Nelson to request $9 million from regents for parking lots

Several garage sites under consideration

By JONATHAN HIGUERA
Staff Writer

ASU President J. Russell Nelson will request $9 million for the construction of two parking structures from the Arizona Board of Regents in April, a member of the Faculty Senate said Tuesday.

Don Leonard, chairman of the University Services Committee of the Faculty Senate, said his committee was informed of the funding request by Victor Zafra, vice president for business affairs.

Zafra and Jennus Burton, assistant vice president for business affairs, were invited to speak at the committee meeting about auxiliary enterprises at ASU.

"With the expected capital investment in buildings here, we'll need (the parking structures)," Leonard said.

Zafra and Burton could not be reached for comment.

Richard Landreth, assistant director of parking, said he has been involved in planning the parking structures.

He said proposed sites for the parking structures are Parking Lot 1, 9, 18, 46, 48 and 65.

The parking structures would probably not exceed three stories above and about a half story below ground level, Landreth said.

"It will probably be similar to the Grady Gammage parking lot," he said. "Because the ground is either rock or the water table level isn't too deep, excavation costs are more expensive than going up."

He said the structures would provide up to 1,800 additional parking spaces and would be divided between two locations.

"They would be core parking lots," he said. "They would provide good access for students, faculty and staff."

Landreth said other alternatives considered are not possible.

"We looked at what $9 million would buy in surface parking, and there simply wasn't enough land available," he said.

Clearing out residential neighborhoods for parking would alienate Tempe residents, Landreth said.

"We wouldn't be serving the University community if we alienated residents," he said.

He said the parking structures of the University of Cincinnati, UCLA and the University of Minnesota were considered.

"(The structures) seemed to satisfy their parking needs," he said.

Landreth said the parking stalls will be allocated according to Nelson's guidelines that he set two years ago at a Faculty Senate meeting.

These guidelines give 55 percent of the stalls to faculty, 35 percent to staff and 10 percent to students.

"Students come and go," Landreth said. "Many only have one or two classes and then they're gone."

"So if we gave them more stalls, they wouldn't be utilized fully. Faculty and staff are usually here eight hours a day," he said.

Landreth said if the Regents approve the request, construction could begin this summer.

"Construction time is eight to 10 months," he said. "If there aren't any delays in construction and we have good weather, it could be operational this time next year."

Official disputes lure of teacher salary raise

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

A proposed 10 percent teacher salary increase will not lure students from other programs into the College of Education, an ASU official said Tuesday.

Students "haven't been encouraged to get into public education," said Ray Castillo, assistant director of Career Services.

Gov. Bruce Babbitt appealed to the Arizona Legislature last week for a 10 percent pay raise to make the field of education more attractive.

House Majority Leader Burton Barr, R-Phoenix, opposed the bill because of the cost of the pay increase and the fact that undeserving teachers with tenure would receive the raise, according to the Arizona Republic.

"Legislators are trying to make teaching more attractive to students," Castillo said.

If the pay increase passes, not all teachers will receive identical raises because salaries vary between school districts, he said.

Starting salaries for teachers range from $15,500 to $17,000, and from $16,000 to $34,000 for all teachers, Castillo said.

"A person's income is determined by teaching experience and education," he said.

A new program to better prepare future teachers will be started this fall, said Naomi Wamacks, assistant dean of the College of Education.

"The program will help identify people who are talented," said Wamacks.

Preparation of students for certification in elementary, secondary and special education will be emphasized during the program, she said.

Castillo said the number of students graduating with from ASU with an education degree peaked in 1972, and has declined since.

In the past 12 years, ASU has graduated 75 percent less education students than in previous years, he said.

Besides low salaries, Castillo said other reasons for fewer graduates include school districts losing student population and stronger competition in the work force.

Because of a need for computer-literate teachers, many college curricula have undergone changes, Castillo said.

"There are now more opportunities (for students) to work at the school site prior to graduation," Castillo said.

Castillo said Arizona is not graduating enough teachers to fulfill the state's needs, and relies on teachers moving here from other states.

Arizona House of Reps to debate public election of regents

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

Two pieces of legislation calling for public election of members of the Arizona Board of Regents will be debated by the House of Representatives next week, the bill's sponsor said Tuesday.

Rep. John Kromko, D-Tucson, said he had not expected the legislation to advance to the House floor.

"I am starting to like the bill a lot more than I did in the first place," Kromko said.

He said he was unsure if the bill was "such a good idea" when it was introduced earlier this month.

House Bill 2404 mandates the election of board members and House Concurrent Resolution 2017 provides for the necessary constitutional amendment, Kromko said.

Members of the board are currently appointed by Gov. Bruce Babbitt.

"Part (of the bill's success) is a lot of hostility towards the regents," Kromko said. "A lot of legislators think they have been unresponsive."

He said the only opposition to the bill has come from board members.

"When (the bill) came to the judiciary committee I was expecting some lobbying against it," Kromko said. "But there was no indication of any opposition."

Shari Lewis, assistant director of personnel and government relations for the board, said she was surprised that the bill has advanced to the floor.

"Most of the legislators will support the bill," Lewis said.

"I don't think there is much support for the bill (outside the Legislature)," she said.

Kromko said a number of faculty and staff members at Arizona's three universities have expressed support for the legislation.

He said an elected Board of Regents would be similar to the State Board of Education and the Community College Board.

"There is nothing wrong with what those boards are doing," Kromko said. "They do a little better (than the Board of Regents), I think."

In earlier State Press reports, Board President Donald Pitt said electing board members would not benefit the university system and the board would become "politicized."

Regent Jack Pfister said elected members would spend "90 percent of their time doing political things and 10 percent of their time doing what we do."

Senate approves MX missile funds

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Republican-controlled Senate on Tuesday gave President Reagan his first big congressional victory of 1985 by voting 55-45 to free $1.5 billion for the production of 21 highly-accurate, long-range MX missiles.

The president and Senate leaders overcame arguments that the MX would be vulnerable to a first-strike Soviet missile attack and persuaded doubters that the American bargaining position at the Geneva arms talks would be weakened if money for the MX were denied.

There will be a second vote in the Senate on Thursday, but the real fight now shifts to the House, where a similar set of votes is set for next week.

Argentine president visits Reagan; both praise strength of democracy

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan and Argentine President Raul Alfonsin on Tuesday saluted "the spread and strengthening of democracy" in the Western Hemisphere, but Reagan said "communist tyranny" threatens that trend.

Alfonsin, a political moderate, was inaugurated in December 1983, ending seven years of military rule.

Elected governments have also been installed recently in Brazil, Uruguay, Ecuador, El Salvador and Honduras and elections are scheduled in Guatemala, Peru and Colombia.

Reagan said, "More people here are living in democracy than ever before. Ninety percent of this hemisphere's population lives in democracies or in countries in transition to democracy. This trend, however, is threatened by Marxist-Leninists who continue with the heavy support of the Soviet Union and Cuba to undermine freely elected governments and democratic movements."

McCain intends to run for Senate

PHOENIX (AP) — U.S. Rep. John McCain announced Tuesday that he would run for Senate in 1986 when fellow Republican Barry Goldwater retires from the seat considered a key to control of the chamber.

McCain joined the race the day after Gov. Bruce Babbitt announced he would not seek the seat and before U.S. Rep. Bob Stump, another fellow Republican, announced his intentions.

Judge orders second trial for New York subway gunman

NEW YORK (AP) — A state judge ruled Tuesday that new evidence justifies submitting the case against subway gunman Bernhard Goetz to a second grand jury, rejecting arguments by his lawyers that there was "something un-American" about the new proceedings.

The new evidence apparently was the testimony of one of four teen-agers shot by Goetz on a Manhattan subway train on Dec. 22. "I want to see Bernie Goetz fry," the youth told reporters after testifying before the grand jury on Monday.

Goetz's lawyers pleaded Tuesday for the second investigation to be stopped, but state Supreme Court Justice Stephen Crane ruled, "The nature of the evidence was proper and it was probed in detail." The Supreme Court is the trial-level court in New York.

STATE PRESS Newsroom Staff Openings

Applications for positions on the News Staff of the STATE PRESS for the Fall Semester 1985 are now being received at # 15, North Basement, Matthews Center.

There will be openings at most levels — reporter, photographer, copy editing, assistant sports editor, assistant city editor, arts & entertainment writer, sports reporter, city editor, news editor, managing editor, sports editor, copy chief, photo editor, opinion page editor and wire editor.

Applicants must pick up job referral forms from Student Employment in Matthews Center and an application blank at # 15, North Basement, Matthews Center.

Applications will be reviewed beginning April 12, and until all positions are filled.

Applicants must be full-time (at least seven hours) students at ASU; but major in any department is acceptable, as is class standing of freshman through graduate.

Newspaper experience is desirable but not mandatory. These are part-time, salaried positions open to any student in good standing.

ASU to hold national design competition for proposed campus Fine Arts Complex

By JOHN CONWAY
Staff Writer

A national competition among architects for the opportunity to design ASU's proposed Fine Arts Complex is being held by the University.

The estimated 150,000-square foot complex, which may be erected on any of a number of on-campus sites, is expected to include a museum, a rehearsal area for dance and theater majors, a 500-seat theater and classrooms, Jim Knothe, acting director of planning and construction said.

According to College of Fine Arts Dean Jules Heller, there will be no room at the complex for visual arts students.

ASU officials have mailed architects registered in Arizona a request to submit their qualifications to the University if they are interested in competing for the design contract. Out-of-state architects are being solicited through advertisements placed in professional architecture journals publicizing the ASU competition, Knothe said.

According to Carolyn Hoppin, design project manager, the contest is directed toward domestic architects but foreigners are not excluded.

Joseph Apel, campus planner with facilities management-planning, estimated the complex to be the first building on campus to be constructed "via competition."

Design competitions are usually avoided because they are too time-consuming and expensive, Apel said.

While a final site selection has not been made, Knothe revealed three possible sites: the area between Stauffer and Payne halls, extending possibly into parking lot 8; a location on the east side of campus; and the area currently occupied by the Fine Arts Annex.

Submitted applications for the competition are being reviewed by a commission appointed by ASU President J. Russell Nelson, who will select five finalists from those recommended, Hoppin said.

Heller said the request for additional space was originally made by the Fine Arts college in 1976.

He said the need for the complex is due in part to the dilapidated condition of the museum housing the University Art Collection, valued in the millions of dollars.

Mary Jane Williams, assistant curator of the University Art Collection, said the building's roof has a 12-bucket leak. "I call it that because it takes that many buckets to catch all the water that comes through," she said.

Heller also claimed his dance and theater students lacked adequate rehearsal space.

The College of Fine Arts lost its dance and theater rehearsal building when the Payne Laboratory School was closed and burned down in 1982. Students also lost studio space when the Fine Arts Annex was closed in January.

Williams said $100,000 has been granted to the University by the National Endowment of the Arts, a sum matched by ASU, to offset the cost to the architects for their models and to cover the contest's expenses. Heller said a third of the construction costs will be paid by the state and the remaining portion will be paid through private donations.

The design contract will be awarded the third week of November, by a seven-member jury selected by Nelson, said Carl Straub, architecture professor and the professional adviser to the commission.

Unsuspecting students now facing the music

Kim Sertich
Assit. City Editor

People laugh when you tell them you're enrolled in the class. It's been labeled the biggest blow-off at ASU.

An instructor of the course calls it "one of those rounders," referring to the University wanting students to get a well-rounded education.

The course? Jazz in America. After spending half a semester in the class, I can truthfully say that it is not that big of a blow-off. To me, a blow-off class is one you don't have to go to or study for but still get an "A". Jazz in America is not the kind of class where you can get away with that.

While Associate Professor Mark Sunkett doesn't take attendance in his section, it's still standing room only in the Music Theatre from 11:40 to 12:30 Monday, Wednesday and Friday. Students just don't want to miss this class, and that's rare. They don't want to miss the class because they know every word this man says he says for a reason. That reason is that you can bet if he said it, it will be on a test. He proved that on the midterm.

And students go to his class because it's interesting. He knows how to conduct the class and he's funny. The best thing about this instructor is that he's cool. I'm talking about a man, that no matter what he does, gets applause. His recent drum demonstration almost brought the class to its feet.

You can enjoy this class all you want; however, there is work involved. Contrary to what many students believe, you have to study for this course. That's right, you don't just sit through an entire semester listening to jazz tunes — there are tests. These are tests that have to be studied for, just like other classes.

Unless you're a jazz enthusiast with a photographic memory, your chances of taking a jazz test cold and acing it are slim. The regular tests are popular. There was a waiting line outside of Gammage to take Sunkett's midterm. Students must also always be studied up for the rumored pop quizzes that have yet to surface in Sunkett's class.

Another aspect of this class that makes students take it more seriously than they planned is that they are required to do work for the course outside of the lecture hall. Students must actually attend jazz performances and listen to jazz tapes to receive their three credits.

Looks like this class really is a rounder. Whether students realize it or not, the class they took merely to snag an "A" is opening up an avenue they probably would never have been exposed to.

So, is this class a joke to fellow classmates just because it's interesting enough to want to attend on a regular basis and because it provides an outlet from the daily routine of history and English classes?

I don't think so. I think it might just be a good excuse to hear Sunkett play the drums and piano while telling students the fire marshal won't permit them to stand in the doorways.

Previous POW/MIA disinterest does not justify current apathy

Editor:

Obviously Matt Touni's opinion (March 7) on MIAs reflects a naive state of mind. The fate of these soldiers isn't a function of who won the war. Whether or not we may have put as much emphasis on MIAs in previous wars isn't justification for forgetting those in Vietnam, as he seems to suggest, either. Such a conclusion is asinine. If we don't strive to improve the outcome of even the simplest conflict, we would all be doomed to live in a hostile, stagnant world.

As far as war reparations are concerned, the Vietnamese held soldiers and remains of soldiers as blackmail to squeeze as much out of us as possible. Now if that doesn't work, they can't exactly release those soldiers, can they? I can just see the headlines: "Vietnam releases captive soldiers, says it's sorry." Such an event would be deemed even more outrageous than the blackmail. Vietnam would lose the sympathy of those like Matt Touni, which is the crowbar they may use to extricate themselves from this Catch-22.

I would ask Matt Touni what form of goodwill (bribery) he suggests we extend to convince the Vietnamese government that we will gladly pat them on the back if they would only resolve the MIA issue. Reward for blackmail; way to go, Matt.

Let's hope that the MIA issue is resolved soon. I'm sure even Matt Touni seeks this end. It's sad, though, that it probably won't be long before Matt Touni grows up enough to understand the implications of his position.

Racially polarizing groups undeserving of support

Editor:

In response to Mr. Gray T. Echols' column on the Black Student Union, I would like to add my own thoughts on the subject.

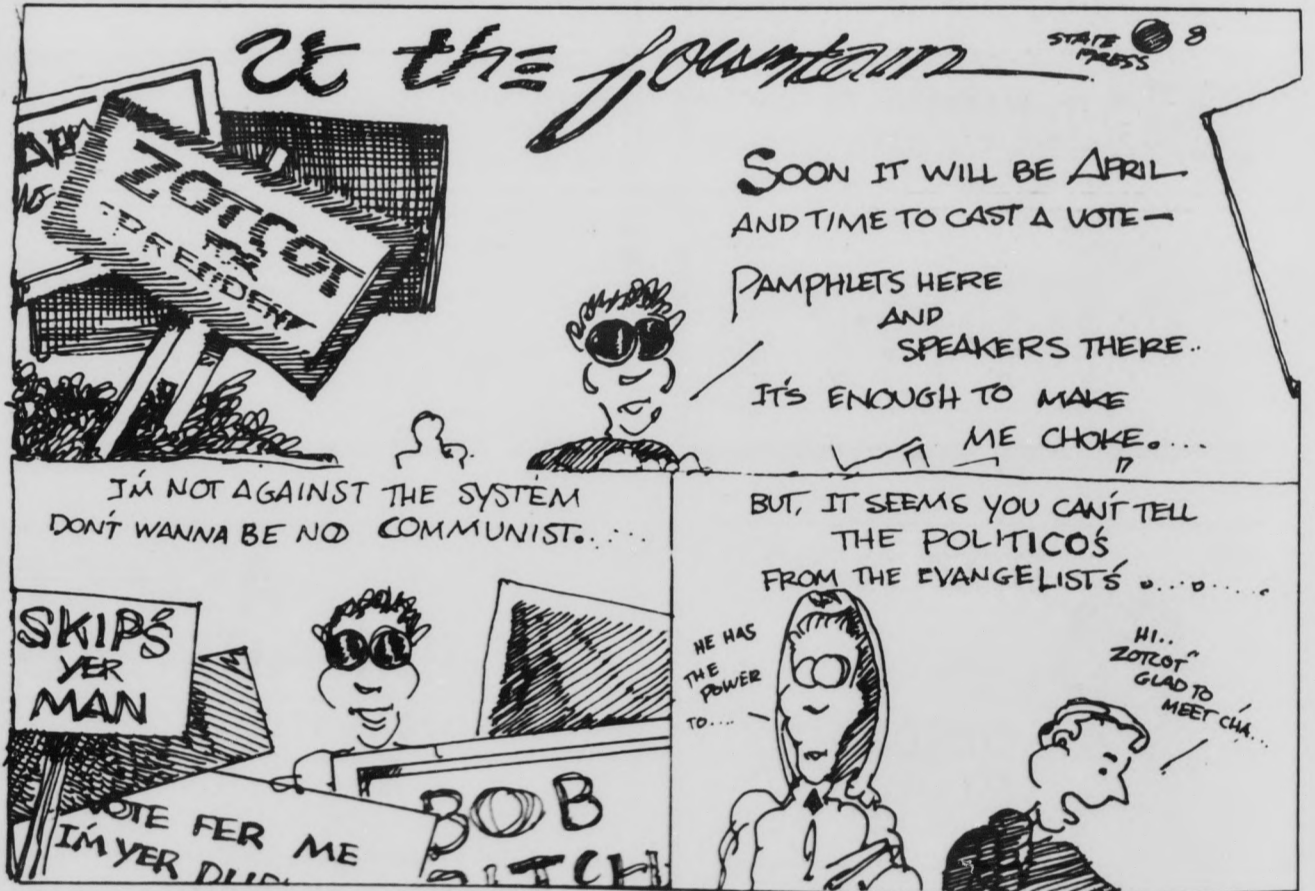

Mr. Echols will probably get many letters calling him racist or some other sort. But it is hard for me to understand why any organization that commits itself to any single race would not be considered racist. I suppose we could have a White Student Union with its own objectives for whites, but I haven't the slightest reason why we would.

The problem we have here is simply analogous to magazine publications. Any magazine openly geared to and catered for white people would be considered racist. Yet magazines such as "Jet" and "Ebony" are not. I wonder why?

We must not look to and help out organizations that openly polarize differences between races. We must start looking at ourselves as only human beings and to look at others in the same light. We must break down all racial barriers including all organizations that would have us believe otherwise. Because the only difference between white and black or brown and yellow is prejudice.

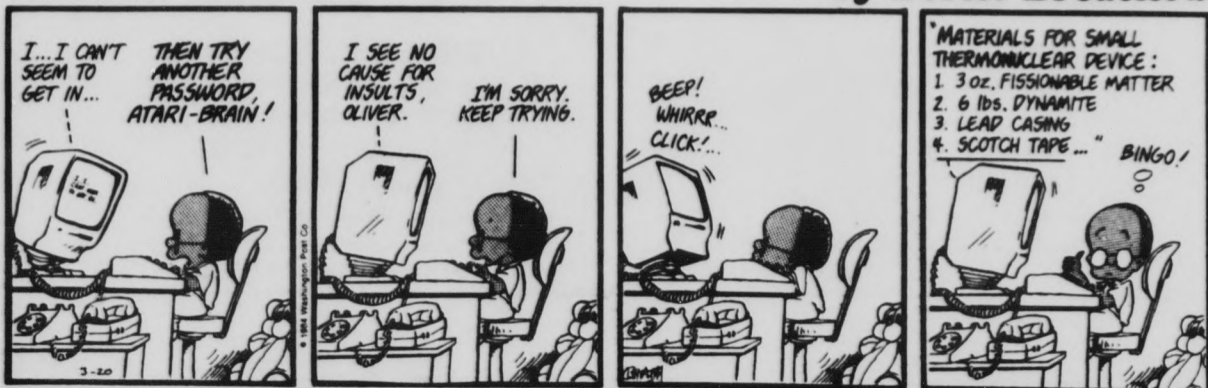

And although I am white, please do not label me racist or insensitive to minority needs. I am not. And the woman I am about to marry is black. Or shall I say, a person.

Arizona Senate passes bill establishing special committee on teacher education

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

A bill establishing a joint legislative committee on teacher education has been approved by the Arizona Senate and will be referred to the House of Representatives next week.

The bill's sponsor, Anne Lindeman, R-Phoenix, said it calls for a committee comprised of members of the House, Senate and local communities.

The bill was unanimously approved by the Senate March 7. The committee would review curriculum changes and certification requirements at the education colleges of ASU, NAU and U of A.

The committee would also be required to prepare a report on curriculum programs and certification requirements by the end of this year, Lindeman said.

"The bill has received positive reaction," she said. "We haven't heard any opposition at all."

The Arizona Board of Regents voted to support the committee during their March meeting at ASU.

Robert Huff, executive director of the board, said he does not expect any conflicts between the regents and the committee.

"The Legislature has a legitimate concern and I think (the board) recognizes that it would be very difficult for us to say to the Legislature that we don't want them looking at our programs," he said.

Huff said teacher-training programs are public programs and the legislature has "a right" to take part in program planning.

Huff said the board would also make an effort to work with the committee despite any conflicting viewpoints.

"The regents had better understand those views," Huff said.

Robert Stout, dean of ASU's College of Education, said two similar committees were appointed by the Legislature within the past five years.

Stout said he did not foresee any conflict between the committee and the individual education colleges.

"The Legislature has the general oversight and responsibility for teacher education," he said. "I presume it is within their right."

William De Long, R-Tucson, said the committee will be the first joint legislative committee formed by the Legislature.

De Long, chairman of the Senate Education Committee said the group is necessary because "we are going to be faced with a teacher shortage in the next few years."

"(The Legislature) has a responsibility to the people to help," De Long said.

University reinstates King scholarship

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

ASU's president confirmed the University's commitment to affirmative action and commended the re-establishment of the ASU Martin Luther King Jr. scholarship Tuesday.

J. Russell Nelson spoke at a kick-off luncheon of the establishment of a scholarship in honor of the late Martin Luther King Jr., which will be made available to all ASU students.

"This University has had a long commitment to affirmative action," said Nelson.

Nelson, who expressed concern over the depletion of the King scholarship, said he hopes a provision will be made through active support of the scholarship fund drive to assist needy students.

The Martin Luther King Jr. scholarship was established at ASU in 1971 and ended in 1976 because of a depletion of funds, said Bernard Jackson, coordinator of educational support program.

In order to perpetuate the scholarship fund being set up, "enough money will have to be raised so the interest can be used to finance the scholarship," Jackson said.

The scholarship will be open to all ASU students and will be made available in time for King's birthday, which has been declared a national holiday in 1986, Jackson said.

At the luncheon, Nelson received the Black Faculty, Staff and Student Caucus Medallion, an award given for "his position on affirmative action," said John Edwards, executive director of off-campus academic services.

Nelson was the first white to receive the award, Edwards said.

"It's time we start recognizing those who help us make progress," Edwards said.

Students applying for the scholarship will have to "exemplify the ideals held by Martin Luther King Jr." and will have to have a need for financing, Jackson said.

The King scholarship will fund the cost of a student's tuition, Edwards said.

A campaign to raise interest for the scholarship drive among faculty is also being conducted, said John Evans, an ASU English professor.

Evans said he has been "asked to encourage interest on the part of the faculty" to contribute financially to the fund.

Through the scholarship, "we can create an environment so those who can help will do so," he said.

police report

Someone reported smelling smoke on the second floor of the Academic Services Building Monday night, police said. Police said the smoke was possibly due to torches used by workers in the area. The torches may have lit the ceiling material on fire.

ASU officers did not find the fire and smoke had dissipated before police left the area. The building was evacuated while the Tempe Fire Department determined the area was safe.

Police checked the second floor every half-hour until 1 a.m. and every hour until 8 p.m. due to a malfunction of a fire panel. Fire Marshall Andy Anderson said an alarm had been disconnected due to the construction.

In other activity, University Police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday:

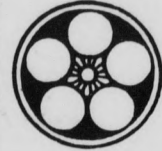

- A man was found sleeping inside his car in Lot 59 early Tuesday, police said. The man had previously been warned of sleeping on campus. He was warned of trespassing and advised to leave the area.
- A black 10-speed was stolen from the A-Wing of Sahuaro Hall sometime between March 8 and Monday, police said.
- Books and a walkman were stolen from Room 536 of Manzanita Hall while the resident was away for spring vacation, police said. Total loss was estimated as $160.
- A men's blue Schwinn 10-speed, valued at $35, was stolen from in front of the MU sometime between Friday and Saturday, police said.
- A wallet valued at $35 was stolen from Room D103 of Palo Verde Main Hall between Sunday and Monday, police said. The room had been left unlocked.

No measles cases seen on campus

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

The director of the ASU Student Health Center does not foresee any change in the way the center is handling distribution of measles inoculations despite a recent report that a Tempe teacher has contracted the disease.

Dr. Monty Roth said the clinic has not received reports of any students on campus who have measles, but will continue to offer free immunization to students.

Last week, the Maricopa County Health Department reported that a Tempe elementary school teacher was showing symptoms of the disease after a trip to the Prescott area.

"Apparently that has been a verified case," Roth said. "I think it was fortuitous that it happened over spring break."

Roth said the students at the school where the teacher works will probably not have to worry. State law prohibits any elementary student from attending classes without inoculations.

"Some of her fellow teachers may contract the disease," he said. "It is highly communicable but I would expect (the health department) will do nothing with the students."

For weeks, the Health Center has been asking all ASU students to make sure they have their immunizations updated.

The action of the center stemmed from a series of measles outbreaks on other college campuses around the country. Universities in Massachusetts and Ohio reported confirmed measles cases followed by cases appearing in California.

Two weeks ago, Tucson Amphitheatre High School had an outbreak and some students were not allowed on campus until they showed proof to administrators they had received their shots.

Roth said he is not sure to what extent the Tempe case will affect the campus; it depends on the number of contacts the teacher had.

"It would be a problem if she was taking a class at the University," he said. "At this time, we know of no connection (with ASU)."

Because the measles case was disclosed during spring break by the county, it may have been a benefit to the center, Roth said.

"In terms of the student population, I don't think it has had an effect, because of the timing."

He said if an ASU student contracts rubella or rubeola, the Health Center might re-establish a booth on the mall to give out inoculations.

"I think if we have any cases at all, we will return to Cady Mall," Roth said. "We are not stopping the program at this time."

Staff from the Student Health Center set up an immunization center on the mall prior to spring break. Roth said more than 400 students, staff and faculty took advantage of the free shots.

"I thought it was a very successful project," he said.

The center will also have a booth at the ASU Health Fair to distribute the serum, Roth said.

The fair is scheduled for mid-April.

ASU to commemorate Founder's Day with a 100th birthday balloon send-off

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

The Great Centennial Send-off will be held Tuesday in commemoration of the 100th anniversary of ASU's Founders Day, said Leslie Webster, administrative aide to the Centennial Commission.

According to Webster, Founders Day was the day in 1885 that the existence of the Arizona Territorial Normal School, which is now ASU, was signed into law by Gov. Frederick Trittler.

The actual Centennial date was March 12, but the celebration was moved to Tuesday due to spring break, she said.

Festivities will begin at 11:45 a.m. with a performance on the West Lawn by the Side Street Strutters, a Dixieland band whose members have all attended ASU at some time, said Webster.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson will speak briefly on the West Lawn at noon, she said.

The Strutters will take the stage again before the countdown for the Centennial balloon send-off, which gives the celebration its name, Webster said.

Dottie Kobik, associate director of the ASU Centennial Commission, said the purpose of the send-off is to "spread the Centennial message far and wide at the time of the celebration."

There will be a table on Cady Mall until Tuesday where students, faculty and staff can write personal Centennial messages on cards that will be attached to balloons, said Webster.

"We expect about 2,000 balloons," she said. "Whoever finds the postcards should notify us and send us the cards."

"The sender of the balloon that goes the longest distance will receive a balloon ride for two in the Arizona Lottery's hot air balloon."

Webster said there is no charge for contributing a card.

Before the balloons lift off, the dedication of the Centennial Gazebo will take place, said Webster.

The gazebo was built by members of the ASU student chapter of the American Construction Club, she said.

That group, along with the O'Malley Hardware Company, who supplied the materials, will be honored at the dedication, said Webster.

After the balloons are launched, the crowd will join in singing "Happy Birthday" to ASU as the candles on the birthday cake are blown out, said Webster.

The Centennial Office will provide a 100-foot-long cake and punch to be served at the festivities, she said.

"It's going to be a lot of fun," Webster said. "Everyone should be there."

Dealers discuss students' buying power at nearby campus food establishments

By TIMOTHY J. HOLLAND Contributing Writer

Whether it is dine-out, drive-thru, take-out or delivered, ASU students at one time or another have visited a food establishment on the borders of campus.

According to Jim Naderer, the manager of the Warehouse Deli and Pub, 130 E. University Drive, ASU students have a large amount of consumer power.

This buying power would seem to make any eating establishment near campus profitable, but Naderer said that is not always true.

"Everybody thinks with 40,000-plus people across the street (at ASU) that it's a gold mine for anybody who wants to plant their seed and do whatever they want," he said. "No matter how big the pie is, if you cut it in enough pieces, the pieces start getting smaller."

The closure of Winchell's Donut House in Tempe Center and Sun Devil Pizza at 216 E. University Drive is proof that not every place that opens for business near campus survives.

Marty Katz, the manager of Sub Stop, 222 E. University Drive, said, "This is the stiffest competition in the state and the name of the game is numbers."

The two managers agreed that food quality is high on their list of priorities.

Prices are also important because it is not enough to keep the price to the buyer down, Katz said.

"If your management and your food cost is way high you're going to lose," he said. "What you're paying in rent and overhead is also important."

Prices and quality of food at nearby establishments is important to Sub Stop and The Warehouse, but Domino's Pizza, 901 S. Rural Road, has an added concern of promising to deliver pizzas to residences near campus in "30 minutes or less," a spokesman for Domino's Pizza said.

Domino's Pizza caters to students who try to avoid the hassle of going out for food, he said.

"(ASU students) could go out, but then again, it's easier to just stay in and have somebody bring it to you," he said.

Naderer said students usually travel in groups, therefore it is important to offer a variety of different types of food at one establishment.

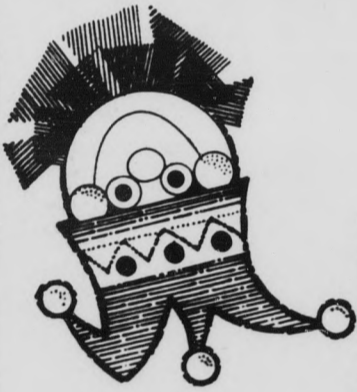

"The more variety you have the less reason people have to go somewhere else," he said.

Naderer also said serving alcoholic beverages contributes to the popularity, but is not the main draw to eating establishments.

Katz said ASU students will frequent a place that has good service, is dependable, with good prices and a good product.

"If the food is bad, nobody's going to eat there," he said.

Alumni Association offers opportunities to students to 'cruise' through summer

By NICOLE MASSIE
Staff Writer

Imagine yourself sailing to another part of the country and exploring politics in Washington D.C. or discovering the history in Boston's Lexington and Concord.

The ASU Alumni Association is offering ASU alumni and interested students the opportunity to take a cruise this summer through the waterways from Washington D.C. to Boston, said Rochelle Mackey, the associate alumni director and director of alumni association travel program.

The trip will be from June 11-25. The tour begins with four nights in Arlington, Va., then continues across the Potomac River to Washington D.C., according to Mackey.

"We are working with Rep. John Mc-Cain (R-Ariz.) to arrange some special things in Washington D.C.," Mackey said. "These are not yet confirmed, but it should be an exciting itinerary."

After the students experience the atmosphere of Washington D.C., the tour will continue in Baltimore. There a seven-night cruise will begin on an ultrayacht, the Nantucket Clipper, she said.

Students will continue on and travel the entire length of the Long Island Sound and pass through Cape Cod.

The ultra-yacht will then sail around the Statue of Liberty and dock at the South Street Seaport in lower Manhattan.

The rates of the trip range from $2,209 to $3,029 per person, Mackey said. These rates include round-trip airfare from Phoenix, hotel accommodations throughout the tour, the activities scheduled for Washington D.C. and Boston and the seven day cruise from Baltimore to Boston.

Another cruise to Russia was made available to ASU students and is already filled, she said.

The students involved with this cruise will sail to Moscow, Vulga and Leningrad.

"This is the second time we have made the Russian cruise available," Mackey said. "People seem very curious about Russia; the cruise always fills up fast."

Although that cruise has been sold out, a trip in August is still available, Mackey said.

"This trip goes to Australia, New Zealand and Fiji," she said.

Mackey said cruises are filled on a first-come, first-serve basis. Students should apply for these summer tours as soon as possible.

ASU graduates discuss bygone eras in upcoming Centennial celebration talk

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
Staff Writer

ASU alumni will discuss their memories of the University during a Centennial lecture, said Estelle Denzin, a University Archives library assistant.

"A Student's View of ASU," sponsored by the University Archives, will be held at 2 p.m. Thursday in the Special Collections Room at Hayden Library, Denzin said.

The panel discussion members will include: James Creasman, class of 1935, a retired special assistant to the president; Peggy Bryant, class of 1952, a staff member of the Tempe Daily News; Nick Salerno, class of 1957, chairman of the English department; Christine Wilkinson, class of 1966, director of undergraduate admissions; Patricia Halsted, class of 1974 and 1977, former president of the Alumni Association; and Ray Burnell, class of 1982, current president of Associated Students of ASU.

"This is an interaction between students in various years on campus," Denzin said.

The discussion will be moderated by Kathryn Gammage who will address questions to the panel. Questions from the audience will also be taken, Denzin said.

According to Denzin, members from the panel were campus leaders and were involved in varied activities while on campus.

"They will give their views of the campus during each of the eras."

She said most of the speakers remained on campus after graduation and witnessed administrative changes as well as changes in student affairs.

The University Archives Centennial Lecture Series will also sponsor a lecture on former ASU president Homer Durham entitled "The Durham Years: The Shaping of a University" April 17 and a speech by President J. Russell Nelson April 26, Denzin said.

"We would like to have students come and see what life was like in a different era," she said.

Program offers ASU students hands-on training

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

ASU students have an opportunity to learn whether or not the careers to which they aspire are everything they are cracked up to be, according to an advisor of the Student Alumni Association (SAA).

Jeff Abraham said "The Day on the Job program (DOJ) provides you with the opportunity to spend all or part of a work day with an ASU graduate, parent or friend employed in your field of study."

Abraham said a number of colleges and universities around the country have similar programs.

Senior psychology major Alison Raguse, who is the chairwoman of the DOJ program, said "This is a program in which a student can come in and say, 'I am an accounting major. I want to work with an accountant and see exactly what's involved.'"

Senior Business major Tim Flessner, SAA vice president of activities and programs, the committee which is responsible for the DOJ program, said "We try to make as close a match as possible between the student and the appropriate alumnus."

Raguse said these matches are made on the basis of information forms that are sent to both students and alumni.

"It's not always easy," she said.

Abraham said, "We will take any career interest area." Letters are then sent to each party, and it is the student's responsibility to contact the alumnus in order to make the appointment, she said.

"The student and the alumnus both receive evaluation forms in order to tell us about their experiences," said Raguse.

Flessner said the program is not restricted to SAA members and is open to all ASU students.

Abraham said that approximately 200 students had expressed interest in the program.

"Even though a senior may know what his major is, I don't think many of them know what's actually involved in many job situations," she said.

Flessner said the DOJ program can be an inroad to a job or a career. "Many alumni are looking for students to hire," he said.

Students who have participated sound enthusiastic. Freshman education and political science major Michael Moss spoke highly of the day he spent helping teach third graders at Emerson Elementary School in Mesa.

"I was warmly greeted and treated like a professional," he said.

He helped teach reading and math classes, he said. "One child read to me. I'll remember this little guy for a long time," he said.

"Those third graders are exhausting," he said.

Moss said he plans to participate again.

"The woman I taught for has a husband who teaches ninth graders in Mesa," he said.

Senior marketing major Sherry Rose spent a day working for an account executive of sales and marketing for Eastern Airlines.

She said that she learned a lot from her experience. "It greatly increased my understanding of marketing."

Series to show documentary

The Latin American film series at ASU presents a documentary focusing on Puerto Rico at 3:30 and 7 p.m. Thursday in the Language and Literature Building, Room C-57.

Transfers give ASU strong duo in hammer throw

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

For a school never known for attracting quality hammer throwers, ASU is sitting in the catbird seat this year with not one, but two promising prospects.

Junior College transfers Dave Ryer and Terry Payne joined the men's track team last fall with a resume full of impressive credentials and a desire to turn around the University's hammer throwing reputation.

Last Saturday at Sun Angel Stadium, the transformation began.

The duo treated ASU track fans to a show never witnessed before. Both throwers broke the school record while dominating the event in a meet against Kansas State and Brigham Young.

"If we didn't break it we were going to be upset with ourselves," said Payne. "We were hoping whatever throw we opened up with would break it, and that's how it turned out." They didn't just break it, they hammered it.

Mike Mariani's 1982 ASU record throw of 147-4 was obliterated with Ryer's 197-4 toss and Payne's effort of 185 feet. In fact, they estimated every throw to be a record breaker.

Ryer's throw fell only 14 inches short of his personal best and gave him the victory by nearly ten feet. Payne recorded his best throw ever and finished third.

Both throwers qualified for the 1985 Pac-10 finals and Ryer earned an invitation to the NCAA Outdoor Championships.

"It was a good opener," Ryer said. "I wasn't hitting my fourth turn in my finishes and I think I could have thrown farther. That's a lot of feet right there. It's like a 20-foot difference."

Ryer and Payne each had illustrious junior college careers, highlighted by top finishes at last year's national juco championships.

Ryer attended Mesa Community College for five semesters, but was strictly a pole vaulter until last year, when volunteer coach Mike Maynard got him started in the hammer.

"My heart wasn't in it anymore and he knew I didn't want to pole vault anymore," said Ryer, whose best in the vault was a mediocre 14-3.

"It was really fun going to practice every day, where in the pole vault if it was windy I thought I was going to crash or something."

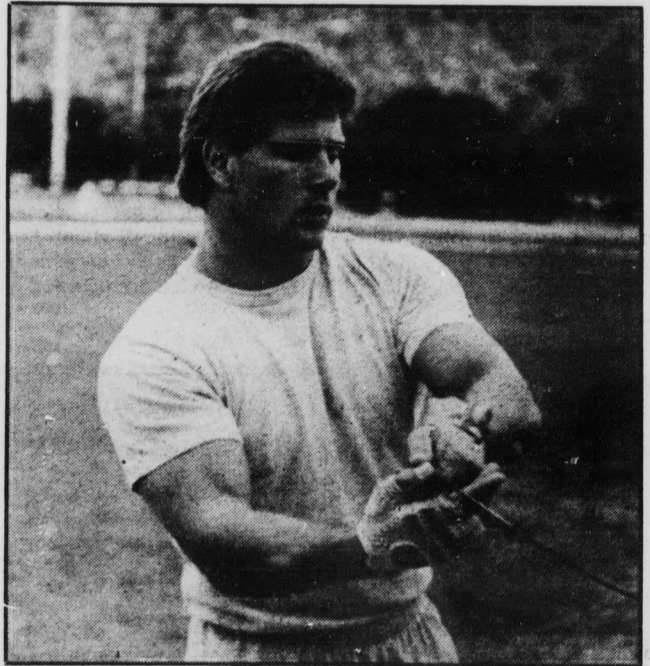

Less than a year later, Ryer won the national juco hammer throwing title with an Arizona collegiate record and personal-best 198 feet, 6 inches.

He won every competition he entered last year, except for one second-place finish at Mount Sac in Walnut, Calif.

Payne finished fifth at nationals and set a Glendale Community College record of 181-9. During his two years there, he also finished second statewide and seventh nationally in the discus and was named first-team all-Southwest region at outside linebacker in football.

Both were highly recruited and nearly committed to different schools before deciding on ASU. Ryer was "pretty much set to go to U of A" but chose ASU because of the quality of coaching. Payne had planned to attend Florida State but changed his mind after he heard Ryer had signed with ASU.

The two began training with each other from the first day of school last fall, and are complementary workout partners.

David Ryer

But it wasn't always that way; last year the two competed against each other on a regular basis.

"I didn't want no part of him," said Payne, who came out on the short end every time.

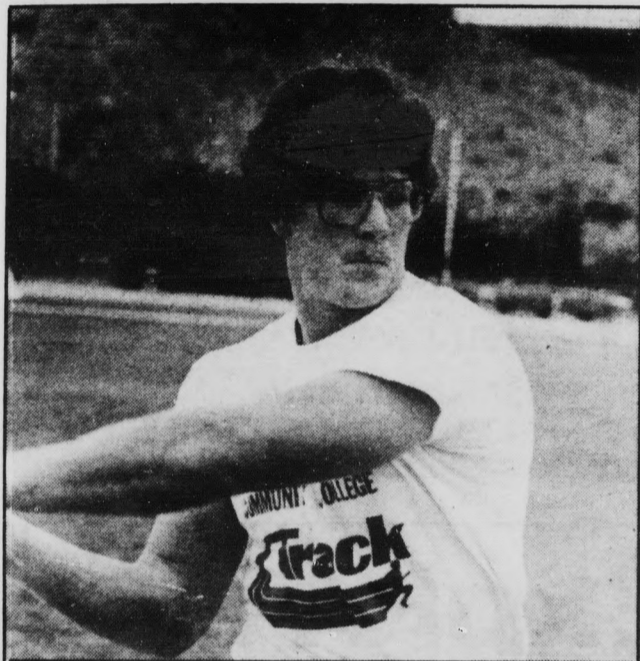

Both Payne and Ryer will have more to compete with this year. They have already witnessed the fierce level of competition in Division I track and field.

"I know realistically this year there are a lot of meets I'm not going to place real high in or win or whatever," Ryer said. "That's just part of life and working your way up the ladder."

Payne said: "It's scary, but what the hell. We've been throwing against them before, some of them (in junior college)."

"But by the time the real competition rolls around, we hope to be in the middle of it."

If history repeats itself, they should be closer to the top.

Devil badminton teams capture 2 national championships

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

The ASU badminton program continued its nationwide dominance, winning the men's and mixed titles and placing second in the women's competition at the national collegiate badminton championships in Swarthmore, Penn., on March 1-3.

In addition, all eight team members were named All-Americans, a first for ASU.

"They played very well," coach Carole Fisher said. "We've had players in the past choke when it came down to the end, but this year we played extremely well."

Fisher expected the men and the mixed teams to run away with their respective titles, and they came through.

The men won their third straight national title with ease, scoring 56 points compared to second place Stanford and Cal State-Long Beach with 13 points each.

Chris Jogis paced the men with his 15-10, 15-10 victory over teammate Benny Lee in the singles finals. ASU also placed both teams in the doubles championships, with Jogis and Lee capturing a 15-11, 15-7 decision over Karl Knudson and Sanjay Malde.

ASU won its second consecutive mixed title with 35 points, followed by Temple (14) and Long Beach State (12).

All four players in the finals represented ASU, with Knudson and Linda French defeating Jogis and Madakvi Tijoriwala 15-7, 15-8 for the championship.

The women's team ran a close second to Stanford, bowing to the Cardinal 41-38. Temple finished third with 33 points.

"I didn't know how the women would do," Fisher said. "We're weaker in that area than in years past, but they all played up to their abilities."

French made the women's singles finals before losing an 11-4, 12-10 match to Stanford's Joy Kitzmuller.

In women's doubles, French and Tijoriwala dropped a tight 15-12, 18-17 decision to the Cardinal's team of Kitzmuller and Armita Saraiya. In the second game, ASU set the game, tying it at 13-13. In this case, the first team to score five points wins.

ASU scored the first four points, but lost the serve and dropped five straight points to the Cardinal.

A win in either women's singles or doubles would have given ASU a three-title sweep.

"No, this certainly was not the best ASU team ever," Fisher said. "Last year we won all three titles. But we played well and I'm happy."

Urbano eyes '88 Games after pinning NCAA mat title

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

After senior Eddie Urbano proved himself to be the best wrestler in the nation in the 150-pound class, what will he be doing for an encore?

More wrestling.
"I'll be wrestling in the Clubs Cup (wrestling tournament) in Illinois," Urbano said. "I'll go see the World Cup and maybe try out for it. There are a lot of freestyle wrestling tournaments coming up."

Urbano became the first Sun Devil to win a NCAA championship since heavyweight Curly Culp in 1967.

"It's pretty indescribable," Urbano said. "I'm very happy. It was definitely the highlight of my life. I've been out there a long time — five years of college wrestling."

Urbano said he is also happy that it is over.

"I'm kind of relaxed my career is over," he said. "I don't have to worry about it. In past years I worked hard and came up short. Maybe I felt bored (this year)."

After he graduates, Urbano will still have plenty to do.

"After I'm done as a Sun Devil, I'll help as a booster and a graduate assistant," Urbano said. "I'll train for the (1988) Olympics."

Urbano said he feels he has a good chance to make the Olympic team.

"If I keep working, I believe I have a good shot," he said. "You have to believe in yourself."

As a graduate assistant, he will have a variety of jobs.

"I'll come in, look at the practices, do individual teaching, motivate them and scout other people," he said.

"I want to put a little back into the program. It's a great feeling to have."

Urbano began the season ranked first in the nation in Amateur Wrestling News. Urbano was confident.

"It was in my head and I worked for it," he said.

However, he lost three matches and slipped to third in the rankings.

"Around Christmas, I was getting shaky," Urbano said. "I felt flat most of the time."

Urbano worked his way back to the top perch before the tournament.

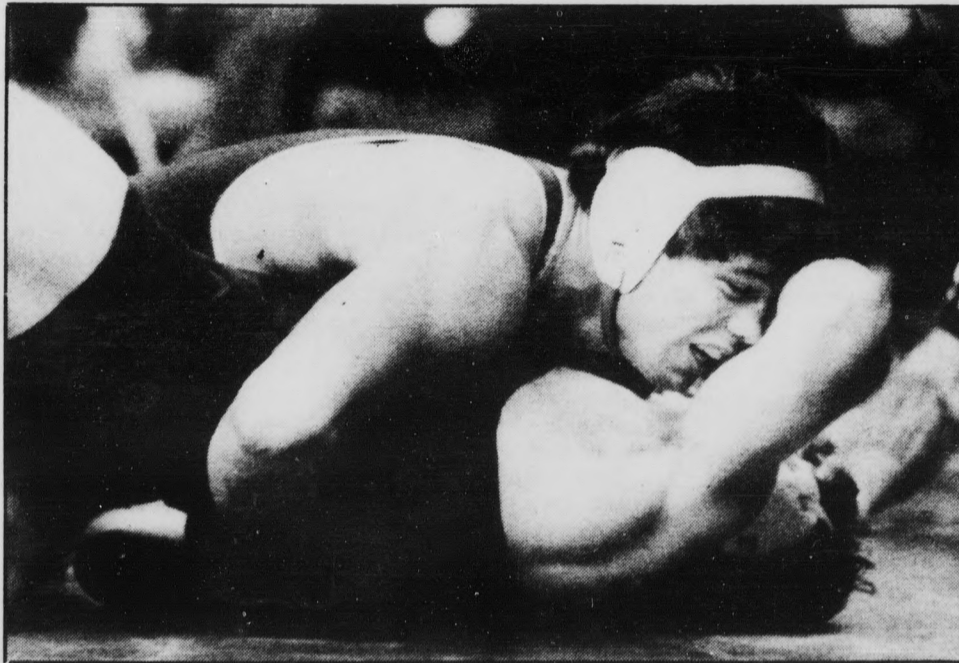

"You sit down and get over it mentally," Urbano said. "You have to go till it hurts. In fact, you have to go past the pain."

Urbano said Coach Bobby Douglas was critical to his success.

"He made me," Urbano said of the 11th-year coach. "I do what he says. He suggested a lot of things, some of which didn't work. But I tried them."

"If they fit me, I used them. It's like a personality. I'm very happy for Coach Douglas."

Golfers grab 6th in Mexico tourney

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

Sun Devil Rich Bietz finished third and led ASU to sixth place in a tough field at the Rafael Alarcon Invitational in Guadalajara, Mexico on March 14-16.

Oklahoma State won the tournament, shooting an 853. Texas took second at 857. ASU shot 870.

Bietz shot 210, including a 68 in the first round. Scott Verplank of Oklahoma State, a former U.S. Amateur champion, took a first place with a course-record 201. Bob Estes finished second with a score of 208.

Freshman Bill Mayfair finished second for ASU in 218. Don Leisy shot 220 and Tom Breitfeller carded a 225. Greg Cesario shot 148 after two rounds, but then shot in the "millions," according to Boutell.

"I would have taken fourth going down (to Guadalajara)," coach George Boutell said. "There were 13 teams there, and they were all in the Top 20. We beat Oklahoma, Wake Forest and some other teams that were rated ahead of us."

Boutell was pleased with Bietz's score. "It was a real good finish for a tournament with that good a field," Boutell said. "I'm happy with his performance. He played solid golf. He putted erratically, but for the most part he putted well."

Mayfair started out in good form but shot 75 and 73 in the last two rounds.

"He played well," he said. "He shot 70 the first day and played real well. The second day he didn't do anything well. But he still came moseying in with a respectable score."

Part of Mayfair's problem the second day was the first hole. He shot a double-bogey. He never completely recovered.

"No putts went in," Boutell said. "He felt OK, but nothing went in. The third round was kind of a 'blah' round. He hit the hole 10 times, but it didn't go in. His score was not as low as he felt it would be."

Leisy's score was his second best at ASU. Boutell said Leisy had the experience behind him.

"He played really well," Boutell said. "He had a little advantage in that he's been on this trip twice. That helped him."

"He hit the ball well, and he hit the most greens of anyone (except Bietz). I can't ask anything more from him."

Breitfeller did not shoot very well but still helped ASU, Boutell said.

"He just didn't seem to have it," he said. "If he doesn't have it, he goes ahead and shoots 75 and 76 and it counts."

Boutell is exploring the reasons why Breitfeller did not play better.

"His swing looks good," he said. "He may have a little bit of a concentration problem. He drives the ball on the fairway. It just looks like (his score) should be lower. He may have found a comfort zone that he needs to jump out of."

Gymnasts' late rally captures WCAA title

By TOM BLODGETT
Sports Editor

The ASU women's gymnastics team has found itself up against the odds more than once this season.

Take last weekend's conference meet. The second-ranked Sun Devils were down by .15 to Cal State-Fullerton going into the meet's final event.

If ASU were to rally it would have to be in the floor exercise, the Devils' most inconsistent event this year, according to coach John Spini. And they were performing in Fullerton, giving the Titans an extra advantage.

But the Sun Devils did it, winning the WCAA championship with a 187.95. Cal State-Fullerton, the defending champion, finished second with a 187.65.

Spini said the closeness of the meet made it fun to compete in and to watch.

"We had a lot of people come up to us and say it was the best meet they've seen in a while," he said. "It was so close and everyone was hitting their routines."

Lisa Zeis, competing on the floor for the first time in more than a month, scored a 9.60 to help ASU achieve its best score on the event this season.

"Thank God (she's back)," Spini said. "She didn't do a double pike, but her routine was so clean they couldn't take off any points."

Making the performance even more impressive, the Devils won without Kim Neal, the 1983 NCAA champion on floor, who was sick with strep throat.

"We brought Kim along with us to maybe get a vault out of her," Spini said. "But she said she wasn't feeling well and we didn't want to risk it. Sometimes it (a missing competitor) will bring the kids together."

Spini said that happened with the gymnasts at the conference meet.

"They came through when they needed it," Spini said. "There was much more energy than at the last home meet."

Jackie Brummer was ASU's top all-arounder with a 38.05, finishing second to Fullerton's Tania Rogers by .05. Brummer won the vault title with a 9.65.

Two other Devils won event honors. Shari Mann split the uneven parallel bars title with Arizona's Kelly Chaplin. Both scored 9.75.

Freshman Amy Koopman was the surprise winner of the balance beam, scoring a 9.65 for ASU.

"Amy Koopman did a great job," Spini said. "She has style and grace and she hit her routine."

Rogers won the floor title with a 9.65.

ASU may find itself bucking the odds again at nationals. If the Sun Devils are to win the NCAA championship, they must do it on the home floor of defending champion and No. 1-ranked Utah. The meet will be in Salt Lake City April 12.

But first ASU will host the Midwest Regional March 30 at the Activity Center. The U of A and the Utes will be among the competitors.

The gymnasts took three days off after the conference meet and began to train for regionals Tuesday.

"We want them to work hard but not overtrain," Spini said.
