat to morality and the development of responsible sexual behavior, arriving at the illogical conclusion that this would somehow negatively affect one's chances at personal happiness.

Though I find it absurd to conceive of any human behavior studies of value that were not "value-free," I should go a step further and briefly present the results of one study dealing with the effects of sex education on college coeds.

With a sample of 156 college students enrolled in a course in human sexuality at a large, state-sponsored university, the study (Gunderson & McCary, 1980) sought to address "the effects of sex education on college students with respect to their sex information, sexual attitudes, sexual guilt and sexual behavior." The study points out such positive effects as a "reduction of sexual guilt, inhibitions and the double standard maintaining the traditional views of love and fidelity and providing a healthier, more comfortable and responsible attitude towards sex." I stress that the study also found that there was no evidence that sex education in the college classroom led to the rejection of such traditional values as sex with love, monogamy and fidelity.

I fail to see cause for alarm on this issue. Responsibility, that willingness to be the author of all one's experiences, seems best served by putting these things on the table for value-free, rational inquiry.

Feminist ideas advance limited view of fulfillment

Tracy Fletcher
Editor

Sometimes the true worth of an idea or movement is best measured not in the political arena, but in how it manifests itself in everyday life.

A telling illustration of this surfaces in the feminist movement. Feminists claim to be promoting the rights of all women. They also claim that feminism will remove all "barriers" standing between a woman and her chosen course in life, whatever that choice might be.

But let's take a look at one example of how feminist doctrine is fostering the opposite results.

A young woman I know became engaged to be married during the Christmas holidays. Last week, she happened to be on campus and decided to stop at a nearby restaurant for a quick bite to eat. Once inside, she noticed that an acquaintance of hers, whom she hadn't seen for more than a year, was working behind the counter.

Upon meeting, they engaged in the usual pleasantries and small talk. Exchanging bits of news about what had been happening in their lives, the young woman told her acquaintance the news of her upcoming wedding.

As the woman behind the counter attended to the order, she confided to the other, "I wish I were getting married."

But as she heard herself speak these words, she quickly caught herself and apologized, "Well, I guess it's embarrassing for me to say that."

Now, there is no reason why any young woman should be embarrassed to express such a fundamental desire for her life. Yet, over the course of her 20 or so years, she had been told that expressing her individual choice and natural hope to be married was something to be ashamed of.

Perhaps one could argue this is an isolated incident and is not a telling indictment of feminism. But it is not an isolated incident. Similar exchanges are commonly heard among young women, especially women in college, as they discuss what they want in their lives. Many times these thoughts on marriage are left unspoken.

The woman working in the restaurant may or may not be a feminist, but that isn't important. What is important is that she had absorbed enough feminist doctrine to become conditioned into believing that if ever the natural thought of marriage did come to mind, she should dismiss it and instead think of a more worthy goal — namely her career.

Not all women wish to get married and devote their lives to their families anymore than all women wish to devote their lives to a career. But all women should be allowed to make that decision for themselves, free of feelings of shame or guilt. In their attempts to tear down one barrier, feminists have succeeded in setting up another, perhaps more destructive, one.

They have long promoted the misguided notion that a woman cannot be fulfilled if she chooses marriage over a career. And many college women today, whether they know it or not, are swallowing it.

In college it is easy to become entangled in grand expectations of what the world has to offer and thoughts of what we wish to attain in our lives. And in this search for "self-realization," we forget the one integral component of happiness — someone to share it with.

Both women in the restaurant recognized this. One was able to make her choice and speak of it proudly. Something led the other to reject marriage as a choice to be ashamed of.

Abortion eliminates a person, not a problem

Editor:

This letter is in response to the anonymous letter which appeared in the Feb. 2 State Press. That letter was written by a person who suffered from abuse as a child and who appears to feel that abortion is a way of preventing similar tragedies from happening with other children.

Well, I don't think so. First of all, this person is assuming that unwanted children are the abused ones. A study by the Southern California Medical Center, Department of Pediatrics has shown that over 90 percent of the battered and abused children who end up in their emergency room were the result of planned pregnancies.

Another assumption held by this person and many others who defend abortion from the "unwanted child" platform is that all unwanted children will suffer horrible lives of abuse and neglect. That simply isn't so. Even if one child could be "saved" from abuse by abortion, think of the millions of children who are killed for no reason other than convenience.

As for the child who is supposedly "saved" from abuse, there's still the matter of abuse. By killing the child, you have eliminated a person, not a problem. And you certainly haven't helped the person with the problem.

The person who wrote this letter suffered — as has every other victim of abuse — from a lack of love. The way to eliminate abuse is to promote love, not abortion. And anybody who supports abortion out of "concern and love" for abused children is suffering from self love, not selfless love.

Selfless love accepts people for who they are. Self love says to other people, "Your handicap or your presence will be a burden to me. Therefore, I will kill you and put you out of my misery."

And with abortion, there is more than just the death of a child: our very values are destroyed, too. Life and people are no longer seen as things of value, but only as disposable objects.

Lastly, in response to the anonymous letter writer's request for prayers: you will have them.

Class goes against ASU trends

Editor:

Friday's column by Matthew Scully was a fine analysis of the problems presented by some of the sociology classes dealing with the human sex experience. The idea that freedom can be achieved without assuming responsibility for more than merely self-pleasure seems to be prevalent in our society today in such a way that people who are really reasonable are perceived as radically conservative and so forth.

It would seem that many professors today simply have no moral backbone of any kind — whether in favor of one approach to living or another. On the other hand, if the University is given over to consumeristic attitudes, then what is taught will be whatever is demanded, as it would seem, by the public.

The point which must be made, however, is that, at Arizona State, I could hardly call the human sexuality classes indicative of the general trends of the campus. While you may be right, Mr. Scully, what difference does it make?

W. John Williamson
Alumnus

What's the matter with Matt?

Editor:

I've figured it out! Thank you again, Mr. Scully.

To know what it means to be human is simply no fun. My blinders never fit so well.

Of course some would call clinging to "antiquated moral codes" ethnocentrism. But not you and me, Matt. You've passed on the real secret to happiness and I'm forever indebted.

I should have figured it out long ago: the State Press is in the basement of Matthews Center, right? And who works there but everyone's favorite Matthew, right? Therefore, happiness must be pursued through adherence to the principles of Matthewcentrism! How beautifully simple!

I see a day soon when the enlightened students of this institution will return their long abandoned "natural moral environment" and the only preachers on Cady Mall will be Matthewdists.

Of course this Matthewmorphosis won't come easy. There will be the usual heretics to kill.

Sexual "progressives" — and they know who they are — pose a threat to our Matthewlity. They had better be Matthochists to enjoy this wrath — if you know what I mean (anthropologists will, no doubt, refer to ours as the Matthewlithic age).

Great Matthatma, our fate awaits us. Onward and backward to destiny!

New in-house lawyer puts emphasis on plan for preventative law practice

By Tisa Striegler
Staff writer

Developing a preventative law program is the primary goal of the new ASU in-house attorney, who is a charter class graduate from the ASU College of Law.

Duane W. Schultz, recently hired by ASU as legal counsel, said, "Being able to eventually develop a preventative law practice is one of our main goals."

Through advising during the formulation stage of administrative policy Schultz plans to minimize the possibilities of legal suits against ASU.

"My hope is that we can do more preventative law by having him involved in advance rather than later," President J. Russell Nelson said.

"Being here at ASU is like coming home for me," Schultz said. He was among the 1970 charter class graduated from the College of Law.

Schultz described the decision to hire in-house counsel as a sound administrative decision which would result in economic savings and better service to the University community.

Hiring of in-house counsel resulted from a decision by the Arizona State Board of Regents to allow all state universities the option of hiring their own counsel.

Schultz will be supported in his work by a staff which will include an assistant attorney, a law intern and a secretary.

Schultz comes to Arizona after serving nine years as county legal counsel in Josephine County, Oregon, where he provided a wide range of legal services for the Board of County Commissioners and other elected officials.

Professional growth, the progressive attitude of Arizona and the excitement of the university challenge were cited as reasons for the move to ASU.

Schultz said he was hired to serve the administration, faculty and staff of ASU, but added that his door is open to any students who have legal questions regarding administrative policies.

Reading Clinic to offer sessions for students beginning next week

ASU will offer reading clinics for elementary and secondary students beginning Feb. 13.

Each participant will be assigned to one of the weekly sessions scheduled from 6:40 p.m. until 7:20 p.m. Monday or Tuesday, and will spend an additional hour each week with an assigned tutor.

The cost of the program is $50. Parents interested in enrolling their youngsters should call the ASU Reading Clinic at 965-7766 between 8 a.m. and 4:40 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Prescott native runs for the gold in ASU senior olympics

By Jerry Brown
Staff writer

When you think of Olympic champions, names like Eric Heiden and Mark Spitz come to mind. Heiden won five gold medals; Spitz won seven.

Well, on Saturday, Virgil McIntyre won eight of them in events that ranged from a 100-yard dash to a 5-kilometer walk. The Prescott native has won dozens of gold medals in his 14 years in competition in the Arizona Senior Olympics, which were held this weekend at ASU.

Not bad for a 73-year-old man who has spent the last five years of his life battling cancer.

"I had a great time," McIntyre said. "It was a little rough having eight events the first day. It made it hard to get up the next morning."

McIntyre, who is director of the Veteran's Administration in Prescott, ran the 200 meters in 32.6 seconds, easily outdistancing the field.

And that was his eighth event. Attributing his success to "never letting yourself cool down between events," McIntyre has enjoyed success on both the local and national levels.

"I've been going to the National Games since 1971," McIntyre said. "I won the 100-, 200- and 400-yard dashes quite a few years in a row and won the high and long jumps a couple of times too."

"I stopped going in 1977 because of the cancer," McIntyre said. "But now the doctors say everything's OK and I have enough of my strength back to give it another try."

McIntyre praised the sponsors, calling the event "one of the best run I've been to," and said the competition was quite good as well.

"There was an 82-year-old woman in the 5-kilometer walk that stayed with me the first half-mile," McIntyre said. "She finished with a really fast time."

McIntyre plans to return to the role of a fan this week for the opening of the Winter Olympics in Sarajevo.

"I've been a fan of the games for years," McIntyre said. "I would love to go to the Los Angeles games, but the tickets are too hard to get."

But he will be back next year to defend his eight titles and to have fun.

police report

The Aquatic Center chlorine alarm was activated Sunday evening and though the officers responding reported a slight smell of chlorine, the Tempe Fire Department could not detect any leaks or malfunctions in the system, according to police reports.

Joe Zimmerman, maintenance mechanic from the Physical Plant, said the problem was an electric malfunction and the alarm was subsequently reset.

ASU Fire Marshall Andy Anderson said the Tempe Fire Department is routinely dispatched as a back-up unit.

According to Anderson, the chlorine sensor, located in the equipment room, is extremely sensitive and "doesn't take very much" of a chlorine leak to activate it.

A fire alarm at the University Bookstore was activated early Monday due to heat generated by the bookstore's computers and lack of an air conditioner to cool them.

ASU Police responded to the alarm and found no indication of fire. According to Doug Hanson, bookstore director, the alarm is frequently activated.

Fire alarms went off Sunday at the Physical Education Building East and at the Phi Sigma Kappa house, according to police reports. Although the officer responding to the PE East alarm found no problems and the alarm was reset, the trouble indicator remained lit, signaling a problem with the device, Anderson said.

He said a dirty smoke detector is often the case when alarms go off for no apparent reason. In such instances, the detector will not reset and the trouble light remains on until the unit is cleaned or replaced.

Hayden Library's intrusion alarm was activated Sunday afternoon. Police responding found no problems in the area and the alarm was reset.

In other activity, University Police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 2 a.m. Monday:

•A Sahuaro Hall resident told police someone entered his room and took photographic equipment totaling $500. He said the items, which included a camera and flash mechanism, were taken between Thursday and Saturday.

•A 17-year-old Tempe youth was arrested by University Police early Sunday in connection with possession of a concealed weapon, possession of narcotics and possession of drug paraphernalia.

Martin Thomas Sturdy, 11032 S. Mandan Street, was questioned by police after they had received calls from individuals complaining about two people "throwing bicycles" in the Manzanita Hall area, according to police.

The report said the two youths seemed intoxicated and one of the officers offered to take them to a coffee shop before they attempted to drive home.

Upon searching Sturdy before he entered the squad car, an officer discovered what appeared to be a homemade weapon made from a knife, according to the report. The officer also found several pieces of folded paper containing a white substance, a small bottle with a spoon affixed to the top, a straw and a pipe which appeared to contain the remains of marijuana, the report said.

Sturdy was taken to the University Police Department and was later released in the custody of his father to await a court appointment.

Pacific voyage to protest nuclear

By Julianne Holroyd
 Staff writer

The Pacific Peacemaker will set sail March 15 on a 13,000-mile trip to protest the testing of nuclear arms in the Pacific Ocean, according to a crew member from Phoenix.

Anne Krill, who plans to be aboard the vessel for the six-month trip, said, "We are using the boat to protest the nuclearization of the Pacific Ocean and call attention to the impact that that's having on the people in the Pacific."

The project was started in December 1981 by two Australians, a bricklayer and a carpenter.

The two Australians and eight other people of different nationalities protested at Murura, a French bomb-test site in French Polynesia just south of Tahiti, where the French military tests its hydrogen and neutron bombs.

The French have tested over 101 bombs there, said Krill. "The Tahitians are developing cancer but the French won't allow studies of them to be done," she said.

The United States ceased atmospheric testing in the 1960s. The French have continued to do so.

The Pacific Peacemaker Project, a non-profit organization which now owns the boat, plans to take it to Hawaii, the Marshall Islands and the Qwajalein Islands.

In Hawaii, the crew will protest the Rim Pacific naval war games played by the navies of Japan, Australia, Zealand, Canada and the United States, Krill said.

The Rim Exercises are a "combined effort strategy," she said.

The "exercises" this year include bombing Kalahele, a Hawaiian Pacific island, a source of their "archaeological, spiritual foundation."

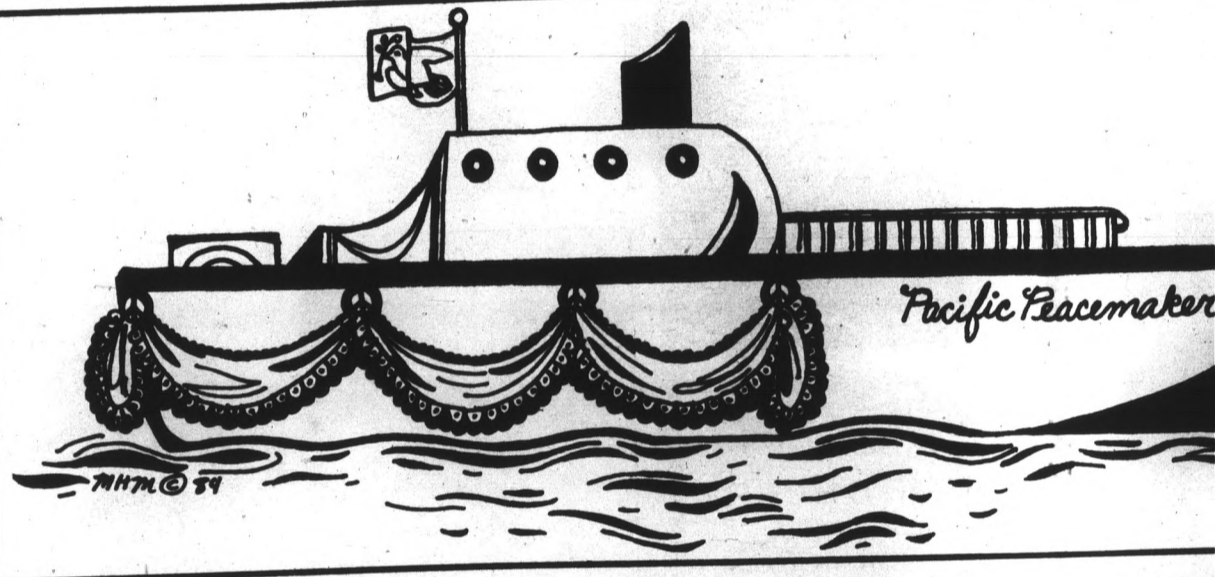

The Peacemaker also will travel through the Marshall Islands because, according to Krill, the United States has atomic and hydrogen bombs there, and has its Pacific test range at Qwajalein.

The detonation in the Marshall Islands has caused cancer, stillbirths, retardation and deformities, Krill said.

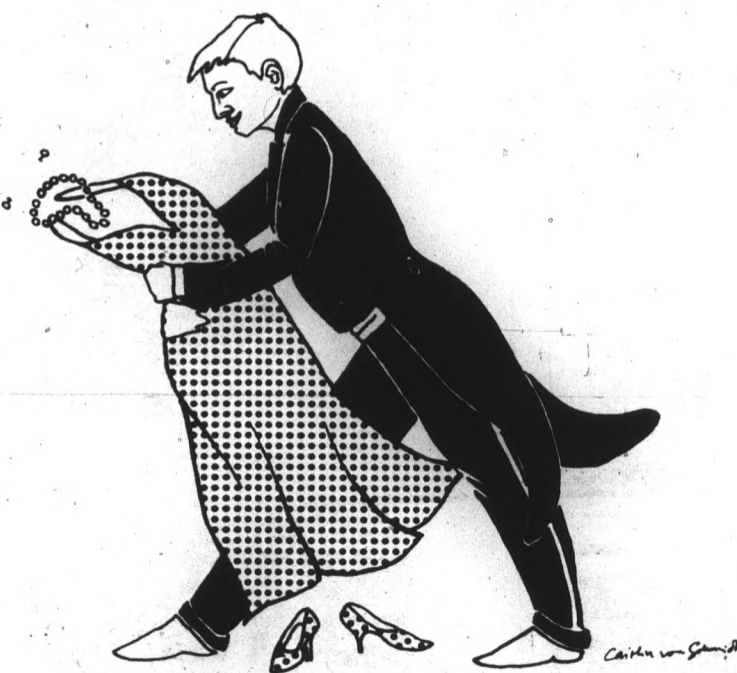

"(The United States) used the Qwajalein lagoon of U.S. MX and Trident missiles," Krill said.

The Pacific Peacemaker Project wants to gather and document studies about the Marshall Islands.

The people of Belau have voted three times for a nuclear-free constitution.

Ann Krill of the Pacific Peacemaker ship explains the purposes of the protest vessel during a presentation in the MU Monday.

"The U.S. military is attempting to overturn that vote and develop nuclear waste storage and weapons there," Krill said. After that the Peacemaker plans to go on to Japan for an atomic and hydrogen bomb conference and then, hopefully, on to the USSR.

"We've asked for permission to enter the Soviet port of Vladivostok," Krill said.

The boat then will return to Japan and be sold to Japanese peace groups.

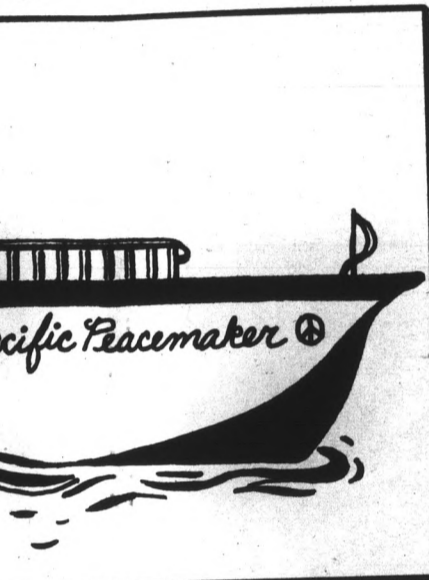

The boat has been seized twice by the U.S. Coast Guard, once in Washington and once in Vancouver.

The Peacemaker will leave this March skippered by 26-year-old Ann Schroeder. The volunteer crew is complete except for a diesel mechanic and an electrician, Krill said.

The Peacemaker Project needs $34,000 to finish paying for the boat and $20,000 to pay for operating expenses.

The boat is owned by peace groups, church groups, labor unions and individuals through shares of $250.

Krill, 47, of Phoenix, is a former teacher, actress and director. Her comments came Monday at a meeting of the Coalition for Peace.

Debators gain education in logical deductions

By Asha Nathan
Staff writer

When ASU senior Dean Kazoleas hypothesized about the United States invading Grenada, months before the invasion actually occurred, it had nothing to do with clairvoyance.

Kazoleas, a communications major and member of ASU's debate team, was supporting his affirmative stand in an intercollegiate debate that dealt with prohibiting military intervention by the United States.

He said his hypothesis rested on systematic research. "There is more government information available to the public than people realize," he said. "We've had a carrier task force off that coast for quite some time."

Kazoleas, now in his eighth year as a debator — he started as a freshman in high school and continued through junior college to ASU — said debating has helped develop his ability to make logical deductions.

Chris Lima, freshman theater major, said she thinks it is "beneficial for life since it teaches you how to get your point across in a concise manner."

She attributed the success of the current team to Gary Larson, faculty associate and the team's coach.

Since Larson took charge last fall, the number of team members has increased from four to 25. As a result, the current team already has won up to 48 awards in comparison with the previous team's eight.

A seasoned debator himself, Larson coached debate at Wheaton College in Illinois, before he came to ASU.

Although ASU sponsors a debate tournament for high schools in the Southwest, no intercollegiate debates are held here. Larson attributes this to the lack of a consistently active forensics program on campus for the last 10 years.

He said he sees participation as being the team's highest goal, adding that the team welcomes new members, whatever their previous experience in forensics might be, if any at all.

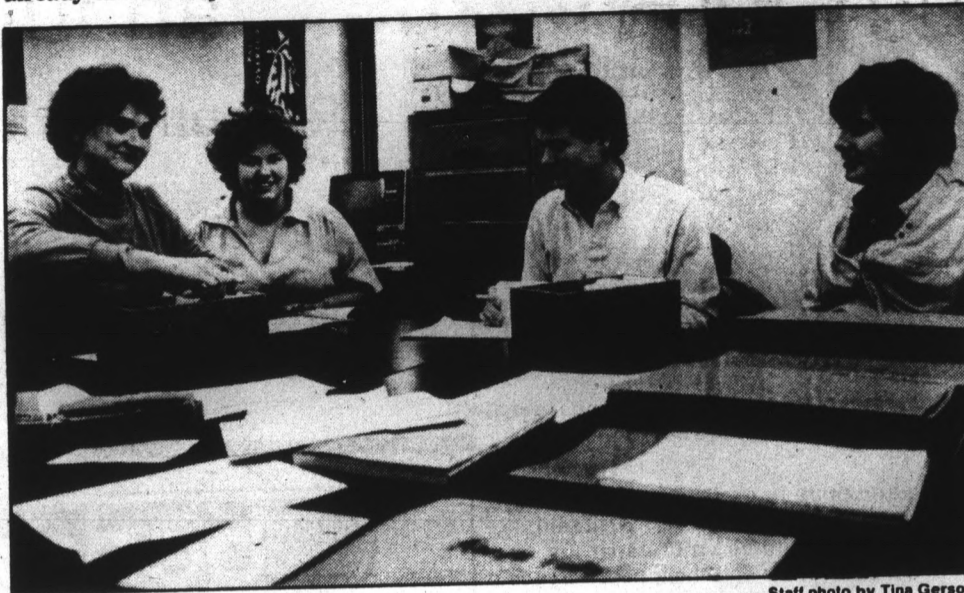

Larson explained that team members have individual areas of specialization, the three different branches being debate involving policies, debate involving the value system and oral interpretation.

"College students tend to look at us more as a sport than an educational activity," he said, adding that the success of the team is secondary in comparison with the learning experience for its members.

The team has traveled to California, Utah, Colorado, New Mexico and Wyoming for 16 tournaments since last fall.

Kazoleas said most team members put in about 20 to 30 hours a week on research, apart from practice debates.

He said he would like to coach debate after he graduates. "I believe it will be rewarding."

ASU brings top-ranked Utah tumbling down

The ASU women's gymnastics team now has the tangible proof. The national championship is within its reach.

ASU's Lisa Zeis, here performing on the uneven parallel bars, led the Sun Devils to an upset victory of top-ranked Utah last Friday night.

Friday night the No. 2 Sun Devils upset the top-ranked University of Utah in a meet that completely lived up to its lofty billing.

The Devils scored a season-high 188.7 in downing the Utes, who scored 187.95. Oregon State, ranked seventh, finished a distant third with a 179.65.

"I'm very excited," ASU coach John Spini said. "It's nice to win in front of your home crowd."

The Devils were led by sophomore Lisa Zeis, who put all the elements together in scoring a 38.2 in the all-around.

Zeis' total put her in first place by .10 in front of teammate Jackie Brummer and Utah's Megan McCunniff-Marsden, the defending national champion in the all-around.

"It's about time," Zeis said. "Every meet it seemed something went wrong. I would fall on (balance) beam or something would happen in another event."

The beam was the least of her worries on Friday night. She scored a school record 9.9 to lead the Devils in their most critical event.

Spini had said the Devils would need to hit on beam as a team, which they had not done all year, to win the meet. But with the pressure on, ASU came through.

The Devils held a slim .35 lead over Utah going into each team's third event. The Devils would have to try to maintain their lead while they were on the beam and Utah was on the floor exercise.

Somehow they did. Carole Bresnahan got the team off on the right foot by staying on the four-inch wide apparatus and scoring a 9.05.

With each ensuing performance, the team became more pumped to perform.

"It gets you more psyched when someone stays on," said Brummer, who scored a 9.55 on beam. "I feel like I've got to stay on."

Only Shari Mann and Kim Neal had sub-par performances. Five of the six ASU competitors managed to stay on the beam.

Zeis' performance, which was the team's last on the beam, made up for any shortcomings and electrified the crowd for the final event.

"I was psyched," Zeis said. "There was still pressure because Shari fell. But I told myself I was not going to fall."

Spini was not surprised by his team's ability to hit its beam routines in its most pressure-packed meet of the season.

"This team always produces when it counts," he said. "They don't like to lose very often."

Despite ASU's best performance of the year on beam, the Utes had whittled the lead to .10. But ASU's floor exercise team put the victory on ice.

Mann and Zeis each scored 9.65 to give the Devils some breathing room. Neal, who was the NCAA champion on floor a year ago, clinched the victory with a 9.8, the highest score of the evening in that event.

But the Utes kept the pressure on ASU during the whole event by hitting their beam routines. The meet ended as close as could be imagined.

"I was very pleased because this was our first road trip," Utah coach Greg Marsden said. "We did about as good a job as we could have expected."

Marsden was impressed by the Devils' performance and predicted a dogfight between the two teams for the national championship.

"ASU was just spectacular," Marsden said. "They did a very nice job."

Utah's sole individual winner was Elaine Alfano on the vault. Alfano scored a 9.6 in the event in which she is the two-time defending NCAA champion. Brummer won the uneven parallel bars with a 9.75.

Lynn Schmitt offered strong support as ASU's surprise fifth all-arounder with a 36.8.

The ASU men also competed on Friday, easily downing Long Beach City College, 276.35-256.0. Though it was ASU's highest score of the year, it did not count toward NCAA qualification because LBCC is a junior college.

Teams — ASU 188.70, Utah 187.95, Oregon St. 179.65.
All-around — Lisa Zeis, ASU, 38.20. Vault — Elaine Alfano, Utah, 9.60.
Uneven Parallel Bars — Jackie Brummer, ASU, 9.75. Balance Beam — Lisa Zeis, ASU, 9.90. Floor exercise — Kim Neal, ASU, 9.80.

Lady Devils blast Cats in 101-39 swimming win

By Vicki Serna
Sports writer

Both men's and women's swim teams had a successful weekend of water competition as they defeated their opponents under warm Arizona skies in ASU's Aquatic Center.

The women's division, under the direction of coach Bob Gillett, sent rival U of A back to Tucson with its head just barely above water as the Devils splashed the Wildcats 101-39. ASU won 15 out of the 16 events. The only event the Devils lost was the diving competition.

And Gillett credits the team's will to win as the major factor.

"It was the best determination effort I've ever seen," he said. "They swam super and it was the best concentration effort we've ever had by far."

Since both teams register in the top 20, the meet was probable to be a close one. But it wasn't and Gillett gave his explanation why the Devils sported a 62-point lead at the end of the meet.

"The reason the score was so lopsided was because everyone knew how important the first two events were going to be," he said, "so the girls (ASU) just jumped out ahead."

Two of the Devil swimmers were triple winners. Junior Michelle Merchant won the 100- and 200-yard breaststrokes and the 200-yard individual medley.

Cheryl Gillett, the much talked-about freshman swimmer on the Devil squad, finished first in the 1,000-yard freestyle, the 200-yard freestyle and the 500-yard freestyle.

The next meet for the Lady Devils will be the conference meet Feb. 23-25. Gillett expects a third-place finish behind No. 1 Stanford and No. 2 USC.

As for the men's team, the Devils performed up to par against BYU on Friday and the University of Utah on Saturday.

According to coach Ron Johnson both meetings were "meets of learning more about our team."

The Devils put away the Cougars 73-39 and handed Utah an 84-49 loss.

"It was a good meet for us right now," Johnson said. "We've had several tough competitions in a row, such as SMU (Southern Methodist), who is top ranked in the country."

"Our guys have been in the ringer and it's good to be able to compete against a team that is not as tough as what we had been facing."

Johnson pointed out that among his team of great performers freshman John Laderer won an event (the 500-yard freestyle) he had not participated in all year long.

"This indicates he has some potential in that area," Johnson said.

"Scott Hoffer, a freshman, also had his best times," he said.

Hoffer finished first in the 100-yard backstroke with a time of 52.75 and first in the 100-yard freestyle with a time of 47.48.

Track team investigated by Pac-10

ASU has received a letter from the Pac-10 conference office detailing possible rule violations in the Sun Devil track program.

Athletic Director Dick Tamburo said he will begin at once to review the allegations and will reply to the conference as soon as his review is completed.

Tamburo and Sun Devil track coach Len Miller were unavailable for further comment on the allegations.

The Pac-10 will not identify what the allegations are.

Hampton's 39 points lead Devils

By Patti Bondy
Sports writer

The women's basketball team won a surprising and very exciting 83-81 squeaker against conference rival San Diego State last Saturday at the University Activity Center.

Previously San Diego State had lost only two games, both to ranked teams.

It also had the country's top scorer, Tina Hutchinson, to depend upon.

Hutchinson was held to 16 points, which ASU coach Juliene Simpson found easy to explain.

"We ran a full press the whole ballgame," she said.

ASU's strongest players were in top form. Senior Kym Hampton had 39 points and 18 rebounds, which were season highs.

Sophomore Jodi Rathbun racked up 16 points and freshman Sherry Poole added 14 more for ASU.

Rathbun came close to breaking her own school record for assists in a game with 11. She set the record three games ago against Utah with 12.

Even with their shining shooting performances, Simpson has no hesitation when she rewards the defense for the win.

This week she will be trying another kind of defense with her women. The team travels to Tucson on Thursday to play the U of A and rebounding overconfidence could shatter a moderately easy victory.

The Wildcats have not won a game in conference, so they are 0-6 in the WCAA, while ASU is 3-3. San Diego State also stands at 3-3.

Simpson attests that "ASU is a better team," but this still may be an "extremely tough ballgame." And even though ASU has never lost to the U of A, this contest will be "more of a mental game."

During this week Simpson will work primarily with the mental aspect of the game. But she will not neglect the other portion of basketball.

"We'll do a lot of talking and encouraging the girls to do the things they are capable of physically," she said.

"The most important thing is not thinking ahead."

Simpson understands that coming off a win like this could cause the girls to look past the Wildcat game to upcoming rematches with their conference opponents.

She stresses the element of chance and the fact that anything can happen.

Her theory was certainly supported on Saturday.

Devils batter Cal 75-60 to end five-game streak

By Dean Obenauer
Sports writer

The ASU men's basketball team brought its five-game losing streak to an end Saturday night as it thoroughly dominated the California Golden Bears 75-60, in front of 4,557 fans in the University Activity Center.

"We were very pleased to snap the losing streak," said coach Bob Weinbauer. "The team is very relieved to have stopped it."

The Sun-Devils (8-11 overall, 3-6 in the Pac-10) took a 35-21 lead into the locker room at halftime and never looked back.

"We felt that the first 20 minutes of the ballgame were the most consistent we have played all year," Weinbauer said. "It was the kind of play that we have been looking for for a long time."

In the first half the Devils shot just under 64 percent from the field to the Golden Bears' 48 percent. They also sported a superior inside game with 14 rebounds to the Bears' seven.

After playing so well Weinbauer made it clear to his team that they better come out in the second half with the same intensity they had in the first half of play.

"We wanted to assume that the score was 0-0 at the start of the second half," Weinbauer said. "I was really pleased at the way the team came out and played."

For the third game in a row, the Devils got a big contribution from senior Jim Deines.

Deines tallied 17 points on seven for 10 shooting from the floor. In addition he converted three of seven freethrows while grabbing two rebounds.

"Jim Deines was a tremendous help," Weinbauer said. "When he contributes like that it takes the pressure off Chris Beasley."

In addition to Deines coming alive inside, the Devils were aided by Phil McKinney's inside play. McKinney brought down 10 boards while scoring seven points. His rebounding was a big factor in the ASU fast break.

Carter strong in Sun Devils 12-2 win

By Jay Taylor
Sports editor

The ASU baseball team, behind the nearly flawless pitching of Kendall Carter, drubbed Lubbock Christian 12-2 yesterday in front of 1,319 fans at Packard Stadium.

Carter (2-0) picked up the win for the Devils, giving him 39 for his career, one more than Floyd Bannister. Carter is third on the Devils all-time victory list behind Craig Swan (47) and Eddie Bane (40).

Carter went seven innings, giving up two unearned runs and three hits. He struck out seven and walked only one.

Coach Jim Brock of the Sun Devils (5-1) said Carter was sharper than he was in the opening game of the season.

"He was stronger today, no doubt," Brock said. "It kind of came and went for him. He started strong, then faded a little but his final three innings were outstanding."

Brock said he allowed Carter to go seven innings because he is in excellent shape and hadn't thrown many pitches. He had said earlier in the season that his pitchers would not be working long stints early in the year.

The Devils wasted no time in putting the Chaparrals in a hole, scoring twice in the first inning. Mike Devereaux led off with a single and Barry Bonds moved him to third with another single. The Devils then executed a perfect double steal with Devereaux scoring and Bonds moving to second.

Luis Medina singled up the middle to score Bonds, who was safe as Lubbock Christian catcher Steve Coleman dropped the throw from first baseman Rich Wieligman.

After the teams traded runs in the second, the Devils erupted for five in the third. Oddibe McDowell started the rally with one out, getting aboard on an error by second baseman Javier Moreno.

Bob Grandstaff singled McDowell to third, and both runners then advanced on a balk by Kirk Dudley, scoring McDowell. Grandstaff moved to third on a wild pitch then scored on a single by Medina. Todd Brown then blasted a home run to right field to give the Devils a six run lead, but they still weren't finished.

Romy Cucjen singled and stole second and Steve Murray singled him home to make the score 8-1.

ASU added four more runs in the eighth, all of them coming with two outs off reliever Jeff Young. Pinch hitter Lew Kent doubled to left and pinch runner Shawn Gilbert scored on McDowell's single. Medina then hit his first homer of the year to center field for the final margin of 12-2.

Dave Graybill pitched the final two innings for ASU. He walked the bases loaded in the eighth, then struck out three in a row.

Freshman Steve Beck was the team's second-high scorer as he accumulated 15 points while pulling down four rebounds and forcing two steals.

Senior guard Beasley was next in scoring with 14 points on 6-15 shooting from the field including five rebounds.

"Chris and Steve Beck had a fine weekend," Weinbauer said. "They both played well."

Freshman guard Bobby Thompson had seven points, five assists and one steal while his former high school teammate and California freshman guard, Chris Washington, had 19 points, six assists and four steals for the Golden Bears.

At one point in the second half the Devils built their 14 point intermission lead up to a 25-point blowout of the Golden Bears (10-9, 3-6) before relinquishing that lead to only 10 points with 3:55 left in the game.

For Cal (38.3 percent from the field), it was the ninth time in its last 10 outings that it has failed to shoot better than 50 percent from the floor. The Golden Bears have lost three starters since the beginning of the year.

California's top three scorers, forward Butch Hays, center Dave Butler and guard Kevin Johnson were only able to convert six of 24 shots against the Devils.

"The win was very important in preparation for our upcoming weekend," Weinbauer said. "This coming weekend is going to be very important as well. Going up to play Washington and Washington State will be a little easier after this win."

I WOULD like to address any young women who are currently unattached and would be open to meeting a man in his mid-twenties for friendship or relationship and generally good times. I am college educated, have a very healthy lifestyle, and am reasonably attractive, although definitely not Robert Redford. My recreational interests include tennis, movies, and ethnic restaurants. I seek a woman who is intelligent, health-conscious and not overweight. She need not be gorgeous; looks are secondary to honesty and a good personality. I enjoy getting crazy sometimes, but prefer a woman who appreciates quiet times also and is not generally a party person. If my ad has interested you, and you think that we might have a bit in common, write me at P.O. box 1089 Tempe, Arizona 85281. Send a phone number if possible, a photo is not necessary. Tell me something about your view of life and your likes and dislikes; above all let your response reflect you. My reasons for writing this ad? Essentially, persuading a graduate degree and working just does not permit enough social contact with compatible young women.
