5 candidates left for research VP post

By KATY MCGREGOR
Staff Writer

The number of candidates for the new vice president for research position has been narrowed down to five, two of whom are from ASU, the chairwoman of the search committee said Tuesday.

"We have been holding campus interviews and have limited it down to five candidates," Kathleen Church said.

The position is one of two new areas created under the University's administration, the other being vice president for University relations.

Morton Munk, chairman of the chemistry department, and Henry Reeves, a professor in Botany and Microbiology, are the two candidates from ASU, Church said.

She said three of the five candidates will be submitted to ASU president J.

Russell Nelson next week.

Nelson said he will choose one of the names, which will then be submitted to the Arizona Board of Regents for ratification.

According to Church, the new vice president will be the chief administrative officer for Universities research programs activities.

In a previous interview with the State Press, Church said she had received over 130 applications for the job.

Gerald McClearn from Pennsylvania State University, Lee Azaross from the University of Connecticut, and Barbara Hansen from the University of Southern Illinois are the three other candidates being considered, she said.

Church said applicants must possess a doctoral degree and a distinguished record in research or other creative work.

The research vice president is responsible for the Office of Research and Sponsored Projects, the Central Animal Facility and hazardous material management, said Church.

She said the 12-member search committee was formed last November, and the application deadline was in early February.

Church said the two "internal candidates" are being interviewed this week.

Open meetings have been held on campus with the candidates to allow faculty, staff and students to ask the nominees questions, she said.

"It's just so the faculty, staff and students can ask the candidates questions and have some input into the committee," she said.

The other three candidates have been interviewed on campus, Church said.

Debt inherited from former years, Greeks say

ASU Comptroller to set deadline, does not plan eviction this semester

By TIMOTHY HOLLAND
Staff Writer

Although the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity owes the University $37,000, current members have paid their share and more, according to the Greek Life coordinator.

Don Worcester said the fraternity has kept up with rent payments this semester, while trying to pay off an inherited debt that occurred several years ago when fraternities were down in membership and "there wasn't as high a degree of accountability."

"It's been the additional burden that has put them behind," he said.

ASU Comptroller Gerald Snyder said the fraternity will not be evicted this semester, but a payment deadline will be set for "a few weeks" after semester's end.

"If the fraternity does not come up with the funds, then we have no other option but lease termination," Snyder said.

Worcester said that if the fraternity is evicted, it may still exist at ASU, but will lose its house, at 615 Alpha Dr.

'If the fraternity does not come up with the funds, then we have no other option but lease termination.' - Snyder

The eviction probably would not affect the fraternity charter, Worcester said, because "primarily it's a business decision and not considered a conduct violation."

He said the University cannot financially afford to provide housing without being reimbursed.

The fraternity then made an agreement, on a time table, to pay off the old debt on top of their regular payments by May, and "that's where the debt has accumulated," he said.

He maintains that even though Sigma Phi Epsilon is behind in payments, "They've paid off a phenomenal amount of that original debt."

Due to overdue rent payments, members of the Sigma Phi Epsilon fraternity face possible eviction from their house, at 615 Alpha Dr.

"It's not that the guys living in the house now aren't paying their bills — they are," he said. "They are not only paying their bills, but they have to pay somebody else's bills that have been passed on to them," said Worcester.

No provisions exist that would give fraternities on Adelphi

Drive or anyone else first or last shot at moving into the house, if the fraternity is evicted.

Ron Paquin, president of the Sigma Phi Epsilon housing corporation, said that they hope to pay off the debt soon, although he has not yet set a date for payment.

ASU's bonding authority request stalled in House

$125 million for construction would result in tuition hikes

By VICKIE CHACHERE
Staff Writer

A $125 million bonding request for Arizona's three Universities stalled in the Arizona House of Representatives Tuesday when legislators failed to submit the bill for a final reading and discussion.

The bill was scheduled for the third reading by the House before being sent to the Joint Legislative Budget Committee for final approval, according to a member of the Arizona Board of Regents central staff.

Shari Lewis, assistant director of personnel and government relations for the board, said she expected the bill to gain committee approval.

The bonding request was submitted by the regents to the Legislature in February. A companion bill, allowing for appropriations from Arizona's general fund, was tabled earlier this month.

The bonding authority would allocate approximately $60 million to ASU for construction on the University's main campus and initial construction of ASU-West.

In the board's January meeting, Regent President Donald Pitt said tuition increases would be necessary as a result of the bonding.

The board said the universities can expect a 5 percent increase in tuition over the next five years to support the bonds.

A controversial bill that would restructure the repayment plan and interest rates for the Western Interstate Conference for Higher Education loans was retained on the House floor for the second consecutive day, despite efforts by legislators to kill the bill.

Rep. Jim Cooper, chairman of the House Education Committee, attempted to eliminate the bill by proposing a "strike-everything" amendment to the legislation.

The WICHE legislation, Senate Bill 1219, would be replaced by a bill to prohibit smoking in public places, said Cooper, R-Mesa.

Cooper said he wanted to replace the bill because he was unhappy with the amendment which restructured the repayment system.

He said the amendment was added to the bill by Reps. Jim Green, R-Tucson, and Lela Steffy, R-Mesa.

"I didn't agree with the amendment that was put on the bill," Cooper said.

WICHE contracts presently allow students to work in under-serviced areas to repay their debts. For each six months of work in an under-serviced area, the student would erase one year's tuition debt.

If SB 1219 passed as amended, students would be required to work two years for every one year of debt.

"If we are going to do that, we ought to require law students to pay back what they owe the state," Cooper said. "It's the same as graduate work."

"Hopefully (the strike-everything amendment) will go through," Cooper said.

A second provision in SB 1219, which lowered the repayment interest rates from 12 percent to 8 percent, may be added to another piece of legislation in the Senate, Cooper said.

"I told the Senate they could choose one of my bills that are over there," he said.

Mexican government wants border agent punished for shooting youth

MEXICO CITY (AP) — The Mexican government on Tuesday demanded punishment for a U.S. Border Patrol agent who shot a Mexican youth on the Mexican side of the border crossing at Tijuana.

In a brief communique, the Foreign Ministry said the government "has instructed the Mexican Embassy in Washington to seek punishment for the responsible party and an adequate compensation for the victim."

The shooting occurred April 19 when a U.S. Border Patrol agent fired on a group of Mexicans who were throwing rocks at agents trying to arrest a 15-year-old Mexican youth, Eduardo Carrillo Estrada, as he attempted to cross into the United States near Tijuana.

San Diego police said the youth's 12-year-old brother, Humberto Carrillo Estrada, was hit in the shoulder by a bullet fired by a Border Patrol agent when the boy and others in a crowd on the Mexican side began hurling rocks at the agents.

The agent, identified as Edward Cole, first fired two warning shots into the air and then fired once into the crowd on the other side of the border crossing, police said.

Black leaders held in crackdown on violence in South Africa

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Police locked up three black leaders Tuesday in a crackdown on the main alliance opposing the white government. Vandalism and violence spread through South Africa's black ghettos.

A police spokesman said the three blacks detained without charge were all from the multiracial United Democratic Front. He said they were under investigation in connection with cases of unrest near Johannesburg eight months ago.

Sixteen United Democratic Front leaders are to be tried for treason in May. The organization claims to represent 2 million people in 600 community groups and has emerged as the most active foe of apartheid, the system of institutionalized segregation that guarantees white privilege.

Police reported dozens of incidents of stone-throwing and arson by crowds near Johannesburg in the north, Bloemfontein in the center of the country and Port Elizabeth in the south. Riot police used tear gas, rubber bullets and shotguns to scatter hundreds of black youths, but reported no injuries.

The spokesman at national police headquarters in Pretoria said 482 teen-age boys and girls were arrested in Sebokeng, near Johannesburg, for holding an illegal meeting in a school to protest rent increases for government housing. Most paid fines and were released, he said, requesting anonymity.

Congress in conflict over Reagan's proposed aid to Contra guerrillas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senate Democrats abandoned all efforts at compromise Tuesday as Congress headed for a foreign policy confrontation with President Reagan on whether to release $14 million in aid to the Contra guerrillas battling the leftist Sandinista government in Nicaragua.

As votes approached in both houses, Vice President George Bush and Secretary of State George Shultz met with Senate Republicans who emerged almost completely unified behind the president's Contra aid proposal.

Sen. Richard J. Lugar, R-Ind., chairman of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, predicted Reagan would win in the Republican-controlled Senate. But defeat for the president's plan in the Democratic-controlled House was virtually assured.

Palo Verde nuclear plant to put out power this summer, company says

PHOENIX (AP) — The Palo Verde Nuclear Generating Station should be producing a significant amount of electricity during this summer's peak demand period, according to a spokesman for the Arizona Nuclear Power Project.

Brad Parker said hot functional testing is progressing on schedule at Unit 1 of the plant near Wintersburg, west of Phoenix.

"We're looking at beginning the steps to achieve the first nuclear chain reaction in late May," said Parker, spokesman for the seven utility companies which are building the plant.

The final phase of testing leading up to activation of nuclear fuel in the reactor core began late last week, Parker said.

"We run the plant, we make steam, we do everything as if the plant were in commercial operation — but no nuclear fuel is involved during the testing."

Parker said officials hope to complete the hot functional testing in mid-May and the nuclear fission chain reaction should begin in May or June.

The reactor will begin producing power at less than 1 percent of its capacity, increase gradually to 5 percent, then to 20 percent, 50 percent, 80 percent and eventually to full capacity by the end of the year.

Profs to obtain micro computers in loan program

By MELISSA OLSON
Staff Writer

The IBM Corp. will loan microcomputers to 35 ASU faculty members before the end of this semester as part of a one-year loan program.

The three models of the microcomputers, PC, XT and AT, are valued at between $2,000 and $5,000 each, said Kathy Milbrandt, a program coordinator for faculty development.

The microcomputers will help professors in course development — preparing materials, recording grades, analyzing research and typing papers, she said.

By the April 22 deadline, more than 100 applications from interested faculty members had been received for the first year of the program, said Milbrandt.

At the end of the loan period, participating ASU faculty will have the option to buy the microcomputers at 43 percent of the retail price, she said.

If the professors do not want to buy the IBM for their personal use, the University has the option to purchase the microcomputer at the same reduced price, Milbrandt said.

There is no obligation for faculty members or ASU to buy the microcomputers, she said.

The microcomputer loans, which will be distributed by the end of this semester, will include software individualized for each professor's needs, said Milbrandt.

A faculty advisory panel will meet Monday to determine who will receive the microcomputers, she said.

In addition to representatives from each of the 10 ASU colleges, representatives from University media systems, testing centers and computing services will be present, Milbrandt said.

Only faculty members who do not have a University-owned computer in their office are eligible for the loans, she said.

This program will benefit IBM as well as the ASU faculty members, Milbrandt said.

"The faculty members get a computer for a year and chances are they're not going to want to give it up," she said.

The IBM-PC and the IBM-XT are basically the same, except the XT has greater storage capabilities, she said.

ASU will receive seven IBM-ATs, which Milbrandt describes as more advanced computers.

"They are not designed for people who do not have computer experience," she said.

The loan recipients may be announced Tuesday, she said.

police report

University Police reported the following incidents in the 24-hour period ending at 5:30 a.m. Tuesday:

•A computer disc valued at $200 was stolen from the Business Administration Building, C-Wing, room 9 sometime during a computer class on April 15, police said. The discs were handed out at the beginning of class, but only 27 of the 28 were returned. Professors have started a sign-out procedure to avoid thefts.

•Someone broke a 2-foot-by-3-foot plate glass window in the Campus Inn Apartments laundry room between Monday night and Tuesday morning, police said. Damage was estimated at $30.

•The left front plastic wheel cover of a red 1984 Honda Accord was damaged while it was parked in the Tower Center parking lot Monday afternoon. Police said an ASU student told them a Parking Enforcement Officer put a rhino boot on the car. The boot was taken off when he returned to the Tower Center to pay his fine. Police said the victim told them the wheel cover was chipped when the boot was removed. Police said the parking enforcement officer told them the damage appeared to be old, and the driver had been involved in an accident approximately one month earlier. Damage was estimated at $15.

•A man was seen carrying a brown women's bicycle away from the Anthropology Building late Monday night, police said. The man told police the bicycle had been abandoned on the corner of College Avenue and University Drive and he needed it for spare parts. The bicycle had a flat rear tire, no hand grips, chain or chain guard. Police said the bicycle was not listed as stolen but it would be impounded until the owner claimed it.

Self-interest speaks all sorts of tongues, and plays all sorts of roles... —Francois, Duc da La Rochefoucauld

Madness returns to college campuses

Len Munsil Editor

A few sensed immediately that there was something phony about the highly heralded "conservative movement" among college students. Now it looks as if the critics were right — many of today's college students aren't really conservative at all, at least not in the traditional sense.

They follow President Reagan on budgetary issues, such as the need to cut social programs and institute supply-side economics, but turn their backs when he begins talking about traditional values, abortion, and prayer in public schools.

My first inkling of this shallowness came last semester when Reed Irvine spoke in the Memorial Union before approximately 25 people, of which no more than 10 were students. Irvine is the founder of Accuracy in Media (AIM), a group that attempts to keep up with the latest liberally biased indiscretions in the mass media.

Irvine was scheduled to speak to the College Republicans, a group with close to 100 members. Unfortunately, the visit of "the media watchdog" coincided with fraternity "Rush Week."

And so it is with no great surprise, but instead a sigh of detached disappointment, that I read about the madness again afflicting college students across the nation.

Let's not go into great detail about the apartheid situation in South Africa. But a few legitimate conclusions can be reached by using common sense. First the facts:

- Apartheid is immoral, evil and should be abolished.
•Except for the few remaining crackpots who cling to the ridiculous notion of white supremacy, there is no one who wants to see apartheid continue.
•Blacks in South Africa want apartheid to end.
•U.S. corporations in South Africa employ blacks at better wages than South African

- companies.
•Blacks in South Africa enjoy a better standard of living than blacks in other African nations — because of U.S. involvement.
•Divestiture of U.S. interests in the country would plunge numerous blacks into poverty.
•The majority of blacks in South Africa do not want the United States to withdraw its interests from the country.

That last one is important. The lesson should have been learned when Teddy Kennedy was hooted out of the country by blacks who saw through his "righteous" rhetoric and obvious search for publicity.

But back to the student protesters. At Columbia University in New York, student boneheads have chained shut the front doors of Hamilton Hall, and are refusing to leave the front steps until the university sells $34 million of its financial interests in companies that do business in South Africa.

At the University of California at Berkeley, more than 100 layabouts spent every day last week in sleeping bags on the steps of the administration building.

That's like, so totally awesome, Susannah! What a statement for equality you're making by sleeping outside in your fur-lined sleeping bags, supported only by togetherness, unlimited alcohol and personal stereos to help you brave the chilly California nights. Wow.

(Fortunately for us, ASU does not have to worry about such shows of indignant ignorance. No one here except for the laughable leaders of the Black Student Union is misguided enough to insist on ASU's divestiture from dealing with corporations that operate in South Africa.)

And so we see the folly to which most college students are easily disposed. The liberals of the 1980s have found their second big cause, and the first with a chance of success — although some still haven't given up on the nuclear freeze.

Do these outraged protesters ever stop to consider the consistency of raising a ruckus about cutting off ties in South Africa, while demanding that the United States carry on arms talks with the Soviet Union?

Well, conservatism was a great trend while it lasted, but the students have spoken. Valley Girls and future Yuppies unite — now is the time for all good college students to return to that good old irresponsible liberal activism we remember from the '60s.

'Melting pot' still characteristic of American society

Editor: Sherry Lowe's column, "Minority groups foster racial isolation, misunderstanding" (April 18), does not reflect this "minority's" views. In fact, the term minority leaves a distinctly bad taste in my mouth.

It's a pity that your bad experience with a foreign instructor has left you with a distorted view of all the other instructors. I am sure that there are some foreign instructors teaching on campus who are quite good at their work.

Therefore, don't let the negative actions of a few individuals blind you to the positive ones being accomplished by others. Not everyone spends their time promoting their "ethnic" background; there are some of us who are just working to earn the respect of our peers.

Russian club dispels misconceptions

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

People have many misconceptions about Russian, according to the president of ASU's Russian Language Club.

Students and faculty in the ASU Russian department are trying to promote a better awareness of the language on campus through varied means, including a table on Cady Mall, said junior Russian major Suzanne Park.

One of the biggest obstacles students have about studying Russian and other liberal arts programs, is that they worry about employment in the field, Park said.

"They don't know about the job opportunities available for people with a background in Russian," she said.

Approximately 200 companies in the United States presently have trade agreements with Russia. In addition, there are jobs as translators and with government agencies, she said.

"The National Security Agency said that if we graduated 200 Russian majors at this school, 200 would be hired," Park said.

Approximately 250 people are studying Russian at ASU and 60 of them are majoring in the language, she said.

ASU students in the program were optimistic about future possibilities.

Senior Russian major Ed Brennan said, "Russian is a very viable language for commerce, industry and science."

Junior Russian major Sue Anne Farbarik agreed.

"There are companies on campus every semester looking for people with backgrounds in Russian," Farbarik said. "I was originally a political science major and I was interested in working with the State Department. Then I learned about the job opportunities available with a background in Russian."

Farbarik took her first Russian class and "fell in love with the language," then dropped political science.

Parks said the Russian Language Club's constitution says specifically that it is not a political group.

One student, who asked not to be named, said "We are just like the French or Spanish Club. We're cultural, not political."

Park said, "That's why we call ourselves the Russian Language Club. The flak we get is so stupid."

Park is one of 10 ASU students who will spend six weeks in Russia this summer as part of a University educational program. The group will spend three weeks studying at the University of Moscow, she said.

"We will be visiting Moscow, Leningrad, Alma-Ata and Novosibirsk," Park said.

Kevin Buchholz, a senior political science major taking Russian, said knowing more about Russia and its language can help international relations in various ways.

"So many political problems today are between the United States and Russia," Buchholz said. "It is important that we understand the people we are dealing with in both ideological and practical terms."

"We have to understand them in more than an 'us versus them' context," Buchholz said.

Series offers self-enhancement

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

Students have the opportunity to get involved in a program created and developed to enhance the spiritual dimension of their well-being, according to the Spirit of the Senses coordinator.

"The program offers the individual exposure to a forum of ideas which are related to basic themes of the human condition," said Thomas Houlon, a senior education major.

"Many of the programs we present have topics that relate to our everyday life.

Houlon said the current themes for this semester are loving, vision and the relationship of time and space to the human experience. This summer's theme will be passion, and this fall's will be dreams, he said.

"We develop programs with tangents of these themes from perspectives of interdisciplinary humanities," he said. "This covers all the liberal arts."

He said many of the topics are not found in the academic setting but are of interest to the general public.

"The program represents ideas and values in ways that were previously not available on campus," he said.

Houlon said this is done through lectures, film, performances, workshops and panel discussions.

"We bring in scholars and people who are professionals in different fields," he said.

Barbara Thomas, the director of the Student Health Service's Physical, Intellectual, Emotional and Spiritual Health Program (PIES), said the program uses primarily on-campus resources.

She said several distinguished members of the ASU faculty have participated in the program.

"It allows professors to elaborate on interests that they would not otherwise be able to cover," Thomas said.

Next fall, history professor Ronald Smith, an assistant dean of the College of Liberal Arts, will discuss St. Francis of Assisi in a session on the theme of sleep and dreams, Houlon said.

"Smith is a very dynamic speaker," he said. "He is able to translate images with a great deal of emotion."

William Eaton, who teaches at the Roberto-Venn School of Luthiery in Phoenix, will discuss "Music for Dreaming," at a fall session, Houlon said.

"Eaton creates his own imaginative instruments that are nothing like the conventional six-string guitar," he said.

Thomas said Spirit of the Senses originated as part of the PIES program.

The program's founders were Houlon, Thomas and Gus Nieboer of Campus Ministries, she said.

"We wanted to add a spiritual component as a way to address some of the issues related to the search for meaning in life," Thomas said.

"I had previously done work in the field of sensory expansion," she said.

Houlon said, "My own personal contribution came from 'The Eranos Yearbooks.'"

Eranos is a forum for ideas from art, science, psychology and philosophy that is held each year in Switzerland, Houlon said.

Spirit of the Senses has been in existence for two years, and has about 10 meetings per semester, he said.

Houlon said all Spirit of the Senses events are free to the public.

"We had six people at our first session," Thomas said.

"Lately, we have been averaging about 40 per meeting. I am really pleased with how it's developed and I hope it continues to expand."

Houlon said, "The great value of Spirit of the Senses is to allow a natural setting to expose cross-cultural values without personal obligation."

First place in Desert Rangers' annual rough-terrain footrace captured by ROTC cadet Lape

By JOHN CONWAY
Staff Writer

The real contest for first place in the ROTC Desert Rangers' 13-mile race Tuesday may have started at the Salt River crossing beneath the Mill Avenue Bridge.

That's where ASU Army ROTC cadet David Lape ran past Army ROTC cadet Paul Kovarik and took the lead.

Both cadets, along with the other 40 participants, ran the distance wearing combat boots while carrying a mock M-16 rifle and supporting a 20-pound backpack in their green and black battle fatigues.

"(Lape) got me at the water," Kovarik said.

"I hit the river first but he passed me up."

Kovarik said he circled around the submerged roadway built to carry automobiles north, choosing a more rocky yet equally wet terrain to the side of the street.

"He made a smart move," Kovarik said.

Lape, who will be commissioned as a second lieutenant in May, won the race traveling the 13 miles in one hour, 58 minutes and 52 seconds.

"I saw the end in sight and thought I'd push it," he said.

Kovarik finished in two hours and 48 seconds.

The cadets and other participants were all members of the Desert Rangers, an ASU club open to all ASU students regardless of their relationship to the ROTC program.

Approximately 50 percent of the runners were non-ROTC students, Seymour said.

According to cadet Danny Torres, "the Desert Rangers is something of a base, to give them a taste of what the Army is all about."

A black beret symbolizing membership in the ROTC version of the very few active Army ranger units is the ultimate goal of those participating in the race, Major Seymour said.

The beret may be earned by two or three cadets this semester Seymour said. But the final tests have yet to be administered.

Cadets in top physical shape displaying leadership ability and esprit de corps are eligible to earn the beret, he said.

But first they must complete a 500-meter swim, participate in three field exercises testing their combat ability, pass a written test on basic military skills, attend 13 regular meetings and score at least 250 out of 300 points on the Army physical readiness test, he said.

Seymour, who set up the course two years ago and ran the race in 2 hours, 8 minutes and 40 seconds, said he selects the "toughest" terrain he can find.

Pavement, desert sand, grass and rocks formed the surface of the footrace, which is half the length of an official marathon.

"The hardest part is just before the river at Curry Road — you've run about ten miles by then and you are a little disoriented," he said.

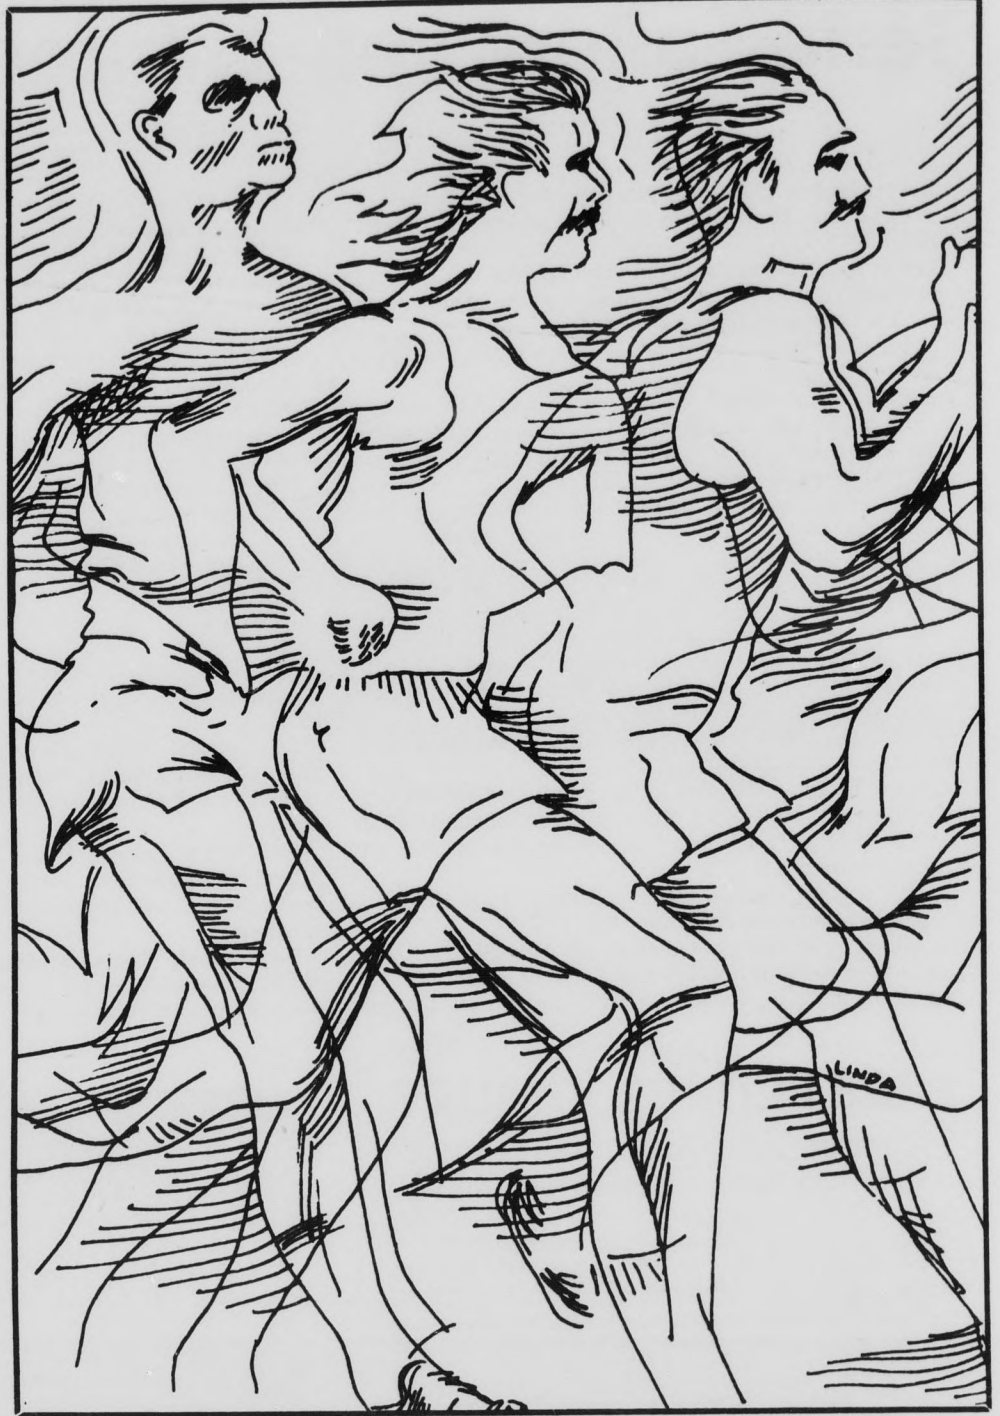

At the start of the race, 40 runners, including three women, were prepared to finish the course but only 37 completed the full distance.

A required time of 2 hours and 30 minutes is the set criteria for those runners pursuing the ranger beret, Army Captain James Ernzen said.

Army Colonel Lanny Standridge, who assumed the chairmanship of the Army ROTC program at ASU two years ago also participated in the race.

While Standridge refused to disclose his age, Ernzen said he was "almost 50."

Standridge, who finished the 13 miles in 2 hours, 27 minutes and 56 seconds, said he was not competing against his cadets, but entered the race because "I feel it's important to give moral and physical support."

Seminar promotes exec secretary career growth

By NICOLE MASSIE
Staff Writer

A seminar designed for an often "overlooked segment of the work force" is currently being offered at ASU, a professor of administrative services said.

Lohnie Boggs said the seminar is sponsored by the department of administrative services and the Center for Executive Development.

There is a need for a program that will help executive secretaries and administrative assistants, he said.

The program is designed for the working person in the intermediate job, who is not yet in management.

Boggs said the seminar, which concludes

Thursday, is comprehensive. The three parts of the seminar are being held in the Business Administration Building, room 119.

According to Boggs, some topics to be discussed are organization and making better use of time, improving communication skills and developing a beneficial relationship with your executive.

The seminar will help the employees maximize their current job performance by complementing their office skills, he said.

Managerial aspects of the business world will be explained, he said. This will assist the executive secretary or administrative assistant in dealing with interpersonal relationships.

He said the skills presented at the seminar should provide the student with the knowledge and confidence necessary to continue their professional growth.

This seminar has been a tradition at ASU for the last nine years, he said. It is offered twice a year during the fall and spring, he said.

The seminar started when ASU discontinued its teaching program for secretarial majors, he said.

"We did not want to abandon the effort to help that class of people, (executive secretaries or administrative assistants) out in business," he said.

Boggs said the program has been "very successful." The seminar has consistently made a profit for the Center of Executive Development so it will continue, he said.

The program is judged on a seven-point rating scale, he said. It has always scored in the upper sixes, he said.

The seminar is taught by ASU faculty. The faculty members enjoy teaching the course, Boggs said.

"It is a fun seminar for them," he said. "They have the basic routine down and will constantly update (the program)."

Maria Muto, a marketing coordinator, is often asked to design a customized or "in-house" program for a certain industry. Companies such as Motorola have asked for this service twice, Boggs said.

Meeting to concentrate on women in professions

By DOUG NEWMAN
Staff Writer

All too often, people give "lip service" to the need for equity for women in careers and in American life in general, according to an ASU assistant professor of counselor education.

To combat this problem, another seminar for women is headed ASU's way.

Information on career preparation will be provided at the "Women in Professions: Progress, Promise and Perspective," conference Friday and Saturday.

"We do not understand that this is a process," said Elsie Moore, who is also one of the conference's coordinators.

While there is legislation for equal opportunity, people do not fully realize the concrete issues involved in preparing women for careers, especially in non-traditional fields, Moore said.

"That is the question that has guided the planning of this conference," she said.

Moore said the planners of the conference "decided to enlist the help of some women who have pioneered in their professions" as keynoters.

She said there will be four keynote speakers at the conference and each speaker will discuss several issues.

Each keynoter will speak on "their personal experiences in preparing for careers they are currently pursuing," including the social, emotional and academic experiences, Moore said.

"They will speak on their current experiences as professionals in their respective areas," she said. "They will also discuss their personal views on the prospects for women entering different career areas in the future."

"I expect them to provide conference participants with information regarding career options," she said. "Specifically, I mean how to prepare for and what they may expect from certain careers."

One of the Keynoters will be Hazel W. Johnson-Brown, the director of the Division of Governmental Affairs for the American Nurses' Association. She was formally a brigadier general in the Army and chief of the Army Nurse Corps.

Pauline Hartington, the second speaker, is a graduate of the Rhode Island College of Education. She retired from the Navy in 1984 as a rear admiral and was the commanding officer of the Naval Training Center in Orlando, Fla.

"While these women began their careers in traditional fields, they became successful in very non-traditional fields," Moore said.

Ann Kalman, vice president in charge of media services for the Columbia Broadcasting System, will also speak.

"She is the highest ranking female manager in the media," Moore said.

The fourth speaker, Lady Willie Forbus, a co-founder of the Gray Panthers, has practiced law in Washington since 1918.

"Is that not pioneering?" said Moore.

She said that she hopes to draw 300 young people and individuals who work with young people, such as teachers and counselors, to the conference.

"As a professional woman, I certainly would have benefited from this kind of experience earlier in my personal development," Moore said.

The conference is part of the ASU Centennial Program.

Softball team sweeps Fresno on way to Pacific tourney title

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

The ASU softball team knocked off top-ranked Cal State-Fullerton and beat No. 7 Fresno State twice en route to winning the University of Pacific tournament last weekend in Stockton, Calif.

The fifth-ranked Devils (36-14) used excellent defense and steady pitching from Laura Houle and Cheryl Persinger to record eight victories in nine tournament games.

"After we got started, I thought we had a good shot at winning it," coach Mary Littlewood said. "Everybody was really into every game 100 percent. When we made a mistake, we just came right back."

The Devils won their first five games before dropping a 6-0 decision to No. 6 Pacific. They went on to upset Cal State-Fullerton in the quarterfinals, 2-0, and handed Fresno State 1-0 blows in both the semifinals and the championship game.

Houle paced the Devils from the mound, recording a 5-0 tournament record while giving up only three runs. She was named the tournament's most valuable pitcher.

"Laura was a crucial factor in our winning," Littlewood said. "Even in games where we hit well, she didn't give up very many hits."

Persinger racked up a 3-1 record, including the win in the final game against Fresno State, in which she gave up only two hits.

In that game, the Devils waited until the seventh inning before scoring the game's only run. Linda Neeley led off for ASU with a double and eventually scored on a Fresno State throwing error.

Fresno State threatened to tie the score in the bottom of the seventh with runners on first and second and no outs. But a key play by ASU first baseman Kelly Jackson stopped the rally as she forced the out at third base.

Persinger followed with a strikeout and then forced the last batter to fly out to end the inning.

The semifinal game against Fresno State went scoreless through nine innings, but the Devils took advantage of a Fresno State gamble to win 1-0 in 10 innings.

Under international tiebreaker rules, an extra inning begins with a runner on second base. With Persinger on second to start the inning, Fresno State intentionally walked the next two batters to load the bases.

The Devils' Yolanda Moreno then singled in the winning run.

In Fresno State's half of the inning, the top of the tenth, Jackson made what Littlewood called a "beautiful play" by throwing out the runner at third base after a leadoff bunt.

The Devils went on to retire the side without being threatened.

Jackson's crucial plays against Fresno State helped her earn the honor of the tournament's best defensive player.

"I think Kelly is the best collegiate first baseman," Littlewood said. "She's left-handed, quick, has a strong arm and she moves well.

"She really killed Fresno State's momentum with those two crucial plays. She's as good as they come."

In the quarterfinals, Fullerton pitcher Susan LeFebvre gave up five hits and three walks in the first two innings and spotted the Devils a 2-0 lead.

After a pitching change, the Devils managed only two hits, but the defense held to preserve the lead.

Houle held the Titans, one of the best hitting teams in the country, to three hits and chalked up the victory.

"Knowing you can beat the top-ranked team in the country is a good feeling," Littlewood said.

Along with Houle and Jackson, Jodi Rathbun also made the all-tournament team at third base. Rathbun, who joined the team midway through the season from the women's basketball team, normally plays outfield but moved to third base to sub for the ill Laurie Woodcock.

"She played a lot of third base in her summer league," Littlewood said. "She played well defensively and also hit the ball very well. She was hitting .600 after the first two (tournament) days."

Archery sweeps team titles at Southwest Championships

By MICHAEL KONZ
Sports Writer

The ASU archery teams began their trip to the national tournament in May by sweeping the team titles Saturday at the Southwestern Collegiate Championships held at Pima College.

In the men's division, ASU defeated second-place Pima College by 168 points. In women's competition the Sun Devils defeated Phoenix College by 470 points. ASU completed the sweep by defeating Pima College and Glendale College in the mixed competition.

ASU took first and third in the men's competition and five of the top six spots in the women's competition.

The first three finishers in each division qualify for the national tournament.

Sun Devil Lee Tinkey came from behind to win the men's division over John Wertz of Glendale. Brian Bagley of ASU finished third.

"(Tinkey's) scores were low compared to what he is capable of," Coach Sheri Rhodes said. "That could be due to the weather Saturday, which was windy and held down scores."

Rhodes was pleased with Bagley's performance.

"He's just a freshman and he's been up and down," Rhodes said. "I'm pleased with his finish. He looked real good."

Rhodes said Bagley had lacked consistency in competition. "In the past he hasn't done the shooting consistently like we do in college," she said.

Mark McKinney, step-nephew of 1984 Olympic silver medalist archer Rick McKinney, took fourth.

"He's come out of being sick all week," Rhodes said. Cope Bailey finished fifth for the Sun Devils.

"I was real pleased with Cope's performance," Rhodes said. "He's shown strong improvement. I look to him to contribute at the national tournament."

On the women's side, Becky Liggett took first for ASU. Rebecca Wallace finished second and Terri Pesho took third.

"The women's team did real well," Rhodes said. "(Liggett) has been doing well all year long."

Rhodes said ASU's scores have not been as high as she would like to see them.

"I'm pretty pleased with a lot of things, but I'd be happier if the scores were higher," she said. "It's hard to say why (the scores are low). It could be intensity. After an Olympic year, things tend to die down."

"We haven't had a lot of competition. The only challenge has been inside the team."

ASU will compete in the Arizona Collegiate Outdoor Championships this weekend at Scottsdale College. The top three finishers in this tournament qualify for the nationals.

"Teamwise, it's a tournament to work on things," Rhodes said. "It's the last chance to shoot well."

Rhodes said she likes her teams' chances at the U.S. Intercollegiate Championships May 15-19 at James Madison University.

"The (U.S. Indoor and Western Regional) was the only chance to compete against people other than our own regional and we finished 1-2-3 in the women's (division)."

In the last eight years, ASU has won 19 team titles at national outdoor tournaments. Rhodes said.

Wrestlers continue dominance; club wins freestyle crown

Led by the performances of eight ASU wrestlers, the Sunkist Kids wrestling club won the National Senior Freestyle Wrestling Championships and the Espoir World Championships over the weekend in Lock Haven, Pa.

In the freestyle championships, the Kids took first place over the New York Athletic Club, 139-79. The U.S. Marines finished third with 24 points. At Espoir, Sunkist won first place over the Iowa Hawkeye wrestling club, 79-29.

"We blew them away," ASU wrestling coach Bobby Douglas said. "We're a very good team. I expected to win, but I didn't expect to win by that margin."

Douglas said this Sunkist Kids team is comparable to teams in the past.

"Last year's team was the runner-up at the world championships," Douglas said. "This team is just as good and more experienced."

ASU placed five wrestlers in the freestyle championships.

Kenny Monday, an assistant coach at ASU who was a national champion last year at Oklahoma, won in the 163-pound class. Mark Schultze, a new volunteer coach and silver medalist in the 1984 Summer Olympic Games, defeated Mark Scherr, 5-4, to take first at 198-pounds.

Gary Bohay, who finished second in the nation as a senior at ASU, took second to Darryl Burley of Lehigh, 10-8, in the 136.5-pound class.

"It was the best wrestling match of (Bohay's) career against the best wrestler in the country and one of the best wrestlers in the world," Douglas said. "It was a match you could sell tickets to."

Dan Severn, another assistant coach, lost to Greg Gibson of the U.S. Marines in the finals of the 220-pound class, 3-1. Gibson was a silver medalist in the 1984 Olympics.

Severn had defeated Gibson five consecutive times before Saturday.

"(Severn) didn't have a very good match," Douglas said. "It boils down to that."

Eddie Urbano, ASU's NCAA champion in the 150-pound weight class, made a successful debut in national wrestling, finishing fourth at the U.S. Freestyle Open. He wrestled in the 163-pound weight class.

Eddie Urbano took fourth in the 163-pound class, and Matt Gaffari placed fourth in the heavyweight class.

"Eddie Urbano did a tremendous job for his first time in international freestyle tournament," Douglas said. "He lost a heart-breaker to Mike DeAnna, a three-time All-American from Iowa."

Douglas said the adjustment to freestyle wrestling took time.

"There's a big difference," he said. "You can't go to your back or you lose points. Freestyle is very fast. The action is a lot faster and a lot fiercer (than collegiate wrestling)."

"They made the adjustment during the tournament. They've done it before, but not enough to be proficient at it."

Gaffari lost early but recovered and placed in the quarterfinals. There he lost to Rick Peterson of the New York Athletic Club.

ASU placed three wrestlers at the Espoir championships.

Rod Severn won the 220-pound class, and Chip Park took second-place at 136. Jim Gressley finished fourth at 163-pounds.

Park lost to John Smith of the Sunkist club in the finals.

"(Park) will drop to 125 (pounds) where he has already beaten the champion at the Midlands (wrestling tournament held in Chicago last December)," Douglas said.

Fencers qualify 3 at tourney

The ASU Beaux Sabreurs fencing club qualified three fencers for international rankings at an unclassified fencing tournament held at Northern Arizona University Sunday.

Paul Anderson earned a D rating, Tim Sarnecki gained an E rating and Paul Hich qualified for an E rating.

International rankings range from A to E. There are about twenty-five fencers with a rank of A. Three hundred fencers have a rank of E.

An unclassified tournament is a tournament in which only fencers without rankings can compete.

Arizona dominated the overall competition by winning two of three events.

In the men's foil, the Wildcats took first and second place. Dan DeKaiser earned a D rating with his win, and Mark Lundgren finished with second place and an E rating. Sarnecki took fourth in the event behind Craig Byrd of NAU.

Arizona also dominated the men's epee, taking the first three spots. DeKaiser and Lundgren finished in the top two for the second time. Chris Hanson earned an E rating for his third-place finish. ASU's Bob Gwillim took fourth.

ASU swept the first three places in the men's saber. Paul Anderson took first, Sarnecki finished second and Paul Hich took third.

Sarnecki fenced 27 bouts during the day.

NCAA may modify frosh standards

NEW YORK (AP) — College officials say a plan for stricter academic standards for freshmen, approved by the NCAA two years ago, likely will be modified because it would prevent too many blacks from getting scholarships.

The New York Times on Tuesday said critics of the plan cited a study which showed that nearly 80 percent of black male college athletes entering school in 1977 and 1982 would fail to meet the new standards. Among white male athletes, 40 percent would not meet the standards, the study showed.

The Times said the plan's critics included some presidents of black universities and many coaches.

It said that while they are not opposed to higher academic standards for athletes, the proposal should be changed so that blacks would not suffer disproportionate consequences.

"We have never been against standards, but our position is that there must be revisions," Joseph Johnson, president of predominantly black Grambling State University in Louisiana told the Times.

Johnson belongs to a seven-member committee established by the NCAA to study the new standards scheduled to take effect next year. The committee will meet in Chicago starting Wednesday. Proposed changes would be forwarded to the NCAA for consideration next January.

Miller's loss may be missing link for lady netters

By BRAD HALVORSEN
Sports Writer

The ASU women's tennis team enjoyed a successful regular season, continually thrashing non-Top 20 opponents and offering competition to the nation's best squads.

There always seemed to be a missing ingredient, however, which prevented the Devils from knocking off the top teams.

That ingredient may have been Vanessa Miller, the Devils' co-captain who never stepped on the court this spring because of an intestinal virus.

"It definitely hurt us," coach Sheila McInerney said. "Any time you have your No. 2 player from the year before sitting out, you're going to feel it."

After her game started to come around in the fall season, Miller fell victim to a string of illnesses and injuries which eventually ended chances of salvaging any play out of the season.

It began in late October, when a hamstring pull put her out of action for several weeks. Then, over winter break, she began to feel a sickness coming on.

"I just thought it was the flu," Miller said. "I really didn't think much of it at the time. I kept running and playing tennis and everything and it just got worse."

Since then, she has spent more time in the hospital than on the tennis court. Her body weight decreased by 15 pounds and her strength decreased greatly.

"I couldn't run all spring," Miller said.

role as co-captain, however. She attended every possible match, spending her time running from court to court offering encouragement and advice to her teammates.

"It was a different role than I've ever played before," Miller said. "I just wanted to help them in any way I could. When the team went to Tucson for the (Arizona Invitational), I drove myself there and tried to not be taken for granted.

"I was injured once before, when I was about 13 or 14, but that didn't really make me think about it the same way this does. It didn't bother me; I still had my cheerleading and everything."

Miller is planning on redshirting this season, but the paperwork has not gone through. She has until August to make her final decision.

If she redshirts, she will gain a fifth year of eligibility. But if she then chooses not to play her final year and concentrate on graduating, her fifth-year scholarship will be forfeited.

"That won't mean I'm done with tennis," Miller said. "I can still play in individual tournaments and amateur tournaments."

Miller is now shooting to get her game back to normal by next spring, but it will take awhile.

"It will take really long to get back," Miller said. "If I have a good summer — meaning that I have no injuries — I should be back to my game by the middle of the fall."

Miller: 'In March, I felt like I was ready to play again. I didn't feel sick and I really wanted to get back out on the court. But the doctor said I shouldn't.'

"Walking was the only exercise I could get. There were times when I would want to go jogging, but Sheila would say 'No, slow it down.'"

"In March, I felt like I was ready to play again. I didn't feel sick and I really wanted to get back out on the court. But the doctor said I shouldn't."

That did not stop Miller from fulfilling her help them out. I just wanted to let them know that I was still part of the team."

As expected, watching her teammates from the stands is not a satisfying role.

"It's not necessarily frustrating, but in a sense it is," Miller said. "For myself because it is because I wish I could have an opportunity to compete again. You realize that just having the opportunity to play can-

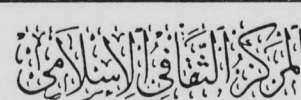

Kosar has choice

NEW YORK (AP) — Bernie Kosar was given the chance Tuesday to play for the team of his choice, the Cleveland Browns, when National Football League Commissioner Pete Rozelle upheld two trades for the University of Miami quarterback.

Rozelle's 11-page decision was an affirmation of the status quo that gives Kosar the right to decide whether he wants to play for the Browns or the Minnesota Vikings.

He upheld both the trade between Minnesota and Houston that gave the Vikings the first crack at Kosar in next Tuesday's regular college draft, and the deal between the Browns and the Buffalo Bills.

Cager Roberts signs with ASU; spring recruit class reaches 4

By JERRY BROWN
Assistant Sports Editor

The number of committed recruits to the ASU basketball team rose to four Monday night when highly-sought forward Ron Roberts signed a financial aid statement with the program.

Roberts, a 6-foot-8½, 215-pound power forward, played the last two seasons at Independence (Kan.) Community College after spending a redshirt year at the University of Colorado.

"He does everything a power forward should," ASU coach Bob Weinbauer said. "He shoots, rebounds and is a good inside player."

Roberts, who has two years of eligibility remaining, missed the latter part of last year because of torn muscles in his chest. The injury caused a respiratory infection and pneumonia which put him in the hospital for several weeks.

Roberts joins guard Tyrone Mitchell, swingman Shaughn Ryan and forward Alex Austin who have signed or given verbal commitments to ASU.

One other player the Sun Devils sought, forward Tom Lewis, selected Southern California on Monday.

Lewis, who averaged 32 points and 11.7 rebounds as a senior at Mater Dei High School in Santa Ana, Calif., also was considering ASU, Syracuse and Nevada-Las Vegas.

Weinbauer also said that Tulane University forward Ron Grandison visited the ASU campus last weekend. Grandison, a sophomore with two years of eligibility remaining, sat out last season after transferring to Tulane from the University of Cal-Irvine. Now that Tulane has abolished its basketball program in the wake of a point-shaving scandal, Grandison can move to another school without the usual one-year wait.

of Cal-Irvine.

Now that Tulane has abolished its basketball program in the wake of a point-shaving scandal, Grandison can move to another school without the usual one-year wait.

"He came to see the campus this weekend," Weinbauer said. "He will also visit the University of Washington."

Grandison was a teammate of ASU guard Bobby Thompson at St. Bernard's High School in California. The 6-8, 220 pounder is being wooed by the Devils, Huskies and five other schools.
