Charged with deaths of 2 ASU students in April plane collision

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

A pilot involved in a mid-air collision that killed two ASU students pleaded not guilty to two counts of manslaughter and two counts of reckless endangerment Tuesday in a Yavapai Superior Court.

Robin S. Thompson, 20, was indicted last week and will appear in a Yavapai Division II court on Oct. 30, according to Charles Hastings, a Yavapai County attorney.

Thompson is charged with manslaughter in the April 14 deaths of Samantha Fraser, 18, and Timothy Streit, 23.

Hastings said Thompson, a flight instructor, was released on his own recognizance by Judge James Hancock.

Thompson was piloting a Piper Cherokee 140 near Camp Verde when he collided with a Cessna 172, piloted by Paul Bjornstadt, 20, also an ASU student.

The Cherokee's propeller apparently struck the Cessna's fuselage, severing the rear tail section behind the passenger compartment, according to an investigation completed by the Yavapai County Sheriff.

Fraser and Streit, who were sitting in the passenger section, died when they fell approximately 6,500 feet.

Bjornstadt and ASU student Kim Marble, 24, were injured when the remainder of the Cessna crashed into a hillside.

Thompson's plane landed on a nearby gravel road. According to the sheriff's report, neither Thompson nor his three passengers were injured.

The parents of Fraser and Streit have filed a $24.7 million lawsuit in Maricopa County Superior Court against Thompson and his father, William Thompson, the owner of the Cherokee.

According to the claim, William Thompson is charged with negligence because he entrusted his aircraft to a reckless pilot.

The suit claims that Fraser and Streit were "violently sucked out and ejected into mid-air and then thrown to the rocky canyons below."

Hastings earlier said the lawsuit will have little bearing on Thompson's trial.

2 Fraternity houses damaged in fight with group of Mesans

Windows at the Sigma Alpha Epsilon house, 706 Alpha Drive, were broken in a fight early Saturday morning.

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Several people were sent to the hospital with minor injuries, windows were broken and fences were destroyed when 40 to 50 assailants attacked two ASU fraternities early Saturday morning, house members said.

Scott Freeman of Pi Kappa Alpha said the attackers descended on the PKA and Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternities "in a rage" about 1 a.m.

According to Freeman, the trouble started when three men drove up to the PKA fraternity house in a car and started shouting obscenities.

A fight broke out and the car left, he said. Ten minutes later 40 to 50 men arrived in several vehicles and began attacking fraternity members, he said.

But according to preliminary findings from an ASU Police Department investigation, the fight began when several PKE members got in a fight in Mesa.

Chief C. Russell Duncan said, "It originally started off campus. It was brought back" to ASU.

Duncan said the location of the Mesa fight could not be released because it is under investigation.

According to Loren Gold of SAE, the fight spread to his fraternity when a bottle was thrown into the courtyard.

A member who was playing pool went outside to see what was happening, and because he was holding a pool cue, was mistaken for a combatant, he said.

The SAE fraternity house received the most damage, including seven broken windows and a broken fence, he said.

According to Freeman, several PKA members are angry about the way ASU police responded to the intrusion.

Freeman said the campus police were informed there was "a riot going on" but did not respond for 15 minutes, despite the station's close proximity to the fraternities.

Former coach accepts settlement from regents

Former ASU basketball coach Bob Weinbauer accepted a financial settlement from the Arizona Board of Regents Tuesday, but his attorney said the offer is $53,000 less than an original agreement with University officials.

Scott Clark, the former coach's attorney, said the regents' settlement totals $234,375, which is approximately $53,000 less than ASU administrators had agreed to pay Weinbauer for his resignation.

Clark said Weinbauer agreed to accept the terms to avoid a lengthy court battle with ASU.

But Randal Bain, an attorney representing ASU in the settlement, said there are no discrepancies in the payments offered to Weinbauer by the regents during a meeting Friday.

Clark said Weinbauer will accept a $220,744 annuity purchased by the regents which will pay the coach an additional $79,256 in interest rates over the next five years.

In a statement prepared by the board, the regents said an additional $13,631 will be paid to Weinbauer in cash, and a previous payment of $12,000 will be retained by the coach.

Weinbauer said he considers the $220,744 annuity along with $30,400 in attorney's fees to be the only payments from the board and any previous payments had already been used to cover attorney fees.

In a prepared statement, Weinbauer said, "While the offer is considerably less than ASU had agreed to pay me in June, I am willing to accept it."

The payments will be made from the University's athletic department income, which does not include any taxpayer funds.

Weinbauer said he did not want to bring the matter to court because he still holds a great loyalty to ASU and did not want to injure the University's basketball program or any players he had recruited in what might have been a highly-publicized court battle.

"We are happy to get the matter resolved short of litigation," Clark added.

Weinbauer's conflict with the University stems from his July 9 dismissal by ASU administrators.

Weinbauer said the University had agreed to pay him $300,000 for his resignation, and the agreement was signed by former Deputy Athletic Director Frank Sackton, ASU Attorney Duane Schultz and former Weinbauer attorney Charles Roush.

The regents were given 60 days to offer a settlement to Weinbauer, according to state law. The coach had previously threatened to file a lawsuit that would have asked for more than $1 million in damages.

ASASU to retain past funding policy

By ANDREA HAN
State Press

The Associated Students of ASU executive branch will continue to use policies established last year when funding organizations, President Dave Varnell said.

Varnell also said the ASASU Senate may use the policy during the appropriation process as well.

The policy consists of six guidelines set up by former president Ray Burnell that will aid the senate in appropriating funds for organizations, Varnell said.

He said an organization will not receive funding if it: supports a University administrative service; needs money to purchase food; advances the causes of a religion; promotes sexual causes; furthers the campaigns of political candidates; or supports partisan political viewpoints.

The guidelines were designed to single out groups that will reach more students, and to support stronger programs and successful organizations, Varnell said.

"Every group can go through the hearing to try to make the senate support their case," he said. "These guidelines are purely flexible."

Varnell said the guidelines will allow the senate to remain neutral and unbiased when appropriating funds to organizations.

"When you give a club money, you are in a sense promoting or endorsing that organization," he said. "If the senate gives funds to a certain religious organization, then we are accused of taking a partisan view."

"When we don't fund an organization that is involved with a particular candidate, we aren't ignoring them. They can confront us, but we want to take a non-partisan viewpoint. That way we have a fair distribution of student money."

ASASU is working with a $867,926 budget for the 1985-86 school year. The senate is responsible for appropriating the money, but the president has the ultimate approval over all budget decisions, Varnell said.

"As much as I would like to fund all groups, it is a matter of opportunity cost," he said. "The senate is bound by that opportunity cost."

"We like to fund organizations that promote some educational purpose — a speaker, groups that offer tutoring, or groups that encourage minority involvement."

Coastal Mississippi begins to repair damage caused by Hurricane Elena

PASCAGOULA, Miss. (AP) — Residents of Mississippi's resilient Gulf Coast set to work Tuesday to recover from a savage beating by Hurricane Elena, grateful that this time, at least, there was something left to repair.

Six federal and state disaster teams drove around making "windshield surveys" of damage and making preliminary estimates of losses.

"Until that survey is completed, we would only be guessing but I don't think I'd be too far out of line to say the damage to the Mississippi Coast could run in the hundreds of millions of dollars," Harrison County Civil Defense director Wade Guice said.

Pascagoula and surrounding smaller towns near the Alabama border appeared to be the hardest hit by the storm that roared ashore Monday with 100 mph wind, rain and tornadoes.

Residents of Pascagoula and Moss Point were aided by inmates from the Mississippi State Penitentiary and volunteers from outside the hurricane area.

Gov. Bill Allain is awaiting word from the White House on his request that storm damaged areas be declared eligible for federal disaster assistance.

He said state agencies were investigating the condition of coastal water and food supplies and the status of sewage treatment.

The Coast Guard reported Tuesday that ports along the coast had been closed because many buoys and channel markers had been blown off position. A spokesman said they would remain closed until a Coast Guard team completed inspections.

Despite the damage, no deaths were reported along the Mississippi coast. However, the death toll from Elena rose to four Tuesday when the New Orleans coroner's office attributed a death at sea to the storm.

There had been three deaths in Florida last weekend when the storm lingered off that coast.

Teachers strike nationwide, requesting salary increases

Teachers in Chicago and Seattle went on strike Tuesday, one day before the scheduled start of classes, while teachers in Philadelphia shouted their overwhelming approval of a new three-year contract that averted a walkout.

Elsewhere, strikes by teachers in 10 other school districts in Pennsylvania, Illinois and Michigan disrupted the resumption of fall classes for more than 76,000 students.

The Chicago Teachers Union, representing 28,000 teachers in the nation's third-largest school district, launched its third walkout in as many years after rejecting the 430,000-student district's offer of a 3.5 percent salary increase. The union is holding out for a 9 percent raise.

Aides to Illinois Gov. James R. Thompson met Tuesday with both sides to present a proposal, the terms of which were not disclosed.

A coalition of 17 unions representing 12,000 other school workers, including painters and engineers, also struck Tuesday.

The 19,000-member Philadelphia Federation of Teachers ratified by voice vote a $250 million, three-year contract reached after 39 hours of round-the-clock negotiations.

Scientists view Titanic oceanliner for first time since sinking in 1912

BOSTON (AP) — The sunken Titanic is remarkably intact with a hull "like a museum piece," but any salvage attempts would desecrate the gravesite of the more than 1,500 people who died with it, the first man to view the wreckage said Tuesday.

Robert Ballard, chief scientist of the joint U.S.-French venture that found the oceanliner on Sunday and an engineer at the Woods Hole Oceanographic Institute, described to associates in Massachusetts the remote-control television survey he made of the 73-year-old wreck.

"The ship was pretty intact and upright, ..." said Nancy Green, a public relations assistant at Woods Hole.

Shelley Lauzon, public relations director at Woods Hole, spoke with Ballard in a ship-to-shore telephone call to the Navy research vessel Knorr.

The Titanic was the biggest, the most luxurious and supposedly the safest liner of its time. Its builders had called it unsinkable because of its double steel hull and waterproof compartments.

But an iceberg cut a 300-foot gash across several of the compartments and the ship sank on the night of April 14-15, 1912. Approximately 700 people managed to get to lifeboats and were saved, but 1,513 others died.

The Knorr arrived Aug. 28 at the wreck site 500 miles from Newfoundland, where the scientists had spent a month in June and had come close to finding the vessel, Lauzon said.

"The primary purpose of the dive was not to find the Titanic," Lauzon said. "It was to do engineering tests on the Argo (Ballard's new unmanned underwater vehicle)."

Parking regulations grow more stringent

By Kari Bland
State Press

In the midst of issuing tickets and re-issuing decals, the Office of Parking and Transit has introduced two new operations, the director of parking services said Tuesday.

Richard Landreth said that because of problems with the plastic, rear-view mirror hangers on some parking decals, many of them will have to be re-issued in the next three to four weeks.

The hangers have melted and warped in the heat, and cannot be hung from the rear-view mirrors, he said.

Parking enforcement officers are being instructed to look on dash and floor boards of cars before writing tickets. Landreth said if a ticket is issued to a vehicle with a decal, it will be voided.

Faculty and students with defective hangers will be issued new decals at no charge, he added.

Under a new parking regulation, students parking illegally in the Tempe Center at Mill Avenue and University Drive will be rhino-booted instead of towed, according to Landreth.

The rhino boot is a mechanical restraint which attaches to the axle of a tire and immobilizes the vehicle.

In order to get the rhino boot removed, the owner of the car must go to the Office of Parking and Transit and pay a $50 fine.

"We have an average of 12 to 15 offenders a day," Landreth said. "We expected the boots to cut that number down, but actually we had more last week, even a few repeat customers."

In addition to the new rhino-booting policy, Landreth said a second parking operation went into effect Tuesday.

Lot 12, by the Administration Building, and Lot 26, across from the ASU Bookstore, will operate on a coin-token mechanism from 5 p.m. to midnight, Landreth said.

For 50 cents, a driver can park in the lots for the entire seven hours.

The change will benefit evening students, visitors and those who use campus facilities at night, Landreth said.

Two buses arrived on campus Friday to take over the runs of the trams which blew engines, according to Landreth.

It will be three to four weeks before all the trams are repaired, he said, but the buses will continue to run until then.

Landreth said full enforcement of all parking regulations began Monday.

During the first few weeks of school, parking tickets were not issued to vehicles lacking an ASU parking decal, Landreth said.

"We wanted to give students a chance to get into the routine of classes and get parking decals," he said.

Failure to register a vehicle with the University can result in a $25 fine.

Gate access lots have cut back by 11 the number of areas that must be monitored, according to Landreth, allowing more effective control of other areas.

"Students can look forward to stricter enforcement in Lot 59, resident lots and metered areas," Landreth said. "These are common places where students without decals try to hide."

Ticket fines range from $5 to $50, and the most common ticket issued is a $10 fine for overtime parking, according to Landreth.

Carts 'borrowed'; kids suspected

By THERESA WILLEFORD
State Press

Taking a joy ride in an ASU electric cart has become a popular pastime for some youths, according to University police.

Lt. Craig Emanuel said within the past two months five carts have disappeared from their parking places and shown up elsewhere on campus. Many other carts have shown signs of attempted robbery.

"It's a relatively new problem and we've seen it increase in frequency particularly in the past two months," Emanuel said.

Police have an idea of what type of vandal they're looking for, he said.

"We suspect that we're looking at a group of juveniles, the skateboard crowd, who have caught on to how you defeat the lock mechanism," he said.

Emanuel said taking care of the carts is a "joint responsibility."

"We've caught two of them, and observed others. Also, I just can't see an adult doing this."

"It's not that exciting to drive the carts, they don't go that fast. But if you're eagerly awaiting your driver's license, it's a thrill."

Only one SAGA Food Service cart has been destroyed, he said. The damage was estimated at $1,800.

Emanuel said taking care of the carts is a "joint responsibility."

"It's our (ASU police) responsibility to ensure a safe environment, but everybody has some responsibility."

"Taxpayers are the ones buying these carts."

Parents of juveniles who steal carts are liable for damages, he said.

Even if the cart itself is not wrecked, the ignition is always damaged from the method used to bypass the lock mechanism, he said.

To deter the thefts, Emanuel said the department recommends a different type of lock for the carts.

"We recommend the 'J-Lock' which immobilizes the steering wheel and brake of the cart."

"It sells for under $20 and isn't as messy as chaining the cart to a light pole. You can just carry the key neatly."

The two youths who were brought to the police station in connection with the cart thefts will be handed over to juvenile authorities, Emanuel said.

"They will probably have to perform some sort of community service such as washing fire trucks for six weekends, or working with the elderly nutrition program," he said.

Using ASU carts unlawfully has become a popular adventure.

America cannot be an ostrich with its head in the sand. —Woodrow Wilson

Contemporary America no place for isolationism

Doug Newman Guest Columnist

This has been a year of anniversaries. 1985 marks the 10th anniversary of the Helsinki Human Rights Accords and the fall of Saigon. It is also the 50th anniversary of Social Security. Closer to home, ASU marked its centennial this spring.

Fear not. I have not forgotten the most significant anniversary of them all, specifically the 40th anniversary of the Allied victory in World War II and the dawn of the nuclear age.

Interestingly enough, in their urge to commemorate, neither Time, Newsweek, nor any of the three major networks has seen fit to devote a documentary to another anniversary of enormous importance, namely the end of American isolationism in 1945. This event represented a drastic turnabout of traditional American foreign policy prior to World War II. This shift cannot be said to have taken place at one time or one instant. We will never see a three-day weekend in honor of "Foreign Policy Reversal Day."

However, the event is no less meaningful than many of those we take time to celebrate. Its impact on our everyday lives is no less profound. There is an understandable, yet disturbing attitude among many Americans which yearns for a return to our pre-1945 isolationist ways. Putting aside avowed fellow travelers and left-wing crackpots, these neo-isolationists display an unsettling naivete when it comes to America's historical evolution and the responsibilities that were thrust upon us at the end of World War II.

They are right in maintaining that America has a strong history of not participating in foreign conflicts. As a high school history teacher of mine was fond of saying, throughout most of our history, America's foreign policy was to have no foreign policy. In this spot in April, I stated that, "when our ships were sunk or our harbors were bombed, we would step in and make sure the 'good guys' won." Aside from that we were content to mind our own business here at home.

Ever since George Washington's warning against "entangling alliances abroad," Americans have always had a disdain for military foreign involvements. Conflicts such as World War I are a burden to be borne only as long as is absolutely necessary.

In 1928 we went as far as to sign the Kellogg-Briand Pact, which renounced war as a means of solving international disputes. Former Ambassador to the Soviet Union Charles Bohlen commented at the time America was about as safe and secure as any nation could ever hope to be. On the east and west we were protected by two great oceans, and our neighbors on the north and south constituted no conceivable threat. Our relations with the Latin American nations were basically friendly. Furthermore, great areas of the world were under the domination of France and England, two of our allies in World War II. It might also be noted that at the time, our defense budget was only $1 billion.

A decade later, our isolationist sentiments were so strong that Congress came within 20 votes of passing the Ludlow Amendment, which would have required a national referendum before America could go to war.

After World War II, the United States and Russia emerged as the world's two great superpowers. Germany and Japan were destroyed, and England's disintegration began almost immediately thereafter. These obvious facts make ridiculous the assertion of Dr. Helen Caldicott, the feminine freezenik, that "America needed a new enemy in 1945." We would have preferred to retreat into our antebellum ivory tower.

Stalin's postwar subjugation of Eastern Europe, which was contrary to the promises he made at Yalta, ushered in a new era for America. We were the only nation that had the muscle to restrain the Soviets in their quest for elbow room. In fact, President Truman's decision to drop the bomb was based in part on fears that the Soviets would duplicate their actions in the Far East were the war to continue.

America accepted its new role grudgingly. As historian Andre Malraux observed, America is "the only nation in the world ever to become the most powerful without seeking to." We never intended to climb into the driver's seat and were reluctant to accept the responsibilities that went along with it.

U.S. involvement in the conflicts in Korea and Vietnam was in direct accordance with this new role. In Korea, we saved South Korea from Communist domination and have since watched it become one of the most rapidly growing nations in the world. Our lack of resolve and eventual withdrawal from Vietnam caused a nation with some civil liberties to fall into the hands of another with no individual liberties whatsoever.

Whenever America has withdrawn support for an emerging nation such as Cuba, South Vietnam, or Iran, conditions have invariably deteriorated. In the area of human rights, conditions in such countries as South Korea and Chile may not be improving as rapidly as some impatient Americans may like, but they are not nearly as bad as if those nations were under the aegis of the Kremlin.

I can confidently state that as unsavory as the ruling classes in South Africa and El Salvador may appear, even more zealous strongmen will take the helm if we capitulate to the desires of those who seemingly lack historical perspective of why we would ever back Botha and Duarte.

Don't get me wrong, I am no ogre. The last thing I would want to see is for this country to become involved in another war. Like most of you, I would rather put away a few brew-hahas while tubing down the Salt River than be stationed in a swamp in some banana republic.

We must, however, take a more long-range view of our role in the world. Does any sane person doubt that our victory against the Germans and the Japanese in World War II was worth the effort? Victory then came in increments. By the same token, stopping Hitler's moral equivalent, the Soviet Union, in its quest to "bury us" is a step-by-step process. None of these victories will be too high a price to pay if the reward is saving our country from becoming just another island in a greater Gulag Archipelago.

Isolationism, then, is an attitude that would be appropriate in a more innocent age for America. It is clearly a luxury we can no longer afford.

Baha'i faith not orthodox Christianity, logically fallacious

Editor:

This is a response to the article in the State Press on the Baha'i faith. The goal of the Baha'i faith is unity under one religion. They claim that their religion follows the prophets of Hinduism, Buddhism, Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and a few others. A major flaw to this type of reasoning is that each of these religions have different views of God and salvation. Is God personal and impersonal at the same time? Is there one God, or many, or none at all? Is salvation based on Grace or works? Will we be resurrected or reincarnated? If one truly follows all of these religions, he must believe in all of the above contradictory statements at the same time. Simple logic tells us that A cannot equal not-A at the same time.

Jesus Christ is different from all other "prophets," and Christianity rejects many prophets of the Baha'i faith. Jesus was sinless but no other prophet was. Jesus forgave sins against God, but no other prophet can. Jesus claimed to be God, no other prophet would dare to do that. Jesus was worshipped, yet He believed that worship was for God alone. (See Luke 4) Above all, only Jesus Christ rose from the dead.

The Baha'i faith's greatest prophet, Baha'u'llah, claimed to be the fulfillment of Biblical prophecy. In the religion's tract, "One Universal Faith," Baha'u'llah claims to be the Son of Man in Matt. 16:27. This passage is referring to Jesus Himself. In verse 13 Jesus asks His disciples who the people thought the Son of Man was. Then in verse 15 Jesus asked them "Who do you say I am?" Peter correctly answered "Son of the living God." In verse 27 it says that the Son of Man will be coming in His Father's glory. Only Jesus is God's Son. Baha'u'llah falsely attributes many references to himself, references which refer to the Holy Spirit and Christ.

Baha'is claim a prophet is needed for this age, and that new laws are needed. The Bible says that Christians are no longer under the law but under grace (Romans 6:14). Jesus said that His words would never pass away, meaning that they are to be used in this age (Matt. 24:35). Galatians 1:8 warns that if anyone preaches another gospel, he is to be condemned. Jesus said there is no commandment greater than these: The Lord our God is one. Love Him with all your heart, and with all your soul, and with all your mind, and all your strength. And love your neighbor as yourself. (Mark 12:29-31) What can the Baha'i faith add? How is man today morally different than man 1800 years ago? What can the Baha'i faith offer that Christianity cannot? The only prophecy Baha'u'llah fulfilled is Matthew 24:5 which says "For many will come in My name, claiming, 'I am the Christ' and will deceive many."

The Baha'i faith denies the Trinity, the deity of Jesus, (Who was the incarnate God, not a manifestation of God), the bodily resurrection of Jesus, and every major doctrine of the historic Christian faith.

Board of Regents leaps back to Dark Ages

Editor:

Our socially unconscious Board of Regents has made another backward pointing leap on its way to the Dark Ages. The board, in its malignant stupidity, decided not to divest its interests in South Africa. It saddens me to know that some of the money which I invested on my way to enlightenment has gone towards the perpetuation of darkness and death in another part of the world. The board's pomposity sickens me, both as a Christian and a human being. I earned my degree this past spring from this supposed intellectual oasis, but now I'm ashamed to call myself an alumnus of this institution knowing now what other evil institution some of my tuition money has been spent to honor. There is no excuse for apartheid nor the deaths which have resulted in its name.

Another man called Moses was angered when his kinsmen were worshipping a golden calf. My anger has been provoked because some of my kinsmen are worshipping an even more evil false idol.

Regents ponder investment policy changes

By VICKIE CHACHERE
State Press

The Arizona Board of Regents' finance committee will recommend that the board's investment policy include ethical considerations, but has not decided the future of $3.3 million in South African investments, a committee member said Tuesday.

Regent Edith Auslander said, "We haven't come to a decision (on investment). We are trying to deal with the broader issue."

The investments include $1.2 million in ASU holdings and $2.1 in UA investments.

Auslander said the six-member committee, which met Saturday at UA, will recommend that the general investment policy be altered to include social implications and allow university financial advisors to apply the policy to numerous situations including South African divestments.

"We didn't deal with just South Africa," Auslander said.

According to Regent President Donald Pitt, the universities are only required to consider the potential monetary yield of an investment and not any moral or ethical implications.

UA has already sold $600,000 of stock in a company with South African ties, but the stock was sold to protect the funds and not because of pressure from anti-apartheid groups, Auslander said.

The regents' review of the investment policy stems from requests by two Tucson-based apartheid groups which first approached the board in May.

Members of ASU's chapter of Students Against Apartheid (SAA) said a delegation from ASU will be sent to the regents'

September meeting in Flagstaff this weekend.

SAA Member Greg Hale said he is unsure if the group's participation will go beyond addressing the board during the regents' call to the audience.

"I don't expect a large demonstration when it is a three- or four-hour drive to Flagstaff," SAA member Andy English said.

Hale added he will consult with members of the two Tucson-based anti-apartheid groups before deciding on a specific plan of action for the meeting.

"To me, they (the regents) are attempting to stall the issue and to diffuse the movement," English said.

English, who describes SAA as a part of "the broader anti-apartheid movement," said, "This movement didn't start because people want some morally pure investment policy."

Fraternity settles debt with ASU, avoids eviction

By JOHN CONWAY
State Press

An ASU fraternity escaped lease termination this summer after meeting a debt payment of nearly $37,000 owed to the University, ASU Comptroller Gerald Snyder said.

Sigma Phi Epsilon, 615 Alpha Drive, an ASU fraternity since 1952, acquired the money from local alumni members and the Sigma Phi Epsilon National Chapter in the form of loans, said Brian Fries, fraternity president.

According to Fries, membership fees were not raised and this year's pledges will pay the same amount as last year's.

Fries said membership fees and alumni funding will be used to pay off the loans.

Ron Paquin, president of the Sigma Phi Epsilon housing corporation, said the debt occurred because the fraternity was blocked by the University from accessing a reserve fund established in 1964 with unused bond money secured for the purpose of building fraternity housing.

Paquin said the debt would not have occurred if the fraternity had access to those funds. He refused further comment.

In April, the Arizona Board of Regents gave ASU the authority to cancel the fraternity's lease if the debt was not paid by the deadline.

"We had indicated to fraternities in the summer of 1984 that if we had a past-due receivable we would initiate termination," Snyder said.

"Past-due receivables was a situation that had existed for a number of years."

Snyder said the University did not evict the fraternity because of a $10,000 payment made in April, which Snyder called a sign of "good faith" that Sigma Phi Epsilon intended to pay the debt in full.

ASU evicted a fraternity house in 1972 that never returned to university grounds, he said.

"Most of the fraternities do pay bills on time," he said.

ASU charges fraternities located on Alpha Drive approximately $17,000 a month, nine months a year for the use of the building and the land, Snyder said.

In addition, fraternities must pay for repair services made on their houses by the ASU physical facilities department, he said.

Arizona companies advertise chemical waste for exchange

By CARRI L. MITCHELL
State Press

Industries in Arizona can now advertise to sell their chemical wastes to other companies who can utilize it, through a special ASU waste information exchange, said Nicholas Hild, associate professor for the Center for Environmental Studies.

Hild, the project's director, received an $80,000 grant from the Environmental Protection Agency to fund the project which will feature a booklet of advertisements in classified ad format, he said.

"We're trying to establish classified ads for waste that could be used by others," Hild said.

Currently, waste produced in Arizona must be shipped to California for disposal. Hild said this is expensive for the companies and can be dangerous because of accidents and improper disposal.

Hild's research is centering around the feasibility of the program in Arizona, he said.

Hild said they are trying to determine if industries will use the service and if it can be successfully run through the private sector after his 15 month research period is over.

"I'm hoping this is successful so that the private sector will pick it up and continue it," Hild said.

Hild said he and some student assistants will solicit ads from companies who want to sell chemical wastes. They will then print up the booklet with the ads telling what is for sale and having a special code number for the company selling the waste.

Companies who receive the booklet and want to purchase a waste product will then contact Hild, who will look up the code number of the selling company and contact them with the name of the interested party, he said.

Hild said there are similar programs set up in other areas of the country that have proven successful, and in some areas 20 percent of the waste that would have been deposited in landfills is now being recycled and used by other companies.

"This is positive for the environment," Hild said, "The community is getting served during the research."

Hild said the program goes into effect Sept. 1, and the first ad booklet is scheduled to be released around the beginning of the year.

"Timeliness is very important, they have to have them out fairly regularly," he said.

Hild said they are also going to establish an office in Tucson to help communicate with industries in that area of the state.

"We've had good cooperation with the people down in Tucson, and in the county down there," he said.

ASU film series expects more patrons, revenues

By DAVID O'BRIEN
State Press

After a shaky financial situation during fiscal year 1984-85, ASU's two film series operators have been busy making changes designed to increase movie attendance, according to an Associated Students of ASU official.

James Emmelkamp, ASASU activities vice president, said, "If attendance goes up as predicted, we will double our revenues from last semester."

Kathy Cumber, advisor to the MUAB film series, said this semester's attendance should improve because of parking changes near the MU.

The two film series operators get their funds from different sources, according to Dee Schroder, a former film series coordinator for MUAB.

MUAB's weekly "Encore" presentation is paid for by income generated through the MU recreation center and from a percentage given to the MU by the SAGA corporation for rental of restaurant space.

This is the funding for all free showings as well, she said.

ASASU receives its monies from a budget approved by ASU's senate, according to Emmelkamp.

The money to pay for the program is generated by student tuition fees.

"Of the money we receive, 40 percent goes to student workers, 10 percent for movie promotion and advertising and the remaining 50 percent to film rental," Emmelkamp said.

Although ASASU lost more money than MUAB last semester, income from concerts and other special events will more than make up the difference, Emmelkamp said.

"We lost more because we offered twice as many films," he said.

Emmelkamp said he expects last season's 5,700 attendance figure to more than double to more than 12,500 this semester.

Manzanita Hall ventilator overheats; alarm forces residents to evacuate

By ROB KELTON
State Press

Manzanita Hall residents were forced to evacuate the building at 3:58 p.m. Monday when a smoke-warning system on the second floor was set off by an overheated ventilation unit, said C. Russell Duncan, ASU chief of police.

According to a Tempe Fire Department report, the smoke alarm was activated when a cooling-fan motor burned out in room 207 of the dorm.

"When the unit overheats, the alarm sounds and goes to the ASU dispatcher and then the dispatcher calls the Tempe Fire Department," said Larry Earle, refrigeration attendant.

The fire department report said eight fire engines showed up at the scene.

Duncan said it is standard procedure to notify the fire department.

"The risk is too high, and we don't take a chance," he said.

According to Duncan, the smoke alarm warning was only a minor incident.

"It was no big deal," he said. "Whenever there is questionable nature in a high-rise resident hall, we roll the fire department in," Duncan added.

Several hundred students exited through the outside emergency stairwells and remained outdoors for about 30 minutes, said Ray Miller, director of the residence hall.

Hunger pangs: food pantries need public donations

By COLLEEN E. MOORE
Contributing Writer

The Arizona Food Bank Association is working to inform ASU students that this state has something in common with Ethiopia: a hunger problem, according to the AFBA executive director.

Jerry Eaton said the AFBA is trying to meet the nutritional needs of more than 300,000 Arizonans who live below poverty level, almost half of whom live in Maricopa County.

"The needs are far outstripping the resources," she said.

"There are times when our warehouse shelves are practically bare," Eaton said. "We need every kind of canned food, produce, bread and dried milk that we can get."

ASU clubs and organizations could help thousands of hungry Arizonans by taking the AFBA under their wing, according to Eaton.

"If ASU groups would have food drives in the form of dances or contests, and charge a can of food for admission, the AFBA would gladly send out trucks to collect the food and bring it to our pantries," he said.

"This winter is going to be really tough," Eaton said. "People come here from around the country looking for jobs, and our job market is glutted."

"If they run out of money, their only recourse is to apply for food stamps, which is a six-week process," she added. "We try to help people in that waiting period by rationing food on an emergency basis."

Mary Jo Henny, program coordinator for the Department of Economic Security, also thinks ASU groups could make a significant impact on the hunger problem.

"Almost half of those hungry people live right here in Phoenix. If we can keep the area food banks operating efficiently, we can take care of a lot of people," she said.

"Hunger is readily identifiable and easily taken care of, so the AFBA is one of the most cost-effective programs around," Henny added.

"Hungry people are often sick, and the state has to foot their medical bills. We have so much food in this country that there is no excuse for this many people to be hungry,"

The AFBA is a middleman for groups like

Meals on Wheels and the Salvation Army, which don't have adequate storage space for food supplies, she said.

The Phoenix area has three AFBA locations, and Tucson has one. One of Eaton's goals is to see the system expanded statewide, so there will be a food pantry in every county.

police report

Two ASU students were arrested early Wednesday in connection with possession of marijuana, police said.

Michael Ang and William Matthes were taken into custody after police found them at the Cholla Apartments with marijuana.

The officer was on routine patrol when he smelled marijuana burning and knocked on the door of the apartment it seemed to be coming from.

He was invited inside by the two men, who made no attempt to hide the marijuana.

Both men were released on their own recognizance.

A pre-trial hearing is set for Sept. 16.

In other activity, University police reported the following incidents in the five-day period ending at 6:30 p.m. Tuesday:

•A student told police a man looked up her dress while she was on the third floor of Hayden Library Thursday afternoon, police said.

The victim described the man as 5-foot-10-inches tall, approximately 170-pounds, clean-shaven with gray hair and brown eyes.

She told police she would not aid in prosecution.

•A student received an annoying phone call Sunday evening at her room at Palo Verde Main Residence Hall, police said.

The caller attempted to disguise his voice as a female's.

The victim told police she had received annoying calls in the past.

•A second student received a harassing phone call Thursday afternoon at her room at Manzanita Residence Hall, police said.

Police said they have a suspect and are investigating the case.

•Two students got into a fight near Hayden Library Wednesday evening, police said.

The fight involved an argument over a girlfriend.

One student was treated for cuts and bruises.

Both students told police they did not wish to press charges because they are best friends.

•An International Business Machine computer and some related equipment were stolen from the Physical Education Building, room 124, sometime between Friday evening and Saturday morning, police said.

A printer, stand and monitor were also taken.

Police estimated the loss at $3,000.

A staff member told police the west door of the room had accidentally been left unlocked.

He told police the door faces a secluded hallway.

Riot

He said that after the police arrived they did very little to stop the violence.

"The police were of no help whatever," he said.

But according to Duncan, ASU police "separated the people and took control of the situation."

Duncan said ASU police did not arrive immediately because fraternity members first notified the Tempe Police Department.

He said Tempe called the ASU station at 1:27 p.m. and University police arrived at the fraternity houses within the minute.

He said all activity at the police station, including telephone calls and dispatch times, are recorded.

"Anybody who wants to can look at the call cards and see what went down" that morning, he said. "Everything is on tape."

In addition, Duncan said he did not receive complaints from other fraternity members.

Suite life

Development to provide alternative to residence hall living

By LINDA COULSON
State Press

By next summer, ASU students should have a new alternative to residence hall life — two new eight-story private dormitories which will house about 700 students at Sixth Street and Forest Avenue across from Sun Devil Stadium.

According to Richard Raskin, managing general partner for University Towers 84, construction on the suite-style apartment units began at the end of August and will be completed in July 1986.

The University Towers is not on University property and is a private development, he said.

It will be the first private student housing facility in Arizona and among the first of its kind in the nation, Raskin said.

"Each year there are a group of people who can't find a place to stay on campus," Raskin said. "They are pushed into Sin City or so far away they needed a car to get to school."

The facility will include 173 two-bedroom units which will house from two to four students each, according to Stuart Siefer, of Siefer Associates, the architectural firm which developed the plans for the complex. The units include a living room, a kitchen and a dining room, he said.

Rent for the units will start at $250 a month per student, and will include all utilities except telephone and cable TV, Raskin said. Rent will vary depending on the location of the unit within the complex.

The plans also include a student activities center in the facility, a four-story covered parking garage, a pool, a jacuzzi, sun decks and volleyball courts, Siefer said.

The developers are currently waiting for the Tempe City Council to approve plans for retail shops within the complex, he said. A student food service similar to the one used by the University is also awaiting Council approval.

Raskin said the housing project will feature a complete security system and will be wired for computer terminals and cable TV.

"What we are essentially providing here is a way to get away from the institutional feeling of a dorm," Siefer said.

Outside access to the furnished rooms and balconies will add to the apartment atmosphere, he said.

Raskin said many students also enjoy the structure and social life of a residence hall, so in order to give students the best of both worlds, there will be a full-time student activities director to plan monthly events, he said.

Clifford Osborne, director of ASU's Residence Life, said that although suitable bed space off-campus can have an impact on campus residence halls, he does not know how University Towers will effect residence hall occupancy next year.

"The real question is whether living accommodations near campus or accommodations which are University-operated are a student's first priority," he said.

Three cheers for banking convenience!

What with classes, studying, and the occasional extracurricular activity, a little convenience in the finance department would certainly be welcome. And Valley Bank gives you convenience three ways.

Start with a choice of checking accounts aimed at limiting your hassles and your expenses. There's ValueChecking™—the account that gives you more value for your money. Or you might prefer a checking account designed expressly for students. We call it the Student Express Account. You'll call it terrific. Because it's an account that has no minimum balance requirement and a low annual fee that makes it about half the cost of most regular checking accounts.

Best of all, every Valley Bank checking account gives you access to 150 Valley National Banking Machines all over Arizona, for self-service banking around the state and around the clock.

Need more convenience? How about two Banking Machines right on campus, just outside the Bookstore, for quick cash between classes or after dark.

And there's a full-service Valley Bank branch (with two more Banking Machines) located right around the corner, at 826 E. Apache Boulevard, where you can open your checking account and take care of all your other financial needs.

Saving you time and saving you money. That's the value of convenience. And only Valley Bank gives you convenience worth cheering about.

Eggs-periment

Graduate students test age-old theory on campus walks

By ED SCHUBERT
State Press

Two ASU students decided to take the phrase "hot enough to fry eggs on the sidewalk" seriously Friday afternoon on the corner of Mill Avenue and Myrtle Street.

Lee Waldrep and Kevin Garey, both graduate students in the College of Environmental Design, had an egg frying on a mirror, eggs in solar ovens, eggs in cast iron and aluminum frying pans as well as eggs frying on the sidewalk as the control group.

Waldrep said the experiment, carried out to test theories of environmental design, was hampered when a sudden gust of wind blew the eggs out of the solar oven and over the mirror, "scrambling" part of the experiment.

The students were interested in seeing which eggs fried the quickest, they said.

Waldrep said the egg in the cast iron frying pan was doing well, though the "egg by the mirror was doing great until it got scrambled."

This experiment was one of a series the students are doing, they explained.

An earlier experiment involved the use of a gnomen, a wooden pole used to determine cardinal directions by the movement of the sun, they said.

Waldrep explained that the shadow of the top of the pole is traced throughout the day, and the arc indicates the directions of north, south, east and west.

The purpose of the experiment was to investigate "the sacred geometry of the ancients," he said.

Many ancient cultures used similar methods to geographically orient their buildings for religious reasons, he added.

Kevin Garey shows how he and Lee Waldrep tracked the sun using a device called a gnomen, at left. The two proved it's hot enough to fry an egg on the sidewalk, then multiplied the effort, at right. Instruments used in their egg-speriment included black bricks, a mirror, skillets and homemade parabolic reflectors and miniature greenhouses.

University of Texas cancels Briggs' drive-in film festival

By College Press Service

AUSTIN, Texas — Nobody loves a critic, especially one who regularly peppers his reviews of slasher flicks and "B" grade drive-in movies with ethnic slurs guaranteed to enrage the censors.

So, the University of Texas won't host the Fourth Annual Joe Bob Briggs Drive-In Movie Film Festival this fall.

"He's pretty controversial with students," said Steve Bearden, film program adviser for UT's Texas Union. "Students were distinctly unhappy and dissatisfied with the prospect of Briggs appearing on campus."

Joe Bob, the red-neck, racist alter-ego of former Dallas Times Herald staff writer John Bloom, offended nearly everyone last spring when he wrote a take-off of USA for Africa's anthem, "We Are the World" entitled "We Are the Weird."

The parody — labelled "blatantly racist" by ethnic groups — drew so much flack, the Times Herald and newspapers nationwide cropped Joe Bob's syndicated column.

John Bloom resigned and sold the Joe Bob column to United Press Syndicate.

"The Times Herald did a real disservice when they labeled him a racist," says Bloom's business manager and literary agent Vicki Eisenberg. "He's never had a problem with minority groups during any of his speeches."

But minority student protests helped sway UT's Bearden to reject plans to hold the film festival on the Austin campus.

Bloom and UT began festival negotiations last spring before the "Weird" column appeared.

"Frankly, I was surprised at how people feel about him," Bearden said. "They either like him or hate him. There's not much middle ground."

A recent Joe Bob review, for instance, noted the remake of "Where the Boys Are" starred "four bimbos whose philosophy of life is all you need is a bikini and quality contraceptives."

Joe Bob rated the movie "three-and-a-half stars" for displaying 11 breasts, no blood and one beast. "Heads do not roll," he complained.

UT's Black Student Association and other interest groups, suspicious of such sentiments, wanted to interview Briggs before the college approved the film festival.

"We felt he shouldn't come unless he spoke to us first," said BSU President Kevin Williams. "We were opposed to him coming if he didn't really explain himself to minority students."

"Some take what he says satirically, but others take it seriously," Williams said.

But Eisenberg says Joe Bob's humor isn't a "put down," in fact, Bloom has received many awards for social writing.

And, while he has no campus appearances booked in the near future, she said Joe Bob has performed at a number of schools where "he was always very well received."

She accuses UT of censorship and calls the publicized decision to cancel the film festival for "financial considerations" a lie.

"The big censors on top — we were never told who — stopped (the festival)," she said. "The film department approved, then said it wasn't a good idea. The official reason was financial, but they lied."

"It's hard to believe anything cost too much money for UT," she said.

But Bearden claims he made the decision to cancel the festival himself, and while he hasn't discussed "specifics of price" with Joe Bob's agent, "it was a big deal and obviously was going to be a lot of money."

Bearden even admits Joe Bob sometimes is funny, and defends the humor as "obviously a put on. If people take it seriously it could be real offensive. I don't see how they do, but they do."

"It's an Archie Bunker situation," Eisenberg explains. "Joe Bob's humor is where he comes from. It's people he knows."

But for now, the Fourth Annual Drive-In Film Festival is homeless, and Eisenberg says that's not funny.

"I haven't heard from him (about UT's decision)," she said. "But I'm sure his reaction is forthcoming in his column."

Reagan reactions to Gorbachev interview mixed

WASHINGTON (AP) — The White House Tuesday sidestepped Soviet leader Mikhail Gorbachev's charge that the United States is setting up a confrontation at the November summit, and chose instead to welcome his pledge to propose ways of improving superpower relations.

In the administration's first formal reaction to Gorbachev's debut interview in the Western press, presidential spokesman Larry Speakes dismissed the Communist Party chief's claim that the United States expects the Soviets to make all the concessions.

President Reagan, Speakes said, is prepared "to meet the Soviets halfway in an effort to solve problems."

Meanwhile, a delegation of U.S. senators who met with Gorbachev in Moscow Tuesday said the Soviet leader told them he is ready to make radical offers to reduce nuclear weapons arsenals and may not oppose basic U.S. research on space-based military systems — the so-called "Star Wars" program.

Speakes said the administration has heard such talk before. He challenged the Soviets to put their proposals on the table when arms control talks resume Sept. 19 in Geneva if they are serious about negotiating arms reductions.

"Our views of the causes of the present U.S.-Soviet tensions are quite different from that presented by Mr. Gorbachev," Speakes said in response to the Soviet leader's interview with Time magazine. But he said, "We do not intend to enter into a debate in the media," preferring to prepare for the summit through confidential diplomatic channels.

He repeated Reagan's challenge to the Soviets to permit the American president the same access to the Soviet Union's government-controlled media as Gorbachev has to the independent Western press.

"We are pleased that Mr. Gorbachev was able to present his views to the American public," Speakes said. "If President Reagan had a comparable opportunity to express his views to the Soviet people through the Soviet media, this would doubtless improve our dialogue and indicate Soviet willingness to accept a degree of reciprocity in an important aspect of our relations."

The spokesman said the United States has received no response in recent weeks to its latest proposal that the U.S. and Soviet leaders arrange exchange appearances on each other's nationwide television media as part of a broader effort to increase mutual understanding.

Reagan first made such a proposal in a speech to members of the British Parliament in June 1982, when he called for a worldwide campaign to promote democratic institutions.

Cubans to return to Florence when repairs are completed

PHOENIX (AP) — Cuban inmates will return to a riot-damaged federal immigration center as soon as repairs are completed within four to six weeks, the U.S. Immigration and Naturalization Service said Tuesday.

Repairs at the Florence center, rendered uninhabitable by the Aug. 22 disturbance, are expected to cost from $225,000 to $250,000, said INS District Director Ruth Ann Myers.

The Cubans are to be sent to the center as soon as possible after the repairs are completed, she said. It probably will house almost 100 Cubans, as it did before the disturbance, Myers said.

She said her office had gotten authorization from Washington, D.C. for a new administration building at the complex, but still was seeking approval to install additional security equipment.

The Cubans all came to the United States during the 1980 boatlift and later were convicted of crimes in this country. They had been protesting the uncertainty over their desire to return to their home country.

The inmates were moved to other federal facilities in Texas, California, Nevada and Oklahoma after the riot, in which they broke windows and furniture and tore lighting and water fixtures from the walls and ceilings.

The new administration building will be outside the fenced-in area surrounding the main building. Until now, administrative offices have been housed inside the main building where the riot occurred. Myers said, "If anything again goes on within the jail we will have our staff outside of the area."

The new modular building will cost approximately $125,000 and is to be built within 45 days, she said.

Myers had sought additional security equipment — including underground sensors near the fence, perimeter lighting and closed-circuit televisions — when Cubans first were assigned to the center. As of now, she said, "The center will be restored the way it was" before the riot, without such equipment.

The Cubans to be sent back to the Florence facility include at least 30 of the 40 inmates who were bused from Florence to federal facilities in El Paso, Texas, and 28 inmates who did not participate in the riot and were sent to El Centro, Calif., Myers said.

She said she was uncertain which other facilities would be sending inmates to the Florence center.

Riots mark first anniversary of S. African apartheid protests

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (AP) — Students abandoned black schools near Johannesburg and rioted around Cape Town Tuesday, one year after bloody rent protests set off a flood of violence against white rule that has cost more than 650 lives.

Police and troops sealed off eight black townships, including the two in which the rent protests began Sept. 3, 1984.

The black National Union of Mineworkers said Tuesday night it had "suspended" a two-day-old pay strike against selected gold and coal mines after a gold mine fired 5,000 of its 7,000 workers.

Gold Fields of South Africa said earlier that it was "processing" the workers dismissed from its Deelkraal mine, west of Johannesburg. Mine guards and police fired tear gas to drive strikers away from a heavily guarded dormitory block, where management said 1,400 miners who wanted to work took shelter.

The strike appeared to be crumbling through the day. Managements said only two gold mines remained struck, Deelkraal and the General Mining Corp. operation at Marievale.

In announcing the suspension, the union said it was seeking a court injunction to stop management from sending dismissed miners back to impoverished black homelands. It said Marievale already had sent 300 miners home. There was no immediate comment from the mine management.

The eight sealed townships included Sharpeville and Sebokeng, near the industrial white towns of Vereeniging and Vanderbijl Park, 30 miles south of Johannesburg.

There had been rioting incidents in August, but it was the Sept. 3 protest of rent hikes that marked the beginning of South Africa's year of black rage against apartheid, the race laws that guarantee supremacy to the white minority.

A black man was shot to death Tuesday in the black Eastern Cape township of Duncan Village, near East London, when police fired on a crowd during a gasoline bomb attack on a police vehicle, national police headquarters in Pretoria reported.

Government agency may change evacuation regulations

WASHINGTON (AP) — Amid criticism that government-required evacuation tests for jetliners often bear little resemblance to the problems faced in a crash, the Federal Aviation Administration is considering an overhaul of its rules.

Before a jetliner may carry passengers, the government must be convinced a full plane can be evacuated in 90 seconds. But flight attendants, members of Congress and safety experts say the tests are often contrived to meet the regulations and give little assurance of what can be expected in an accident.

The FAA, acknowledging it is time for "a rigorous reassessment" of its evacuation regulations and how manufacturers and airlines abide by them, began four days of meetings Tuesday in Seattle to take testimony.

Rep. James L. Oberstar, D-Minn., whose House investigations subcommittee oversees FAA activity, says some changes in the agency's approach to aircraft evacuation are overdue.

"We've got . . . no uniformity, just sort of a haphazard approach to (evacuation) rule making and safety, and lives of people are at stake," Oberstar said.

The ranking Republican on the subcommittee, Rep. Newt Gingrich of Georgia, said the approach taken by the FAA and industry on evacuation is "just totally out of touch with the real world."

Scott ends transition from ASU to NBA world champs

By STEVE RICHMAN
Contributing Writer

With Byron Scott growing up near both Hollywood and Disneyland, his first two years in the NBA could be easily referred to as a story-book tale.

Scott, who played basketball at ASU from 1979-1983, amassed many outstanding achievements and awards during his Sun Devil days.

Scott played in 90 games while at ASU and finished his career with a field-goal percentage of 50.7 while converting 74.7 percent of his free-throw attempts.

During his final season at ASU in 1982-83, Scott led the Sun Devils into the postseason NIT Basketball Tournament while averaging 21.6 points per game for the season.

Scott holds four ASU records, including most points in a season with 713 in 1982-83, most field goals in a season with 283 in 1982-83, most total career points with 1,572 and most total career field goals with 646.

After his final season at ASU, Scott was a unanimous first-team all-Pac-10 Conference selection. His other awards include Pac-10 Rookie-of-the-Year and all-Pac-10 honorable mention in 1979-80 and honorable mention all-Pac-10 again in 1980-81.

Despite feeling content after being drafted fourth overall by the then San Diego Clippers in 1983, Scott was in store for a big surprise.

Enter the World Champion Los Angeles Lakers.

The Lakers, in need of a point-guard, traded team and fan-favorite Norm Nixon to the Clippers for Scott. After not playing a single minute for the Clippers or, for that matter, in the NBA, Scott was playing for the best team in the world.

Just playing in the NBA was a dream come true for Scott.

"I always had dreams about playing in the NBA," Scott said. "But never of winning a World Championship."

Most athletes have said that the transition from college sports to the pros is difficult, and Scott is no exception.

"The hardest thing was playing with different people on a different team and not being the main man," he said. "Everyone has to assume a role, and I had to change mine."

Another adjustment Scott had to make was the increase in traveling and the number of games played.

"Traveling can be very tiring. It seemed we were always on the go," Scott said. "In college we used to play about 34 games for the whole season. Here it seemed I got tired after 30 games mostly because of the traveling."

After being traded to the Lakers, Scott said he had to deal with many pressures that mostly centered around the Nixon trade.

Despite the criticism from the people off the court, Scott said he had to establish himself with the other players before he was really accepted.

"Norm had a lot of friends on the team," he said. "The other players wanted to see what I could do by taking it at me. Things came together when I got the system down."

When Scott began his second year with the Lakers, he said everything came more easily.

"Everything was a lot easier because I had more experience and confidence. At training camp there was no animosity because everybody knew everybody and how each other played," Scott said.

Another plus was the attitude of Coach Pat Riley.

"Riley is very laid back," Scott said. "He has a structured offense which lets players do what they do best."

Scott added that former ASU coach Bob Weinbauer had a different method of motivating his players.

"(Weinbauer) was more gung-ho," Scott said. "He got players pumped up by yelling and screaming."

After his first year with Los Angeles, in which the Lakers lost the NBA Championship to the Boston Celtics in a heart-breaking series, Scott said the team had a lot of incentive during the 1984-85 season.

"After losing to Boston in 1984, we knew what we had to do to win the championship in 1985," he said. "Magic (Johnson) took it upon himself, and we beat Boston at their own game."

Scott is alluding to the fact that Johnson received a great deal of criticism for his play during the 1984 championship series, and there was revenge on the minds of the Lakers.

Scott, shown here attacking Walter Davis and the Suns, was a main cog in the Lakers march to the 1985 NBA championship.

Playing for the Lakers fulfills many dreams for Scott.

"I have a special feeling playing with Kareem Abdul-Jabbar and Johnson," he said. "It's a lot easier to play on a team with them. I am also from Los Angeles, and it's nice to play in my home city."

Scott said his idols are Jerry West and Bob McAdoo. West, also known as "Mr. Clutch," was a prolific scorer during his playing days with the Lakers. McAdoo played with Scott in his first two years, including last season's championship series.

The Lakers have not picked up McAdoo's option year on his contract, and he will not play for the Lakers next season. Scott said it was very hard to lose McAdoo as a teammate.

It has been said that it is hard to improve on excellence, but Scott said he has some room for improvement.

"I need to improve on going to the basket," he said. "I played in a summer league and worked on creating things for myself."

It has been 17 years since a team has repeated as NBA champions, but Scott said he believes the Lakers have the attitude to do it.

"We won the championship, and some team will have to take the title away from us to get it," he said.

Tales of a coach who cared - and administrations that don't

Jerry Brown
Asst. Sports Editor

Well, the Board of Regents made its offer to Bob Weinbauer on Friday. The numbers ($356,000) are nothing to sneeze at and no one will have to say Gesundheit to "The Gestapo." The coach and his lawyer accepted the bucks late Tuesday night.

It was like deciding whether to snag a five-spot when it blows past you on Cady Mall. I don't blame you for taking the money and running, Robert. After all, there might be a renge on this offer, too.

After three seasons of ever-darkening clouds, Bob Weinbauer has escaped. He didn't want to. A man of his caliber wouldn't run away no matter how bad the situation turned. So President J. Russell Nelson and the boys decided to help him out, by hook or, as the regents' lawyers found out, by crook.

Weinbauer should have been ready for something like this. When he came here in 1982, he replaced another victim of ASU's be-out-of-town-by-sundown mentality. The bushwacking of Ned Wulk makes "Weinergate" will by comparison.

Not to say this one doesn't stink, too. Out loud.

Bob Weinbauer left the University of Pennsylvania for Tempe trying to pick up the pieces of the Sun Devil basketball program. He left a school team he had led to the Final Four in 1979 and a contract that the coach himself described as "lucrative."

He received a one-year contract. Actually, he received five of them, courtesy of then-Executive Vice President Paige Mullhollan and then-Athletic Director Dick Tamburo. (Notice the preponderance of the word "then" in the preceding sentence.)

Wait, Russ, isn't that illegal? Well, sort of. But hell, if we can land us a top-notch coach and Paige says it's okay. . . .

The first year was full steam ahead. ASU goes from an under .500 club in 1981 to 19-14 and gets to the second round of the NIT. Byron Scott and Paul Williams set school records and the fans are taken by Weinbauer's sideline ranting. He is dubbed "The Gestapo" (probably not for the first time) by those who ventured into the student section. Ah, life is sweet.

Year two. Scott and Williams graduate. Weinbauer is hampered by a lack of experience on the court despite a promising freshman class. The Devils slip to 13-15, but win four of their last five to renew hope. Problems however, begin to rise.

Weinbauer's relationship with the local media erodes.

Weinbauer's relationship with the administration erodes.

Weinbauer's relationship with his players does not.

Year three. The Devils finish under .500 for the second straight season and Sun Devil attendance, which definitely is something to sneeze at, sagged to the lowest point since ASU moved into the Activity Center.

Ipsa facto, no year four?

No. You see, then-interim Athletic Director Frank Sackton told Weinbauer the reason he was going to be a "then" real soon had nothing to do with either his win-loss record or pending investigation by the Pac-10.

But Nelson and Sackton knew one thing. They wanted Bob Weinbauer out and at each turn never ceased to amaze the coach or themselves how they did it.

First, the oversight that the University only can give a single, one-year pact is suddenly noticed. Silly us, Bob, it seems these agreements aren't valid. What, oh what, will we do?

A first offer was made. It seemed fair, if that was possible by then. Weinbauer would coach one more season and then resign. This way the University would get a new start and Weinbauer's reputation would go untainted.

But no. The offer is tucked into the desk and replaced with a second offer. On June 14, the administration offers the coach 300 G's to turn in his whistle. Again, the coach agrees. Again, the administration waffles and pulls back the offer.

By this time, Bob is checking court dates and the administration scrambles to the red phone for the Board of Regents.

So now the final settlement sits on the table and the coach must decide if it makes up for what he has gone through. It probably doesn't, but people who get everything they deserve in life are few in number. In sports, they are non-existent.

Bob Weinbauer was not the most effective coach in college basketball. He coached his home games in a gym two-thirds empty and with a team of not-so-great talent in a not-so-great conference.

But he is a fair and truthful man. A man silly enough to speak his mind. A man silly enough to believe his players came first. A man silly enough to believe in another man's word. Three times.

And saddest of all, there are still people at ASU who believe Bob Weinbauer got what he deserved.

Reynosa says Devils in shape - honestly

By MICHAEL KONZ

State Press

When it comes to talking about team attitudes and emotions, it is difficult to find an honest response.

ASU junior defensive end Jim Reynosa, however, gives an honest answer.

After being asked about how Camp Tontozona was going, he gave the stock response.

"Right now, we're in the best shape this team has been in since I've been here," he said.

Then came the surprise — honesty.

"Last year we said it because that's what the people wanted to hear," Reynosa said.

Other than a change in answers, Reynosa said there also has been a change in how camp was run this year.

"It's going pretty good," he said. "We're just starting to get our legs back. This (camp) is more up-tempo. It's boom-boom-boom. We're running here. There's no walking. Everything's on a time schedule. A lot more learning's going on."

Reynosa said head coach John Cooper's system of three practices a day at Tontozona was better than the two-day practices under Darryl Rogers.

"An hour and ten minutes is real good because you get an hour and a half break," he said. "If you go two hour practices, your mind starts wandering. You don't pay attention. You aren't as sharp."

Reynosa came to ASU in 1982 from San Fernando High School in California, where he earned nine letters.

After his senior season, he was named to all-Valley teams by the Los Angeles Times and The Daily News.

In basketball, Reynosa was second-team all-city and all-league while averaging 20.5 points and 11 rebounds per game.

He also finished second in the shotput at a Los Angeles city high school track meet.

With the season opener against Michigan State coming up, Reynosa is battling fellow junior Frank Rudolph for a starting position.

"It's gonna be close," Reynosa said. "I have a feeling (the coaches) are going to alternate us every series to keep us fresh."

"It makes you better," he said. "You don't sit back and say, 'I've got this spot,' and you don't worry about it. You work in every drill. You're busting your butt."

Reynosa also is happy with the future he sees for the Sun Devils in the Pac-10 race.

"We'll be in there, right down to the wire," he said.

Pro takes pool 'schtick' to MU for annual clinic

By BOB HEILER
State Press

Jack White and others in the same profession make a living out of never getting caught behind the eight ball.

White is a professional pool player who will appear in the MU Sept. 9-13, staging a free tournament, clinic and exhibition for all ASU students.

White, born in New York City in 1931, has been involved in the game of pool since he was eight years old. He has built a reputation as a trick-shot artist and teacher of pocket billiards.

He was the first to introduce "Pocket Billiard Clinics," and he has toured colleges and universities for over 20 years. He has performed at ASU several times in the past.

His credentials as a "pool shark" include an honorary "Doctor of Poolology" degree from the University of Notre Dame, as well as a "Master of Billiard Science" from the University of Alabama and a "Bachelor of Billiards" from Utah State.

His career high run in straight pool is an impressive 319 balls, and he has shot perfect snooker games of 147. He is also the only professional pool player ever invited to play at the White House.

The schedule for his visit includes a two-day clinic for interested students and a three-day tournament for both men and women. The winner of the tournament earns the right to play against White in the feature match. Last year this honor was taken by then-ASU place kicker Luis Zendejas. The program draws to a close with White's trick-shot exhibition.

White's visits to ASU have been met with enthusiasm in the past, causing traffic jams in the basement recreation center of the MU. Due to this popularity, White has become an annual visitor to ASU.

Colts gamble on Schlichter with No. 1 job

INDIANAPOLIS (AP) — Art Schlichter, free of the gambling habit that led to a year's suspension by the National Football League, achieved another milestone in his comeback by regaining the Indianapolis Colts' starting quarterback job.

After four months of evaluations during spring and summer drills and four weeks of alternating starts during the exhibition season, Coach Rod Dowhower on Monday picked Schlichter over three-year starter Mike Pagel.

"He's our man," Dowhower said of Schlichter. "He's got his foot in the door. Now it's up to him."

Schlichter, 25, who threw for a school-record 7,547 yards and 50 touchdowns and ran for 1,303 yards and another 35 touchdowns at Ohio State, was the fourth player chosen in the 1982 NFL draft. He played in three games with the Colts as a rookie backup to Pagel, but he was unable to handle six-figure gambling debts and threats from bookmakers.

The NFL suspended Schlichter for the 1983 season, and he rejoined the Colts last year, first as the backup to Pagel and then as the starter in the final five games.

Ultimately, Dowhower said, Schlichter and Pagel "were close, and it was my background and experience that led me to this (choice). To be specific (about the reasons) would be difficult, and I don't plan to be (specific)."

"If he (Schlichter) continues his work habits to go along with his athletic ability, I think he has a chance to be a solid player at his position. Beyond that, I don't want to speculate," Dowhower said.

"It didn't come easy for me," Schlichter said of his assignment. "I had to change my habits to get back into the NFL and then I had to change my practice habits."

"I had to start thinking clearly again. When I was in the depths of the disease, I thought about nothing but gambling."

Schlichter, who started in preseason games against Seattle and Denver, completed 54.9 percent of his passes for 283 yards and no touchdowns during exhibition play.

Pagel, who has passed for more than 5,000 yards and 25 touchdowns in his three-year career, said, "I'm not happy with the decision, but I understand why they did it."

Gallimore hangs in, fights Koss for starting spot

By CHRIS McKAY
State Press

On the practice field, junior tight end Jeff Gallimore seems to have that inspiring, outgoing attitude that is noticed by all.

"He's got that loosey-goosey personality," according to offensive coordinator Jim Colletto. "Not everyone can be serious all the time."

Head coach John Cooper says Gallimore, along with fellow junior Stein Koss, is serious in his approach on the field.

"These two aren't flashy, nor are they blazers," he said. "But they run very disciplined routes, and they're steady. Consistency is all we ask for, and they have it."

Gallimore and Koss are currently in a fight for the starting position.

"Right now you can flip a coin," said Cooper. "Both have had an outstanding camp."

With the talent they both provide, Cooper said he plans to utilize both in double tight end situations.

Gallimore said the tight end position is one of the Sun Devils' strengths.

"We've probably got as much depth at tight end as anyone in the Pac-10, possibly the nation," said Gallimore.

According to Colletto, the coaching staff may put on a competition each week to decide who will start in the upcoming game.

Gallimore started only one game for the Sun Devils last season, after seeing limited action in 1983 and redshirting in '82.

In the tenth game of the season against Colorado State, Koss suffered a knee injury that allowed Gallimore to step in. He made his first start in the season finale loss to UA, 16-10.

Going into the game with only two receptions all year, Gallimore had nine catches for 77 yards against the Wildcats.

Listed at 6-foot-3, 229 pounds in the off-season, Gallimore came to camp weighing 244.

"I gained the needed weight and the strength," said Gallimore. "What happened was, I lost endurance."

A 1982 graduate of California's Oxnard High School, Gallimore hauled in 34 catches for 732 yards and seven touchdowns, for a 21.5 yard-per-reception average.

He was named Most Valuable Player of the Channel League, all-Ventura County and second-team all-California Interscholastic Federation.

With all the needed fundamentals of a tight end, including speed, blocking ability and an understanding of the passing game, Gallimore only "needs to buckle down and work on basics," according to Cooper.

Gallimore said Camp Tontozona was ideal for working on his weaknesses.

"I can't say enough about it," said Gallimore. "It's the best camp I've ever been to."

With his attitude about practice, the team and the season, Gallimore is expecting ASU to be a strong competitor.

"We're definitely going to make it to a bowl," Gallimore said. "I'll do anything I can to get this team a Pac-10 championship."

Archers aim for Nationals

As the ASU archers prepare for the '85-'86 season, a rigorous schedule of practicing and equipment checking becomes the norm. The team returns from a very successful year in '85; at the national championships the archers swept the team competitions, also 5 of the 6 men and all 6 of the women were all-Americans (nationally only 10 individuals are chosen as all-American). Archery is a sport that requires a great amount of concentration, so the archers not only work on the physical aspect, but spend a lot of hours in silent thought about their performances. ASU has a spectacular history in archery; several national champions have emerged from the program, and the team has swept the national competitions for the past three years.

Dope Bailey, top left, an all-American last year, says, "There's only certain level of physical ability, the thing that separates the elite from the average is mental ability." Equipment is also a major factor in the sport. The two photos above illustrate some of the many technological advancements that have been made since the "William Tell" days. The bows that are used today are composed of a magnesium handle, wood fiberglass limbs, aluminum arrows, and Kevlar bowstrings. The advancements have been made to improve the speed and stability of the bows, and shock absorbers have also been added to improve the flight of the arrow. Below, from left, business junior Tom Richard, alumni advertising senior Rick Betts, and biology freshman Elizabeth Zutell spend the morning hours perfecting their craft. The many hours that are spent each day pay off for the dedicated few. As you can see, below left, the archers of ASU really do . . . "Go For The Gold."

Addition adds strength to national badminton champs

By BOB HEILER
State Press

Badminton coach Carole Fisher has five returning men and three returning women from last year's national champion team, along with a new addition, Mary Fran Hughes, who was ranked fourth in the nation last year.

Hughes is from New York and played for George Washington University. She came to ASU for a variety of reasons.

"First of all, I got a scholarship," said Hughes, a junior advertising major. "Also, ASU has both a men's and a women's team. A lot of other schools just have women's teams. The teams are really good, too, so they travel to a lot of tournaments, which is good."

"I know a lot of these people, too," said Hughes. "We've known each other for years, from playing in junior tournaments together. Even though we're from all different parts of the country, we're all friends."

"I already feel like we're a team." This outstanding lineup has Fisher's expectations high for the teams' performance this year.

"I think that we're going to win all three national titles this year," Fisher stated. "How's that for cocky?"

The badminton team has been ASU's most consistently outstanding sports organization, winning 12 national titles in 13 years. How does one go about holding that kind of team together for that long?

"It wasn't me," Fisher said. "It was Merle Packer, the woman before me. She really built the team, and I worked under her as an assistant coach for four years. She still helps me out occasionally on a volunteer basis."

For the men, one important factor in this

(Wolk) are both really good players."

Another new addition to the team is Wolk, a freshman from Denmark. She was added only recently due to an admissions problem.

"I also expect to win all three titles, especially with the new, good players," Jogis said, "The girls came awfully close last year, and the guys did win; so we've got a real good chance."

On the women's squad, the No. 1 spot is up for grabs between Hughes and last year's team leader, Linda French.

in them. They are pretty competitive tournaments."

There is a collegiate tournament every year, sponsored by the national coaches' organization.

"The collegiate championship is usually held somewhere back East," said Fisher. "There are generally between 25 and 30 teams participating."

Matches consist of best two-out-of-three rounds of 15 points each, except for women's singles, which consist of games to only 11. Scoring is similar to volleyball, with opportunities to score coming only while serving.

The only variation on volleyball scoring is a practice called "setting the score." When a player ties the score within two points of winning, the other player can set, which takes the score back to 0-0. The players then play to five points, with the regular rules.

"A lot of people set because it's tiring," said Fisher. "If you think you're in better shape (than your opponent), you can set to make the match last longer."

The teams compete in singles, doubles and mixed doubles, a fact that may cause problems for Fisher because she has six men on her squad and only five women.

"I may bring in one more girl in January, so we can even the teams out," she said.

'A lot of the tournaments we play in are open, which means that you don't have to represent any college to play in them.' — Fisher year's competition will be Chris Jogis, the No. 1 player in the country since his win last March in the U.S. Open.

Jogis, a junior finance major, also was very optimistic about the teams' upcoming season, which lasts throughout the school year.

"Our new players are really going to help, and we only lost one, so there's nowhere to go but up," said Jogis, last year's NCAA singles champion. Mary Fran and Nina Practice starts today for the teams, in preparation for an exhibition against the U.S. Challenge Cup team, a group of outstanding players from the California area, on Oct. 10. The team also is hosting the Arizona Open, Oct. 12-13, a tournament that anyone may enter, since it is not a collegiate competition.

"A lot of the tournaments we play in are open," said Fisher, "which means that you don't have to represent any college to play

Spikers' move means tough foes

This is the first of a State Press two-part series concerning the ASU women's volleyball team. Today's article discusses the Sun Devils' move from the Western Conference Athletic Association to the newly formed Pac-West Conference.

By DEAN OBENAUER
State Press

The distinctive echoes of volleyballs being bumped, set and spiked are once again heard in P.E. East as the ASU women's volleyball team gears up for its season opener this Saturday.

Although all is normal on the court for the Sun Devils, out of the gym they find themselves in a new conference — a conference of five schools and an undetermined future.

Along with Arizona, Southern California, Stanford and UCLA, ASU pulled out of the Western Collegiate Athletic Association, of which it had previously been a member for six years. The five Pac-10 member schools then formed the new Pac-West.

"It was an administrative decision," coach Debbie Brown said. "I didn't make the decision."

With the five teams leaving the WCAA, San Diego State, Cal State-Fullerton and Cal State-Long Beach were left behind. San Diego State, Fullerton and Long Beach were picked up by the Pacific Coast Athletic Association.

In the past, the women's teams of five Pac-10 universities have played in the WCAA while the men's teams have competed in the Pac-10 Conference.

The move to the Pac-West may be the first step to an ultimate Pac-conference for the women. Administrators have said the reasons for leaving the WCAA were for the forming of a Pac-10 for women.

There are advantages and disadvantages to the move, according to Brown.

"We are playing with the best teams in the country in the Pac-West and that will help us improve," Brown said. "The disadvantage is that there are only five teams in the conference."

Despite being short of schools in the Pac-West, there is no shortage of talent. As of Tuesday's Tachikara Division I Coaches Top 20 Poll, four of the conference's five teams were ranked.

UCLA was ranked No. 1 in the nation, USC second, Stanford third and Arizona No. 18. ASU was an honorable mention to the poll, receiving 10 or more votes.

With the Pac-West not having at least six teams, the conference receives no automatic bids to the NCAA playoffs. That makes it unlikely for all five teams in the conference to get at-large bids for post-season play regardless of their rank.

Other disadvantages include making it difficult to schedule matches at home. But Brown said she looks at the bottom line.

"Being a member of the strongest conference outweighs all of the little things," she said.

With the Devils being in such a strong conference, Brown is confident that her team will be competitive.

Admitting that it is difficult to know how her team will match-up this early in the season against the competition, Brown does have a goal for the team.

"I think we can aim at third in the conference," she said. "It is important to beat our rival, Arizona."

The Sun Devils open their season Saturday night, hosting Utah at 7:30 in P.E. East.

Experience at linebacker spot stabilizes ASU defense

This is the first in a series of articles in which the State Press looks at the 1985 ASU football team.

By BRAD HALVORSEN
State Press

The ASU linebacking core, returning eight players with Pac-10 experience, promises to be one of the soundest positions on the Sun Devils' 1985-86 squad.

After spring training, head coach John Cooper felt he had more depth in the linebackers than any other position and his coaches are pleased with the progress made so far.

"We're not ready to play a game yet, but I've been pleased with the progress," said defensive coordinator Larry Marmie.

Seven of the 11 backers started in at least one game last year for the Devils, including first-team all-American David Fulcher and honorable mention all-Pac-10 Greg Battle.

Fulcher earned his credentials at free safety last year, but has been moved to strong safety, often called the "rover" around the ASU practice field.

In a change from last year, the strong safeties practice with the outside linebackers, headed by outside linebacker coach Kirk Doll.

"We felt the strong safety and outside linebacker have a lot in common in terms of techniques and run support and pass drops," Doll said.

Doll works with three strong safeties and three outside linebackers. Fulcher, an unusually large defensive back at 6-foot-3, 228-pounds, tops the list of strong safeties.

Heading into his junior year, Fulcher has a chance to become ASU's first four-time all-American. He led the Devils last year with 100 tackles.

Behind Fulcher are Steve Johnson, a sophomore who started two games last year for ASU, and Robby Boyd, a freshman who earned player-of-the-year honors last year at Santa Ana Valley High School in Santa Ana, Calif.

Scott Stephan heads the outside linebackers this year after earning a reputation in 1984 as an outstanding pass rusher. A junior, Stephen led ASU last year with nine sacks, including three against Stanford.

Billy Robinson, a three-year letterman who sat out last year, will take some time to get back into full swing, but Doll said he will see a good deal of playing time behind Stephen.

"He's getting better each practice," Doll said. "He will show you some great plays, but then there are some plays where he makes a mental error and it has to be corrected." Freshman Rodney Dillard, a redshirt last year, rounds out the outside backers.

Doll said his players are executing well, but they need to improve from the mental standpoint.

"They have a lot of learning to do," Doll said. "Their position is a very mental job. To me they really have to be overall athletes."

At inside linebacker, all five players are returning from action with the Devils last year. Marmie feels comfortable with his depth and experience at that position.

"We think all of them are capable of playing and also capable of winning," Marmie said. "The fact that all five of them have played in the Pac-10 (means) they've all been under the gun."

Marmie said Battle and Stacy Harvey should start the first game against Michigan State on Sept. 14.

Battle, a 6-foot-1, 219-pound senior, has started 29 of the 34 games ASU has played during his three seasons. Last year he trailed only Fulcher in tackles, racking up 94. He led the defense in assisted tackles with 74.

Harvey started three games at outside linebacker in his freshman season last year, and switched positions during spring training.

Backing up will be John Knight, Pat Taylor and Greg Clark.

Knight was originally slated as a first-stringer along with Battle, but a hamstring pull at Camp Tontozona slowed his progress.

ASU's Scott Stephan, shown here last year against USC, leads the Sun Devil outside linebackers.

Chargers hold No. 1 position in prep poll

Tempe McClintock, which finished No. 1 in the 1984 Associated Press high school football poll, holds the top spot among Class AAA Division I schools in this year's preseason rankings.

Gilbert is ranked No. 1 in the new Class AAA Division II, which combines the smaller schools in Class AAA and what previously were the Class AA schools.

Santa Cruz High School of Eloy holds the No. 1 spot in Class A, made up of former Class A and Class B schools.

McClintock, coming off a 12-1 record last year, received 40 points and four first-place votes from AP member sportswriters and broadcasters. Tucson Amphitheater is ranked No. 2 in Class AAA Division I, followed by Tempe Marcos de Niza, Mesa Mountain View and Trevor Browne of Phoenix.

Gilbert and Flagstaff each received two first-place votes in Class AAA Division II, but Gilbert got the No. 1 spot with 45 points to 41 for Flagstaff. Prescott is ranked third, Cholla fourth and Cactus fifth.

Santa Cruz edged Coolidge by two points in Class A. Each received three first-place votes. Round Valley is in third place, followed by Buckeye and Phoenix Christian.

New defense moves Fulcher to rover position for Devils

By CHRIS McKAY
State Press

Moving from free safety to strong safety or rover in 1985, All-American David Fulcher has had to adjust to a minor change.

No longer will Fulcher be chasing split ends 50 and 60 yards down the field.

"Now I have to cover the curl flat instead of deep routes," said Fulcher.

New head coach John Cooper brings to ASU a new defensive scheme. To utilize Fulcher's size, strength and speed, the Sun Devils will play him closer to the line, where most of the action is.

Fulcher's 6-foot-3, 228-pound build made him one of the largest safeties in the country. With his versatility and reputation for hard hitting, Fulcher said he should not have any problem adjusting to the switch.

In his third year, Fulcher can become only the second Sun Devil to be a four-time all-Pac-10 choice and the only one to be an All-American four times.

Last season Fulcher was picked as a Playboy Magazine All-American and was placed on the first team by Football News, Football Writers, The Sporting News and The Associated Press.

Fulcher's quick feet give him the agility to cover receivers down the field. His first two years also have shown him to be around the ball at crucial moments.

In 1984, he chalked up a team high 100 tackles with two interceptions and two fumble recoveries. He had a career-high 20 tackles in a 21-13 loss to UCLA.

As a freshman, Fulcher earned All-American Honorable Mention. His 110 tackles, including 61 solos, were second on the team. He also intercepted four passes and collected five quarterback sacks.

This season he is almost a sure bet for post-season accolades.

David Fulcher

School in Los Angeles, Fulcher made 26 receptions for 530 yards and six touchdowns. On defense he had nine interceptions. He gained all-league honors and made second-team all-Central City.

From past experience Fulcher said he knows that opposing quarterbacks avoid throwing to his side.

"The last two years it was like that," said Fulcher. "I'll just have to see what happens with the new defense."

His collegiate accomplishments have been noticed by the pros, and talks have already begun.

"We've talked a little, but nothing serious," said Fulcher. "Right now I'm just playing it by ear."

Fulcher has not begun to seriously consider jumping to the pro ranks after the '85 season.

"I'll just see how things go," he said.

Soviets nip U.S. for gold medal

KOBE, Japan (AP) — A last-second long shot-gave the Soviet Union a 96-93 victory over the United States for the men's basketball title Tuesday, while the Americans had their best day in track and field, winning three gold medals in the World University Games.

The Soviets won a total of four golds for the day — including water polo, men's epee team fencing and the women's 800-meter run — but Japan stopped them in the men's volleyball final.

Down two sets to one, Japan recovered for a 15-8, 10-15, 12-15, 15-17, 15-8 victory before a crowd of about 6,000, mostly ecstatic Japanese rooters.

North Korea blanked Uruguay 1-0 for the soccer gold, scoring on a header that bounced off a Uruguayan defender into the goal.

With nine gold medals left to be decided on the University Games' final day Wednesday, the Soviets led the standings with 77 medals, including 41 golds. The United States had 61 medals, including 21 golds, and Japan, China and Cuba each had six golds.

In the last games in 1983, the Soviets had 115 medals including 59 golds and the United States had 53 medals including 12 golds.

In another highlight on the track Tuesday, Cuba's Silvia Costa won the women's high jump with a University record of 6 feet, 7 inches, breaking the old mark of 6-6 set by Tamara Bykova of the Soviet Union in 1983.

For the Americans, Mike Ramos' won the demanding two-day, 10-event decathlon, Cathy Branta and Kathy Hayes placed 1-2 in the women's 3,000 meters and Cletus Clark won the men's 110-meter high hurdles, with teammate Keith Talley third.

Ramos, of Missoula, Mont., overtook first day leader Michael Neugebauer of West Germany with strong performances in the pole vault and discus. He finished with 8,071 points to 7,971 for Valter Kyulevet of the Soviet Union. Neugebauer ended up third with 7,895.

Branta, of Madison, Wis., won the women's 3,000 in 9 minutes, 2.75 seconds, with Hayes, of Eugene, Ore., just behind at 9:02.92. Angela Chalmers of Canada was third at 9:03.19.

In the Soviet triumph in the women's 800 meters, Nadezhda Zvyagintse edged Romania's Cristeana Cojocar, 1:58.59 to 1:59.09.

Bulgaria's Ginka Zagorcheva won the women's 100-meter hurdles in 12.71 seconds, with Soviet runner Nadezhda Korshunova second in 12.87.

In the gold medal basketball game, the Soviets led at halftime but the Americans led 74-68 at one point in the second half before the seesaw battle came to a 93-93 tie with less than one minute left.

Chuck Person of Auburn, Ala., missed a free throw with 39 seconds left, and the Soviets got the ball and stalled until Valzdemaras Khomitchus dribbled across the court to the side and took a desperation jump shot with three seconds left. His shot of about 21 feet swished cleanly through the net for a three-point goal.

"They (Soviets) are good players. Still, we had good chances to win. But we didn't hit the free throws. That makes a big difference in a close game like this," said U.S. Coach Lee Rose of the University of South Florida.
