ASASU may revoke unused money from campus clubs

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

Associated Students of ASU has the right to revoke any unused campus organization funds allocated by Senate Bill 10 in October unless purposes for the money are submitted in writing today, said Brian LaCorte, ASASU executive vice president.

LaCorte said nearly 100 organizations that were funded by the bill are subject to the deadline.

"If you allocate $12,000 to 90 clubs, you expect some clubs not to use all their money," LaCorte said.

If revoked, LaCorte said the funds will be returned to their original account and allocated to other campus clubs.

Senate Bill 55, passed by the ASASU senate in February, allows for any unspent funds to be returned to ASASU, he said.

The unused funds are "inefficient," and the bill will allow other groups to receive funding before the end of the semester, LaCorte said.

Less than $500 is currently available to organizations asking for senate funds, he said.

Other ASASU account balances are also "running low" and can't be transferred into the campus club and organization account, he said.

In the past, LaCorte said the account has had a "hefty balance at the end of the year," and these funds were made available for groups to use.

LaCorte said about 15 campus groups will seek funding from the senate before the last meeting on April 30.

Letters have been sent to all clubs involved, LaCorte said, and the organizations must spend appropriated funds or submit a letter to ASASU outlining plans for the money by today.

LaCorte said the clubs, which were notified of the policy change before Spring Break, may "be surprised if they filed the letter away."

A bill will be drafted by the ASASU Senate Appropriations Committee next Tuesday and submitted to the full senate to revert the funds back to the account, he said.

LaCorte said the measure was not "unfair because there are other clubs that need it."

"The money is just collecting dust," LaCorte said. "This year has had the most funding requests in the history of the senate," he said.

Other funds allotted by the senate must be requisitioned by June 30, which is the end of the fiscal year, he said.

Some organizations change leadership or plans and no longer need allocated funds, he said.

Regents election bill taken off House agenda

Cooper reassigns legislation to education committee

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

Two bills calling for the public election of members of the Arizona Board of Regents have been shelved, House Education Committee Chairman Jim Cooper said Thursday.

Cooper said House Bill 2404 — mandating the public election of board members — was reassigned to the education committee, which will not act on the legislation.

The second bill, House Concurrent Resolution 2017 — calling for the necessary constitutional amendment — was sent to the House floor for debate, but Cooper said he withdrew it from the agenda.

"I just didn't think it was something that we should have been doing," he said.

"We didn't need to take time up with an HCR," Cooper said, adding that the bills were companion legislation and both bills had to reach the House floor before either could be approved.

Cooper was one of nine legislators endorsing the legislation, but said he only signed the bill as a courtesy to Rep. John Kromko, the bill's sponsor.

"A lot of legislators (supported the bill) to voice their dissatisfaction with the Board of Regents," Cooper said.

"I think Mr. Kromko didn't ever expect the bill to pass," he said.

Kromko said he believes there the bill had enough support to pass in the House.

"The bill was shelved probably because (Cooper) wanted to stop it," Kromko said.

He told the State Press Tuesday he had not expected the bill to advance to the House floor and was unsure if the legislation was "such a good idea" when he introduced it in February.

Kromko said he initiated the legislation because he believed board members were unresponsive to suggestions and requests from legislators and university communities.

Board President Donald Pitt said the regents did not believe the bill would succeed when the legislation was introduced.

"I believe that the bill was not well-conceived and that it would politicize the board," Pitt said.

"The regents should make their decisions based on the needs of the (university) system and not base their decisions on single issues or to maintain voter popularity.

"The Legislature is often subject to voter popularity, but there is no reason for the Board of Regents to be subjected to it."

Kromko said the board is already politicized, since most members are appointed for their support of the governor's election campaign.

Pitt said allegations that the board was unresponsive to the Legislature and the university communities were unfounded.

"The board has been consistently responsive to the Legislature," he said. "But we can always strive to improve.

"If there is a perception, even if it is not true, it is necessary to break down the perception."

Kromko said Tuesday that little opposition to the bill was evident in the preliminary committee hearings.

Pitt said: "We did not move on this bill because it was basically meritless and we felt that with the wisdom of the Legislature it would not be adopted or acted upon."

Senate studies bill to allow hiring of uncertified teachers

Prospective teachers may no longer be required to complete a course of study in Arizona's colleges of education to receive state teacher certification if legislation in the Senate Education Committee is approved.

The legislation, sponsored by Rep. Jane Hull, R-Phoenix, was approved by the House of Representatives earlier this month.

Professors are not required to be certified, so the measure would not affect universities.

The bill would give school districts the option of hiring an uncertified associate teacher if they are unable to fill a teaching position with a certified instructor, Hull said.

Participants in the program would serve as associate teachers. They would have to hold a bachelor's degree from an accredited university, in addition to completing about 15 hours of teacher-training courses.

She said the legislation is aimed primarily at assisting school districts in hiring math and science teachers.

"If they can't find a highly qualified, certified teacher they can go to the corporations and find an engineer or someone to teach," Hull said.

The teachers would be employed for one year, and be evaluated each semester by school administrators.

The legislation is also aimed at employing engineers and technicians from local industries, Hull said.

She said the legislation would encourage people to teach math and science classes, and will have no effect on teachers' salaries.

"The teacher's union is opposed to (the bill)," Hull said. "But they are opposed to everything and anything."

She said the Arizona Education Association (AEA) is opposed to the bill because they feel unqualified personnel will be hired as instructors.

"That isn't logical," Hull said. "There are

'It's a slap in the face to every teacher in Arizona.'

laws restricting that."

Dennis Van Roekle, AEA president, said the bill creates a "triple standard" for teachers and is "sending the wrong message" to prospective teachers at ASU,

NAU and U of A.

Van Roekle, testifying before the Senate Education Committee Monday, said: "Arizona is headed for a shortage of teachers. I believe (the legislation) will make it worse."

He said prospective math and science teachers would be encouraged to seek jobs in industry, rather than teaching.

"You can come up with all the quick fixes you want, but it's a question of pay," Van Roekle said.

"It's a slap in the face to every teacher in Arizona. They are saying that the only thing I present is (course) content, and that is ridiculous.

"If they think that is my job then they are crazy."

Despite his criticism of the bill, Van Roekle predicts it will be approved.

Police kill marchers in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police fired into a crowd of blacks marching toward a white town Thursday, killing 17 and wounding 19, the government said. It was the bloodiest single incident in a year of racial unrest.

Louis le Grange, the white government's minister of law and order, said the violence began Thursday morning when 3,000 to 4,000 blacks advanced on a police detachment of 19 men and stoned them, refusing orders to disperse.

Newspapers quoted an unidentified witness: "Police suddenly opened fire. We deny we stoned them."

Le Grange said the crowd advanced on police "armed with stones, sticks, petrol (gasoline) bombs and bricks," while trying to march from the black township of Langa toward the white area of Uitenhage, near Port Elizabeth on the Indian Ocean coast.

The demonstrators were bound for Kwanobuhle, Uitenhage's other black township, to attend a vigil for three people killed in a clash with police 10 days ago, and had to pass through a white area to get there. Le Grange said they were led by a man dressed in black carrying a brick.

In Sharpeville, south of Johannesburg, and in neighboring townships blacks held boycotts and memorial services on the anniversary of the shootings that brought South Africa's black rights movement to the world's attention on March 21, 1960.

Iraqi army attacks Iranian border

BAGHDAD, Iraq (AP) — Iraq said Thursday its ground forces staged a lightning strike on Iranian lines, seizing enemy positions and killing hundreds of soldiers. Iran said Baghdad's warplanes bombed the border city of Ilam, killing 12 people.

In a communique issued in Baghdad, the Iraqi military command said two army brigades had taken part in an attack on the Iranians in the southern desert region of the front and occupied more than two miles of "enemy positions."

The communique said the Iraqis advanced for "long distances, destroying enemy forces and occupying their positions."

"The enemy forces were crushed and most of their soldiers killed, including their commanders, Sherif Kerimi and Hishank Moqaddemi," it said.

The attacks followed a Iranian ground offensive in the 1,100-square-mile Huwaizah marshland on the northern edge of the Basra sector.

The ground assault was reported shortly after an Iraqi military spokesman called on residents of the southern Iranian city of Ahwaz to evacuate, beginning at noon Thursday, because of pending attacks on "economic installations on the edge of the city."

Israeli army raids Lebanese villages in search of guerrillas; 23 killed

ANKOUN, Lebanon (AP) — Israeli tanks and armored personnel carriers smashed through several Shiite Moslem villages in south Lebanon on Thursday in a hunt for guerrillas. Approximately 23 people were reported killed, including two Lebanese who were filming for CBS News.

The Israeli military command in Tel Aviv said 21 guerrillas were killed and large quantities of arms were seized in raids on approximately a dozen villages.

Lebanese civil defense sources in Sidon said it was impossible to give firm casualty figures immediately after the 10-hour Israeli raid.

This was Israel's second major operation beyond its front line since the Israeli army pulled back from Sidon in the first phase of a three-stage withdrawal from Lebanon. On March 11, Israeli forces raided the village of Zrariye and killed 34 men during heavy fighting with Lebanese army soldiers and Shiite militiamen.

Falwell plans boycott of 7-11 stores until pornography no longer sold

TUCSON (AP) — Moral Majority leader Jerry Falwell said Thursday he expects a national boycott of 7-11 stores within a few months unless the 7,500-store chain's ownership, the Southland Corp., stops selling adult magazines.

Falwell said approximately 6,000 retail stores already have "removed pornography from their shelves in the last few months." He said he's hopeful of peer pressure from other retailers, and that "7-11 will cave in because it's right, not because they have to."

Falwell said, "We'll be talking to them on a reasonable and rational basis for another few months" to end the sale of magazines such as Penthouse and Playboy, which he and supporters consider pornographic.

"We're very encouraged in our battle with pornography," the evangelical Baptist minister said of his 6.5 million-member Moral Majority, noting the success of the National Federation for Decency and other organizations.

Prof studies students' social perceptions

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

College students' perceptions about people from different racial and ethnic backgrounds are a significant social barometer in America, according to the ASU sociology department chairman.

Professor Len Gordon said he discovered this after reviewing studies of the attitudes of students at Princeton University in 1932 and 1950 and performing his own studies at ASU in 1969 and 1982.

Gordon said evidence proves these samples are "reliable indicators of more general college student perceptions."

"Between the earliest documented studies of college students in the 1930s and the studies in the 1980s, there is an almost straight-line decline in hostile attitudes of college students toward various racial and ethnic groups," he said.

Gordon said the underlying attitudes people hold toward various groups are used in analyzing the nature of intergroup conflict and cooperation.

"If there is a big 'challenge group,' college students tend to be more activated than any other group except (groups) seeking social change."

The students interviewed at Princeton in 1932 were "virtually all white, male and Protestant," Gordon said.

The 1932 study showed that blacks were generally perceived as "superstitious, lazy, happy-go-lucky and ignorant," he said.

By 1969, these negative perceptions of blacks had significantly declined, said Gordon.

"The first major decline in hostile attitudes toward minorities occurred after World War II," he said.

He said this was largely due to the immigration of minorities into the cities and the fact that the United States had just finished fighting a war against two very racist regimes.

Gordon said that the G.I. Bill offered educational opportunities to a broader group of people than before, producing a greater ethnic mix.

The Civil Rights movement and the Vietnam War had a profound effect on college students of the late 1960s, he said.

Blacks became more widely described as "sly, aggressive and intelligent," and less often thought of as "stupid and physically dirty," said Gordon.

From 1969 to 1982, Gordon said, there was a leveling off of the earlier trends, but at a much lower level than in the 1930s or 1950s.

"This lack of a continuing decline in hostile attitudes toward minorities shows that the need to monitor equal treatment and opportunities for them is not a dead issue," he said.

Gordon said: "In theory, we are all equal, but certain people have more influence than others."

"One of our aims in America is to open opportunities for people to advance based on their own capabilities independent of ethnic and racial backgrounds."

"The reason I am so interested in the attitudes of college students is because they represent a high proportion of our future political, economic and social leaders.

"They will be positioned to influence a variety of economic and social policies within society."

Council earns Faculty Senate approval

By JONATHAN HIGUERA
Staff Writer

The Faculty Senate has voted unanimously to endorse a motion making the Arizona Universities Faculty Council an official representative body for faculty from the state's three universities.

The AUFC must have formal recognition from the Board of Regents before it becomes official.

"In the past, we've only been recognized at regents' meetings through calls to the audience," said senate member John Evans, an ASU English professor who sponsored the motion. "We've had to send committee chairmen and members from AUFC to the meetings to have faculty issues brought up."

ASU President J. Russell Nelson will decide whether or not to present the motion to the Regents.

"I feel fairly confident he will present the motion," Evans said. "I've discussed it with (Nelson) and he's been pretty supportive of the motion."

The AUFC will consist of nine members, three from each University, Evans said.

Evans said the AUFC would bring issues like merit pay considerations, cost of living increases, student advising and faculty-student ratios to the regents.

"There is definitely a need for the appointment of more faculty on this campus," Evans said.

"And the advisement system stands in crucial need of reformation," he said.

Evans said that in addition to telling the regents about faculty needs and concerns, the council could also keep faculty informed about the regents' position on issues.

"I think this would be fruitful for the faculty and the regents," he said.

Evans said the AUFC is similar to the Arizona Students Association, which consists of students from the state's three universities who present student concerns to the regents on a regular basis.

"The students have a direct voice to the regents, but the faculty doesn't," Evans said. "We think faculty ought to have the same voice."

Evans also said that traditionally, the Faculty Senate chairman has served on the AUFC.

"The immediate past chairman doesn't need to be elected to AUFC, but the other two are usually elected by the Faculty Senate," he said.

Big Brother is watching you. —George Orwell (Eric Blair)

Recent government actions encroach rights

Eric Auxier
Entertainment Writer

George Orwell was one year off when he wrote 1984. Or, perhaps more accurately, "Big Brother" waited until after 1984 to begin tightening his grip so the public's attention would not be so consciously focused on his actions. Actually, I do not believe any political body is seriously attempting to dominate our lives, but several recent acts, on both national and local levels, seem to be encroaching on our constitutional rights. The following is a list of heavies:

- Several months ago, the cult film "Pink Flamingos" was banned from the Valley Art theater by the Maricopa County Attorney's office. According to Deputy County Attorney Randy Wakefield, the film violates Arizona Criminal Code 13-3502 on obscenity. According to this statute, an item is obscene if it "appeals to 'prurient interest'" — that is, "morbid, shameful, disgusting, unhealthy, unwholesome, degrading interest in sex," or "excites lustful ideas or desires." The exact application of this definition is to be set by the local community.

Whether an item, such as a film, is obscene should not be the issue; and this is not a case of "Big Brother knows best." Everyone has the right to see any movie they please, and it's not up to someone else to decide what can and cannot be seen.

- The Reagan administration has been threatening states to raise their drinking age to 21; if not, the feds would withhold highway funds. This money comes from taxing the residents of these states, and is placed in a highway "trust fund" held by the feds. This trust fund is being held over the states' heads as leverage to legislate local laws that conform to the administration's wishes. This violates the 10th Amendment, which states all rights not held by the federal government shall revert to the states. This right comes from the philosophy that local government can best decide local issues. Drinking age laws are currently a state right. And now, as if by magic, Arizona has suddenly raised its drinking age. It is strange that every man and woman between the ages of 18 and 20 can be tried as an adult for consuming alcohol as a minor.
- A similar abuse of trust funds is happening to the Aviation Trust Fund, originally established by the Airport and Airway Development Act of 1970 to spend aviation user taxes for aviation facility improvements. The federal government is reluctant to spend this money on aviation, instead preferring to borrow the money to reduce the deficit. The Federal Aviation Administration (FAA) has also been using the trust fund money to pay for its day-to-day administration expenses — a use for which it was not intended. This year, the FAA wants to increase its annual "raid" on the trust fund to almost $2 billion. In addition, the administration wants to begin borrowing trust fund money without paying interest. (Even though the government has been borrowing the money all along, it has at least paid interest.) The Aviation Trust Fund could lose about $790 million per year if this is implemented.

- Governor Bruce Babbitt is pushing a bill to create a statute that effectively outlaws "promotions designed to encourage 'overindulgence' in alcohol." In other words, no more happy hours or drink price specials.

By passing stricter laws that raise drinking ages and ban happy hours, the lawmakers seem to be burning up the building to get rid of the mice. With less stringent legislation, tax monies spent previously on enforcement of rigorous drinking laws could be more effectively used for alcohol and DWI education/prevention programs and services such as the Rideline — a free ride home for those who have "overindulged."

The United States has some of the strictest laws concerning alcohol and drugs. The definition of legal and illegal drugs is completely arbitrary. In Turkey, alcohol is illegal, but people can smoke hashish in the streets. England has even legalized heroin, of all things, but a user must be a registered addict and have a doctor's prescription. A more lenient policy on alcohol and other drugs might alleviate many problems, such as organized crime, which traces its roots to the moonshiners of Prohibition.

- Recently, 16 Arizona sanctuary workers, including two Catholic priests and three nuns, were indicted by a federal grand jury for harboring illegal aliens. These aliens had fled their war-torn homes in El Salvador and Guatemala at great risk and are now finding that the U.S. government does not recognize them as political refugees — but merely economic refugees and therefore ineligible for legal asylum. When priests and nuns begin breaking the law, perhaps there is something wrong with that law.

I used to roll my eyes at these "overreactors" that cried wolf about the accuracy of "1984." Now I'm not so sure. Thank heaven there is still freedom of (censored)...

Letters reflect insensitive attitudes; empathy encouraged

Editor:

I have read the State Press every day since I arrived on campus in August 1983. When I started perusing this paper, I was gratified that I was being informed about the doings of the college community. I also was being a party to the different sides of various questions relating to the ideas and thoughts of the student body and the faculty.

What I see today is extremists who refuse to consider compromise on any grounds. They refuse to acknowledge that there are other people in this country who have different feelings, attitudes, backgrounds, etc. than they. There have always been extremists, but on this campus the extremists seem to be taking over the minds of the majority.

The letters to the editor section is now a stage for the propaganda of special interest groups. If those who spout the propaganda would get off their duffs and have to go out into the real world and work to right the wrongs they are so concerned about, they would find that it takes a lot more than rhetoric to make changes.

If the anti-abortionists are so concerned about this issue, why are they not working out on the streets teaching the uninformed how not to become pregnant?

If the anti-Israelites are so adamant about their cause, why are they not fighting in the armies which are fighting to annihilate that country?

If anti-Americans are so strong in their feelings, why are they living in this country?

Even more frightening than those mentioned above, are those who would muzzle those who speak out. I am not for muzzling anyone. The best thing about this country, that has had so many detractors lately, is that anyone, whether American or otherwise, can, in the papers of this country, say anything they want to. And they can do so without fear of reprisals.

My only desire at this time would be that before you write a letter to the editor, stop and think about those you are condemning. Are they really your enemy, or are they just someone like yourself, who's trying to live a life, very similar to your own, and is having just as hard a time as you finding a valid and satisfying life.

Try to remember that there are other religions than your own, there are other races than your own, there are other ethnic groups than your own, and there are other social and economic feelings than your own.

A final thought: destruction takes many forms. The words of one person can cause the physical destruction of another. It would be my wish that everyone who takes up the pen to place a word on paper to be read by others, takes the time to put himself into the shoes of the person who will be reading that word. And may you not have to eat your own words.

On Feb. 28 the State Press published a letter signed by a "Dean Kauffman" regarding boisterous hockey fans. Yesterday Sports Editor Tom Blodgett referred to this same Dean Kauffman in a column commenting on Kauffman's attitude. This Dean Kauffman (spelled with two "f"s) should in no way be associated with ASU student Dean Kaufman. The State Press apologizes to Mr. Kaufman for the confusion.

Change in Soviet leadership does not mean change in aggressive attitude

Editor:

Whenever a change in the political leadership of the Soviet Union takes place, we Americans — with our natural optimism and naivete — want to believe that the change augurs well for the Soviet-American "friendship." I don't want to rain on the parade, but someone should remind the enthusiastic of one clear fact. The Soviets are not — nor have they ever been — our friends.

From the beginning, the Soviet Union has pledged its undying enmity toward the capitalistic societies of the West. Lenin repeatedly called for a global revolution to destroy them. Khrushchev vowed to bury them. To date, no Soviet leader has ever repudiated — by word or deed — the doctrine of undying hostility to the West. There is no reason to expect Gorbachev to be different.

In our complex world, we must negotiate, communicate, and understand the Soviets. But a key part of that understanding must be that our two systems are fundamentally incompatible. The Soviets are not our friends. When we accept this fact, then we can come to terms and learn to live with our enemy.

State Senate approves bill that relaxes education colleges' entrance requisites

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

Legislation that will allow prospective teachers entrance into Arizona's three education colleges without passing each part of the Arizona Teacher Proficiency Exam (ATPE) was approved by the State Senate Thursday.

The bill, sponsored by Sen. Luis Gonzales, D-Tucson, allows students who successfully completed a course in the colleges of education prior to Sept. 1, 1984, admittance to the colleges without passing the ATPE.

However, the students would be required to pass a teacher proficiency exam before receiving their teacher certification, Gonzales said.

The bill also sets Dec. 31, 1985, as the deadline for validation of the Pre-Professional Skills Test, adopted by the Arizona Board of Regents at its March meeting.

The PPST will replace the ATPE as the proficiency test administered to prospective teachers before they enter the colleges of education at ASU, NAU and U of A.

The three-part exam will undergo a 90-day validation process, Regent Esther Capin said during the March meeting.

The test will be administered to a diverse group of educators from elementary and secondary schools and faculty from ASU, NAU and U of A, to determine if the test adequately measures skills and is not discriminatory.

The decision to adopt the PPST ended an eight-month review of the ATPE by the board, after accusations by minority action groups that the test had a negative effect on minorities.

The test was also questioned when nearly 50 percent of the prospective teachers failed it.

"It (the bill) simply allows the regents to conditionally admit students to the colleges of education without passing each part of the test," Gonzales said.

"The universities are supposed to be there for the benefit of the student and to teach students how to teach," he said. "If we are putting up tests to keep them out of the programs, then we are defeating the purpose."

Gonzales said the ATPE should screen students before they entered the colleges of education but not restrict students from the programs.

"I am not against testing," he said. "We should use this as a tool to upgrade (the students') skills," he said.

The bill also requests that the regents provide a program of assistance in basic skills for those students who fail the proficiency exam.

Gonzales said students should not be excluded from the colleges of their choice after being accepted by a university.

"We shouldn't exclude students when they are in the system paying (tuition) and have already been accepted at the universities," he said. "We shouldn't be able to say 'Hey, get out'," Gonzales said.

Study states 20-25 percent of students have experienced courtship aggression

By JONATHAN HIGUERA
Staff Writer

Two years have passed since ASU received attention as the site of a publicized study on courtship aggression.

The results of the study, which was done by ASU professors Mary Laner and Jeanine Thompson, were published by Time magazine in June 1982.

It disclosed that 60 percent of the 371 ASU students who responded to the survey had inflicted or been the recipient of at least one violent act in a courting relationship.

The study also tabulated verbal abuse into the above figure.

In 1982-83, ASU professors John Johnson and his wife Kathleen Ferraro conducted a investigation similar to the Laner-Thompson study and three other courtship aggression studies.

The two found that between 20 and 25 percent of college students who responded had experienced courtship aggression. The Johnson-Ferraro study did not tabulate verbal abuse into the study.

The study also found that many of those who had experienced at least one act of courtship aggression did not consider it abusive.

"Everybody's definition of abuse seems to be different," Johnson said.

Most studies on domestic violence use the conflict-tactic scale to define the level of violence. The last eight items on the scale were considered violent in the Johnson-Ferraro study.

Those items are pushing or shoving, throwing objects, slapping, kicking, biting or hitting with fists, being pushed down, choked, threatened with a knife or gun and use of a knife or gun.

"What the conflict scale didn't tell us was who was inflicting or receiving, or under what conditions the violence took place," Johnson said. "We felt we needed to interview (people) who had experienced courtship violence to find these things out."

Johnson and Ferraro both suggested to graduate student Larry Mayer that he should conduct a study on courtship aggression for his master's thesis in Justice Studies.

"My study was just completing what (Johnson-Ferraro) started," Mayer said.

Recently, Mayer completed interviews with 27 students, mostly women, who had experienced courtship aggression.

Mayer interviewed the women twice, with each interview lasting about three hours.

"I was more interested in the context of the aggression than the sheer numbers," he said.

Mayer said that because of the small sample size of the study, specific patterns were hard to pinpoint.

"There seems to be a great deal of emotional turmoil before the physical violence actually occurs," Mayer said.

"There also seems to be a feeling of betrayal prior to the violence."

Mayer also found that most relationships ended after one or two incidents of violence. If they didn't end, the relationship would become more difficult.

"For some of the respondents, the relationship was already breaking up," he said. "The violent act was the final straw."

Mayer found that violent acts were committed in diverse environments, but usually third parties were not present.

In a few cases, Mayer said, there was a correlation between alcohol or drug use and violent incidents.

"It may not have had a causal effect but it was present," he said.

Recognition

Association to honor distinguished ASU faculty, alumni

By NICOLE MASSIE
Staff Writer

Two ASU faculty members and four University alumni will be honored at the Alumni Association's Centennial Founders Day Dinner, said Dorothy McWhirter, administrative assistant to the association's director.

ASU alumnus James L. Loper is currently the executive director of the Academy of Television Arts and Sciences and will act as master of ceremonies during the event, McWhirter said.

McWhirter said the Distinguished Teaching Award is presented every year for outstanding achievement among members of the faculty.

According to McWhirter, faculty members honored this year are Karl Dannenfeldt, professor of history, and Ellamae Branstetter, professor in the College of Nursing, for her achievements in research.

George Steele, president of the Alumni Association, will present each professor with a plaque and a $1,000 check from the annual fund, she said.

ASU President J. Russell Nelson will present the four ASU alumni with awards for outstanding achievement in their chosen field, she said.

Included in the alumni to be honored are Peterson Zah, chairman of the Navajo tribe and former assistant to the attorney general and Robert McConnell, current vice president of CBS in Washington, McWhirter said.

In addition to Zah and McConnell, other alumni to be honored are Celia Halas, a psychologist, lecturer, and author and L.S. Skip Fletcher, associate dean of engineering at Texas A & M University and president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineering, she said.

According to McWhirter, nominations for the Distinguished Teaching Award were solicited from around campus.

The nominations were reviewed by an awards committee comprised of past recipients of the award and students, she said. The final decision was made by the alumni board of directors.

The awards committee recommends the recipients of the awards, she said.

In honor of ASU's Centennial, "all past recipients of both the faculty award and the alumni achievement award have been invited to attend the dinner as guests of the Alumni Association," she said.

The dinner is "filling up fast. It looks like we will have a good turnout," she said.

The capital campaign and ASU's Centennial will be celebrated during the reception at 6:30 p.m. and dinner at 7:30 p.m., which will be held at the Phoenix Country Club, 7th Street and Thomas Road.

The capital campaign is the University's first major fundraising effort to date, she said.

She said a campus-related group, The Side Street Strutters, will provide musical entertainment for the evening.

Club to present full scholarship

An information seminar for students wishing to study abroad for the 1986-87 academic year, through the Rotary International Scholarship Program will be held on April 13. A sign-up sheet is available in the Scholarship Office, Matthews Center.

The scholarships are for graduate, undergraduate, teachers of the handicapped and journalism students (print or broadcast). All basic expenses including round-trip air travel, study expenses and room and board are paid by the Rotary Foundation. In return the student is expected to serve as an international goodwill ambassador to help promote better understanding between peoples of different countries.

Family members of Rotarians are not eligible for consideration.

Deadline for application for the seminar is April 11, 1985. The Scholarship Office should be contacted for further information.

The moon was up, the stars were out and—pfft!—your rear tire was down. Good thing there was a phone nearby. And a few good friends who were willing to drive a dozen miles, on a Saturday night, to give you a lift. When you get back, you want to do more than just say "thanks." So tonight, let it be Löwenbräu.

Löwenbräu. Here's to good friends.

ASU student wins Maricopa County title

By CARRIL L. MITCHELL
Staff Writer

ASU graduate student Debra Ramirez has been chosen Miss Maricopa County and will try to become Arizona's representative in the Miss America Pageant next September, she said.

Ramirez, a music theater graduate student, felt she had a good chance at winning because she had been involved in the contest before.

"I've competed before, when I was at (Oral Roberts University) so I decided to take advantage of my experience and enter," Ramirez said.

She said she first got involved with the Miss America contest in 1980. She won a county competition in Oklahoma but did not advance to the final competition.

According to Will Philips, the executive director of the Miss Maricopa County Scholarship Foundation, the entrants were judged on interviews, evening gown competition, swimsuit competition and talent competition.

Philips said the talent competition constitutes 50 percent of the scoring, and the other competitions are each worth 16.7 percent.

Ramirez received a $2,500 scholarship to the Bobby Ball Talent Agency and a $500 scholarship to the school of her choice, Philips said.

Philips said the contestants in the county competition were judged on their educational background, how they presented themselves and how well-rounded they were.

Ramirez sings in the talent competition of the pageants. "Debby has a phenomenal voice," Philips said. "She's a well-rounded lady."

She will compete for the title of Miss Arizona June 29 in Tucson. If successful, she will compete for the Miss America title in Atlantic City, N.J., in September.

Ramirez said she plans on winning the state competition and advancing into the national competition.

Marine 1st Lt. Schabacker performs his amazing acrobatic stunts during a vaudeville act in Peking, China.

Topsy-turvy

Inverted prof discusses life

By PATRICK J. KUCERA
Staff Writer

Imagine doing a handstand nearly every day since 1942. Joseph C. Schabacker, an ASU professor of marketing, has performed one and two-arm handstands on a daily basis since he discovered a love for gymnastics and acrobatics as a junior high school student.

"I actually began in junior high school," he said. "The reason for my having joined the Tumbling Club in school was to build up my chinning."

Schabacker attended junior high in 1932.

At the age of 65, he continues doing the handstand while counting his age by tapping his feet together.

After joining the Tumbling Club, Schabacker said his father saw the interest his son had in gymnastics and helped him become more involved.

"He sent me to the finest place in Philadelphia called Hermann's," he said. "In addition to gymnastics, I got into acrobatics."

'USSAF, a non-profit organization seeks to promote acrobatics and prepares teams for competition.'

Schabacker continued his hobby and became an acrobat for club dates while attending Temple University.

"In those days it was adagio (slow) acrobatics," he said. "I worked full time at Temple from 1946 through 1949 and I worked weekends doing performances."

He performed at various clubs throughout Philadelphia on the Vaudeville circuit, he said.

"I used to do a number of professional club dates when Vaudeville was back in vogue," Schabacker said.

Schabacker moved to different parts of the country during his career, including Los Angeles and Wisconsin, before arriving at ASU in 1963.

After the club dates, Schabacker became president of the United States Sports Acrobatic Federation (USSAF).

"I was the president for its first six years," he said, adding that he stepped down as president and then returned to that post. He is the federation's current president.

The USSAF is a non-profit organization which seeks to promote sports acrobatics and prepare teams for international competition.

Joseph C. Schab

Among Schabacker's other credentials, he performed in Peking, China in 1946. He was in the Marines at that time.

Schabacker said he performs his handstands even when he is sick, but he has a policy against performing for his management classes.

policy against doing it in class," he said.
 Schabacker said he does not want a lot of "talk" going around.
 The handstanding is not a means to keep in total physical shape, he said, but does help him in the long run.
 "It doesn't keep you in great shape, but it keeps me mentally fit," Schabacker said.
 He said he met his wife on the acrobatics circuit, where she also performed.
 "It kept us in fantastic shape," he said. "Now, each day I do it."
 He remained a professional acrobat until 1952, but has kept gymnastics and acrobatics as a major part of his life.
 "This is the sideline of my life," he said.
 Schabacker has also been an integral part of the ASU community since arriving here 22 years ago.
 His first post at ASU was the chairman of the department of management. After two years in that position, Schabacker was made vice president of the University and acted as dean of summer sessions and extensions.

'At the age of 65, he continues doing the handstand while counting his age by tapping his feet together.'

He left the vice presidency in 1970, and is now a professor of management.
 "It was a career change on my part," Schabacker said. "I wanted to get back into teaching."
 Since coming to the University, he helped bring international exhibition events to ASU as president of the USSAF.
 The People's Republic of China and the Polish national championship sports acrobatic teams both made stops at the University Activity Center. Schabacker said when the Polish National team performed during halftime of a 1979 basketball game, he was astounded at the ovation the acrobats received.
 "ASU was playing a basketball game against UCLA," he said. "I arranged for the four (acrobat) to perform at halftime. They got an ovation like I have never heard before."
 Schabacker said he will continue his handstanding until he's unable to do it anymore.
 "I just keep adding an extra (second) to my count each year," he said.

Still going strong 38 years after his Peking performance, Schabacker celebrates his 65th birthday in great form.

Law prof to speak on international human rights

By MELISSA OLSON
Staff Writer

The Rev. Robert Drinan, S.J., educator, lawyer and former congressman, will give a free speech, "The American Lawyer and the Future of International Human Rights," at 8 tonight in the Great Hall of the College of Law.

Drinan, 64, is a professor at the Georgetown University Law Center in Washington, D.C. and specializes in international human rights, constitutional law, civil liberties and arms control.

Drinan will be the keynote speaker for the state-wide conference "Christian Involvement in the Secular World," at 11 a.m. Saturday at the Newman Center. He will speak on the "Christian Involvement in the Public Sector."

He will also preach at the 5:30 p.m. mass at the Newman Center.

Drinan entered the Society of Jesus in 1942 and was ordained as a Jesuit priest in 1953.

As a Jesuit, which is mainly a teaching order, Drinan maintains his priesthood by combining the ministry with his profession, said Rev. Albert Felice Pace, director of the All Saints Catholic Newman Center.

Between 1971 and 1981, he was a U.S. representative and was active in the House Judiciary Committee's impeachment hearings against Richard Nixon.

Hayden Library has an 11-minute phonotape of Drinan's opening remarks of these hearings.

He resigned his seat in the House after a papal decree forbade the involvement of priests in legislative politics, said Pace.

Drinan has written five books, the latest, "Beyond the Nuclear Freeze," was published in 1983.

Two of his earlier books are in the ASU Law Library, and he has also been a contributor, columnist and editor for publications including World View, National Catholic Reporter and Family Law Quarterly.

Drinan received his bachelor of laws and master of laws degrees from the Georgetown University Law Center in 1949 and 1950 respectively.

He received his doctor of sacred theology degree in 1954 from Gregorian University in Rome and served a post-doctoral fellowship in theory from 1954 to 1955 in Florence, Italy.

From Boston College he received his bachelor's degree in 1942 and master's degree in 1947.

In 1950 Drinan was admitted to the District of Columbia Bar, in 1956 the Commonwealth of Massachusetts Bar and in 1955 the U.S. Supreme Court Bar.

Since 1966, he has taught and lectured at institutions including the University of Michigan Law School, New York University Law School and was dean and professor of law at Boston College Law School.

Saturday's sessions at the Newman Center will be $12, and are for young adults and college students to reaffirm their Christian commitment, said Pace.

Registration for the conference is at 7 tonight and at 8 a.m. Saturday.

Drinan's appearances are sponsored by the ASU College of Law and the Newman Center.

Toxic test

ASU improves method of exposing safety hazard

By MELISSA SMYTH
Staff Writer

The University is "beefing up" programs which identify and test toxic and cancer-causing substances like asbestos, the new assistant director of environmental health and safety said.

"If there's one thing I want to point out, it's that students and faculty will see a lot of changes in the next few months," Kathleen Williams said.

As the new assistant director, Williams said she will be responsible for the health and safety conditions for all ASU employees, faculty and students.

"I'll be evaluating every area on the campus for health and safety issues," she said. "If there's an emergency with a chemical spill or a gas leak, I'll be there."

Her responsibilities will include identifying and testing asbestos levels in University buildings, improving hazardous waste disposal and safeguarding employees from toxic chemicals, she said.

Williams said the University has tested for asbestos but the program will be "getting off on its own feet soon."

Core samples will be taken from buildings insulated with asbestos and sent to laboratories to be analyzed, she said.

After the samples are analyzed a professional recommendation will be made to determine what action should be taken, she said.

"It's a very involved process," she said. "A whole building could be full of asbestos, but there's no law that says you have to remove it as long as the employees aren't exposed."

The University could have asbestos removed or covered with a sealant, she said.

Williams said the department will also improve waste management by constructing a neutralization tank at Building 92, located near McAllister Avenue, across from the Psychology Building.

The tank will neutralize acids and bases and release the purified substances into the water system, she said.

The University currently packages, labels and pays to have hazardous wastes hauled away to the U of A, she said.

The department is also considering "revamping" the facilities by reinforcing fire-proof walls, explosion-proof lighting and building dikes around areas that contain wastes, she said.

ASU Police Chief C. Russell Duncan said the EHS department has "not been a very aggressive division" in the past, adding that he expects Williams to revitalize the division.

"She's really a find," Duncan said. "She's young and brilliant . . . a very aggressive individual."

Students score lower on exam, studies show

By the College Press Service
WASHINGTON, D.C. —

Students hoping to become college teachers are scoring lower on their graduate school entrance exams than other students, a new study shows.

"The doctoral degree programs are not attracting the best and the brightest anymore," said Clifford Adelman, who wrote the report on the test scores for the National Institute of Education.

His study found that grad school entrance exam scores have declined nationwide since 1982, particularly among liberal arts students likely to become teachers.

Adelman said he believes the decline indicates undergraduates in disciplines such as history and political science are more likely to skip graduate school and go directly into the job market or professional programs such as law.

"Students perceive that academic life is not as attractive as other lives," he says.

Although Graduate Record Examination (GRE) test scores have declined as a whole since 1962, the decline varies widely among disciplines, Adelman said.

Political science majors' scores have dropped sharply, while those of mathematics, economics, chemistry and engineering majors have held steady or risen slightly.

Most grad schools use the GRE as an admissions test. The exam focuses on certain thought patterns — such as deductive reasoning and the use of symbolic systems — that are more common in some disciplines than others.

But Adelman believes another factor is that the brightest political science majors are not even taking the GRE test because they're not going on to grad school.

If true, the quality of teaching in many academic disciplines is in jeopardy, Adelman said.

"If we're not putting the quality students into the pipeline of academia now, we're going to face a dismal situation in the 1990s," he said.

Court adjourned

Weinhauer looks ahead after disappointing year

By JERRY BROWN
Assistant Sports Editor

A small picture frame stands among the odds and ends that decorate Bob Weinhauer's office. Inside the frame is one sentence:

"God didn't say it would be easy!"

For the third-year ASU basketball coach, the 1984-85 season was a grim reminder of that statement's validity.

"It was probably the most physically draining year I've had," Weinhauer said. "I haven't had two losing seasons in a row too many times, and I don't like how it feels."

"I saw the team out there giving 100 percent and still coming up short and that was hard to take. I wanted to run out and help them."

Coming into the season, Weinhauer liked his team's chances. ASU lost only one regular from the previous season, and his young team had a chance to get their feet wet.

"We finished strong the year before and had a lot of talent coming back. Four of five starters and most of our bench was back," Weinhauer said. "When you add to that the freshmen and junior college recruits, you had to be encouraged."

The Devils stayed competitive most of the season, only to lose six of their last seven games and limped home with a 12-16 record, the school's worst since going 4-22 in 1969-70.

"The non-conference schedule was very tough. I think it was rated 16th toughest in the country," Weinhauer said. "But the opportunity to go to Japan was a great experience for the team. I figured we would finish 6-4 after the non-conference schedule and we ended up 5-5. I was satisfied."

But injuries also plagued the Devils in the conference season.

"We lost Chris Sandle for a month of practice, and he wasn't 100 percent most of the time. We lost Jim Deines for the UCLA game, which was critical for us," Weinhauer said. "Steve Beck and Bobby Thompson also went down, and Bobby wasn't at full strength for Oregon State and Washington State. We certainly had our share of bumps."

But the most discouraging factor for Weinhauer was his team's inability to win close games.

"Down the stretch, we lost four games in a row and had a chance to win all of them. But we could never get the ball and the lead at the same time," Weinhauer said. "It was frustrating for me and anytime something like that happens, the team loses some confidence."

"The games were like replays. During the Washington game, I called four timeouts in a row, hoping it would help. Nothing worked."

The lack of a team leader on the floor also was a handicap all season.

"When we upset Oregon State, Eric Holloway dominated the first half and Chris Sandle dominated the second half," Weinhauer said. "But in the next game, they were different players. We never had a player take charge on the court consistently."

Weinhauer had different progress reports on his two junior college transfers, guard Ron Singleton and center Jon Taylor.

"I thought Ron played great in spots for us all year," Weinhauer said. "He's a very inspirational player and a fun person to be around during practice."

"I thought Jon Taylor started the season reasonably well but never reached the potential he has," Weinhauer said. "I don't think he ever asserted himself on the floor. He was never comfortable. But we need Jon Taylor next year if this team is going to go anywhere."

Weinhauer said forward Eric Holloway showed similar tendencies.

"Eric must stabilize himself, be more consistent. He hasn't done that in the last two years," Weinhauer said. "He can carry the team on his back one game and then disappear the next."

Weinhauer said the scoring production from the backcourt was adequate, but inconsistency was again a problem child.

"We had to switch our four guards all the time to find who had the hot hand," Weinhauer said. "Bobby Thompson scored 47 points in one weekend, then gets two points against the U of A."

"Steve Beck had to adjust to the guard spot this year and I think he did a great job. But I don't think he's personally satisfied," Weinhauer said. "He's the hardest worker on this club and if he can improve, he will."

When reminded that all the teams that finished ahead of the Devils are losing important seniors, Weinhauer held up his hands and shook his head.

"That's not what concerns us. This team has to learn how to play as a unit. They have to be concerned with themselves," Weinhauer said. "We will take care of the other teams after we take care of ourselves."

Weinhauer's celebrated temper received a good workout over the season, something he is aware of and attempting to tone down.

"I am a vocal coach," Weinhauer said. "I've always been that way. I might have been even more so this year because we were so young. But when you look back, I didn't have a technical all year."

"It's important to learn how to lose like a gentleman, but it's also important not to learn how to lose."

"I haven't learned the latter."

Coach Bob Weinhauer was encouraged before the season...

...but injuries and inexperience during conference games...

...turned the optimism into frustration at the end.

Devereaux continues plate tear from lead-off spot

By DEAN OBENAUER
Sports Writer

In ASU's first baseball game of the season, Sun Devil right fielder Mike Devereaux blasted four doubles and one home run in six at bats.

"It was the best thing that could have happened to me," said Devereaux, who is preparing for the Sun Devils' three-game series with USC this weekend. "Coming off a poor season like last year I really needed the confidence to start me off this year."

Last year Devereaux had only four doubles and two home runs to his credit. With this season only 36 games old, he already has 10 home runs (including two back-to-back Monday night against Nebraska) and six doubles to his credit. In the season opener alone he equaled last year's double total of four.

"(Hitting instructor Jeff) Pentland has helped me a lot since last season," Devereaux said. "He has taught me to relax at the plate which is really the key to hitting well under pressure."

As the lead-off batter for the Sun Devils' hitting attack, Devereaux has the added pressure of getting the offense started.

"I try to make something happen," he said. "Being the first batter I know how important it is to get the inning off on a good note."

And he has succeeded at that. Three times this season he has led off games with home runs pumping the team up early.

In addition to his slugging improvements, Devereaux also leads the Devils in bases stolen with eight thefts in 11 attempts.

"My season goal was to steal at least 30," he said. "I'm a little bit disappointed that I really haven't gotten the chances I had wanted so far."

"I look to steal when the pitcher is behind in the count. I like to catch a pitcher when he is relaxed."

Devereaux did not leave off last year the way he has started this season. Joining the team last year as a Mesa Community College transfer, he was overshadowed by two big names in the outfield — Oddibe McDowell and Barry Bonds.

Despite the lack of acknowledgement at times, Devereaux handled it all in stride.

"You can't let that bother you," Devereaux said of his position. "You can't worry about anyone else but yourself."

Besides being new to the team, Devereaux was coming off of knee surgery. A surgery that could have ended his playing career.

"After surgery I was worried," he said. "I constantly worked on it (the knee) with weights at Desert Samaritan. It hasn't bothered me since and I think it is better then ever, myself."

Mike Devereaux

As a graduate of Kelly Walsh High School in Casper, Wyo., Devereaux was originally enrolled at ASU and expected to play baseball with the Sun Devils.

"I was advised by a couple of (ASU) coaches to go to Mesa," he said.

While he was there he was named most valuable player and was a major contributor to Mesa's state and regional championships, including a third-place finish at the National Junior College World Series.

"I'm glad I went to Mesa, got a chance to play and got a scholarship to play at ASU after it was all over," he said.

For Devereaux it was a dream come true. "As a kid growing up in Wyoming all I ever wanted to do was play baseball at Arizona State," Devereaux said. "My family was very baseball-oriented and it is all I've ever wanted to do."

Splinters:

•It was announced Thursday that junior shortstop Keith Bennett has been dropped from the team for "disciplinary reasons." Bennett was batting .217 at the time of his dismissal.

•The Sun Devils (14-22 overall, 4-5 six-Pac), who took two of three from No. 11 Nebraska this week, travel to USC (14-16, 3-6) this weekend for a three-game series with the Trojans.

•First baseman Louie Medina made his first appearance since his right forearm injury Feb. 22, Wednesday night in the Sun Devil's 12-11, 11th inning victory.

Medina, who is normally a right-hand batter, batted as a left hander because of the injury, going 1-2 on the evening.

"We've been using a form of hypnosis called the Alpha state to speed up the change," coach Jim Brock said. "He has spent quite a bit of time on it."

Lady netters open 2nd half of conference slate after big wins

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

Coming off dominating wins over two non-conference teams this week, the ASU women's tennis team travels to California this weekend for Round 2 against Cal State-Long Beach and top-ranked Southern California.

The Devils, who whipped Drake 8-1 Tuesday and shut out Northern Colorado 9-0 Thursday, are trying to break a three-match losing streak against WCAA foes.

ASU (1-5 conference, 13-7 overall) gained its only conference win of the year against Long Beach State with a 9-0 thrashing in late February.

The undefeated Women of Troy, who unseated Stanford in the latest coaches' poll, beat the Devils 7-2 in the teams' first meeting on March 10.

Coach Sheila McInerney said she would be happy with the same outcomes the second time around.

"I wouldn't say they scare me," McInerney said of the 49ers (1-7, 12-10), "but we'll have to play well to beat them. If we do that, we shouldn't have any problems with them."

"I was really pleased with our performance against SC last time. I'll be happy if we do as well as we did last time, but if things go right, we can do better."

ASU No. 1 netter Sheri Norris played a part in both ASU points in the first ASU-USC contest. Norris won a three-set decision over Mary Norwood and teamed with Carol Coparanis for a No. 1 doubles victory.

"Sheri does pretty well against SC, but I don't want to jinx her by saying she has something on them," McInerney said. "She goes out there and plays as hard as she can every time, and it pays off."

USC's overall strength hurt the Devils last time, with the Trojans sweeping the bottom four Devil singles teams and the No. 2 and 3 doubles teams in straight sets.

"We've been working hard and hopefully they can do better than that," McInerney said. "A couple didn't play all that well, but that's SC's advantage, they're strong all the way down."

The Trojans are tied with Stanford for the WCAA lead with a 6-0 conference mark, 15-0 overall.

The Devils will once again be without Vanessa Miller, who may redshirt the season due to a hamstring injury.

Despite its 1-5 WCAA mark, ASU continued its surge in the coaches' poll, rising to 13th this week. All seven overall losses came against Top Ten teams — USC, No. 2 Stanford, No. 3 Texas, No. 7 San Diego State (three times) and No. 10 UCLA.

All 10 team members have at least a .500 individual record this season. Norris is the top singles winner with a 15-4 record. In doubles, partners Norris and Coparanis have compiled the top records, at 13-4 and 14-3 respectively.

WE ARE CHRISTIANS ONLY

Our lives often become cluttered with complexity — burdened with increasing demands and filled with the latest gimmicks and gadgets. At times like these we often long for simplicity — a shedding of the excess baggage that keeps us from enjoying life at its fullest.

Restoring a sense of balance often means reducing our life to its essentials — re-evaluating, recovering lost ideals and a commitment to pursuing life in a different way.

This is also true in Christianity — and this is the common goal of the people of the Tempe church of Christ. We are seeking to restore in the 20th century the uncluttered simplicity of first century Christianity.

We believe that by following the Bible as our only authority for faith and practice we can reduce Christianity to its original purity and essentials.

We seek to "continue steadfastly in the apostle's teachings" as the first Christians did (Acts 2:42).

Let's be Christians only is our only goal. We share an ideal — a commitment to restoring the spirit and practices of the first Christians.

Come share the ideal — we are

Men gymnasts chase elusive title

By TOM BLODGETT
Sports Editor

Despite the consistent strength of ASU men's gymnastics, no Sun Devil team ever has won a Pac-10 conference title in the sport.

That may change this weekend when the Devils, ranked fourth nationally, travel to Berkeley, Calif., for the Pac-10 Invitational.

ASU will try to dethrone defending champion UCLA. The Bruins, who are ranked third in the nation, have dominated the conference in recent years, according to ASU coach Don Robinson. But the Devils have a good chance to win.

"If we shore up a couple areas and do our job, Pac-10s will be ours," he said.

Robinson said the areas of concern are pommel horse and vaulting, the events on which ASU has been most inconsistent this year.

But the Devils have improved in the events recently, according to Robinson, and two solid intrasquad meets this week have left him confident.

"I tell them that on a bad day I want them to score a 9.6," he said. "On a good day, they are a 10.0. I don't want any part of this missing (their routine) business."

The floor exercise, high bar and parallel bars could be strong events for ASU, according to Robinson.

Individual Devils could come home "with a bunch of first places," Robinson said.

Freshman twins Dennis and Dan Hayden, along with Jerry Burrell, should be among the Devils' top competitors.

Burrell will have a chance to win floor exercise and vaulting. He has averaged 9.55 and 9.64 respectively in those events.

Dan Hayden has been statistically the top all-arounder in the nation much of the season. He averages 57.52 for the six events.

Hayden has ASU's top averages in the pommel horse, still rings, parallel bars and high bar.

Dennis Hayden is just as good as brother Dan, according to Robinson, but has been hampered most of the year by a broken toe.

Still, Dennis has ASU's second-best all-around average at 56.88 and rates just behind his brother in most events.

ASU's season average as a team, 279.365, ranks fourth in the country behind Penn State, Ohio State and UCLA.

The Devils and UCLA have split two contests this season. ASU won the first meeting in January at its own All-American meet. The Bruins got their revenge at the UCLA Invitational last month.

"I'm thankful we've got them on neutral ground," Robinson said. "If we were at UCLA there would be 6,000 people cheering for them, and that would give them an advantage."

"It makes a difference when people care," Robinson said the Bruins will be ASU's "No. 1 team to worry about," but there will be plenty of competition from other schools.

"There are several teams that will be competitive," he said. "The scores have really come up a lot at the end of the season."

Stanford and California each have improved as the season has progressed. New Mexico, which has been invited to compete with the Pac-10 schools, will provide stiff competition, according to Robinson.

"We have beaten New Mexico five times this season, but they have steadily improved," he said. "The last time out they were at 280."

Because teams such as New Mexico and UCLA provide strong competition, the meet will give ASU a good warm-up for nationals.

"There will be a lot of pressure," Robinson said. "The competition is as good here as it will be at nationals."

Track team relays on big guns for weekend triangular meet

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

The ASU men's track team hopes its individual talent can overcome the depth of two non-conference foes, New Mexico and the University of Texas-El Paso, Saturday in a triangular meet at Sun Angel Stadium.

Field events will get underway at noon followed by the running contests at 1 p.m.

ASU coach Mike Gray predicts a close meet and said ASU's main concern will be a comparative lack of depth.

"We're going to find out about that real quick," Gray said. "Both teams have more depth, but we have the big guns."

UTEP has a rich tradition in track, sporting six teams in the Track and Field News collegiate dual meet rankings over the last decade. Recent Miners have set NCAA records in the 400- and 10,000-meters, the high jump and the shot put.

Gray said UTEP's dominance in distance events has declined lately and has been replaced by potent sprinters and weightmen.

New Mexico has built a respectable reputation in the Western Athletic Conference and relies on its all-around strength.

"They have at least three strong athletes in every event and four or five in some," Gray said.

Gray said the Devils have to take advantage of the middle-distance races and the sprints, but the relays will play the most important role in the final outcome.

"We're going to have to get ahead in the relays," Gray said. "That's one place where you can score, with 5-0 scoring (five points for first place, none for second)."

The meet will give ASU another chance to qualify individuals for the Pac-10 finals and the NCAA outdoor championships. Last Saturday in a non-scoring meet at Sun Angel Stadium, the Devils earned nine invitations to the conference meets and two to nationals.

Dave Ryer's hammer throw of 197-4 qualified for nationals along with Jim Camp's shot put of 61-2 $\frac{3}{4}$.

The Pac-10 qualifiers are: Kenny Robinson, 100-meters; Darryl Clack, 200-meters; Eddie Davis, 800-meters; Treg Scott, 1500-meters; Camp, shot put and discus; Ryer and Terry Payne, hammer throw; and Ron Kamaka, high jump.

Clack and McArthur Osborne may have the best chance at qualifying this weekend after barely missing last week. Clack was timed .06 seconds below the qualifying mark in the 100-meters and McArthur Osborne missed the mark by less than one second in the 800 meters.

"Hopefully, it would be nice to get Cedric Fullard in the pole vault," Gray said. "He's very capable of it."

Fullard's best of 15-6 last Saturday fell 10 $\frac{3}{4}$ inches short of the standard.

Gray said he thinks the team is starting to gel after getting all the butterflies out in last week's season-opener.

"I sure do," Gray said. "The team is getting closer and people are believing in themselves. They're relying on each other and team spirit is high."

Douglas, Urbano receive awards

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

A shock, it wasn't.

ASU coach Bobby Douglas was named Pac-10 Wrestling Coach of the Year for the third time in six years.

Douglas said he was pleased and expected the honor.

"I never think about being Coach of the Year until it happens to me, but I expected it," Douglas said.

Douglas, who won the award in 1979 and 1983, has won more times than any Pac-10 coach since ASU joined the conference in 1978.

Senior Eddie Urbano, a two-time All-American, was named Pac-10 Wrestler of the Year. He won the NCAA championship in the 150-pound class.

Douglas said both awards will help ASU wrestling.

"From a recruiting standpoint, our program is on a vertical plane," he said. "It has taken 11 years to get where we can be considered a contender for the title in the future."

"My goal is still to win a national title," Douglas said. "I think the fans, supporters and most importantly, the kids realize we can win a national title. Eddie has started the ball rolling for several potential national champions."

Douglas said the publicity will help wrestling in Arizona.

"With the two of us receiving this honor, it serves notice to Arizona wrestling," he said. "We have moved to another level of prestige."

Douglas said Urbano's success began in high school in Tucson.

"It's a credit to Sunnyside High School and (coach) Don Klostreich," he said. "They take as much honor in Eddie as we do."

Urbano's success, however, is only the beginning, according to Douglas.

"Eddie Urbano winning the title is like the shot heard 'round the world," Douglas said. "We're coming."

Softball team, new pitcher in LA

By BOB HEILER
Sports Writer

Heading to Los Angeles today for a tournament with seven other top 10 teams, the softball team takes a record of 18-6, along with a new hurler forced to the mound by the academic ineligibility of teammate Pam White.

Softball coach Mary Littlewood said that White's academic ineligibility will prevent her playing until next year, since grades do not come out until the season is over.

"She was shy one hour," Littlewood said, "and there's no way that can be remedied in the middle of the semester. She's taking 15 hours now, and planning to go to summer school, so we'll have her back next fall."

Meanwhile, junior Cheryl Persinger, who usually plays outfield or shortstop, has recently found herself pitching. And pitching well, according to Littlewood.

"(Persinger) throws a great low fastball, then delivers an off-speed that really throws the hitters. She's super.

"Since we're without White, we only have two pitchers (other than Persinger), so it's really nice to have her there to step in for us," Littlewood said.

Persinger pitched a complete game last week against the U of A, earning a 3-2 victory. She also threw five innings in a 2-1 win over Kansas.

In other action during spring break, the team won games against the University of Oklahoma and the University of Northern Iowa, with scores of 2-1 and 6-1 respectively. They also recorded losses against Nebraska, 2-1, Central Michigan, 3-1, and the University of Southern Illinois, 2-0.

"We should not have lost that game (against Southern Illinois)." Littlewood said. "We had an awful lot of errors. The field conditions were bad, but that's really not a legitimate excuse."

Littlewood also was unhappy about the loss to Central Michigan.

"Again, this was a game we should not have lost," she said "The errors were the big problem."

Despite the recurring problem of fielding errors, Littlewood was optimistic about their chances in the upcoming Pony tournament in Los Angeles.

"This tourney has eight top 10 teams in it, so it's going to be a really tough contest," she said. "We play Fresno State in the first round, which is ranked fifth, but we should have a good chance."

ASU is currently ranked seventh in the nation, with four of the top 12 conference leaders in runs batted in on its roster. Center fielder Kathy Escarcega is No. 1 in RBI with 15; second baseman Yolanda Moreno is ninth with 8, while third baseman Laurie Woodcock and catcher Angie LoSasso are tied for 11th with seven apiece. LoSasso also ranks 10th in batting average, sporting a .304.

If ASU beats Fresno State, they probably will have an opportunity to gain revenge on Nebraska in the second round, according to Littlewood.

"Assuming that Nebraska wins their first round game, and I don't really see how they couldn't, we'll see them again in round 2," said Littlewood.

The tournament, which starts today, runs three days. After that the team will travel to Flagstaff to take on NAU on Wednesday before returning home to Sun Devil Club Stadium to host Arizona Western College at 5 p.m. March 29.

Invitation to apply for

STATE PRESS EDITORSHIP

The ASU Student Publications Advisory Board is now soliciting applications for the State Press editorship for the Fall Semester 1985.

Applicants for the position of editor:

- must have a cumulative grade index of 2.20 or better;
- must have either two semesters' service on the staff of the State Press or responsible editorial experience with a commercial, college, or university newspaper; and
- must have been a full-time student at ASU for at least the two consecutive semesters prior to applying.

Candidates must also:

- submit at least two letters of recommendation from university faculty members and/or professional journalists;
- list on the application form the titles of all journalism courses completed and the grades earned in those courses;
- submit at least two examples of a news story, feature story, or editorial written for the State Press or another newspaper; and describe on the application form the functions and responsibilities of previous positions held on the staff of the State Press or other newspapers.

Candidates must pick up application forms at the State Press office, Matthews Center North Basement. The completed forms must be typewritten.

The deadline for receipt of applications will be Friday, March 29 at 4 p.m.

Applicants need not be journalism majors; candidates from all disciplines are invited, graduate and undergraduate.
