Regents OK land addition to camp

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

The Arizona Board of Regents has approved $382,000 for the purchase of 30 acres of land adjacent to Camp Tonotona.

According to ASU President J. Russell Nelson, the University is working on a schedule for construction of the sight.

Victor Zafra, ASU vice president for business affairs, said ASU administrators will meet next month to work out final plans for the expansion of the camp, located northeast of Phoenix near Payson. He said a road leading to the adjacent property will be constructed next year.

"Our commitment and our agreement with the Forest Service is that we won't disturb the animal life . . . and we won't disturb the geology in the area," Zafra said.

In its Friday meeting in the MU, the board also authorized ASU to establish a Hispanic Research Center at the University.

The center will be open this fall as a division of the College of Liberal Arts.

The center will work with U of A's research center to promote research related to people of Hispanic or Mexican-American heritage, according to a report issued by Odus Elloit, associate director of academic programs for the board.

"I have great hopes for the Hispanic Research Center," Regent Esther Capin said. "I am personally happy to see support for Hispanic education."

Two advisory committees will be appointed to assist the center, the report said.

The first committee will consist of ASU faculty, staff and administrators, who have special interests in Hispanic issues. The second committee will consist of individuals from the general public representing business, science, government and the arts.

The regents approved a $116,685 first-year operating budget for the center.

In other matters, the board delayed action on a general lease policy for Sun Devil Stadium and postponed any decisions until its April meeting.

The lease policy was scheduled for discussion during the board's March meeting, but was removed from the agenda due to a lack of information.

According to Regent Jack Pfister, the revised lease would allow any sports team wishing to use the stadium access to the facility.

Pfister said the board has not taken any action on the matter because, "no one wants to do that right now."

"When we are not under pressure is the best time to go ahead in developing a plan," Pfister said.

Board President Donald Pitt told the State Press in March that University officials would be given as much time as needed to develop a lease.

The regents also received a statement concerning the proposed cuts in financial aid issued by student regent Paul Julien.

According to Julien, the proposed cuts would limit students' access to universities.

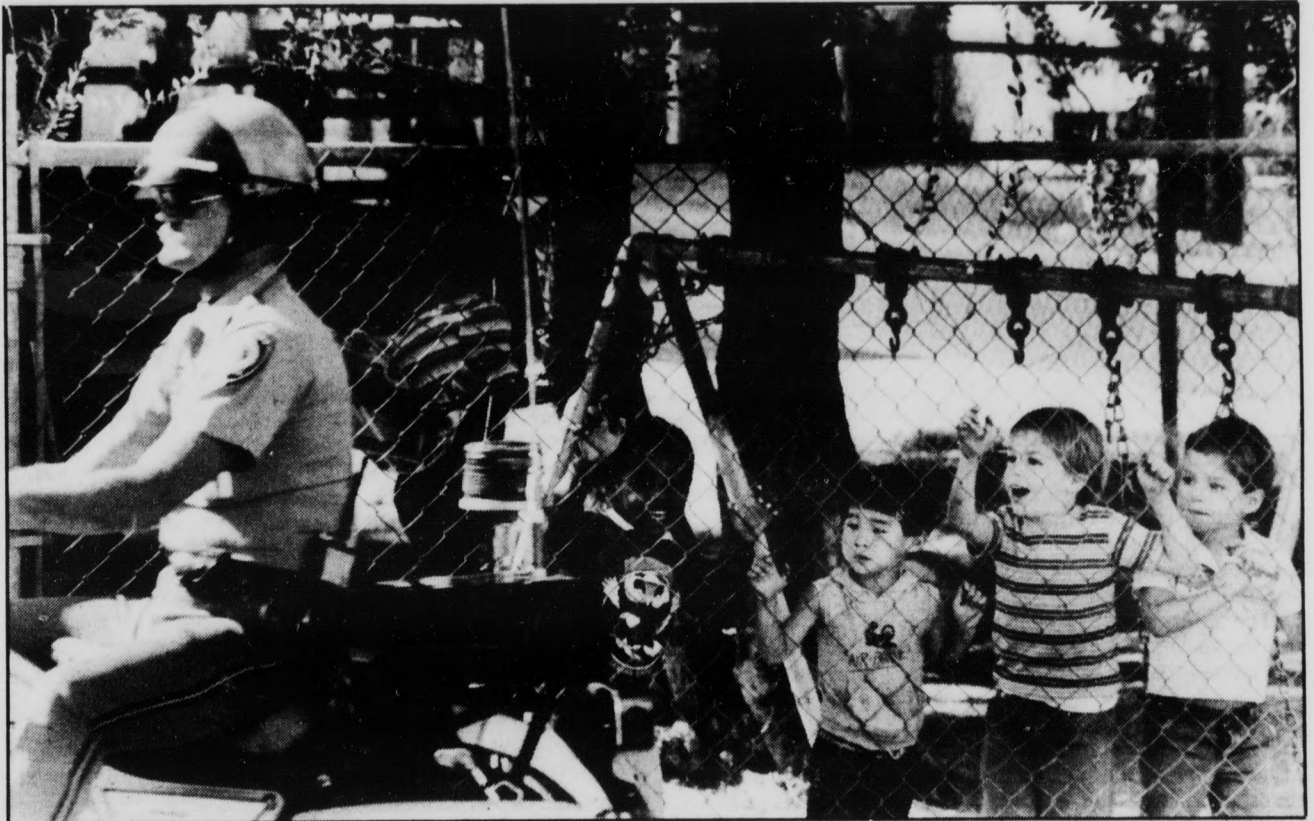

"Students will be forced to attend school in their home town without the opportunity to select an institution which provides programs more suitable to their interest or ability," Julien said.

He said limiting financial aid will force students to borrow money from less affordable sources and the proposed cuts will increase graduate debts.

"Students should not be required to bear the burden of increased debt and limited access to higher education," Julien said.

"The proposed cuts in government-supported financial aid to students must be opposed," he said.

Pfister said, "I would encourage the student governments in Arizona to get together a brief memorandum citing some statistics and get that off to (U.S. congressmen in Washington), because that is where the battle is really going to be fought."

Management test investigated

Chairman looks at validity, fairness

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

An investigation into the validity and fairness of a recent management test has begun after nearly 200 students signed a petition alleging the test was poorly constructed.

Bill Ruck, acting chairman of the management department, said he is reviewing the test and class scores.

"Right now, I am going through the statistics from the test," he said.

Ruck said he has seen the petitions and has begun an investigation to see if the test is unfair or invalid.

Appropriate action will be taken once the results of the investigation are complete, he said.

"If there is an overall adjustment that is necessary, we will make it," Ruck said.

He said, however, that each individual test cannot be adjusted and the grades will be reviewed at the end of the semester.

"You can never tell before an exam how it will turn out," he said. "It may turn out to have a lower average or it may have a higher one."

"I see no real problem," he said. "I think the only problem might be that it is a large class."

Nearly 1,000 students are enrolled in the three sections of Management 301.

Marketing junior Dan Jentzsch said last week that he wrote the petition and gathered about 180 signatures from students in his class because he thought test was poorly written and ambiguous.

The petitions were not circulated in the other two sections of the class.

Ruck said the petition may not be representative of how all students in the sections view the exam.

"It is not the entire class who is complaining, it is just some students," he said, adding that it may be a problem verifying the students' signatures and identification numbers.

The test is standardized for all sections of the management class, but there are several versions of the same test for academic reasons, Ruck said.

"It is done in several different versions to avoid the problem of cheating," he said.

Jentzsch said the grading scale is somewhat higher than most classes and the test was difficult.

According to the class syllabus, students must receive a 92 percent in order to get an 'A.'

The grading scale is not set by the department, but by each instructor, Ruck said.

He said if the overall average of the class is significantly lower than normal, the scores may be curved, but added that some students may have signed the petition only because they did not do as well as they expected.

"There will always be students who will complain because of a low grade," he said.

Ruck said he hopes to have the matter settled soon.

ASU class finds human bones on trip

By KIM SERTICH
Assistant City Editor

Students in an ASU botany class discovered the remains of a human skeleton Saturday during a desert field trip.

Professor Donald Pinkava's Arizona Flora class discovered the skeleton east of the intersection of Scottsdale and Jomax roads. The skeleton is being studied by the Maricopa County medical examiner's office to determine the cause of death.

"Once we realized what it was we left the area, Pinkava said.

"There was no question it was human," he said. "It was free of flesh, for the most part."

According to Det. Don Keenom of the Scottsdale Police Department, one of the students in the class first spotted the skull and several other remains were discovered in the area.

Keenom said the student picked up the skull, but was told by the instructor to put it down where it had been found. He said Pinkava then notified Scottsdale Police.

"We went to search the area and found other skeletal remains," he said. "They were strewn around."

Keenom said the remains probably were scattered by coyotes.

"Coyotes will sometimes uncover something that is buried," he said. "This appears to just have been on the ground. We have no indication anything was buried."

According to Gary Marschner, community relations officer for Scottsdale Police, coyotes and rodents will eat bones for calcium.

"That is what usually causes bones to be scattered about," he said.

Keenom said leg and rib bones, a skull and vertebrae were found. There was not a full skeleton.

According to Marschner, the skeleton is the remains of a 5-foot-5 white female in her 20s or 30s.

He said several articles of clothing were found near the remains, including a sweater with a heavy key pinned to it and a small copper piece of jewelry.

Keenom said the department will be looking into the possibility of what happened, but they must wait for the medical examiner's report.

"It is a long, drawn-out process, but we will find the victim," Marschner said.

Keenom said the remains have been in the area for at least a year.

Pinkava said the class was on the field trip to observe desert plants, and was on its second stop of the morning when the remains were discovered.

He said the field trip ended there because the class had to wait for authorities to arrive.

"Some of the students were shocked," he said. "I certainly was surprised."

Pinkava said most of the approximately 40 students on the trip got a glimpse of the remains.

Study group says military pensions benefit few, encourage retirement

WASHINGTON (AP) — Military pensions, criticized by budget director David Stockman, generously benefit only a small, affluent group and actually work against defense readiness by encouraging skilled personnel to retire early, a study group said Monday.

The observation was contained in "The Military Payoff," a report issued by the Center for Budget and Policy Priorities, an organization which specializes in analyzing federal benefit programs and military spending.

"The military retirement system, with an annual cost larger than food stamps, Aid to Families with Dependent Children and Supplemental Security Income, provides high levels of benefits to a small and largely affluent segment of society," the center said.

"The military retirement program, as now constituted, also works counter to our nation's defense readiness needs. It encourages the armed forces' most skilled personnel to retire at a young age when they are just reaching the peak of their careers."

"The institutional forces in the military are more concerned about protecting their retirement benefits than they are about protecting the security of the American people," Stockman said. "When push comes to shove, they'll give up on security before they'll give up on retirement."

Iraqi planes bomb civilian targets, nuclear plant in Iran; 11 killed

NICOSIA, Cyprus (AP) — Iraqi war planes bombed a gas station and a steel plant in southern Iran Monday, killing 11 people. They then attacked Iran's partially constructed nuclear plant at Bushehr on the Persian Gulf, the official Iranian news agency reported.

The agency, IRNA, said two Iraqi jets fired a total of six rockets on Ahwaz, capital of the southern Iranian oil province of Khuzistan early Monday afternoon, killing at least 11 people and wounding 30. The gas station was destroyed and three units of the steel plant were damaged.

In Baghdad, the Iraqi military spokesman reported only that Iraqi warplanes carried out 103 bombing raids on Iranian "positions, troop gatherings and equipment" in the central and southern sectors of the front.

Police: alcohol involved in crash

By MELISSA SMYTH
Staff Writer

A preliminary investigation into the deaths of two ASU students involved in a car accident Friday night indicates that the driver had been drinking, an information officer for the Phoenix Police Department said.

Sgt. Murray Anderson said the actual blood-alcohol level of Norton Bloom, a member of the Theta Delta Chi fraternity, and Dana Sue Keretski, a "little sister" to the fraternity, has not been determined.

"It's a little too early for that," he said. "I really can't say any more, but a preliminary investigation says alcohol was involved."

Rob Malony, a spokesman for Theta Delta Chi, said having as little as .05 percent alcohol level can cause an accident to be "alcohol related."

"That's two beers," he said. "Norton was not a drinker."

Malony said Bloom and Keretski were on their way to a fraternity formal at the La Posada Resort Hotel when the accident occurred.

Bloom and Keretski were southbound on Tatum Road near Greenway Road when Bloom lost control of the car and ran off the road while trying to pass another vehicle at an "excessive speed," Anderson said.

The two collided with an oncoming truck when Bloom attempted to get back on the road, he said.

Malony said a memorial service will be held for Bloom at 2:30 p.m. Wednesday at the Hillel Jewish Student Center, 1013 S. Mill Ave.

Several members of the fraternity attended a funeral service for Bloom in Miami, Fla., on Monday, Malony said.

A service for Keretski will be held at 4:30 p.m. Thursday at Danforth Chapel, he said.

Bloom had lived in the Theta Delta Chi fraternity house since he came to ASU from Miami as a freshman two and a half years ago, Malony said.

"He was my pledge brother, we pledged the fraternity together," he said.

police report

Vandals caused approximately $1,600 worth of damage to a 1970 beige Volkswagen van while it was parked in Lot A-63 early Sunday morning, police said.

The lining of the roof and the seats in the front and back of the van were ripped with a sharp object. The vandals also damaged the visors, gear shift, clutch, gas pedal, rear view mirror and cracked the right side of the wind shield.

The victim told police there was one other person in the parking lot when he parked his van. He told police the man had sworn at him when he accidentally kicked over his beer bottle, but did not know whether he caused the damage.

An ASU student accidentally poked herself in the eye with a one-inch-thick computer printout, police said. She was treated at the Student Health Center.

Middle East peace can begin at ASU

Editor:

You recently published my letter (Feb. 25) in which I attempted to discuss Israeli/Arab relations from the perspective of my own experiences in Israel last spring.

I was challenged in another letter (Feb. 28) to respond to some comments on the concept of "greater Israel" and on Israel's law of return. The author chose to withhold his or her name, but as the views expressed would likely be widely shared by the Arab community here, I should like to address my response to all Arab students at ASU:

Assalamu 'Aleikum,
First, with regard to the concept of "greater Israel," let me say that it is one with which I disagree. While the West Bank may well have once been the center of the ancient Jewish Kingdoms of Judah and Israel, that is of little practical consequence today. I think it an extreme overstatement to characterize annexationism as "neo-Nazism," nevertheless it is atavistic and erosive of secular, democratic ideals upon which Israel was founded. I think most of us in the Zionist camp would prefer to trade "land for peace" under the provisions of U.N. resolution 242. Personally, I would like to see a Palestinian state exist in federation with Israel, with Jerusalem as the shared capital.

But such dreams of peace must wait upon the PLO, which has yet to clearly renounce violence and its intention to destroy Israel. Perhaps recent events suggest that it is finally moving towards moderation; we can only hope.

And to the extent that Israel's secular, democratic ideals have eroded, to what extent is this the result of Arab refusal to recognize the reality of Israel? I see the rise of the Likud and the "greater Israel" ideology as a direct result of the despair many Israelis feel that peace will never be achieved, and that Israel will eventually have no choice but to annex the territories. Arab extremists play right into the hands of Begin and Sharon.

As for the Law of Return, like every other

Zionist, I support it without reservation. You say that my "roots in the Middle East are not traceable for centuries back." You could have made a stronger statement — my roots to Israel are not traceable for two millennia, to 70 A.D. and 135 A.D., when two desperate Jewish revolts against Rome were crushed, Jerusalem burned to the ground, our temple destroyed, our people forced from the land.

For two thousand years the Jewish people have kept faith to the land, have kept our religion, language, and culture in diverse and unusually hostile nations. For two thousand years we have celebrated Passover with the words: "Next year in Jerusalem." I believe that it is this two thousand year history of Jewish faith and forbearance that gives us the right to return to the land from which we originally came.

You say that it is unjust that a Palestinian Arab who left Israel as late as 1948 does not have the same right to return as I do. I agree. I would think that the first act of a sovereign Palestinian state would be the enactment of a Palestinian "law of return." But a Palestinian state waits on the peace process, and the peace process waits on the PLO.

Finally, I would like to suggest that the letters section of the State Press is a very awkward place to hold a conversation. Peace in the Middle East does not have to be pursued exclusively in the Middle East; it can be pursued by Jewish and Arab students here at ASU. But for that to happen, we really need to meet face to face. I would emphasize that any Arab student who would like to come to the Hillel Jewish Student Union is more than welcome. Or you can call us, and we can arrange to meet in a neutral location. We can arrange any format, public or private, and discuss any topic — even what I was wearing on that bus in Hebron.

You have initiated the dialogue; we propose that it continue. Shalom,

Ed Schubert

Constitutional concerns publicized in 'speech'

Jay Heiler
Columnist

Here's a thought. Each year the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court should be required to address the Congress, much as the President recently did in his State of the Union address. The Chief Justice's speech would appropriately be labeled the State of the Constitution Address or, for those with a more colloquial taste, "What's New With the Constitution?" Here he or she would address Congress and the nation on some important aspect of Constitutional law, reporting significant developments and upcoming reinterpretations. Since this is my suggestion, I hereby appoint myself the Chief Justice's speechwriter for the historical initial delivery. Here's my rough draft:

Good evening ladies and gentlemen of the Congress, honored guests, fellow Americans. I come before you tonight prepared to inform you of the current state of our nation's founding document, its highest law. By the way I don't know whose idea it was to make me do this, but I don't like it.

In any case, I do not propose to obfuscate the realities of the current state of Constitutional affairs. We are in a bit of trouble, I'm afraid. If it is true that the law is a jealous mistress, then it is equally certain that many of its modern practitioners are insatiable satyrs, forever demanding of her more than she is prepared to give. Ironically, I believe the hallowed tribunal over which I preside was created in anticipation of this very difficulty. Ours was meant to be a protective role. When those who fashioned themselves keepers of the Utopian flame took up the High Law as their sword, it was to be our place to have them put it down. Alas, we have failed. We have delivered up the Constitution to a band of hack progressionists, leaving them to have their way with her.

The current state of the Constitution is such that the document scarcely retains life in certain areas. I'm afraid it would actually be better off dead in certain others, given the mutations we have worked upon her. Perhaps the clearest — and so too the saddest — illustration is to be made out of the old First Amendment.

The First Amendment receives a good bit of ink in these times, principally because one portion of it concerns the status of the press, which dispenses ink at its whim. A rather obvious point, that one, but nonetheless worth noting. The salient idea is that the situation with the First Amendment is a glaring conflict of interest. So glaring, in fact, that if a conflict of similar magnitude were discovered within the government the hounds would bray themselves into a lather of moral indignation. It has become clear that the news media have grown too powerful; no lucid individual questions that the American press overplays its role in forming the public mind. Yet clearly they have not restrained themselves in the area of the First Amendment interpretation, despite their obvious vested interest in the expanse of that Constitutional provision. Any illusory threat to the dominion of the media is certain to make its way to the top of every news budget in America. And the tone of the coverage is always grave.

Of course, the journalists have a stock reply to such observations. They tell us that they are not subject to such constraints. They are judge and jury, the government is forever on trial, and any argument for restraint is out of court. We are the watchdogs, they thump, the representatives of the people. A spectacular display of moral self-importance carries the day.

But that's all so much subterfuge. The free press provision of the First Amendment was intended as a safeguard against man's propensity for amassing and abusing power. It was conceived first with an eye to the nature of man, not the nature of government. Alas, networks, like governments are run by man.

And yet we have no institution to keep an eye on the networks. We have a vicious watchdog roaming the neighborhood, but no one is watching the watchdog. He is uncaged and unleashed, free to nip and devour whomever he pleases.

But this is not the only modern woe unto the old First Amendment. Would that it were. The protection she affords speech, a function which requires reason, has been extended to mere expression, a function which does not. The unhappy result is that the First Amendment is forever being invoked as guarantor of hard-core pornography. Meanwhile, the establishment clause has undergone its own beating; the same ladies and gentlemen who see freedom in full-screen depictions of genital friction see tyranny in small-town Nativity scenes. Theirs is, I must say, a peculiar way of seeing, but then I am just one man among the multitudes, one jurist among so many.

We are, ladies and gentlemen, traveling a dark and lonely road, and one which leads to a most unhappy destination. I must take this opportunity to suggest to you a veering off, at the earliest possible juncture. Suspend your hurried dash into the future for a few moments, and reflect upon what you have left behind. Remember the simple things. There is no order among people without a sense of their own dignity, no joy between those without a higher purpose, no law without the Law. Thank you, good night, and God bless you.

ASU renovating West Lawn to solve drainage problems

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

Remains of a building torn down in 1971 and a solid underground clay base have caused "severe drainage problems" for the planters on the West Lawn across from Hayden Library, an ASU official said Monday.

Flowers were planted last March for ASU's Centennial Celebration but did not survive because of a layer of clay which prevented the flowers from receiving water, said Donald Dickerman, ASU's grounds supervisor.

The flowers were "scorched last year" because of the drainage problem, he said.

Two wings of West Hall were torn down in 1971 and replaced by grass, he said. Part of the concrete basements of the halls were never removed.

Dickerman said that when the project started, workers did not know about underground concrete left over from the north and south wings of West Hall. The basement of the torn down halls extends from Danforth Chapel on Cady Mall to the Matthews Center.

Dickerman also said there was some "controversy" about the project because it coincided with outdoor speakers.

The project had to be delayed several times because of the activities scheduled on the West Lawn.

"The flowers should have been blooming by now," Dickerman said.

They should be in full bloom by April 1 and should last until mid-May depending on "how fast the heat comes," he said.

The concrete, clay and dirt are being removed and will be replaced by new soil and mulch, Dickerman said.

ASU workers tried to correct the drainage problem last summer through "core drilling," but it was unsuccessful, Dickerman said.

Problems have also arisen because of underground pipes and wires that had to be avoided, he said. Some pipes used to connect the outside campus lamps had to be replaced.

The flowers on ASU's campus grounds are changed twice a year because of the differences in temperature, he said. Some planters around campus were recently replaced because of the "winter kill" caused by the cold weather in the Valley area in February.

Flowers planted in October don't bloom "until this time of year," Dickerman said.

"Summer flowers" that can handle the extreme temperatures are planted around campus in June, he said.

Even the flower plants are not exempt from vandalism, Dickerman said.

"We have problems with people riding bikes through irrigated beds," he said.

Record-setting wrestlers easily win Pac-10 title

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

The achievements of the ASU wrestling team at the Pac-10 championships Sunday were not lost on coach Bobby Douglas.

"They did a tremendous job," Douglas said. "I believe they're a great team, and tonight was an indication of just how good we are."

"If we continue to wrestle like we have been, we hope to finish in the top three (at the national tournament)."

ASU had seven individual champions and nine wrestlers qualified for the national tournament. Both achievements are Pac-10 records.

ASU's 114³/₄ points were the most scored by a team since 1975. Second-place Oregon State finished with 69 points.

Senior Tom Kolopus in the 177-pound class became the first three-time champion from ASU. Chip Park (118) became the first ASU freshman to ever win a Pac-10 championship.

Eddie Urbano (150), who pinned OSU's Jeff Cardwell with 1:20 left in the first period to win his second championship, was named outstanding wrestler for the tournament.

Kolopus said the team's performance will help them going into the national tournament.

"We'll have an emotional boost," Kolopus said. "It should build confidence."

Park said he did not expect to do this well when he was still a senior at Mesa Westwood

High School.

"We all have a dream," Park said. "There is skill here. In high school, it's whatever you can get away with. Here you have to work."

Urbano was happy for himself and his teammates.

"It feels good," Urbano said. "I'm happy for my team. We finally won it. I'm feeling good about wrestling. I want to keep on wrestling and keep on winning."

ASU individuals outshine team in WCAA swimming meet

By STEVE RICHMAN
Sports Writer

The ASU women's swimming team finished fifth out of six teams in the WCAA Conference Championships held last weekend at East Los Angeles College.

USC finished first with 800 points, followed by Stanford with 788, UCLA with 582, U of A with 455, ASU with 436 and Long Beach State with 184.

ASU coach Bob Gillett said although he was a little disappointed with the meet, he was extremely happy with many individual performances.

Leading the way for the Devils was freshman Caroline Cast.

Cast finished second in the 200-yard butterfly with a time of 2:00.84 which was good enough to qualify her for the NCAA swimming championships.

"Cast's performance was the best for any ASU swimmer in the meet," Gillett said. "I am elated with her time, which now ranks her third in the country in that event."

Another notable performance was put forth by freshman Carolyn Mills. Mills qualified in the 50-yard freestyle race by equaling the national standard of 23.79 seconds. Gillett said he was extremely excited with Mills' time and said "she will only get better with time."

Other NCAA qualifiers at the meet included freshman Amy Reed, who qualified in the 100 butterfly, and Stephanie Lister, who qualified in the 200 backstroke.

While there were some good swims, there was also disappointment, most notably for Beda Leirvaag and Michelle Merchant. Both failed to qualify for nationals in the 400 IM, and 100 or 200 breaststroke respectively. Both will have one last chance this weekend in what Gillett calls "last ditch meets."

Devils sweep Pacific Tigers in softball

The ASU softball team swept a doubleheader Monday from the University of the Pacific, 7-4 and 4-3, at Sun Devil Club Stadium.

ASU (14-3) scored three runs in the sixth inning of the first game, providing the winning margin. Wild pitches by Pacific reliever Kelly Mayer brought home two of the runs.

The Tigers responded with four runs in the top of the seventh off winner Laura Houle (8-1).

In the second game, Laurie Woodcock's sacrifice fly allowed Kathy Escarcega to score with the winning run in the 11th inning. Pitcher Lisa Martin (5-2) got the win.
