

Jesse Jackson invited to campaign at ASU in March

By Robert S. Beamesderfer
Staff writer

The Rev. Jesse Jackson has joined a list of Democratic candidates who may be campaigning at ASU this spring.

Jackson has been asked to come to Arizona in March, a trip which may include a stop at ASU. Jackson is entered in the Sept. 11 Arizona primary, which determines whose names, besides the Democratic Party's official nominee, will appear on the ballot in the November election.

According to Bernard Jackson, co-chairman of the ASU Black Caucus, a reservation request for the Arizona Room in the MU has been submitted for March 9 and 17 by the caucus. Jackson said he is awaiting confirmation of the dates.

"We're working very hard to get Jesse Jackson to the Valley and ASU," said Jackson, who is not related to the Chicago-based black leader.

Democratic presidential hopefuls Walter Mondale and John Glenn tentatively have confirmed they will appear for a debate here on April 20, ASASU President Walter Batt has said.

ASASU is awaiting confirmation from President Reagan, who has expressed interest in what is will be a round table discussion with 10 campus presidents from around the nation, Batt said.

Jackson, coordinator of the ASU Educational Support Program, said he is working on arrangements to bring the civil rights leader to ASU if he campaigns in the state.

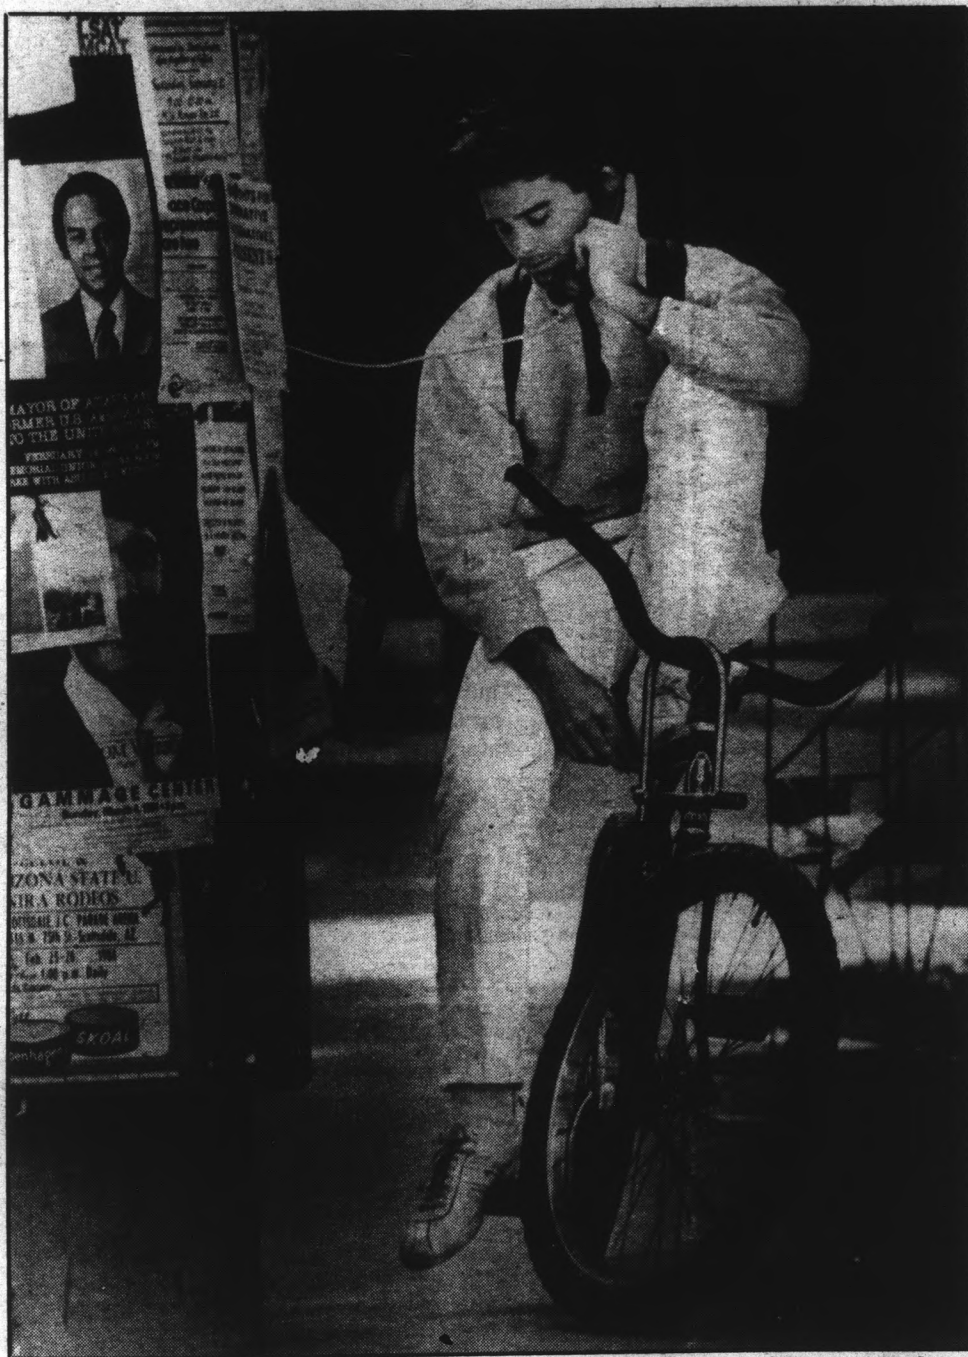

Caryl Terrell, chairman of the Jesse Jackson for President, Arizona Committee, said, "I am absolutely committed to (bringing Jackson to) ASU. We'd like him to come in March, but we're not limited to a date in March."

"All we've done at this point is suggested a date" to the national campaign committee, Terrell said. Details for a campaign trip are still in the planning stage, she added.

According to a Boston Globe poll of New Hampshire Democrats and independents, Jackson has picked up strength and is solidly in third place behind Glenn and Mondale. A poll in late January showed Jackson with 10 percent — behind Glenn's 19 percent and Mondale's 42 percent — up from 3 percent in a similar poll taken in December.

Jackson predicted he will finish in "the middle of the pack" in the New Hampshire primary on Feb. 18.

University to seek approval of additional stadium seats

By Wayne Baker
Staff writer

The University will be asking the Arizona Board of Regents this weekend to approve a project to expand Sun Devil Stadium by close to 380 seats.

The item has been placed on ASU's consent agenda for the board's Feb. 17 and 18 meeting in Tucson. Consent items usually pass with a minimum of discussion.

According to the University's proposal, 141 seats will be added to the loge area in the east, west and north areas of the stadium.

The loge section, located between the upper and lower decks, is the home of the Sun Angel Foundation booster organization, as well as holders of higher-priced season tickets during the ASU football season.

An additional 236 seats would be added in the loge by the construction of a platform and installing a new row of seats behind the existing rows.

ASU Executive Vice President Paige Mulholland said the request for additional seating is an attempt to bring potential private donors to University football games.

"There's a great need for high-quality seats," Mulholland said. "These will give us a number of seats that can be made available to friends of the University."

Paul Fiedler, University administrative architect, said the administration conducted a feasibility study "a couple of months ago" to determine if seats could be added without violating any safety codes.

The University's proposal to the regents estimated the cost of the project between $450,000 and $555,000, with the funds appropriated from the local budget.

Herman Frazier, director of athletic facilities, said the estimate is probably too high.

"I would figure it could take anywhere from $350,000 to $400,000," he said.

Frazier said if the project is approved, construction would begin at the end of the Arizona Wranglers' football season.

'There's a great need for high-quality seats
... that can be made available to friends of the University.'

The Wranglers, a United States Football League team, lease Sun Devil Stadium from the University during its spring and summer season. The last scheduled home game is Saturday, June 23, against the Los Angeles Express.

Frazier said construction would have to be completed before the start of the Sun Devil football season. ASU's first home game is scheduled for Sept. 8, against Oklahoma State.

"Anything we start would have to be finished before the fall begins," he said.

Chernenko appointment surprising, ASU profs say

By Jim McCleary
Staff writer

Soviet Union specialists at ASU were surprised with the appointment Monday of Konstantin Chernenko as the new leader of the Communist Party, but said the leadership change will probably have little effect on U.S.-Soviet relations.

Frederick Giffin, chairman of the history department, and William Welsh, political science professor, said they had expected Mikhail Gorbachev rather than the 72-year-old Chernenko to be appointed to replace Party Chief Yuri Andropov, who died Thursday.

According to Welsh, Chernenko is supported by Soviet military leaders, which could imply a future focus on armaments and the military.

"Chernenko is more likely to increase arms expenditures," he said. "The military will have more influence."

Welsh said one reason for Chernenko's appointment could be that he is seen by the Soviets as equally staunch in U.S.-Soviet relations as President Reagan, who they predict will be re-elected.

"Soviets don't believe there will be any serious arms control overtures with the Reagan administration," Welsh said.

Chernenko was chosen by the members of the ruling Politburo and unanimously approved by the Central Committee Monday, one day before the funeral of the former Communist leader Andropov, who died at age 69.

Both professors cited deteriorating relations with the United States and deadlocked negotiations to control nuclear weapons as two issues Chernenko will face as the new Soviet leader.

Giffin said no change should be expected in the frozen arms control talks because the Soviets see no benefit in negotiating.

"The Soviet Union is not going to do anything that's not in their interests — that includes arms control," he said.

Giffin added that there will be a period of adjustment when the United States should avoid pushing renewed arms talks with the Soviets. He expected that transition period to last approximately three months.

Welsh said Gorbachev would have been the logical choice. He is younger, 52, has held high-level domestic and foreign positions, and does not have obligations to the military.

Both men agreed that arms talks might have made some progress with Gorbachev at the reins.

Welsh said, "I don't expect any serious changes in either the domestic or foreign policies in that country (under Chernenko)."

However, he said the appointment of Chernenko may have been "a courtesy appointment." When former Soviet leader Leonid Brezhnev died in November 1982, Andropov was named the successor rather than Chernenko, his rival.

At 72, Chernenko is the oldest Communist Party leader to take the position.

U.S. invites Chernenko to join in improving relations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration said Monday it wanted to join the new Soviet leader, Konstantin U. Chernenko, in achieving "constructive cooperation" but emphasized that improving relations between the superpowers "has to be a two-way street."

With Vice President George Bush heading for Moscow to represent President Reagan at the funeral of Soviet President Yuri V. Andropov, officials in Washington said the United States would welcome discussions with Soviet leaders. But the likelihood of a meeting between Reagan and Chernenko remained uncertain at best.

Administration proposing to sell missiles to Jordan

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Reagan administration has quietly informed Congress it intends to sell up to 1,600 anti-aircraft missiles to Jordan while trying to persuade Israel to go along with plans for a U.S.-armed Jordanian strike force, sources said Monday.

Meanwhile, Larry Speakes, the White House spokesman, said Reagan is moving toward a withdrawal of the American Marines from Beirut to U.S. ships off the Lebanese coast within 30 days.

Supply line remains open to Moslem sector of Beirut

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Scattered exchanges of sniper fire between the Lebanese army and Moslem militias crackled through the Lebanese capital Monday, and the army for a second day allowed trucks to carry food and fuel to the trapped residents of west Beirut.

Brig. Gen. Lutfi Jaber, Shiite commander of the army's 6th Brigade, ordered his soldiers to report to duty in west Beirut within 48 hours and take over security of the besieged Moslem sector of the capital. The spiritual leader of Beirut's Shiites called for "absolute cooperation" with the brigade to restore law and order.

Balloon project still on hold due to inflated funding needs

PAGE (AP) — Operation Sky Quest, a British attempt to set a hot-air balloon altitude record, remained postponed indefinitely Monday as team leaders attempted to obtain more funding, a spokesman said.

"The situation is unchanged," spokesman Peter Mason said, referring to Friday's announcement that the project had been put "on hold" because the team's two major British sponsors had withdrawn their financial support.

ASU officials study new towing rule

By Jim McCleary
Staff writer

An Arizona Supreme Court decision ordering parking lot landlords to pay towing fees before a vehicle is removed from their lot is being studied by ASU officials to determine if the ruling applies to the recently acquired Tempe Center.

Duane Schultz, an attorney for the University, said he will not comment on the ruling's application to the Tempe Center until he has read the judge's decision.

Schultz said a statement likely will be prepared by the end of the week.

According to Schultz, the wording of the ruling leaves some doubt as to whether it will apply to Tempe Center.

ASU became the owner of Tempe Center on Nov. 21 when a $1.5 million down payment was made.

Justice James Duke Cameron made the ruling last Wednesday, which states that businessmen will have to bill vehicle owners for towing fees and sue them if they refuse to pay.

If the ruling does affect ASU, it is possible that an additional surcharge, on top of the towing charge, could be levied by the University to cover the expense of billing the owners of towed vehicles.

Jennis Burton, director of investment and property management, said no cars have been towed since signs were posted in Tempe Center parking lots stating that such action would be taken against cars not belonging to users of the Center.

New work-study positions available

By Tisa Striegler
Staff writer

Unemployed work-study students will find job hunting a little easier when 50-100 new positions are added to the job board in Matthews Center today.

"After reviewing enrollment, it was determined (we) have enough funds for approximately 125 additional jobs," said Paul Barberini, director of Student Financial Assistance.

Additional positions will be posted on the board as they come in, he added.

Funding was made available because some students did not return to ASU this semester and others elected not to continue working, Barberini said.

This is a reverse of last semester's predicament when all work-study funds were committed early in the semester and eligible students could not get jobs.

"My concern is in getting enough students to fill the new positions," Barberini said. Most of the eligible students will have made other arrangements by now in order to meet their financial needs, he added.

Only students who have received work-study eligibility are entitled to apply for these positions.

When these new positions are filled, all work-study funds will be committed for the remainder of the semester, Barberini said.

Young to talk in free lecture at MU tonight

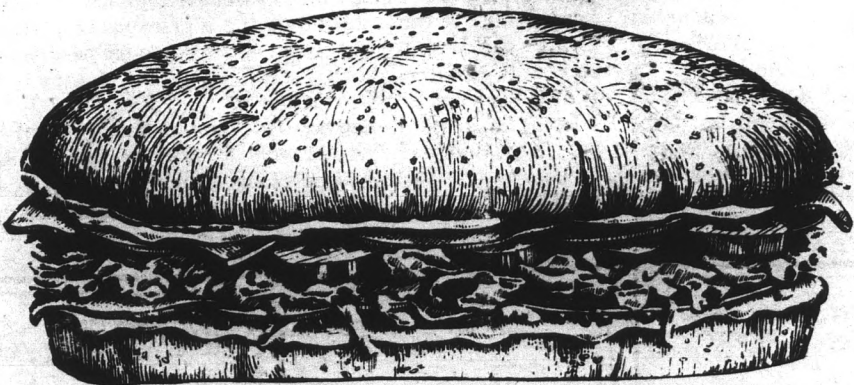

Mayor Andrew Young of Atlanta will speak at ASU tonight at 8 p.m. in the Arizona Room of the MU. The talk originally had been slated for noon, but was revised due to changes in Mayor Young's schedule.

Andrew Young became mayor of Atlanta on Jan. 4, 1982. He previously served as U.S. ambassador to the United Nations under President Jimmy Carter and also was a U.S. congressman from 1972-76.

Love means never turning to the classifieds

Tracy Fletcher
Editor

With Valentine's Day now upon us, we find the fancies of young men and women turning to romance.

This annual ritual brings from the woodwork romantics armed with bouquets of flowers, boxes of Fannie Farmer Candies and a smattering of schmaltzy Valentine's cards. It gives the Romeos and Juliets of this world an opportunity to rekindle the affection allowed to wane during the year, and provides the shy an excuse to be bold.

Considering the dismal state romance falls into during the other 364 days, perhaps such an outpouring of sentiment is a necessary annual rejuvenation.

Love and romance have assumed a rather generic label in our society. Romantic endeavors have been reduced to an antiseptic level, known commonly as "relationships." Just think how many times you hear people say they are having problems in their "relationships," or having troubles "relating" to their "significant other." Somehow, men and women (or boyfriends and girlfriends, as the level of maturity dictates) are relegated to terms one would hear bandied about by clinical psychologists. I've often wondered, after terminating The Relationship, does the other person involved become the "insignificant other?" Can you imagine Dan Fogelberg singing "Saw my insignificant other in the grocery store?" If there is some love lingering after the demise, does one pass through stages of "relative significance" before the whole thing is over?

But here's my favorite. An acquaintance of mine used to refer to his girlfriend as his "unit." The first time I heard him say he was having problems with his "unit," I thought his refrigerator was on the blink. And he wondered why romance always eluded him.

Most men and women in college, struggling to cross that bridge from their tender years into adulthood, are consumed by visions of romance. This obsession turns into a frustrating, agonizing ordeal for many. I once knew a student — and I'm certain he is not the only one — who sought romance every Saturday night at the Devilhouse. After a semester of predictably fruitless outings, he finally realized love does not blossom in the smoky, inebriated haze of the local saloons.

Others bank on a good marketing strategy to guarantee romantic success: Take the "Romance" page in the New Times, for example.

These Lonely Hearts Club Classifieds usually bring a few good laughs around the newsroom every Wednesday (as does the rest of that "newspaper," for that matter).

Last Wednesday, for example, this one "great guy (age 24)" decided to put his wares out on the tabloid for all to see. According to the author, he is "a fantastic guy with a great sense of humor (trust me)." Well, if what my mother used to tell me in high school still holds true — never trust a man who says "trust me" — this prize is suspect before you even get past the third line of his advertisement.

But read on. This "fantastic guy" is looking for a "fun girl age 19-22" — which describes most of the coeds at ASU — and she need only "enjoy stupid jokes and semi-intelligent conversation." What more could any woman ask for?

Looking through the ads, you'd be hard-pressed to find a loser in the bunch. Most guarantee good looks, great conversation and a simply grand future.

One 41-year-old woman considers herself "warm, concerned, health conscious, people loving, energetic, spontaneous, egalitarian, spiritual, pragmatic, resourceful, indulgent, intellectually curious, introspective, articulate, outspoken, witty, diverse, free spirited." Hey, you forgot humble.

Another 21-year-old woman has devised a truly ingenious marketing scheme: "I'm a Party Package!" she proclaims. And a party package with a sentimental heart, to boot. All she wants is a "people person" who will send her a photo and a rose petal. Ah, romance!

Romance Box 320, GWM (Gay White Male, I presume) is looking for someone "interested, interesting, and healthy." Healthy? Well, all I can say is caveat emptor.

Sadly, most of these ads have a ring of sincerity to them. The man who paid $15 in the hopes of finding true love in Romance

Box 316 writes, "For this person it has been difficult to meet a lady who is not overly concerned with becoming something or being free or something . . . The man who is writing this believes that a person's feelings are a precious thing."

I truly wish him all the luck in the world.

Of course, Valentine's Day tradition calls for Valentine's cards. Over the weekend, I ventured into one of the local card shops to see what the Hallmark romantics had to offer for 1984.

There was an abundance of cards overflowing with the usual sappy poems and splatterings of big red hearts. And humorous cards, for those who take a lighter approach to love. I was disappointed, though, that I couldn't find one particular card that I remembered from my high school days. You just can't keep some classics in stock, I guess. I remember on the front of the card was a photograph of the face of a gorilla, looking the Valentine-to-be right in the eye. Inside it read, "Be my tootsie wootsie, or I'll break your army warmy." How could even the coldest of hearts resist such a touching sentiment?

Well, it seems most things of value, love included, have fallen victim to the exploits of Modern Man. And how unnecessary are many of the travails the tender heart suffers these days. You see, romance is a matter of simple things. A picnic on a Saturday afternoon. Sitting for hours atop a mountain watching the lights of the Valley twinkling below. Sharing an umbrella on a rainy day. You can't capture that once a year in a Hallmark card.

Saintly reflections on the meaning of love

Hi there. This is St. Valentine. I thought since today was St. Valentine's Day, I might share with you some thoughts on love.

Yes, you. Don't look away.

Can we talk? Are you in love? Do you want to love? We know that romantic love is wonderful, and is something not even the scientists and psychologists can explain. But I want to mention some basics that we seem to have lost somewhere, not just in regard to romantic love but to love in general.

Now we're talking something real here, not lust at first sight. And I'm not talking about some sentimental pap, though there's certainly a place for that.

True love is not an emotion, it is a decision. It's a commitment to love another person, while accepting and forgiving, though not condoning, his faults. It's not based on a mood or a whim.

Love is making a sacrifice, and contrary to "Love Story," it's saying you're sorry.

But once these and other basic guidelines are followed, the structure of a relationship is set into place, one that can be furnished and embellished with emotions. Feelings are the icing on the cake, of a sort. St. Valentine's Day is one of those icing-on-the-cake holidays, though the foundational ingredients are commitment and forgiveness.

But as with most important principles, there's a vast difference between knowing them and living by them. Even St. Val knows that he is what he lives, not what he knows in his head. It's as they say: Many people miss love by 18 inches — the average distance between the head and the heart.

Love is blind, the saying goes, but that's a misconception. True love sees a person's faults and overlooks them, but it appears to be blindness because the person who loves sees the other as the person he is inside, the person he can be in time, the person that, in the words of theologian Charles Williams, is the "eternal identity."

As in friendship, one person sees that his friend may be helped to find this "eternal identity" by his love, or as the French psychiatrist Ignace Lepp says, he senses what the friend is "capable of becoming, perhaps precisely because of (the) friendship."

Hey, so give people a chance. We're all jerks to some extent. Don't give up. Perhaps they just need a little encouragement.

So if you love someone, let them know. And be creative about it. Don't be a stuffed shirt (or blouse). Lighten up! Love is a joy. Do you appreciate it? If so, how many times does Billy Joel have to urge you to "Tell Her (him) About It."

Seriously folks, it's a hard world out there and, if I may quote the Bible (I am a saint, remember), many hearts will "grow cold" in the latter days. It's a grievous fact that the divorce rate is above 50 percent. I know I sound preachy, but as Elvis Costello musically asks, "(What's So Funny 'Bout) Peace, Love and Understanding?"

Don't be afraid. Reach out. Be a friend. You may get hurt but isn't it worth the risk?

So go ahead, it's Valentine's Day. Give that person a card, or candy, flowers, a call or even a pat on the back. Make me proud.

Hispanic event to supplement business students' graduation

By Mary Anne Perez
Contributing writer

Following an example from the University of Southern California, ASU's Hispanic Business Students Association is planning an Hispanic graduation for May, according to Greg Acedo, chairman of the Hispanic graduation committee.

The graduation will not interfere with the University's common ceremony, and according to Acedo, will in fact be a supplement to the graduation.

"This is not a substitution by any means," he said. An Hispanic graduation would have more direct involvement of the parents, and would have a traditional flavor to it, he said. The ceremony will be followed by a dinner and dance and will probably include mariachis, said Acedo.

Two years ago, Acedo attended a cousin's graduation at USC and liked the Hispanic graduation ceremony there. He brought the idea to ASU and, he said, met with enthusiasm and cooperation in starting a similar one at ASU.

Last spring, he said, a group of eight or nine members went to USC's Hispanic graduation and came back with the intention of starting a similar one at ASU.

According to Acedo, club members met with Betty Turner Asher, vice president for student affairs, to talk about the possibility of the ceremony. She gave her approval, he said.

Also, the idea has been given full support from Cecilia Esquer, assistant professor for administrative services, who is also one of the club's advisers, he said.

Neither Asher nor Esquer could be reached by phone for comments.

According to Acedo, most of the funding is coming from outside sources. Organizations such as the Arizona Association of Chicanos for Higher Education, Los Diablos, Hispanic Business Alumni Association and Los Abogados, a group of Hispanic lawyers, have given positive feedback for the ceremony, he said.

A letter will go out to these and other Valley organizations informing them about the plans for the Hispanic graduation, he said.

lot 26 to remain open

Parking lot 27 near the ASU Bookstore is closed for construction until the end of the month, the manager of construction projects said.

Tom Hight said lot 26, behind the Engineering Research Center, will remain open but also will be under construction.

Both lots are for visitor parking. Lot 26 will be open for visitors' use until lot 27 is reopened.

The construction will include improving the lighting, installing parking meters and resurfacing the lots. The project, which includes work on other lots, will cost $244,111.

Valentine's Day romancing means increased business for local florists

By Kimberly Estes
Contributing writer

Whether you are fortunate enough to receive roses for Valentine's Day this year and happen to wonder just how generous your admirer really is, or just one of those who has waited until the last minute to purchase them, here are some of the prices being charged by local florists:

For the suitor on a budget, Phoenix Flower Shop, 2800 S. Rural, offers a dozen sweetheart roses for $25. Bobbie's Tempe Florist, 20 E. Fifth St., has the same roses for $5 more.

Medium-stem roses can be found at Bobbie's for $45 a dozen and at Tempe Florist, 715 S. Forest, for $40. For the same $40, long-stem roses can be found at Phoenix Flower Shop, which also offers a better quality long-stem for $45.

Long-stem roses, for the romantic of heart and the fat of wallet, are $48 a dozen at Rosebud Florist, 15 W. Sixth St., and $47 at Tempe Florist. Bobbie's has the long-stems going for $55 a dozen.

For those who feel price reflects quality, University Florist 5136 S. Rural, delivers wrapped, long stem roses for $60 a dozen and arranged long-stems for $65.

These prices can vary from $5 to $15 less in the spring. Anne Silvertooth, owner of University Florist, said this is because roses are out of season in February and demand for them increases.

Kathleen Rider, manager of Tempe Florist, estimates that 85 percent of her walk-in Valentine business has been ASU students.

police report

An ASU student was on the fifth floor of Hayden Library shortly after 4 p.m. Saturday when she observed a man exposing himself, University police reported.

She described him as a 45-year-old white male, 5 feet 10 inches, 160 pounds, with gray shoulder-length hair. The student called University Police, but the man was gone when the officers arrived.

Police said the man does not fit any prior descriptions pertaining to public indecent exposure at ASU.

In other activity, ASU Police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 4 a.m. Monday:

•Christopher J. Lubecke, an ASU employee, was arrested and subsequently charged with driving while intoxicated late Sunday. A passenger in his car, ASU student Charles M. Smillie, was charged with being an accessory to the crime of DWI and causing damage to an ASU patrol car.

Police said Smillie was "combative and argumentative," so he was handcuffed before he was put in the back of the patrol car. The student began to kick the sides of the back doors, causing $50 in damage by breaking the plastic molding around the back windows.

Lubecke and Smillie were transported to the Tempe Police Department where Lubecke registered .161 on the breathalyzer scale.

•John Eugene Arreolo was arrested and charged with driving while intoxicated early Sunday. A record check showed a prior DWI conviction and Arreolo was taken to the Tempe Police Department where he registered .201 on the breathalyzer.

•A Maricopa resident told police Sunday her gold necklace, valued at $875, was taken from her room sometime Saturday or Sunday.

•An ASU student reported his AM/FM cassette car stereo, power booster, equalizer and speakers missing from his car early Sunday. He said his car was parked in Lot 63 and described two suspects as black males, driving a beige Dodge.

•A man was discovered by police passed out in Lot 42 early Monday. He was very intoxicated, according to police reports, and after police could not contact anyone at the man's home to come pick him up, they transported him to his home. The man, not an ASU student, was in possession of a small amount of a substance believed to be marijuana and a hash pipe, which police destroyed.

Our ads usually tell you only one thing about plasma donation — that you can earn money donating. And you can. Regular donations can make you up to $100 a month.

But more importantly, each plasma donation supplies the blood products necessary to produce several medically essential compounds that cannot be made in any other way.

Albumin — to prevent shock and for patients undergoing surgery

Immune Globulin — to help fight infections

Anti-hemophilic Factor — to control bleeding in patients with hemophilia

So a plasma donor not only earns extra cash — a donor earns the precious ability to save lives. And that's nothing to joke about.

If you'd like to help — call today for an appointment. New donors will receive an additional $2 with this ad for their first donation.

Women's class focuses on self-defense

By M.K. Reinhart
Staff writer

"Women should feel free to fight back," and confident that they are capable of resisting any and all attacks against them, according to ASU Police Lt. William Maughan.

Utilizing self-defense or the "preventative role" allows women to escape 95 percent of potential physical or sexual assault situations, he said.

"Any woman has the right to go where she wants to go and the right to dress how she wants to dress ... but everyone has to modify their lives somewhat to comply with realities," he said.

Some of these modifications include simply using common sense to be suspicious, recognize danger and not get into situations you can not get out of, Maughan said.

Maughan's system of self-defense for women, based on evasion and avoidance, has been taught on campus for seven consecutive years, sponsored by the ASU Police and the physical education department.

The five-week defensive tactics session, entitled "Women Resist Assault" will be held in Room 143 of the Physical Education Building East, from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m., beginning March 19 and continuing each Monday through April 16. As many as 125 women have enrolled in past semesters.

Maughan is a sixth-degree black belt in judo and a nationally recognized judo expert on women's self-defense. He teaches the classes with the help of four female assistants, all of whom have black belts in the martial arts.

He said the program is divided into five categories: avoidance, assault resistance, escape, prosecution and trauma recovery.

The focus of the program, Maughan said, is to teach women how to effectively apply these five areas by learning such methods as breakaway and escape techniques, striking vital areas of the body and avoiding a situation you cannot control.

"Women must resist, and resist vigorously within the first five seconds," Maughan said.

"Rape is not a sexual act. It is an act of anger, an act of violence and an act of control and degradation.

'Rape is not a sexual act. It is an act of anger, an act of violence and of control ...'

"Women must learn to be assertive and break away from the traditional feminine role of the 'submissive woman.'"

Maughan, along with ASU sociology professor Richard H. Nagasawa, has written a book entitled "Resist! Women's Guide to Escape Assaults." He also has taught self-defense classes for women elsewhere in the Valley.

He said students can register for the ASU self-defense program by calling either the ASU Police or the intramural office.

Author researches motor skill coordination of first graders

By Jerry Brown
Staff writer

Tossing a ball may seem like child's play, but that's what interests ASU researcher Charles Corbin.

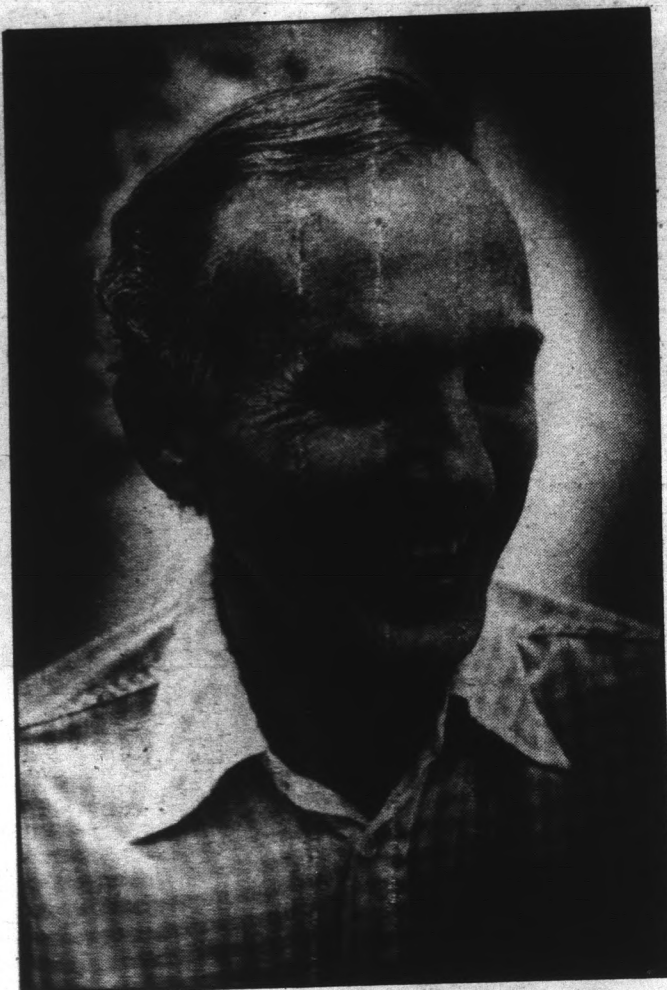

For the past 13 years, the last two at ASU, Corbin has been studying motor performance, physical fitness and coordination among young people.

Corbin, who is the author of "Textbook of Motor Behavior," is currently using first grade students at Valley schools to research how kids got where they are going in their physical development.

"We could study anyone, but the kids are the best with," Corbin said. "They really love it. But any opportunity to stay out if they want to."

"What we want to do is study the same group of kids over a period of time and see what their individual and group is," Corbin said. "Then we can compare them statewide."

Corbin, with the help of ASU colleague Robert K. Smith, visits the schools every

Sun Devils snap eight game road losing streak

By Dean Obenauer
Sports writer

The ASU men's basketball team did what had to be done Saturday when it put together its first victory on the road, hammering Washington State 67-41. It was the Devils' first road win in nine tries this season.

Traveling to Washington to play the University of Washington and WSU the Sun Devils (9-12 overall, 4-7 Pac-10) knew they had to come away with at least one victory to stay within reasonable reach of the Pac-10 leaders.

In the first game of their two-game stint, the Devils took it to the Pac-10 leading Washington Huskies.

At halftime the Sun Devils led 38-35 in front of 3,704 Husky fans. Chris Beasley led all ASU scorers with 10 while Jim Deines and Steve Beck had eight points each. Freshman ball handler Bobby Thompson played a more offensive-minded scheme by adding seven points.

In the second half the Devils slowly lost grip of the lead. With 13:31 left in the game the Huskies took the lead for the first time since the middle of the first half. For the rest of the game the Dogs would refuse to relinquish the lead.

Detlef Schrempf came alive for the Huskies scoring nine of his 16 points and grabbing six of his eight rebounds after intermission. Teammate Reggie Rogers scored the bulk of his 16 points in the second half as well as the Huskies went on to outscore the Sun Devils 35-23 in the half.

The Huskies went on to win the game 70-61. The game was decided in the second half, much like the first time the two teams met in the Activity Center.

"We played very well against Washington," assistant coach Doug Collins said. "We just ran out of gas at the end."

The Sun Devils rested and regrouped until Saturday when they got their second chance to break their road losing skid.

"We came back and played Washington State very well," he said. "We outplayed them in every facet of the game."

And outplay the Cougars they did. In front of 4,300 WSU fans the Devils blew the Cougars out of Pullman.

Beasley led all Devils in scoring with 18 points (all in the second half) after missing his first four attempts from the floor in the first half.

In the two teams' first meeting this year, which the Devils won in overtime in the Activity Center, Beasley had his career high 27 points. This time the Cougars changed their defense to try to contain Beasley. They assigned Keith Morrison to guard him everywhere he went.

For the first time in 13 games the Devils sported four players in double figures. Deines, Beck and Eric Holloway each had 12 points in addition to Beasley's performance.

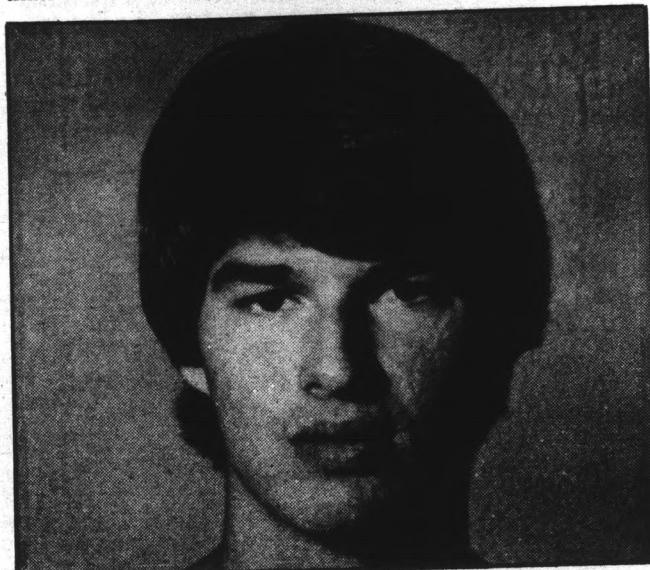

In addition to having a solid foundation of scoring, the Devils out-rebounded the Cougars 49-25.

"The two objectives we had going in were to out-rebound them by at least 10 and not put them on the foul line," ASU coach Bob Weinbauer said. "And with that, make them shoot the ball on the perimeter. Obviously, we accomplished all of that."

Freshman guard Bobby Thompson has helped take some of the scoring burden off Chris Beasley. Thompson had 11 points against Washington last weekend.

Skier wins first U.S. gold in Olympics

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia (AP) — "Now America's got it." Debbie Armstrong won her gold medal, the first for the U.S. team at the Winter Olympics, with a tough, twisting tour down the side of a mountain on Monday.

"America has been waiting for this," someone shouted to the beaming Armstrong at the finish line immediately after her victory became apparent. "Now America's got it."

After days of poor hockey, weather delays for events in which the American team was expected to do well and poorer than expected performances by some team members, Armstrong and the other members of the giant slalom team came through in record-smashing fashion.

Her gold medal was the first for an American woman in 32 years in the giant slalom and the first in any Alpine event at the Winter Olympics since 1972. She led a 1-2-4 placing that was the best ever for the United States in any Olympic Alpine event, outduelling veteran Christin Cooper, who won the silver.

Armstrong, 20, of Seattle, Wash., was an unlikely hero. A relative newcomer to international competition, her best finish in World Cup competition was a third earlier this season. Cindy Nelson, the acknowledged leader of the U.S. women's team, has predicted that Armstrong would be the star of the U.S. team within a year or two, but Armstrong is now ahead of that schedule.

Cooper was the leader after the first run, holding a slim one-tenth of a second lead over Armstrong. Two of the favorites, American Tamara McKinney and Switzerland's Erika Hess, had virtually skied themselves out of the medal picture. McKinney was eighth after the first run, and Hess was 11th.

McKinney clocked the best time on the second run, a 1:11.72; but it wasn't enough to get her a medal. Perrine Pelen of France claimed the giant slalom bronze medal for the second straight Olympics, and McKinney was in fourth place.

On the second run, Armstrong put together another near-flawless effort. Cooper, skiing immediately after her, slipped at the fifth gate, falling back on her skis. She recovered, but the mistake cost her precious seconds; Cooper came in at 1:12.51, a half-second slower.

Hess wound up seventh. Nelson, recuperating from a knee injury, was 18th. West Germany's Irene Epple, silver medalist at the 1980 Olympics, couldn't overcome a recent knee injury and finished 21st.

Armstrong's combined time for two runs was 2:20.98. Cooper finished at 2:21.38, Pelen at 2:21.40 and McKinney at 2:21.83.

"I just had fun, that was the difference, I think," said the 5-5, 137-pound Armstrong. "I saw the course yesterday, and I knew it was a good hill for me."

"From the minute I got up this morning I felt good. I knew if I kept my head together and skied positive, I had a chance to win a medal."

"I made a couple of mistakes, but I gave it my best shot. Those were the two best runs of my life. All the way down I thought this was my only chance, and I better do it now, so no holding back."

It was the United States' first gold medal in Olympic Alpine skiing since Barbara Cochran won the slalom in 1972. It was the first gold for an American in the giant slalom since 1952, when Andrea Mead-Lawrence won at Oslo, Norway.

Cooper, 24, of Sun Valley, Idaho, admitted her slip "probably cost me the gold. In general, I just didn't ski as cleanly that second run. It hurts a little to be so close to the gold, but I'm happy with the silver."

McKinney, 21, of Squaw Valley, Calif., said she "made a couple of mistakes on my first run, but I feel really good about my second run."

AGRICULTURALISTS...

You're Needed All Over the World.

Ask Peace Corps volunteers why their agriculture degrees or farm backgrounds are needed in developing nations. Ask them how their knowledge of crops, livestock production, farm mechanics or beekeeping methods help alleviate hunger, increase personal income and develop technical skills. They'll tell you of the rewards of seeing direct results of their efforts. They'll tell you Peace Corps is the toughest job you'll ever love.

PEACE CORPS

ATTENTION June grads in agriculture, biology, botany, engineering, health, education, business, math and home economics... Peace Corps Representatives will be on ASU's Cady Mall, today and tomorrow, from 9 a.m. until 3 p.m. In addition, there will be a Pot Luck Get-Together, today at 6:30 p.m. in the Agriculture Building in room number 181. Lastly, there will be a free Peace Corps film, today and tomorrow at noon in the Memorial Union. This is your opportunity to talk with a former Peace Corps Volunteer about what life in the developing world is really like... Don't miss it! For more information, call (602) 965-7994.

Brock shifts lineup; ASU sweeps

By Jay Taylor
Sports editor

The brooms came out at Packard Stadium last weekend. The ASU baseball team swept New Mexico in a three-game series Friday and Saturday to raise its record to 9-2 on the season. The Devils downed the Lobos by a score of 5-1 Friday afternoon, then rolled to 9-5 and 5-2 wins in Saturday's doubleheader.

"New Mexico is a good ball club," ASU coach Jim Brock said. "Their pitching was very good. They should be heard from in the WAC."

The Devils' next action will be Thursday and Friday, Feb. 16 and 17, at 2:30 p.m., when they take on the Pepperdine Waves at Packard. The three-game set will conclude Saturday, Feb. 18, with a 1 p.m. game.

Brock was pleased with the play of his club against the Lobos.

"We played better defense and the pitching was strong for us, too," he said. Defense had been a major concern of Brock's early in the year.

The Devils had made 15 errors coming into the New Mexico series. Although they made four in the series with the Lobos, Brock said he saw some improvement. But he said he will continue to emphasize defense in practice this week.

"Defense is still our number one priority," he said. "It is the one thing we have to really go out and make happen. The offensive things should come pretty naturally for us."

"We're going to spend about twice as much practice time on defense this week as we normally do, and we'll continue to spend more time on it until it improves to where we want it."

"If we have a potential weakness, it's our defense," he said.

Brock did some experimenting with the lineup against New Mexico. In Saturday's doubleheader he moved center fielder Oddibe McDowell up to the leadoff spot from the third position and shortstop Romy Cucjen from seventh to second.

Right fielder Mike Devereaux was moved from leadoff to eighth. Brock said he made the changes to take some of the pressure off the people who are new to the program.

He added that he was pleased with the production from the top of the order the last two games. McDowell extended his season-opening hitting streak to 10 games before being shut down in Saturday's second game and Cucjen was six for eight in the series with four RBIs.

"Oddibe did a good job in the leadoff spot, and he will stay there for the foreseeable future," Brock said. "Cucjen also did an excellent job."

"Not only did he get the hits, he executed the hit and run well, and that was a big thing. For the guy hitting second to be able to go to right field like he did is vital."

Brock also saw improvement in the pitching staff over the weekend. The staff has been inconsistent so far this year.

Kendall Carter and Doug Henry scattered eight hits in Saturday's first game and Jose Rodiles threw a one-hitter in the second game.

Brock said the inconsistency is due mainly to the time in the season.

"Just about all of our top six pitchers have had two good times out and once when they weren't that sharp," he said. "It will probably be that way early in the season for most of the guys."

"If they have a few good performances in a row and get on a roll, then they have a chance to start pitching well every time out."

Brock said he would like to keep two of his hardest throwers, Dave Graybill and Doug Henry, in the bullpen. He said if he can get away with not starting those two, the Devils will be "awfully well off."

He said right now there are four serious contenders for the three spots in the starting rotation: Carter, Rodiles, Gilbert Villanueva and Jeff Roberts.

Sun Devils outplay Wildcats; keep eight year streak alive

By Vicki Serna
Sports writer

It was apparent last Thursday night that the ASU women's basketball team traveled to Tucson with intentions of sweeping the U of A Wildcats off their feet and off the court as well.

The Lady Devils took charge of the Wildcats in front of a home crowd of 150 in McKale Center. The Devils showed no mercy in the meeting between the traditional rivals and routed the U of A, 77-59.

The name of the game was rebounding. ASU center Kym Hampton alone accounted for 11 of the Devils' 43 rebounds.

Until late January when ASU played Utah State, coach Juliene Simpson detected a problem with rebounding saying the Devils had not played a very successful rebounding game. But judging by Thursday's game, the Devils' rebounding has improved substantially.

The Wildcats were able to pull down a mere 25 boards in the game, which is testimony to the effectiveness of ASU's inside game.

Hampton, ASU's top player, was the leading scorer in the game with 25 points.

ASU has not lost to the U of A since Jan.

17, 1976, when the Cats took command in a 79-37 win.

The Sun Devils now sport an impressive 15-6 overall record (4-3 conference) and are threatening to move up from their fifth-place standing in the Western Collegiate Athletic Association.

Going into the game, the Wildcats were riding a hot streak, having won three of their previous four games. But ASU was determined to put that positive stat to bed.

The only sophomore on the ASU team, Jodi Rathbun, scored 17 points.

Other than Hampton, the top rebounders on the Devil side were six-footers Robin Connolly and Sherry Poole who had nine each. Connolly had six points for the night while Poole had four.

Freshman Mona Lomeli, who has been helping the Devils in every respect, gathered eight points for the night and had three rebounds.

Rhonda Woolery, a 6-2 freshman, added eight points to the Devil score and grabbed one rebound.

Sun Devil Patti Peppier had five points and five rebounds.

Jensen

Mike McClure, vice president of marketing for the American League club, advised club management to hire Jensen. The White Sox first approached Jensen about the position in November.

However, the Sun Devil football and basketball seasons and the winter baseball meetings put the issue on the back burner, and the situation was not seriously discussed until late January.

The White Sox flew Jensen to Chicago later that month and according to Jensen, "At that point, it became quite obvious that there was no decision to make. It (the offer) was just too attractive."

Jensen, 34, takes eight years of experience in college sports information into his new job.

After getting his bachelor's degree in journalism at the University of Kentucky and his master's at the University of North Dakota, Jensen joined Purdue University in July 1976 as assistant sports information director. He moved to his position at ASU in July 1981.

"A wise old sage once told me, 'Attack every job you ever have like it's your last one. It won't be.' It seems to have worked."

THE THOMAS M. COOLEY LAW SCHOOL

Write and deliver from memory a 10-minute original speech defending your position on one of these topics:

- SHOULD T.V. CAMERAS BE PERMITTED IN COURTROOMS?
- SHOULD THERE BE A CONSTITUTIONAL AMENDMENT REQUIRING A BALANCED FEDERAL BUDGET?
- SHOULD THERE BE A NATIONAL PRESIDENTIAL PRIMARY ELECTION?

Speeches will be judged first in manuscript form, then in an oral audition, and finally before a live audience and a panel of Michigan court judges.

TOTAL VALUE OF PRIZES EXCEEDS $25,000.

One overall winner receives a full tuition scholarship to the Thomas M. Cooley Law School.

Two runners-up each receive half tuition scholarships.

Three semi-finalists receive individual $1,000 tuition grants.

To be eligible you must be an undergraduate student currently enrolled in an accredited four-year college or university. Deadline for manuscript entries is April 9, 1984. For information and competition rules fill out the form below or a postcard and send it in today.

Please send me information and rules for the 1984 National Collegiate Oratory Competition. On the opposing side, Wildcat guard Kirsten Smith, a sophomore who leads Arizona's offense with a 12.9 scoring average, had 20 points for the night.

Arizona's senior forward Linda Reinke, who was averaging 12.1 points per game, was shut down to seven points.

Reinke led the Cats in rebounding, pulling down six.

The Wildcats' leading rebounder, Alicia Archie, who averages 6.2 rebounds per game, only had three for the evening and added three points to Arizona's score.

The Devils took control in the first half, leading by 10 at intermission, 42-32. They then held on in the second half, outscoring the Cats 35-27 for the final 18-point margin.

The Devils were much more effective shooting than the U of A was. ASU shot .533 from the floor in both halves while the Wildcats shot only .433 in the first half and .367 in the second stanza.

The Lady Devils will see their next action Thursday, Feb. 16, at Cal State-Los Angeles, in what will be the second of a seven-game WCAA road trip.

The Devils will not see home action again until March 9 when they play their final conference game in the Activity Center against the U of A.
