Advisers switch to research for compensation, study says

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

Many faculty advisers believe they are not adequately compensated for the time they spend advising, and are thus switching to research programs, according to a study completed by an ASU communications professor.

According to Bill Davey, a number of instructors have opted for research projects over advising because they were not receiving rewards such as recognition, promotion and tenure.

He said the emphasis placed on research and its greater compensations have caused some faculty members to switch, although they enjoy assisting students.

Reports of students receiving incorrect information prompted the study on ASU advisement problems, he said.

Davey presented a resolution last week to the Faculty Senate requesting that ASU President J. Russell Nelson establish a task force to study the advisement program.

A similar recommendation by the Associated Students of ASU accompanied the resolution.

The Faculty Senate will vote on the proposal during their Dec. 13 meeting.

"We need some suggestions on what ought to be done," Davey said. His own suggestions include composing the advisement task force of students, faculty and administration.

Davey said he would also like to see advisers deal more in developmental advisement, such as career planning, rather than the routine advising duties of planning class schedules.

"In proportion to the number of students, advising has been handled very well," he said, adding that ASU's program is superior to those he has seen on campuses across the country.

He said the ASASU report found inaccessibility to be a major student complaint. Advisers relaying incorrect information was another problem cited by many students.

"Some of that misinformation is due to changes in curriculum," he said. "We would like people to look into those kinds of problems."

"Both Ray (Burnell, ASASU president) and I don't want to get into praising or blaming either group," he said.

Edith Schapira, an adviser in the College of Education, says she advises more students during registration week than any other time of year.

"Many students don't come into the office when we would have more time for them," Schapira said.

Duncan suspects U of A students for graffiti

By W. TIM AHL
Staff Writer

The graffiti on Tempe Butte that upset city officials last week could be the result of a prank by U of A students, ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said Thursday.

Greek letters representing ASU fraternities Tau Kappa Epsilon and sorority Sigma Sigma Sigma were recently painted on the butte and caused Tempe Mayor Harry Mitchell to register a complaint last week with ASU officials.

"It looks ugly," Mitchell said. "I would hope that common sense would prevail and whoever put it up there would clean it up."

Mitchell said the city owns the butte and could keep groups from painting the "A" different colors, but does not want that.

"Our relationship with the University has been outstanding," Mitchell said. "I don't want to see it marred by this."

Steve McCarley, public relations chairman for the Interfraternity Council, said late Thursday that members of each fraternity house are planning to remove the graffiti and paint the "A" white at noon on Saturday.

He said although there is no proof that

Greeks are involved, they will remove the graffiti since they were mentioned.

Paint thinner or oven cleaner may be used to remove the graffiti, McCarley said.

Duncan said he believes U of A students may have painted the letters when they repainted the "A" in traditional U of A red and blue before the Sun Devil-Wildcat football game Saturday.

Rusty Chacon, president of TKE, said members of his fraternity will help take the letters off the mountain, regardless of who put them there.

"They've been there more than a year. I don't know who's responsible," Chacon said. "The letters shouldn't be there and we will help get them down."

Tara Heubel, president-elect of Sigma Sigma Sigma, said she doubts members of her group are responsible for the graffiti.

"There is no way that members of our sorority could have done that," Heubel said. "It was probably a prank."

Duncan said if the two ASU groups are found responsible for the paintings, they will be responsible for cleaning the symbols off the mountain.

University finalizing Tontozona expansion, official says

By SHERRY LOWE
Staff Writer

"All systems are go" for the University to purchase about 30 acres of U.S. Forest Service land adjacent to Camp Tontozona, an ASU official said Thursday.

Gary Prosper, assistant to ASU Vice President of Business Affairs Victor Zafra, said the University offered $382,000 for 29.4 acres of land in the Tonto National Forest.

"I believe our offer will be accepted," Prosper said. "It's just a matter of putting the final documents together."

He said ASU is waiting to hear from the Forest Service regarding the proposed offer.

"We have heard nothing official from the Forest Service," Prosper said. "We're waiting for them to evaluate the appraisal."

A Tonto National Forest spokesman working with ASU on the purchase was unavailable for comment late Thursday afternoon.

Prosper said the Forest Service must make its own appraisal of the land before considering ASU's offer.

The State Press reported Oct. 3 that ASU appraised the land at $382,000.

Prosper said the additional land property boundaries are unknown, so contractors will begin surveying Monday.

"In order to even negotiate with the Forest Service, we need to survey for boundaries," Prosper said.

He said the ASU Athletic Department is funding the purchase by spending about $460,000. The excess money will be used to develop the camp.

"We're hoping to begin development of the camp sometime in the spring," Prosper said.

He said development will begin after the Camp Tontozona Advisory Board approves the plans.

That board was appointed last March by the ASU administration to examine possible use for the additional land.

Plans for development of the land include primitive structures — such as cement floors, upon which tents can be set up.

Camp Tontozona, the 7.7-acre resort northeast of Payson, is best known as the preseason practice ground for the ASU football team.

Rates charged to stay at the camp will be raised as an alternate means of raising money to help pay for the additional land and its development, Prosper said.

"We've decided on a dollar rate hike for all student groups," he said.

Prosper said the current student group rate to stay at the facility is $5 a night per person.

It was earlier reported that the rate hike will effect non-academic student groups at ASU, and exclude academic groups spending time at the facility as a requirement for graduation.

Prosper said the Advisory Board has reversed that decision, extending the rate hike to all student groups.

"We decided not to get into academic versus non-academic groups," he said. "We want to treat all the students the same."

Reagan picks Ruckelshaus' deputy to succeed EPA chief

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan on Thursday chose Lee M. Thomas, who supervised toxic waste cleanups as a chief deputy to Environmental Protection Agency administrator William D. Ruckelshaus, as the new head of the agency.

Ruckelshaus, meanwhile, said that reported dismay over Reagan administration environmental policies "didn't have anything to do" with his decision to resign.

Thomas, 40, has been serving as assistant administrator of the agency in charge of the "superfund" toxic waste dump cleanup program. His nomination is subject to Senate confirmation.

Thomas joined the EPA in 1983 after a two-year stint as associate director of the Federal Emergency Management Agency. In that job, he managed all disaster relief efforts at FEMA and was chairman of the president's task force on toxic waste problems at Times Beach, Mo.

Since July 1983, Thomas has been serving as assistant administrator of EPA for solid waste and emergency response. He served as acting deputy administrator of EPA for six months in 1983.

House Energy and Commerce Committee Chairman John D. Dingell, D-Mich., said he was concerned about Ruckelshaus' departure, but added that he had found Thomas to be "capable, truthful and a good administrator. I have no basis on which to criticize his appointment."

Ruckelshaus left a $221,000 annual salary at Weyerhaeuser Corp. to lead the EPA, which he founded in 1970 and led for three years. His federal salary totaled $69,800 a year.

supplies by tying up major roads.

The strike, called by the Bolivian Workers Central Organization to demand wage increases and such measures as price controls to curb the 1,500 percent annual inflation rate, appeared to have strong support from Bolivia's 2.5 million workers.

All but essential services were halted. Industries were idle, as were the tin mines that bring in the bulk of Bolivia's hard currency earnings. Most government offices, schools, factories, banks and some stores were closed. Public transportation in La Paz was reduced.

Police surveillance was stepped up, but authorities did not move against the demonstrators.

Anti-tank helicopter's missiles nail targets in nighttime tests

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Army has conducted another successful test of its new AH-64 Apache helicopter and Hellfire anti-tank missile, the Pentagon announced Thursday.

Two of the Hellfire missiles were launched at night on Nov. 17 from a low-flying Apache "and both missiles hit and destroyed targets at ranges well beyond the specified maximum night engagement ranges," the Pentagon said.

The tests were conducted at the Yuma Proving Ground in Arizona using production versions of the new missile, the Pentagon added.

The Apache helicopter, under development since 1973, is expected to become one of the Army's primary anti-tank weapon systems. The first three production models of the copter, which is being manufactured by Hughes Helicopters of Culver City, Calif., are scheduled for delivery early next year.

The Hellfire missile, in turn, has been designed specifically for the Apache. Each helicopter will be able to carry up to 16 of the laser-guided missiles.

The Apache is equipped with advanced targeting and night-vision systems. A gunner on board the copter selects a target using a laser beam, and the Hellfire then follows the laser to the target.

Merit pay

Faculty Senate conducting survey on new salary system

By SANAA AL-MARAYATI
Staff Writer

University employees eligible for salary adjustment and merit pay may not understand the system because they have not informed themselves on how the funds will be distributed, said Maurine Fry, ASU assistant vice president for academic affairs.

To monitor the new system and indicate if it is understood, the Faculty Senate is conducting a survey of all ASU employees, said Louis Grossman, Faculty Senate chair.

The questionnaire was distributed to staff members to evaluate the process of distribution, and the results will be reported at the Faculty Senate meeting Dec. 10, Grossman said.

Jack Kinsinger, vice president for academic affairs, said ASU employees were provided with printed guidelines on the procedure in distributing the funds beginning Jan. 1.

In a recent State Press interview, Kinsinger said it may take two years before the ASU community adjusts to the new system.

"We printed the guidelines to assist those who don't understand the system," he said. "But the only way for them to understand the system is to read the guidelines. We cannot go around handing it to everyone."

Fry said the 40-page document, distributed Oct. 26, was printed purposely on yellow paper.

"So much goes across the desk," she said. "We wanted to use a color that would stand out."

The publication details the salary adjustment and merit pay policies on for the ASU community which includes faculty and professional and classified staff members.

An employee's first salary adjustment based on the new system will depend on work performance during the 1983-84 academic year.

Professional staff indicates administrators, and classified staff includes clerical and secretarial positions.

The salary adjustments are based on five categories: equity, market, general, promotional and performance adjustments.

Market, equity and promotion salary adjustment for faculty members will be .75 percent of the total funds available for faculty salary increase.

The equity increase brings the salary level among all ASU faculty at the similar level, according to the guidelines.

The different levels considered when establishing equity are based on the degree of the faculty member, the professor rank, the time spent at that rank, area of expertise and overall performance.

Market increases are the adjustment needed to indicate the faculty member or group is receiving a salary equivalent to peers from other universities.

The equity and market adjustment will not be used to supplement merit salary increases.

There will be a general and performance salary adjustment for those who are judged as performing above a "satisfactory level," the guidelines said.

Satisfactory level is determined by the individual or group in charge of an assigned area or department. There will be a 3 percent salary increase for those who fulfill the requirement.

The promotional adjustment will be given independently from all other funds.

For ASU faculty, $800 will be given to each faculty member promoted to assistant professor, $1,500 to those promoted to associate professor and $2,000 given when promoted to full professor.

Full-time professional and classified staff members who perform "satisfactory" work will receive a minimum performance award of $250 per year.

Michael Shea, political liaison for Council 97 of the Arizona Public Employee Association of the American, Federal, State and Municipal Employees (AFSCME), said he testifies against merit pay because it will not benefit ASU employees.

"It looks great to be rewarded for doing your job, but in most cases you are not rewarded for what you do," Shea said. "It is all based on cronyism and favoritism. If there is a personality clash between the supervisor and employee, there may be no merit reward given."

Shea said he testified against the system before the Arizona Legislature last January, and will continue to lobby against merit pay when the legislators return to session in January.

Discount book proceeds to help support disability service

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

A new discount club has been initiated for ASU students and part of the revenue from club memberships will go to the ASU Learning Disability Component.

Mike Parkinson, ASU director of marketing and promotions, said the Entertainment '85 club offers discounts for various restaurants, movie theaters and other entertainment events.

Up to 25 percent of the proceeds received from membership fees will be given to the ASU Learning Disability Component, an academic support service designed to help learning disabled University students.

"We looked upon this as a means to help a project on campus," Parkinson said. "The reason we started getting behind the Learning Disability Component is because it is relatively new."

He said the proceeds from the discount book were originally intended to support ASU's athletic program, but when the component's budget was cut last year, the athletic department wanted to help out.

"Originally, the idea was to use it as a fund-raiser for athletes," Parkinson said.

When the component's budget was cut last year, the Athletic department wanted to help out.

"We felt it would be a better service if we got the money and turned it over to the Learning Disability Component for its use."

He said the discount book went on sale early this month and more than 2,000 books have been sold.

The membership card and coupon book can be used to save up to 50 percent on dining out, movies, sports and travel.

When Entertainment '85 first approached ASU, Parkinson said they were hoping to include ASU football games in the discount package. The athletic department declined the offer.

Later, ASU agreed to use the book for how many discount books were available for the Phoenix area.

He said the book is relatively new and most of the discounts are localized.

"Since we are a new market, our book is not as extensive as others," Parkinson said. "Most of the stuff is local."

The amount of sales for the book will determine how much money the Learning Disability Component will receive.

Membership in the discount program is $20. For the first 1,000 books sold, $4 from each book will go to the Learning Disability Component. The component will receive $5 for each additional book sold.

Parkinson said the books contain approximately $6,000 worth of discounts. The company has received no complaints from members as to restaurants and other businesses refusing to honor the card or coupons.

Gripes about graffiti

If columns by staff members haven't said it enough, we feel a strong rivalry with the U of A around here. The ASU police chief says students from our rival institution may be responsible for the unsightly graffiti insulting Tempe Butte. If so, all the more reason to be angry.

Actually, we don't think the butte painting was a Wildcat operation. It was probably done by some of ASU's own. One could go on at length about the immature and destructive motivations behind graffiti. The pastime is quite common in the Pac-10. So much so that two enterprising authors compiled bathroom graffiti from the 10 schools into paperback form.

Western students' enthusiasm for higher education was well summarized on a University of Washington wall: "I'd quit school, but it's the only place I can get any sleep!"

Meanwhile, over at UCLA, they get seriously religious: "Couldn't God talk to Allah and settle this thing with Iran."

Peace activism lives at Stanford: "Better active today than radioactive tomorrow."

The list is endless. Most of the vandalist verbosity is worthless. These authors should forget walls and get back to their textbooks. We think they should either find a non-destructive way to express themselves, or donate some custodial time.

Ronco: No house can operate without some of its products

Patrick Kucera
Staff Writer

Well, the Christmas season is once again upon us, and with that we are going to be seeing all sorts of advertisements telling us to shop here, have Christmas dinner here and, the worst of the bunch, what to buy for holiday gifts.

No holiday gifts can be as disgusting as those infamous TV ads promising you utopia for only $19.95.

Yes, it is the Ronco Factor!

It has been said the suicide rate increases near Christmas, and undoubtedly, this is due to those ads and their "they make spectacular holiday gifts." Argh!

It is time to look at those Ronco Christmas gifts still on sale this year, even though the company recently went out of business:

- Mr. Microphone comes back and we are just pleased as punch. This item serves no purpose except to make louder the voices of people you don't want to hear in the first place.

- While driving down the road, I turned on my Mr. Mike and said "Hey, good lookin', we'll be back to pick you up later." The girl spit on my car.

- The Record Vacuum is here again and I will probably lose another six albums before I realize Ronco has a contract with all the major record companies. The companies give 15 percent of all profits to Ronco if they put rotating pins and needles in their record vacuum.

- I have never quite recovered from seeing a $24 digital recording of a Bach symphony become nothing but a heap. However, if I ever need a sound effects recording of large scraping and gnashing sounds, I am ready to party. Mom often uses this album as an ashtray.

- The Pocket Fisherman. I bought one of these about six years ago and decided to start small and work up to the big stuff. First I tried the minnow pond. Nothing. Then came Hawley Lake in eastern Arizona. Zilch. However, while trolling the open sea between Maui and Molokai I caught something, but it got my Pocket Fisherman before I got it. So, from now on, I give all of my whale harpooning friends one of these babies. Now if they could only make a Ronco Pocket Fish Cleaner.

- Of course, we can't forget the dreaded Veg-o-Matic. It slices, dices, chops and makes thousands of julienne potatoes.

- Just what the heck are julienne potatoes and how come Julia Child never uses one of these things? Granted, Mrs. Child does use an Oester food processor, but the Oester system comes complete with dough hooks. Try and top that, Veg-o-Matic.

- The Food Dehydrater and Yogurt Maker is relatively new. First off, I refuse to eat foods with the sound "gurt" in it. Ick. Secondly, what is wrong with the food the way it is? These people who eat dried food usually have a glass of water to wash it down with. I think this is some kind of conspiracy.

- The Egg Scrambler. This takes the cake. This device has no social redeeming value, and is, therefore, pornographic. Helpless eggs across this country are being whizzed around their shell just so Mr. John Q. Public doesn't have to take out a bowl and the (please excuse the use of this term) wirewhisk.

- The Egg Scrambler is for lazy people who can't make a decent omelette. I think there needs to be a law or something that says you must use the wire whisk. After all you usually get the whisk if you order the Ginsu kitchen knives.

(A note here. The Ginsu ads say that "in Japan the foot can be used like a knife, but this doesn't work on a watermelon." Who are they trying to kid? Of course it doesn't work on a watermelon. Neither does an 18-wheeler.)

- The Buttoneer is not being advertised this year, but it could be on the shelves of your favorite K-mart. This dandy device would hold a button on a shirt with a piece of plastic instead of the good old-fashioned needle and thread.

This was to have revolutionized the sewing industry. I guess others like me could not see our three-piece suits being held together by plastic doo-dads. If they were, it would make for very uncomfortable sitting. Ouch!

- The Knitting Machine was a doozie. In a matter of hours you could knit yourself a house, a two-car garage and a dog all for just $19.95. (A second note: what is the deal with $19.95? There has got to be a more suitable price like — uh, $1.50 and three Green Stamps.)

This item kept reminding us that a "granny button" could be made by tying the ends together and, after making hundreds of "buttons," we would have enough to make a hat (or that house).

Too bad the tenets of my religion prohibit me from coming in contact with anything that knits. I haven't even seen my grandmother for 10 years.

Now my review of a variety of the Ronco favorites is out and I want to see all of you make sure Mom and Dad back in South Suburbia get at least two of these gift wonders.

If you forget to give these marvels for Christmas, don't worry, your choice of Ronco products will be expanding in the next few months.

Sources for the State Press tell us that although Ronco is going out of business, such new products as the Electric Paper Clips, Designer Cookie Cutters (in the shape of horses and alligators) and Seeds for Cabbage Patch Dolls were waiting in the wings.

All yours for just $19.95.

Display of wise men signifies spirit of love

Editor:

Here we go again! Time after time I have witnessed gross exaggerations and misconceptions concerning the display of religious ornaments on public property. I tip my hat to Mr. Woodfield in his letter of Nov. 28 for the poorest excuse for logic I have ever read.

I know I speak for most when I demand to know why the rights of the majority are forever being trampled on by the whims and whines of the few. Is this democracy? I hardly think so.

The innocent display of the three wise men symbolizes not only Christmas, (yes, I'm not afraid to use the word), but a spirit of love, goodwill and brotherhood that all of us could use a little more of.

Comparing this display to one of "Satan slaying the baby Jesus" is not only in direct opposition to the noble concepts this display exemplifies, it is a moral crime against humanity. I am sure that Mr. Woodfield would gladly strip this world of ethics and morals on a very obscure technicality.

For once, the silent majority is not going to sit back and be kicked in the face. For the sake of the future of the majority, I urge the sleeping lion to awake, and speak out against those, like Mr. Woodfield, who would gladly push us back into the Dark Ages from which we came.

Poly sci senior misses nature of education

Editor:

A political science senior wrote a recent letter to the State Press that "... the job of political science instructors is to teach their classes as objectively as possible and provide both points of view." It is sadly ironic a senior in political science could have so completely failed to comprehend the nature of higher education. The transmission of knowledge is a political process based in the subjectivity of the social construction of reality.

University education classically provides the opportunity for students to critically test constructs against someone who professes an in-depth knowledge of some subject, i.e., a "professor." To demand that "both sides" be represented by a professor is not only a contradiction in terms, but gives one the sense that the person raising the objection lacks the intellectual confidence or competence to participate in the educational process with rigor.

I strongly suspect those who object to so-called bias in the classroom would not be nearly so concerned were professors mouthing opinions more consonant with the biases of those doing the complaining. I've also noticed that those who complain about bias never seem to do so when they agree with the bias. They cry foul only when they hear what they don't like. And then, instead of honestly disagreeing, they resort to the cowardly subterfuge of complaining about "both sides" not being offered.

Rantings

Scully ridiculous, inane, frustrated, ignorant extremist

Editor:

I am writing this letter in response to a column by Matthew Scully. Matthew Scully, columnist extraordinaire and better known as "super trap," has decided to direct his ridiculous rantings towards yet another group of conscientious people — the members of CISPES (Committee in Solidarity with the People of El Salvador). So far this semester, he's attacked Democrats and "liberals," ASU political science professors, Palestinians and the First Amendment. Matt, if you keep on attacking people at this rate, there will be no one left next semester and you might have to attack yourself! Now, wouldn't that be a piece of news?

Mr. Scully again used his typical inane style of "writing" by attacking personalities and not issues. He called his column "a case study in political activism." By doing this he rounded up all the conscientious people in the country and put them all down at once. This also enabled Mr. Scully to avoid using his brain (the tiny gray matter occupying an area the size of a pinhead) because he knows nothing about El Salvador whatsoever.

Instead, he could call the members of CISPES nice-sounding "naughty" names like small-time revolutionaries, specimens (we aren't really human beings, you see), types, liars, pathetic creatures, scruffy-looking misfits, noxious, egotists, irrationals, nervous addicts, victim-seekers and, horror of horrors, "idealists," "visionaries" and "progressives."

The use of these terms would seem to classify Mr. Scully as a biologist, a psychologist, a political scientist, a sociologist and a clothing designer. However, I tend to wonder where Mr. Scully got all of these degrees — out of a Cracker Jacks box?

Do all of those titles make Mr. Scully a journalist? Not in the least. Instead, he seems to be a frustrated would-be "doer" who attacks groups of human beings who are either concerned with the state of the world or disagree with his personal viewpoint. The only way he can achieve some sort of sick self-satisfaction is by verbally attacking the group personalities of people engaged in activities he secretly wants to be doing himself. Therefore, Mr. Scully never addresses the issues but the people committed to these activities. The only time he tried to do so, concerning the Palestinian issue, he revealed his utter ignorance.

As a member of CISPES and for the purpose of possibly enlightening Mr. Scully on personal reasons of a "political activist," I would like to address some of his remarks. The idea that CISPES is a revolutionary or terrorist organization is ridiculous. There are no secret meetings or plots to overthrow the U.S. government. Look up "revolutionary" in the dictionary, Mr. Scully, and think again.

CISPES is a national organization composed of Americans and other human beings who take the word "democracy" to mean democracy for all the people in the world. Paramount to the definition of democracy is the right of people to self-determination. That is not happening in El Salvador according to my interpretation of the facts. El Salvador happens to be in the middle of a civil war in which the United States is heavily supporting one side over the side of the majority of the people. The minority rules in El Salvador through the use of U.S.-supplied military hardware and the blood of many innocent civilians (more than 40,000 in the last four years). I happen to disagree with U.S. military intervention in El Salvador. In other words, Mr. Scully, I happen to disagree with a particular segment of U.S. foreign policy. Does that make me a small-time revolutionary, a specimen, or a scruffy-looking misfit?

As Americans, we have the right and the responsibility to exercise our freedoms and our diversity of viewpoints. There are always extremists who will try to impose their own narrow views on all of us and some extremists like Mr. Scully who use name-calling tactics to avoid real communication. Mr. Scully would perhaps like to see us all become good little robots who obey and do not question. Not even in Russia, Matt, let alone America.

The members of CISPES are a group composed mainly of Americans who are actively and publicly supporting a particular viewpoint. Whether that viewpoint is an accurate presentation of the facts or not is for individuals to decide for themselves. Isn't that what democracy, freedom and America are supposed to be all about?

Munsil's weekly trip to Scully's padded cell

Editor:

I finally have Matthew Scully figured out. He really isn't an ignorant Fascist, sitting around giving the State Press the bad name it is getting. He's a very smart columnist with a lot of guts. I came to this conclusion on Nov. 21 after reading his column on liberal activists and why they are activists. Scully is merely trying to get interesting responses to publish, in order to make up for what is otherwise a rather boring school paper. I refuse to accept the notion that anybody past the stage of learning to write, could actually believe what was written. Either that, or every week Len Munsil drives down to the local insane asylum and takes dictation on the gibberish creeping out of Scully's padded cell.

Baby Fae

Implant a necessary extension of research

Editor:

On Nov. 27, a letter writer who did not chose to give his name made the following statements as a result of the death of Baby Fae: "Mother Nature should not be tampered with," medicine should not resort "to the replacement of human parts with those that are inhuman," and Baby Fae's death "proved that we are not meant to live with parts other than human parts."

All it proved was that an infant who would have died anyway was given a chance to live.

However, the major problem with the writer's opinions is his sweeping generalization regarding the use of advances in medical technology. Does he really mean that persons crippled by arthritis should not have the opportunity for joint replacement, or that a child born with excess fluid on the brain should not receive artificial shunt to draw off that fluid, or that a teenager with a leg shattered in an accident should not have it stabilized with an internal metal pin? Or consider the artificial limb for the amputee or the reconstructed face for the burn victim.

The procedure that was used in an attempt to save Baby Fae's life was an extension of research and advances which have been taking place for years. It was not the result of some "mad scientist" experiment as the letter writer maintains. Society may at some time wish to halt the progress of science, when people decide that we have gone too far or that the health care system is investing too much in resources. Until then, physicians and other researchers will continue to attempt to find ways to heal, to relieve pain, to extend life, and to replace damaged organs.

And some individuals will always protest about the extent of the research — until it is their child or their spouse who needs the special treatment in question.

Kappa daddy?

Father, son to become fraternity brothers in chapel initiation ceremony

By CINDY PEARLMAN
Staff Writer

ASU freshman Dale Lee and his 41-year-old father will become brothers at 2 today in Danforth Chapel.

Both Lee and his father will become fraternity brothers when initiated into the ASU chapter of Phi Kappa Psi fraternity.

Gary Thomas, Phi Kappa Psi president, explained the story behind this first ASU father-son initiation into the fraternity.

In 1961, Phi Kappa Psi was a new fraternity at ASU. During that year, the organization was in a trial colony period, which allowed the fraternity to conduct normal business while waiting to receive their national charter, Thomas said.

Enter Maurice Lee.

He went through pledgship in 1961 with the ASU based, but not nationally recognized, Phi Kappa Psi chapter.

In 1962, ASU's Phi Kappa Psi received the official nod from the national fraternity's executive council stating that they were signed, sealed and approved.

However, before Maurice Lee was initiated as an active member, he transferred to Phillips University in Oklahoma.

What seemed to be the end of the story was revived this fall, when more than two decades later, a second generation Lee came to ASU. Dale Lee, an 18-year-old freshman real estate-business major, wasn't sure if he wanted to live in a residence hall or a fraternity.

He said his father suggested he go through fraternity rush. Maurice Lee even had a specific fraternity in mind -- Phi Kappa Psi.

"My father set me up with some of the guys who are actives," Dale said. "I have no regrets. This is the place that I want to be."

While his son was knee-deep in fraternity rush, Maurice Lee said he decided it was finally time to become an official Phi Kappa Psi active. An added bonus was that his membership could possibly coincide with his son's.

"Becoming an active member has always been a goal of mine, but the opportunity never presented itself, so I waited," Maurice said.

Thomas said he brought up the off-beat idea at a fraternity meeting.

"We decided that this was one of the best things we could ever do," Thomas said.

So, with the speaking of Phi Kappa Psi vows at today's ceremony, father and son will become brothers.

"I told him that I might want to wait a little bit before joining a fraternity, but my father stressed that I would not regret joining right away," Dale said.

He said his father told him that membership in a fraternity could help with schoolwork and involvement in University activities.

"I played Little League baseball and Dad coached my team. He has always been in with me on my studies and we've also done a lot of fishing together," Dale said.

After his initiation, Maurice Lee, a real estate consultant, will become an instant Phi Kappa Psi alumni and will be eligible to participate in an organization which meets for fraternity fund raising activities, said Robert Chamberlain, alumni chapter adviser.

Indian service center needed, adviser says

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
Staff Writer

ASU needs a Native American center that would provide tutoring, support services and a place where Native American students could express their feelings, a representative from the Department of Higher Education for the Navajo Indian tribe said.

Marie Saltclaw was at ASU to counsel Native American students Wednesday and Thursday about their school work and needs on campus.

"I try to provide counseling and check on their situation academically, financially and socially," Saltclaw said.

She said many Indian students have never been to a large city and suffer from cultural shock.

While she was on campus, the Minority Recruitment center presented her with an award she was honored with last year. Until this time, she had not officially received it.

"We selected people who are student advocates and try to aid the students," said Rosalind Horace, assistant director of minority recruitment.

Edward Delci, director of minority recruitment, said, "because we recruit the students from their homes to come to the school, they already know us and they come here for help."

Saltclaw said students now go to the office of minority recruitment or to their financial aid officer if they have difficulties.

Saltclaw works as a counselor for approximately 20 colleges and universities around the state. She said Native Americans who attend a junior college do not have as many problems as University students because people are closer and more aware of the students.

"Right now I can say that (support for students) is beginning to happen. The financial aid office is helping and so is minority recruitment; it's beginning to get better."

Commencement planned during finals

By STEVE HENSON
Staff Photographer

Something different is happening this semester. Along with six final exams scheduled for Dec. 21, the grand and glorious event of commencement will take place.

Denis Kigin, director of summer sessions and commencement, said graduation has traditionally been on Friday at ASU and Saturday at the U of A so the Arizona Board of Regents and the governor can attend both ceremonies.

"We are working to clean this up so students can attend commencement," he said.

He said this is the first semester he can remember finals and commencement being held on the same day.

However, Paul Schatt, a faculty associate teaching a journalism course, said he gave the final exam on the last day of scheduled classes last fall because it was supposed to be given the same day as commencement.

The following course hours have finals which are scheduled the same day as commencement, which begins at 10 a.m.:

•The final for courses that meet at 7:40 a.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays is scheduled to be given from 7:40 to 9:30 a.m.

•Classes that meet at 4:40 p.m. on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays have a final scheduled at 3:40 p.m.

•Classes meeting at 2:40 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays have a final at 1 p.m.

•Classes meeting at 4:40 p.m. on Tuesdays and Thursdays have a final at 4:40 p.m.

A group of students in Purchasing Materials Management Strategy (MGT 479) have aired their gripes to Kigin, he said.

Some students in Professor Robert Reck's MGT 479, are business majors and will be graduating on the same day as the final exam.

Reck said the policy in the College of Business is that an instructor has to give the final on the day designated by the semester schedule.

Student Jeffery Miller is concerned about the fact that administrators have known about the problem, but did not start working on it until late in the semester.

Gail McNeely said she was glad the University is offering graduation ceremonies every semester now, but said "this is poor planning."

Kigin said the spring schedule has been set up so no finals are scheduled the day of commencement.

police report

A fire broke out at the chemical research lab in the Physical Science building Wednesday night, but was extinguished by an employee before the Tempe Fire Department and ASU police officers arrived at the scene, police said. The flame started at a valve connecting two containers of chemicals being distilled by researchers, police said. According to ASU Fire Marshall Andy Anderson, the cause of the fire is unknown and is under investigation.

People standing atop the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity house were throwing eggs at an ASU student as he drove his Datsun 280Z on Alpha Drive late Wednesday, police said. The eggs struck the car's hood and windshield.

In other activity, University Police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 2 p.m. Thursday:

- A green, metal strong box containing $550 was reported stolen from the Theta Chi fraternity house Wednesday night, police said. The box was in a student's closet, which was locked, and there were no signs of forced entry.

- A Sony AM/FM Cassette radio and two speakers valued at $357 were reported stolen from a 1982 Jeep parked in Lot 51 Wednesday afternoon, police said.
- A men's gray Cycle Pro 5-speed valued at $125 was reported stolen from the bike rack at Cholla Apartments Wednesday morning, police said.

- A spare tire valued at $75 was reported stolen from a 1977 Chevy during an ASU football game, police said.

- Two text books were taken from an ASU student while she was studying at Hayden Library Wednesday afternoon, police said.

Psychology center offering anger control therapy group

By JOHN CONWAY
Staff Writer

The ASU Clinical Psychology Center will offer an "anger control" therapy group to teach alternative responses to anger in aggravating situations.

"Anger is a real common emotion that we all experience. It is one that psychology has not looked into as much as depression or anxiety," said John Dignam, a clinical psychology doctoral candidate.

Dignam and fellow doctoral candidate Mark Brooks, will conduct the group sessions which they hope to begin as early as mid-January.

"Anger itself is not bad or wrong," Dignam said. "It's what we do with anger and how we express it that usually gets in the way."

A person who reacts with anger to a stressful situation will not transmit a clear, succinct message, and those around him will only perceive anger, he said.

Dignam describes anger as, "an emotional reaction which people can use as a signal to cope more effectively with a problem situation or a stressful situation."

Anger is prefaced by certain physiological symptoms like "butterflies" in the stomach or feeling hot, Dignam said.

If these symptoms are recognized as a prelude to angry behavior, outbursts can be avoided if the individual tells himself to, "cool off, settle down," and address the situation, Dignam said.

The anger control therapy is separated into two parts.

Participants first will monitor themselves and learn to recognize the particular situations that make them angry.

Next, group members will begin to replace the previously automatic reactions with new, more effective ones.

"Anger is sometimes a mask for other feelings that we're afraid to express or don't know how to express," Dignam said.

Anger is used to respond to rejection, hurt, helplessness and fear. He said, he and Brooks hope to help people learn to express their real feelings instead of just anger.

"The purpose of the group is to teach participants to become more aware of their own thoughts and actions," Dignam said.

"If a person learns to use anger effectively, it can actually become a positive force for that person," he said.

Brooks said, "It's not easy for some, but most people can learn to do it with practice."

Bethlehem

Star's origin subject of Planetarium program

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

"After Jesus was born in Bethlehem in Judea, during the time of King Herod, Magi from the east came to Jerusalem and asked, 'Where is the one who has been born King of the Jews. We saw His star in the east and have come to worship him'" (Matthew 2:1-2).

Since the birth of Christ, astronomical experts have offered varied explanations for the existence of the star of Bethlehem.

Various theories which have been formulated to deal with the star's origin will be presented at the ASU Planetarium in "The Yule Connection," said Dan Matlaga, ASU Planetarium coordinator.

The only written record about the star that marked the birthplace of Jesus is in chapter two of the Gospel of Matthew, Matlaga said.

"The accounts (of the star) we do have were from witnesses who knew nothing about the sky," he said.

Matlaga said the three Wise Men, who came from the Mesopotamia Valley known today as Iran and Iraq, were probably followers of an astrological religion. Since they may have been astrologers, the Wise Men may have noticed something in the sky that the average person would not have, he said. But the astrological knowledge of the Wise Men was not as good as present-day astronomical research.

"The only people we know of who saw the star were the Wise Men," Matlaga said. "Even Herod's advisers did not see anything in the sky."

King Herod served under Augustus Caesar as a Roman procurator for Judea, a biblical province encompassing Jerusalem and Bethlehem.

Matlaga said the use of a brilliant star or shiny object appearing above the manger scene on modern Christmas cards is contrary to what written records show.

Without knowledge of what year Christ was born, Matlaga said scientists are unable to review Chinese and Arabic records which may contain information as to the probable cause of the star. Also, he said the Bible is not specific as to a date, and "as a book of history, it is lacking."

"We are sort of in the dark as to what we should be looking for," Matlaga said.

Although specific information about the appearance of the star is unavailable, many experts have developed theories as to the origin of the star.

Matlaga said one theory is that a comet appeared in the sky and the Magi followed it to Bethlehem. However, in the times surrounding the birth of Christ, comets were seen as a bad omen, Matlaga said.

"Comets meant something evil was going to happen," he said.

Even as recently as the early 1900s, comets were seen as forerunners to natural disasters and deaths of world leaders.

A second major theory focuses on a nova, an increase of brightness of a star due to its expansion. Matlaga said this theory is in doubt because no written record can be found about the possible nova.

"If we look back in Chinese and Arabic records, we don't see that a nova occurred," he said.

Since the actual date of Christ's birth is unknown, experts usually search the records from many years prior to and after the believed birth.

Some theories point to a meteor as the star, but Matlaga said the meteors were not rare enough to be considered a one-time event. He also said that Biblical accounts say the Wise Men followed the star to Bethlehem, and meteors only last for a brief moment.

The last major theory of the star is one that involves the position of the planets in the sky in the year between 6 and 1 B.C.

Matlaga said in February 6 B.C., Mars, Jupiter and Saturn all formed a tight triangle in front of the constellation of Pisces, but conflicting evidence may disprove this theory.

"It set soon after sunset," he said. "This appearance occurred in the western part of the sky. The Wise Men said 'we have seen His star in the east.'"

Matlaga said a possible "language problem" may be a stumbling block to understanding if this cluster of planets was the star. Specifically, Matlaga said the term "in the east" may have several connotations.

Another celestial event occurred in 1 B.C., when the planet Venus passed by the bright star of Regulus (Alpha Leo).

If the birth date of Christ was in 1 B.C., as was evaluated by the scholar Dionysius, Matlaga said Venus and Regulus were close enough to have been mistaken for one star.

Even today, Venus is commonly mistaken for a variety of objects. Two years ago, television news stations reported that many people were calling the local military bases to report a low flying plane, a rocket and even a UFO when Venus reached its greatest point in the sky.

The main problem with this theory is the conjunction of Venus and Regulus occurred about two years after the death of Herod, who was alive during the birth of Christ, Matlaga said. Herod ordered the slaughtering of all boys in Bethlehem under the age of two to prevent Jesus from being "King."

Some authors of books that deal with the star offer a variety of reasons for the appearance. Christians in the 16th century were said to believe the star of Bethlehem was an act of God which will reappear in the sky immediately before the second coming of Christ.

Matlaga said no matter what the theories are, researchers need to know the date of Christ's birth for an accurate account of the star of Bethlehem.

But, Matlaga said some people think one can just go back 1,984 years to pinpoint the birth of Jesus. But the Vatican changed the Western world's calendars from the Julian calendar to the current Gregorian calendar in 1582. Matlaga said the switch in calendars prevents a conclusive date from being found.

Until the time a birthdate is discovered, "I think the people who have researched it would say we really don't know what it was," he said.

"The Yule Connection" is being presented in the ASU Planetarium through Dec. 13. Admission is $1 and an advanced reservation is required.

The Planetarium is located in the Physical Sciences Building B-Wing, room B350.

Matlaga said this may be the last year for the show on the star because the planetarium plans to focus its efforts on the upcoming visit of Halley's Comet.

No-need financial aid doesn't attract students

By the College Press Service

As the Nov. 6 election results sink in, most education observers say they expect President Reagan's landslide win will mean deeper cuts in federal funding of colleges and students during the next four years.

At least one source, who did much to shape the education policies of the first Reagan term, said they are correct.

About the only change will be that President Reagan probably will not propose abolishing the U.S. Department of Education again, said Ron Docksai, author of the education section of the conservative Heritage Foundation's landmark Mandate for Leadership report.

In his first term, President Reagan tried to implement virtually all the education policies Docksai outlined.

But Docksai has competition from others hoping to help cast education policies in the second term.

"We want to assist," said Garvin Hudgins, communications director of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges.

Asked if he expects the administration to try to cut student aid anyway, Hudgins said, "It certainly seems likely at this point."

A number of educators and student leaders around the country also want to befriend the winners, though few believe the gesture will stop the administration from proposing more cuts.

Greg Moore, president of the U.S. Student Association, long a power in the youth wing of the Democratic Party, said, "In the future USSA will attempt to have more contact with the White House."

"Since Reagan captured the youth vote nationwide, it could mean he will have more concern for the youth," said Jim Kessler, a political activist at the University of Massachusetts-Amherst.

But Mike DeSanto, national director of the nationwide

Coalition of Independent College and University Students, said, "They're going to come back for us hard, and they're going to try to cut."

"All federal programs will be under close scrutiny," Charles Saunders, head of government relations for the American Council on Education said. "I'm optimistic (cuts can be avoided) because the Republicans in Congress are supporting higher ed."

"I think the next four years will be like the last four years," said Dennis Martin of the National Association of Student Financial Aid Administrators. "There will be very little growth in (the programs), but we hope to have support from Congress."

"Congress must hold the line on financial aid," said Leslie Woolf, who Reagan fired as head of the Women's Education Equity Project in his first term, "and I don't think Congress will blow it."

Since 1982, Congress repeatedly has rebuffed presidential requests for further drastic cuts in aid programs, and the recent elections did not alter Congress's makeup substantially.

Some observers worry Reagan's victory was big enough to force cuts in student aid anyway.

"There has been a loss of grants, 25 percent since 1980, and that's with Congress rejecting most of Reagan's proposals," said Kathy Ozer, USSA's lobbyist.

Others also fear Congress can't prevent further weakening of laws to protect women from campus discrimination, more cuts in funding of black colleges and libraries, or political interference in federally-funded research.

"Four more years will lead to more cuts for educational equity certainly," Woolf says.

Saunders said "the Reagan administration has made a lot of noise in helping black colleges, but it was mostly noise. They're trying to take huge amounts out of student aid, which is very important to black colleges."

"The majority of students at the black schools depend on financial aid," Ozer said.

"Hopefully the president will cut back on waste in higher education," said Jack Abramoff, head of the College Republicans in Washington, D.C. "There is tremendous abuse in that department."

Abramoff also said the administration will intensify its hunt for students who have defaulted on their student loans.

"We also want to discourage people from running to the feds first off for loans," he said. "I'd estimate the next four years will be like the past four years."

The 1984 Republican platform's education plank was much like the 1980 version, excluding the 1980 call to dismantle the Education Department. But the administration's first term policies more closely resembled the Heritage Foundation agenda than the Republican platform.

In "Mandate for Leadership," Docksai called for shifting control of education from Washington to state and local governments, for easing federal regulation of civil rights laws, for tuition tax credits, changing student aid from grants to loans, restricting enforcement of laws barring discrimination against women on campus and abolishing both the Women's Education Equity Project and the Education Department.

Docksai, staff director of the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee, said the new education agenda isn't public yet, and that a new Heritage Foundation report is due out Thursday.

He did say "expansion of (student aid) just isn't in the cards" during Reagan's next term.

Cutting aid, moreover, "has to remain a live issue because our resources are inelastic. The same type of (debate) will happen this time."

"The question" in funding aid, he said, isn't cutting needy students off the rolls, but "deciding how much we want to subsidize the middle class."

Landslide win may bring further aid cuts

By the College Press Service

A recent survey of top high school students indicates the hotly-debated no-need financial aid grants colleges use to attract top students don't do much good.

High school students don't pay much attention to them when choosing a college, the survey said.

The survey, compiled by researchers Randall Chapman of the University of Alberta and Rex Jackson, president of Applied Educational Research of Princeton, N.J., was released at an Oct. 29 College Board meeting.

Based on a sampling of 1,183 top Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) scorers, the study found six of every 10 of the top students chose to attend the No. 1 college on their list, regardless of aid.

Of the remaining 39 percent, half cited money as one reason for enrolling at a college that was not their first choice.

"An equally important factor, however, is contact with the institution," Jackson said in a telephone interview. "A school's interest in the student and campus visits could be productive ways for schools to attract students."

"Merit money" can persuade a student to switch to another school if the amount is great enough.

A $1,000 grant increases the possibility of a switch in only 4 percent of the cases.

The probability increases to 70 percent with a grant of $5,000, but the researchers found a second-choice school needs to offer $6,300 just to give itself a 50-50 chance of attracting a student who wants to go elsewhere.

Other recent studies claim larger grants can convince a student the school is hard-up for applicants, but Jackson said his study found "no adverse effects of larger awards."

A growing number of colleges now use merit scholarships to attract top students.

A study by Washington-based financial expert Bob Leider said nearly 1,000 colleges now offer some type of merit aid.

"In the mid- to late-70s, studies suggested 60 percent of colleges were offering no-need aid," Jackson said. "Recent studies show it's now more than 80 percent."

"The average SATs of our incoming freshmen have gone up dramatically in the last couple of years," said Leo Munson, Texas Christian University financial aid director.

"There's a belief among many college people that the purpose of merit scholarships is psychological," said researcher Jackson.

But merit money may signal students the colleges offering it "aren't competitive academically," he said.

A school's image, he contended, evolves from such things as its students' median SAT scores, student-to-faculty ratio, number of faculty holding Ph.D.s, acceptance rate and the percentage of students continuing in postgraduate studies.

"Colleges need to maintain an image of quality," Jackson said. "And after a student is accepted, the school has to show interest in the student and encourage him to visit the campus."

Draft sign-up linkage to colleges refined

By the College Press Service

MEMPHIS, Tenn. — A court approval of a law forcing Tennessee students to prove they have registered for the draft before they can enroll at a state school could mean students in other states soon may have to prove it as well, draft opponents say.

But at the same time, the U.S. Department of Education last week said students' honesty in signing military registration forms has been so complete the department won't require colleges to prove their students' registration in order to get student aid.

Until now, students' signatures on a form swearing they had registered for the draft had been proof enough, but as of Jan. 1, colleges themselves will be responsible for proving students who want federal aid have registered.

Tennessee's new law requires students to sign forms certifying they have registered with Selective Service just to enroll in a state school.

As a result, Memphis State University refused to let 19-year-old Thomas Vogel start classes because he refused to sign the compliance form.

Vogel then sued the university and the state, claiming the law unconstitutionally involved the state in enforcing federal Selective Service laws.

Pointing to a controversial July, 1984 Supreme Court ruling upholding the Solomon Amendment — the federal law which requires students to prove they have registered for the draft before they can get federal financial aid — U.S. District Judge Thomas Wiseman recently approved the Tennessee law.

"As the nation's defense goes, so goes that of the states," Wiseman ruled.

No one is sure how much such laws help. "I don't believe we've ever found a nonregistrant because (he) refused to sign a college compliance sheet," said Selective Service spokeswoman Joan Lamb. "There is no requirement for colleges to do anything like turn over the names of students who don't sign a compliance form."

In fact, the Selective Service has prosecuted only 17 of the estimated 500,000 nonregistrants, Lamb said.

Edward Elmendorf, assistant secretary of education, last week said he was so impressed with students' "honesty" that he was relieving colleges of the chore of proving students were telling the truth when they signed their compliance statements.

Still, registration opponents say they expect more states will keep trying to link college to the military in other ways.

The Selective Service's Lamb, however, doubts such state laws will affect many students.

"The Solomon Amendment was terrifically helpful (in getting students to register)," she said. "We saw a tremendous jump in registration in the fall when many students were returning to school and applying for aid."

Student newspaper sues college for banning abortion ads

By the College Press Service

BATON ROUGE, La. — Charging violation of First Amendment rights, the Louisiana State University student newspaper, The Daily Reville, is suing LSU for banning all abortion and pregnancy-related advertising from school publications.

The charge is the most serious of a number of recent incidents as pro- and anti-abortion forces square off on campuses nationwide.

At Villanova University in Pennsylvania, the Catholic university's administrators ordered the campus newspaper editor to pull an ad offering birth control information.

At California's Oxnard Community College, the Campus Observer staff and faculty advisers were bombarded with protests from students and faculty for accepting a pro-life political advertisement in the weeks before the Nov. 6 election.

Eastern Washington University students were unpleasantly surprised recently when unappetizing anti-abortion flyers appeared on cafeteria tables.

The LSU ban stems from a business officer's question about the suitability of "pregnancy-related" advertisements contracted by an independent ad agency to appear in a student directory.

"The complaint raised the question, 'Do we want to advertise for abortion?'" said LSU Vice Chancellor for Student Affairs L. L. Pesson.

"We talked to the student health director and determined the ads were not in the best interests of the students," he said. "The director felt it best to send students to the clinic first for advice and help, then if necessary, point them in the right direction for an abortion clinic."

But Reville editor Dane Strother said including the newspaper in the campus-wide ban violates the paper's First Amendment right to determine its own advertising policy.

"The editor and ad manager should be responsible for all advertising," he said. "It's not a pro-life or pro-choice issue. The administration is limiting the students' right to information."

"The administration should allow such freedom of expression," said Villanova editor Joseph Marusak.

The week following Villanova's ban, Marusak wrote an editorial accusing the administration of censorship and of suppressing "opposing views because it feels its own may in some fantastical way be damaged."

Villanova faculty adviser June Lytel, countering the accusations in the same edition, said, "I knew the ad was against the teachings of Villanova and the Catholic Church, and I knew the trouble it would cause if it ran."

Villanova students seem unconcerned about the ban, Marusak said.

The paper received two letters supporting the editor's position, and two supporting the ban.

At Oxnard College, however, too much reaction to a graphic pro-life ad in the Campus Observer prompted faculty adviser Gary Morgan's editorial defending the paper's responsibility to uphold the pro-lifers' free speech right.

Students and faculty members labeled the ad "in poor taste" and "factually inaccurate," and questioned the staff's judgment in accepting it.

Morgan said the ad was "definitely graphic" and the paper did not endorse it, but the Campus Observer does "believe in the precepts of the First Amendment and cannot deny access so long as advertisers adhere to its advertising code."

Eastern Washington University students objected as well when graphic pro-life flyers appeared on cafeteria tables last month.

The flyers advertised an anti-abortion film scheduled for campus showing and sponsored by Kampus Sonshine Ministries.

Dining service manager Liane Smith had not approved the flyers, although she had approved previous ministry leafletting.

Malls 'flooded,' retailers prepare for big shopping season

By CINDY PEARLMAN
Staff Writer

Taking a breather from the American Thanksgiving tradition of watching an average 18 hours of television per day, early Christmas shoppers flooded local malls last weekend.

"We were mobbed," said Barbara Larson, marketing director for Metrocenter shopping mall. "Retailers are very optimistic about the upcoming season."

Fluorescent clothing, Cabbage Patch dolls, Trivial Pursuit games and video cassette recorders are expected to continue their mass followings into the holidays, Larson said.

Although a good sales year is expected, just how much money the Christmas season will bring in is unpredictable, said Tom Rex, ASU's manager of research support for the Bureau of Business and Economic Research.

"Overall, we see some uncertainty in retail sales this Christmas season," Rex said.

The research bureau specializes in economic analysis and forecasts for a number of industries.

"There is some question as to how much will be spent," he said. "It should be a good year — maybe a great year."

Christmas retail sales in Arizona reached $2 billion last year, making for an outstanding cash register season, Rex said.

He projected sales for the 1984 Christmas season to come close to, if not surpass, last year's total.

"Not all retail sales show seasonality," Rex said.

Department and variety stores, as well as apparel and selected specialty shops depend on a larger-than-normal sales volume during December, he said.

Others, such as food stores, car dealers and restaurants do not see a surge before the holidays, he said.

Larson said, Metrocenter is "conservatively projecting" a 10 percent increase in retail sales from last Christmas season.

An informal poll among Valley merchants revealed a 6 to 25 percent increase in Thanksgiving weekend sales when compared to the previous year, Larson said.

The amount of increase depended on the type of store, she said.

Clothing stores ranked highest in overall sales among college students and the general public, Larson said. She said she expects jewelry sales to be as strong, but in the past, shoppers have usually waited until later in the season to make those purchases.

Retailers benefitting from holiday sales expect a carry-over effect in sales for the next few months, Rex said.

"Normally, if we see a lot of spending at this time of the year, a good volume of sales will continue into the early part of the year," Rex said.

Larson said in order to avoid the masses, customers should aim for either early morning shopping hours or late evenings.

She said the prime time for shopping is Saturday from 6 to 9 p.m.

Opening night performance gains Sandle raves

Chris Sandle has lived up to his lofty billing as one of the top recruits in the Pac-10 early on this season, starting at forward for ASU.

By JERRY BROWN
Assistant Sports Editor

For any freshman, starting the first game of his collegiate career is a nervous experience.

But if ASU forward Chris Sandle had any such opening-game jitters, he hid them quite well.

Sandle led the Devils with 13 points and corralled five rebounds in just 24 minutes of playing time as ASU opened its 1984-85 campaign with a 70-57 win over Angelo State.

Sandle, who leaves for his first road trip as a Devil when ASU travels to Toledo and Texas El-Paso over the weekend, was more excited about the starting call than anything else.

"I was really excited to start," Sandle said. "I had worked hard in practice and I felt I had earned the position."

"But that doesn't mean I can slack off. I have to play well to keep my spot."

A graduate of Long Beach (Calif.) Poly High School, Sandle averaged 19.8 points and 10 rebounds per game his senior season and was named to the McDonald's All-America squad.

Sandle said his relatives were excited about his early success.

"They had something in the paper back home about how I did in the first game," Sandle said. "They are happy about what's happening."

Despite coming from an area that is dominated by college basketball powers, Sandle decided he wanted to be a part of the blossoming ASU program.

"This is an up and coming program, and I like what's going on here," Sandle said. "The program is getting stronger, and I wanted to contribute."

ASU coach Bob Weinbauer said Sandle will progress as the year moves on.

"Chris will only get better," Weinbauer said. "We didn't count on him to be our high scorer, but Chris is never surprising. He does things so well, so fundamentally. He's a few pounds overweight, but by crunch-time, he'll be fine."

Team-wise, Sandle said there is much room to improve.

"We knew we were the better team when we played (Angelo State)," Sandle said. "We'll be on track before long. We have a lot of potential, and if we apply ourselves, we are good enough to go to the NCAA's."

The Devils will receive a stiff test this weekend. Toledo returns four starters and eight lettermen from last year's 18-11 squad.

Leading the Rockets is senior forward Ken Epperson, who averaged 20.4 points and 9.4 rebounds per game last season. But Epperson has been bothered by bone spurs and has missed two weeks of practice.

Sandle: "... if we apply ourselves, we are good enough to go to the NCAA's."

Other top returnees include senior guard Jay Gast (12.2 points per game) and senior center Jim Lange.

Toledo opened its season in Lexington, Ky., Tuesday night. The Rockets led 17th-ranked Kentucky early in the second half, but the Wildcats rallied with a 16-2 run to pull out a 63-54 win.

UTEP (27-4 last season, eliminated in the second round of the NCAA tournament) also returns four starters. Among them is guard Luster Goodwin, who should be the focal point of the offense again this season.

"Luster Goodwin is one of the outstanding players in the country," Weinbauer said. "They (UTEP) have excellent size and quickness and they play aggressive defense."

Wanted: Winning season and Pac-10 title — inquire within

Tom Blodgett

Forget all those polls everybody is conducting this week, Darryl. You and I both know that they're all pretty ludicrous and don't amount to much.

You will return next year to coach the team you put together.

Hey, I'll grant you that point. I think it's pretty ridiculous, the public asking for your job. How would they feel if you called up their bosses and as an outsider asked for their job? I can't answer for them, but I'd be pretty darn upset.

Alas, that's not how it works in sports. You control the reins of the Valley's football pride. As its caretaker, you must answer to them.

I'll rest any arguments for now about your employment status for 1985.

But I do have some conditions for your rehire in 1986, ones that I'm sure most of the Valley would like to see placed on your continued employment here.

No more excuses, Darryl. The team you field next year will not be too young.

You have all kinds of experience. On defense, you have as many as 14 returning starters for next year on an 11-person unit.

That's Taleni Wright, Dan Saleaumua and Frank Rudolph on the defensive line; linebackers Pat Taylor, Greg Battle and Scott Stephen; defensive backs Jeff Joseph, Anthony Parker, Eric Allen, Darrin Willis and All-American David Fulcher from your often-used nickel back formation; '82 starter at cornerback Bruce Hill; and defensive end Fred Gaddis and linebacker Billy Robinson, assuming they clear up academic problems that held them out of this season.

That doesn't even include top substitutes and promising redshirt freshmen.

On offense you are set at the skill positions: a brilliant young quarterback, a 1,000-yard rusher at tailback, a good blocking fullback, two fast flankers (one a former split end who could move back to replace Doug Allen), and two solid tight ends.

On the line, you lose two all-conference players in Mark Shupe and Tom Magazzeni, but you return Randall McDaniel, your best lineman after he converted from tight end. You also get back Kevin Thomas from injury and return David Fonoti, Danny Villa and Brian Lopker, each of whom saw significant action this year.

The only place you really lose out is special teams, where you lose the main staples — kicker Luis Zendejas and punter Jim Meyer. But even there, you have a promising duo, kicker Kent Bostrom and punter Mark Millbranth, waiting in the wings.

Darryl, you're so loaded it's frightening. All those preseason predictions made for your players may not have been wrong. Maybe they were just a year early.

Nelson happy with coach

For the second time this season, ASU President J. Russell Nelson has given football coach Darryl Rogers a vote of confidence, ending speculation of Rogers' future for the 1985 season.

Speaking at the ASU football awards banquet Wednesday night at the Pointe Tapatio Resort, Nelson reiterated earlier comments he made about Rogers during the season.

"I have great confidence in the future of this football team and football program," Nelson said. "We have many starters returning and with the continuing leadership of coach Darryl Rogers and his fine staff of assistant coaches, I am confident we will have an excellent season next year."

The crowd applauded after Nelson's comment.

Rogers has just completed his fifth year at ASU, where he has compiled a 37-18-1 record. This season the Devils finished 5-6, the first time ASU has finished with a losing record with Rogers as coach.

Rogers has indicated he would like to stay at ASU, which by Arizona law can only grant one-year extensions to state employees.

Now I'm not exactly sure how you blew it this year. How a team can finish second in the conference in total offense, third in total defense, have good special teams and eight home games, but still have a losing record and finish sixth in the final standings, I'll never figure out.

But we'll let it pass this one time. However, we have some conditions for next year.

You have to win the Pac-10 conference.

I know that's a lot of pressure. I know that's a lot to ask when you have to worry about Washington, USC and UCLA, to say nothing about that damn Tucson school.

But isn't it about time they start worrying about us?

Isn't it time to stop saying there's no shame in losing to those guys or teams like Florida State because they're so good? Isn't it time we beat them at least as much as they beat us, especially when we have the home advantage time and time again?

Even if you miss the roses, you should finish the season going to a top-notch bowl game. And if you don't get the roses, the team that does better be awesome.

And no Tucson, either.

The U of A must not finish on top of you. It's about time to end this three-in-a-row nonsense. If I have to make one more call to Tucson to give the victors the spoils, I'll just toss my cookies.

If you want to discuss this point over dinner, I have plenty of leftover crow from last week. We can have some humble pie for dessert.

While we're at it, I don't think it would be a very good idea to end spring practice early this year. I thought it was OK last year, but after seeing your team play like it did against Oklahoma State and Cal, I'm not sure I'm all that keen about it. Your team could have used an extra week of practice.

The conditions are right, Darryl. The latent effect of the probation period is over. The talent has matured. The schedule is without the Oregon schools, but USC, Washington and Arizona visit Tempe.

There shouldn't be too much preseason hype this time around — 5-6 seasons don't attract much national attention. If the game was to lull them to sleep, then hit 'em hard between the eyes, then you accomplished the first part.

I don't envy you, but then you made your bed, and you have to lie in it.

You know Darryl, 1985 could be your year. And then again, it could be your neck.

Grapplers get early test against tough Cowboys

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

In an unusual turnaround, the ninth-ranked ASU wrestling team finds itself playing the part of David as it goes against a Goliath of the wrestling world, Oklahoma State.

The Sun Devils meet the second-ranked Cowboys at 7:30 p.m. Monday in the Activity Center.

Though the opponent is formidable, coach Bobby Douglas said his team is waiting.

"We're ready," Douglas said. "We have no regrets whatsoever (about hitting Oklahoma State this early in the season). You find out how good you are by going against tough teams, and they are one of the toughest teams in the nation. It should be an excellent match."

The outcome of the meet could come down to a few key confrontations, said Douglas.

"We are in a position to win four matches," he said. "They are in a position to win five, and one match is even. It could come down to the heavyweight match."

"We are capable of winning the matches that they are favored in, but it will take a super effort."

Douglas said he expects heavyweight Rod Severn, 190-pound Mike Davies, 177-pound Tom Kolopus and 150-pound Eddie Urbano to win their matches.

The even match comes in the 126-pound class where Gary Bairos will wrestle for the Sun Devils. Douglas said Bairos has had a good week of practice and the match will be "very close."

He said the matchups where ASU hopes to surprise Oklahoma State are in the 118- and 142-pound classes.

"Adam Cohen (142-pounds) has had a great week of practice," Douglas said. "Both he and Chip Park (118-pounds) have had a great week of practice."

A victory by Park could mean more for ASU than just a mark in the win column.

"(The outcome of the meet) depends on the first match," Douglas said. "The first match sets the tempo and is a tremendous uplift for the team that wins it."

One strike against ASU is the injury to Marc Sprague in the 126-pound class. Douglas said Sprague injured his knee ligaments this week.

"It happened during practice," he said. "He was stepping when it popped. He's getting it 'scoped (undergoing arthroscopic surgery) today. He might be out for the rest of the season."

One way ASU could make up points against Oklahoma State is through a pin. A pin counts for six points on the team score while a winning decision only counts for three points.

Douglas knows a pin may be the difference in the meet, but he isn't looking for one.

"You can't count on pins," he said. "But whoever gets a pin wins the meet. But we emphasize executing to the best of our ability and wrestling as hard as we can. We want them to put themselves to the ultimate test."

Conditioning will help the Sun Devils in this task.

"Our conditioning has improved considerably," Douglas said. "I think it was tough to train during Thanksgiving, but the tempo in the (wrestling) room is up."

Douglas said the biggest advantage the Cowboys have is their experience, while ASU counters with a desire to beat one of the top teams in the country.

"They have more experience at heavyweight, 190-, 158-, 134- and 126-pounds," Douglas said. "We're hungry. They're No. 2 in the nation and we're No. 9. Not too many people beat them in a dual meet."

ASU will try to wrestle aggressively, said Douglas, but the team will make adjustments in order to win.

"We will wrestle to win," Douglas said. "I'd like to wrestle aggressively, but that only helps if the referee calls stalling."

"If he doesn't, then we'll have to play cat-and-mouse. It's boring for the fans, but we have to wrestle to win. It's a matter of tactics, not technique."

Whatever the outcome of the meet, Douglas is confident his team will be better off.

"What I emphasize is improvement," he said. "We don't know where we're at until we meet someone as good or better than we are. I'm looking forward to the competition."

Lady hoopsters pack bags for cross-country road trip

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

Traveling to New Jersey on the longest road trip in coach Juliene Simpson's six-year tenure at ASU, the women's basketball team will face a pair of undefeated teams in non-conference action.

The Lady Devils (1-1) will take on 14th-ranked Rutgers (2-0) at 2 p.m. Saturday, followed by a 7:30 p.m. meeting with St. Peters (1-0) on Monday.

Simpson, with a 99-50 career record at ASU, needs only one victory to eclipse the 100 mark.

"I really feel this is going to be a great road trip for us," Simpson said. "Rutgers is ranked 14th in the nation, so if you want to find out where you stand, this is a good time for it."

line to end-line game, they sometimes get caught on their transition game defensively, so the fast break may be effective against them."

Junior forward Julie Salmon leads the Scarlet Knights in scoring, averaging 15 points per game, followed by freshman Sue Wicks with 11.5 points per game and 8.5 rebounds.

Although St. Peters does not have the same caliber team as Rutgers, Simpson said they cannot be taken lightly.

"I think we will be challenged because both teams pressure very much," Simpson said.

St. Peters is paced by sophomore Blanche Jones and junior Bonita Singleton, a pair of high scoring guards who are both averaging 20 points per game this year.

Simpson: 'If the starters are not playing well I don't think I would substitute massively. I think I would try to stay with the (first) seven.'

After opening the season last weekend with a 79-75 loss to New Mexico and a 80-57 victory over NAU, Simpson said she is happy with the way her squad is progressing in the early season.

"I really feel confident going into this first game against Rutgers because we played so well against NAU," Simpson said. "But I'm not overly confident because of how we played against New Mexico."

Rutgers features exceptional team quickness, which Simpson said she plans to counter with the fast break, a facet of the ASU attack which worked effectively in the victory over NAU.

"Their backcourt is extremely quick, so we'll probably have to try and play a half-court game," Simpson said. "Because of their quickness I don't feel we'll be able to play with them from end-line to end-line."

"With many teams that have a good end-

Simpson plans to continue playing primarily her starters throughout both games, a move she made before the NAU victory.

Four of the starters from the NAU contest — Jodi Rathbun, Sherry Poole, Robin Connolly and Tanya Morris — will once again get the starting call, with either Beckie Smatana or Camilla Mullertz filling out the starting five.

Simpson said guard Mona Lomeli and forward Barb Smith turned in good performances off the bench last week and will be the first back-ups to enter the game.

"If the starters are not playing well I don't think I would substitute massively," Simpson said. "I think I would try to stay with the seven."

"If they don't play well, it will probably be because they are not used to working together very much."

Men swimmers, divers host meet; women hit road

By STEVE RICHMAN
Sports Writer

The ASU men's and women's swimming and diving teams return to action this weekend, as the men host a pre-conference meet at the Aquatic Center today at 2 and Saturday at 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. The Lady Devils travel to UNLV to compete in the Landmark Invitational Meet today through Sunday.

The men will compete against U of A, the University of New Mexico and Wyoming.

Coach Ron Johnson said this meet will give the Devils a chance to swim in all the regular championship events.

"In this meet we can swim in more of the championship events than we can in a regular dual meet," Johnson said. "We have also rested more than usual because this is the biggest test we will have this semester."

At this early point in the season, Johnson said the team looks very good and has exhibited a lot of "zing and pep."

"We are going to try to qualify some people for the National Collegiate Swimming Championships," Johnson said. "National standings come out soon, and we want to establish ourselves as a national caliber team."

With UNM and Wyoming coming down to a lower altitude than they are used to, Johnson said that factor should help those teams perform at a higher level.

ASU traveled down to Tucson and swam against U of A on Nov. 3 in a United States Swimming (U.S.S.) meet, but didn't perform as well as Johnson had expected.

"We didn't have a real good showing against the Wildcats in that meet," he said. "I hope to do better in this one."

Thus far, Brett Rose, Stuart Knowles and Chip Martoccia are all swimming well, Johnson said. He also praised Scott Hoffer, who could establish himself as a top-flight sprinter.

"Also rounding into form are Olympic medalists Neil Cochran, Andy Jameson and Paul Easter. They all took a month off from training after the Olympics to rest, and now are back with the team."

"Everything is anti-climactic after competing in the Olympics. They got a good psychological lift from that month off," Johnson said.

Johnson said he may be going out on a limb, but he said "this meet may provide the best swimming that could be seen anywhere nationwide this semester."

The Lady Devils travel to UNLV this weekend to compete in a meet featuring ASU, UNLV, Fresno State, BYU, Utah, Claremont and Cal-Santa Barbara.

"This meet will provide us with the opportunity to get a look at all our swimmers," ASU women's coach Bob Gillett said. "We don't usually get to take all our swimmers on the road."

Gillett said, however, the Devils are basically looking through this meet to next weekend when they travel to UCLA and USC.

"USC could be the surprise of national swimming this year," he said. "They are simply loaded."

Volleyball tourney draws many entries

By ANDREA HEISLER
Sports Writer

When entries closed for Saturday's Sun Devil Classic, Devil's Volleyball Club president David Cole said he was "overwhelmed by the response" and "had to turn people away."

Forty teams will be competing in the third annual volleyball tournament, which Cole said has a similar set-up to the one used by the intramural program.

"There are A and B divisions for both men and women," Cole said. "And because the volleyball community is small, there is peer pressure to play in the right group . . . A (division) being more difficult."

Cole said the Devil's Volleyball Club, which is sponsoring the tourney, will enter two teams, but the majority of the entrants are from the surrounding community and within the state, including one team from Safford.

The Devil's Volleyball Club is not considered a varsity team sport and has status similar to groups such as the water polo club.

"Recruitment would be next to impossible," Cole said, "as most of the outstanding athletes go to schools in California."

"I'd love to see men's volleyball become an ASU team sport, but in reality it will never happen."

"That's why the club is here for those who have the need to play volleyball . . . it's habit-forming."

The Sun Devil Classic will begin at 9 a.m. Saturday in P.E. Building East.

OUR SCHOLARSHIP COMES WITH COMMITMENT YOU'LL LIKE

It's pretty hard not to like an Army ROTC Scholarship. Just look at what it covers: full tuition, books, lab fees. Plus, it pays you up to $1,000 each school year it's in effect.

But what we think you'll like best about our scholarship is the commitment. Because it leads to a commission in the Army Nurse Corps (ANC) after graduation.

As an Army nurse, you'll belong to one of the largest, most comprehensive health care teams in the world. Training on state-of-the-art equipment. And using the latest techniques.

An Army nurse is an Army officer, too. So along with professional recognition, you'll also receive all the prestige, privileges and respect that go with being a leader in today's Army.

And don't forget, the Army Nurse Corps is part of a worldwide organization. Which means you'll have the opportunity to work in different cities around the country. And different countries around the world. Without losing seniority or benefits.

So make your commitment to nursing really pay off. Begin your future in the Army Nurse Corps. And that begins with Army ROTC.

For more information about scholarship opportunities, contact the Army ROTC Professor of Military Science on your campus.
