Rogers may coach Lions

ASU football coach Darryl Rogers may become head coach of the National Football League's Detroit Lions, according to several reports published Tuesday.

Reports come from sources as varied as the Phoenix Gazette and the Football News.

Rogers was in San Francisco and could not be reached for comment. The Lions would not confirm the reports.

The Sun Devil football team finished 5-6 in 1984, putting Rogers under fire. See story, Page 11.

Groups protest newspaper's editorial policy

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

Holding signs stating "MUZZLE MUNSIL," "STOP STATE OPRESSION," and "BOYCOTT STATE PRESS" while chanting "Don't pick it up!" about 60 people rallied outside Matthews Center Tuesday to protest the editorial policies of the State Press.

Kim Hunter, president of the Lesbian Gay Academic Union (LGAU), coordinated the rally, which he said included representatives from the LGAU, the Black Student Union and the feminist movement.

"It is the editorial policies of the State Press we're against," Hunter said. "We're looking for no direct attacks on women and lesbians and gays."

The boycott follows a Jan. 29 column by State Press Editor Len Munsil, criticizing the homosexual movement and announcing the newspaper's policy of excluding LGAU meeting announcements from "Collage," the newspaper's twice-a-week section announcing campus activities.

Munsil said he does not consider any group formed on the basis of sexual preference a legitimate campus organization worthy of free publicity.

Hunter said the main objective of the rally was to start a boycott of the student newspaper by readers and advertisers.

"This was to begin the boycott," he said. "We are going directly to the advertisers. Our objective is to see the State Press go under."

Munsil said the rally may actually benefit the newspaper. "I want to thank the LGAU for doing everything it can to enhance readership," he said.

Hunter said the boycott has started to affect the State Press in a variety of ways.

"People just aren't reading the State Press," Hunter said. "They are already feeling the effects."

He said some advertisers do not like the editorial policy of the paper.

Munsil, claiming readership is "better than ever," said the State Press has never lost an advertiser due to the opinion page.

Hunter said the editorial policies of the paper are the main point of contention, but he does not see the political tone of the paper as a problem.

"This is not a liberal or conservative issue," he said. Several students who watched the rally speculated on the impact it may have on the community.

Brian Tindell, a history major, said the State Press should have expected a protest.

"I guess it has been coming," he said. "But I don't think (the newspaper) is as biased as they think."

Tindell's brother Alan, an MBA graduate, said most students support the paper.

"The support for the State Press is there," he said. "It is from a silent majority."

Alan said the only complaint he has with the paper is that content is sometimes written "flippantly."

Psychology sophomore Eric Gutjahr said the rally will not diminish readership.

"It may not change readership, but it will make some people think," he said.

Gutjahr said the paper needs to "accommodate" everyone.

Munsil said stances taken on the opinion page do not influence the rest of the paper.

"Opinions have never entered into the news pages and never will as long as I am here," Munsil said.

Hunter said the groups that picketed Matthews Center are more interested in what appears on Page 4 than the news coverage.

Black Student Union President Victor Bryant said there were BSU representatives at the rally, but declined further comment.

Munsil said he was disappointed to hear of the BSU's involvement.

"We've given the Black Student Union plenty of fair coverage," he said. "We've been trying to expand our coverage of campus minority groups."

More rallies are planned, Hunter said, and the LGAU, along with other groups, are supporting the Campus Weekly, a new campus newspaper set to appear Thursday.

"We are hoping for a good, open newspaper," Hunter said.

Deadline today for student regent applications

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

After a 12-day delay by the Associated Students of ASU, an application deadline of 4:30 today is set for the Arizona Board of Regents student position, ASASU's director of state relations said Tuesday.

Dave Varnell said Gov. Bruce Babbitt had originally asked ASASU to submit the names of the three ASU candidates by Feb. 1.

The delay was necessary to allow applicants sufficient time to apply for the position, he said.

The position alternates among the three state universities each year.

It is currently held by U of A law student Paul Julien, whose term expires after the regents' April meeting.

Varnell, who is in charge of the preliminary selection process, said he could not estimate the number of applicants applying for the position.

"There will not be an overwhelming number of applications because of the job's requirements," Varnell said. "They need someone who is really willing to report the students' voice."

"The student regent must have a good working knowledge of university issues and policies and must be able to work (with) the three universities," Varnell said.

The applicants will go before a preliminary screening board where six to nine applicants will be selected, Varnell said.

A separate board selected by ASASU President Ray Burnell will narrow the number of candidates down to three. Babbitt will make the final decision, and the new student regent starts the job at the board's May meeting.

According to Vada Manager, a former ASU student regent, the position must be filled by a person who can relate to other students and represent all three universities.

"It takes a great deal of communication skills to articulate the issues to the regents and to the Legislature," Manager said.

Manager, who served on the board in 1982, is a contract administrator for the Arizona State Planning Department.

Leon Shell, ASU dean of student life, said the student regent must be up-to-date on all student issues.

"Even before (Manager) went to the first meeting, he had done two or three months of intensive review of the regents' processes," Shell said.

"It's a job that has to be taken very seriously," Shell said. "It's very time consuming and it places heavy demands on their time."

Manager said he attended several regents meetings before taking his position on the board.

He said although the student regent does not have the power to vote on issues, the position comes with a considerable amount of authority.

"It is taken very seriously (by the regents)," Manager said. "It is their only opportunity to hear the students' perspective."

The responsibilities of the student regent are not only limited to the meetings, he said.

Manager said regents are expected to attend many social functions in addition to the monthly meetings and legislative hearings.

"The responsibilities go beyond the two- and three-day board meetings," Manager said. "It's an extremely taxing, but very enriching job."

Babbitt says demos must change or be 'doomed' as minority party

KANSAS CITY, Mo. (AP) — Old-guard Democrats must be dislodged from power within the party or it will be doomed to a minority status in the next century, Gov. Bruce Babbitt said Tuesday.

"We seem stuck in a rut of looking to the future by looking toward the past," Babbitt told the editorial board of The Kansas City Star and The Kansas City Times. He said Democrats must sharpen their differences with Republicans.

The governor said old-line party members are convinced that national party failures have been caused by a poor message-bearer.

"Mine is not the prevailing view," he said, "but I contend our message is irrelevant."

Babbitt, 46, one of the leaders of the so-called "neo-liberal" wing of the party, was one of several Democratic governors and congressmen who tried to draft a new national party chairman who shared their views.

However, that effort failed during a December meeting in Kansas City, resulting in a confrontation within the party over who should set policy direction.

The governor, who is serving his second term, has been mentioned by political observers as a potential presidential candidate in 1988. He said he hoped to make a decision on his plans this summer.

Babbitt said his first choice in politics was to become a member of the U.S. Senate but instead became governor, a job he said he enjoys thoroughly.

Republican Sen. Barry Goldwater, Arizona's senior senator, plans to retire in 1986 and Babbitt said he might decide to run for that seat, although that would mean starting at the bottom of a new branch of government.

He also could run for a third term as governor in 1986 or forgo that and seek the Democratic nomination for president in 1988, the governor said.

Babbitt criticized President Reagan's 1986 budget proposals, saying the president is unfairly chopping billions of dollars from about 10 percent of the budget, but he said Democrats long have been perceived as big spenders.

"We have no credibility on the budget issue," Babbitt said.

Battleship training cruise to include show of strength off Nicaragua

WASHINGTON (AP) — The battleship Iowa has left Norfolk, Va., on a month-long training cruise that reportedly will include a "show-the-flag" mission off the coast of Nicaragua.

In a brief statement Tuesday, the Navy said Iowa, accompanied by the guided missile destroyer King, left Norfolk on Monday "for approximately one month of routine training operations in the Atlantic Ocean and Caribbean Sea areas."

The Navy refused to formally confirm the ships would spend some time off the coast of Central America during the training operation. But a high-ranking officer who agreed to discuss the matter if not identified said the vessels would likely arrive off the east coast of Nicaragua and Honduras "by the end of the week."

"They'll spend a few days there before moving on," he said.

The Iowa's appearance in the Caribbean will follow by one month a similar deployment of the aircraft carrier Nimitz. The Nimitz's appearance in the region was the first by a large Navy ship since last summer, when such high-visibility missions were reportedly suspended by the Reagan administration to defuse Central America as an election issue.

In addition to the naval missions, the United States has conducted several large land exercises in Honduras. Another such Army exercise, known as Big Pine III, is scheduled to begin next month.

The new deployment by the Iowa comes at a time when a small Soviet naval group is also in the area. The Soviet group, which includes a guided missile destroyer, two guided missile frigates, an oiler and a submarine, is in port in Cienfuegos, Cuba, after making a brief swing into the Gulf of Mexico last month, the Navy source said.

The Soviet group remains under American surveillance, but there is no indication when it will leave port, the source said.

Police arrest 42 Arizonans in 4-city drug bust

PHOENIX (AP) — State, federal and local law enforcement officers arrested 42 people Tuesday in an operation which they said would have a "significant" impact on illegal drug trafficking in the state.

Some 250 officers, divided into 43 teams, began making the arrests at 7 a.m. Those arrested were charged with conspiracy to distribute methamphetamine, commonly known as "speed."

U.S. Attorney Stephen McNamee said the arrests were made as officers served search warrants on homes in Tucson, Tempe, Scottsdale and Phoenix.

He said a total of 57 search warrants were issued and more arrests were expected.

During an afternoon news conference, officials declined to reveal details about the alleged drug conspiracy or the investigation that led to the arrests.

"We believe it will have a significant impact on the speed supply in Arizona," said Richard Johnson, head of the Phoenix office of the U.S. Drug Enforcement Administration.

Johnson said approximately 12 of those arrested were alleged members of the Dirty Dozen motorcycle gang, but would not confirm whether the drug operation centered around bikers' gangs.

The one person arrested in San Diego — Douglas Chester Schultz, 31 — was identified by Assistant U.S. Attorney Michael Lasater as president of the San Diego chapter of the Hells Angels motorcycle club.

ASASU welcomes Kissinger

By JOHN CONWAY
Staff Writer

Henry Kissinger will be speaking at Gammage Center on April 17, after a battle between the Associated Students of ASU Lecture Series and another interested group that wanted use of the facility on the same date, according to an ASASU spokesman.

Although Kissinger has not yet signed a contract, John Kelliher, ASASU Lecture Series director, said he expects the paperwork to be finalized within two weeks.

"Everything is set, all that we need to do is get the contracts signed," Kelliher said. "The contracts have to be signed by the agents and a couple of University officials."

Kelliher said he had been working to bring expenses and advertising.

Kissinger to ASU since December 1984.

"I've dealt with (Kissinger's) agents, and from the beginning, he expressed a lot of interest," Kelliher said.

Kissinger said he would come, but he would only be available on selective dates, which created the scheduling problem with Gammage, Kelliher said.

Kissinger was available on April 18, but Gammage was booked, so Kelliher began fighting for the evening of April 17 which was tentatively booked by another group.

Kelliher said he received a call late Tuesday afternoon from Gammage Business Office telling him, "We've got good news — you've got the date."

"We decided last semester to bring in someone of Kissinger's caliber. We've been lucky to get him."

"We decided last semester to bring in someone of Kissinger's caliber," James Norton, ASASU's activities vice president said. "We've been lucky to get him."

Kelliher said Kissinger could speak in the MU Arizona Room, which seats about 1,000 people, but it wouldn't be cost effective.

"Really, the only place to put him is Gammage," he said.

Initially, Kissinger's total bill will drain almost one-half of the ASASU Lecture Series's budget of approximately $55,000, Kelliher said.

The lecture will cost the University approximately $20,000, which will include Kissinger's honorarium (his speaking fee),

An expected revenue of $6,000 to $8,000 may be accumulated from ticket sales, and will be applied to the estimated $20,000 bill, Kelliher said.

After ticket sales and contributions from the ASU Centennial Commission, ASASU will spend approximately $11,000 to host the speaker, Kelliher said.

Considering the amount of money involved, a facility should be used that can seat as many people as possible, Kelliher said.

"The Lecture Series is a non-profit organization — it is a service organization," Kelliher said. "The main measure of a service organization is the number of people it serves."

SAGA contract renewal insures quality dining

Rosanne Dupras
Asst. City Editor

Well, I was all ready to rake some muck over the decision to extend SAGA's five-year exclusive $8-million contract for another two years.

But after reading through student surveys and reports, interviewing ASU and NAU officials, the Residence Hall Association (RHA), and Arizona Department of Health Services, it seems that SAGA is in for some congratulations.

The company has received its share of complaints during the 28 years it's been at ASU, but corrections have quickly followed, according to my research.

When health officials said dipping glasses into ice machines was hazardous, automatic ice machines were ordered and are now in most of the dining halls. In fact, recent health reports indicated SAGA had ratings of 88 and 92 on a 100-point scale. The ice machines were the only major complaints.

When Palo Verde East complained of bugs, SAGA had the area sprayed with insecticide. An RHA spokesman said the complaints have since ceased.

When Manzanita residents complained that the dishwasher had broken down, and questions were raised concerning the cleanliness of the dishes, the machine was promptly repaired.

When Sahuaro Hall complained of cold food, SAGA responded and took measures to remedy the problem.

One ASASU spokesman said there was a lack of student input in the decision to extend SAGA's contract, but RHA members disagree.

Each residence hall has a food committee made up of student representatives who are responsible for handling complaints. Anything that can't be solved on that level goes to the RHA Food Committee, which cooperates with SAGA to implement corrections.

If students are disgruntled about the food service, they must not be complaining loudly enough.

The three-person negotiation committee that evaluated the contract decided ASU would not go out for bids on a new food service company. The Food Service Selection Committee — made up of representatives from various segments of the University community — wasn't needed once that decision was made.

Prior to that, however, RHA endorsed the extension, according to Gary Prosper, assistant to Business Affairs Vice President Victor Zafra.

One section of SAGA's contract stipulates that there must be a student evaluation of the company's service. The 1983-84 results were quite favorable. Prosper said 1,050 students — roughly one-fourth of those who use the dining halls — rated the food operation 2.87 on a 4.0 scale.

Respondents gave exceptionally high ratings to SAGA personnel, indicating that they were friendly and helpful. Ratings for the overall quality of the food have gone up each year, from 2.30 during the 1981-82 academic year to 2.68 in 1983-84.

Approximately 3,100 students are required to eat in the dining halls. Another 2,000 have the option to use SAGA's meal plan, or eat elsewhere. Roughly 1,383 out of the 2,000 selected a meal plan in 1983-84. Obviously, if the food service was unsatisfactory, those who had the option of dining elsewhere would do so. But, for the most part, they haven't.

Maricopa Room sales increased from $71,500 to $112,700 from 1983 to 1984. Apparently, there are plenty of satisfied customers when it comes to SAGA's catering and concession stand services — complimentary letters continue to be received, Prosper said.

In a survey conducted at 11 universities with sizable food service accounts, it was learned that success was not determined by which company was employed, but the relationship the company had with the university community.

ASU may be SAGA's largest exclusive contract. Other universities have even sent administrators to take notes on SAGA's unconventional facilities in the MU.

Sam Wheeler, Northern Arizona University's counterpart to Gary Prosper, said after 20 years with SAGA, he had no complaints. But NAU went and looked for a new food service three years ago because it wanted the creativity SAGA displayed in its ASU facilities, but at a lower cost. So NAU opted for another company.

"We were very happy with SAGA," Wheeler said. "Your situation is more of a fast food service — it's super."

Wheeler said NAU was looking for "something different." Of course, ASU may have decided to extend the SAGA contract for reasons of convenience. After all, changing food service companies and planning a new parking garage simultaneously could equate to widespread Excedrin headaches for administrators.

David Markee, NAU vice president for Business Services, was the primary proponent of the switch. He said changing food service companies was a "huge, time-consuming" move.

"A lot of times, if the company is doing well, (the university) will extend the contract," Markee said.

Well, whatever the case was with ASU, one thing is evident: if SAGA wasn't doing a hot job, it would have been out a long time ago. Come on — it's been here since 1957!

As a former patron of The Club, I have nothing but pleasant memories to reflect upon. From the ladies who validated my ID card at the door to the friendly food servers, the SAGA workers were quite impressive. The hours were convenient, there was always plenty of fresh fruit and vegetables, and sack lunches were made to order when requested. Once, when I was sick, they even gave me several bottles of orange juice.

Complaining about the "lousy dorm food" is just a stale collegiate tradition practiced nationwide.

All I have to say is: hey, any food service company that gives you a virtually limitless supply of Captain Crunch can't be all that bad.

Congressmen likely bought bogus quote

Editor:

Concerning Fidel Castro's quote, "I am a Christian," in "Current Quotes" of the Jan. 28 U.S. News and World Report, those visiting U.S. Congressmen probably not only responded, "We believe you," but had Fidel hastened to add, "I am also a liar," they no doubt would then have replied, "We don't believe that, we think you are a very honorable man, and we will have our taxpayers help you keep your socialist paradise afloat so Moscow can be relieved of the burden."

Math department approach poor

Editor:

In a recent issue of the State Press, Professor Donald Stewart wondered why "everyone hits on math." As a student required to take a math course for my major, I wish to address that question.

To suggest that most students at ASU find math unappealing as a result of ridicule from teachers at the elementary school level is silly. Does it really seem possible that only math teachers subjected their students to destructive criticism? Clearly, there must be some other reason that non-math majors avoid math classes at this University.

It is not the subject matter that students find distasteful, but the approach of the department. The department seems to view math as a "pure and beautiful" formal system, instead of the useful tool that the rest of us find it to be.

One way the department shows this attitude is by forbidding calculators in the testing center. The department says the reason for this is because "Some people are so clever, they would write programs for their calculators that would make it easy to solve test questions." What is the point: that students get the right answers, or learn the beauty of math — unhindered by the artless silicone chips? A few years from now, nobody will care if I use longhand arithmetic or a calculator to solve real-life problems.

We have heard of computer geeks and engineering geeks. I suggest we christen a new category — one into which most of the math department and most math majors would fall — math geeks!

Why not Adam and Steve?

Editor:

In response to Johnny Saldana's letter (Feb. 1), I have but a few comments.

First of all, if Johnny is a Christian, he must wonder why God made Adam and Eve, not Adam and Steve. I am not extremely pious, but how can anyone say that the Bible condones homosexuality?

I'm sure Saldana and other hispanics don't cry prejudice when the Pell Grants get awarded. Discover that a white male whose family's income is less than a Hispanic's will be awarded a similar amount in grants. Everyone suffers some sort of prejudice, so John cannot place himself and other Hispanics alone on the chopping block.

Bible twisted to justify any argument

Editor:

I enjoy reading the columns and editorials regardless of their content or the personal feelings of the writer. That includes those of Mr. Munsil. Often I have been tempted to respond, and this time I will. As a person with an extremely private, personal form of Christianity, I want to say I find the use of Biblical Scriptures to try to prove a point to be annoying, and when used to condemn, denigrate, or scorn a person or group, I find it downright offensive.

A good argument could possibly be made that the Earth is flat using Biblical verse and thereby encourage the ridicule of astronomers for example. An absurd idea yes, but it has been done. Indeed just about anything can be substantiated using the Bible, and often the opposite point can be substantiated using some other verse or passage.

That is a trivial point, however. May I suggest that a column admonishing readers to spend a little of their beer money to aid starving, dying people in Africa, backed up with the use of Scripture, might be a more appropriate column than one which uses a Biblical verse to lend weight to a column which seems to express hatred for homosexuals. I know Mr. Munsil will say he doesn't hate anyone, and I will give him the benefit of the doubt in spite of some sizzling items implicitly and explicitly presented in last week's column. However, he must weigh what he says (writes) and its effects a little more carefully. Based on the column, I would be tempted to conclude Mr. Munsil is not a Christian at all, as I conceive of Christianity.

ASASU offers campus hotline for students

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

Imagine calling an ASU telephone number and finding out all you ever wanted to know about campus events.

By the end of this month, through an information office located at Associated Students of ASU, it will be possible to dial a campus "hotline" and do just that, the ASASU Activities Vice President said Tuesday.

"We originally campaigned on getting more information out to the students," James Norton said.

And this is exactly what the students will be able to do, with the implementation of the new office, Norton said.

"It is something departments and organizations can take advantage of to let students know about their events," Norton said.

The service will communicate a variety of information about events such as department lectures, the Neeb Hall film series and ASASU Senate meetings, Norton said.

He stressed the hotline would not just promote ASASU.

The idea has been around for some time, but its implementation was delayed until this academic year, he said.

The project is under the direction of ASASU

President Ray Burnell. In addition, two volunteers under the Campus Affairs and Activities vice presidents have been working with its coordinator, junior communications major Victoria Lion to set up the information office, Norton said.

Letters will be sent out to campus departments and organizations to inform them of the new service, Norton said.

Lion said the ASASU service has never been in operation at the University before.

"In the past, the students have had to take the initiative to find out what's going on (around campus)," Lion said.

Presently most students find out about events through their professors and advertising, Lion said.

Because of student diversity and limited time spent on campus, many students have difficulty finding out about events going on, she said.

"This (information system) will be a way of getting to all the students," Lion said.

Different clubs can take advantage of this free service being offered by ASASU, Norton said.

Norton hopes the information office will become permanent under ASASU and be incorporated into the budget, creating a salaried position for the information officer.

People will be able to call in and listen to a recording of the different events going on, Norton said.

Victoria Lion

With about 10 major events happening every week, students will be able to know ahead of time what is happening around campus and plan accordingly, Norton said.

Ad executive offers 'a few kind words'

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

The chairman of Needham Harper Worldwide, Inc. will be on campus today to address Valley business professionals on advertising techniques for the marketplace.

Keith Reinhard, a nationally-known advertiser, will speak at a luncheon in the MU Arizona Room with "A Few Kind Words About Advertising."

Reinhard will talk on the image of advertising, according to Terri Swartz, an ASU assistant professor of marketing.

Swartz said Reinhard is well-known around the country and has produced such notable advertising slogans as "Like a good neighbor," "State Farm is there" and "You deserve a break today at McDonalds."

Reinhard was elected chairman and chief executive officer of Needham Harper in September 1984 after serving a two-year term as president of Needham, Harper and Steers in Chicago.

He will speak to a variety of advertising and marketing executives from the Phoenix area as well as several ASU students in the College of Business Administration.

In addition to the luncheon, Reinhard will serve in the department of marketing as the executive-in-residence until Friday.

An executive-in-residence is a community executive who remains on campus for a number of days talking to students and faculty. Swartz said the main purpose of the executive-in-residence post is to blend the real world with the academic community.

Reinhard, who has addressed the Federal Trade Commission on "How Advertising Works," has also established noted advertising themes for Anheuser-Busch, Hubba Bubba Bubble Gum, Betty Crocker and promoted the famous talking butter tub from Kraft's Parkay Margarine.

Locally, he is a member of the National Advisory Council of the Heard Museum in Phoenix.

Swartz said Reinhard is a "strong advocate" for making advertising responsible to make a social contribution to the community.

The luncheon will begin at 11:45 a.m. with Reinhard's speech following at 1 p.m.

The lecture is sponsored by the ASU department of Marketing, the Phoenix American Marketing Association, the Phoenix Advertising Club and AD2 in Phoenix.

police report

An ASU student's car was stolen sometime between Sunday night and Monday afternoon, police said.

The red and white 1968 Chevrolet, had been parked in Lot A17 at the time of the incident.

Police said the student told them he bought the car for approximately $2,000 then made several improvements, including a new paint job.

The vehicle was valued at $4,500 and had been locked, but the steering wheel had been left unlocked. There are no suspects in the theft.

University Police reported the following incidents in the 48-hour period ending at 7 a.m. Tuesday:

- An unidentified caller left a message threatening to "blow up the school" and demanding uranium on a telephone recorder machine at the Radiation Protection Office, located at the McAllister Office Complex on McAllister Avenue and Tyler Street, police said. After searching the building, police determined the call was a hoax.

- Approximately $100 in coins was stolen from five newspaper stands sometime early Monday, police said. An employee from Phoenix Newspapers, Inc. reported the theft. The money was stolen from two stands south of the MU, two north of the MU and one north of Noble Science Library. Police said they do not know how the boxes were cut and there are no suspects.

- Four wire, snap-on wheel rims, valued at $75, were stolen from a woman's white 1979 Oldsmobile Cutlass Monday while it was parked in Lot 59.

- A 26-inch men's 10-speed Murray cruiser, valued at $74, was stolen from the bicycle racks at Manzanita Hall sometime between Sunday and Monday. The bicycle had been locked to the rack with a cable lock.

- A female resident of Cholla apartments reported receiving several obscene phone calls early Sunday from a man with an elderly voice. Police have no suspects.

- The fire alarm off of stage right at Gammage Center for the Performing Arts was activated Monday morning. Police determined that painters with power sprayers activated the alarm.

- An ASU student injured his right toe when he caught his foot on a cement bench while riding past it on his bicycle. The student was taken to the Student Health Center, where he was treated and released.

Students take part in variety of psychology experiments

By NICOLE MASSIE
Staff Writer

Each semester the ASU psychology department conducts about 100 different experiments, according to Donald Homa, associate professor of psychology.

Students enrolled in Psychology 100 are required to spend three hours involved in these experiments, Homa said.

The experiments are reviewed by a committee consisting of three to five members appointed by the chairman of the psychology department, said Norris Vestre, professor of psychology.

"The researchers write out a proposal telling the committee what they are going to do and what the subjects will be required to do," said Vestre.

The committee reviews the proposal and determines whether or not it involves any risk or danger, Vestre said.

"The experiments must meet regulations established by the Federal Government," he said.

Vestre said danger exists when using a harmful stimulus.

"Suppose an experiment uses a stimulus such as noise," Vestre said. "The noise must be below a certain decibel level and the duration should be short."

If the experiment seems appropriate, it is passed, Vestre said.

"No study has ever been done that has not been approved by the committee first," said Vestre.

According to Vestre, the researchers usually have a hypothesis before beginning experiments.

He said data is analyzed and results are shown that either support or disagree with the hypothesis.

"Rarely will an experiment be conducted that the researcher will not know what he is looking for," he said. "These are called exploratory experiments."

Such an experiment would use a questionnaire to see what the most frequent problems college freshmen face, he said.

"In this situation a survey would be handed out, but there would be no preconceived ideas concerning the possible results," he said.

Freshmen are used more often as subjects for psychology experiments because there are so many of them, Vestre said.

Professor Homa said the subjects involved know what the experiment is about and are never required to participate.

"There is no deception or need to conceal anything," Homa said. "No one is ever trapped; they know what they're in for."

Homa said the experiments conducted usually concern the way people think and reason.

"A common experiment relates to selective intentions," Homa said. "Can a person exert voluntary means to help them see?"

If proven, a person could activate a system and selectively see what they choose to visualize in either a beneficial or harmful light, Homa said.

Homa said students also answer questionnaires concerning any stressful events that they have experienced.

"This is a common experiment used every semester," Homa said. "Surveys cover a large percentage of the research."

Government presents graduate student with award

By DOUGLAS NEWMAN
Staff Writer

ASU graduate student Mary Kim Titla received the Gold Congressional Award Tuesday in Washington, D.C. for voluntary public service.

Titla, the daughter of Phillip and Charlotte Titla of the San Carlos Indian Reservation, was the first American Indian to receive the honor.

The Gold Congressional Award was established in 1979 for U.S. residents between 14 and 23 years of age. Nominations are based on the number of hours an individual has contributed during the last three years in the areas of voluntary public service, personal development and physical fitness.

The award was given to Titla in recognition of her work with the United National Indian Tribal Youth (UNITY), the National Congress of American Indians and the Pow Wow Committee of the San Carlos Indian Reservation.

Titla's involvement with UNITY began six years ago when she worked as a secretary and helped organize the group's annual conferences, including one held in Scottsdale this year.

She and her family have organized fund-raising basketball tournaments at the San Carlos reservation to help send reservation youths to UNITY's national conferences.

Titla said her desire to develop leadership qualities was one reason she became involved in UNITY and other organizations.

"I wanted to develop my leadership skills. I had participated in student government and similar organizations in high school," she said. "I wanted to become active on a state and national level to set an example for Indian youth nationwide."

Titla's work with NCAI began in 1981 when she won the Miss NCAI National Pageant in Anchorage, Alaska. In the following years she has worked for the pageant committee and recently accompanied the current Miss NCAI to Washington, D.C. for the inaugural festivities.

For the past three years Titla has been co-chairman of the San Carlos Pow Wow Committee which raises funds for the reservation's annual pow wow.

The pow wow has an average attendance of about 5,000 people, including Indians from other states.

Recently Titla was elected to the board of directors of the National Indian Education Association (NIEA).

Titla, 24, holds a bachelor's degree in journalism from the University of Oklahoma and is a graduate research assistant for the ASU Center for Indian Education where she is researching the portrayal of American Indians in newspapers for her master's thesis.

As an undergraduate at the University of Oklahoma, Titla served as the minority affairs editor for the university's newspaper.

Titla said she has no definite plans for the future, but wants to continue to work with Indians on the reservation.

"I'm unsure of my definite goals, but I do plan to return to the reservation and work with Indian people," she said.

Titla said she was "not acting selfishly" by taking an active role in Indian affairs.

"Any Indian person that has achieved educational and professional success has been a role model," Titla said. "I want to be successful so that I can show other Indian youths that they too can be achievers."

Department store grants $2,000 to marketing department

By CARRIL MITCHELL
Staff Writer

The ASU department of marketing was given a $2,000 grant Tuesday from the May Department Stores Company which will be used to fund scholarships and faculty research, said the ASU department chairman.

Bruce Walker said the grant will be divided, with half going toward scholarships and the other half used for a jointly developed research project.

"This is an attempt to demonstrate a commitment to support the Business College at ASU," said Duane Bricher, senior vice president of operations for May D & F, a subsidiary of the May Department Stores Company.

Ken Evans, an ASU professor of marketing, will conduct the research project and spend five weeks this summer with May D & F in Denver.

Evans said the project will deal with the target market of the company and is designed to enable him to return to ASU and use his experiences to better teach students.

Walker said the project will benefit both May D & F and Evans because he will return to the University better equipped to teach.

"It's important to students," Walker said. "It strengthens ties with businesses."

Representatives of May D & F gave seven presentations to various classes at ASU. In the presentations they presented diverse ideas on marketing strategies and issues.

"The students gain insight (through presentations) and hopefully will be able to gain jobs in the company," Walker said.

May D & F representatives have been recruiting graduates from ASU for 10 years and estimate they have recruited 50 people during the past five years.

Jac Reiter, manager of recruitment and training for May D & F, said the company wants students who exhibit a record of achievement which includes a good grade point average, extra-curricular activities and work experience.

Representatives from the company will return to ASU in February to recruit graduates for their company.

Declining enrollment brings school mergers

By the College Press Service

Barrington, R.I. — "It's ok if it's treated like a merger instead of an absorption," said Greg Maxwell, a Barrington College student who is being transferred with mixed emotions to Gordon College, some 60 miles away in Wenham, Mass.

Barrington announced last month that it was merging with Gordon to help survive tough times ahead.

Maxwell said he hopes to scrape up enough credits to graduate in time to avoid the September mass transfer.

Some 280 students had to transfer, faculty members had to dig for new jobs and creditors had to be stalled when tiny Nasson College went out of business in May 1983.

The scene is being repeated almost weekly these days. Colleges are closing or merging with each other at an accelerating rate as signs accumulate that the long-awaited nationwide enrollment decline has begun this fall, and campuses literally begin to run out of students.

Women's Studies explore societal roles of females

By MELISSA SMYTH
Staff Writer

The ASU Women's Studies Program and the office of Student Life are sponsoring an afternoon of lecturers and panelists Thursday which will explore women's relationships and roles in society.

The series of programs, titled "Women: Our Roles and Relationships Explored" will begin with a panel discussion Thursday at 1 p.m. in the MU Coconino Room.

A second workshop, "The Development of Women Across the Lifespan" will be held in the MU Turquoise Room at 3:15.

Dr. Lillian B. Rubin, sociologist and author of "Intimate Strangers: Men and Women Together," will highlight the day's activities at 7 p.m. with a lecture in Payne Hall.

According to Lenna Nieboer-Erickson, one of three women planning the events, Rubin will speak on traditional male and female roles, cultural influences which she says have shaped those roles and the changes in intimate relationships as male and female roles evolve.

She will be speaking on how difficult it is to sustain intimacy, and some of the social factors involved, said Nieboer-Erickson.

"She's tackled some fairly common areas of American life, and is a very sensitive interviewer and writer," she said.

According to Nieboer-Erickson, Rubin has developed some innovative concepts about women during her career as a sociologist, lecturer and writer.

For example, her 1981 book titled "Women of a Certain Age: The Midlife Search for Self," asserted that women who find themselves alone after their children have left home do not necessarily long for their return, she said.

"It's not that they miss the children, it's that they have the rest of their lives ahead of them," she said. "Women don't know what to do with the rest of their lives — they've never had to make those kinds of decisions before," she said.

The first panel discussion in the series will focus on three aspects of women's relationships: "Women Working with Women," "Women and Their Friends," and "Mothers and Daughters."

Carolyn Desjardins, Rio Salado Community College counselor, will lead the second workshop, which is titled

"Changes in Women's Roles and Expectations Across Their Life Span."

The workshop will focus on what women experience as they get older, Nieboer-Erickson said.

"It's a look at adult development," she said. "You know the old theory that once you become 18 you were, quote, an adult and that was it. There are very definite stages in an adult's life."

Thursday's most notable speaker will be Ginger Hutton, an Arizona Republic columnist, said Nieboer-Erickson.

Hutton said material for her workshop will draw on personal experience.

"One of the things I wanted to talk about was whether a friendship could survive betrayal," she said.

Hutton said that after a friend's betrayal, she realized several things about relationships which she will try to convey Thursday.

"It made me realize that friends, like everyone else, are human," she said. "A friend can't always be there when you want him to. Sometimes the high standards that were set kind of set us up for a fall."

Holocaust research surprises rabbi

By JONATHAN HIGUERA
Staff Writer

Holocaust victims fervently joining in songs affirming their faith as they passed into death may be what Rabbi Daniel Landes pictured he would find in his research, but that was not the case.

"I was carrying around a middle-class image of what I hoped to find," Landes said. "What you were more likely to find was a starving, beaten mother holding her child and muttering a prayer as she entered the gas chamber."

Landes, who will be lecturing at 7 p.m. Friday in the MU Cochise Room, is the co-editor and a major contributor of the book, "Genocide: Critical Issues of the Holocaust."

Landes will also be screening the 1983 Academy Award winning documentary "Genocide," and said research for the book focused on the spiritual response of Holocaust victims and survivors.

"What I found was a great deal of spiritual response," he said. "But the ritual forms and rites were broken as were the people."

Landes is the founding faculty member of Yeshiva University and the Simon Wiesenthal Center in Los Angeles.

He said his research was the result of more than 300 interviews with concentration camp survivors and "anecdotal stories I've been hearing all my life."

Landes said he was able to reconstruct circumstances of the Holocaust through memoirs, letters and diaries.

Landes said he will be speaking on the state of human affairs during and after the Holocaust.

"We're talking about a tragedy in the heart of Western culture, not in some faraway jungle," he said. "We all have the potential to be spectators, perpetrators or victims."

"It's the spectators that worry me the most," he said.

Landes said Jewish people are still suffering from the impact of the Holocaust.

"We no longer have the great pool of fertile minds and creativity that we had in European Judaism," he said. "And I don't know if we can regain it."

Landes also addressed issues facing American Jewry and said most problems are identical to ones that all Americans face.

"We are currently researching parallels between the Holocaust and a possible nuclear holocaust," he said.

Landes said the rise of anti-semitism propagated by the Soviet Union and some Middle East countries are significant problems facing the Jewish community.

ASU sponsors workshops for older students

To make the transition of returning to school easier, the ASU Office of Student Life will offer a series of 11 workshops and seminars in order to enhance the academic skills of the returning student.

The workshops can be taken individually or in sequence, and are as follows:

- Reading Skills — at 9:30 a.m. Saturday.
- Note Taking — at 1 p.m. Tuesday.
- Writing Skills — at 9:30 a.m. Feb. 16.
- Library Usage — at 3 p.m. Feb. 20.
- Organizing Your Life — at 7 p.m. Feb. 25.
- Test Taking — at 2 p.m. Feb. 27.
- Writing Skills Part Two — at 1 p.m. March 19.
- Careers in Sales — at 1 p.m. March 19.
- Careers in Education — at 9:30 a.m. March 30.
- Careers in Science — at 2 p.m. April 15.
- Careers in International Business — at 7 p.m. April 25.

Each two-hour workshop is open to the public and has a $2 registration fee.

Rogers may leave ASU

By TOM BLODGETT

Reports published Tuesday stated ASU football coach Darryl Rogers will go to Detroit to coach the National Football League's Lions next season.

Neither Rogers, who was recruiting in San Francisco just one week prior to national letter-of-intent day, nor the NFL club would confirm Rogers was going to take the position, which opened up following the firing of Monte Clark two days after the end of the regular season.

Lions' spokesman Brian Muir, who worked with Rogers when he coached Michigan State, told The Associated Press he had not heard Rogers' name in discussions of candidates for the position.

Muir said any word on Rogers' hiring would have to come from Detroit General Manager Russ Thomas.

According to ASU Deputy Athletic Director Frank Sackton, the reports originally came from Monday evening editions of the Los Angeles Herald-Examiner. Other reports have been published in the Football News and Tuesday's Phoenix Gazette.

The reports came as a surprise to the ASU athletic department.

"We've been scrambling," Sackton said Tuesday evening. "We are still without information."

ASU Athletic Director Dick Tamburo was driving back from San Diego Tuesday, according to Sackton.

The football office also was caught off-guard by the reports. One assistant coach, Don Clemons, said he was unaware of any move by Rogers.

Rogers' secretary told Sackton the coach was due back from San Francisco.

However, other reports said he was flying from San Francisco to Detroit and one said he arrived in Phoenix Tuesday evening from Detroit.

Rumors already have started to circulate about a possible successor to Rogers.

The most frequent rumor was that Dan Devine, Sun Angel Foundation executive director, would accept the position as coach.

Devine, who has coached at ASU, Notre Dame and with the NFL's Green Bay Packers, denied the rumors, but stopped short of ruling out the possibility.

"I leave the door cracked, so small you almost can't even see it, that in the event that sometime during the selection process, it was decided it would be best to go with someone in the short term, say six to eight months, I would think about it," Devine said.

A State Press source said the leading candidates for the job were Harvey Hyde of Nevada-Las Vegas, Dick Crum of North Carolina and Moe Forte — a former ASU assistant — now at North Carolina A & T.

As with any state employee, Rogers is on a one-year contract. According to Sackton, the contract expires with the end of the fiscal year, June 30. Rogers would not need to sign another contract until June.

ESPN reported Tuesday night that the Sun Angel Foundation gave the Lions permission to talk to Rogers. That was denied by Devine.

"There's nothing behind that," Devine said. "We would have nothing to do with that. That goes through the athletic department. There's no other way."

Sackton said that to the best of his knowledge, the Lions did not seek permission to speak with Rogers.

ASU, Lubbock split doubleheader

By DEAN OBENAUER
Sports Writer

Armed with the news that teammate Doug Henry had been reinstated by the NCAA Tuesday, the Sun Devil baseball team split a doubleheader with Lubbock Christian at Packard Stadium.

The Devils won the first game, 7-2, but lost the nightcap 8-4. Henry had been declared ineligible for the first 17 games of the 1985 season because of violations in his work-study program along with four other Sun Devils. Coach Jim Brock asked the NCAA to re-evaluate Henry's case last week and the reinstatement was announced before the game Tuesday.

The Devils, without the five ineligible players, had lost two straight getting off to one of their worst starts ever before bouncing back in the first half of the twin bill behind the arm of Mike Thorpe (2-0).

For the fourth straight time this season, right fielder Mike Devereaux started the Devils' first inning with a hit, this time a single. Barry Bonds then moved Devereaux to second on a single of his own. On the next pitch Devereaux stole third and then scored on a wild pitch by Lubbock pitcher Travis Walden while Bonds took second.

Catcher Don Wakamatsu then singled, scoring Bonds for ASU's second run of the game. Wakamatsu stole his first base of the season and then took third on a wild throw into center field. Third baseman Drew Siler hit a shot scoring Wakamatsu to end the Sun Devil rally at 3-0.

The Chapparals got their only two runs of the game in the top of the second inning. Sonny Collins walked and then was moved to second on a single by Javier Moreno. Randy Velarde then hit a sharp ground ball to Rick Morris who threw the ball away only to have Wakamatsu field the ball and throw the ball away again down the third base line scoring Collins and Moreno.

In the bottom of the second inning, Devereaux once again started the bats going as he hit his third home run of the season scoring Bryan Beals who had walked to open the inning.

Starting Sun Devil pitcher Bill Dodd was relieved by Thorpe in the top of the third. Dodd gave up three hits and two runs while striking out four in the two innings he pitched. Thorpe went on to give up only two hits in five innings.

The Devils did not score until the fourth when Keith Bennett stole second after getting on base. Bennett then scored on a triple by Beals to put the Devils up 6-2.

ASU went on to add insult to injury in the sixth inning when Beals walked, stole second and then scored on a Rick Morris single for the game's final run.

In the second game, the Devils again jumped out to a first-inning lead when Morris walked and Bonds cranked his second home run of the year over the right field wall to give ASU a 2-0 advantage.

The score held until the top of the fourth when Lubbock touched ASU starter Kurt Dempster for four runs. With one out, Steve Coleman and Wayne Williams singled and Kerry Richardson homered to give Lubbock the lead.

The next batter, Marron, also found the cheap seats for his first home run of the season, giving the Chapparals a 4-2 lead and chasing Dempster.

Lubbock picked up three more runs in the fifth when Kendall Walling singled, Williams doubled and Richardson crushed his second home run in as many innings to give the Chapparals a 7-2 pad.

Meanwhile, Dodd plowed through the Devil lineup until Keith Bennett broke the spell with a home run to inch ASU one closer.

But Lubbock picked up some insurance in the seventh inning when Williams and Richardson singled, the third hit of the game for each. After Marron singled to load the bases, Rector walked Moreno to force in the final Chapparral run.

ASU scored one run in the bottom of the inning, but could come no closer.

Wildcats, Mustangs will hook up in '85

TUCSON, Ariz. (AP) — The University of Arizona said Tuesday it has been able to schedule a non-conference home football game for Oct. 5 against powerful Southern Methodist University. Arizona was contacted in early December by the Southwest Conference school, which had only 10 games on its 1985 schedule after a cancellation by North Texas State and asked about a game at Arizona Stadium, officials here said.

Baxter shines for lady swimmers in California meet

By STEVE RICHMAN
Sports Writer

The ASU women's swim team finished third out of three teams in last weekend's Sun Belt Classic held at UCLA. SMU finished first, followed by UCLA and ASU.

SMU tallied 110 points, with UCLA gaining 106.5 and ASU capturing 85.5.

The meet encompassed two days of competition with a total of three sessions. All championship events were included with each swimmer competing in three events each day. Each team consisted of 10 swimmers.

Despite finishing third in the meet, ASU coach Bob Gillett said he was not overly disappointed with the Lady Devils' effort.

"We swam good individually," Gillett said. "But our relay teams have been our big problem all year, and both SMU and UCLA really got us in the relays."

One bright spot in the relay department was ASU's 200 medley relay team of Stephanie Lister, Terri Baxter, Amy Reed and Beda Leirvaag.

Their time of 1:47.70 was good enough to qualify them for the NCAA championships to be held in Alabama later next month.

"I am really pleased with that time," Gillett said.

In regard to the individual efforts, Gillett said he was pleased with the performances of Baxter, Carolyn Mills, Lister and Leirvaag.

Baxter won both the 100- and 200-yard breaststroke events. Despite having already qualified for nationals in the 200-yard breaststroke — the qualifying time is 2:21.39

— Gillett said he was very happy with her time of 2:18.94.

"I am really pleased with her effort," Gillett said.

Gillett said he had high hopes for Mills in the 100-yard freestyle and now she is beginning to meet his expectations.

"She is really coming on now," he said. "She's now starting to do the job."

Earlier in the season Gillett had said that Mills, a freshman from Washington, could be the surprise of college swimming.

Lister finished second in both the 100- and 200-yard backstroke races.

Leirvaag's time of 4:26.2 in the 400-yard individual medley was only .1 from the national qualifying time of 4:26.19. Gillett said she should qualify at the WCAA conference meet in early March.

With ASU traveling to Tucson this Saturday to lock horns with the Wildcats, Gillett said he is pleased with the progress the Lady Devils have made so far this season.

"We are swimming as well as I thought we should at this point in the season," he said. "Our relays are a big problem, but our depth is definitely our strong point."

"Our relays haven't come together yet. We can't seem to get a good combination going. We have actually improved from last year in our relays. We finished 15th at nationals last year without scoring a point in any of the relays. We will need to qualify enough individuals to score points in the consolation championships to get attention at the national level. We will need to score points with our depth," Gillett said.

Doug Flutie's $7 million contract with the New Jersey Generals of the United States Football League is not the richest in sports history, although it may make him the highest-paid athlete per hour over the course of a regular season.

Flutie, who signed for five years, will make a reported $1.4 million per season. If you figure the Generals play 18 regular-season games and estimate that each game will take about three hours to play, it works out to about $25,926 per hour.

Those mathematics do not take into account practice time, including those brutal twice-daily workouts, and the hours of studying playbooks.

Still, based on that unscientific formula and other reported salaries, Flutie's $25,926 hourly wage is higher than that of Dave Winfield, Larry Bird, Wayne Gretzky and other top-paid athletes.

Football players, because their actual playing time in the regular season is much lower than in other sports, have the greatest hourly wages during a full year.

Walter Payton, reportedly the National Football League's highest-paid player at about $1 million per year, would make $20,833 per hour for his 16 games with the Chicago Bears.

Basketball players, playing 82 games that average 2½ hours apiece, are next on the hourly scale.

Moses Malone of the Philadelphia 76ers, the highest-paid National Basketball Association player, gets about $10,732 per hour. That's based on a salary estimated at $2.2 million per year.

Baseball players, who get some of the richest contracts in sports, have lower hourly wages. That's because they are playing 405 hours (162 games at 2½ hours apiece) — nearly twice that of basketball and hockey players and almost eight times the amount spent by football players.

Winfield, of the New York Yankees, and George Foster of the New York Mets, are the two highest-paid baseball players, each around the $2 million-a-year mark. That works out to $4,938 an hour.

Flutie's hefty pact is highest per hour

Redmen remain No. 1 after win

By The Associated Press

St. John's, which puts its 13-game winning streak on the line Saturday in a Big East Conference road game against Villanova, remained No. 1 for the second straight week in The Associated Press college basketball poll announced Tuesday.

The 18-1 Redmen, who had to come from 14 points down to beat Seton Hall 87-76 Monday night, attracted 60 of 62 first-place votes and 1,238 points from the nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters.

Last week St. John's beat Providence 77-60 and Connecticut 97-64 and is one of four Big East teams in the Top 20. Three of those, St. John's, Georgetown and Syracuse, are in the top six.

Georgetown stayed No. 2, Memphis State No. 3 and Southern Methodist No. 4.

The Hoyas, 19-2, who held the top spot in the preseason poll and the first nine regular-season polls before losing two straight, landed one first-place vote and 1,153 points. Memphis State, 17-1, received the remaining No. 1 vote and 1,126 points, 93 ahead of Southern Methodist, 18-2.

Duke, fourth last week, moved up a notch with 909 points. Syracuse, the only team besides St. John's to beat Georgetown, advanced from No. 9 to sixth with 899 points, while Oklahoma remained No. 7 with 855.

Michigan (769 points) was eighth followed by Illinois (748) and Georgia Tech (704) to complete the Top Ten.

Nevada-Las Vegas, boasting a 16-game winning streak, the longest winning streak in Division I, leaped from No. 16 to head the Second Ten.

Iowa, Kansas, Louisiana Tech, North Carolina, Oregon State, Tulsa, DePaul, Villanova and Maryland round out the Top Twenty.

Iowa, 18-4, is the only newcomer to the poll this week after registering road victories over Big Ten Conference rivals Indiana and Ohio State.

Alabama-Birmingham, 19-5, which rejoined the Top Twenty last week after a six-week absence, dropped out after losing to Old Dominion and defeating South Alabama by one point in overtime.

The Atlantic Coast Conference is the only other league with four representatives — Duke, Georgia Tech, North Carolina and Maryland.

State Press Sun Devil Athletes of the Week

Mike Devereaux

ASU outfielder Mike Devereaux has been named the State Press Sun Devil male Athlete of the Week for his performances against Cal-Santa Barbara.

Devereaux hit a home run in his first at-bat against the Gauchos on both Thursday and Friday. He also stroked four doubles on Thursday and his batting average is well above .500.

Others nominated for the award include basketball player Ron Singleton, who scored 16 second-half points in the Devils' loss to Washington on Saturday, and tennis player Brien Sullivan.

Terri Baxter

Swimmer Terri Baxter has been named the State Press Sun Devil female Athlete of the Week for her performance in last weekend's Sun Belt Classic.

Baxter won both the 100- and 200-yard breast strokes at the tournament, held in Los Angeles. She was also a member of the 200-yard medley relay, which met the NCAA qualifying standard.

Others nominated for the award include basketball player Jodi Rathbun, who scored 30 points in two games, and gymnast Becky Rashoff.

Boston College, BYU set for '85 Kickoff Classic

EAST RUTHERFORD, N.J. (AP) — Brigham Young University, with little left to prove in the wake of its first national championship, will play in the third annual Kickoff Classic against Boston College, which must prove it can compete with the elite of major-college football without quarterback Doug Flutie.

The BYU-B.C. pairing is set to kick off the next college football season at 76,000-seat Giants Stadium on Aug. 29. It features not only the two highest-ranked teams possible but also two of the most potent offenses in the country.

"I don't think this team next year has to do anything to prove what we got last year," BYU Coach LaVell Edwards said Tuesday at a news conference officially announcing the matchup. "As far as I'm concerned, last year is over."

Where BYU is at right now, to the dismay of the critics who rapped its supposedly soft 1984 schedule, is on top. The Cougars' 24-17 Holiday Bowl triumph over Michigan made them only the second major-college team in the past 80 years to post a 13-0 record; their 24-game winning streak is the longest in the nation.

"I suspect a lot of people around the country, and particularly those in the East, thought all Brigham Young did was throw the ball and play two-hand touch below the belt," Edwards said. "But we did play decent defense, we had a great kicking game and a pretty good running game."

Edwards, who has a 118-37-1 record in 13 seasons, calls BYU "a new entity" in the world of big-time football.

Boston College's Eagles have now played in three consecutive bowls — a school record — and finished with a 10-2 season.
