

Brock to call it quits over drug controversy

By JERRY BROWN
Assistant Sports Editor

ASU baseball coach Jim Brock, who will discuss his future with athletic department officials this morning, told the State Press Monday afternoon he has coached his final game in a Sun Devil uniform.

"I feel I have three options," Brock said from his home in Tempe. "One is to rejoin the club, one is to ask for more time until the inquiry is over, and one is to tender my resignation."

"I don't intend to put on a Sun Devil uniform again."

The controversy stems from recent articles in the Arizona Republic over the baseball team's use of Nardil, a mood-altering drug prescribed by Dr. James Gough. Gough has been a psychiatric consultant at ASU since 1976.

Brock said he had to decide whether he would still be able to function at the position he has held since 1972.

"I had to ask myself: 'Is it possible for a coach to function if a newspaper like the Enquirer (Republic), with the largest circulation in the state, is out to get him fired?'" Brock said.

"How much would my image as a recruiter be hurt if I fought back against the Enquirer (Republic), which will continue to back up its situation by printing attacking articles against me?"

Brock said he was aware Gough was prescribing the drug to players, but did not know which players had received prescriptions.

"We felt it would be bad for the players to violate doctor-patient confidentiality," he said. "The only time I knew anything was when the player asked me to become involved. Whenever Dr. Gough and I discussed a player's treatment, it was always in his (the player's) presence."

Brock said he trusts Dr. Gough's judgement about the use of the drug.

"I would have no reason, as a layman, to think the drug was dangerous," he said. "As laymen, we have to look to the experts. I am convinced Dr. Gough knows what he's doing. He is the expert in the Southwest on Nardil. The athletic program at ASU has benefited from his presence."

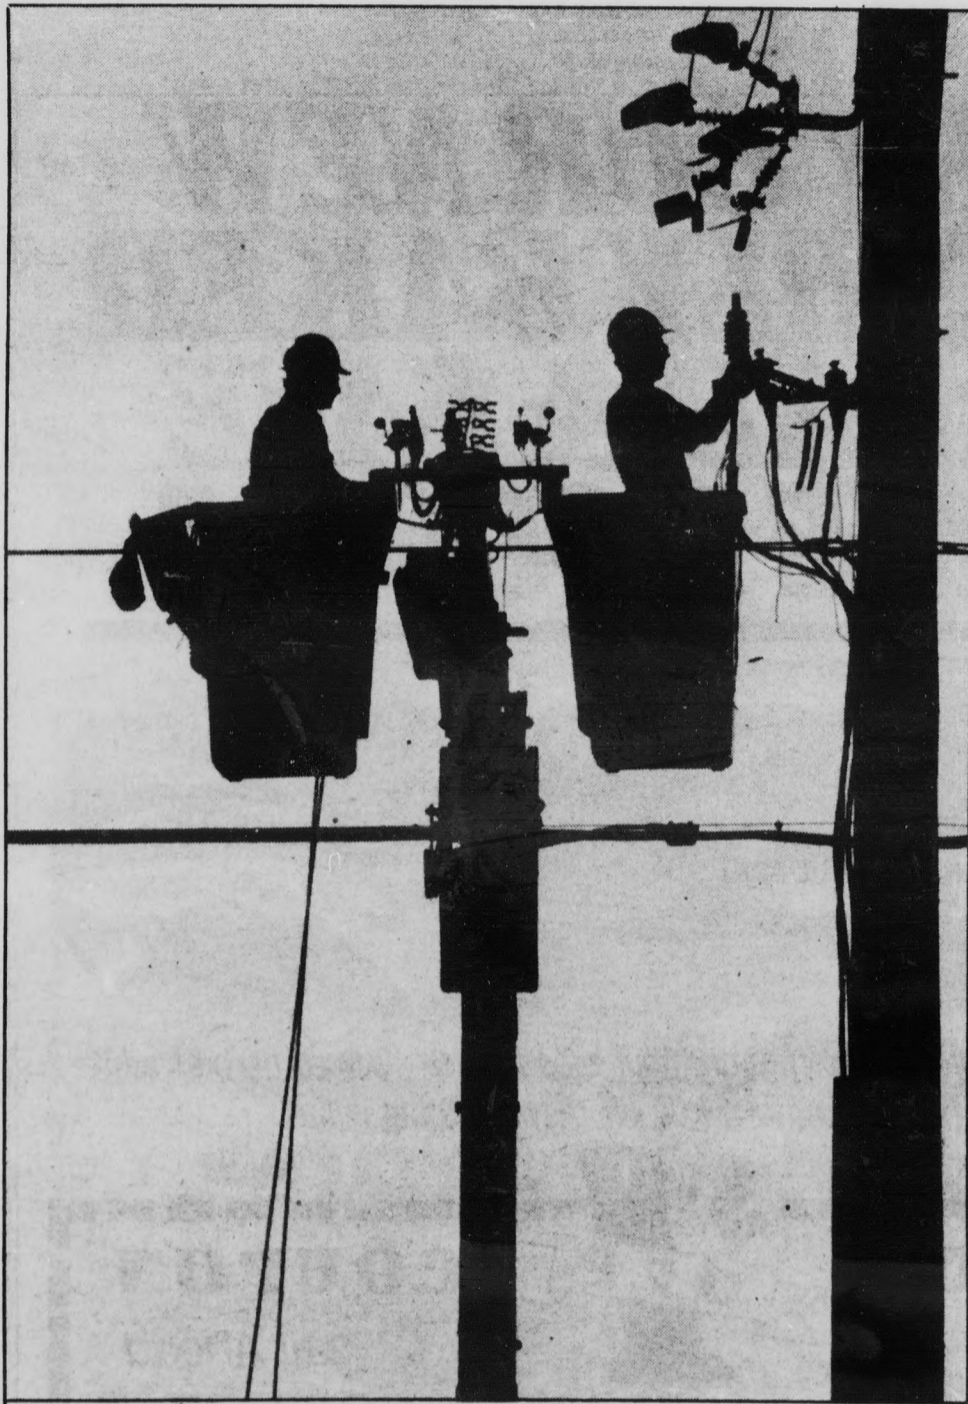

"At no time was it my decision to have a player use (Nardil), OK its use, or prescribe the drug to any player."

Brock said he used Nardil under Gough's supervision for five or six months as recently as last November to clear up a chemical imbalance in his blood.

"It was a maintenance drug," Brock said. "It was a baby drug at the tail end of my treatment to make sure everything stayed normal."

Brock was not in the dugout Sunday afternoon during ASU's 11-9 victory over

Terminators blow; Cholla without power for 6 hours

By JONATHAN HIGUERA
and DAVE POWELL
Staff Writers

Residents of Cholla Apartments were without electricity for more than six hours Friday after two Arizona Public Service terminators blew up.

The terminators, located on Rural Road across from the complex, exploded at about 1:30 p.m. and weren't repaired by APS workers until about 7:45 p.m.

"I was sitting in my apartment watching television and I heard a loud pop," business administration freshman Jeff Molitz said. "Then everything just went off."

"It was a loud explosion that echoed around the complex," said another resident.

This was the second power outage for the Cholla Apartments in two weeks.

On March 12, power went out at about 9 p.m. for two hours before an APS worker replaced a fuse.

According to APS foreman Bill Merrow, who supervised the second repair of the terminators, the first APS repairman did not notice the extent of the damage.

"The first one happened at night and I think the other troubleman didn't notice the damage done to the primary terminators," he said.

Merrow said storms may have contributed to the damage of the terminators, resulting in the explosion.

The cables leading to the transformer handle 7,200 volts, he said.

Dan Melosi, director of Cholla Apartments, said the emergency generator automatically went on, but it only lights the corridors and powers the sprinkler system.

"There were no safety problems, just inconveniences," Melosi said.

He said one of the first procedures the Cholla staff follows after a power outage is to check if anyone is caught in the elevators of the eight-story building.

"Nobody was caught this time," Melosi said.

John Ferdin, area coordinator of residence life at Cholla, said if anyone is caught in an elevator, the fire department must be called.

One student on the seventh floor had a sprained ankle, Ferdin said.

"She was probably the most inconvenienced of our residents," he said. "But she got some people to help carry her up."

Ferdin said disabled residents are housed on the first floor.

Melosi said he and some of his staff answered phone calls and stood outside the main desk answering questions from inquiring residents.

Some residents were concerned about food spoilage, but Ferdin said they were told to keep the refrigerator doors shut.

"I live here with my family and our refrigerator didn't defrost at all," he said.

Ferdin said residents couldn't get much done in their apartment after dark.

"The residents were pretty understanding," he said. "It was a Friday and a nice day so people could be out doing things."

But those who stayed at the apartments were nonetheless relieved when electricity was restored, according to Virginia Spini, Cholla desk assistant.

"I think the whole complex screamed with joy when the power went on," she said.

Greek leaders start alcohol education program

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
Staff Writer

ASU Greek leaders have started a program to educate fraternity and sorority members about alcohol and the new state laws, according to Bob Venberg, co-chairman of Greek Steering Committee.

Venberg said members of the Greek system started Greek Leaders Against Drunk Drivers (G.L.A.D.D.) and were trained by ASU's Student Health Center on the effects of alcohol and state laws regarding its use.

"We have groups of four or five people who go around to the different houses and educate the pledge groups (new members)," said Venberg, a member of Sigma Nu fraternity.

Venberg said the group would like to instigate the 'I'm Driving' program, which would encourage people who visit bars to designate a person who would not drink alcoholic beverages.

Through the program, a designated member would wear an "I'm Driving" button and receive free non-alcoholic drinks from the bar throughout the night.

Venberg said the group has contacted 30 bars in the Tempe area that will furnish free non-alcoholic drinks to the specified driver.

G.L.A.D.D. would also like to travel to local high schools and talk to students enrolled in driver education classes.

"We wouldn't go in as teachers but as regular college students," he said.

Venberg said the group would not condemn drinking students who are not of legal age, but would encourage the students not to drink and drive.

"We would also like to provide training for the Greek presidents to recognize individuals with drinking problems," Venberg said.

G.L.A.D.D. would also like to educate the fraternity and sorority houses on the legal liabilities of giving parties where alcohol is served.

"The beer companies are helping us out," Venberg said. "(The companies) have provided training films and Blood Alcohol Level charts."

He said the program is unique to ASU because they approached University administration, instead of the administration asking the Greek system to initiate a program.

"The idea is just starting and we're working with the administration," Venberg said.

Venberg said the program was started because of confusion about the new laws concerning alcohol.

Soviet bugs found in typewriters at American Embassy in Moscow

WASHINGTON (AP) — Soviet electronic bugs secretly planted in typewriters at the U.S. Embassy in Moscow may have resulted in a serious compromise of highly classified information being handled by diplomats at the embassy, CBS News reported Monday night.

"For at least one year and probably longer, the American Embassy in Moscow was the victim of a sophisticated electronic spy operation which gave Soviet leaders an inside look at what U.S. diplomats were doing and planning," said CBS correspondent David Martin.

Citing unnamed "informed sources," CBS said Soviet agents secretly installed tiny sensing devices in about a dozen embassy typewriters.

"The devices picked up the contents of documents typed by embassy secretaries and transmitted them to antennas hidden in the embassy walls," it said. "The antennas, in turn, relayed the signals to a listening post outside the embassy."

The network said the bugged typewriters were in use from 1982 until the operation was uncovered in 1984.

Soviet sentry shoots American army officer in East Germany

HEIDELBERG, West Germany (AP) — A Soviet sentry shot an unarmed U.S. Army officer who was on a legitimate mission in East Germany and left him to die without medical aid, U.S. officials said Monday. The Soviets said he was "caught red-handed" taking pictures in a restricted area.

The Soviets said the guard fired when the American officer tried to flee and other soldiers captured his driver, who was at their vehicle nearby. The State Department called the shooting "murder."

Each government protested to the other. The shooting occurred Sunday in or near the East German town of Ludwigslust.

President Reagan said Maj. Arthur D. Nicholson Jr. "was doing nothing except what we're entitled to do" when the Soviet soldier shot him. Asked whether the major was engaged in espionage, Reagan said: "We challenge that."

The Soviet Embassy said Nicholson and his driver were in a restricted zone and entered it "despite the presence of clearly visible warning signs in Russian and German."

2 foreigners kidnapped in Lebanon; revolutionaries claim responsibility

BEIRUT, Lebanon (AP) — Gunmen kidnapped a British journalist Monday near Beirut, and a Lebanese underground group said it abducted a Frenchman reported missing in the northern port of Tripoli.

The Lebanese Armed Revolutionary Factions demanded that a comrade jailed in France be freed within 48 hours in exchange for the Frenchman, Gilles Sidney Peyrolles. He was the fourth French citizen kidnapped in Lebanon since Friday.

Eight Westerners have disappeared in Lebanon since March 14.

A statement delivered Monday to a Western news agency in the capital said the Revolutionary Factions abducted Peyrolles and demanded the release of Abdel-Kader Saadi within 48 hours.

The group has claimed responsibility for six attacks on U.S. and Israeli diplomats in France since 1981, resulting in at least four deaths.

Center adds computer guidance system

By MELISSA OLSON
Staff Writer

A computer guidance system to aid students in deciding majors and choosing career directions has been added by Career Services and Counseling and Consultation.

All registered ASU students will have access to the system beginning Monday from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., said Diana Regner, assistant director of career services career resource division.

The three computer terminals and their four software systems cost more than $20,000 and will be part of the Career Development Center, she said.

The computers have been set up for two weeks, and she said they are still working out bugs in the system.

Approximately 50 students, including referrals from advisers, undecided majors and students from the Career Exploration class have used the system as test cases, she said.

The Discover program and System of Interactive Guidance and Information (SIGI) are guidance programs that identify and assess values, goals and decision-making and they also give information on job outlooks, said Regner.

The Guidance Information System (GIS) gives information on 2- and 4-year colleges, graduate programs, financial aid and more than 1,000 occupations, she said.

Discover for Adults is designed for re-entry and graduate students, said Regner.

Gary Peterson, sophomore purchasing major, said the computer is self-explanatory and it couldn't hurt anyone to use it.

The Career Development Center, when completed, will include resource and reference materials, counselors and advisers and the computer system, Regner said.

The center is in three different places, which is difficult for staff and is also inconvenient for students, she said.

Until the services can be located together, the computers will be housed in the Academic Services Building, room 111A, and soon a walk-in adviser will be available to help students using the system, Regner said.

There will be no charge to use the four programs. For more information and scheduling call 965-7343.

Anthropology Week to be held

By NICOLE MASSIE
Staff Writer

ASU students have the chance to learn the importance of archaeology in Arizona's cultural heritage during Arizona Anthropology Week, March 31 to April 6, said Charles Redman, professor of anthropology.

Redman said there are 30 events around the state being held to celebrate the week.

ASU will offer guided tours of its anthropology museum and the "Preserving the Past" and "La Ciudad: A Hohokam Village" exhibits, Redman said.

He will begin the week with a lecture on his excavations at the Shoofly Village archaeology site in Payson at 2 p.m. Sunday at the Heard Museum, 22 E. Monte Vista Road.

Anthropology student Charles Hoffman will give a presentation of stone tool making from noon to 1 p.m. April 4, at the State Capitol, 1700 W. Washington St., Redman said.

He said the ASU anthropology department will sponsor exhibits at the State Capitol from April 1-5 on archaeology sites in Payson and Globe.

Valley-wide activities include the display of 11 exhibits of artifacts, equipment and tools, and video presentations at the State Capitol Museum, April 1-5.

A presentation on the Homolovi ruins found near Winslow will be sponsored by the State Land Department and will be held at the Arizona State Building, 1688 West Adams, April 1-5.

From March 29 to April 6 the Pueblo Grande Museum, 4619 E. Washington St., will offer special tours featuring archaeological investigations.

The director of the Arizona State Museum in Tucson, Raymond H. Thompson, will lecture at the Phoenix Art Museum, 1625 N. Central Ave., at 2 p.m. Sunday. His topic will be the archaeology of northern Arizona.

The Tempe Historical Museum, 3500 S. Rural Road, will have photographic and three-dimensional exhibits on display April 2-6.

This is the third annual Arizona Anthropology Week. Redman said this event was "designated by the governor because of his interests in archaeology."

Gov. Bruce Babbitt established the Archaeology Advisory Group, a public/private sector organization spearheading the week, said Redman.

This week's scandal

So now it's drugs. The "Athletic Department Scandal of the Week" award goes to the ASU baseball team, formerly under the direction of coach Jim Brock. In the wake of the controversy surrounding the drug Nardil, it appears that Brock will resign his coaching position today after a 14-year career that brought the Sun Devils two national championships.

It seems some players, and even a few coaches, have been prescribed the mood-altering Nardil by a Scottsdale doctor employed as a psychiatric consultant to the ASU athletic program.

The chief medical officer of the U.S. Olympic Committee told the Arizona Republic he considers Nardil "very, very dangerous." It can cause "hypertensive crisis" in some cases, according to the Physician's Desk Reference.

Brock says he had no knowledge that the drug was either controversial or dangerous. Yet we must admit to being a bit puzzled by his continued support of Dr. Gough, after the condemnations of Gough's practice of freely prescribing Nardil.

Brock said player use of Nardil is common in both football and baseball. Even when confronted with the evidence against using Nardil, Brock claimed that the accusers did not know what they were talking about, and that players' use of the drug was not a story.

Whatever the truth is, we do know that the ASU baseball program has suffered another blow on the heels of penalties that make the team ineligible for postseason play this year.

Problems with probation, grades and drugs are plaguing ASU's athletic program. As scandal after scandal hits the department, we wonder with whom the fault really lies.

Gorbachev's motives subtle, long-term

Editor:

To quote our beloved State Press' guiding light, "There you go again!" Once again, Mr. Munsil, you have managed to turn a perfectly valid argument into superficial rhetoric.

Your column of March 21 on the USSR loses most of its credibility in the first paragraph and thereafter launches forward to rapidly lose the remainder. This talk of Chernenko "lying his way to power," of being a "murderer committed to the oppression of the people," and the very original description (or have we heard this before?), "emperor of an evil empire," is sheer demagoguery. Nonetheless, the best example of invalidating a sound argument is the irresponsible statement, "Chernenko is now roasting in hell." Mr. Munsil, who made you God?

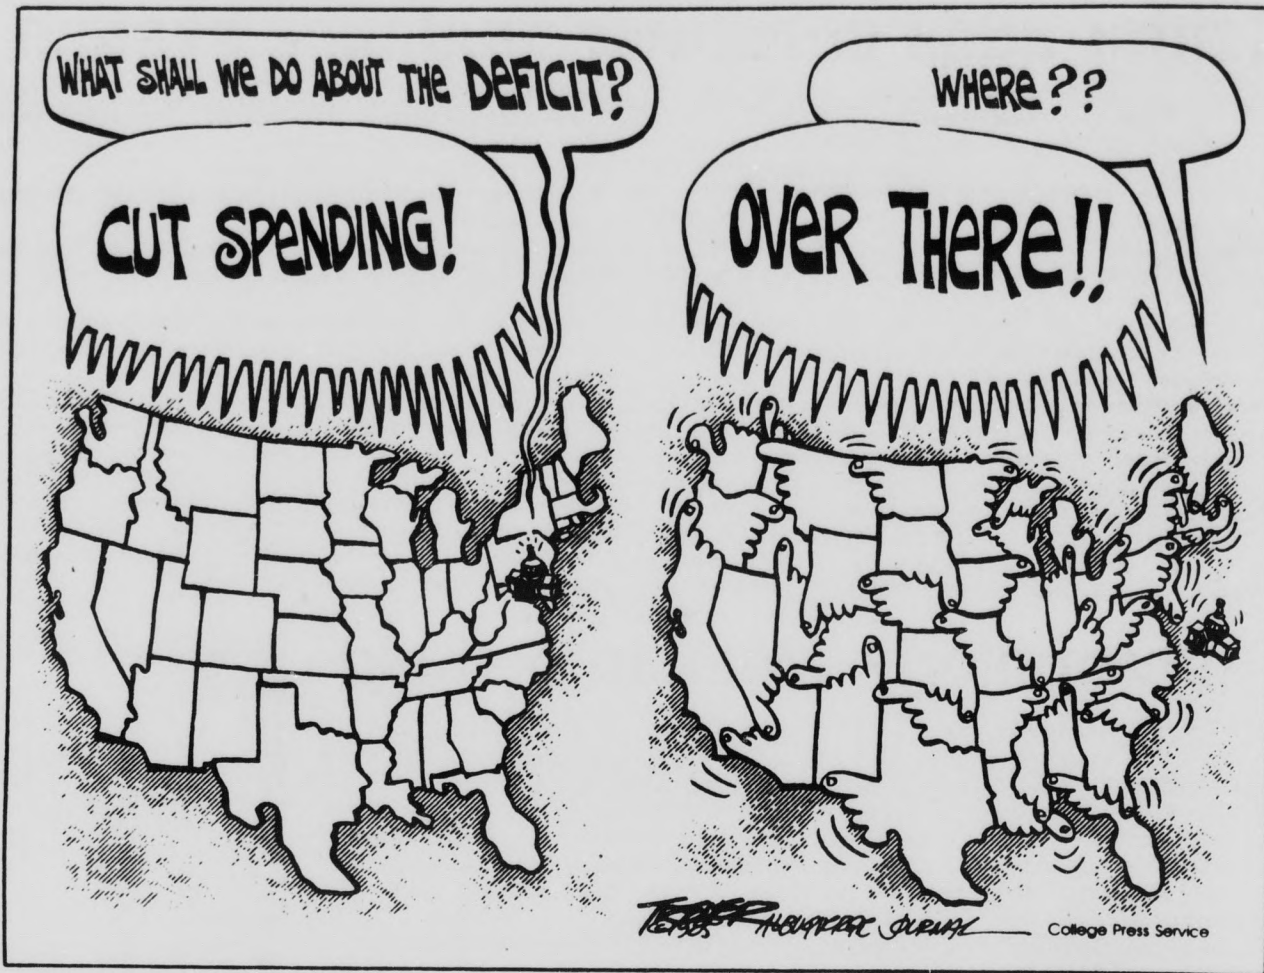

Aside from the previously mentioned remarks, you have failed to see Gorbachev's true motives. What Gorbachev is exercising, all the chatter aside, is simple diplomacy. Gorbachev understands the West. He realizes that former Soviet leaders such as Brezhnev, Andropov, and Chernenko, came across as being very cold and inhuman. This is exactly what many Western leaders, Reagan in particular, preferred. It allowed them to use the kind of rhetoric which you took to such extremes. Gorbachev, to put it simply, is putting on an "act" (it's a good thing our leader doesn't aspire to this!)

Gorbachev's motives scarcely relate to SDI (Stars Wars to us "simpletons"). No, his aims are much more long-term and therefore, all the more dangerous. Gorbachev, being the adroit diplomat he is, anticipates exactly the kind of rhetoric our current regime so often engages in. This rhetoric will do no more than portray the United States as a war-hawk and the Soviet Union with its soft-spoken leader, as a peace-loving dove.

As far as the Geneva talks are concerned, we are not forced to give up anything, which is the impression you convey. However, if we walk out on the talks with the kind of remarks you seem to advocate, we will be forced to give up something, namely the support of the European public. Instead we should continue the talks on our terms, seeing how desperate, according to you, the Soviets are for SDI technology.

Furthermore, Mr. Munsil, before you go criticizing the Democrats about this and that, perhaps you should ask "your" side, the Republicans, whether they really want you to. After all, you wouldn't want to end up, as you so aptly put it, "... a man, who while arguing a point, suddenly notices the only person around who's nodding his head in agreement is the village idiot."

Campus Affairs: Vice Presidential candidate

Amy Young

Doubling the number of professors listed in the Student Course Academic Manual and expanding the public affairs department to alert students to campus services are two things Amy Young would do as Associated Students of ASU campus affairs vice president.

"Campus affairs is what we can do for the students," she said.

Young, 20, who serves as the assistant to the current campus affairs vice president, said 12 different services exist under the office.

Speaking to different campus organizations at the beginning of the year about the services offered through the office may help educate students about the programs, Young said.

She is also proposing the "officer on the mall" program, in which ASASU executives will spend an hour per week talking to students about the programs offered by ASU's student government.

A course description manual, which will enable students to know about professor/class expectations at pre-registration, is budgeted under campus affairs for next year, Young said.

If elected, she said she would work over the summer to increase faculty participation and get the deans from each college to support the Student Course Academic Manual (SCAM).

The first publication of SCAM should be made available before early 1985 fall registration.

Young, a junior economics major in the College of Liberal Arts, is also proposing a "barter system where a student could exchange a book for a book," saying it could save a student up to $700 in material costs during college.

"Campus affairs needs to grow with what the student needs are," Young said.

More diverse programs to serve different minority groups

'Young is proposing "a barter system where a student could exchange a book for a book."' also need to be incorporated through the Minority Affairs Board, she said.

Young said programs helping minorities adjust and get involved on campus could improve ASU's retention rate.

The Women's Affairs Board needs to retain its current programs, which Young said meets the needs of the students.

Young is a member of Devil's Advocates, a campus organization which promotes ASU student enrollment, a resident assistant in Manzanita and last semester served as president of the Liberal Arts College Council.

NOTICE TO ASU STUDENTS

The ASU Comptroller's Office is happy to assist present and former students in obtaining financial credit with off-campus organizations. For those who have established a good payment history with ASU, we will prepare credit reference letters upon request. This can be useful in applying for a credit card or in the purchase of a car or home. This is handled by the Accounts Receivable and Collections Office, Admin. Building 104, 965-5220. Eligibility criteria for this program is available at this office.

To assist students in understanding our approaches to collecting amounts owed ASU, we note that our collection procedures include:

- compliance with a Regents' policy that prohibits a student from registering for classes, receiving a diploma, or transcript who is delinquent in paying amounts owed ASU;
- a $10 processing charge for bad checks, and if the check is not repaid within 5 days, a second $10 charge;
- a possible $10 late charge for receivable billings not paid by the due date, depending on the amount and number of days past due, and if not paid within 30 days of this first charge, a second $10 charge; and
- possible assignment to a collection agency, with potential credit bureau reporting, for receivable billings significantly past due.

The ASU Accounts Receivable and Collections Department is able to:

- assist you in determining who to contact if you receive a billing you believe may be in error; and
- provide guidance and financial counseling to those facing significant financial hardships in meeting payment obligations.

Candidates discuss campaign ideas

Stories by Katy McGregor

Linda St. Angelo

Setting up a committee to discuss each college academic advisement program and extending library hours are two goals of Linda St. Angelo, a candidate for Associated Students of ASU campus affairs vice president.

St. Angelo, a junior with a double major in communications and psychology, said the committee would "oversee" the University commission currently set up to study academic advisement.

The job of the committee would be to "bring ideas to the commission and watch what the commission does and how fair it is," St. Angelo said.

"The job of ASASU is to service the students of ASU with different services and activities and to promote groups and organizations on campus," she said.

St. Angelo proposes to "take each department and bring it to the students" through signs and news ads.

"So many people want to be involved but some feel intimidated by ASASU," she said.

St. Angelo, who serves as ASASU campus services director under the Office of Campus Affairs, is proposing to pinpoint the student library needs and set up a volunteer proctoring system in order to keep the library open.

Also being proposed by St. Angelo is a column where questions and solutions could be published dealing with problems students face.

St. Angelo also suggested a calendar of services and upcoming events be posted in the campus newspaper and in a busy area in the MU.

Flyers containing the calendar could be placed in residence halls, sororities and commuter updates to alert students to the services offered by campus affairs, St. Angelo said.

St. Angelo, 22, also said she would have an "open mind" when voting in the senate.

'I'm voting for the whole University, not just for my personal values or self.'

"I'm voting for the whole University, not just for my personal values or self," she said.

St. Angelo also said ASASU could assist in bringing students together to exchange books and to help with costs.

Through her involvement with many campus organizations outside of her own college, St. Angelo said it has allowed her to become a "well-rounded" person.

St. Angelo is a resident assistant at Best Hall, a member of the Centennial Speakers Bureau and was the ASU homecoming chairwoman last semester.

police report

An ASU student was assaulted near the racquetball courts late Thursday. Police said she told them she was walking to Sahuaro Hall when she passed a man sitting on a concrete slab in front of the courts who began following her and making obscene statements.

Police said the girl told them when she increased her pace, the man came up behind her, grabbed her backpack and hit her right arm with his fist. Police said the student told them she turned and kicked him, causing him to run toward Armstrong Hall.

The suspect was described as a white male with very thin dark hair that fell below his ears. He was approximately 5 feet 10 inches tall and was wearing blue jeans and a white shirt and had a low, raspy voice.

The victim told police she could identify the man and would aid in prosecution.

Another assault occurred when a resident of Palo Verde Main punched her roommate in the nose after an argument at 2 a.m. Friday, police said.

Police said the victim told them the argument started when her roommate kept her awake by talking on the telephone.

Police advised the victim to request a room reassignment, stay overnight with the resident assistant or obtain a peace bond from the Tempe Justice Court.

A man exposed himself to a resident of the Palo Verde Main Hall B-Wing late Thursday. Police said the ASU student told them the man walked up to her window, exposed himself to her and walked away through the parking lot.

He was described as a white male in his mid-30s with brown hair, a receding hairline, small eyes and a fair complexion. He was approximately 5 feet 10 inches tall and 190 pounds.

Police said she told them she could identify him and would aid in prosecution.

Two juveniles were detained in connection with an attempted bicycle theft early Sunday, police said. A resident of Palo Verde East Hall reported seeing two males hanging around the bicycle racks. When police arrived they had left the area but were found a few minutes later in front of the University Activity Center. The two boys, who were both approximately 17 years old, were questioned, photographed and released to their parents. A bicycle that had its chain cut was impounded for safekeeping and evidence.

An ASU student saw two men attempting to steal his bicycle from the courtyard of Cholla Apartments late Sunday, police said. He told police that he saw the two standing over his bicycle as he was leaving the building. When he called to them they turned and walked into the E-Wing of the building.

He followed them into the building and said, "Why don't you buy your own bike?" The lock that secured his bicycle to a tree had been cut.

The men were described as black males, approximately 6 feet tall and 19 to 20 years old. One wore blue jeans and a white jacket. The other wore blue jeans and a blue, short-sleeved shirt.

Controversy viewed with interest by 2 ex-players

By JERRY BROWN
Assistant Sports Editor

The whirlwind of controversy that surrounds the Sun Devil baseball team has been viewed with great curiosity by two students who until recently had a vested interest in its repercussions.

Until last month, sophomore Drew Siler played third base for ASU. He quit the team after being "ignored by coaches" and watching pitchers play infield positions instead of him.

Until last week, Keith Bennett played shortstop for the Devils. He was dropped from the squad after a three-game series with Nebraska for "disciplinary reasons."

Although both former players say their cases had nothing to do with the use of Nardil, a mood-altering drug that has been prescribed to baseball players, one of them was asked to take the drug but refused.

Nardil (phenelzine sulfate) is most often given to manic depressives and should rarely be the first anti-depressant given, according to "The Physicians Desk Reference" (1981). Some possible side effects include headaches, nausea, vomiting and increased blood pressure.

ASU coach Jim Brock, upset over treatment he has received in the media, said Sunday he will decide by today whether or not to continue managing the team.

Siler was approached by Dr. James Gough, a psychiatric consultant for ASU, and asked if he would take the drug.

"I had a prescription for Nardil, but I never had it filled," Siler said. "I told Dr. Gough that I wanted to try to work my problems out for myself for a week or so, and by that time I was off the team."

"I was depressed about baseball in general, not playing and all," Siler said. "He said I had a problem with crowds, that they bothered me and I needed some help. There was no pressure to take the drug. No one ever made a threat that you wouldn't play if you didn't take it."

"But (former ASU pitcher) Kendall Carter is a good friend of mine and he told me he had a bad experience using Nardil. He was real jumpy all the time and he didn't like it."

Siler said he was unaware that the drug had any of the side effects other than headaches.

"I wasn't aware of the bad effects," he said. "It was news to me. Dr. Gough said it could cause headaches and he gave us a list of the food that we should and shouldn't eat. But that was it."

Bennett said he had never heard of the drug and was never asked to use it during his career, which ended last Wednesday in the Sun Devil dugout.

"I picked up the morning paper and found out I was dropped from the team," Bennett said. "I couldn't believe what I was reading. I had no idea before that."

"Over the last week, I threw two balls to (first baseman) Brent Hahn. One he just missed and the other glanced off his glove."

"Coach said something to me at the end of the inning and I told him that the ball was right there and I walked away to get a drink of water," Bennett said. "When I came back he told me to hit the showers, that I was done for the night."

"The next thing I knew, I was dropped."

Bennett said if Brock does leave the team, he may try to re-join the program.

"At the time I read the story in the paper, I was very frustrated," Bennett said. "But now I realize that there's more to life than baseball."

Gymnasts shatter ASU record while claiming Pac-10 trophy

By BOB HEILER
Sports Writer

The men's gymnastics team broke the school scoring record last weekend on the way to winning the Pac-10 championship in Berkeley, Calif.

The Sun Devils scored a 284.50, topping the previous record of 282.05. Coach Don Robinson was quite pleased with the team's performance.

ASU has finished in the top three in the Pac-10 five times since 1979, when the University joined the conference, but this is its first win.

"These kids are just great," Robinson said. "We've got the best team we've ever had."

Other teams placing high in the conference championships were UCLA, second with 283.30, Stanford, third with 280.85 and Berkeley, fourth with 279.90.

The ASU squad was bothered by several minor injuries at the tournament, according to Robinson.

"Dennis (Hayden) hyper-extended his knee and had to be taken out of the finals (of the floor exercise)," Robinson said. "The trainer thinks he'll be all right in a few days, though. It swelled up a little, and he was limping, but he didn't need crutches."

Dan Hayden's participation was also restricted due to a sore back. This injury was also fairly minor, according to Robinson. Hayden was voted Pac-10 gymnast of the year despite the setback.

Robinson was optimistic about the injuries, saying that the team was healthy.

"I don't think (the injuries) are going to affect us at all. We're pretty healthy. If we have to take Dennis out of anything, it will be the floor exercise and vault, and we can cover that pretty easily."

"Even if we lose him in the floor exercise and vault, he will still be able to compete in the other four events," Robinson said.

The team had some outstanding individual performances in the tournament. Junior Jerry Burrell turned in a score of 9.8 on the floor exercise and won the vault with a 9.7. Senior Brad Rot took third in the still rings, while junior team captain Kevin McColm tied for second in the horizontal bar.

"We did absolutely super individually," Robinson said.

Robinson stressed the team effort as well, though, saying the gymnasts were really helping each other out.

"The team effort was absolutely phenomenal," he said. "Guys were telling each other (after a disappointing effort), 'Don't worry about it. I'll pick up the extra tenth for you.' It was great."

"The crowd loved us, too," Robinson said. "They were telling us that we were the ones who brought the excitement to the tournament."

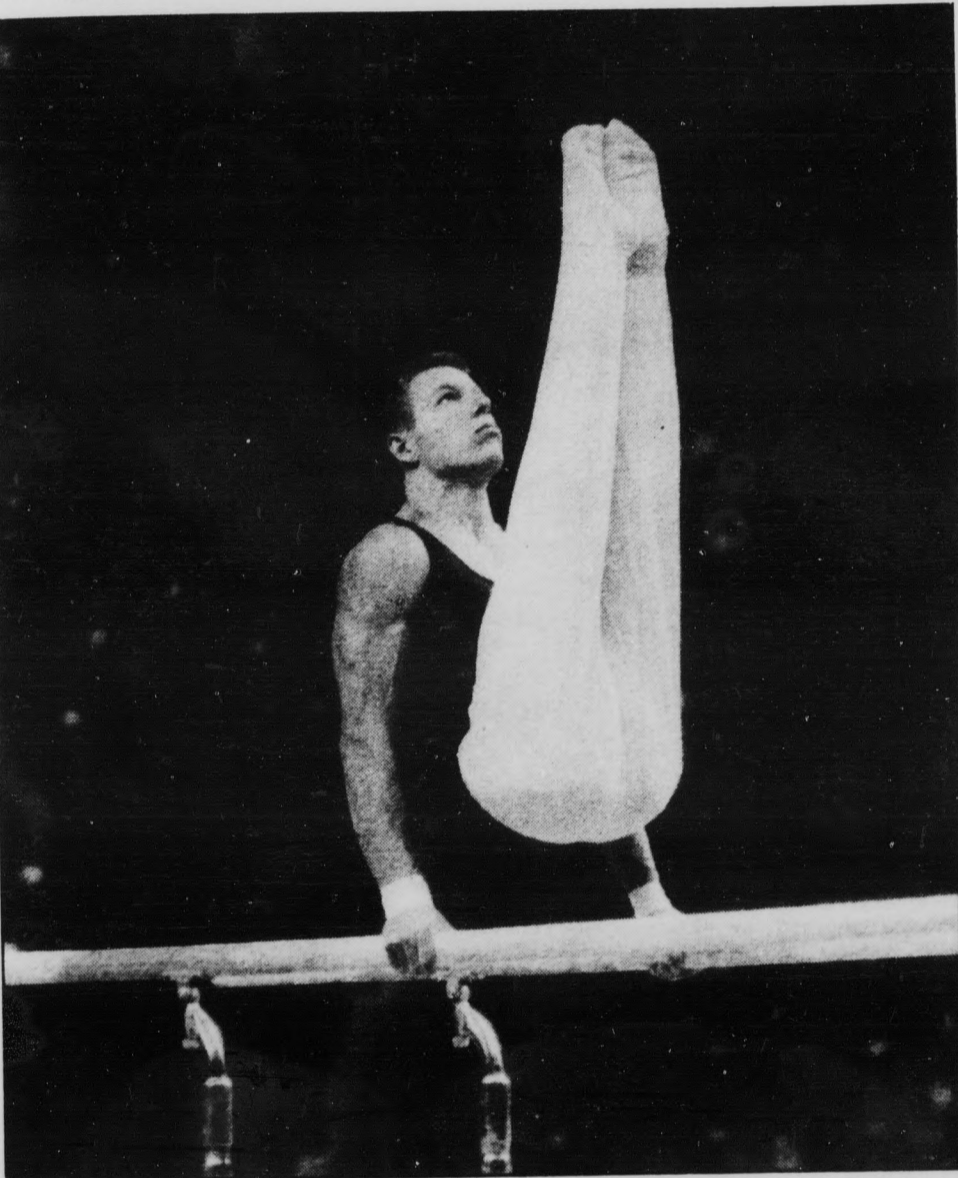

With the NCAA championships coming up April 10-13, Robinson is confident that the minor injuries will not be a major problem.

"We will probably go into the nationals with the highest ranking of anybody," Robinson said.

"We feel strong right now," Robinson said. "We're very confident going into the national competition."

The Devils will face UCLA again in the NCAA finals, along with other top teams in the nation such as Penn State, Ohio State and Nebraska. As of March 17, ASU was ranked fourth; however, with the Pac-10 title, Robinson was sure that they had moved up.

"I'm not sure what Penn State and Ohio State have done recently," he said. "But I'm sure we've stepped up a bit."

Dan Hayden, shown here on parallel bars, was voted the Pac-10's gymnast of the year although he is a freshman. Hayden and his twin brother Dennis are among the favorites to win the all-around title at nationals.

ASU golf coach calls team's performance 'lousy'

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

ASU golf coach George Boutell could describe his team's performance at the Wildcat Conquistador tournament in one word.

"Lousy," Boutell said.

The Sun Devils finished sixth with a team score of 887, 25 shots behind first-place Arkansas. Arizona finished second (867), Houston Baptist took third (879), the University of Texas at El Paso was fourth (882) and Oral Roberts finished fifth (884).

"We got off to a decent start in most of the rounds," Boutell said. "But we floundered in the end. It wasn't a problem of being ready this time. We just got beat."

Freshman Bill Mayfair was the top Sun Devil golfer, finishing seventh overall with a score of even par, 216. Rich Bietz shot 224, Don Leisy finished with 225, Mike Loustalot shot 234 and Tom Stankowski had a score of 237.

Boutell said Mayfair shot well and could have finished higher than seventh.

"Mayfair played well," he said. "He bogeyed four of the last five holes, and that cost him second place."

Junior Rich Bietz started off well with an opening round 71, but he finished with rounds of 76 and 77.

"Bietz had a good first round, but he didn't do anything after that," Boutell said. "On the second day he had an even par with three holes to go, but he bogeyed, bogeyed and double-bogeyed the last three holes."

Boutell said the team had two practice rounds before the tournament, and Bietz shot in the high 60s. But those rounds were not enough to compensate for only one day between the Rafael Alarcon Invitational and this tournament.

"(Bietz) said that with only one day

"Mike Loustalot was a bright spot, if you can shoot 83 and 81 and be a bright spot," Boutell said. "Then he shot 70. It's awfully hard to be on the road in that environment and shoot 83 and 81. It takes guts to come back and shoot 70."

Stankowski shot rounds of 77, 75 and 85. Boutell said Stankowski did not play well, and ran into trouble at the end of the third round.

"He never had it," he said. "He was OK through 13 or 14. Then he hit the ball out of could have."

Boutell said he doesn't think the bad performance will have any lingering effects.

"The whole year is on course," he said. "We went into a lull. I'd rather have it now than later. We'll snap out of it. It's not a big deal. What we wanted to do that we haven't done is to win a substantial tournament."

"I still think we're the best team in the West."

"We got off to a decent start in most of the rounds. But we floundered in the end. It wasn't a problem of being ready this time. We just got beat."

between the tournaments that he didn't have enough time to practice," Boutell said.

Leisy had a two chances to finish rounds under par but was not able to do it, according to Boutell.

"He had a three under par a couple of times, but he couldn't get it into the (club) house," Boutell said. "He's kind of getting better."

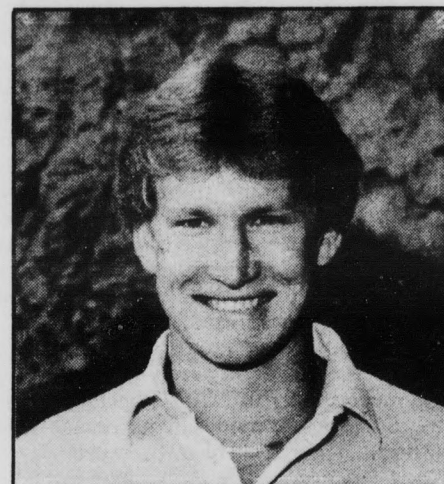

Mike Loustalot shot poorly in the first two rounds but recovered to shoot 70 in the final round, Boutell said.

bounds, and he put it in the lake twice on the last hole. But the cat was out of the bag by then. It didn't make a difference."

Boutell said he was surprised with how some of the team's finished.

"Arkansas has been a good team, but not when we saw them," he said. "I didn't know Houston Baptist was that good. Oral Roberts is not a good team at all, but they beat us."

"You couldn't ask the coaches to predict the top ten (finishes). There's no way they

Southern California, saying he felt he was not in the correct mental state to do the job.

"Mark Brand (ASU assistant sports information director) told me there was a very vicious article in the paper about me," Brock said. "At first I ignored it, and then I realized I couldn't."

"There was too much pressure to act as if nothing happened," Brock said. "If one of my players was in the same state, I would not let him play."

Brock still ran the club from behind the scenes.

"I made out the lineup card and most of the decisions," Brock said. "We treated it as if I was ejected from the game. We used the same system."

He said the team was not affected much by the change.

"These players have been through so much this season — more than any college player should have to endure," Brock said. "They are pretty close to being numb now."

Brock said the athletic department's decision to order an investigation without issuing a statement was the right one.

"The worst thing for them to do is take a stand and find out later they have to eat their words," Brock said. "Any statement made now would be premature. They have handled everything very well."

Brock said he spent most of Monday ignoring a constantly ringing telephone and catching up on household chores.

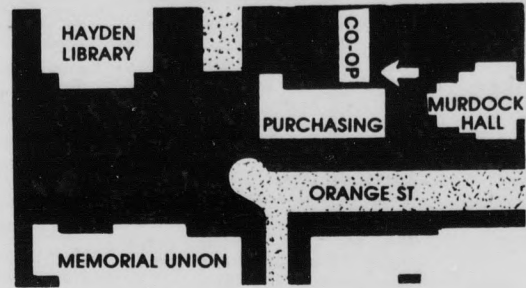

"I mowed the backyard and I trimmed the bushes around the jacuzzi," he said. "It was really getting pretty bad."

"I figure I'll be getting more use out of it now."

Brock, 48, has a career record of 699-236 in his 14 seasons at ASU, including national championships in 1977 and 1981. His teams won the Western Athletic Conference title seven times, and the Pac-10 Southern Division championship in 1981, 1982 and 1984. The 1984 crown was stripped as part of penalties levied by the Pac-10 in December.

GET TWO EDUCATIONS FROM ONE COLLEGE SCHOLARSHIP.

An education in your chosen major. And an education in becoming an Army officer. You get both with an Army ROTC scholarship.

Army ROTC is the college program that trains you to become an officer, a leader and a manager.

You take ROTC along with your other studies, and graduate with both a degree and a second lieutenant's commission.

Best of all, you can put both of your educations to work right away. In today's modern high-tech Army, we need engineers, communications experts, computer specialists, and other professionals.

Our scholarships cover full tuition and required fees. They also provide an amount for books, supplies and equipment, as well as an allowance of up to $1,000 each school year they're in effect.

So if you think all scholarships just provide you with a college degree, look into an Army ROTC scholarship. You'll be in for quite an education.

For more information, contact your Professor of Military Science.
